ENTERPRISING WAS THE WORD for Stephen Jordan, left, 16-year-old son of the Rev. and Mrs. John S. Jordan of 22 Brucemont Circle, as he received airplane tickets from Asheville Citizen-Times Circulation Manager Ben B. Humphries after Jordan won the Citizen-Times Enterprise Contest for newspaper carriers. A six-day junket is in store for Steve, including trips to Annapolis and Washington, D.C.

A busy week is in store for Stephen Jordan, 16-year-old Lee H. Edwards High School junior and Asheville Citizen-Times carrier, as he boards a plane for Washington, D. C., at 8:30 a.m. Sunday (today).

Jordan won the Citizen-Times Enterprise Contest, sponsored jointly with the Newspaper Enterprise Assn., and will join other winning carriers in Washington for an action-packed agenda.

The contest winner, no stranger to winning carrier competitions here, is the son of the Rev. and Mrs. John S. Jordan of 22 Brucemont Circle, West Asheville. His father is the pastor of Haywood Street Methodist Church.

Here's what's in store for Steve:

A trip to Annapolis with a cruise on the Severn River to the Chesapeake Bay and a meeting with Navy coaches as well as eating in the Midshipmen's dining room.

A stop at Wallops Island, Va., Space Launching Center with tours of the launching pads and inspection of the block houses. The carriers will inspect the East Coast Tracking Station which follows astronauts orbiting the Earth. They'll visit a complete Mercury station and see an operational range control set-up. And proper conditions permitting, they may witness an actual launching.

Steve and his buddies will be Marines for a day, visiting the Quantico Marine Base and spending a day with the Leathernecks. Special demonstration teams will be brought in for the day which includes a messkit lunch in the field.

There's a night baseball game in Washington on tap.

A tour of historic Washington will include dinner with leaders of the nation, among them Steve's own Congressman, Roy A. Taylor. And there's the liklihood of meeting President Kennedy personally.

Also on tap is a visit to a major aircraft carrier, and a possible one-day trip to sea on a destroyer. Unfortunately, the U. S. S. Enterprise is currently deployed in another theater and unavailable for the occasion.

And, closing out the action-packed week will be a special sunset retreat on the grounds of the Commandant of the Marine Corps with the U. S. Marine Band, the Marine Drum and Bugle Corps and a full battalion of Marines in dress uniform.

Then it's homeward bound and Steve will have a pack of stories to tell his parents and pals of how it pays to be the Citizen-Times Enterprise Boy.

Asheville Citizen July 21, 1963

AN ENTERPRISING YOUNG MAN is at the helm as Stephen Jordan, winner of the Citizen-Times Enterprise Contest for carriers, confidently navigates on the Severn River at Annapolis. With other contest winners Stephen met with Navy coaches and ate in the midshipmen's dormitory. He will also visit the space launching center at Wallops Island, Va., and Quantico Marine Base.

Asheville Citizen July 23, 1963

C. B. JOYNER ENTERS RACE FOR CONSTABLE

C. B. Joyner. of West Asheville, the son of J. E. Joyner has announced his entry in the race for nomination as constable of Asheville township, subject to the action of the primary. Mr. Joyner is well known in Asheville having been associated with a firm of detectives here for some time.

Mr. Joyner has a large number of friends here and will make an active campaign before the coming primary election.

Asheville Citizen April 23, 1916

Edeson "Eddie" Joyner

Born in 1911, Eddie's first job, in 1928, was as a driver for Teague's Market. He began working for the A@P grocery chain in 1929 where he remained until 1940 when he was last listed as Manager. He resigned to open his own store, The One Stop Food Shop in West Asheville, which remained in business only until 1943 as he was drafted into the Army in 1942. He served during World War II until 1946. Upon his return, he opened another store, Joyner's Grocery, located in the Emma community. The Emma store remained until 1958, and during the later years included a small section which soul automobile accessories. In 1959 the City Directory reflects that he opened Eddie Joyner's Speed Equipment, which was located at 1040 Patton Avenue in Asheville. He remained there, also opening a small boat store up the street for several years until ill health forced him into retirement and early death in 1973.

BANJO & P.V. BROWN

Eddie Joyner, Speed Shop Owner, Dies

Eddie C. Joyner, 62, of 57 Lucerne Ave., owner and president of Eddie's Speed Equipment and Marine Supply Shop, died Monday in an Asheville hospital after a long illness. Nov. 1973

The business which Mr. Joyner established in 1945 on Emma Road and moved to its present location in 1958, had grown to be the largest automotive parts and equipment firm in Western North Carolina. An Army veteran of World War II, he was a member of West Asheville Masonic Lodge No. 665 and active in boy scout activities.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Dovie R. Joyner; the mother, Mrs. C. B. Joyner of Asheville; six brothers, Lewis, Harry and Charles Joynes of Asheville, Bynum Joyner of Atlanta, Ga., Marcus Joyner of Darlington, S. C. and Joe Joyner of Miami Fla.; and a sister, Mrs. Mary Walker of Marietta, Ga.

Services will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday at West Asheville Baptist Church, of which he was a member. The Revs. James Johnson and Nane Starnes will officiate. Burial will be in Green Hill Cemetery. Brothers will be pallbearers. Men of the West Asheville Baptist Church will be honorary pallbearers. Masonic Lodge No. 665 will conduct graveside rites.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday at Groce Funeral Home and at other times will be at the home of Mrs. W. H. Cogburn of 925 Haywood Road. In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to Aston Park Hospital building fund.

★ ★ ★

Eddie Joyner

In the passing of Eddie Joyner, of "Eddie Joyner Speed Equipment Supplies", Asheville lost one of her finest citizens. He was loyal in his support to everything that contributed to the building of a great community. But many also lost in Eddie an understanding personal friend.

He was a native of Asheville, and after returning from the fox-holes of the most dangerous battlefields of Europe in World War II he began life anew, entering the business world. In this he was successful.

In personality he was modest and unassuming, but inspired confidence. Many came to him for counsel and personal encouragement at a crisis time. They went away with the help they needed.

To his church and to his pastors, he was loyal and dedicated. To its endeavor in the local community and to far distant places, he was liberal and supporting.

He loved life. Fishing, boating, hunting, sports, and as long as possible he participated. His tales of adventure were endless in these favorite pastimes. He was no stranger to adversity, nor free from suffering. For past several years he faced the inevitable of a severe illness. But no one heard him complain nor question his fate.

Now at the end of the journey of life, he stands tall among his fellow citizens and friends. Best of all, he hears the voice of the Master of his life saying: "Well done, my good and faithful servant."

Miss Mabel Starnes
15 Lanvale Ave.
Asheville

County Home of Buncombe County. This picture was made in 1927.

BUILT BY J.F. FOYNER CONSTRUCTION COMPANY

June 12, 1941

Critically Wounded In Stabbing

JOE JOYNER

This 15-year-old lad lay in a critical condition in the Aston Park hospital today as the result of a stabbing on Haywood road yesterday afternoon. Steve Sherlin, 14, is alleged to have done the stabbing after an argument over some cherries.

Condition Of Joe Joyner Is Critical

Joe Joyner, 15, remained in a critical condition in Aston Park today—with a stab wound in his heart. Steve Sherlin, 14, was detained by the juvenile court authorities, charged with stabbing young Joyner on Haywood road near the Palace theater yesterday afternoon at 1:15 o'clock.

The stabbing, according to witnesess, took place following an argument over cherries.

According to Buddy Harrell, of 70 Vermont avenue, the stabbing was an outgrowth of a quarrel several days ago, when Joe found Steve in a cherry tree in the back yard of the Joyner home.

"Joe asked him to leave his cherries alone," the Harrell boy told a reporter.

Walking Along

"Then yesterday, Joe Joyner and Joe Mehaffey, who lives on Vermont avenue, and I were walking on Haywood road when we saw Steve selling cherries near the Palace theater.

"Joe Mehaffey and I walked on; Joe Joyner stopped to talk to Steve. We got about 10 feet from the two, and turned around. They were arguing, and Steve was calling Joe Joyner names. Joe grabbed him by the shirt and told him to stop calling him names—then Steve took out his knife and stabbed Joe.

"Joe knew he was hurt badly. He didn't fall, but turned around and started running toward Dr. S. S. Fay's office, on Mildred avenue. Dr. Fay wasn't in, and Joe ran to Dr. George F. Baier's office, 814 Haywood road. Dr. Baier wasn't in, so Joe ran out again.

"By this time his whole shirt front on the left side was soaked with blood. He ran into the Palace pharmacy, and there he fainted. Somebody in a private automobile took him to the hospital."

After Stabbing

Sherlin walked away after the stabbing, according to Harrell. Police said they found him on his way to his home on Burton street. The officers quoted witnesses as saying that Joyner hit or slapped Sherlin several times before Sherlin took out his knife.

Burnos Sherlin, brother of Steve, is in the Buncombe county jail awaiting trial for murder in the slaying of Robert Hughes, negro youth, several weeks ago. Joyner's father, C. B. Joyner, is a city detective. The Joyners reside at 30 Oakwood road.

Asheville Citizen June 12, 1941

Boy Is Stabbed In Fight

6-12-41

Joe Joyner, 15, was in Aston Park hospital last night in a critical condition with a knife wound in his heart and a few blocks across town in the juvenile detention cell of the county jail, Steve Sherlin, 14, who is said to have stabbed him, was being held. In the jail proper, Burnos Sherlin, brother of Steve, is awaiting trial at the term of court starting Monday on a charge of murder in the slaying of Robert Hughes, negro youth, several weeks ago.

Physicians at the hospital said that young Joyner's condition was extremely grave.

The trouble occurred when Joyner, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Joyner of 30 Oakwood road, and Sherlin engaged in an argument on the sidewalk near the Palace theater on Haywood road, in West Asheville, about 1:15 o'clock, police said.

Joe Mehaffey, 28 Vermont avenue, and Buddy Harrell, 70 Vermont, companions of young Joyner, were witnesses to the stabbing. They told members of the police department who investigated that Sherlin came along the street carrying a bucket of cherries and that when he encountered young Joyner they renewed a previous quarrel.

Joyner hit or slapped Sherlin several times and Sherlin drew his knife and struck at Joyner, the witnesses said. The blade penetrated his left chest.

The wounded boy was taken to Aston Park hospital where an examination disclosed that the blade had cut the heart.

Sherlin left the scene and was making his way to his home on Burton street, when officers found him at the corner of Burton and Louisiana avenue. He was taken to the county jail and placed in the detention section reserved for juveniles. His mother and sister visited him during the afternoon.

Joyner's father is a detective in the Asheville police department.

Asheville Citizen June 12, 1941

Joyner Youth Remains In Critical Condition

Joe Joyner, 15, continued his fight for life at Aston Park hospital last night, where he was taken Wednesday with a knife wound in his chest which penetrated the heart. His condition was reported as only fair.

Meanwhile, juvenile authorities were still detaining Steve Sherlin, 14, who is said by the police to have stabbed Joyner during a quarrel over some cherries.

Buddy Harrell, who lives at 70 Vermont avenue, told police yesterday that he witnessed the encounter that led to the stabbing.

He said that a few days before Joyner had found Sherlin in a cherry tree in his back yard and had asked him to leave. The two quarreled at that time.

When they met on the street near the Palace theater Wednesday, Sherlin had a bucket of cherries. Harrell said that Joyner stopped to talk to him while Harrell and Joe Mehaffey, who lives at 26 Vermont avenue, walked on. Harrell said that he looked back and saw Joe Joyner grab Sherlin by the shirt and tell him to stop calling him names. It was then, he said, that Sherlin pulled out a knife and stabbed at Joyner, striking him in the chest.

Sherlin continued on down the street, Harrell told the officers, while Joyner, realizing that he was badly injured, ran first to the ofice of Dr. S. S. Fay and then to the office of Dr. George F. Bayer, Jr., and finding neither in, ran to the Palace pharmacy where he fainted. Somebody in a private automobile then took him to the hospital.

The officers received one report that Joyner hit or slapped Sherlin before the stabbing occurred.

Asheville Times June 13, 1941

June 13, 1941

CONDITION OF JOYNER BOY ONLY FAIR

The condition of Joe Joyner, age 15, who is in the Aston Park hospital as result of a stab wound in the heart was reported last night as "just fair". Steve Sherlin, 14, is being detained by the juvenile court charged with stabbing young Joyner on Haywood road near the Palace theatre early Wednesday afternoon.

The stabbing is said to have taken place following an argument over some cherries.

Young Sherlin is the brother of Burnos Sherlin, who is in the Buncombe county jail awaiting trial for murder in connection with the slaying of Robert Hughes, negro youth, several weeks ago. The home of Steve Sherlin is on Burton street, where police found him following the stabbing.

The Joyner youth is the son of J. B. Joyner, city detective, who resides at 30 Oakwood road.

Asheville Citizen June 13, 1941

JOYNER YOUTH IS REPORTED TO BE SLIGHTLY BETTER

Condition of Joe Joyner, 15, of 30 Oakwood road, stabbed in the heart about noon Wednesday during an argument with Steve Sherlin, 14, was slightly improved at Aston Park hospital last night and he was given a fair chance to recover.

Police continued to hold young Sherlin in the juvenile detention quarters at the county jail without bail pending outcome of the Joyner boy's injuries. The latter was stabbed in the chest, the knife penetrating the heart.

Asheville Citizen June 14, 1941

12-16-01

BOB TERRELL
columnist

Charlie not the only Choo Choo

Researching baseball history for a book I'm writing on John Henry Moss, president of the South Atlantic Baseball League, I made a discovery that startled me.

It also startled Charlie (Choo Choo) Justice, the All-American football player from Asheville, the University of North Carolina, and the Washington Redskins.

I found another Choo Choo Justice!

"I never heard of another one," Charlie said. All these years since he was tagged with the Choo Choo nickname during World War II while playing for Bainbridge Naval Training Station, Charlie thought he was the only one.

The other one I found was also a pretty good athlete. His name was Walter (Choo Choo) Justus. Notice that the last name is spelled differently. I found him in the minor league record book for the 1908 season.

Pitching for Lancaster, Ohio, in the Ohio State League, Justus threw four no-hitters that season. He pitched the gems on July 19, Aug. 2, Sept. 8, and Sept. 13. You will notice the last two were back-to-back, the same as Johnny Vander Meer, who pitched his a few years later for Cincinnati in the National League.

"I have good days and bad days, but better days overall than I deserve, I guess."
CHARLIE (CHOO CHOO) JUSTICE

Justus pitched in the major leagues, if only for 3.1 innings. That was with the Detroit Tigers in 1905. He couldn't cut it in the majors, maybe, but he had little trouble in the minors.

Many people have asked lately how Charlie Justice is doing. From his home in Cherryville Friday he said he is "doing fine." With Charlie, that means he's still kicking. In 53 years of acquaintance with him, I have never heard him describe his physical condition in any other way.

"Oh, I've got my ups and downs," he said, "but I'm in pretty good shape for an old man. I have good days and bad days, but better days overall than I deserve, I guess."

Charlie will be 78 years old next May 18, and he really is ahead of the game. Take other 155- to 165-pound guys who were hit by 270-pounders as often and as hard as Charlie was in his career of 15 football seasons, and most would probably be stretched out six feet under.

Choo Choo has always been an amazing man. The Good Lord never made anyone more gentlemanly. In a lifetime of politeness and giving the other fellow his due, Charlie made few, if any enemies.

"Oh, I had plenty of enemies on the football field," he laughed, "but that was only on Friday night or Saturday or Sunday afternoons, and that feeling wore off as soon as the games were over."

Each Christmas I think of Charlie Choo Choo, how he and his younger brother Neil would practice football by running in zigs and zags from Pack Square down Patton Avenue and up Haywood Street, dodging Christmas shoppers on the crowded streets, trying to miss them by a hair's breadth, honing the skills that carried them by many a tackler in later years.

"Tell all my friends up there Merry Christmas for me," Charlie said.

And a Merry Christmas to you, Choo Choo!

Asheville Citizen December 16, 2001

CITIZEN-TIMES FILE PHOTO

Charlie 'Choo Choo' Justice (22) was an American icon while playing for North Carolina from 1946-49. Justice, a native of Asheville, was selected as one of WNC's 50 Most Influential People of the Century.

Choo Choo chugs along

Former Heel, Asheville star placed among football's best

By Keith Jarrett
STAFF WRITER

CHERRYVILLE – It has been 45 years since Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice last toted, booted or tossed a football in competition.

Nearly half a century has passed since Asheville gave keys to the city to what was then its most famous son, a day that featured a downtown parade watched by more than 25,000, a 1/2-mile march through the same streets that a young Charlie darted in and out of while practicing the moves that would make him famous.

Entire generations of sports fans have never seen a yard gained by the man many believe did it better than anyone of his time, perhaps as well as anyone who ever stepped on the gridiron.

He was on the cover of Life, Look, Saturday Evening Post and just about every other magazine you could name from that era. His lyrical nickname that he considers the second-best thing to ever happen to him and the uniqueness of his triple-threat abilities in football at the highest level inspired strangers to write books and a song about him.

JOHN FLETCHER/CITIZEN-TIMES

Charlie 'Choo Choo' Justice sits in front of a painting of him during his Tar Heel days at his home in Cherryville, N.C. The former Asheville High and UNC great fondly recalls his gridiron days.

As a new century begins, what better time to look back at the man some say was the greatest athlete Asheville and Western North Carolina ever produced, to review the 75 years of a man who modestly accepted his status as a great football player and a national hero, a man content with his life in football and business, a man who married his high-school sweetheart 56 years ago and now has a daughter, grandchildren and a great grandchild.

Earlier this week, from the couch of his home in Cherryville, a small community near Shelby about 90 minutes southeast of Asheville, Justice spent more than an hour remembering details of what has been a full and exciting life.

Sitting nearby was his wife, the former Sarah Hunter of Asheville, who has been married to Charlie since 1943. As she listens to her husband reminisce, she occasionally and always gently corrects or reminds Charlie on certain facts.

"You've already told him that story," she says sweetly, bouncing back and forth from Charlie and Charles – he's not Choo Choo at home.

At age 75, Justice feels the wear and tear of playing football for 15 years and an uncooperative heart. His handshake reflects the effects of arthritis and his golf game has given in to bad legs, but he is still alert and talks with a ready smile and a gleam in his eyes when the subjects turn to his childhood and his long love affair with football.

He smiles quickly, laughs heartily and gestures with both hands to get his points across. Charmingly, he asked to go off the record about why he went to the University of North Carolina instead of Duke or South Carolina because he didn't want to offend anyone, though the incident occurred 54 years ago.

A legend is born

"This boy should never play football or any strenuous sports. He's too sickly – he's anemic and has a bad heart." – paraphrasing Dr. Joe Sevier, the Justice family doctor, around 1938 or '39.

Charlie Justice was born on May 18, 1924, the fourth son in what would be a family of five boys and a girl to Parley Wittington Justice and Nell Foster Justice. The Justices lived in the small Emma community of West Asheville when Charlie was born, but would eventually move just south of downtown Asheville in the Shiloh community.

The Justice boys played football and played it very well. Each of Charlie's four brothers – Jack, Joe, Bill and Neal – would play at Asheville High and go on to play at Rollins College in Winter

See CHOO CHOO on page C4

Charlie 'Choo Choo' Justice during his heyday at North Carolina.

CHOO CHOO: Asheville native, Tar Heel star thrilled fans with with gridiron exploits

From page C1

Park, Fla. From 1933-43, there was always a Justice on the Asheville High team.

The school would be renamed Lee Edwards High after its late principal in 1935, but for purposes of recognition and maintaining its logo would also be referred to as Asheville High.

With his brothers' background and his own love for the sport, it was natural that Charlie would play football.

After attending Aycock Elementary in West Asheville, Justice attended David Millard Junior High near downtown.

Before his childhood evolved into a football career, he remembers unwittingly practicing what would become his trademark style of slashing through would-be tacklers and avoiding contact.

"My brother and I used to go into Asheville on Patton Avenue, up at Pack Square and we would run down to Pritchard Park," he said.

"We used to run down the street, going in and out the crowds, practicing dodging," he said. "The police started watching us, thinking we were running after we stole something. I would lead (younger brother) Neal into the hole and we would weave in and out of people's way.

"One time he really centered a couple of ladies pretty good," Justice recalled with a laugh. "It was good way to practice our zig zags, because Patton Avenue was pretty busy back in those days."

Due to anemia and a heart murmur, Dr. Sevier tried to stop the fledgling football career of a slight 5-10, 150-pound youngster.

"The doc told me I couldn't play football in high school unless my parents signed an agreement that said it was OK for me to play," Justice said. "I just took it home and signed it myself, and my parents never knew about it. I knew it didn't matter because one way or the other I was going to play football."

And boy, did he play.

Stardom at Asheville High

"You oughta quit football, Charlie. You can't block and you can't tackle." – older brother Jack Justice.

"(Justice is) the best high school football player I've ever seen." – Herman Hickman, who later coached at Yale.

From his brothers, Charlie got the genes, the desire and the training to play football. They encouraged him, pushed him to play better and reminded him to remain humble when it soon became apparent that special things happened whenever he touched the pigskin.

From Shiloh to Millard Junior High was a trip of several miles, and Charlie and Neal would hitchhike to and from school every day.

"Biltmore School was closer but they didn't play football," Justice said. "It wasn't hard to catch rides. There was one guy who lived in Biltmore Forest, I forget his name. But he got used to seeing us every morning and he would give us a ride."

While he waited his turn to play football, he watched his older brothers perform and dreamed of the day he would play for Asheville High at Memorial Stadium, up on the hill above McCormick Field off Biltmore Avenue.

"Joe would look at me while I was watching him comb his hair," Justice said. "He'd kid me and say, `You ought to be proud to be my brother and live in the same house as me.' I'd say back to him, "You just wait, ole boy, you just wait. My time's comin.'"

His first game in high school came on Sept. 15, 1939, against Greeneville, Tenn. He was still a 9th-grader in junior high, and the next year he was a reserve tailback for the Maroon Devils.

But for the next two seasons, Justice ran, passed and kicked his way into local immortality. His punts were of legendary length and height, though with him operating as a running back Asheville wasn't forced to punt very often.

His passes were straight and true, but it was his running that made Charlie Justice unique. Fast and shifty, he made people miss, and he often used the entire field – especially from sideline to sideline – to dart away from tacklers the way he years before dodged shopping bags carried by elderly ladies.

"It was just God-given talent that the man upstairs gave me," Justice said, confidently but modestly. "It wasn't like I worked hard at it or anything – it was just there. I always felt like I had more energy.

"I wanted to do real well real badly, and I was gifted with coordination and the change of pace and I was pretty speedy. I honestly couldn't understand why the other boys had to work so hard at (football), because it came so easy to me."

In three seasons at AHS, Justice rushed for 4,005 yards, scored 49 touchdowns and averaged 14 yards per carry. He also completed 67 percent of his passes and averaged more than 40 yards per punt.

Bud Cantrell was a 7-year old boy living in Asheville in 1941, and he still remembers standing on the sidelines at Memorial Stadium and watching his hero play football.

"He was in punt formation and there was a bad snap from center, and Charlie just picked up the ball and started running. He had that famous shift and nobody could tackle him, and he ran the ball in for a touchdown," said Cantrell, now 65 and living in Balsam.

"Asheville had a tailback named Billy Britt that was faster, but there was just something about Charlie. He was amazing. When we played football as kids we all pretended we were Charlie Justice."

With Justice as the star, the Asheville High games became so popular that they were moved to McCormick Field, which was bigger and had lights so the games could be played at night after people got off work.

But even as Charlie led the Maroon Devils on a two-year, 20-game winning streak, he was getting constant reminders to avoid getting arrogant.

"Jack wouldn't let me get cocky. He would come to my games and give me a ride home afterwards," Justice said. "I would score a couple or three touchdowns and thought I had had a pretty good game.

"I would be sitting in the car thinking, `Come on Jack, tell me how good I did.' Jack wouldn't say anything at first but about halfway home he'd start shaking his head and say, "Damn if that wasn't the sorriest exhibition of football I've ever seen, and you're the sorriest player I've seen.

"They way those guys were blocking and had everybody laid out on the field, you should have scored every time you got the ball."

"That really helped me stay humble," Justice said. "He would chew my tail out and remind me that I wasn't anything without my teammates."

He capped his prep career by scoring three touchdowns in the 1942 Shrine Bowl, tying a scoring record that had been set by his brother Bill three years earlier.

After high school, many colleges begged Justice to pick them, though the ultimate recruiting machine – the U.S. government – finally won out.

"Clemson, Duke and North Carolina told me to sit tight and they would sign me," Justice said. "Well, I sat tight too long, and I got drafted."

Before Justice could pick a college, World War II intervened.

In the Navy

"It's a damn good thing you can do something besides kick, kid, or you'd be out to sea tomorrow." — A Bainbridge (Md.) Naval Station coach to Justice after a 1943 exhibition game against the Washington Redskins in which Justice punted poorly but got off a couple of good runs.

"He's the greatest natural football player I've ever seen." – Bainbridge (Md.) Naval Station coach Joe Maniaci, in 1944.

There are two constant themes throughout Justice's life that he acknowledges – luck and being in the right place at the right time.

Initially reluctant to go into the Navy, it turned out that assignment allowed Justice to continue to play football.

When Justice arrived at Bainbridge in 1943, he found out a football team was being formed.

When the coaching staff first looked at the skinny 165-pounder, they admitted later to Justice that they laughed at the prospect of him playing football.

He was sent to the back of the line four times on the day they handed out equipment, and by the time he got to the front there were no cleats left.

Practicing barefooted, it didn't take Justice long to get noticed.

"I was shagging punts, and I got bored with that and decided, Hell, I'm going to kick one back," Justice said. "The coach happened to be looking and the Good Lord was with me and I kicked that ball 75 yards if it went a yard. It looked like it came out of a cannon.

"The coach had me kick for 15 minutes and I didn't miss a one. I was just hitting the hell out of it. So I got a chance to play."

Before he left Bainbridge, his talents were worthy of notice by the National Football League, which back then was still a developing pro sports business.

Justice had married Sarah in 1943 and was lured by the big money pro football was offering. A representative of the Philadelphia Eagles offered more money than Justice had ever held, and his only question was where to sign.

"The Eagles tricked me into signing," Justice said. "They waved a $500 check in front of me. Hell, I had never seen $500 before. Sarah and I were fixing to get married and we thought $500 was all the money in the world. I signed for that bonus and $200 a game.

"I went dancing down the hall waving the contract and saying, `Look what I got.' A coach at Bainbridge saw me and wrote the (NFL) commissioner that I was underage. I was 19 and back then you couldn't play in the NFL unless you were 21, so they tore up the contract."

His stay at Bainbridge also included another lucky break. Though the story has been attributed at various times to a teammate, a fan and a fellow sailor, somebody within earshot of a Philadelphia sportswriter remarked, "That Justice can go all day. He runs like a choo choo train."

The sportswriter hung the nickname on Justice the next day in an article, and it stuck immediately.

"I've always said that next to Sarah and my family, that nickname was the best thing that ever happened to me," said Justice. "Nobody knows Charlie, but everybody knows Choo Choo. That's who they wrote books and a song about; not Charlie."

After two successful years at Bainbridge and another year barnstorming for an all-star team in Pearl Harbor, Justice returned to post-war America.

Colleges were still anxious to sign Justice, but the realities of living in Asheville with limited means made recruiting a challenge.

"My mother and father didn't even have a phone, but the people across the street did and somehow (the college recruiters) found out their number," Justice recalled. "They drove those poor people crazy calling and asking them to run across the street and get me."

His final choice was UNC, but it wasn't his decision. "I wanted to go to Duke but I got talked out of that. I was going to South Carolina because Sarah and I just loved (coach) Rex Enright and I already had my bags packed to go there.

"But my brother Jack stopped me and said, `If you go out of state to school I'll disown you. I won't have anything to do with you ever.' So I went to Chapel Hill."

First Asheville, and then fans in Bainbridge and Pearl Harbor had found out what a great football player Charlie "Choo Choo" Justice was. Now the rest of the country would learn.

The golden years

"He is the fastest man on the North Carolina squad, but (it is) his spine-tingling cutbacks or change of pace mixed with his ability to pick a hole (that) has caused nothing short of delirium for the Tar Heel followers." – Citizen-Times staff writer Charles Stelling, Dec. 1, 1948, in a story announcing that Justice was the first player from Asheville to be named a first-team All-American.

"The little guy broke through ... He broke Duke's heart — broke it with a twisting, dodging 43-yard shimmy through the whole Duke team. He ran like a Benzedrine waltzing mouse, leaving the turf strewn with Blue Devils he feinted into diving where he wasn't ... Choo Choo Charlie took the ball at the Duke 43, slipped past a lunging Duke lineman and circled around end. He dodged nearly to the sideline, then reversed his field and danced back through the Duke backfield, feinting and sidestepping frantic tacklers. He slipped and caught himself with one hand on the turf. Then, his interference forming, he kited diagonally downfield to score." – Herbert Foster, United Press writer, describing a touchdown run.

"Now boys, when Justice gets that ball you can expect anything. He may quick-kick your heads off, he may throw a touchdown pass, or he may even decide to carry it himself. If he decided to carry, watch out or he will fake you out of your shoes." – Georgia coach Wally Butts before a 1949 game against the Tar Heels.

Against the University of Texas, Justice broke a long run thanks to a crushing block by a lineman. As the lineman sat on top of the Texas player, the defender said, "Hey, let me up. He's been gone 10 seconds."

"Oh no, you lay still," said the lineman. "Charlie will be back by here three more times before he scores." – A story, perhaps apocryphal, from 1948.

When Charlie enrolled at UNC, the head football coach made an oft-repeated statement, though it has never been explained whether the quote was made in earnest, in jest or with biting sarcasm.

"I hope he comes out for football," said Carl Snavely.

He came out for the team, and in four years Choo Choo became much more than a great football player at Chapel Hill.

He was a national hero and a time when post-war America needed wholesome males to idolize. He didn't smoke, didn't drink and was married to his high-school honey, living in a bungalow two miles from campus.

A book simply titled "Choo Choo" was written. "All the Way Choo Choo" was penned by the songwriting team of Campbell Beebe and recorded by Benny Goodman and Johnny Long.

Looking earnest as he stared into the camera, Justice posed for the cover of Life magazine.

"Those were good times, fun times," Justice said with a small grin and a faraway look in his eyes as he recalled his heyday.

"But it was hectic. It was a rat race. Saturday Evening Post, Look – I was on all those magazines."

"The fame just seemed to go right over Charlie's head," said Sarah. "To this day I don't think he realizes how famous he was or what the big deal was."

"That's where I credit Jack. He kept my feet on the ground," said Justice. "I came along at the right time and people seemed to hook onto this football player."

On a grainy film clip from a 1948 game against Texas, the Tar Heel jersey numbers are almost unreadable.

The new, white plastic helmets that had just replaced the old leather, form-fitting headgear look strange and completely round, like robot heads from a bad outer space movie.

But you don't have to squint your eyes to figure out which one is Choo Choo. A quick kick with no more than a half-step start travels more than 50 yards in the air.

Out of the single wing, Choo Choo passes expertly and fakes with precision. And then there is that run that you have heard so much about but had never seen.

It is darting in and out, change of pace, a sprint interrupted by jukes and stops and starts that climaxes where Choo Choo most often exited – the end zone.

Charlie was right – it did look easy.

While leading the Tar Heels to a 32-9-2 record and three major bowls, Justice twice finished second in the Heisman Trophy balloting.

He rushed for 2,634 yards and 28 touchdowns, passed for 2,249 yards and 25 scores and averaged 42.6 yards per punt. Justice's total offense record lasted for 45 years and his name still dominates the Tar Heel record books 50 years after his final game.

He wrapped up his collegiate career in typical hero fashion. In the 1950 College All-Star game against the NFL champion Philadelphia Eagles, Justice rushed for a game-record 133 yards in nine carries and was named the game's most valuable player.

On Jan. 26, 1950, Charlie Justice Day was held in Asheville. Riding down the parade in an open car, Justice had the opportunity to think about his years of growing up and playing football.

"To have your own people honor you, you can't beat that," he said. "The thing I remember thinking was, `These are the people that know you, that know what you are really like.

"I was Charlie to these people, not Choo Choo – I was the kid who grew up here and ran the streets when I was a kid.

"I remember getting a job at Waller's Fruit Stand at the railroad tracks down at Biltmore after my senior year. People would come in and talk and visit, and that was just fantastic. These were my people, and they always will be."

A disappointing finish

"I'm not worried about getting cut; I'm worried about getting killed." – Justice to Washington Redskins owner George Preston Marshall, explaining that the lack of blocking and not job security was one of the reasons he was retiring after the 1954 NFL season.

"When I saw the holes open up and close before I got there, I decided it was time to quit." – Justice in a 1988 interview.

It is now a natural progression from college superstar to NFL career, but in Choo Choo's day entry into pro football was not such an automatic move.

The money didn't approach the same staggering amounts the modern athlete enjoys, and an injury-plagued senior season in Chapel Hill had helped Justice decide he had had enough of football.

"I had already made the statement that I wasn't going to play pro football," Justice said. "I had been beaten up and injured a lot my senior season and there wasn't all that much money in the NFL back then."

But after realizing he wasn't happy with his job as a fund-raiser for UNC, he reluctantly signed with the Redskins midway through the 1950 season.

"Mr. Marshall was more interested in making money than paying for good players, and the Redskins weren't very good," Justice recalled.

Unhappy with Washington, Justice sat out the 1951 season and worked with Snavely as an assistant at UNC. He thought he wanted to coach until he saw how his former coach was being eased out at Chapel Hill, and he decided to give the NFL another chance.

Justice played three more years in the NFL (1952-54) with indifferent results. He missed part of the '52 season with a broken wrist, suffered in an exhibition game after he had rushed for 199 yards in 11 carries against the Rams in Los Angeles.

His best season came in '53 when he averaged 5.4 yards per game and finished second in the league in rushing while the Redskins posted a 6-5-1 record, the team's only winning season during Justice's tenure.

After earning $15,000 that season, Justice and the tight-fisted Marshall struck a deal. Choo Choo would not ask for a raise and Marshall would spend that money on better linemen to block for the offense.

That plan fell through and Washington finished 3-9 in '54, helping cement Justice's decision to leave football.

"It wasn't a tough decision to retire because I was beat up and I had played for so long," he said.

Charlie says it wasn't tough to walk away from football. Sarah interrupts with a smile and said actually it was very difficult for her husband to give up the game he loved.

Business and retirement

"I have never had trouble with fame going away. It's still there as far as I can tell." – Justice in a 1988 interview.

After his NFL career ended in 1954, Justice became the NFL's first television color commentator when Redskin games were beamed back to North Carolina. His popularity in the state along with his background with the Redskins helped turn thousands of people into Washington fans.

"I used to have women stop me on the street and tell me, `I can't get my husband to do anything on Sundays because he has to watch the football game with Choo Choo and the Redskins," Justice said.

He began a long business career that would include working in public relations, oil distributorships and eventually an insurance company in Cherryville that bore his name. He still goes into the office on occasion, working with his son-in-law on insurance matters.

His retirement life includes time with Sarah, his daughter, three grandchildren and great-grandchild. He still follows football and travels to Chapel Hill to watch his Tar Heels.

He is happy with his life, but he also has a major regret.

"My son died of a heart attack when he was 18 years old," Justice said. "Ronnie wasn't athletic and I always said I wouldn't push him into football. But everywhere he and I would go, somebody would say, `Is he going to be like his daddy? Is he going to play football?'

"It got to where he just started running from that and it drove him crazy."

Justice has videos of games more than half-century old in which he was always the best football player on the field. He says he hasn't watched them in years, but he can still close his eyes and remember what it was like to be young, to be running free, to kick and throw and to cross the goal line and hear thousands cheer and yell, "All the way, Choo Choo!"

"There were so damn many people out there that could have done what I did if they had had the opportunity," he said as he rises to bid his visitor farewell with a hearty handshake and slap on the back.

"The thing I'm most proud of is that if you asked any of my friends and teammates, they would tell you that I was just a member of the team and I wasn't cocky.

"It's a good life now; it's been a great life for me," he said. "I was gifted, and I was lucky. The Good Lord gave me the break at the right time and the right opportunity."

They Are Different

When Charlie ("Choo Choo") Justice was an All-American tailback at the University of North Carolina in the late 1940s, he moved his family into a house next door to a couple from Duke, UNC's greatest football rival.

One day after the Justices' small son persuaded the neighbors' daughters, aged 7 and 8, to go skinny-dipping in the local pond, he ran home and breathlessly announced: "You're right, Daddy; those Duke people are different."

From "Bob Terrell's Old Gold", 1981

'Viet Nam War' Comes To Asheville

Ever since the Tribal Warrior came home from forays against another tribe, boys have looked with worshipful eyes on the soldier, because his life is one filled with adventure. And boys have, in their imaginations, with various toys, created their own battle scenes, using lead or tin soldiers, vehicles, and men. Some youngsters, with considerable imagination and modern toys, like Alan Keener 10½ (left), and Mike Green, 11, create their own elaborate battlefields. Mike and Alan, in Mike's yard at 91 Cranford Rd., set up a battle situation in "Viet Nam," and Mike, piloting a whirlybird, sideslipped to avoid a rocket launched from the ground by Alan. The Rocket, in flight, can be seen as a dark streak just above the chopper. (Staff Photo by Malcolm Gamble)

Asheville Citizen May 21, 1965

Here For Carrier Field Opening

Here are two ships and three airmen who took part yesterday in the first day's flying of an extensive program, opening Carrier Field in West Asheville as a municipal airport. From left to right is E. B. Smith, the owner of one of the visiting planes; Bonnie Rowe, noted parachute jumper and stunt flyer; Dr. J. E. Owen, of Asheville; and George Keightly, member of the famous "Early Birds," who is one of the oldest pilots in experience in the country. The program at the field will continue today and tomorrow. —Staff Photo by Michael.

Carrier Field Is Opened As Municipal Flying Port

Asheville Times August 31, 1930

Rowe, Parachute Star On Program With Pilots For Today, Monday

Carrier field on the French Broad river in West Asheville, proposed as a municipal airport for Asheville, was opened yesterday when a squadron of several planes took to the air from the port, carrying passengers and visitors on flights over the city.

Heading the list of pilots who arrived at the field yesterday were George Keightly, member of the famous "Early Birds" and one of the oldest pilots in the country, and Dr. J. E. Owen, of Asheville. Keightly flew a Wright whirlwind motor plane, while Owens piloted a J-A5 ship with a Hispano-Suiza motor.

Throughout the day crowds gathered to watch the opening flights, and a large number of automobiles were driven to the field which is within ten minutes' drive from Pack Square, going via Clingman avenue across the West Asheville bridge, out Haywood road to State street, and down State street to the field. Another route is to follow Riverview drive from Haywood road.

An exensive program of stunt and passenger flying parachute jumping and wingwalking demonstrations has been arranged for today and tomorrow, Labor Day. Pilots Owen and Keightly will remain to fly ships and several other planes will be on the field both days. Plenty of parking space has been arranged and the field will be open from in the morning until in the late afternoon.

Bonnie Rowe Is Here

As a special attraction, Bonnie Rowe, famous parachute jumper and stunt flyer who holds the All American spot parachute championship, will be at the field today and tomorrow to give several demonstrations in the air. His program will include a number of high altitude parachute leaps.

Rowe, who has performed in almost every state in the Union, and frequently has made as many as nine parachute jumps in a single week, has been in Asheville several days. He is 31 years old and made his first trip 14 years ago when he leaped 5,000 feet from a balloon over Corinth, Mississippi. Since then he has gained a wide reputation as an expert air performer and has traveled widely in this country while giving demonstrations. He won the first prize at the Cleveland air races in July, 1929, for the delayed parachute jump, the most dangerous feat yet devised for air performers.

The metaphorical expression "he dropped in," describes very well the visits Rowe makes to the home of his father and mother in Buford, Ga. Occasionally an airplane will soar high over the Georgia countryside and a man leaps out. The plane continues on to Atlanta as the white folds of a parachute unfold to take the air. Safe on the ground, the jumper folds his parachute and turns toward Gainesville.

The neighbors and friends of the Rowe family know then that a famous son has returned home to visit his father and mother.

Rowe is a friendly, modest chap of slight physique, with more records to his credit than he has inches to his heighth, and is devoted to his professional career, if risking his neck and swapping grins with the Grim Reaper can be called a profession.

THIS FORD TRI-MOTOR airplane, commonly known as the "Tin Goose", is believed to be the first multi-engine aircraft to land at Asheville-Hendersonville Airport and carry passengers from the field. The pilot was "Pop" Kightley (in photo) who at that time (in the late 1920s) was the oldest licensed pilot in the nation.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE N.C.
Friday, May 9, 1952

THESE STUDENTS have been selected by the West Asheville Memorial American Legion Post Auxiliary to attend the annual Girls' State June 13-19 in Greensboro: L to R, Miss Joyce Keller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beach Keller, 33 Sand Hill School Road; and Miss Virginia Nave, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Nave, Brevard Road. They were picked on the basis of their scolastic records, leadership ability and character. The Girls' State will be held at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. (Citizen Photo)

Asheville Citizen May 9, 1952

Couple Honored

The Rev. and Mrs. Jefferson T. Kesterson were honored at a reception given by the women of the West Asheville Presbyterian Church Sunday afternoon. Mr. Kesterson is the new pastor at the church. The Kestersons moved here from Chattanooga, Tenn. and are living at 96 Wendover Rd. in West Asheville. (Staff Photo)

Asheville Citizen January 1966

New Residents

The Rev. and Mrs. Jefferson Thomas Kesterson and their two daughters, Mari Lynn, 5, and Kimberly Ann, 3, are now residing at 15 Winnfred St. after coming here from Chattanooga, Tenn. The Rev. Mr. Kesterson, who was pastor of the East Ridge Presbyterian Church of Chattanooga, is the new pastor of West Asheville Presbyterian Church, where he will conduct his first service as pastor on Sunday. (Staff Photo by June Glenn Jr.)

Asheville Citizen January 1966

Pvt. King Returns To Camp Lee, Va.

Pvt. Roy E. King, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. King of 27 Burton street, has returned to Camp Lee, Va., after spending a week-end furlough at home.

KING

King has been in the service since January and is attached to the quartermaster corps. A brother, Charles King, is serving with the air forces at Orlando, Fla. Roy formerly was connected with the circulation department of The Citizen-Times.

Asheville Times May 3, 1943

Clyde Kinser

John Solomon Kinser, Sr. was killed in a farming accident in 1919 while most of the his children were still of school age. According to the family he fell from a loaded hay wagon on the side of a steep hill. The wagon then rolled over him crushing several ribs. As a result of his injuries he contracted pneumonia and died a few days later.

My father, Clyde Kinser, was in his first year of high school at the time. Clyde dropped out of school to support his mother and the younger children. The family included his mother, Alice, two brothers, John Solomon, called J. S., and Erskine and two sisters, Gertrude and Eva.

Gertrude married Reed Boyd. They lived on a rocky rural farm in East Tennessee and Reed sold Watkins Products to provide income more than what was generated on the farm. They had two sons Garland and L. R.

Eva married Willard Dalton who was a house painter and they had one daughter, Mary Ann.

John Solomon (J. S.) married Elizabeth Orr. J. S. operated a service station in Athens until World War II. J. S. and Elizabeth had one daughter, Francis.

Erskine ran a small grocery store in Athens for many years. He later sold his store and moved to Etowah where he had the dubious distinction of having his house blown away from around him . He told the story later saying. "I had just stepped into the shower and turned the water on when the house began to shake. The water went off then there was a huge roar and the house just seemed to disappear."

Erskine stepped out of the shower stall to find his house gone. He immediately started looking for Lucille, his wife. He found her under the kitchen table and was trying to move rubble to get her out when the neighbors arrived. When one of them pointed out that he was wearing no clothes he replied, "It just didn't seem important at the time."

Clyde Kinser worked as a logger and farmed for a time. He did find some time for mischief, however. He tells of riding his horse along the trails in rural Monroe County, Tennessee at night and tying half a stick of dynamite to a tree limb, lighting the fuse, and riding off. Being a mile or more away when the explosion rocked the countryside. He was all innocence leaving the neighbors to wonder at the cause of the explosion. One of his later regrets was not being able to finish High School. After his later success in business he would comment from time to time, "Not bad for a kid with a grammar school education."

Clyde Kinser and Esther Mae Carney were married in 1930 and moved to Athens, Tennessee. They eloped to Dalton, Georgia and were secretly married. The secrecy didn't last long, however. Both Clyde and Esther said that the other told a friend and the secret was out. In Athens Clyde worked for the Athens Stove Works, later becoming a production line supervisor, making gas and wood stoves. He told me that for much of this period he earned $6.00 per week.

After Clyde and Esther were married they lived for a time in a small red frame house just outside Athens, Tennessee where their first son, Robert, was born. They later moved into rooms in the home of Miss Willie Callen. Their second son, Wayne, was born there. Clyde purchased some land from Miss Willie and they built a house with the aid of Esther's Father, Andrew Carney, who was a master carpenter. This first house was built during the depression years of the thirties and many of the modern conveniences we consider necessary had to be added later.

The house had a bathroom but no indoor plumbing. An outhouse up near the barn provided the needed facilities. Electricity was also a later addition. Esther's first washing machine was a Maytag with a tub and wringer, powered by a small gasoline engine with. A twenty foot long flexible metal exhaust pipe uncoiled to run the fumes from the porch out into the yard.

This gasoline engine was later replaced by an electric motor when electricity became available. The arrival of electricity also allowed the addition of a pump in the well and with a steady supply of water came indoor plumbing for the bathroom.

On the hill above the house and about 50 yards away were the barn, chicken house, and hog pen. Clyde kept two or three cows to provide milk and butter for the family. He was noted for one particular characteristic among the neighbors. Every morning about 6:00 Clyde would walk up the path from the house to the barn to milk. On the way up he would sneeze, not once, not twice, but four times. These were not ordinary sneezes but were loud enough to echo off the surrounding hills. This event was so consistent that one neighbor, Reed Axley said, "I don't need an alarm clock. When I hear Clyde Kinser sneeze on the way to the barn every morning I know its' time to get up." Just as an aside the Kinser family intermarried with another Axley family. One of Clyde's favorite comments about his neighbor was "Reed Axley and I are second cousins and Reed Axley and I ain't no kin."

The house contained a large country style kitchen with a dining area. For several years it also contained two stoves, one electric and the other wood. Both were used for cooking. The family used the kitchen entrance to the house passing through the kitchen into the rest of other house.

Clyde had developed a bad habit if flipping Esther on the backside with the tips of his fingers as he passed through the kitchen. After several incidents Esther warned him that the next time he flipped her she would throw whatever was in her hand. He did and she did. At the time she was holding the cast iron lid lifter from the wood stove. As Clyde ducked out of the kitchen into the family room the lifter hid the jamb of the door just beside his head. It left a dent that was visible for years thereafter. Clyde should have been warned but he had to try one more time. This time Esther standing in front of the kitchen sink and holding a bar of soap. This time she was faster than he and just as he ducked through the door the soap caught him in the right ear. He never flipped her again but he always said that cake of soap made him hard of hearing in that ear.

In 1942, just after the start of World War II, Clyde started to work at the Hercules Powder plant in Chattanooga, Tennessee. He told many stories of driving 60 miles each way from Athens to Chattanooga to work. Sometimes his carpool drove in such dense fog that the right seat passenger would hold his door open and watch the edge of the pavement to guide the driver on the road.

Allergies to the chemicals used in making the powder forced him to seek other employment. In 1943 he went to work in Oak Ridge, Tennessee at the Y-12 plant. This plant was later known as the magnetic separation plant where Uranium 235 was separated for use in making the first atomic bomb.

The Magnetic Diffusion plant used huge electro-magnets in the separation process. Clyde told of the problems of working around the magnets. Watches inadvertently worn into the area were magnetized and stopped running permanently. All tools used around the magnets had to be made from non-magnetic materials such as aluminum or bronze. Steel tools carried too near the magnets would be snatched from hands or if carried in a pocket would rip out the pocket to stick permanently to the side of the magnetic coil. An unwary worker who ventured too close to the huge magnets with a steel wrench in his hip pocket was pinned to the side of the machine until he could strip off his coveralls to free himself. Much of the nations silver reserves were used in the magnetic coils due to a wartime shortage of copper

During the war J. S., Clyde's younger brother, moved to California where he worked as a welder in a shipyard. J. S. says that one of the first people he met in California was another Kinser who had come to California from Texas. He returned to East Tennessee after the war ended.

At the end of the war both families, Clyde's and J. S. 's, moved to Asheville, North Carolina.

After the war ended, work in Oak Ridge was being phased down so Clyde and Esther moved to Asheville, North Carolina. Housing was so scarce in Asheville that Clyde and Esther's first home consisted of four rooms and a path (outhouse). This house was located on Deaverview Road adjacent to where the Deaverview Baptist Church now stands. After working for about two years for a local home improvement company, Rock Wool Insulating Company, Clyde started his own business.

While Clyde worked for Rock Wool Insulating company he became the company's top salesman. At one time during his employment the company had a sales contest with a trip being offered to the salesman with the highest volume for a six months period. Two months into the contest Clyde had his first heart attack. He was so far ahead when the heart attack occurred that he was still slightly ahead two months later when he was able to go back to work. The owners of the company did not feel that he was the person they wanted to represent them on the trip, sponsored by a supplier, so they doctored the results to give the trip to someone else. That incident was a major factor in Clyde's decision to start his own business.

Clyde was generous when there were people in need. He helped many people through tight periods and helped several boys and girls through college but he would never allow any public recognition of confirmation of his gifts.

A former Pastor's wife later told me when her husband came out of church one Sunday morning Clyde was looking at their car. He told the pastor, "You need some tires on that car. Go down to Bennett's (where Clyde had an account) and tell them I sent you for some tires." The Bible says that the sins of the father are visited on his children and his children's children but very little about the good things a father leaves his children.

It is hard for a child to see his father through unbiased eyes. Sometimes we have to look outside ourselves to understand.

Dad was a creature of habit. His hair was cut by the same barber every two weeks. The two became close friends and even business associates. Almost twenty years after our father's death Wayne was having his hair cut by dad's barber. His son, David, was suffering with the problems of adolescence. Wayne occupied the time in the barber's chair by telling him about some of his son's escapades and his own disappointment in his son's deportment.

"I sure never behaved that way when I was growing up."

"But Wayne, you have to realize David doesn't have the father you did."

It has been common for Wayne and I to meet someone who remembers dad and recalls some deed of kindness dad never mentioned.

Over twenty years after dad's death Wayne needed to acquire a right- of- way across some property belonging to Mt. Olive Baptist Church. The deal was complex involving hurt feeling that went back several years. Previous attempts to reach an understanding had failed.

Wayne went to see the Pastor of the church and explained the purpose of his visit. The man asked, "What did you say your name was?"

"Wayne Kinser."

"Are you one of Clyde Kinser's sons?"

"Yes, I am."

"I'll do anything I can to Help you."

Seeing Wayne's puzzled expression the pastor asked, "You don't have any idea why I said I would help you do you?"

"No, I don't."

"I'll have to explain. Several years ago I was a plumber before I became a minister. I was in business with my father and we had the contract to install plumbing in a new building for Grace Baptist Church. While we were working on the job my father died. All our bank accounts were immediately frozen. I couldn't even get money to pay my men. Clyde Kinser met my payroll for two weeks out of his own pocket while I got dad's affairs straightened out."

Clyde was of medium height with a tendency toward too much weight. Holding his weight down was a constant battle. He suffered from angina for several years and strenuous effort quickly brought on pain and out came the ever present nitroglycerin pills.

One thing I noticed, however; Clyde never seemed to suffer greatly from angina while he was fishing, no matter how difficult the fight when reeling in a big fish. On one occasion he was fishing for Tarpon on the Peace River with his son ,Wayne, and a group of Wayne's friends. Clyde hooked a big one. During the fight he had an Angina attack.

Two of the men in the party were doctors. Clyde turned his head, while continuing to fight the fish, and said, somewhat breathlessly, "Doc, Doc, would you get one of my pills out of my pocket and put it under my tongue." The doctor complied and Clyde continued with the battle and succeeded in reeling in a big Tarpon. An angina attack would not be allowed to stop him from doing what he enjoyed. He suffered four heart attacks before the last one at Fort Myers, Florida.

Becoming a Baptist after many years of marriage to Esther Carney, who grew up as a Baptist, he was active in church and civic affairs. He was a long time member of the West Asheville Lions Club and the West Asheville Business Association. He served in many offices in Grace Baptist Church in Asheville, North Carolina and supervised the construction of the first two building after the church was organized. He was also chairman of the search committee that found the church's second pastor. That pastor remained at the church for twenty-seven years.

One of his avocations was trading cars. He would say that he should have been a horse trader but he was born fifty years too late. He usually kept two or three old cars just for trading purposes. One local automobile dealer later made the comment that Clyde Kinser was the hardest man he ever had to trade with.

Clyde had a particular talent for being at home with everyone. He enjoyed people and never met a stranger. This talent contributed greatly to his success as a salesman. He was a man with a great deal of pride in himself, his family and the business he had built. In later years, after his two sons were working in the business I saw him set at his desk and cry because his sons were not running the business properly. He felt that they were going to throw away what he had spent years to built. I would like to know what he would think today.

Home Insulation Company, started by Clyde in 1949, grew rapidly to become the largest insulation contractor in the Southeast. With the entry of his two sons into the family business the company expanded into manufacturing and selling aluminum windows and doors. As the company's emphasis changed from retailing to manufacturing the name was changed to Kinco Corporation. Kinco Corporation was a family business until sold in 1994. Several organizations that grew out of it including Deltec Homes, Pioneer Land Developers that started as a land development company then built the Great Smokies Hilton Hotel, now the Great Smokies Holiday Inn, and Peppertree Resorts remain in the family.

HOME INSULATION CO. HAS $250,000 ANNUAL PAYROLL

Home Insulation Company of Asheville, Inc., located on the New Leicester Highway, is a growing young firm. Its officers are: Clyde Kinser, president; Wayne Kinser, vice president; Esther Mae Kinser, secretary, and Robert Kinser, treasurer.

Organized in 1949 at the original location, 753 Haywood Road, West Asheville, the company moved to its present location and incorporated in 1956. Home Insulation Co. is a manufacturer, wholesaler and retailer of storm windows and doors, awnings, car ports and insulation.

KINSER

The Kinser family moved to Asheville from Oak Ridge, Tenn., in 1947. Clyde Kinser is a member of the Lions Club and W.A. Business Association.

Home Insulation Company employs approximately 60 people with an annual payroll of more than one quarter of a million dollars. The office and plant are located on a seven-acre tract of land with approximately 40,000 sq. ft. of floor space. The company maintains a fleet of 18 trucks and cars in order to provide customer service. Products manufactured by Home Insulation Company are distributed through the company's local retail sales divisoin and by home improvement contractors in seven Southern states.

Asheville Citizen December 1, 1960

Kinser, Kinzer, Kincer
Kinsar, Kinsor, Kintzer
Küntzer, Kuentzer

One Immigrant Family

Robert C. Kinser

Versatile Entrepreneur Builds Carolina Timeshare Empire

By Rosalie E. Leposky

Peppertree Resorts, Ltd., is celebrating its 20th anniversary in 1997. A prominent regional development firm based in Asheville, North Carolina, Peppertree owes its growth and success to the creative dynamism of C. Wayne Kinser (1934- August 31, 2003), its founder, chairman, and president; and to an executive staff consisting primarily of longtime associates and business partners who help to implement Kinser's ideas.

"Wayne is a visionary," says Donald K. Clayton, a Peppertree employee since 1984 who is the firm's senior vice president of marketing.

"The first time Wayne looks at a raw piece of property, he envisions how it should be developed. Generally, he is right," says Kenneth C. "Ken" Crump, Peppertree's senior vice president of construction resort development, who has worked with Kinser since 1986.

C. Wayne Kinser

Fourteen and Growing

Peppertree currently is developing and/or managing 14 mountain and beachfront timeshare resorts with almost 44,500 members:

-- Kinser began his first timeshare project, Peppertree Vacation Club, in 1977 on the grounds of The Great Smokies Hilton Resort (now a Holiday Inn Sunspree) in Asheville, North Carolina. The six-acre project has 18 buildings, 28 timeshare units, and 1,310 members.

-- His second timeshare project, Peppertree Outer Banks Beach Club in Kill Devil Hills, North Carolina, occupies property he acquired in 1980 and 1983. The 11.5-acre site has 37 buildings, 184 units, and 9,024 members.

-- Peppertree Resort Villas in Atlantic Beach, North Carolina, developed in 1981, has 24.15 acres, 27 buildings, 158 timeshare units, and 7,829 members.

-- Peppertree by the Sea in North Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, occupies property acquired in 1981. The 1.6-acre site has one building, 86 timeshare units, and 4,254 members.

-- Peppertree at Maggie Valley in Maggie Valley, North Carolina, began in 1983 on a three-acre site. It now has 16 buildings with 40 timeshare units and 2,050 members.

-- Sandpebble Beach Club in Surfside, South Carolina, was acquired in 1985 and 1986. The one-acre resort has one building and 13 timeshare units with 642 members.

-- Peppertree Blue Ridge Village in Banner Elk, North Carolina, acquired in 1986, has 52.39 acres with 12 buildings, 95 timeshare units, and 3,780 members.

-- Peppertree at Tamarack in Wisconsin Dells, Wisconsin, acquired in 1986, occupies a 70-acre site. It has 25 buildings, 81 timeshare units, and 3,559 members.

-- Peppertree Laurel Point in Gatlinburg, Tennessee, acquired in 1986, is a six-acre resort with three buildings, 50 timeshare units, and 2,506 members.

-- Fontana Village, in Fontana Dam, North Carolina, was acquired in 1987. A resort community in the Great Smoky Mountains 90 miles west of Asheville, it occupies 360 acres of land leased from the Tennessee Valley Authority until the year 2060. "Fontana is a privately owned full-service town on the south shore of Lake Fontana, a 12,000-acre reservoir," says Kinser. "I'm vice mayor, and we have our own fire department." Fontana has a 98-room hotel built in 1974 that Peppertree purchased in 1987, a 20-unit campground, 200 cottages and rental condominiums, and 43 timeshare units with 1,739 owners.

-- Peppertree Sea Mystique in Garden City, South Carolina, was acquired in 1988. The one-acre resort has one building with 11 timeshare units and 548 members.

-- Peppertree Sands in North Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, was acquired in 1989. A one-acre resort, it has one building with 12 timeshare units and 450 members.

-- Peppertree Ocean Club in North Myrtle Beach, South Carolina, was acquired in 1991. It occupies a five-acre site and has one building with 108 timeshare units and 4,640 members.

-- Peppertree Hilton Head on Hilton Head Island, South Carolina, occupies 40 acres of land acquired in 1994. Timeshare sales there have just begun.

In addition, Peppertree owns property at several other locations in North and South Carolina where development of timeshare resorts is planned.

Growing Up In Business

C. Wayne Kinser was born in 1933 in Athens, Tennessee. A decade later, he moved to Oak Ridge, Tennessee, with his parents, C. Clyde and Esther Carney Kinser, and his older brother, Robert C. Kinser, so his father could work in a munitions factory.

While still in elementary school, Kinser engaged in his first entrepreneurial activity at the age of 10 -- selling used comic books. His father encouraged this endeavor.

In 1949 the Kinsers moved to Asheville, North Carolina, where C. Wayne's 85-year-old mother still lives. There C. Clyde founded the family's first company, Home Insulation of Asheville.

In the late 1940s to early 1950s no building insulation requirements existed. "Today, codes enforced by building inspectors require that building walls and ceilings have a certain 'R' value," says Kinser. "My father sold people on the value of blowing insulation into the walls and ceilings of their home, where most building heat loss occurs. We showed people how in just a few years the energy savings covered the original installation cost of Owens-Corning blown insulation materials. For several years our little Asheville company was Owens-Corning's largest Fiberglass insulation customer."

As a high-school student in Asheville, Kinser worked for his father's insulation company during summer vacations. An early client he helped was Sara Coleman Porter, the elderly widow of William Sidney Porter (1862-1910), a writer of short stories better known by his pen name, O. Henry. Porter is buried near the famous novelist Thomas Wolfe in Asheville's Riverside Cemetery.

In 1955, Kinser graduated from Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, North Carolina, with a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration, and joined his father and brother full time in the family firms.

Branching Out

"My father's business evolved into other aspects of energy conservation, including manufacturing and installation of storm windows and doors and aluminum windows and doors, so we changed the charter and company name of Home Insulation of Asheville to Kenco Corporation," he says. "Under the Kenco name we manufactured first aluminum and later vinyl windows and doors, and under the Deltec name we manufactured single-family homes, apartments, and vacation homes."

Fontana Village and several of the Peppertree timeshare resorts -- Peppertree Vacation Club, Peppertree Outer Banks Beach Club, Peppertree Atlantic Beach, and Peppertree Maggie Valley -- have some round and hexagon-shaped Deltec buildings.

"We used Deltec's pre-engineered panelized homes to help reduce construction time and material costs, and to have less ecological impact on the local environment, since building debris is recycled at the Deltec plant," says Ken Crump, who is a former Deltec Homes manager. "Deltec buildings also are less disruptive to the current owner base."

Trowbridge Offered Advice

In the 1960s, Kinser and a high-school friend, Kenneth A. Parton, founded Heritage Homes. "Shortly after, we realized we had to have a place to build homes," says Kinser, "so we founded Pioneer Land Development Inc. We became western North Carolina's largest home- development builders.

"In 1970, Parton and I divided up our holdings. Parton received all the stock in Heritage Homes and I received all of the Pioneer stock. About a year after the stock trade, as part of the national movement to consolidate homebuilding, Ken sold out to an Ohio company. In 1972, Pioneer started construction of the Great Smokies Hilton Resort and Conference Center, which opened in 1974." When the Hilton franchise on the 120-acre, 280-room resort expired in 1995, Kinser converted his hotel to the new Holiday Inn Sunspree brand.

"In 1976," he says, "I read an article in a trade publication about Sanibel Island developer Keith Trowbridge and his new timesharing concept. My parents owned a winter home nearby in Fort Myers, Florida, so I made a point to see Trowbridge when I visited there. He graciously spent time with me, and taught me how to divide up a piece of property 52 ways. I asked him where to locate a timeshare property. He suggested I select a place where people want to be."

In 1977 Kinser built the first of 18 villas of his Peppertree Vacation Club on the grounds of the Great Smokies Hilton Resort. "Peppertree Vacation Club, affiliation number 0066, was one of Resort Condominiums International's first 100 resorts," he says. "We used our own hotel guests as our first timeshare prospects. We've done well in Asheville even though most Americans prefer the beach to the mountains. Several of our other properties have been beach resorts.

"We developed the Peppertree brand with the creation of our third resort, Atlantic Beach. A half-dozen employees wrote down appealing names. I wrote down the name Pepper Tree because it was easy to say, and we used literary license." Kinser isn't sure how he learned about the pepper tree, a foothill chaparral tree (Schinus molle) native to Peru that grows about 1,800 feet above sea level on the south slopes of the Santa Ynez mountains near Santa Barbara, California.

Umbrella for Diverse Enterprises

Peppertree Resorts, Ltd., serves as an umbrella for other companies Kinser owns with a variety of partners. They include Atlantic Beach Enterprises, Inc.; Crystal Resorts, Inc.; Great Smokies Resorts, Inc.; Peppertrees Management, Inc.; Peppertrees Resorts Villas, Inc.; Peppertree Fontana Village Inc.; Peppertree Ocean Club, Inc.; and Pioneer Hotel Inc.

Eventually the Kinser brothers traded company shares. Robert retained full ownership of Kenco and Deltec, and Wayne retained full ownership of Peppertree and subsidiary operations. Later Robert sold Kenco's window-manufacturing operation to a midwestern window manufacturer, while retaining ownership -- but not day-to-day management -- of Deltec Homes. Kinser's timeshare-related business interests also include Meridian Financial Services, Inc., a collections company founded in 1989 and jointly owned by Kinser; John S. McFarland, senior executive vice president and chief operating officer of Peppertree Resorts, Ltd.; and Gregory B. Sheperd, president of Meridian.

In 1991, Kinser, McFarland, and Sheperd founded Paragon Financial Services, LLC, a receivables-management company that operates in 38 states to service loans and bill annual tax assessments.

Shepard operates both Meridian and Paragon. "Since November 1996, when I left Meridian to come to work full time at Peppertree Resorts, Ltd., I have had a hands-off relationship with Meridian," says McFarland, a Kinser associate for 13 years.

Herbert H. "Butch" Patrick, Peppertree's new chief financial officer, now handles Peppertree's relationship with Meridian. Patrick is intimately familiar with Peppertree after 18 years in the Asheville accounting firm of Painter, Patrick & Russell, Peppertree's outside auditor.

Family and Civic Affiliations

Kinser has been married since 1990 to Cindy M. Rice, an Asheville-area native who is the mother of Kinser's 14-year-old step-daughter, Natalie M. Rice. An avid outdoorsman, Kinser likes to take Natalie camping. He recently attended a Smashing Pumpkins rock concert in Charlotte, North Carolina, with Natalie, Donald Clayton, and Clayton's 14-year-old daughter, Kyla.

From a previous marriage, Kinser has two older children: Sharon K. Kinser, 38, manager of Harbor House Restaurant in Panacea, Florida, and David W. Kinser, 34, Peppertree's corporate pilot and manager of the firm's owners' vacation-rental and travel programs.

Kinser is or has been a board member of several Asheville community and governmental organizations and statewide committees, including the Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce, Asheville City Planning Board, Manna Food Bank (which feeds the homeless), the Preservation Society of Asheville & Buncombe County, and the North Carolina's Governor's Council for Travel and Tourism. He has been an active Rotarian for 25 years.

Kinser Learned Patience From Fishing

C. Wayne Kinser, founder, chairman, and president of Peppertree Resorts Ltd., uses the patience he learned as a fly fisherman to envision, develop, and manage timeshare resorts.

An ardent fly fisherman or "wader" since junior high school, Kinser has waded in most of the world's best fly-fishing spots. Probably not by accident, most members of his executive-management staff share his passion for fly fishing. Timeshare-industry colleagues say they've learned not to offer Kinser or his staff their favorite fishing stories unless they've had a true wader's experience.

"The uninitiated will find fly fishing fairly portrayed in A River Runs Through It (a movie about fly fishing directed by Robert Redford)," says Kinser, "except that a fly fisherman may not catch fish every day. The fun is in the fishing, not in the actual catching of fish."

Kinser participates in catch-and-release programs for sport fishermen, but he kept one prize fish. Mounted on a wall of his office is a 13-pound rainbow trout he caught in the Rio Golgol in South Chile on the last cast of a two-week South American fly-fishing trip.

"Little-known outside of Chile, the Golgol River flows from the Andes Mountains into Lago Puyehue near the city of Puyehue," says Osvaldo Barrientos, chancellor of the Chilean consulate in Miami, Florida, and brother of Jorge Barrientos, one of Chile's best-known fly-fishing teachers. "Part of International Route 215 follows the Golgol River, connecting Portezuelo de Puyehue, Argentina, and Osorno, Chile. The Golgol fishing season begins in November and ends in April, with the best fishing in the first and last weeks of the season. Kinser's fish is large, but my brother Jorge has caught larger fish in the Golgol."

Since 1990, Kinser has been a local board member of the Land of Sky Chapter of Trout Unlimited, a national conservation organization of fishermen based in Charlottesville, Virginia.

Ghost May Inhabit Corporate Office

The corporate offices of Peppertree Resorts, Ltd., occupy Zealandia, a historic mansion that they Located about 2,500 feet above sea level on a ridge of the Beaucatcher Mountains in Asheville, North Carolina, Zealandia is minutes from downtown, half a mile off the Blue Ridge Parkway, and about 30 miles from the Great Smoky Mountains National Park.

A New Zealand sheep rancher, John Evans Brown, built the original red-brick Zealandia on a 168-acre tract in 1860. In 1904 a later owner, O.D. Revel, sold Zealandia with 40 acres of land to Australian-born world traveler and art patron Sir Philip Henry, who expanded the home in 1919-1920 to a three-story, 62-room English manor house with a separate cottage and stables. One of Sir Philip's daughters, Violet Henry, and her husband, General Harley H. Maconochie, remodeled and combined many of the rooms in the 1950s. Today it has 28 rooms on 16 acres of land.

In 1961 the Maconochies sold Zealandia to Miami hotelier George Dixon and his wife, Isabella June Wolf "Dottie" Dixon, who used Zealandia as a summer home. George Dixon died on March 28, 1969, and Dotty stopped summering at Zealandia in the early 1970s. Peppertree moved its offices into the house in 1984.

"I've never seen the ghost," says C. Wayne Kinser, Peppertree's chairman and president. "Mrs. Dixon told me that one evening she and her husband were watching television when an apparition came down Zealandia's grand staircase, walked across the entrance foyer, and then went up the back steps.

"Mrs. Dixon called Zealandia's former owner, Violet Henry Maconochie, and asked if she had seen the apparition. Mrs. Maconochie suggested the apparition was Helen, the first wife of her father, Sir Philip Henry. She said Helen had died in a Pennsylvania fire, and was looking for her family. Mrs. Maconochie suggested that Mrs. Dixon tell Helen where the family had moved, and Mrs. Dixon never saw the apparition again."

Why Asheville?

Most early timeshare developers gravitated to sandy beaches or Orlando-like attractions. C. Wayne Kinser's first timeshare project on the grounds of the Great Smokies Hilton Resort in Asheville, North Carolina, is different because it is in a traditional mountain summer-resort community where visitors don't expect sandy beaches, ski lifts, or rodent-themed amusement parks. "Affluent families sent the wives and children to spent the summer in the mountains, while fathers stayed and worked in the hot cities," says Kinser. "Large homes were built in sections of Asheville to accommodate summer residents. Asheville has many fine architecturally significant buildings, with perhaps the largest collection of art-deco buildings outside of Miami Beach.

"Floridians have exerted a great deal of influence on Asheville. Prior to World War II and the introduction of mechanical air conditioning, Asheville was cool when most everywhere else in North and South Carolina and Florida was extremely hot. Typically the temperature drops three to four degrees during the day for every 1,000 feet of elevation, and even more at night. In the 1920s and 1930s, screened sleeping porches were very popular in Asheville homes and hospitals."

Historically, Asheville's summer visitors came to enjoy the fresh, cool summer air, hot mineral springs, and mountain attractions of a southern Appalachian community just a day's journey from New York. The convenient location attracted George W. Vanderbilt III (1862-1914), creator of the Biltmore Estate, the largest private family home in America.

© Copyright 1997 Ampersand Communications
All Rights Reserved
Published in The Resort Trades, May.

C. Wayne Kinser: August 31, 2003

Wayne Kinser, founder, chairman, and president of Peppertree Resorts Ltd, passed away after an extended illness on August 31, 2003. He was 69 years old.

Kinser began his first timeshare project, Peppertree Vacation Club, in 1977 on the grounds of The Great Smokies Hilton Resort (now a Holiday Inn Sunspree) in Asheville, North Carolina. Twenty-two years later, when Peppertree Resorts merged with Equivest Finance in 1999 Peppertree was one of the leading vacation ownership companies in the Southeast, welcoming mc than 50,000 families each year to its 15 resorts throughout the Carolinas, Tennessee, Wisconsin a Missouri.

Mr. Kinser is survived by his wife, Cindy Fullbright Kinser; two daughters, Kay Kinser Williamso and her husband, Tim, of Panacea, Fla., and Natalie Rice of the home; son, David Wayne Kinser and his wife, Kim, of Asheville; brother, Robert Kinser and his wife, Cathryn, of Asheville; and th grandchildren, Hunter and Lauren Kinser and Zachary Williamson.

Burial is to be a private ceremony at Riverside Cemetery with only immediate family attending. A memorial service in celebration of Mr. Kinser's life will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 4, at Ar Presbyterian Church, where he was a member. The Rev. Ed. Graham will officiate. The family will receive friends following the service.

In lieu of flowers memorial gifts may be made to the Cove Camp Scholarship Fund, c/o Sherri Schaddelee, P.O. Box 19223, Asheville, NC 28815 or Manna Food Bank, 627 Swannanoa River Ro Asheville, NC 28778.

Morris Funeral Home is assisting with the arrangements.

Two Sons Are Visiting Mrs. Eva Ledbetter

Fullam Kirkpatrick

Staff Sgt. James Fullam and Sgt. Jesse Kirkpatrick, sons of Mrs. Eva Ledbetter of 184 Brucemont circle, are visiting their mother while home on furlough.

Staff Sgt. Fullam has been in the service for two years and is stationed at Camp Lee, Va., where he is a company mess sergeant. He is well known in Asheville, being a former member of the Cosmic club, and was employed by the American Enka corporation before enlisting. Fullam would like to see active duty somewhere at the front. He has been at Camp Lee ever since his enlistment and has moved only two blocks away from his original quarters. "I'll never get to the front at that rate," he said.

Sgt. Kirkpatrick, who enlisted at the same time, is in the air corps at Bryan, Texas, where he is serving with a ground crew squadron. He enlisted a month after graduating from Lee Edwards high school and believes that his chances of seeing action are good.

Asheville Times June 16, 1943

—Citizen Photo

TWO SONS, both ministers, and members of their families are visiting their minister father, the Rev. M. L. Kirstein, and Mrs. Kirstein at 62 Westgate Road. The Rev. James F. Kirstein of Miami (left) is shown with his wife and year-old daughter, Laura Lee. At right are the Rev. John A. Kirstein of Louisvile, Ky., and his wife and daughter, Janice, 4½. The Rev. M. L. Kirstein is pastor of New Morgan Hill Baptist Church.

Buncombe Baptist missions leader Kiser dies

By Rebekkah Melchor Logan
RELIGION EDITOR

CANDLER — The Rev. Ronald M. Kiser, director of missions for the Buncombe Baptist Association, died in his sleep at his Candler home Wednesday.

"This has been very shocking," said the Rev. Gayle Brown, past director of the association and a close family friend. "Ron Kiser was a good, good man."

As director of missions, Kiser was responsible for continuing the collaborative work of churches and associations that has been a Baptist tradition since the association's founding in 1885.

Rev. Ronald Kiser

Kiser, 56, was born in Randolph County and attended Wingate College. He earned a bachelor's degree from Gardner-Webb and his master of divinity degree from the Southeastern Theological Seminary, where he began to establish some lifelong friendships.

"We met in college 28 years ago and went on to seminary together," the Rev. Charlie Sams said. "He and I talked on a weekly basis, and he helped me as a personal friend and a spiritual confidant. I don't think he realized how many pastors he befriended."

"He and I talked on a weekly basis, and he helped me as a personal friend and a spiritual confidant. I don't think he realized how many pastors he befriended."

THE REV. CHARLIE SAMS

Kiser, a member of Grace Baptist Church, is survived by his wife, Brenda, daughter, Elizabeth Brewer, son, Lee Kiser, two grandchildren, two sisters and two brothers.

The family will receive friends from 6 to 8 p.m. today at West Asheville Baptist Church There will be a service celebrating Kiser's life at 2 p.m. Saturday at West Asheville Baptist. Sams will deliver Kiser's eulogy with Homer Green and Roger Mercer. The Rev. L. Wayne Adkisson will officiate.

Kiser served as pastor of First Baptist Church in Seagrove before becoming associate pastor at Sandy Ridge Baptist Church in Hickory. He served as associate pastor at Bonlee Baptist Church until 1983. He moved to Morningside Baptist Church and in 1997 became an associate at the Buncombe Baptist Association. He tenure as director began in 2001.

Brown said a plaque on the wall in Kiser's study best summed up his life. It reads:

"Take time to work, it's the price of success. Take time to play, it's the secret of perpetual youth. Take time to think, it's the source of power. Take time to read, it's the foundation of wisdom. Take time to pray, it's a conversation with God. Take time to laugh, it is the music of the soul. Take time to listen, it is the pathway to understanding. Take time to dream, it's hitching your wagon to a star. Take time to worship, it's the highway of reverence. Take time to love, it's the gift of God."

Asheville Citizen January 2004

Friday, Nov. 22, 1991

Viola D. Knollman

Viola D. Knollman, 95, of Asheville, died Wednesday in an Asheville nursing home.

She had lived in Asheville since 1924. She was the daughter of the late John Henry and Elizabeth Langley Davis. She was the wife of Paul T. Knollman, who died in 1960.

Viola D. Knollman

A member of West Asheville Presbyterian Church, she was a member of the Presbyterian Women's Circle, a former Sunday school teacher and circle chairman and president of the Shumate-Taylor Memorial Bible class. She had served the youth fellowship supper for several years. She was a former member of YWCA and a member of Buncombe County Florist Association. She had served on the Presbyterian Board for four years.

She was a former employee of the Rev. William MacNair and was founder and former owner of Knollman Florist, where she had worked for 20 years.

Graveside services will be at 11 a.m. Friday in Green Hills Cemetery. The Rev. Ben Sloan will officiate.

Memorials may be made to West Asheville Presbyterian Church, 690 Haywood Road, Asheville, N.C. 28806.

Amy's Club In 23rd Year Of Service To Children

By GERRY KOONTZ

Ol' Man Winter is packing his grips with his most cagey freezes and cooling breezes ... his annual trip to the mountains. And, as usual, he finds big and little communities from the tips of the frosted ridges to the rolling slopes busy trying to outdo each other in trying to make this world a warm-hearted place in which to live.

But over on Burton Street in West Asheville there lives an elderly colored woman whose heart stays young while her bones grow older, and 1959 marks the 23rd year of her own small community club's existence.

Her name is Amy Knox — though most of her white friends could scarcely tell you the "Knox" part—and the name of her club is the "Do-Better Community Club".

It meets now in the homes of its members, although it has often met in churches of various denominations.

The members of the little club are all children. Amy's heart goes out to all her young friends, whose needs encompass not only the lack of spiritual bread, but shoes and coats, and warm pajamas and things the other kids have.

★ ★ ★

AMY KNOX

★ ★ ★

So, for 23 years, Amy has met with "her kids once a week "to learn the Commandments and a few verses", and sing songs together.

There are small incentive prizes for these children who have so little incentive, and Amy must try hard to pass the prizes out fairly, not to hurt the feelings of those who have not yet earned their reward.

Each week, the children who are able bring their "offering" of pennies or a dime. With these few cents, Amy lays away overalls, shirts, warm clothing of all kinds for her children in the stores in Asheville. Soon now, near to Christmas, several of her white friends will allow her to do extra work in order to make up enough money to get 40 children's worth of clothes out of lay-away.

Once, one friend carefully prepared packets crammed with sweets and backed with the faces from her personal Christmas cards that she had saved. Amy says that's one example of how the Lord always provides—somehow.

Folks know that a good way to have Amy's jolly laugh and compliments galore descend on their ears is to present her with a box of used clothing.

Most will go to the children's good use. "If it has a sleeve to stick an arm in, it'll help my chillun," she says. And anything that is really past redemption is still gold to Amy, for she sells it to the rag dealer, and has a little more precious cash to use for her young folks.

Some of the present members of Amy's community club are second generationers; Amy had their parents as children, and "Lawd!" she says, "That do make me feel old!"

Well, her hair is turning a little gray in spots. And she can remember so far back into some of her white "chillun's" past that you know she can't be young.

But how she can climb tall ladders to put her particular shine on the outside of those windows! And stoop over the baseboards to get those specks.

Or how tenderly she soothes the little boy who's not ordinarily happy with anyone but his mother or his grandmothers!

Her love of children hasn't stopped with those of her own race. She's helped a generation of her white folks' children grow up, too.

And how happy they make "their ol' Amy" when they, in turn, remember her club, and the children's needs.

Asheville Citizen Dec. 13, 1959

BENNETT KRICKBAUM

COASTAL MONSTERS—Susan Bennett and George Krickbaum, both aged 10 of West Asheville, pose behind eight of 29 largemouth bass caught at Currituck on the coast by a party of four which included Susan's daddy. The catch was made last weekend. In addition to W. R. Bennett and L. G. Young of Asheville, the party included H. E. West and Lennie Shaw of Durham. The boys made their catch on Johnson Spoons and Jitterbugs.

Asheville Citizen May 27, 1957

JNTAIN COMMUNITIES

schools news,
- WEDNESDAY: Civic groups, In colleges
- THURSDAY: How to help, Student spotlight
- FRIDAY: Students of the week, Adopt a pet
- SATURDAY: Births, Visiting our past, Religion calendar
- SUNDAY: Bob Terrell column, Government meetings, Roll call (U.S., N.C.), General Assembly contacts

Contact with enemy altered local World War II soldiers' lives

Visiting our past

World War II not only connected local soldiers with Americans from different backgrounds; it also gave them personal knowledge of their wartime enemies.

Rob Neufeld

June Lamb of West Asheville joined the WAVES, the women's naval corps, in February 1945. She recalls how Southern girls felt during training in New York, associating with Northerners who knew no Jim Crow laws. She also recalls another form of culture shock. Six years later, Lamb traveled, as an X-ray technician hired by the National Health Organization, to Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan, to assess the damage inflicted by atomic bombs.

"I saw men," Lamb says, "who looked like they had wrapped their belts around themselves twice, they were so frail — and so gentle and kind."

It was Lamb's job to help do a demographic survey of radiation-caused sickness as it related to the bombs' epicenters. A documentary film shows young Lamb holding the hand of a Japanese girl who feared but yielded to medical examinations.

The accepting nature of the Japanese people moved Lamb. She recalled herself thinking, "That would not have happened if they had taken over our country. I began to think, 'How are they so different? How are they so accepting?' Number one, their religious background is more fatalistic. ... There's a constant phrase, 'Shou ga nai' — 'There's nothing you can do about it.' The other thing, they were more than glad to be rid of their military-industrial complex."

"I have found a sympathy with them," Lamb now adds, "for I am totally against the military-industrial complex." Returning home from Japan, Lamb studied to be a social worker.

Andy Andrews, an eastern Tennessee boy who now lives in Western North Carolina, once rescued a German soldier who had tried to kill him. Enlisting in the Army in 1943, Andrews went on to storm Normandy and hold the line at the Battle of the Bulge.

One autumn night in 1945 at 2:30 a.m., Andrews was manning a machine gun in defense of a German hill. He was one of the few left in his group because German rangers had managed to sneak behind other American gunners and slit their throats. Even after artillery had blasted the positions the Germans had occupied, enemy soldiers pressed on.

"One German stood and threw a grenade at me," he recounts, "and I shot bullets through his body — I could see the bullets go through because every fifth bullet is a tracer. ... About a half-hour after the battle had subsided, I saw a little white flag come up — a handkerchief — and this voice said, 'May I surrender? Please, may I?'"

Prepared for a trick, Andrews kept a bead on the crawling infantryman. As he approached, Andrews saw he was the German who had thrown the grenade. "His whole side was just ripped out," Andrews says.

Andrews helped the German back through American lines to a medic. "This kid — his name was Erich," Andrews remembers. "He said, 'You shoot me?' I said, 'No, no, I am Christian.' He said, 'I, too, Christian. Drafted.' He was 17, and I was 19."

War memories project

The interviews on which this story is based had been collected and videotaped by the Center for Diversity Education as part of their project, "WWII Mountain Memories: Home Front to the Frontlines." Call 254-9044 or visit www.main.nc.us/diversity/ for more information.

SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES
June Lamb

Rob Neufeld writes the local history feature, "Visiting Our Past," for the Citizen-Times, and may be reached at 251-1415 or RNeufeld@charter.net.

Journey of a lifetime

Asheville native's long road from WAVE to world citizen

BY ALLI MARSHALL

"IT'S A SMALL WORLD AFTER ALL," OBSERVES GLOBETROTTER JUNE LAMB, ADDING, "GOOD PEOPLE FIND EACH OTHER."

Those words could be the septuagenarian's motto. As a radiological researcher, social worker and missionary, she's traveled through most of Asia and Europe and lived in Japan for some 15 years. In the process, she's confronted firsthand the ugly aftermaths of nuclear weapons. And while it may have been simple wanderlust that first led Lamb overseas (growing up, she says, her mother encouraged the young June's sense of adventure, and those promptings obviously took root), her initial venture proved to be only the beginning of a lifelong journey of conscience.

photo courtesy U.S. Department of Defense

Life after death: The Hiroshima bombing, viewed by many as the epochal event of the 20th century, had personal as well as public ramifications. Asheville native June Lamb was called to service aiding the victims of radiation poisoning, and found a life's work.

Five decades later, that same love of travel has now taken her back to Japan for a three-and-a-half-week visit — only this time, her excursion is also a quest for peace.

In the 1940s, the Asheville-area native headed off to Lees-McRae College, a Presbyterian school in Banner Elk, N.C., to earn an associate's degree as a medical secretary. An inspiring apprenticeship with a science professor left her considering the idea of pursuing more schooling, but at age 20, her itchy feet prevailed.

"I wanted to join the Navy" as a way to see the world, she explained during a recent interview. It was an unusual aspiration at the time — the regular armed forces did not accept women. Undaunted, Lamb signed up for the WAVES (Women Accepted for Voluntary Emergency Service), a special branch of the Navy established during World War II.

photo by Bo Post

"The WAVES allowed women to do something," she noted, "b we weren't in the naval ranks." Furthermore, by the time Lan completed basic training, World War II was winding down, instead of being shipped to some exotic port of call, the would- adventuress was slated to be sent to the closest available post to h home in Asheville. But she finagled an assignment to a medical ce ter in Norman, Okla., where she served in the X-ray department

"That's where I discovered the Textbook for Radiological Technol by Leroy Sante," remembered Lamb. Newly inspired, Lamb appli to the radiology program (which had only recently begun admitti women) at St. Louis University, where Sante taught. It was a Jes school, which worried her staunchly Presbyterian family a friends, but Lamb forged ahead with extending her education.

Returning to Asheville with a four-year degree in hand, the tr blazer began work at Norburn Hospital (which later beca Memorial Mission), still longing for more excitement. So wh Duke University invited her (based on the recommendations of SLU Professors) to spend two years in Japan working with Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission (founded through National Research Council), Lamb eagerly packed her bags.

The Casualty Commission was a research organization, not a tr

STORY CONTINUES ON NEXT PAGE

Aftermath: Confused survivors huddle together in this unattributed photo taken hours after a single bomb leveled the city of Hiroshima. Victims of the bomb, known as hibaksua, later hid what had happened to them out of fear of marriage or job discrimination. An estimated 200,000 people died in the blast.

pened to them out of fear of marriage or job discrimination," continued Muecke. In traditional arranged marriages, she explained, anyone displaying disfigurement of any sort would not be considered a suitable mate. Growing up in Japan, she noted, "We didn't learn how people felt or suffered; I never thought about it," because people hid the atrocities they had suffered.

As she watched Ohta's tape, Muecke recalled: "In the documentary, there was a man sitting on the floor. ... He said he'd had 27 operations — that means he had to go through many agonies. Fortunately, he was able to marry and have two children. When his children wanted to know why he had the scars, he told them, 'Maybe this is a punishment from God.'"

At that moment, Muecke knew she wanted to write the stories of the people who'd suffered through the bombings, to let everyone know that their pain was, indeed, not a punishment. She shares with Lamb a vision of enlightening others about the atrocities of war as a way to help create peace. "When I saw the video, I realized that, even nowadays, people don't understand the tragic effect of what happens when you use an atomic bomb," she said. "That bomb was made more than 50 years ago — it's even stronger today."

"We don't need any more war," Lamb declared.

Accordingly, on July 23, the two women began what Lamb has described as "a miraculous journey" with a stop-off in San Francisco so Muecke could read some of her essays over the air on the city's Japanese-language radio station. In Japan, the pair's agenda will include spending time north of Osaka and at a seaside resort that's popular with Japanese tourists. Also on the schedule is a reunion with a woman who came to the Atomic Bomb Casualty Commission Center in the early 1950s and still remembers "a young foreign X-ray tech."

Asheville holds its own memorial service for the victims of the bombings of Hiroshima and Nagasaki on Wednesday, Aug. 6 at the Vance Monument. The Peace Vigil begins at 8:30 p.m.; participants are asked to dress in white. For more information, call 271-0022

For Lamb, it's the culmination of a life marked by remarkable coincidences and unplanned encounters. "I would never be launched on this journey if my friend in Osaka had not taped the program [about] the atomic-bomb blast," she observes.

The two women will join memorial services in Hiroshima on Aug. 6 and in Nagasaki on Aug. 9. "This is about sharing the human experience to know we're not alone," maintains Lamb, adding, "Our common humanity binds us."

Our 10th Year of Weekly Independent News, Arts & Events for WNC Vol. 10 No. 1

MOUNTAIN
Xpress
www.mountainx.co

HIROSHIMA'S HUMAN FALLO

Asheville native's journey of faith

Also inside:
Steel Magnolias at SART

SCHOOL TO HONOR OLD FRIEND WITH MEMORIAL EVENT

Plans are being made for a memorial service in honor of the late A. E. Lance, aged caretaker of Eugene Rankin School, West Asheville, who died several weeks ago, it was announced yesterday. A program is being planned for the service which is to be held at a date to be announced later, and a tree will be planted on the school grounds in memory of Mr. Lance.

Mr. Lance had served as janitor at the school since its completion four years ago, and was known as the friend of every child there. After his death the school flag was flown at half mast, and many of the teachers and students attended the funeral.

March 5, 1929 Asheville Citizen-Times

THE ASHEVILLE TIMES

Winners In Garden Club Essay Contest

The boys and girls shown above studied the importance of the conservation of trees and then wrote winning essays in a contest sponsored by the conservation committee of the Asheville Garden club. They are, left to right, seated: Nancy Eller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Eller of 60 Brucemont circle, first prize at Aycock elementary school; Jack Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Johnston of 95 Cumberland avenue, second prize winner at Randolph elementary school; Jo Ann Zimmerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Zimmerman of 37 Michigan avenue, second prize at Aycock elementary school; standing, Robert Brackett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lee Brackett of 4 Amboy street, second prize at Rankin elementary school; George Lance, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Lance of 21 Brotherton street, first prize at Rankin; and Tommy Rezzuto, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Rezzuto of 29 Blake street, second prize at Randolph elementary school. Other first and second prize winners unable to be present for the picture are Wayland Plemmons, first, and Mary Frances DeVore, second, at San Hill school, and Georgia Hensley, first at Vance Elementary school. Third prize winners of the schools are as follows: Pat Grice, Aycock; Helen Young, Rankin; Thomas Sumner, Randolph; and Granville Corn, Sand Hill. Cash prizes amounting to $12 will be given the winners at a meeting of the garden club Wednesday, February 18 at the George Vanderbilt hotel.

Asheville Times February 11, 1942

Two Lance Sons In Armed Forces

PVT. LANCE

SGT. LANCE

Mrs. Pearl Lance of 49 Euclid avenue, West Asheville, has two sons serving with the armed forces.

Pvt. Garland F. Lance has returned to Robbins Field, Ga., after spending a 10-day furlough with his mother and wife, Mrs. Bernice Lance of Asheville. He is serving with the medical corps. He entered the service in April, 1943, and received training a Saint Petersburg and Miami, Fla., Camp Lee, Va., and Drew Field, Fla. Pvt. Lance is a graduate of Venable high school and was employed by the American Enka corporation prior to induction.

Sgt. Kenneth H. Lance has arrived in England, according to word received by his mother. He is with an engineers battalion. He entered the service, with the national guard, in September, 1940, receiving basic training at Camp Jackson, S. C., where he was stationed for a year. Sgt. Lance has been at Camp Blanding Fla., and Camp Forest, Tenn. prior to entraining for Camp Atterbury, Ind. He was then sent overseas. His wife is Mrs. Kathryn Lance of Asheville.

Asheville Times March 20, 1944

Buncombe Veterans Fought In Famous Civil War Battles

One man who charged up Cemetery Ridge with the Stars and Bars in Pickett's immortal and fatal rush at Gettysburg and half a dozen who took part in Bragg's "barren victory" at Chickamauga, are among the 37 living Confederate veterans in Buncombe county. Another was present when Lee surrendered at Appomattox, and still another remembers clearly the fall of Fort Sumter, the opening gun of the war, although he did not enter the service until several weeks later.

The veterans living today are a modest lot for the most part. Those who were old enough to get into the grey ranks in '61 are extremely few and a majority of the men who attend the meetings of Zeb Vance camp at the courthouse nowadays say quite frankly: "We were just boys in the regiments recruited toward the end; we guarded prisoners and watched mountain passes; some of us were not even armed. But we had to sleep in the snow sometimes, and live in the mud, go hungry and ragged, so we feel that we did our part."

Average Age Is 98

Consider for a moment the troops recruited in '61 were from 21 to 35 years old. Possibly the average was 25. That would make the average age of the survivors today 98—and the youngest, recruited at 20, would be 93. The young men who went into the late regiments in '63 and '64 were often as young as sixteen—from eight to 15 years younger than the troops of the first great Confederate victories, so by far the greater number of veterans living today are of these late regiments.

But even among the living veterans who were but lads in their teens when Sumter fell, are men who fought with musket and bayonet, dashed on horseback with naked sabre, or swabbed and pointed cannon, in the really great battles of the war.

Gettysburg, the real death knell of the grey hopes and Murfreesboro or Stone's River, one of the bloodiest battles of the war, the hundred bloody skirmishes in Sherman's path of devastation; the victory of Bragg at Chickamauga and the battle of Kennesaw Mountain are memories that stir the blood in the now feeble limbs of about a dozen of the veterans in the county today.

Among them are:

W. W. Pace, now 93 years old, had not yet enlisted when the Confederates fired on Fort Sumter, but he was enrolled in Company B, First South Carolina artillery a few weeks thereafter and spent the next two years as a member of the fort's "rebel" garrison. He was there when the Union fleet finally battered them into submission in April '63, and from Charleston, his outfit set out across the Carolinas and Georgia. He was in front of Sherman when that Yankee general swept through Georgia and he was captured finally at the big battle of Averysboro, S. C. He was wounded during the seige of Sumter by the Yankees. He now lives with his son J. B. Pace near Arden.

Was At Chickamauga

J. M. Case, who lives at Emma, and his brother, W. H. Case, now dead, went out with Company D, 30th North Carolina, and were transferred to the famous sixtieth regiment. They saw service in Virginia and fought at both Chickamauga and Kennesaw Mountain and were in the thick of 38 days of service fighting around Atlanta.

John M. Houck of Marion, a member of Zeb Vance camp, was captured at Gettysburg after being wounded. He was also in the fighting around Richmond and faced Grant's troops in the wilderness around Spottsylvania.

Spencer Freeman, who served in the 25th North Carolina, is another veteran of the battles of Chickamauga and Kennesaw Mountain.

Captain W. Elbert Weaver of Weaverville and his negro body servant, Gilbert Baird, went out with the 29th North Carolina and campaigned over six states, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida and both the Carolinas. Captain Weaver still carries a bullet from Chickamauga. He saw Sherman burn Atlanta and took part in the last battle of the war, an engagement at Mansfield, La., some days after Lee's surrender at Appomattox.

Colonel R. L. Fitzpatrick, present commander of Zeb Vance camp, was for awhile a member of Morgan's famous raiders, but didn't cross the Ohio on the brilliant raid into Kentucky and Indiana. He enlisted with 31st Tennessee, but for most of the war was in Captain Owen's detachment of scouts, doing reconnoitering for Vaughn's brigade.

F. B. Bishop, 89, of Avery's creek, was present at Lee's surrender to Grant and was wounded "at the big battle of Bull Gap." His father and older brother also wore the grey.

S. P. Lanford, 87, Montana street, says he was in "plenty of battles" in the Carolinas, and was wounded seven times. He is now 97 years old.

Wounded In Pickett's Charge

Levi J. Walker, 93 years old now, was the fifth color bearer shot down in the Confederate charge up Cemetery Ridge. He lost his left leg and spent the remainder of the war a prisoner at David's Island, N. Y. He has lived in Asheville since 1920 and his home is at 260 Forest Hill drive. He was in Company B of the 13th North Carolina.

The Rev. T. F. Glenn, who has been in the ministry 75 years, was chaplain of a regiment of General Joe Wheeler's command called the Third Confederate. It was made up of companies from Georgia, Tennessee, and the Carolinas. He was at the battle of Murfreesboro in Tennessee and was in front of Sherman at Atlanta.

Lee Williams of Old Fort was in Company B of the 9th North Carolina artillery battalion. He took part in the battle of Forth Fisher and saw service in Virginia.

Ephraim Byerley, who lives in West Asheville, had two fingers shot off at the battle of Hatcher's Gap. He served in Company A, 21st North Carolina.

J. J. Stephenson, who was in Company C, 89th North Carolina, was in the battle of Bull's Gap and saw service in Tennessee.

R. T. Underwood, Chestnut street, now 87 years old, served Capt M H. Love's company of Col. W. H. Thomas' Legion, which included 400 Cherokee Indians. The unit was made up largely of young boys and Underwood's job was to guard Yankee prisoners and the passes in the Great Smoky mountains. He and his comrades saw no fighting but endured great hardships in the last winter of the war. He brought many prisoners back to Asheville.

P. B. Brown, living on the Brevard road, was in Company C, 16th South Carolina regiment.

Several Served In Cavalry

A number of the local veterans belonged to the 14th North Carolina cavalry battalion, a unit recruited of young soldiers. Among these were J. J. Stephens, R. B. Bitten of Horseshoe, J. A. Hughey and H. S. Walton.

John Paxton of Canton, who belongs to Zeb Vance camp, saw service in the western army with Company I, 62nd North Carolina.

J. W. Dickerson, who was in Col. Walter Bryson's command was quite young, and served at the saltpetre works near Hendersonville.

There are a number of names on the Confederate pension role at the courthouse, whose regimental affiliations and records are not known to the camp, nor does the pension clerk have their addresses. They are known to be living, however, as they called for their checks in June. They include D. V. Cole, T. M. Cole, E. Guthry, Thomas Hudgens, Henry E. Limbaugh, O. W. Reynolds, Clingman Sawyer, O. W. Surratt, David B. Watts, Charles W. White and Richard Gowan. The names of J. A. Ballard and H. E. Parham are on

S.P. Lanford

MAY, 1956

PATTON THOMAS

LINGO DEMAREE LANNING

FIRST SPADEFUL—C. C. Demaree, chairman of the building committee, turns the first spadeful of earth for the new educational building of West Asheville Presbyterian Church. Assisting at the ground-breaking ceremony this week were W. G. Lingo, chairman of the board of trustees; Sam Patton, a member of the building committee; J. W. Lanning, vice chairman of the board of deacons; and the Rev W. G. Thomas, pastor. The new building will cost $74,000. The new building will contain classrooms, nursery, kindergarten, a chapel, kitchen and fellowship hall Work began Wednesday.

Asheville Citizen May 1956

Cahoon

Lanning Harris Browning
—Citizen Photo

A WOMANLESS WEDDING will be a feature of the annual Harvest Festival today and tonight at Vance School. The wedding will be given at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium. The festival is sponsored by the Vance PTA. Taking part are Jack Harris, Jim Lanning, L. D. Cahoon and Charles Browning.

IDEAL TV IS G.E. SERVICE STATION

Ideal Television ,Incorporated, located at 687 Haywood Road, in West Asheville, is the General Electric service station for all Western Carolina, according to Bob Lawrence, owner. They specialize in G.E. Television sales and service.

LAWRENCE

Ideal Television, Inc., was founded in 1950 at its present location . . . "Famous name merchandise and prompt, courteous service have been responsible for our continued growth," says Lawrence, who is married, and has two sons, two daughters.

Asheville Citizen November 3, 1960

TELEPHONE 3-1753

LAWRENCE REALTY COMPANY
BUSINESS - RESIDENTIAL - FARMS
SALES AND RENTALS
223 HAYWOOD ROAD
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Dear Business Friend:

What do you think of organizing a Business Club in West Asheville? Do you feel as I do, that if we had such an organization that we could accomplish a great deal in civic improvements and otherwise?

We have over 200 businesses in this section of our city and after talking to quite a number of our business people (both men and women) I feel sure there are sufficient numbers to sponsor and organize such a club.

I would appreciate a letter, card or telephone call expressing yourself on this question.

When we have heard from a goodly number of the business people of West Asheville who favor such an organization, we will call a meeting and proceed to organize.

Sincerely,

JLL/g

A letter sent to West Asheville businesses in 1950

Posted in WABA History | Leave a comment

CITIZEN-TIMES

JOHN LAWRENCE

John Lagustus Lawrence, 97, formerly of 124 Logan Ave., died Sunday, Feb. 26, 1995, in National Health Care Center, Greenville, S.C., after a brief illness.

A native of Madison County, he lived in Buncombe County for the past 93 years. He retired as a self-employed Realtor and groceryman. He entered the grocery business in 1921.

John Lawrence

He was past president of the A-G Stores Association. He was a charter life member of the West Asheville Business Association. He was formerly active with Boy Scouts of America, where he organized and was scoutmaster of Troop 2. He was a graduate of the University of Cincinnati, Ohio. He became a member of Calvary Baptist Church in 1912, where he served as Sunday school superintendent and was on the deacon board and the church's only deacon emeritus. He served as general association superintendent for the Buncombe County Sunday School Association. He was a member of West Asheville Masonic Lodge 665. He was active in Republican politics, running in the initial city management contest and again in 1927 for city council. He was the son of the late James Calloway and Mary Lena Fore Lawrence and husband of Myrtle Louisa Logan Lawrence, who died in 1984.

He is survived by his sister-in-law, Annie Lou Bell Logan of Winter Park, Fla.; five nieces; four nephews.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday at Calvary Baptist Church with the Rev. Buddy Corbin officiating. Burial will be in Green Hill Cemetery where Masonic graveside rites will be conducted by the West Asheville Masonic Lodge 665. The lodge will open at 10 a.m.

Honorary pallbearers will be the John Lawrence Sunday school class, Calvary Baptist Church board of deacons and West Asheville Business Association.

The family will receive friends 7 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday at Anders Rice Funeral Home, where the body will remain until taken to the church 30 minutes before the services.

LAWRENCE STORE

John L. Lawrence, who has been operating the AG Food store at 219 Haywood Road since July 12, 1928, sold the store to William Hood, also with many years in the grocery business, to open the Lawrence Realty which will be located next door to the store on Haywood Road.

Mr. Hood, who needs no introduction, took possession of the food store yesterday. He has made Asheville his home since the age of six months when his parents brought him here from Henderson, North Carolina, and received his preparatory education in the city schools.

He began his career in the grocery business at the age of 12, as part time job after school, as delivery boy with Jax Pax.

Upon graduating from school he accepted a position with the Dixie Home Stores, and 17 years later he resigned to go in with Giezentanner grocery and remained with this firm until he purchased his own AG Store at 219 Haywood Road.

His wife, the former Miriam Candler, is also an Asheville girl. Mr. and Mrs. Hood have two children, John Gregory, 8 years of age, will be in the third grade at Newton this coming term. He likes swimming, stamp collecting, and has fun playing with his beautiful Beagle, Shorty. And Paula Jean age four, who likes to play with her dolls.

Mr. and Mrs. Hood are active members of the Christian Missionary Alliance Church. He teaches the Jr. high boys Sunday school class.

John L. Lawrence, now operating the Lawrence Realty at 223 Haywood Road, prior to his opening the above store July 12, 1928 with two crates of cantalopues and 11 watermelons, operated a store at the corner of Waynesville and Tremont in West Asheville from 1921 to 1925. He has also had experience in Real Estate business.

He has been a member of the Calvary Baptist Church since 1912, and teaches the Men's Bible Class now.

Date unknown — probably late 50s

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1938

J. L. LAWRENCE REMODELS AND ENLARGES STORE

Tonight the J. L. Lawrence Grocery will celebrate the formal opening of their newly remodeled and enlarged store at 219 Haywood road. The public is invited to attend from seven to ten o'clock.

J. L. Lawrence, owner and manager of the J. L. Lawrence Grocery, started in business at his present location in July 1928, in a much smaller building. In the past ten years Mr. Lawrence has increased his business to many times what it originally was, and made his remodeling and enlarging necessary to take care of his increasing business.

His store is now one of the most up to date and modern groceries in Asheville, with all modern equipment. He carries a complete stock of staple and fancy groceries, fruits, vegetables and finest quality meats. He employs four people beside himself in his business and operates a truck delivery service for the convenience of his customers.

J. L. Lawrence Grocery is a member of the A-G Stores and Mr. Lawrence is an official of this organization in Asheville. A-G Stores are locally owned and operated.

New Store Opens On Haywood Road

This handsome new store building houses the enlarged J. L. Lawrence grocery. A formal opening Tuesday night, with the public invited, is planned by Mr. Lawrence, owner and manager.

J. L. Lawrence Grocery, 210 Haywood Rd., September, 1938.

Federation Potatoes Now Labeled

This prospective young farmer is "holding the bag," but it is the kind of bag that is greatly increasing the sale of Western North Carolina Irish potatoes. The two-year-old is Frank Ledwell, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ledwell, West Asheville. His father is mechanic for the marketing department of the Farmers Federation here. The sack is an innovation of the Federation to advertise Western North Carolina potatoes and is proving a great success in all sections of Western North Carolina and adjacent states.

Asheville Citizen December 2, 1935

Son of Mr. & Mrs. Frank Ledwell, 1334 Old Haywood Rd.

Ribbon Cutting For New Moore's

The ribbon was cut with a giant pair of scissors this morning signifying the opening of the new Moore's Super Store Inc. at the intersection of Enka road (U. S. 19-23) and Interstate 40. The store, 31st in the Moore chain, features quality building supplies at discount prices. Among those participating at today's ceremonies were (L-R): Frank Leppert, president of the West Asheville Businessmen's Association; Samuel L. Irvin, Asheville Chamber of Commerce president; Miss Asheville, Linda Maney; Mayor Earl W. Eller; Jim Vest, store manager; R. D. Nuckols of Richmond, Va., regional manager, and Wayne C. Klopp of Roanoke, Va., Moore's president. The store's Grand Opening period continues through July 13. (Staff Photo by Malcolm Gamble.)

Anti-Litter Committee

Representatives of the State Highway Commission and the West Asheville Business Association inspect the new trash cans and anti-litter sign purchased to help in the clean-up drive in the West Asheville area. Trash cans will be located along Haywood Road and in front of the First-Citizens Bank in West Asheville on Patton Avenue. Pictured from left to right are City Councilman Luke Atkinson; Frank Leppert, owner of May's Market; W. E. Homlin, representative of the State Highway Commission; S. L. McHone, superintendent of the City Sanitation Dept.; Maj. Gen. Webster Anderson, city councilman; Beaman Pinner, owner of Pinner's Drug Store; Rick Suehr of First-Citizens Bank, chairman of the Beautification of West Asheville Committee.. and Meryl A. Compton, SHC traffic service superintendent. (Staff Photo.)

Asheville Citizen 1972 or 1973

Back Porch – May's Market
Janie Alman (child)
Frank Heppert (adult)

FrankT.Leppert, Jr.

September 25, 1920 - February 6, 2004
Resided in Asheville, NC

Obituary

Frank T. Leppert, Jr., 83, of 149 Brevard Road, Asheville, died Friday, February 6, 2004.

Mr. Leppert was born in Buncombe County and was a son of the late Frank T. Leppert, Sr. and Annie Victoria Low Leppert. He served with the US Army 91st Division in Italy during WW II and was a member of the American legion and the VFW. He was an active member of St. Georgeâ€(TM)s Episcopal Church where he served on the Board and as Treasurer.

He was owner/manager of Mayâ€(TM)s Market on Haywood Road and vice-president of LeMay Corporation (Stoney Knob Supermarket). He was active in civic affairs and served with the Civic Arts Council, the Advisory Board of Parks and Recreation, the NC Food Dealers Association, the Asheville Merchants Association, the Better Business Bureau, the United Way and the Aston Park Board of Directors. He volunteered with the Habitat for Humanity and was former president of the West Asheville Business Association and the West Asheville Lions Club where he had received many honors, including the Melvin Jones Award and the Jack Sickley award.

He is survived by his wife, Nancy May Leppert; one daughter, Susie L. Perry of Asheville; one sister Elizabeth Parris of Denver, NC; four grandchildren, seven great -grandchildren and two great-great-grandchildren.

A memorial service will be celebrated by the Rev. Frs. Harry Woggon and Clem Gunn at 2:00 p.m. Tuesday at St. Georgeâ€(TM)s Episcopal Church.

His family will receive friends in the Parish Hall immediately following the service.

Memorials may be made to the St. Georgeâ€(TM)s Episcopal Church Organ Fund, 1

U2341

WP
"CHRISTIAN ART" ®
U. S. A.

ST. GEORGE'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH
1 SCHOOL ROAD ~ ASHEVILLE, NC 28806

The Holy Eucharist of the Resurrection
In thanksgiving for the life of
FRANK THORNE LEPPERT, JR.
Tuesday, February 10, 2004

Prelude: Lynn May Wilson, Anne May Cagle, Katherine Wilson and Rachel Wilson

THE BURIAL OF THE DEAD

Hymn: "When The Saints Go Marching In"	Blue Book
Anthem "I am the Resurrection"	BCP p. 491
Collect	BCP p. 492
Readings from the Holy Scripture
• Psalm 23 KJV	BCP p. 476
• Romans 8:14-19, 34-35, 37-39
The Holy Gospel John 11:21-27
The Homily ~ Reverend Clem Gunn
The Apostles' Creed	BCP p. 496
Prayers of the People	BCP p. 465

THE HOLY COMMUNION

Offertory Hymn: "Joyful, Joyful, We Adore Thee"	Hymnal 376
The Great Thanksgiving: Prayer A	BCP p. 361
The Lord's Prayer
The Breaking of the Bread
Christ is our Passover
The Reception of Holy Communion
(All who come in Faith are welcome at the Lord's Table)
Special Post-Communion Prayer	BCP p. 498
The Commendation	BCP p. 499
The Blessing
Hymn: "Onward Christian Soldiers"	Hymnal 562

THE COMMITTAL WILL BE AT A LATER DATE
AT THE CONVENIENCE OF THE FAMILY

A RECEPTION WILL FOLLOW IN THE PARISH HALL

In Memory Of

FRANK THORNE LEPPERT, JR.
149 Brevard Road ~ Asheville
September 25, 1920 ~ February 6, 2004
Son Of The Late
FRANK T. LEPPERT, SR.
ANNIE VICTORIA LOW LEPPERT Husband Of
NANCY MAY LEPPERT
Father Of
SUSIE L. PERRY
Brother Of
ELIZABETH PARRIS
Grandfather Of Four Great-Grandfather Of Seven Great-Great-Grandfather Of Two

MEMORIAL SERVICE
2:00 P.M. ~ TUESDAY ~ FEBRUARY 10, 2003
ST. GEORGE'S EPISCOPAL CHURCH
Assisting Clergy
THE REVEREND HARRY A. K. WOGGON, Priest-in-Charge
THE REVEREND CLEM GUNN, Former Priest-in-Charge
THE REVEREND THOMAS RIGHTMYER, Priest Associate

The Memorial Register may be signed on-line by going to "Funerals Scheduled" at www.grocefuneralhome.com

Asheville native's life helps inspire TV show

Childhoods of writer, partner loose basis for Fox's 'State of Grace'

SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

Now married and living in Southern California, Brenda Lunsford Lilly is a television writing veteran, whose many credits include "Christy" – which also had local connections (the title character was from Asheville and the show was filmed in east Tennessee).

By Tony Kiss
ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

ASHEVILLE — Growing up in Asheville in the 1960s, Brenda Lunsford was no shy wallflower.

"She was outgoing," remembered her mom, Iris Lunsford of West Asheville. "She was an adventurous kid. She was a good kid, but she would get what she wanted."

"She had zero fear," added her sister, Gail Lunsford of Sandy Mush. "She would be out at night with her friends. But Asheville was a very, very small town. It was an incredible age of innocence that was taking place, but we didn't realize it at the time."

Now those sweet, long-ago days are getting a rerun in the new television series, "State of Grace," co-created and co-written by a grown-up Brenda Lunsford Lilly and her partner, Hollis Rich. The weekly half-hour drama-comedy debuts at 9 p.m. Monday on the Fox Family Channel.

ABOUT THE TV SHOW

- "State of Grace" is set in fictional "Ashmore," N.C., and revolves around the life of a Jewish working-class girl who moves to town and becomes best friends with a free-spirited girl from a rich family.
- The weekly half-hour drama-comedy debuts at 9 p.m. Monday on the Fox Family Channel.

The place is slightly fictional "Ashmore," N.C., but natives will quickly connect with some of the locations including the old St. Genevieve-of-the-Pines Catholic School (called St. Christina's in the show) and Asheville's Black business center along the old Valley Street (called Hill Street in the series).

"The Hot Shot (Café) will show up in some (future) episode, I promise," laughed Lilly, an established TV writer based in Los Angeles. But more than real locations, "I think it's mostly the atmosphere that I wanted to capture," she said.

The series revolves around a quiet 12-year-old Jewish girl, Hannah (loosely based on Rich's life), who moves with her working class family to "Ashmore" in 1965, enrolls in Catholic school and becomes best buds with the free-spirited Grace (more inspired by Lilly's childhood here). Their families can only be called eccentric. Grace's mom, Tattie, is a rich and distant playgirl while Hannah's clan keeps a close eye on their daughter.

Lilly spent years writing TV shows, including "Parker Lewis Can't Lose," "Christy" and "Walker, Texas Ranger." Rich was a writer-producer on "Doogie Howser" and "Grace Under Fire," and did episodes of "Picket Fences" and "Party of Five."

They dreaded the prospect of writing for TV shows they hated. "We were reading pilots for new shows coming on, and hating the one we had just read more than the last," Lilly said. Then, inspiration: why not create their own show?

"There hasn't been a coming-of-age story for girls on TV," Lilly said. "It's kind of tragic. We had so much fun growing up." So

Please see SHOW on C3

SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

Mae Whitman and Alia Shawkat star in "State of Grace," which is set in the fictional town of Ashmore, N.C. The show is partly based on the real childhood of Asheville native Brenda Lilly (then Brenda Lunsford).

SHOW: Writer's childhood in Asheville inspires new TV show

Continued from C1

they hammered out the concept of "looking back on our lives, that these two girls from very different backgrounds would become friends."

Realizing that "State of Grace" would be different, they took the idea to Fox Family and landed a solid deal — 13 episodes are already filmed and ready to air every Monday night.

"We broke all the rules, set it in 1965, in the South and with girls as the lead characters," Lilly said.

But it's no low-budget effort. Oscar-winning actress Frances McDormand ("Fargo" and nominated this year for her role in "Almost Famous") is the off-camera narrator, a grown-up version of Hannah who sets up each episode. Grace is played by Mae Whitman (the president's daughter in the blockbuster "Independence Day"). Hannah is played by Alia Shawkat (she was in the George Clooney movie "Three Kings").

Dinah Manoff (from TV's "Empty Nest") is Hannah's mom, and Emmy-winning actress Melanie Mayron of "thirtysomething" fame directed the first three episodes.

"You couldn't ask for better casting," said Lilly. "These are people who don't do a small show on cable TV."

While the series has universal appeal, it's sure to connect with Baby Boomers of a certain age.

"It makes me incredibly homesick for the years when we were growing up," said Gail Lunsford. "This was the time before the interstates went through Asheville, when it was a small town with tourists in the summer.

"It was just a good place to live," said Iris Lunsford.

Contact Kiss at 232-5855 or TKiss@CITIZEN-TIMES.com

WHAT'S REAL, WHAT'S NOT

Many locations and elements of the new television show "State of Grace" are based on the real childhood of co-creator and Asheville native Brenda Lunsford Lilly. But some were also based on the childhood of her writing and creating partner Hollis Rich, or are fiction.

- THE CHARACTER OF GRACE: Mostly inspired by Lilly's childhood, though she didn't come from a particularly rich family as Grace does.
- THE CHARACTER OF HANNAH: Based more on Rich's youth (she actually moved from Evanston, Ill., to Los Angeles as a child)
- ASHMORE, N.C.: That's Asheville
- ST. CHRISTINA'S IN THE PINES CATHOLIC SCHOOL: Inspired by the now-closed St. Genevieve-of-the-Pines school, formerly located on Victoria Road.
- HILL STREET, WHERE THE GIRLS GET A HAIR MAKEOVER: The Block, downtown Asheville's historic Black neighborhood, including the old Valley Street area.
- BLOOMBERG'S MARKET: Lilly said she was inspired by the long-gone Trantham's market in Biltmore Village.
- FOSTER'S FREEZE: Local Dairy Queen ice cream spots
- HANNAH'S NEIGHBORHOOD: In the Charlotte Street vicinity of north Asheville.
- GRACE'S MOTHER'S HOUSE: In Biltmore Village.
- THE IMPERIAL THEATRE (MENTIONED IN COMING EPISODES): The real, but long-gone Imperial was on Patton Avenue downtown, in the parking lot across from Stella Blue.

A heartfelt summer hit

The girl-powered 'State of Grace' uplifts Fox Family

By Kelly DiNardo
USA TODAY

Fox Family Channel

Coming of age: Mae Whitman, left, and Alia Shawkat play girls in '60s North Carolina in State of Grace.

The doldrums of summer television desperately need to find a State of Grace.

Fox Family's surprise hit (tonight, 9 ET/PT) explores the humorous and touching moments in a friendship between two 12-year-old girls. In 1965, unassuming Hannah (Alia Shawkat) moves with her traditional Jewish family to North Carolina and enrolls in a Catholic girls school, where she meets the precocious Grace (Mae Whitman).

State of Grace is Fox Family's highest-rated original series, drawing more than 2 million viewers each week. In fact, it's so successful that the network has ordered 13 additional episodes and will bring the show back in January.

Oscar-winning actress Frances McDormand provides the show's voice-overs as the adult Hannah who reminisces about her childhood. And while this element of State of Grace may garner comparisons to ABC's The Wonder Years, creators Brenda Lilly and Hollis Rich believe there's something more to their show.

"It's a coming-of-age show specifically about girls," says Rich, who also writes and produces the program with Lilly. "They're not just the best friend of the boy character or they're not just the cute girl or the brainy girl."

"Girls can see they can be all sorts of things at the same time. Not only does that make for a good role model, it makes for exciting and fun and entertaining television for everybody," Rich says.

The on-screen chemistry between Grace and Hannah may stem from Lilly and Rich's own friendship and experiences. The writing partners became close friends when they worked together on the short-lived series Second Noah, and they acknowledge using much of their own lives as the basis for Grace.

"I grew up in Asheville, N.C., and attended a private Catholic girls school," says Lilly. "(One year) my Jewish friend was asked to be the Virgin Mary in the Christmas play. When I told this story to Hollis . . ."

". . . I was shocked," Rich says, finishing the thought. "I thought she was making this up, that it was one of her tall tales from the South that I had gotten used to."

And while the producers' friends and family often appear as characters in the show, Rich quickly points out "they are only based on real people. They are not the people and any coincidental resemblance is just that, coincidental. That's the legal disclaimer." At this, the two friends laugh, and Rich slyly adds, "And you know who you are."

Neither Rich nor Lilly worries that using their childhood experiences makes the show any less relevant for today's girls. "The basic family dynamics have not changed," says Rich. "There are basic problems kids have growing up all the time. It's just that the setting is a little different now — things are faster, there's more media."

The creators' real-life friendship and the characters' on-screen relationship has spilled over to its two young stars. Whitman, 13, and Shawkat, 12, have had a great time playing on-screen best friends, and each declares the other to be her closest pal.

"We can talk to each other about stuff and she's fun," says Whitman, best known for her role as Sandra Bullock's daughter in Hope Floats. "She's so, so, so funny. I just love being around her. She never gets jealous and she's always there for your feelings. She's so unselfish; I think that it's really great that I got to meet her."

Shawkat concurs, "Mae and I are best friends in real life. And even though (the show) is back in the '60s . . . we do those kind of things together, too."

an appreciation

Mrs. Lingo

Mrs. Carmen Lingo

A sales woman in Bon Marche's ready to wear department, and active community worker, is also a talented musician. Mrs. Lingo is organist at the West Asheville Presbyterian Church, has been active in Girl Scout, Cub Scout and P. T. A. work.

Mrs. Lingo says "I appreciate so much the friends I've made when they've come in to shop with me at Bon Marche. It's fun to work in a store like Bon Marche, in a beautiful town like Asheville and it's grand to have a chance to serve the public in this way."

Bon Marché

Bon Marche appreciates your loyalty over the years. Watch our ads this week and see how much!

Asheville Times May 12, 1952

Carmen Lingo 79 Middlemont Ave.

MAY, 1956

PATTON THOMAS

LINGO DEMAREE LANNING

FIRST SPADEFUL—C. C. Demaree, chairman of the building committee, turns the first spadeful of earth for the new educational building of West Asheville Presbyterian Church. Assisting at the ground-breaking ceremony this week were W. G. Lingo, chairman of the board of trustees; Sam Patton, a member of the building committee; J. W. Lanning, vice chairman of the board of deacons; and the Rev W. G. Thomas, pastor. The new building will cost $74,000. The new building will contain classrooms, nursery, kindergarten, a chapel, kitchen and fellowship hall Work began Wednesday.

Asheville Citizen May 1956

OBSERVE GOLDEN ANNIVERSARY—Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lineberry of 34 Oakwood road, West Asheville, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with an open house yesterday. They have spent all their married life here and have one son, Louis C. Lineberry of Asheville. Mr. Lineberry has two brothers who have observed golden wedding anniversaries—Charles M. Lineberry of Asheville and Julius Lineberry of Camden, Ark. A retired machinist, Mr. Lineberry has three grandchildren, Louis, Jr., Miss Ann and William Lineberry, and two great-grandchildren, Jerry and Steve Lineberry. Mrs. Lineberry was born at Morristown, Tenn., and Mr. Lineberry at Salisbury. Approximately 125 guests called yesterday.

Asheville Times March 25, 1946

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C. 3
Saturday, March 15, 1958

—Citizen Photo

CITY SCIENCE STUDENTS displayed their wares in the annual Science Fair in City Auditorium Friday, with contributions from primary grade aspirants to full-fledged high school geniuses. Here, Jerry Liner, Vance School fifth grader, demonstrates an electrical game devised in his classroom.

Bruce Emory
Research

Miss Logan Will Attend Scout Camp

Miss Grace Logan, leader of Girl Scout troop No. 8, has been selected to attend the national Girl Scout camp, Juliette Low, near Cloudland, Ga., it was announced today by Mrs. Onona Babcock, chairman of the training committee of the Asheville Girl Scout council.

Miss Logan will be at the camp from June 24 through July 8. The camp is situated on Lookout mountain, and is a training center for Brownie, intermediate and senior leaders of Girl Scout troops. Leaders attending the camp are taught methods of working with girls and how to include fun as well as wartime training in troop programs.

Miss Logan will help train other local leaders of Girl Scout troops upon her return to Asheville.

Asheville Times June 5, 1943

1/12/1953

Miss Logan, Aycock School Teacher, Dies

Funeral services for Miss Agnes Grace Logan, 57, for 32 years a member of Aycock Elementary School faculty, will be conducted tomorrow at 3 p m. in Calvary Baptist Church. She died yesterday in her home on 124 Logan Ave. following an extended illness.

The Rev. J. Lester Lane will officiate Burial will be in Green Hill Cemetery. The body will lie in state in the church for 30 minutes prior to the services.

Pallbearers will be Doyle Woody, Horace Sentelle, C. E. Norman, J. R. Rogers, Palmer Park and Wade Steelman.

Honorary pallbearers will be the faculty of Aycock School, J. W. Byers, Dr. Crawford S. Gillespie, Dr. Julian A. Moore and members of the Carey Training Union of Calvary Church and of Union and officers and teachers, of Adult II department, both of the Calvary church.

Flowerbearers will be members and former members of the Philathea Class of Calvary Church.

The daughter of the late William E. and Rose A. Logan, she was a member of one of the area's pioneer families. Her mother served on the Asheville City School Board for a number of years.

Miss Logan attended Florida State College, received her B.S. degree from George Peabody College and a Master's degree from Columbia University.

She was an active member of Calvary Church and in the Sunday School, Training Union and Women's Missionary Society.

Surviving are four sisters, Mrs. O. V. Himes, Mrs. John L. Lawrence and Miss Irene Logan, all of Asheville, and Miss Mary Logan of Southern Pines; three brothers, Carl M. and Harry R. Logan of Asheville and Dr. William B. Logan of Columbus, Ohio.

Arrangements are under direction of Anders-Rice Funeral Home.

Asheville Citizen January 12, 1953

CONFERRING WITH HARRY R. LOGAN, left, chairman of the county-wide religious census to be made here Sunday, are Dr. Embree H. Blackard, right, and the Rev. Earl D. Weed, representing the Ministerial Association of Asheville and Buncombe County. Some 3,000 canvassers will take part in the census under the over-all direction of Logan. (Citizen Photo)

County-Wide Religious Census To Be Conducted Here Sunday

More than 3,000 census takers will cover Asheville and Buncombe County Sunday afternoon in the first county-wide religious census to be made here in several years.

A large number of churches of different denominations is taking part in the religious census. Groups participating include Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal, Lutheran and Christian churches.

Harry R. Logan is in general charge of the census.

Cooperating in the census is the Ministerial Association of Asheville and Buncombe County through a committee headed by Dr. C. Grier Davis. Committee members include the Rev. Earl D. Weed, Dr. W. Perry Crouch and Dr. H. Embree Blackard.

The county will be divided in six districts to be surveyed by the canvassers Sunday, starting shortly after noon. District leaders include: Asheville, Don Young; West Asheville, E. B. Roberts; Hominy, the Rev. Carl G. Mauney; Mount Carmel, Vonno Brown; Weaverville, Dewey Brown; Biltmore, Alex Young; Swannanoa, the Rev. A. J. Buckner.

Census takers will ask each individual contacted the following questions: name, age, address, if church member, denominational preference, church preferance, if Sunday School member.

The information received will be given to the different churches or denominational groups according to the church membership or denominational preference expressed.

Territories in the city and county have been divided as far as possible so that each participating church has a section to cover in the immediate community where the church is located, Chairman Logan said.

Several of the denominations participating in the census plan to follow the census with evangelistic programs designed to attract the unchurched.

More than 60 Baptist churches in the county plan to hold simultaneous revival services for two weeks beginning March 25.

Presbyterians are planning to conduct visitations and special meetings, February through Easter.

Methodists plan visitations and a week of special services in each church between February 18 and Easter.

Asheville Citizen January 18, 1951

Former Dean of Women, Mary Logan, Dies

Miss Mary Katherine Logan, 72, who served as Dean of Women at the college for eight years prior to her retirement in 1970, died unexpectedly Dec. 6 following a stroke suffered at her home in West Asheville.

A vivacious woman who loved to travel and was always engaged in some personal project, Miss Logan was from a prominent family, tracing her heritage back to the founders of the college and to prominent citizens in Asheville around the turn of the century.

She was educated in the Asheville city school system, attended the Women's College of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, and earned a master's degree from Columbia University. In her early professional career she taught at Crossnore and served as superintendent of schools in Avery County.

She actually had two periods of service at the college. Just before and in the early years of World War II she was a hostess in one of the girls' dorms and taught English. She left the position to work with the USO during the war. Then, when Dean of Women Caroline Biggers retired in 1962, President Blackwell hired her to take Miss Biggers' place.

Since her retirement she had been extremely active in the Calvary Baptist Church in West Asheville; in Delta Kappa Gamma, international sorority of women in education; and in numerous other affairs; and she had travelled extensively.

Miss Logan

She taught in the Sunday school of the church, was study chairman of the Women's Missionary Union there, and had completed, only a few weeks prior to her death, a carefully researched, well written scrapbook on the church.

Among the survivors were a brother and a niece who attended Mars Hill—Dr. William Logan '29 of Babson Park, FL, and Miss Catherine Rose Logan '59 of Cleveland, GA—and a sister, Mrs. John Lawrence of Asheville.

Funeral services were held in the chapel of Anders-Rice Funeral Home in West Asheville with every seat taken. Miss Logan's pastor, the Rev. John Knight '37, delivered the funeral eulogy; and the family asked Dr. Fred Bentley to give a memorial tribute. Enhanced with personal memories and delivered with obviously deep feelings, it went as follows:

There are so many beautiful qualities encompassing the life of Mary Katherine Logan that it is difficult to share feelings of admiration for and love of the person.

Mary's roots ran deep at Mars Hill College—she truly loved that mountain college. Her great-grandfather, T. S. Deaver, was one of the founders, who served many years as a trustee and benefactor. Her mother, Mrs. Addie Deaver Logan, also served as a trustee for a quarter of a century. Mary served the college for 14 years as hostess, teacher of English, and Dean of Women.

It was June of 1966, Doris, my wife, our three children and I had made our way from Louisville, Kentucky through the Cumberland Gap, across the Hot Springs mountains to arrive at our new place of service —Mars Hill College. The weather was hot, the children were tired and Doris and I were anxious, if not a little scared, about our new home and responsibilities. We pulled up in front of Fox Residence Hall, our temporary home, to be greeted by the loving warmth of Mary Logan. It was so good to be welcomed to our new community by this fine Christian lady. And, of course, she had prepared refreshments and had everything just right to make us feel at home.

Mary Logan was unique in so many ways. She was a cultured lady. She had style and grace which were recognized immediately by "her girls" and her colleagues. She was creative as was evidenced by her instruction in arts and crafts, her choice of art work, her choice of music, and that Logan touch which penetrated any environment with which she had anything to do. She was gracious far beyond welcoming her new president and his family. She was always taking snapshots of students in special activities and then presenting these photos to students and their parents as cherished momentos. She was kind, and this was demonstrated many times as she worked with young ladies who were experiencing difficulties—either through violation of college rules or through personal problems. Her concern went far beyond her responsibilities as Dean of Women.

Mary Logan was so well read and so well traveled that she was always a great addition to any group activity; yet, she had that special gift of never seeming to "know it all" or be "pushy." She simply had a desire to live life to its fullest and to share that life with others.

In essence, in reflecting on the life of this dear friend I have described the qualities of a true Christian—one who loved others, one who shared, one who assisted, one who lived an up-right life. Yes, Mary was a special child of God who used her talents for Him on this earth and because of her life we are better for it. Now we come to celebrate her return to the Father where she will rest in peace and joy until we may join her and again have fellowship together through Jesus Christ.

MARS HILL COLLEGE QUARTERLY ALUMNI MAGAZINE

WINTER / 1978

The School Curriculum includes Nursery School and Kindergarten, consisting of Games, Hand-work, Stories, Clay-Modeling, Songs, Rhythm, and Painting.

—o—

One of the most important requisites of a child's life is sunshine and fresh air. This they get in The Child Garden School. There is an outdoor space, which is used every day, weather permitting, and a large airy and spacious indoor room, where the children work and play. Our playground is equipped with sandpile, swings, balls, see-saws, blocks, boxes, shovels, and other forms of amusements.

—o—

"A Child Garden is, you know, a garden where children grow."

THE

Child Garden School

A PROGRESSIVE SCHOOL

FOR

LITTLE BOYS AND GIRLS

Ages 2½ to 6

Directed by

MISS IRENE LOGAN

GRADUATE

—of—

GEORGE PEABODY COLLEGE for TEACHERS

124 Logan Avenue
WEST ASHEVILLE, N. C.
Phone 2618-J

"Just as the twig is bent, the tree is inclined."—POPE.

If suitable materials and companions are provided, desirable learnings usually result from the contact between the child and his environment.

The aim of the school is to provide suitable materials, to create a happy and interesting environment in work, play and companionship, to build character and initiative, and to stimulate the creative and imaginative power so as to encourage the child to solve his or her own problems.

"Put to-gether things which you want to go to-gether."—THORNDIKE.

HOURS: 9:00—12:00

The school holds sessions every day with exception of Saturday and Sunday. National Holidays will be observed.

Visitors are always welcome!

TUITION, Per Week, Payable in Advance . . . $4.00

A small charge is made extra for those desiring transportation.

Milk and crackers or fruit juices are served at 10:30.

Opportunity is given for participation in many activities for better co-ordination of the muscles—Play is the child's way of learning. It is his way of finding out about everything in the world around him.

STUDENTS ORGANIZE AT WEST ASHEVILLE

MUCH INTEREST TAKEN IN SCHOOL WORK.

Boys' Debating Society and Girls' Social Club Elect Officers For School Year.

Student organizations of the West Asheville schools are being rapidly perfected, and there is a great deal of enthusiasm among the members of the various literary and debating associations this year. The school has started with a splendid outlook for a successful year, and the interest taken in the various student societies promises an active year's work among these organizations.

The senior class of the high school, which graduates in 1917, has organized by electing officers as follows: Bert Starnes, president; Howard Pinner, vice-president; Mayer Brown, secretary. The class is taking an active interest in school work, and will work, as a body, for the success of the school this year.

The Girls' Social club has been reorganized for the year and the work of the club will be directed by Miss Sutton and Miss Tipton, of the faculty. The following officers were elected: Miss Sarah Penny, president; Miss Margaret Williamson, vice-president; Miss Irene Logan, secretary; Miss Lena Beacham, treasurer; Miss Margie Cook, monitor; Miss Ada Lee Sitton, critic.

The North State Debating society, an organization of boys, also elected officers, and, under the direction of Principal W. T. Jervis and Miss Anderson, of the faculty, will hold declamation and recitation contests, and debates, throughout the school year. The officers of the society are as follows: Howard Pinner, president; Bert Starnes, vice-president; Ray Steelman, secretary; Clyde Westall, treasurer; William Reynolds, censor; W. T. Jervis, critic.

Preliminary contests are to be held at the West Asheville school in anticipation of the county-wide commencement, and it is probable, from present indications, that West Asheville will have at least forty contestants in the various contests held at commencement.

Asheville Citizen September 16, 1916

MISS LOGAN

Miss Logan, Educator, Dies At 68

DEC 15 1988

A-CITIZEN

Miss Sarah Irene Logan, 68, of 124 Logan Ave., West Asheville, retired public school teacher and specialist in early childhood learning, died Saturday morning in a local hospital after a long illness.

Miss Logan started her teaching career in the 1920s at Woodfin Elementary School and the old Ashland Avenue School. She retired in 1963 after teaching for 30 years at Eugene Rankin Elementary School in West Asheville.

In 1935 she started the Child Garden School in West Asheville as a special summer project in the study of childhood development, while working on a master's degree at George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.

She was the first vice president of the local association of Childhood Education International of which she was a founder, and later served as its president. She also was secretary of the state association under the presidencies of Miss Jamie Bryan and Mrs. Lee H. Edwards.

She was a long-time member of Delta Kappa Gamma, international teachers society. She was a member of the family life committee for the City of Asheville and the Childhood education Seminar at Teachers College, Columbia University, led by Dr. William McCall.

During World War II, Miss Logan along with Delta Gappa Gamma and the childhood association established the first day care center for working mothers in Asheville.

She wrote for a number of publications published by the Sunday School Board of Southern Baptist Convention. She wrote lessons and articles in Builder, Story Hour Leader, Elementary Guide and the Training Union magazine.

Miss Logan was a long-time associate of the Southern Baptist Convention. She was chairman of missions study of the Women Missionary Union. As such she served on a number of committees and conferences for several local churches. For a number of years Miss Logan led Southwide leadership conferences for primary teachers given annually at Ridgecrest Baptist Assembly.

Miss Logan was a member of Calvary Baptist Church, where she was active in the educational and missionary programs. She was "cradle roll" superintendent of the junior Sunday school department and taught Sunday school class.

Apart from her vocational associations, Miss Logan was a member of West Asheville Music Club. She was both a pianist and organist.

A native of Buncombe County, Miss Logan attended Asheville public schools, the Dallas Private School in West Asheville and Florida high schools.

She attended Florida State College for Women in Tallahassee. She received a bachelor of science degree from Peabody and a masters degree from Teachers College in 1948.

She was the daughter of William Erwin and Rose Addie Deaver Logan. Her father was a realtor and former U. S. Marshal for the Western district. Logan Avenue in West Asheville was named for him.

Surviving are three sisters, Mrs. Annie Himes and Mrs. Myrtle Lawrence, both of West Asheville, and Miss Mary K. Logan of Mars Hill, dean of women of Mars Hill College; three brothers, Carl M. and Harry R., both of West Asheville, and Dr. William B. Logan of Babson Park, Fla.

Services will be held at 3 p. m. Monday in Calvary Baptist Church.

The Rev. John Knight, pastor, the Rev. R. A. Blankenship and the Rev. A. J. Buckner will officiate. Burial will be in Green Hills Cemetery.

Pallbearers will be William Bell, Bennie Bellflower, Paul Greene, C. A. Ballard, W. P. Griffin and C. E. Norman.

The body will be at the home until taken to the church 30 minutes prior to services.

Anders-Rice Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

LOGAN NAMED SUPERVISOR OF N. C. PROGRAM

Asheville Man Will Direct Distributive Education In State.

W. B. LOGAN

W. B. Logan has been appointed acting state supervisor of distributive education in North Carolina with headquarters in Raleigh, and will move his family to the state capital October 1, it was learned here today.

Mr. Logan has been co-ordinator of distributive education at Lee Edwards high school since 1940. In his work at the school he co-ordinated the part-time co-operative work program in which students attended school a half-day and worked a half-day.

In addition he directed and taught classes in the Retail institute held twice yearly for store employes and executives.

Prior to 1940 Mr. Logan taught in the Asheville city schools and at Biltmore college.

Miss Frances Hammond, who was assistant to Mr. Logan during the past year, will assume Mr. Logan's duties at the school, and will be in charge of the retail institute. Miss Hammond is a graduate of Woman's college, University of North Carolina and has training in the field of distribution, in addition to her experience as assistant co-ordinator. She will begin her new duties at the end of this month.

A native of New Bern, she is a member of Delta Pi Epsilon, national honorary graduate business education fraternity.

William B. Logan Sr.

BABSON PARK, Fla. — William Boyd Logan Sr., 73, of Babson Park, died Thursday in a Lake Wales hospital.

LOGAN

A native of Asheville, N.C., he had resided in Columbus, Ohio, before moving to Florida 17 years ago.

He graduated from Furman University and received his master's degree from the University of North Carolina and his PhD from Ohio State.

Logan was a former teacher at Lee Edwards High School, where he started the distributive education program.

He was past president of Webber College in Babson Park, a former faculity member at Warner Southern College in Lake Wales and professor emeritus at Ohio State University, where he was professor of education and director of distributive education. He served with the North Carolina Department of Education and the UNC Women's College.

Logan held offices in eight national and state educational organizations. He served as a member of President Kennedy's panel of consultants on vocational education. He was consultant for the Oregon State Department of Education and also the University of Connecticutt. He was co-author of three books: The Retail Sales Person at Work, Store Salesmanship and Facts about Merchandise.

Logan was the son of the late William Ervin and Rose Addie Deaver Logan. Surviving are his wife, Annie Lou Bell Logan; a daughter, Susan Rentz of Joplin, Mo.; a son, William B. Logan Jr. of Columbus, Ohio; and five grandchildren.

Graveside services will be at 11 a.m. Monday in Green Hills Cemetery in Asheville with Dr. Stephen C. Carreker officiating.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to the American Heart Association or the American Red Cross.

The family will be at the home of J.W. Bell, 39 Lucerne Ave., West Asheville.

Anders-Rice Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Asheville Citizen April 14, 1984

MAYOR AND ALDERMEN.

West Asheville Nominations Made Last Night.

A largely attended non-partisan mass meeting was held at the Jarrett school house, West Asheville, last night. On motion N. Plamondon was called to the chair, and Jas. D. Carrier was requested to act as secretary.

S. D. Hall, D. H. Penland, E. G. Carrier, N. Plamondon and J. R. Reynolds were put in nomination for mayor. All but the two first withdrew their names, as they could not serve. S. D. Hall received the majority of all the votes cast and was declared the nominee.

W. E. Logan, W. H. Wright, N. Plamondon, Newton Shepard, colored, J. D. Penland, A. E. Clark, J. R. Reynolds, M. M. Ledford, Jas. Young, colored, and W. G. Looper, colored, were put in nomination. The balloting resulted in the nomination of W. E. Logan, N. Plamondon, J. D. Penland and J. R. Reynolds. Upon the second ballot between W. H. Wright and N. Shepard, colored, the former was nominated. The election will be held the first week in May.

Asheville Daily Citizen –March 12, 1892

W. E. LOGAN A CANDIDATE FOR OFFICE OF COLLECTOR

Makes Formal Announcement Today That He Aspires to Succeed Collector H. S. Harkins—His Friends Insist That His Party Loyalty and Work Should Be Recognized.

The first pronounced and authentic opposition to the reappointment of H. S. Harkins as collector of this internal revenue district, was made known today when W. E. Logan of West Asheville in conversation with a newspaper reporter announced himself as a candidate for the place. Mr. Harkins' present term as collector expires in July of this year. He has filled the office for eight years and while the friends of Mr. Logan declare that they recognize the present incumbent as an officer of high ability and integrity, they nevertheless believe that eight years is long enough for one person to hold office and will insist that Mr. Logan's party services be recognized and that he be appointed to the place to which he aspires. Mr. Logan's friends point to the fact that he has been long identified with his party as an active party worker in local politics; that he was chairman of the county republican executive committee at the time the late Congressman Moody was elected from this district when Buncombe county gave him more than 300 majority, and that this is the first time he has ever asked for a public office. His friends think that it is nothing but justice that he should be recognized for his untiring efforts for the success of his party in this section.

Asheville Gazette News January 23, 1905

Chairman Logan Declines the Challenge of Hon. W.W. Zachery

Mr. W. E. Logan, chairman of the republican congressional committee of the Tenth district has declined another invitation to joint discussion during the approaching campaign. This time the challenge comes from Hon. W. W. Zachery, democratic elector of the Tenth congressional district, who is anxious to cross swords with his republican opponent, the Hon. O. L. Anderson. Chairman Logan declines to enter joint debate on the same ground that he refused Congressman Crawford's challenge, namely that debates of this character are out of date, and have no tendency to promote the welfare of any political party. Mr. Logan's declination follows.

HON. W. W. ZACHERY, Democratic Elector, 10th Congressional District, Brevard, N. C.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of recent date to Hon. O. L. Anderson, republican elector, 10th Congressional District, asking for a joint campaign of this district, also has been referred to me for reply.

"The custom of debates between the political parties of our state has never been productive of any good. They only serve to stir up animosity, hatred and ill feelings between friends and neighbors, and instead of accomplishing good, as they are probably intended to do, they invariably lead to many disputes and heart-burnings between neighbors, and those influences are hard to eradicate.

"I think that I may safely predict that, so far as my party is concerned, there will be no more joint discussions of political questions in this state. I am aware that this will be a great disappointment to the degenerate and morbid who are looking for the sensational, and delight in anything that creates a disturbance among men, but all right thinking people will hail with delight, the time when this practice is entirely abandoned.

"Let us enter upon a new era along this line and let the people inform themselves on the politicalis-sues by reading the public press and hearing the various political parties discuss, (separately) in a sensible and dispassionate manner, as they would not do in a joint debate.

"The party who would try to make political capital out of the fact that the opposing party refuses to join in these joint discussions, which too often lead to personalities and "mud-slinging," only shows the weakness of their cause.

"It is not a matter of lack of courage upon our part that we refuse to join in these debates, for we have as brave, courageous, able and well informed speakers as any political party can boast of, but only because of the evils that follow, and engender among our citizens.

"There are no issues between the political parties for any ill-feeling among our people, and, so far as we are concerned, we do not propose to be drawn into these bitter discussions that stir up any feelings, but let the people vote intelligently upon the issues as presented by each party, and not on prejudice, as engendered heretofore, largely by the joint debate.

"I, therefore, as the manager of the republican campaign committee for this district, decline to have a joint debate between you and Mr. Anderson."

Respectfully yours,

W. E. Logan,
Chairman 10th Cong. Com.

Asheville Citizen August 13, 1908

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1909.

LOGAN MAY BE NEXT U.S. MARSHAL; WILL MR. ROLLINS BE POSTMASTER?

Sudden Shift in Political Conditions Is Caused by the Resignation of Trogdon, Greensboro Clerk, and Appointment of Marshal Millikan as Successor.

The resignation of Samuel L. Trogdon as clerk of the United States Circuit and District courts at Greensboro and the appointment of United States Marshal J. M. Millikan as his successor, is of more than ordinary political consequence and entails much of local interest.

The appointment of Mr. Millikan has been practically made by United States Circuit Judges J. C. Pritchard and R. T. Goff, although no formal order has been made and this suddenly shifts and clears the republican situation here in a way highly pleasing to Congressman Grant.

It is highly probable, in fact it can almost be stated with a considerable degree of certainty that W. E. Logan of this city will be appointed marshal and that if this is effected the way is cleared for the re-appointment of Major W. W. Rollins as postmaster of Asheville.

This arrangement would of course remove much embarrassment from the path of Congressman Grant. While he has been pledged to the support as postmaster of Mr. Logan, as one of his chief supporters and his manager in the campaign he has realized the great strength of Major Rollins and knew that his endorsement of Logan meant political trouble. Now if he can get Mr. Logan the better berth as marshal, and he does not lack reason for expecting to accomplish this, he will be practically free to endorse Major Rollins as postmaster.

Other Candidates.

There will be other candidates for Mr. Millikan's place, possibly one or more besides Logan from Asheville. In the number being Clarence Call of Wilkes, T. F. McVeagh of Alamance, T. E. McCrary of Davidson county, former deputy under Mr. Millikan. Deputy J. M. Pailey of Madison county has also been mentioned but while it is quite possible that he will act as marshal pending the appointment it was stated positively here yesterday by several of his friends that it was very unlikely that he would apply for the appointment.

The post of marshal pays $4,500, or about $1,000 more than the place of postmaster here.

The appointment of Mr Millikan will be heard here with much pleasure by many people. Mr. Millikan was a highly efficient official and his pleasing personality won him many warm friends in this section. He resides in Greensboro.

It is generally understood that Spencer Adams of Greensboro is to be appointed district attorney and as the eighth district has the collector, the marshalship should naturally go to the tenth district.

Asheville Citizen September 23, 1909

TUESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1910.

MR. LOGAN RETURNS WITH SMILING FACE

OTHERS SAY HE WILL SURELY BE NAMED AS MARSHAL

Major Rollins Appears a Sure Winner, —Attorney Carter Was to See President Yesterday.

Back from Washington with bright prospects that he will at an early date be named as United States marshal for the Western district of North Carolina is Mr. W. E. Logan, chairman of the republican cogressional committee, the man to whose skill and energy the election of Congressman Grant was largely due.

Mr. Logan came yesterday afternoon from the capital where he has been for two weeks. When seen he was smiling and very cheerful, and expressed himself as very hopeful that his nomination would be sent to the senate in a short time. The fact of his return at this time when a decision is pending is itself pretty good ground for the belief that Mr. Logan at least has a pretty good idea where he is "at," even if the same cannot be said of others from this vicinity now in Washington.

Mr. Logan had little to say and only smiled when asked about the Biltmore postoffice imbroglio and the contest for the Asheville office. He said that he had read the Asheville papers with decided interest lately and intimated that he had read some things which made him laugh a good deal. He said that it was impossible to say when any decision in respect to the marshalship would be announced because at the time a number of the departments were crowded with work and that this was the case with the attorney general's office, which would pass on the qualifications of applicants for the place of marshal. He was inclined to believe, however, that a decision would be made in a week, although he could by no means assert this.

Another gentleman recently back from Washington was much more positive in his declarations on the subject. He said that there was no manner of doubt that Mr. Logan would be named as marshal and that a practical decision to this effect had been made although there would be no formal appointment for several days. He also said that any possible doubt about the re-appointment of Postmaster Rollins had been dispelled by the multitude of highly commendatory letters from patrons of the office asking the appointment.

"I understand that no better recommendations have ever come into the postoffice department," said he.

It was learned that Mrs. Reed's attorney, Frank Carter, had an appointment to meet the president yesterday to present Mrs. Reed's case against Congressman Grant.

LOGAN'S ARDENT DEFENCE OF GRANT INVOLVES HIS POLITICAL FORTUNES

In Supporting Charges Agains Mrs. Reed and Concealing Nature of Them Brings His Own Relation With Congressman Into the Issue. Mr. Carter Asks Some Pertinent Questions.

A galling gun is now turned on Mr. W. E. Logan, aspirant for appointment as United States marshal for the Western district of North Carolina, as a result of his activity in supporting Congressman Grant's affidavits against Mrs. F. J. Reed.

Attorney Frank Carter, who has been in Washington in the interest of the former postmistress of Biltmore, whose removal the affidavits made by Congressman Grant caused, returned to the city yesterday, coming by way of Norfolk, where he mailed to Mr. Logan the following red hot letter:

"Norfolk, Va., Jan. 21, 1910.

"Mr. W. E. Logan,

"Asheville, N. C.

"Dear Sir:—

"I have just seen your signed statement in reference to the Biltmore postoffice case in The Charlotte Observer, of the 20th inst., and note your admission that you have come to Mr. Grant's assistance by making a statement to be filed in the postoffice department, which statement you say sustains his contention against Mrs. Reed, but the precise nature of which you explicitly refuse to disclose.

"This refusal, being in line with the policy of concealment practiced in this case from the beginning, affords no occasion for surprise, however much it may shock the sense of fairness of the average mind.

"..either am I free to express any great surprise at the charge which you discreetly make upon information, to the effect that Mrs. Reed's attorney (undoubtedly referring to the writer) is in the pay of designing politicians; since Mrs. Reed's enemies have discovered allies who are both fruitful and ingenious in the fabrication of 'information.'

Lackin in Truth.

"Your 'information' upon this point, like so much of the 'information' which has been purveyed against Mrs. Reed, lacks any shred, semblance of shadow of truth. I have received nothing ardent on account of my services and nothing has been paid, promised or offered to me by anyone except Mrs. Reed herself. In fact, my interest in this matter is more personal than professional, since I have known Mrs. Reed some seventeen years—since long before she married Dr. Reed—and my esteem for her womanly character and high moral worth was such that I was more than glad of an opportunity to enlist in her defense against attacks which I was morally certain were as false as they were cowardly. I have had no political help; on the contrary, the principal discouragement I have encountered has been from a few ultra partisans of my own party, who were loath to forego the great political advantage to accrue to the democratic cause from the success of Mr. Grant's unmanly war on this widow.

Which is Going Some.

"You have attempted to prejudice Mrs. Reed's cause by stating that you have been informed that she is a mere stalking house for designing politicians. Having informed you that the charge is false, I now call upon you to name your informant. If you fail to do this the odium of protecting the slanderer of a widow's cause is yours. If you are willing to occupy this position, of an accessory after the fact, the public may easily go a step further and conclude that you are an accessory before the fact, if not the author of the slander.

"Speak up, Mr. Logan, and say who told you this lie.

Wants Answer to These.

"Relating by your signed article bring your own personality and your candidacy for the marshalship into the breach in this fight, I beg to submit to you the following inquiries and respectfully to request a categorical answer to each:

"1. Did you not carry the Greenwood papers, or part of them, to Washington?

"2. Before the Greenwood affidavit was filed, did you not comment upon Greenwood's shrewdness in securing endorsements of his character, or was not such comment made in your presence and hearing?

"3. To what extent are you now bound as maker, endorser, surety or otherwise upon any note, bond or stay of execution or other writing obligatory for Mr. Grant, and to what extent have you been so bound at any time since Mr. Grant became a candidate for the nomination for congress?

"4. Did you not know or have you not good reason to believe, that Mr. B. J. Luther furnished livery to Mr. Grant during his campaign for the nomination, or for election, or both, for which he was never paid in money; and if so what was the amount, extent or value of the livery so furnished? And did you not know, or have you not good reason to believe, that at or about the time Mr. Luther was appointed postmaster at Biltmore, he was endorser, surety or otherwise bount to a considerable amount for an insolvent son of Mr. Grant, and if so, what is your information as to the amount of such obligation?

Will Use Answers.

"Inquiries 1 and 2 go to your fitness to be an officer of justice under the government of the United tates, and the others are designed to show the small worth, from a moral standpoint, of the war against Mrs. Reed upon the ground, as alleged, that she offered to pay money for the privilege of retaining her means of livelihood; in which war you are by your statement formally enlisted.

"I bespeak your care in making answer to these inquiries, as copies of this letter and your reply, if you shall do me the honor to reply, may go to the attorney general of the United States and to any committee of the United States that may happen to be interested.

"You may address me at Asheville

"Yours truly,

"FRANK CARTER."

The letter virtually amounts to a challenge to Mr Logan's fitness to become marshal and some think that his appointment is now made an issue in the Biltmore postoffice contest.

Mr. Carter, when seen yesterday said that he felt very sanguine as to the outcome of his mission to Washington, but preferred not to comment on his interviews with Postmaster General Hitchcock and President Taft in behalf of Mrs. Reed.

(Continued on Page Four)

Asheville Citizen January 22, 1910

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, TUESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1910.

W. E. LOGAN MAKES STATEMENT IN REPLY TO LIST OF QUERIES

Avoids Pertinent Questions and Covers the Ground With General Resume of Things That Are and Were, Says He May Talk in Court.

Replying to Mr. Frank Carter's list of queries published in Sunday's Citizen, Mr. W. E. Logan yesterday issued the following statement anent his part in the Biltmore postoffice row:

"I notice Mr. Carter's communication in The Citizen of 23d inst., in which he says that he has addressed same to me in the shape of a letter. Mr. Carter was in such great haste to get the matter in the papers that he did not give the mails time to bring to me the original, all of which goes to prove that my statement was correct when I said that Mr. Carter seemed to be endeavoring to try his case through the public press.

"I notice that Mr. Carter says that such sums he has received and is to receive as attorney in the Biltmore case are to come from the 'paltry savings of the widow.' Now I understand those 'paltry savings' consist of, according to tax list and public records, a brick house situated in Biltmore for which $3,000 cash was recently offered, a cottage located in South Biltmore, valued at $1,000, and a recent purchase in Asheville of a handsome property at $3,500; so we can see that Mr. Carter's client is abundantly able to employ learned counsel to aid her in her scramble for office. Notwithstanding all of this I notice in The Citizen of some days ago the statement was made as coming from Mrs Reed through a friend that 'Mr. Carter was not being paid by Mrs. Reed and if it came to a show down as to these fees Mr. Logan would be sorry he spoke of the subject.' I submit in view of these conflicting accounts that it is hard to tell where the revenue in the case is coming from. I commend you, Mr. Carter, for your philanthropic acts in taking pity on and having compassion for the widow and orphan, partly because you have 'known her so long and your esteem for her womanly character and high moral worth;' but, by the way, there are many other deserving widows in our community, a large number of whom are in far greater need than this widow, yet I do not recall any public notice wherein you in any way came to their relief, or tendered your valuable services on such generous terms.

"I note that you say that you 'have had no political help,' but on the contrary you have met with discouragement from a few ultra partisans in your own party who were loath to forego the great political advantage to accrue to the democratic cause in this case. It appears to me that you have done the 'ultra partisans' the greatest possible service by your voluminous interviews and writings for the public press. I must confess that you have conducted the case in a commendable manner and more for their interest than your client's, and except for a few slips which 'kinder' give the trick away (which, by the way, was no fault of yours) you would have had a complete case for them. Therefore I think it in order for these 'ultra partisans' to pass the hat and take up a collection for you, provided your philanthropic spirit will allow you to take the filthy lucre.

"Now as to your questions, all of which I regard as irrelevant to your case, and only goes to show that my statement was correct when I said the whole scheme was one to destroy John Grant and not in the real interest of Mrs. Reed. I have this to say—I am sorry that I cannot accommodate you in your frantic efforts to continue to try your case through the public press, but if your case goes to a court of justice, as you have threatened you would do (provided you could not frighten John Grant and others into putting your client back in the Biltmore postoffice) then if I am called upon to answer any legitimate question bearing on your case I will cheerfully and truthfully do so.

"Referring to your threat to turn the gatling guns (?) on me if I failed to 'come across' in accordance with your living, direful results would follow, I have this to say: That my case will be passed upon by men of much larger information and far less prejudice than the people who would threaten others in order to carry their point.

"What I have written or spoken now or hereafter has not been done in the spirit of malice or with the thought or intention of injuring anyone, for all who have been spoken of or thought of, indeed, all who are connected with this case are my neighbors, and I am proud to say I consider many of them my friends, and I trust the pleasant relation will continue.

"The whole matter has appealed to me as a farce and such I am quite sure it will turn out to be.

"I have a clear conscience in all I have done or said in these matters, therefore I have no fear, notwithstanding gatling guns or what man can do unto me.

"W. E. LOGAN."

INVESTIGATION STARTED IN THE BILTMORE POSTOFFICE MUDDLE

Two Confidential Agents of Postmaster General Begin Probing Into Situation Made Interesting by Grant. Congressman Hurries Home From Washington To See His Sick Son. Everybody Keeping Very Quiet.

Two confidential representatives of Postmaster General Hitchcock yesterday began an investigation of the Biltmore postoffice matter, and it is reported that they will give a hearing this week in the Asheville postoffice building to all persons who can throw any light on the matter.

These gentlemen have been sent by the postmaster general as the result of the representations made to him by Attorney Frank Carter on behalf of Mrs. F. J. Reed, who charges that she was removed from the Biltmore office on affidavits filed by Congressman Grant charging her with attempting to bribe him to retain her in office. Other matters represented to the postmaster general related to the alleged falsity of the affidavit of Chief Greenwood that Mrs. Reed tried to bribe him, and to the affidavit made by Mr. W. E. Logan that a friend of Mrs. Reed sought to bribe him. The office was given to Mr. B. J. Luther and yesterday Mr. Luther appeared before the officials in his own behalf stating, it is understood, that he was not concerned in the controversy except that he had succeeded Mrs. Reed and claimed that he was making good as postmaster.

Everybody Keeps Mum.

It is impossible to learn from those concerned what transpired in the room when Messrs. Carter and Luther appeared before the investigators since all concerned declined to make any statement and even some who were not present were tongue tied when approached, fearing to incur the wrath of the postoffice department on their friends by talking. It was made clear, however, that the investigators, who by the way, are confidential men of high standing and talent, want to learn all there is to the situation. The postmaster general has heard the political side to the situation; now as a government official he wants to know facts affecting citizens of this county.

It is asserted positively that another and even more secret investigation by secret service officers is being conducted here and has been on several days, the matter closely affecting Congressman Grant. It is said it relates to the charge, made some months ago, that the congressman tried to force Postoffice Inspector Harshberger, who is stationed here, to make untrue representations to get out the postmaster at Tryon.

Grant's Future at Stake.

Congressman Grant arrived from Washington yesterday afternoon and is expected to return there this afternoon. It is stated that he came here to see his son, L. H. Grant, who is seriously ill, and that his trip has no connection with the investigations or political matters. It is generally felt that his political existence is at stake on the result of the investigations and comment is made that the postmaster general and president have deemed Mrs. Reed's charges sufficient to make detailed inquiry.

Close friends of Mr. Grant said they had no hint that any investigation directed against him was on, but it appears that he does not always tell them everything. His most intimate friends here for example did not know he was coming to Asheville and he quietly slipped out of Washington.

Asheville Citizen January 30, 1910

THE SUNDAY CITIZEN, FEBRUARY 27, 1910.

LOGAN WILL BE NAMED MARSHAL; LUTHER'S NOMINATION HELD UP

Congressman Grant Gets Political Patronage but His Appointees Must Fight for Life in Senate. Grant Faction Claims Vindication; Others Say Not.

The nomination of Mr. W. E. Logan of Asheville as United States marshal for the Western district of North Carolina will go to the senate Monday. Only an oversight prevented his being sent in Friday and the senate was not in session yesterday.

With the certainty that Mr. Logan will be named as United States marshal and with the nomination of Mr. R. J. Luther the day before as postmaster of Biltmore, the republican political situation has cleared decidedly. Congressman John G. Grant has achieved the ends he sought, overcoming tangible opposition as well as the semi-hidden influences against him and the disheartening slowness of the national administration to apportion him any patronage. So far as is known the appointment of Miss Jones as postmaster of Fairview, and of Brownlow Jackson at Hendersonville, made last week, represented all that had been furnished Mr. Grant in the way of "pie." The appointment of Major Rollins has a political significance of an entirely different nature, of course.

Friends Crawl Out.

Democrats here are in a degree inclined to congratulate the congressman in getting the ear of the administration, it being a matter of indifference to them largely what republican goes into office. Among republicans, however, there are two opinions expressed. The congressman's friends—and these came crawling out of their caves yesterday to say they were the top notcher Grant men—say he has won out all along the line, that he and Moorehead, etc., are "the people" who have the say at Washington, and the appointment of Luther they hail as complete vindication of the charges made by Mrs. Reed's friends and the naming of Logan as proof that there was nothing in the charge that he tried to coerce Inspector Harshberger to force a postmaster to resign.

Just Had to Be.

But the opposition republicans maintain that there is not an iota of vindication in the appointments. They claim that as no charge whatever was brought against the capable Luther, his selection as postmaster cannot be construed to mean any endorsement by the president of Grant's actions in the matter of Mrs. Reed; that somebody had to be named and why not Luther; that if Luther had made the charge that Mrs. Reed had tried to bribe him the case would have been different but, on the contrary, he made no charge against Mrs. Reed. They say that the naming of Logan has no particular significance because some good sized job had to be given to this section and that Mr. Logan did not charge that Mrs. Reed tried to bribe him, but that it was a friend of hers who offered him money to help her stay in office.

Endorsed Major Rollins.

The appointment of Major Rollins has been certain, apparently, for weeks, despite the fact that Mr. Grant did not endorse him until a day or two ago. This late action on the part of the congressman is interpreted by the anti-Grant people as meaning that he saw that the major would win and that he had better endorse him so as to claim that the major could not have won without him. The Grant people assert that the major's name was not sent to the senate until after Grant endorsed him and that the appointment is to be credited to the congressman. Less interested opinion is that the major would have won regardless of Mr. Grant.

LOGAN, DOCKERY, ADAMS, WINNERS

Taft Says He'll Name Adams to Succeed Holton—Favorable Report on Seawell,

The Gazette-News Bureau,
45 Post Building,
Washington, Feb. 28.

Announcement was made at the White House today that the president will appoint Judge Adams district attorney to succeed Holton. The statement was given to the press by the president's direction.

Claudius Dockery of Raleigh is nominated for United States marshal for the eastern district. Mr. Dockery had the endorsement of Mr. Duncan, national committeeman.

The nomination of W. E. Logan of Asheville to be United States marshal for the Western district of North Carolina was transmitted to the senate this afternoon. The senate judiciary committee favorably reports the nomination of H. F. Seawell of Carthage to be district attorney of the Eastern district.

Asheville Gazette-News February 28, 1910

MR. LOGAN FORWARDS BOND TO DEPARTMENT

The New Marshal Has Indicted no Intention of Making Changes in the Office Force.

W. E. Logan, the newly appointed marshal of the Western District of North Carolina has forwarded his bond to the department at Washington, and is making all arrangements to assume his new duties April 1. The bond is for $30,000, and covers the four-year period of the appointment. Mr. Logan has announced no intention of making any changes in the present office force, and it is thought that practically all, if not all of the deputy marshals will be reappointed.

J. M. Bailey, who has been acting as marshal since the resignation of J. M. Millikan, will resume his duties as chief office deputy. Mr. Logan's commission, now in the hands of Judge J. E. Boyd at Greensboro, will be delivered to him on April 1, when Mr. Logan takes charge of the office.

Asheville Gazette-News March 25. 1910

MR. JARRETT OF MADISON NAMED AS DEPUTY MARSHAL

Was Formerly Deputy Sheriff in Madison County—Succeeds F. W. Young, Resigned.

John Jarrett of Marshall has been appointed by United States Marshal Logan as deputy marshal, to succeed F. W. Young of Bakersville, who resigned recently. The appointment was announced yesterday and became effective at once. The position carries a salary of $1200 per year.

Mr. Young was holding the position of deputy marshal when Mr. Logan was appointed marshal and was reappointed under Mr. Logan. Mr. Jarrett is said to be well qualified for the place, having filled the position of deputy sheriff in Madison.

Asheville Gazette News May 4, 1911

W. ASHEVILLE WANTS COMMISSION GOV'T

CITIZENS DECIDE TO ASK FOR SEPARATE CHARTER

Enthusiastic Meeting at West Asheville Schoolhouse Last Night.—Will Draft Bill Tomorrow.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the citizens of West Asheville last night expressed, by a good majority, their desire for incorporation of their town, with commission form of government, and power to levy a property tax, not to exceed twenty-five cents on the dollar. The meeting convened at the West Asheville graded school building, for the purpose of discussing before Representative Gallatin Roberts, the subject of enactment of legislation needed for enforcing the ordinances of the city and carrying on its business. After a motion was passed favoring the incorporation of West Asheville, a committee was appointed to confer with Mr. Roberts at his office at ten o'clock tomorrow morning and draft a bill which will be passed by the next legislature.

When a good crowd had convened at 7:30 W. E. Logan was elected president and J. M. Clark was selected as secretary for the occasion. Mr. Logan asked for discussions by those present and the majority of the men in the hall spoke on the subject of incorporation, a warm discussion being held for some time. Many of those who talked took the position that West Asheville should be incorporated while some argued that the present sanitary regulations were sufficient for a town of that size. None of those present expressed the desire that West Asheville be taken into the city of Asheville as a part of this incorporation.

The sentiment of the meeting, as expressed by the speeches of the different men, was that Wst Asheville has grown to such an extent that an enlargement and improvemant of the present sanitary districts is needed by the citizenship of the town. It was pointed out by H. A. Brown, one of the citizens who went into a full discussion, that it would be only a short time, at the present rate of increase in population, until a charter and incorporation would be absolutely necessary. He asked the question as to whether it would be wiser to wait until West Asheville was taken into this city or act now and secure a town charter of their own.

Natt Atkinson took the position that the results desired could be obtained through alterations in the present sanitary system, which was provided by an act of the last general assembly. A sample bill which he had drawn up, was read to the meeting, in which provisions were made for selection of town officers and securing funds to defray expenses of installing a water and sewerage system.

Representative Gallatin Roberts was called upon to address the meeting and he replied with a brief but appealing argument in favor of incorporation. Mr. Roberts said that he was present in the capacity of an official whose duty it was to carry out the expressed wishes of his constituents and he made the statement that he would bend every effort to secure any legislation which the people of West Asheville should desire. Personally, he said, he could not see the wisdom in waiting any longer in securing a charter for the city. The needs of the citizens of the section seem to demand such action immediately, according to his personal views.

There was considerable opposition to incorporation expressed at one time, on account of the belief that it would result in high city tax. W. E. Logan, who acted as chairman, stated that such would not be the case. Mr. Logan assured those present that he had made investigation as to the cost of the private water system in West Asheville and had had made inquiries as to the cost which would be entailed by securing water lines from the city of Asheville. If anything, there would be a saving to the majority of citizens if this action is taken, he said.

On a motion by H. A. Brown, the meeting voted as favoring the securing of a charter by the city, with power to levy a property tax not exceeding twenty-five cents on the dollar, to make other regulations and to carry out their enforcement. A committee composed of Natt Atkinson, R. M. Wells, H. A. Brown, J. M. Cowan, R. P. Hayes, A. W. Kerr, and J. D. Fenland was appointed to meet tomorrow morning with Representative Gallatin Roberts and draft a bill expressing the wishes of the West Asheville people. The sentiment of the meeting was in favor of commission government and this form will probably be provided for in laying out the bill which will be presented to the general assembly for enactment.

Asheville Citizen January 5, 1913

Hazel Green Mills.

Mr. A. E. Clarke, superintendent of the above excellent mills, located in West Asheville, informs us that new rollers are being added to the mills with purifyers, new cloths, etc., in fact a complete new outfit, making the mills equal to the best in the country. The owner, Mr. W. E. Logan, is determined to equip his mills throughout with the latest and best machinery for the best work. The work of improvement goes steadily on throughout our section.

Asheville Democrat October 24, 1889

West Asheville Officials.

Mayor S. Doak Hall and Aldermen J. D. Penland, W. H. Wright, W. E. Logan and J. R. Reynolds, of West Asheville, were sworn in yesterday afternoon. The remaining alderman, N. Plamondon, was not present. He will take the oath of office this afternoon, and the first meeting of the new board will be held tonight.

Asheville Daily Citizen – May 11, 1892

FOOD CROPS SHOULD BE GROWN

FARMERS CAN NOT AFFORD TO BUY SUCH PRODUCTS.

Over 2,000,000 Pounds of Hay Brought to Asheville Annually from Outside Markets—This Hay Should Be Grown Here.

What should we grow? In successful farming this is a very important question. One thing we should always be certain of, and that is to grow everything that can be grown on the farm that is needed at home for the support of the family or such stock that is kept on the farm. Every farmer should make this a positive rule.

After the home consumption is amply provided for the farmer should make a surplus of such crops as command a ready cash market, which will bring him the greatest returns considering cost of marketing, production, etc. I would not advise the growing of much corn other than an ample amount for home use. Corn is very exhaustive on the soil, beside the clean cultures necessary to the growing of this crop is more likely to cause your land to wash. Where it is possible you should sow your corn land in field peas when you cultivate the last time, thus returning a portion of the vegetable matter necessarily taken away by the clean culture of the corn crop. The peas will shade the ground, preventing the rapid evaporation of moisture, thereby helping the growing crop.

If we would thoroughly subsoil our old worn out land we can again grow good crops. Rotation of crops is another thing that is very essential to successful farming. Do not grow corn on any piece of hill land oftener than every four or five years if you want to keep it fertile. Say you start with a crop of wheat or corn, one year each, and then to grass or clover for two years. If this plan is followed you will be able to keep up the fertility of the land.

Wheat is the main grain crop that should be grown in this section. Our soil is well adapted to the growth of this cereal. Wheat is not so exhaustive on the soil as the corn crop and always brings a remunerative price. I am glad to know that our farmers are turning their attention to this important crop.

Orchard grass, timothy and clover are profitable grass crops in this section, and should be grown largely for home consumption as well as for market.

Clover is a great soil improver, and will grow on most of our soil to great advantage, as many of our farmers know.

There is imported into Buncombe county over two millions of hay annually. This should all be grown here and if our farmers were all doing their duty as farmers there would not be a pound of hay brought here from other markets.

Another crop that should never be overlooked is the field pea. This crop should be grown in abundance for the improvement of the soil and incidentally as a money crop. Since the pea has been recognized as one of the best soil improvers there has sprung up a very great demand for the seed, and of later years they have commanded remunerative prices.

The Asheville market imports large quantities of beans. We should grow this crop. It is not only profitable, but, like the field pea, is very beneficial to the lands.

I need scarcely mention potatoes, as they are almost universally grown, and with the exception of a few seasons, we have had enough to supply the home markets.

In a later article I will try to show our farmers that the trucking business would be profitable to a certain extent in this section.

W. E. LOGAN.

Asheville Register June 9, 1901

W. E. LOGAN.

Mr. W. E. Logan, one of our successful business men, who has been connected with the business enterprises of Asheville for more than 20 years, began life forty-four years ago in the northern part of Buncombe county. After receiving a common school education with a short term at Weaverville College, he engaged quite early in life in the leaf tobacco business; after a few years of successful business in this line he went to Washington, D. C., and engaged in the hotel business, but owing to failing health he had to abandon this project which was proving very profitable at the time. He returned to Asheville in 1889 and bought the R. O. Patterson old burr flour mills in West Asheville, which he remodeled to the roller system, this being the second roller mill in Western North Carolina. In 1891 Mr. Logan consolidated his mills with the Asheville mills, Mr. Logan becoming the vice-president of the new company, which position he has held up to the present time. Mr. Logan takes a great interest in improved farming and has been very successful in renovating old farms, causing two blades of grass to grow where only one grew before. Mr. Logan is an authority on wheat growing and other farm topics. Mr. Logan has been very successful in some real estate transactions in West Asheville, having recently purchased the old Judge Henry estate just west of the French Broad river at Smith's bridge. This farm has been subdivided and placed on the market.

Mr. Logan has been prominently connected with local politics for several years; he was chairman of the Republican executive committee in Buncombe county from 1900 to 1902. While he was chairman Buncombe county was carried for the late Maj. I. M. Moody, Republican candidate for Congress by a majority of over three hundred, this being the second time the county had been carried by the Republicans in many years. Mr. Logan has recently been active in a movement against a continuation of the present federal office holders for a third term; he, together with a large percentage of his party believing that eight years is long enough term for any one to hold these places.

Mr. Logan is a candidate for collector of this, the 5th N. C. District, when Mr. Hackins' present term expires, and has been well endorsed by the business men of Asheville and Western North Carolina as well as by many party friends.

Asheville Gazette News Mid-Winter Edition February 1905

Large Land Transaction Will Help West Asheville

A deal in real estate whose development will be of the greatest importance to West Asheville was completed yesterday through the real estate agency of Hall & Pettland.

Leigh R. Page of Richmond, Va., sold to Brown & Logan for fourteen thousand dollars two hundred acres of land in West Asheville and the purchasers will at once carry out plans looking to the subdivision of the tract and the building of many houses in this rapidly growing suburb of Asheville.

The property is high and rolling, with fine views in all directions, and three county macadam roads pass through it and the mains of the West Asheville Water company need only to be extended through the land. It is the intention of the owners to subdivide the tract into smaller tracts and lots adapted either to residences or fruit or truck farms on a small scale, and houses will be built to suit purchasers.

The opening of this property is expected to add much to the neighborhood, as heretofore it has lain unused.

Asheville Citizen March 11, 1906

MR. LOGAN HAS ASSUMED HIS DUTIES AS MARSHAL

Reappoints All Present Force, Except Reynolds at Wilkesboro.

W. E. Logan yesterday, at Greensboro, assumed the duties of marshal of the Western district of North Carolina. He will attend his first court at Charlotte, beginning Monday. Mr. Logan reappointed all of the present force with the exception of Mr. Reynolds at Wilkesboro, appointing C. H. Hollis. Mr. Hollis, however, is sick, and Mr. Reynolds was continued until Mr. Hollis is able to assume his duties.

Mr. Logan has announced no appointee for the position held by R. S. Ramsey at Asheville, Mr. Ramsey resigning. The office will be continued at Greensboro for a while at least.

Asheville Gazette-News April 2, 1910

FRIDAY, MAY 26, 1916.

W. E. LOGAN DIES AS RESULT OF STROKE

Former United States Marshal Leaves Large Family and Funeral Will Be Held Today.

Following an apoplectic stroke sustained late last Friday night as he was entering the door of his home at West Asheville, W. E. Logan died at his home yesterday morning at 8 o'clock. Mr. Logan was fifty-six years old and was for a number of years United States marshal for the western district of North Carolina.

He is survived by his wife and the following eight children:

Miss Annie, Miss Myrtle, Miss Grace, Miss Irene, Miss Katherine, Carl, Harry and Billy Logan.

The funeral will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the home of the deceased. Rev. H. B. Killian, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, of which Mr. Logan was a member, will conduct the services. Mr. Killian will be assisted by Rev. A. E. Brown, Rev. J. B. Grice, Rev. John Bomar and Rev. William Wamboldt.

The active pall bearers will be W. E. Howard, B. B. Jones, H. A. Wells, C. M. Lineberry, H. A. Brown and W. S. Hyams.

The following will act as honorary pall bearers:

E. B. Atkinson, Willis Collins, Dr. P. G. Buckner, C. A. Raysor, Judge J. D. Murphy and John G. Grant. The interment will be held at West Asheville cemetery.

THE LATE W. E. LOGAN REMEMBERED FOR HIS EARLY ACTIVITIES

The Late W. E. Logan

The above picture will bring fond memories to many West Ashevillians who will remember Mr. Logan's interest and activities in the community. As one of the pioneer citizens, Mr. Logan gave the land for the building that portion of Haywood road leading up the hill from the bridge, and also gave the land for the right-of-way for the street car line along the same route.

An event in the life of the Logan family is tied up with the coming of electric lights to West Asheville in 1910, which came in time for the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Logan.

When employees of the Power company learned that the reception on this occasion would be better enjoyed if the current could be brought over by this date, all hands worked extra hard to complete the line in time for the event. The day arrived and the current was here. That afternoon a severe storm broke a line and the men returned after hours to repair it so the light would blaze for the celebration.

Aug. 7 948 Subscriptions $33,000.00 For a New Mission Hospital

WATCH IT GROW

The New Mission Hospital Acknowledges the Following Subscriptions received through Aug. 6th of $10.00 and over and all received Aug. 7th above $5.00. Watch the list grow. Have You Subscribed Yet?

Mrs. Howard M. Baker	$ 1,000.00
Mar. D. C. Waddell	1,000.00
Mrs. Tench Coxe	1,000.00
Mr. Brewster Chapman	1,000.00
Guy Weaver	10.00
J. M. Roberts	15.00
J. A. Sinclair	25.00
Burton & Holt	200.00
N. A. Henck	20.00
Florence A. Bishop	75.00
Citizen Co.	100.00
Gazette-News Co.	100.00
Mrs. J. E. Woodcock	100.00
W. Vance Brown	200.00
Mrs. T. Settle	200.00
Miss G. Belknap	200.00
Mrs. J. J. Brown	200.00
Miss E. Johnston	250.00
S. Lipinsky	250.00
Mr. and Mrs. Philip Henry	500.00
Miss Fanny Patton	500.00
Dr. H. H. Briggs	500.00
C. N. Maxwell	10.00
A. C. Goodman	12.00
Smith's Drug Store	100.00
S. M. Stevens	25.00
J. A. Perry	25.00
Paul H. Ringer	50.00
Dr. and Mrs. Jordan	300.00
D. Ledbetter	20.00
F. Webb Griffith	25.00
Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lord	25.00
Dr. and Mrs. Jas. B. Greene	100.00
R. P. Hayes	100.00
C. Rankin	50.00
Houston Merriman	40.00
Kate Smith	10.00
Mrs. Robert Johnston	50.00
Mrs. J. A. Baker	25.00
R. W. Hammerslough	10.00
Inland Press	50.00
L. I. Alexander	20.00
Jos C. Bradford	10.00
J. C. Wilbar	10.00
A. R. Johnson & Co	10.00
Mrs. H. J. Cartwright	12.00
Harriet Cushman Wilkie	20.00
Ralph B. Arbogast	10.00
Mrs. C. A. Raysor	10.00
L. M. McCormick	50.00
Allen C. McDonald	10.00
Training School, Mission Hospital	44.00
Ike Swartzberg	15.00
L. H. Pollock	10.00
A. H. Katz	10.00
Nichols Shoe Co.	100.00
L. Blomberg	50.00
M. L. Rock	10.00
Bennie Argantar	10.00
A. B. Bane	10.00
V. Fleishman	10.00
H. L. Finkelstein	50.00
J. M. Zorick	10.00
Harry L. Parker	12.00
Jno. H. Powell	100.00
M. R. Campbell	25.00
A. H. Malone	10.00
K. R. Millard	25.00
Ottis Green/Hardware Co.	50.00
S. J. Woodcock	100.00
J. C. Pritchard	50.00
Mrs. J. C. Pritchard	25.00
Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Rollins	25.00
Julius C. Martin	25.00
M. Lipinsky	20.00
Mrs. H. A. Gudger	15.00
J. E. Bradford	10.00
Lillie B. Lance	15.00
Capt. and Mrs. J. E. Ray	50.00
A. & E. T. R. R. Co.	100.00
[illegible]	50.00
Mr. and Mrs. Jno. A. Camp-
A. Samuels	20.00
Hugh C. Brown	25.00
A. Blomberg	25.00
Aldha Ira Ruby	10.00
C. R. Fogus	25.00
S. Sternberg & Co.	150.00
Fortune & Roberts	20.00
J. M. Westall	100.00
Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Honess	25.00
O. G. Shackleton	10.00
Mrs. A. D. Sproat	10.00
S. O. Bradley	20.00
Vonno L. Gudger	10.00
L. B. McBrayer	100.00
R. W. Betts	10.00
H. L. Nettles	10.00
S. J. East	10.00
Sam J. Phillipson	25.00
A. W. Calloway	25.00
M. A. Kelly	50.00
L. A. Merrimon	75.00
Yates & McGuire	100.00
Wm. W. West	10.00
H. Rodwood & Co.	50.00
J. H. Law	50.00
W. H. Westall	50.00
E. W. Grove	1,000.00
Wm. J. East	15.00
J. M. Childs	10.00
Sam Stern	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Hewitt	250.00
M. L. Stevens	10.00
A. E. Rankin	20.00
J. H. Manley	10.00
Miss Jane Oakley	25.00
E. W. Grove, Jr.	50.00
S. A. Lynch	100.00
H. D. Child	100.00
W. A. Newell	10.00
M. E. Child	25.00
Mrs. James Little	25.00
F. Zimmerman & Son	10.00
S. Finestein	10.00
Winston Walden	20.00
Frank S. Foster	25.00
S. I. Blomberg	20.00
W. G. Howerton	10.00
R. E. Mumpower	15.00
H. A. Dunham	50.00
J. M. Parker	20.00
Dr. A. T. Pritchard	25.00
Wm. J. East	10.00
R. U. Garrett	25.00
Mrs. Jessie V. Low	10.00
Peoples Steam and Dye Works	10.00
T. Hardegg	10.00
W. B. Nixon	10.00
Dr. Alice Johnston	10.00
Annie Thompson	10.00
Miss Euphia Owen	12.00
Mrs. Ella W. Nash	60.00
S. F. Chapman	50.00
R. W. Patton	12.00
Donald W. Randolph	10.00
F. E. Johnston	25.00
Chas. G. Lee	25.00
Ed. B. Brown's Bible Class	30.00
W. T. Weaver	100.00
Harmon A. Miller	100.00
D. S. Ellas	10.00
Ed. W. Whiteside	10.00
Louise S. Williamson	10.00
W. B. Williamson	25.00
C. M. Chedester	10.00
G. Alexander	10.00
L. L. Whitehead	10.00
R. R. Williams	20.00
Asheville Fish Co.	15.00
Brown Undertaking Co.	15.00
Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Long	15.00
David H. Fater	10.00
P. E. Hare	10.00
Lorenze C. Ray	20.00
Allison Drug Store	24.65
Mrs. Daisy Coxe Wright	500.00
Dr. Silvio Von Ruck	100.00
C. M. Miller	10.00
Miss Mary Stewart	15.00
Miss Lea V. Stevens	10.00
H. Y. King	10.00
J. A. Porter	10.00
T. S. Morrison	100.00
Miss Florence Stephens	10.00
Gaston Mears	100.00
Chas. A. Webb	100.00
Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Clayton	10.00
Elbert C. Chambers	10.00
Miss Q. M. Carson	10.00
Zeb F. Curtis	50.00
Hills Market	50.00
A. K. Orr	25.00
Dr. D. E. Sevier	25.00
Mrs. J. G. Merrimon	20.00
Miss Helen Murphy	10.00
Mar. Isabella Rose Field	10.00
Felmet Bros.	25.00
G. W. Donnan	10.00
Miss R. L. Cocke	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Reynolds	25.00
Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Minor	500.00
Cash from RoseCraggon	32.00
Baseball Game	59.50
S. T. Logan	20.00
J. J. Mackey	10.00
F. Reid Russell	10.00
J. E. Fulgum	20.00
T. M. Mashburn	25.00
Estell Webb	12.00
Calvin B. Waller	10.00
G. H. Wright	25.00
V. F. Hawkins	10.00
H. K. Northrup	10.00
Harry Howell	25.00
W. H. Zimmerman	15.00
Asheville Dry Goods Co.	25.00
David Jacobson	10.00
F. T. Hunt	10.00
Franklin Else	10.00
F. Stikeleather	25.00
Francis M. Wright	50.00
Asheville Cotton Mills	100.00
R. B. Zagier	50.00
Miss Nannie Alexander	10.00
A. C. Payne	15.00
C. E. Graham, Greenville	100.00
W. E. Logan	100.00
Alice Doughery	10.00
W. B. Carter	10.00
Miss Mattie Harris	10.00
J. E. Carpenter	10.00
Mrs. Deschler	10.00
Weaver V. Wilson	10.00
Mrs. A. B. Lewis	10.00
H. M. Nolan	10.00
H. J. Olive	100.00
J. L. Welch	15.00
B. M. Jones	20.00
J. W. Glazer	10.00
J. W. Wolfe	50.00
Dr. and Mrs. Hunt	50.00
R. E. Bowless	5.00
Marion E. Ely	10.00
Asheville Tannery	150.00
L. L. Merchant	15.00
W. H. Bird	25.00
T. P. Johnston & Co.	25.00
Brown Book Co.	50.00
Noland Brown Co.	50.00
An Earnest Citizen	5.00
Mrs. Edwin D. Keeling	5.00
Mrs. Katherin E. Banks	5.00
J. R. Patterson & Son	25.00
Jno. M. Acee	5.00
G. R. Hanger	5.00
Polly E. Morrow	5.00
H. W. Plummer	50.00
R. R. Rawles	25.00
E. M. Lyda	20.00
Mrs. M. J. Bradfield	5.00
Wm. Thos. J. Revell	5.00
W. R. Ballard	5.00
Mrs. Chas. K. Ober	5.00
Miss Moore	5.00
D. B. Buttle	5.00
Mrs. K. W. Smith	5.00
A. E. Brown	5.00
Jno. Hannon	10.00
Anita Vallon	10.00
R. G. Watson	25.00
P. S. Dula	5.00
Martha B. Patton	25.00
Mrs. Chas. E. Rudd	50.00
Thos. L. Lawrence	50.00
Jno. E. Barnard	10.00
E. C. Sawyer	50.00
Burt E. Nichols	5.00
C. P. Ryman	10.00
Jas. P. Sawyer	100.00
P. B. Ofr	50.00
L. B. Shelton	5.00
F. B. Ingle	5.00
Z. T. Ledbetter	5.00
Otto Cooper	5.00
R. B. Sands	25.00
Union Plumbing Co.	25.00
R. D. Moore	10.00
J. Branagan	5.00
Susan C. Dukes	5.00
F. T. H. Woods	5.00
Katherine Birkemyer	5.00
F. Birkemeyer	5.00
Richard E. Kibler	20.00
R. C. Grinestaff	25.00
Employees Carolina Mch. Co.	15.00
Zerulan Weaver	10.00
Gus Galloway	5.00
W. A. Peebles	5.00
A. G. Barnett	10.00
Ed. B. Brown	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Brown	25.00
Mrs. Grace S. Ray	10.00
M. T. Rhinehart	5.00
H. C. Buckner	10.00
M. M. Sullivan	25.00
P. A. Donsahoe	25.00
J. T. Bledsoe	25.00
F. R. Baker	10.00
C. T. Rawls	20.00
T. D. McCall	10.00
J. C. Lipe	5.00
R. J. Luther	5.00
R. J. Dowtin	5.00
Lillie M. Holcombe	5.00
J. P. Kitchen	10.00
G. S. Arthur	10.00
Colored People Subscribing to Fund.
W. P. Brooks	5.00
Jno. W. Walker	10.00
Jas. Lance	10.00
Jno. E. Revis	10.00
Lee Johnston	10.00
Rufus Weaver	10.00
Samuel S. Patton	10.00
Scoffield Miller	10.00
Louis Clowney	10.00
Sarah Murrough	10.00
J. A. Wilson	10.00
A. H. Gaston	10.00
Joseph Bynum	5.00
Rev. R. J. Martin	5.00
Jno. F. Pearson	5.00
Jno. S. Fowler	5.00
Chas. Reynolds	5.00
Ed. Young	5.00
Jno. Young	5.00
Geo. C. Justus	5.00
H. F. Pearson	5.00
A. T. Schaeffer	5.00

Asheville Gazette News August 8, 1913

W.E. Logan family home, 124 Logan Ave., West Asheville

Photo c. 1901; courtesy Gary Logan

W.E. Logan (1869 – 1916) and Rose Addie Deaver Logan (1865 – 1943)

Photo c. 1890; courtesy Gary Logan

W. E. Logan Finds The Atlantic Treacherous

He Went Down to See the Ocean—the Great, Big Atlantic—Forgot All About the Tide and Came Very Near Losing An Auto—It Was Awful.

From St. Augustine comes the pathetic story of how an Asheville man accustomed all his life in his beloved mountains of western North Carolina, thousands of feet above sea level, to view the beauties of nature at will and without hesitation under all conditions, has been tricked in a most treacheous manner by the heartless Atlantic ocean. The victim of this treachery is none other than W. E. Logan, former United States marshal for the western district of North Carolina, who, with his family, has been spending the winter at the Florida home at Citra.

The whole trouble resulted from the fact that Mr. Logan, taking his family out for their first view of the Great Atlantic, forgot all about such an institution as the tide, which everybody knows "waits for no man." Inadvertently, however, Mr. Logan waited for the tide; and it came near costing him an automobile. It did cost him an immense amount of mental anguish.

But let the St. Augustine Evening Record of last Saturday tell the story:

"Treating his family to their first view of the ocean, W. E. Logan of Asheville, N. C., introduced them in a manner that will not be easily effaced from their memory. They motored over on Thursday to South Beach in Mr. Logan's auto at dead low tide. The wide, smooth beach looked very inviting and the machine was driven to the very edge of the water. So impressed were all with the vast expanse of water that they gazed spellbound at the tossing billows. The auto was halted, and the occupants, intent only on the view, did not note the gradual encroachment of the tide. When they became aware of the fact that the water was creeping shorewards they attempted, in slang parlance, to 'beat it,' but discovered that the wheels were sinking in the sand.

"Mr. Logan soon recognized the fact that the machine could not extricate itself under its own power, all efforts at this proving in vain. Another auto party happened along and their proffered assistance was accepted gratefully, and cables were connected, but they snapped as soon as the strain was felt. Meantime the waves rolled in higher and higher and soon covered the greater part of the auto. Mr. Logan, thoroughly alarmed over the prospect of losing his machine, came to town and secured a couple team from the transfer company. The mules pulled heroically, but in vain, and rescue work was then abandoned until the tide fell to dead low level. Carl Logan, driver of the car, then undertook the task and worked the old year out and the new year in. He succeeded in pulling the car out and had it towed to town and it is now undergoing repairs.

"Mr. Logan has a winter home at Citra. He and his family were spending a day in St. Augustine, en route from Citra to Asheville, to place the daughters, Grace and Irene, in school for the winter. Mr. Logan reports the roads this side of Ormond are in very bad condition.

"They passed five cars bogged in the mud of a creek north of Ormond one having a broken wheel. Mr. Logan and family are leaving today for Asheville by rail. He will return next week for the car. The party was composed of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Logan, Carl Logan, Misses Grace and Irene Logan."

Asheville Gazette January 8, 1915

W.E. Logan

Photo c. 1880; courtesy Gary Logan

W.E. Logan

Photo c.1885; courtesy Gary Logan

W.E. Logan home, 124 Logan Ave., West Asheville
Photo c. 1895; courtesy Gary Logan

W.E. Logan family

http://media-cache-ec0.pinimg.com/736x/ Photo c. 1897; courtesy Gary Logan 808f9.jpg 6/20/2014

W.E. Logan family outing near their place in Citra, Florida
Photo c. 1913-1914; courtesy Gary Logan

SUMMER RESIDENCE
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

WINTER RESIDENCE
CITRA, FLA.

W. E. LOGAN

GROWERS AND SHIPPER OF

FINE ORANGES AND GRAPE FRUIT

PARSON BROWN ORANGES

CITRA, FLA., _____ 191___

Mr
& Mrs. Olive Logan Fitzgerald

Lewis B. McBrayer, Jr.

Miss Myrtle L. Logan

E. Cam. Featherston

Letterhead from a Logan family citrus hauling company, and family calling cards
Courtesy Gary Logan

5-25-1916

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MR. LOGAN

Funeral services for W. E. Logan will be held from the residence tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The services will be conducted by Rev. H. D. Killam, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. E. Brown, Rev. J. B. Grice and Rev. John Bomar. Special music will be rendered by the Bartlett quartet.

The active pallbearers will be W. E. Howard, B. B. Jones, George Starnes, H. A. Wells, H. A. Brown and C. N. Lineberry; honorary pallbearers, Mayor J. E. Rankin, E. B. Atkinson, Dr. R. G. Buckner, ex-Congressman J. G. Grant, Judge J. D. Murphy and Willis Collins. The interment will take place at West Asheville cemetery.

Asheville Citizen May 25, 1916

IN LOVING REMEMBRANCE OF
W. E. Logan,
Died May 25, 1916,
Aged 56 Years.
Gone but not forgotten
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
God in His wisdom has recalled,
The boon his love had given,
And though the body slumbers here,
The soul is safe in Heaven.
Copyright 1898 by H. F. Wendell, Leipsic, O.

Logan Fleet Arrives

The Logan Brothers truck corps returned to Asheville yesterday after a trip to Highland, Illinois, where they purchased four new truck which will be added to their fleet of trucks used in their rapidly growing trucking business. Left to right: Harry Logan, Carl Holsclaw, William Logan and Carl Logan. Their headquarters are at 202 Haywood Road, West Asheville.

LOGAN BROTHERS BUSINESS GAINS

Four New Trucks Added To Hauling Fleet Of Prominent Firm

The rapid growth of Logan Brothers' business at 202 Haywood road, West Asheville, during the two years they have been in business has compelled them to expand in their truck department to the extent of purchasing four new trucks for their hauling contract business.

Harry Logan, William Logan and Carl Logan, of the firm, and Carl Holsclaw, foreman of the truck crew, have just returned from Highland, Illinois, where they purchased four fine trucks to be placed in use in their contract hauling, including the work of transporting sand, gravel and stone, and other building materials.

The Logan Brothers have been located at 202 Haywood road for the past two years and their business has been steadily expanding. In addition to their hauling contracts, this firm operates a service station at the Haywood road address and has the local agency for India Tires.

Carl M. Logan is manager of the hauling business and Harry R. Logan is manager of the service stations. The four new trucks which were purchased last week in Highland, Ill., and were driven through to Asheville, will be added to their present fleet in the trucking business. The Logan brothers believe that business in Asheville will show a steady increase, due to the extension of the city limits, the increase in interest in Asheville by manufacturers and the general atmosphere of development which has taken hold of the city.

HOSPITAL FILES LEGAL PAPERS

Certificate For Aston Park Institution Is Recorded

Certificate of incorporation for the Aston Park Hospital, Inc., was filed for record yesterday in the office of the Clerk of the Superior Court. The

Former Treasurer Of Iredell County Dies

(Special To The Citizen)

STATESVILLE, July 13. — W. R. Sloan, 78, former county treasurer, merchant and business man, who had been connected with Statesville's progress for the past 38 years, died this morning at 9:15 o'clock at his home on East Broad street, his death resulting from an extended illness with uremic poisoning and complications. The funeral service in charge of the pastor, Dr. A. L. Stanford, will be held from Broad Street Methodist church Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and interment will follow in Oakwood cemetery.

http://media-cache-ec3.pinterest.com/upload/20195898299251887_poYbHBCO_c.jpg 9/7/20

5-25-1916

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MR. LOGAN

Funeral services for W. E. Logan will be held from the residence tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The services will be conducted by Rev. H. D. Killam, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. E. Brown, Rev. J. B. Grice and Rev. John Bomar. Special music will be rendered by the Bartlett quartet.

The active pallbearers will be W. E. Howard, B. B. Jones, George Starnes, H. A. Wells, H. A. Brown and C. N. Lineberry; honorary pallbearers, Mayor J. E. Rankin, E. B. Atkinson, Dr. R. G. Buckner, ex-Congressman J. G. Grant, Judge J. D. Murphy and Willis Collins. The interment will take place at West Asheville cemetery.

Asheville Citizen May 25, 1916

Search

Pinterest

About Login

Pinterest is an online pinboard.
Organize and share things you love.

Request an Invite » Login

Family History

These are various photos of my direct ancestors. Many are portraits, some are obits, and others represent aspects of their lives (home places, businesses, etc.)

Gary Logan

78 followers, 54 pins

W. E. LOGAN DIED HERE EARLY TODAY

Well Known Citizen Passes Following Stroke of Apoplexy Last Week

W. E. Logan, who was stricken with apoplexy last Friday night just as he was entering his home after returning from the pageant at the Manor, died at his home in West Asheville this morning shortly after 8 o'clock.

Mr. Logan for several years was U. S. Marshal for the western district of the state and was well known in this section. He was a member of the Calvary Baptist church and was a man of strong Christian character.

The deceased who was 56 years old, is survived by his wife and the following eight children: Miss Annie Lillian, Miss Myrtle, Carl, Miss Grace, Miss Irene, Harry, Miss Mary Katherine and Billy. The funeral arrangements will be announced later.

William Erwin Logan (1860-1916) death notice. He was a U.S. Marshal (appointed under Taft in 1910), tobacconist, and modest real estate tycoon

Uploaded by user

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MR. LOGAN

Funeral services for W. E. Logan will be held from the residence tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The services will be conducted by Rev. H. D. Killam, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Dr. A. E. Brown, Rev. J. B. Grice and Rev. John Bomar. Special music will be rendered by the Bartlett quartet.

The active pallbearers will be W. E. Howard, B. B. Jones, George Starnes, H. A. Wells, H. A. Brown and C. N. Lineberry; honorary pallbearers, Mayor J. E. Rankin, E. B. Atkinson, Dr. R. G. Buckner, ex-Congressman J. G. Grant, Judge J. D. Murphy and Willis Collins. The interment will take place at West Asheville cemetery.

William Erwin Logan (1860-1916) obituary. West Asheville Cemetery later became Green Hills Cemetery

Uploaded by user

William Erwin Logan home, 124 Logan Ave., West Asheville, NC, ca. 1895 (top center of photo)

Uploaded by user

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. LOGAN IN HOSPITAL HERE

Leading Citizen Had Been Bible School Teacher For Half Century.

Mrs. W. E. Logan, 78, for more than half a century a leading citizen of Asheville and vicinity, died about noon today in an Asheville hospital after a brief illness.

Active in all kinds of progressive community programs, Mrs. Logan probably was best known for her much work for the schools and churches. She figured prominently in the program of the Calvary Baptist church in West Asheville during her life and served as a Bible class teacher for 60 years.

Active in P. T. A.

For many years, Mrs. Logan took an active part in parent-teacher programs of the city schools, contributing her services long after her own children had completed their courses of studies. Several of her children are now teachers in Asheville's city schools which she helped to develop as a member of the city school board some years ago.

She was a trustee of Mars Hill college and much of her interest centered around this work. She helped in a drive for funds for the hospital on the college campus in recent years.

A former member of the school board, Mrs. Logan also has served faithfully on the executive committee for Bible in the Public Schools for a number of years. She has served also as president of the parent-teacher associations of the Aycock elementary and Hall Fletcher junior high schools.

Charter Club Member

Mrs. Logan was a charter member of the West Asheville Community club and was associated with the West Asheville Garden club.

Much of her energy was devoted also to work with the Women's Christian Temperance union.

Funeral arrangements, incom-

MRS. W. E. LOGAN

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. LOGAN IN HOSPITAL HERE

Leading Citizen Had Been Bible School Teacher For Half Century.

Mrs. W. E. Logan, 78, for more than half a century a leading citizen of Asheville and vicinity, died about noon today in an Asheville hospital after a brief illness.

Active in all kinds of progressive community programs, Mrs. Logan probably was best known for her much work for the schools and churches. She figured prominently in the program of the Calvary Baptist church in West Asheville during her life and served as a Bible class teacher for 60 years.

Active in P. T. A.

For many years, Mrs. Logan took an active part in parent-teacher programs of the city schools, contributing her services long after her

Search

Pinterest

About Login

Pinterest is an online pin board
Organize and share things you love

Request an Invite »

Login

Martha Ann Wall Coleman (1900-1994), ca. 1922

Uploaded by user

124 Logan Ave., West Asheville, NC (William Erwin Logan home), ca. 1901

1 like 1 comment 1 repin

Uploaded by user

Ann Wright We are contacting you from Pack Memorial Library in Asheville and wanted to know if you would be interested in sharing your scans of 124 Logan home up close and the distant shot? They are wonderful. Also wondering if you have info on Hattie Delano Rollins who lived in the house until she died in 1957? We can send you her obituary if you don't have it. Our email is packnc@buncombecounty.org Thanks, Zoe Rhine

William Erwin Logan (1860-1916) & Rose Addie Deaver Logan (1865-1943), ca. 1890

Uploaded by user

Alexander Lafayette "Fate" Logan (1834-1910) & second wife, Margaret Buckner Logan, ca. 1890

Uploaded by user

William Erwin Logan (1860-1916), ca. 1876

1 like 1 repin

Uploaded by user

William Erwin Logan family, ca. 1897

Uploaded by user

Lewis Funeral home.
Surviving are five daughters, Mrs. W. Himes, Mrs. J. L. Lawrence, Miss Grace Logan, Miss Irene Logan and Miss Mary Logan; three sons, Carl M. Logan, Harry R. Lo-

Full obituary for Rose Addie Deaver Logan (1865-1943)

Uploaded by user

Rose Addie Deaver Logan (1865-1943), ca. 1885

1 like 1 repin

Uploaded by user

William Erwin Logan family, ca. 1910. My granddad, Harry Rollins Logan (1903-1971), is front and center.

Uploaded by user

LOGAN CAFE,
(LATE FORSYTH CAFE)
NO. 518 TENTH STREET, N. W.,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

22-25 CENT MEAL TICKETS, $5.00
7-15 " " " $1.00

R. M. DEAVER,
518 10th Street, N.W.
Washington, D.C.

own children had completed their courses of studies. Several of her children are now teachers in Asheville's city schools which she helped to develop as a member of the city school board some years ago.

She is a trustee of Mars Hill and much of her interest centers around this work. She led a drive for funds for the hospital on the college campus in recent years.

A former member of the school board, Mrs. Logan also has served faithfully on the executive committee for Bible in the Public Schools for a number of years. She has served also as president of the parent-teacher associations of the Aycock elementary and Hall Fletcher junior high schools.

Charter Club Member

Mrs. Logan was a charter member of the West Asheville Community club and was associated with the West Asheville Garden club.

Much of her energy was devoted

Rose Addie Deaver Logan (1865 - 1943)

Uploaded by user

William Erwin Logan (1860-1916), ca. 1885

Uploaded by user

William Erwin Logan family, ca. 1911/12

Uploaded by user

Search

Pinterest

Pinterest is an online pinboard.
Organize and share things you love.

Request an Invite »

Login

Flora Virginia McPhail (1904-1983), ca. 1922

1 like 1 repin

Uploaded by user

Flora Virginia McPhail Logan (1904-1983) obituary

Uploaded by user

Sarah Ann Rollins (1843-1914), ca. 1869

Uploaded by user

Sarah Ann Rollins Deaver (1843-1914), ca. 1863

Uploaded by user

Thomas Jefferson Rollins (1812-1891), ca. 1880

Uploaded by user

Business cards from the family

4 likes 8 repins

Uploaded by user

Virginia Carolina Williford McPhail (1842-1931), ca. 1917

Uploaded by user

Paul Lee Coleman, Sr. (1899-1994), ca. 1922

1 like 1 repin

Uploaded by user

Harry Rollins Logan (1903-1971), ca. 1921

Uploaded by user

Sarah Ann Rollins Deaver (1843-1914), ca. 1879

Uploaded by user

Thomas Jefferson Rollins (1812-1891), ca. 1857

Search

Pinterest

Pinterest is an online pinboard.
Organize and share things you love.

Request an Invite »

About

Login

Login

Mahala Clement Rollins (1801-1884) ca. 1872

Uploaded by user

Guide to Gary Logan's photo ancestry

1 repin

Uploaded by user

Jim & Lib Logan, ca. 1952. James Manning Logan (1929-1997) & Mary Elizabeth Coleman Logan (1930-), married 27 Dec 1952.

Uploaded by user

Joseph Edward Coleman, Sr. (1857-1911)

Uploaded by user

James Logan, board member of Greenville Habitat for Humanity

Jim Logan obituary

1 repin

Uploaded by user

Margaret Catherine Blue McPhail (1876-1941) & John Franklin McPhail (1866-1952), ca. 1902

Uploaded by user

Thomas Shepherd Deaver (1803-1892) & Louarty A. Keith Deaver (1807-1876), ca. 1860, with one of their daughters.

Uploaded by user

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES

Thursday, Jan. 16, 1997

JAMES MANNING LOGAN

EASLEY, S.C. -- James Manning Logan, 67, of 112 Country Lakes Road, Easley, S.C., died Monday, Jan. 13, 1997, after a brief illness.

A native of Asheville, he was a decorated combat veteran retiring from the U.S. Army as a Colonel in 1985 with 33 years of distinguished service. In 1983, he was responsible for the reactivation of the 3rd U.S. Army, the first deployable field army since World War II. He served on the board of Habitat for Humanity of Greenville County, S.C. He was a member of the Buncombe Street United Methodist Church where he served on the board of stewards and was a member of the Searchers Sunday school class for which he was a teacher. He attended Duke University and the University of Maryland. He received his master's degree in public administration from Shippensburg State University in Pennsylvania.

He was the son of the late Harry R. and Flora McPhail Logan of Asheville who were longtime members of Calvary Baptist Church. Surviving are his wife, Mary C. "Lib" Logan to whom he had been married for 44 years; two sons, James S. Logan and wife Melanie of Williamsburg, Va., Gary S. Logan and wife Teresa of Denver, Colo.; grandson, Andrew S. Logan of Denver; two nieces, Shelia and Tina Moore both of Atlanta, Ga.

Memorial services will be 10 a.m. Friday at Buncombe Street United Methodist Church in Greenville, S.C. Graveside services with military honors will be 2:30 p.m. Friday at Green Hills Cemetery.

Memorials may be made to Habitat for Humanity of Greenville County, P.O. Box 16714, Greenville, S.C., 29606.

Arrangements are under the direction of Anders-Rice Funeral Home.

James Logan

Jim Logan obituary

1 repin

Uploaded by user

Uploaded by user

Mary Louise Watkins Coleman (1872-1963)

Uploaded by user

Jim & Lib Logan, ca. 1985. James Manning Logan (1929-1997) & Mary Elizabeth Coleman Logan (1930-)

Uploaded by user

Sear

Pinterest

Pinterest is a
Organize and share things you love

Request an Invite »

About Login

Login

William Erwin Logan (1860-1916), ca. 1866, presumably with two of his sisters.

Uploaded by user

William Erwin Logan (1860-1916), ca. 1880

1 repin

Uploaded by user

Rose Addie Deaver (1865-1943), ca. 1882

Uploaded by user

John Franklin McPhail (1866-1952), ca. 1908

Uploaded by user

Jesse Felix Watkins (1840-1914), ca. 1900

Uploaded by user

The Logan Café on Tenth St., NW, Washington, D.C., right next to the Petersen home, where Lincoln died, and across from Ford's Theatre. It's still there, presently the Bistro D'oc. Here's the menu from April 1887.

Uploaded by user

This is the cover of the Logan Café (DC) April 1887 menu. The café and boarding house were located next to the Petersen home where Lincoln died, and directly across from Ford's Theatre.

Uploaded by user

Mary Eleanor Newton Watkins (1848-1913), ca. 1904

Uploaded by user

Mary Elizabeth "Lib" Coleman Logan (1930-), ca. 1952

Uploaded by user

James Manning Logan (1929-1997), ca. 1971, when he commanded the 1/78 Field Artillery, 2nd Armored Division, U.S. Army

Uploaded by user

James Manning Logan (1929-1997), ca. 1945/6

Uploaded by user

Martha Ann Wall (1900-1994), ca. 1916

Uploaded by user

Search

Alexander Lafayette "Fate" Logan (1834-1910) & Susannah Julia Ann Deaver (1836-1877), ca. 18

Uploaded by user

Pinterest

Pinterest is an online pinboard.

Organize and share things you love.

Request an Invite »

Login

ulia Ann Deaver Logan (1836-1877) with her son, William Erwin Logan (1860-1916), ca. 1862

Uploaded by user

Fetching pins...

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, TUESDAY, JANUARY 25, 1910.

W. E. LOGAN MAKES STATEMENT IN REPLY TO LIST OF QUERIES

Avoids Pertinent Questions and Covers the Ground With General Resume of Things That Are and Were, Says He May Talk in Court.

Replying to Mr. Frank Carter's list of queries published in Sunday's Citizen, Mr. W. E. Logan yesterday issued the following statement about his part in the Biltmore postoffice row:

"I notice Mr. Carter's communication in The Citizen of 23d inst., in which he says that he has addressed same to me in the shape of a letter. Mr. Carter was in such great haste to get the matter in the papers that he did not give the mails time to bring to me the original, all of which goes to prove that my statement was correct when I said that Mr. Carter seemed to be endeavoring to try his case through the public press.

"I notice that Mr. Carter says that such sums he has received and is to receive as attorney in the Biltmore case are to come from the 'paltry savings of the widow.' Now I understand those 'paltry savings' consist of, according to tax list and public records, a brick house situated in Biltmore for which $3,000 cash was recently offered, a cottage located in South Biltmore valued at $1,000, and a recent purchase in Asheville of a handsome property at $3,500; so we can see that Mr. Carter's client is abundantly able to employ learned counsel to aid her in her scramble for office. Notwithstanding all of this I notice in The Citizen of some days ago the statement was made as coming from Mrs. Reed through a friend that Mr. Carter was not being paid by Mrs. Reed and if it came to a show down as to these fees Mr. Logan would be sorry he spoke of the subject.' I submit in view of these conflicting accounts that it is hard to tell where the revenue in the case is coming from. I commend you, Mr. Carter, for your philanthropic acts in taking pity on and having compassion for the widow and orphan, partly because you have 'known her so long and your esteem for her womanly character and high moral worth;' but, by the way, there are many other deserving widows in our community a large number of whom are in far greater need than this widow, yet I do not recall any public notice wherein you in any way came to their relief, or tendered your valuable services on such generous terms.

"I note that you say that you 'have had no political help,' but on the contrary you have met with discouragement from a few ultra partisans in your own party who were loath to forego the great political advantage to accrue to the democratic cause in this case. It appears to me that you have done the 'ultra partisans' the greatest possible service by your voluminous interviews and writings for the public press. I must confess that you have conducted the case in a commendable manner and more to their interest than your client's, and except for a few slips which 'tender' give the trick away (which, by the way, was no fault of yours) you would have had a complete case for them. Therefore I think it in order for these 'ultra partisans' to pass the hat and take up a collection for you, provided your philanthropic spirit will allow you to take the filthy lucre.

"Now as to your questions, all of which I regard as irrelevant to your case, and only goes to show that my statement was correct when I said the whole scheme was one to destroy John Grant and not in the real interest of Mrs. Reed, I have this to say—I am sorry that I cannot accommodate you in your frantic efforts to continue to try your case through the public press, but if your case goes to a court of justice, as you have threatened you would do (provided you could not frighten John Grant and others into putting your client back in the Biltmore postoffice) then if I am called upon to answer any legitimate question bearing on your case I will cheerfully and truthfully do so.

"Referring to your threat to turn the gatling guns (?) on me if I failed to 'come across' in accordance with your living, direful results would follow, I have this to say: That my case will be passed upon by men of much larger information and far less prejudice than the people who would threaten others in order to carry their point.

"What I have written or spoken now or hereafter has not been done in the spirit of malice or with the thought or intention of injuring anyone, for all who have been spoken of or thought of, indeed, all who are connected with this case are my neighbors, and I am proud to say I consider many of them my friends, and I trust the pleasant relation will continue.

"The whole matter has appealed to me as a farce and such I am quite sure it will turn out to be.

"I have a clear conscience in all I have done or said in these matters, therefore I have no fear, notwithstanding gatling guns or what man can do unto me.

"W. E. LOGAN."

TUESDAY, JANUARY 18, 1910.

MR. LOGAN RETURNS WITH SMILING FACE

OTHERS SAY HE WILL SURELY BE NAMED AS MARSHAL

Major Rollins Appears a Sure Winner, —Attorney Carter Was to See President Yesterday.

Back from Washington with bright prospects that he will at an early date be named as United States marshal for the Western district of North Carolina is Mr. W. E. Logan, chairman of the republican cogressional committee, the man to whose skill and energy the election of Congressman Grant was largely due.

Mr. Logan came yesterday afternoon from the capital where he has been for two weeks. When seen he was smiling and very cheerful, and expressed himself as very hopeful that his nomination would be sent to the senate in a short time. The fact of his return at this time when a decision is pending is itself pretty good ground for the belief that Mr. Logan at least has a pretty good idea where he is "at," even if the same cannot be said of others from this vicinity now in Washington.

Mr. Logan had little to say and only smiled when asked about the Biltmore postoffice imbroglio and the contest for the Asheville office. He said that he had read the Asheville papers with decided interest lately and intimated that he had read some things which made him laugh a good deal. He said that it was impossible to say when any decision in respect to the marshalship would be announced because at the time a number of the departments were crowded with work and that this was the case with the attorney general's office, which would pass on the qualifications of applicants for the place of marshal. He was inclined to believe, however, that a decision would be made in a week, although he could by no means assert this.

Another gentleman recently back from Washington was much more positive in his declarations on the subject. He said that there was no manner of doubt that Mr. Logan would be named as marshal and that a practical decision to this effect had been made although there would be no formal appointment for several days. He also said that any possible doubt about the re-appointment of Postmaster Rollins had been dispelled by the multitude of highly commendatory letters from patrons of the office asking the appointment.

"I understand that no better recommendations have ever come into the postoffice department," said he.

It was learned that Mrs. Reed's attorney, Frank Carter, had an appointment to meet the president yesterday to present Mrs. Reed's case against Congressman Grant.

FOOD CROPS SHOULD BE GROWN

FARMERS CAN NOT AFFORD TO BUY SUCH PRODUCTS.

Over 2,000,000 Pounds of Hay Brought to Asheville Annually from Outside Markets—This Hay Should Be Grown Here.

What should we grow? In successful farming this is a very important question. One thing we should always be certain of, and that is to grow everything that can be grown on the farm that is needed at home for the support of the family or such stock that is kept on the farm. Every farmer should make this a positive rule.

After the home consumption is amply provided for the farmer should make a surplus of such crops as command a ready cash market, which will bring him the greatest returns considering cost of marketing, production, etc. I would not advise the growing of much corn other than an ample amount for home use. Corn is very exhaustive on the soil, beside the clean cultures necessary to the growing of this crop is more likely to cause your land to wash. Where it is possible you should sow your corn land in field peas when you cultivate the last time, thus returning a portion of the vegetable matter necessarily taken away by the clean culture of the corn crop. The peas will shade the ground, preventing the rapid evaporation of moisture, thereby helping the growing crop.

Wheat is the main grain crop that should be grown in this section. Our soil is well adapted to the growth of this cereal. Wheat is not so exhaustive on the soil as the corn crop and always brings a remunerative price. I am glad to know that our farmers are turning their attention to this important crop.

Orchard grass, timothy and clover are profitable grass crops in this section, and should be grown largely for home consumption as well as for market.

Clover is a great soil improver, and will grow on most of our soil to great advantage, as many of our farmers know.

There is imported into Buncombe county over two millions of hay annually. This should all be grown here and if our farmers were all doing their duty as farmers there would not be a pound of hay brought here from other markets.

Another crop that should never be overlooked is the field pea. This crop should be grown in abundance for the improvement of the soil and incidentally as a money crop. Since the pea has been recognized as one of the best soil improvers there has sprung up a very great demand for the seed, and of later years they have commanded remunerative prices.

The Asheville market imports large quantities of seeds. We should grow this crop. It is not only profitable, but, like the field pea, is very beneficial to the lands.

I need scarcely mention potatoes, as they are almost universally grown, and with the exception of a few seasons, we have had enough to supply the home markets.

In a later article I will try to show our farmers that the trucking business would be profitable to a certain extent in this section.

W. E. LOGAN.

Asheville Register June 9, 1901

DEAL FOR SCHOOL SITE NOT COMPLETE

Negotiations Under Way for Logan Property.

The purchase of the property of Mrs. W. E. Logan in West Asheville by the City of Asheville for school purposes is still hanging fire, although it was learned at the city hall yesterday negotiations are under way for a speedy settlement. It has been recommended by the advisory board that Mrs. Logan be offered $9,000 for the tract.

The property embraces some five acres and is located not far from where the Sulphur Springs road intersects with the Haywood road.

Asheville Citizen December, 1921

LOGAN PROPERTY IS PURCHASED BY CITY

A deal was consummated between Mayor Gallatin Roberts and Mrs. W. E. Logan yesterday whereby the City of Asheville will purchase the Logan property in West Asheville for a school site. The negotiations for the purchase of the site have been under way for several months, the school board and the commissioners having decided it was the most ideal site in the western section of Asheville for the building.

The purchase price is $9,000 and today the city will begin a survey of the property. W. L. Brooker, head of the public schools, believes the property affords an excellent site for the school and has voiced his approval. About five acres are embraced in the tract which is located not far from the point, where Haywood road intersects the Sulphur Springs road.

According to the plans, the structure will be erected on the elevation. Smith and Carrier have been selected as architects to prepare plans and specifications.

Asheville Citizen December 21, 1921

MRS. LOGAN HEADS PARENT-TEACHERS

Is Chosen President of West Asheville School Association—Talk Plans for Year.

Mrs. W. E. Logan was elected president of the Parent-Teacher Association of the West Asheville School, at the first meeting of the new school year, held Wednesday afternoon at the school.

Plans for the year's work, which will be broader in scope than that undertaken last year, were discussed, and definite plans will be evolved at the next meeting.

Other officers elected to serve the present term were Mrs. W. C. Brownson vice-president; Mrs. W. B. Anderson, secretary; and Mrs. J. R. Law treasurer.

Asheville Citizen September 23, 1922

CIVIC GROUP TO MEET WEDNESDAY

Mrs. Hauk To Honor The Community Club At Home Meeting

A general meeting of the officers and members of the West Asheville Community Club will be held at the home of Mrs. C. C. Hauk, 165 Vermont avenue, Wednesday night at 8 o'clock, it has been announced. Mrs. C. Whit Gaskins, president, will preside with the other new officers of the club, and a general business and social program has been arranged.

Mrs. W. E. Logan, delegate of the club to the North Carolina Federated Clubs convention which adjourned at Charlotte Friday, will give a report of the meeting, and it is probable that the "Clean-Up Campaign" and other matters of interest to the club will be discussed.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Hauk was the model large home in the recent Better Homes Week exhibit sponsored by the Community Club under the supervision of Mrs. Gaskins, Mrs. R. H. Officer, and others.

Asheville Citizen May 5, 1929

WEST ASHEVILLE GROUP TO GATHER

Community Club Plans General Program For Tonight

The West Asheville Community club will meet at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carl C. Hauk, 185 Vermont avenue, tonight at 8 o'clock, for a general business and social program. Mrs. C. Whit Gaskins, the president, will preside with the other new members of the club who were elected for the fiscal year at the last meeting.

Mrs. W. E. Logan, delegate from the club to the state convention of the North Carolina Federated Clubs held in Charlotte last week, will report the convention to the meeting and the program includes other features of community interest.

It is probable that the "Clean-up" campaign being sponsored by the club in addition to other city groups, will be given an important place on the program. The campaign was launched in West Asheville Monday morning and due to much successful preliminary work on the part of the club is community-wide in scope. Previously many lawns, gardens, yards, and homes had been beautified and improved through the club's activities and the city officials have been pledged the full co-operation of the community civic organizations.

Asheville Citizen May 8, 1929

BIBLE TEACHER FOR 50 YEARS

Mrs. Logan Estimates 200,000 Have Been In Her Classes

For the last 50 years Mrs. W. E. Logan, of West Asheville, has been teaching Bible classes.

Today she is teaching children of several former pupils who were young men when she was a teacher at the First and West End Baptist churches.

Members of the Berean Bible class of Calvary Baptist church, in West Asheville, recently presented Mrs. Logan with a silver loving cup in appreciation for her work as teacher during the past half century. She now teaches this class. More than 150 persons belong to this class and the average weekly attendance is more than 80.

Mrs. Logan joined the First Baptist church when 14 years old. She was baptized by the Rev. A. C. Dixon. At this church she taught her first Bible class. Later she attended school in Washington, D. C., and while there taught in the Calvary Sunday school.

Returning to Asheville Mrs. Logan taught in the West End Sunday school for 13 years. During this time she spent five winters in Florida and taught a Bible class at Citrus, Fla. When the Calvary Baptist Sunday school in West Asheville was organized in 1906 Mrs. Logan started teaching there. She has been teaching the Berean class since 1922.

Mrs. Logan estimates she has taught more than 200,000 persons during her 50 years as teacher. Mrs. Logan takes an active interest in West Asheville church and civic affairs and was on the city school board several years.

The Berean class was organized in May 1921 and since that time has grown to where it is now one of the largest Bible classes in the city. C. B. Anderson is president; C. E. Whitaker, vice president; Clarence Patterson, second vice president; R. E. Currence, third vice president; J. A. Bocook, secretary; A. E. Waters, treasurer; W. M. Dalton, reporter; Miss Eleanor Gaspline, pianist; and O. C. Collins, violinist.

The silver cup was awarded Mrs. Logan at a social given by the class at Mr. Logan's home, 124 Logan avenue.

Taught 200,000

MRS. W. E. LOGAN

Asheville Citizen March 6, 1932

Two Well-Known W. A. Mothers

West Asheville News
Date not known

Mrs. George H. Starnes, Sr.

Mrs. W. E. Logan

Many are the grand, sweet mothers in Buncombe County. Elsewhere in this issue is a resume of the lives of several well-known mothers of the county. It is to all mothers of Asheville and Buncombe county that this week's issue of The News is dedicated.

Mrs. W. E. Logan

Fifty years of teaching the Bible, the past ten years being spent teaching one class; such is the record of Mrs. Logan.

Mrs. Logan was Rose Addie Deaver before her marriage in 1885 to W. E. Logan, who has been dead since 1916.

We found Mrs. Logan preparing to attend a meeting of the Missionary Society of Calvary Baptist Church, thinking of the religious affairs of this life. Such devotion would naturally reflect in the lives of her children.

Mrs. Annie L. Himes, her eldest daughter, is organist at Calvary Church and is also superintendent of the primary department of that Sunday School.

Mrs. Myrtle V. Lawrence, a second daughter, is a teacher in the Sunday School.

Carl and Harry Logan are owners of Logan Bros. Motor Company doing business in West Asheville.

Miss Grace Logan, the third daughter, teaches at Aycock School and is in charge of the Training Department of Calvary Church.

Miss Irene Logan teaches school at Eugene Rankin and is superintendent of the Junior department at Calvary Sunday School.

Miss Mary Logan is Supervisor of schools of Avery County with headquarters at Newland, N. C.

William Logan, the third son, is training at an art school in Washington, D. C., he being the only member of the family that has not yet finished his education.

A most remarkable instance of a mother's influence, and a wonderful instance of a mother's enjoyment of her splendid family.

Mrs. Logan makes her home at 124 Logan Avenue, West Asheville.

Mrs. George H. Starnes

Mrs. George Starnes was born at Thorpe, England, emigrated to America at the age of sixteen, and was married on June 1, 1893.

Besides ordinary church work, Mrs. Starnes is becoming interested in poetry and writes some of her own occasionally. Last Sunday when the congregation of Calvary Baptist Church wished to observe the fourteenth anniversary of the pastorate of Mr. Grice at their church, Mrs. Starnes read one of her poems appropriate to the occasion. The poem appears elsewhere in this paper.

Mrs. Starnes makes her home with Bert Starnes, her son, at 851 Haywood Road, West Asheville.

Besides Bert Starnes, who is manager of the Mutual Coal Company, and a prominent club man and civic worker in West Asheville, Mrs. Starnes is the beloved mother of the following:

Miss Mabel Starnes, State B. Y. P. U. worker with headquarters at Raleigh, N. C. ;George W. Starnes, and Charlie Starnes, of the Southeastern Erpress Company; Nane Starnes, theological student at Southwestern Seminary, Dallas, Texas, who expects to become a Baptist minister soon; Glenn Starnes, of the National Cleaners.

"A bustling, active mother of a large, bustling family; a mother whose very mention causes tenderness to flood the faces of her sons, a mother truly."

"A bustling, active mother of a large, bustling family; a mother whose very mention causes tenderness to flood the faces of her sons, a mother truly."

HELP LAUNCH DRIVE—Some of the city and community leaders who helped launch West Asheville's second annual beautification campaign are shown above at Rhododendron gardens clubhouse yesterday afternoon. Left to right they are: City Manager Pat M. Burdette, W. E. Ryon, president of the West Asheville (men's) club; Vice-Mayor Lyons Lee, Mrs. W. K. Dalton, president of the West Asheville Community (women's) club and chairman of the inter-club committee in charge of the campaign; Mrs. Harold Glenn, president of the Junior Rhododendron club; and O. V. Himes, a member of the campaign committee for the men's club.

Launch West Asheville Beautification Contest

West Asheville's second annual beautification campaign was launched at a meeting at Rhododendron gardens yesterday afternoon with approximately 50 persons in attendance.

Persons present included representatives of the three civic clubs in that section—the West Asheville Community (women's) club, the Junior Rhododendron club and the West Asheville (men's) club—as well as members of the various garden clubs.

Among those making short talks were Mrs. W. E. Logan, Mrs. C. J. Ebbs, Mrs. Harold Glenn, president of the Junior Rhododendron club; W. E. Ryon, president of the men's club; O. V. Himes, of the men's club Vice-Mayor Lyons Lee, and City Manager Pat M. Burdette. Others also made brief remarks.

The campaign is to promote and encourage interest in the improvement and beautification of West Asheville.

Mrs. Logan expressed thanks to members of the garden clubs and the people of West Asheville generally for co-operating in last year's campaign, and to city officials for their assistance.

Mrs. Ebbs discussed improvement of Haywood road. She pointed out that it is one of the clubs' main projects and one that interests all. Groups join to beautify their own streets, she said, but Haywood road belongs improvement of the section, and offered the city's co-operation in this year's undertaking.

Mrs. W. K. Dalton, president of the West Asheville Community club and chairman of the inter-club committee in charge of the campaign, presided.

Entry blanks for those wishing to take part in a contest sponsored by the clubs in connection with the campaign are now ready for distribution, Mrs. Dalton said.

As a climax to the campaign a flower show will be held in the fall at which time prizes will be awarded in the contest.

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY, MARCH 23, 1941

COLLECTS CARDS—Mrs. W. E. Logan, well known church worker of West Asheville, makes a hobby of collecting post cards. She is shown here as she sorts through her cards which come from many lands.

West Asheville Woman Collector Of Post Cards

By ELEANOR B. CHURCH

"Send me cards, not letters," Mrs. W. E. Logan told her family as they set off for the World's Fair in New York city last summer.

"The reason I told them this," she said to me as I sat in her cheery living room before an open fire in her home in West Asheville, talking to her about her post card collection, "was because I wanted to have some post cards for my slowly increasing collection. I always tell them this whenever they go off on trips. And that's the way I've gotten most of my cards.

"I just began my collection because I wanted to save cards. And now its become a very useful possession since I can use it in my Sunday school teaching. And my grown-up daughters use the post cards too over and over in their teaching projects." Her daughter, Miss Irene Logan, teaches first grade in the Eugene Rankin school and another daughter, Miss Grace Logan, teaches primary children in the Hycock school.

Mrs. Logan's collection covers a wide range of subjects and places from Maine to Key West and from several continents in both hemispheres. Missionary friends in the East have sent her mementoes. Her son Carl who was in the last World war sent her many cards from Luxembourg where he was stationed for several weeks. The views of the destruction from World war I resemble current "March of Time" shorts except for the antiquated war uniforms which strange as it may seem look decidedly dated. One wouldn't believe styles in uniforms had changed to such an extent.

The collection consists of nearly a thousand views—both colored and otherwise. There are a host of views of Baptist churches, old and new, in North and South Carolina as a result of Mrs. Logan's interest in church work—she completed 60 years of Sunday school teaching a year ago.

Washington, in 1905 was a curious sight with its streets jammed with horse drawn vehicles. Asheville's old Battery Park hotel was a sight to behold even as recently as 1921 when its old structure was still in existence in the quaint Victorian gingerbread style.

Most of America's world fairs are represented too: St. Louis, the two Chicago fairs and the recent New York one. Views of North Carolina are numerous: mountains and landscapes, waterfalls and lowlands, churches, colleges and hotels.

Palaces, churches, cathedrals, Jewish synagogues, Chinese temples, Baptist meeting houses, cherry blossoms and mountain laurel, rivers and winding roads, the Liberty Bell, Atlantic City in 1911, New York's Battery in 1910, the Washington Monument and the Eiffel tower, the Bok tower and much more of scenic Florida—all these and many more comprise this collection.

Asheville Citizen March 23, 1941

Aycock Past-Presidents Observe 'Founder's Day'

Twenty-three years ago, when Aycock school parent-teacher association was organized, its presidents wore dresses like those worn by past-presidents and officers attending the "Founder' Day" program at the school yesterday. Shown in the picture are, first row, left to right: Mrs. C. H. Ford, secretary; Mrs. E. L. Winslow, first vice-president; Mrs. G. Gibbs, president of the Aycock P. T. A. in 1939-1940; Mrs. T. J. Zimmerman, this year's president; back row, left to right, Mrs. Albert Leath, president in 1937 and 1939; Mrs. W. E. Logan, first president of the association in 1923, and Mrs. H. B. Carter, president of the association from 1935 to 1937. Mrs. Henry Atkins, another past president who attended the meeting yesterday, was not present when the picture was made.

Asheville Times February 18, 1942

Oct. 5, 1943

MRS. W. E. LOGAN

Oct. 5-1943

DEATH CLAIMS MRS. LOGAN IN HOSPITAL HERE

Leading Citizen Had Been Bible School Teacher For Half Century.

Mrs. W. E. Logan, 78, for more than half a century a leading citizen of Asheville and vicinity, died about noon today in an Asheville hospital after a brief illness.

Active in all kinds of progressive community programs, Mrs. Logan probably was best known for her much work for the schools and churches. She figured prominently in the program of the Calvary Baptist church in West Asheville during her life and served as a Bible class teacher for 60 years.

Active in P. T. A.

For many years, Mrs. Logan took an active part in parent-teacher programs of the city schools, contributing her services long after her own children had completed their courses of studies. Several of her children are now teachers in Asheville's city schools which she helped to develop as a member of the city school board some years ago.

She was a trustee of Mars Hill college and much of her interest centered around this work. She helped in a drive for funds for the hospital on the college campus in recent years.

A former member of the school board, Mrs. Logan also has served faithfully on the executive committee for Bible in the Public Schools for a number of years. She has served also as president of the parent-teacher associations of the Aycock elementary and Hall Fletcher junior high schools.

Charter Club Member

Mrs. Logan was a charter member of the West Asheville Community club and was associated with the West Asheville Garden club.

Much of her energy was devoted also to work with the Women's Christian Temperance union.

Funeral arrangements, incomplete, are under the direction of Lewis Funeral home.

Surviving are five daughters, Mrs. O. V. Himes, Mrs. J. L. Lawrence, Miss Grace Logan, Miss Irene Logan and Miss Mary Logan; three sons, Carl M. Logan, Harry R. Logan and William B. Logan, all of Asheville; and four grandchildren.

FUNERAL RITES FOR MRS. LOGAN WILL BE AT CALVARY CHURCH

Oct. 5 1943

Last rites for Mrs. W. E. Logan, 78, of 124 Logan avenue, who died yesterday in an Asheville hospital after a brief illness, will be conducted tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at Calvary Baptist church. The Rev. J. B. Grice, pastor, and Dr. R. L. Moore, president emeritus of Mars Hill college, will officiate.

The body will lie in state at the church from 2:30 to 3 o'clock. Burial will be in Green Hills cemetery.

Active pallbearers will be Dr. Hoyt Blackwell, L. N. Connor, J. E. Divelbiss, Jr., George Pennell, George H. Starnes and Don C. Young.

The guard of honor will be: J. Hamp Brown, J. W. Case, C. V. Chandler, R. E. Currence, Fred C. Ingle, Ellis C. Jones, T. Melvin Meadows, Allen Mitchell, G. G. Morgan, L. T. New, Carter Parham and Harry W. Wilson.

The Woman's Missionary society and the Sodalitan class of the church will be in charge of the flowers.

Music for the service will be by the full vested choir of Calvary Baptist church with Mrs. C. I. Poore, church organist, playing the organ and Mrs. Glenn Starnes, musical director, conducting.

For more than half a century a leading citizen of Asheville and vicinity, Mrs. Logan was probably best known for her work for the schools and churches. She was an active church worker at Calvary Baptist church, West Asheville, serving as Bible class teacher for 60 years. At the time of her death she was teacher of the Sodalitan class at the church. A member of the Women's Missionary society, she had served as president and in other capacities.

Mrs. Logan was born July 4, 1865, near Mars Hill. She was a trustee of Mars Hill college and much of her interest centered around this work. She helped in a drive for funds for the hospital on the college campus in recent years.

A former member of the school board, Mrs. Logan also served faithfully on the executive committee for Bible in the Public Schools for a number of years. For many years she took an active part in parent-teacher programs of the city schools, contributing her services long after her own children had completed their courses of study. Several of her children are teachers in Asheville's city schools. She served as president of the parent-teacher associations of the Aycock elementary school and Hall Fletcher junior high school.

Mrs. Logan was a charter member of the West Asheville Community club and was associated with the West Asheville Garden club. Much of her energy was devoted also to work with the Women's Christian Temperance union.

Mrs. Logan is survived by five daughters, Mrs. O. V. Himes, Mrs. J. L. Lawrence, Miss Grace Logan, Miss Irene Logan, and Miss Mary Logan; three sons, Carl M. Logan, William B. Logan and Harry R. Logan, all of Asheville; a cousin, Miss Hattie D. Rollins, who has made her home with Mrs. Logan for more than 20 years, and four grandchildren.

Also surviving are three nieces and nephews, as follows: Mrs. P. P. McCain of Sanatorium, N. C., Lt. Col. Reuben MacBrayer, in overseas service, and Lewis B. MacBrayer of St. Louis, Mo.

Lewis Funeral home is in charge of arrangements.

Asheville Citizen October 5, 1943

WEST ASHEVILLE

"DEDICATED TO A STRONGER COMMUNITY SPIRIT"

ASHEVILLE, N. C. FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1943

MRS. W. E. LOGAN

MRS. W. E. LOGAN FUNERAL LAST SUN.

Funeral services for Mrs. W. E. Logan, 78, of 124 Logan avenue, who died Friday in an Asheville hospital after a brief illness, were conducted Sunday at Calvary Baptist church. The Rev. J. B. Grice, pastor, and Dr. R. L. Moore, president-emeritus of Mars Hill college, officiated.

Active pallbearers were Dr. Hoyt Blackwell, L. N. Connor, J. E. Divelbiss, Jr., George Pennell, George H. Starnes and Don C. Young.

The guard of honor was made up of J. Hamp Brown, J. W. Case, C. V. Chandler, R. E. Currence, Fred C. Ingle, Ellis C. Jones, T. Melvin Meadows, Allen Mitchell, G. G. Morgan, L. T. New, Carter Parham and Harry W. Wilson.

The Woman's Missionary society and the Sodalitan class of the church were in charge of flowers. Music was furnished by the choir of the church.

For more than half a century, Mrs. Logan had been prominent in the work of the community.

She is survived by five daughters, Mrs. O. V. Himes, Mrs. J. L. Lawrence, Miss Grace Logan, Miss Irene Logan and Miss Mary Logan; three sons, Carl M. Logan, William B. Logan and Harry R. Logan, all of Asheville; a cousin Miss Hattie D. Rollins, who has made her home with Mrs. Logan for more than 20 years; four grandchildren; one niece, Mrs. P. P. McCain, Sanatorium, and two nephews, Lt. Col. Reuben McBrayer in overseas service and Lewis B. MacBrayer, St. Louis, Mo.

Three business cards from the family, 1920s and 1930s

Pinned via web

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1870 ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 3, 1939

Education In Toys To Be Feature Of Children's Week

THE CHARACTERISTICS AND INTERESTS OF THE YOUNG CHILD are being featured in the activities of Children's Week December 2-9. Members of the Asheville Association for Childhood Education assisted by the Parent-Teacher association, the Asheville Junior League and the American Association of University Women are giving a series of lectures, radio broadcasts, a play and toy exhibits this week to instruct parents in constructive entertainment. (1) Children in The Child Garden nursery school are shown with Miss Irene Logan, former president of the A. C. E. and secretary of the state organization. They are, left to Dorothy Ann Logan, Teddy Jackson, Miss Logan, Britt and Joy Ann Warren. They are using toys appro for children of approximately four years.

NCPEDIA

Biography & People | Business & Economy | Culture | Education | Geography & Environment | Government & Politics | History

SEARCH NCPEDIA SEARCH

Browse NCpedia | Things to do

Pr SHARE (http://www.addthis.com/bookmark.php?v=250&pubid=ra-4d7a821033f39efb) inter
-friendly version (http://ncpedia.org/print/6377) PDF version (http://ncpedia.org/printpdf/6377)

No votes yet

LYMAN, THEODORE BENEDICT

by Grady L. E. Carroll, 1991

27 NOV. 1815–13 DEC. 1893

tps://archive.org/stream/cu31924006802015#page/n213 mode/2up/search/lyman)Theodore Benedict Lyman, Episcopal (/religion/episcopal-church)bishop of North Carolina, was born at Brighton, Mass., the son of Asa Lyman (1777–1836), Congregational clergyman, educator, and bookseller, and Mary Benedict Lyman; both were of distinguished New England families. His brother was a priest in the Roman Catholic church. After graduation in 1837 from Hamilton College (http://www.hamilton.edu/index.cfm) in New York, Lyman entered the General Theological Seminary in New York City to prepare for the ministry. He was graduated in 1840, and on 20 September of that year, at Christ Church, Baltimore, he was ordained a deacon by the Right Reverend William Rollinson Whittingham (http://www2.lib.unc.edu/mss/inv/w/Whittingham,William_Rollinson.html). On 19 Dec. 1841 he was ordained to the priesthood by Bishop Whittingham.

From 1841 to 1850 Lyman was rector at St. John's Church in Hagerstown, Md., where he assisted in founding the College of St. James. From 1850 to 1860 he was rector at Trinity Church in Pittsburgh, Pa. For a decade he and his family lived in Europe, ere he established a church outside the Vatican; he traveled extensively in Europe and the Orient. In 1870 he accepted a call, arranged in part by tourists in Rome, to the rectorship of Trinity Church in San Francisco.

Portrait of Theodore Benedict Lyman, Fourth Bishop of North Carolina. From Marshall De Lancey Haywood's Lives of the Bishops of North Carolina, p. 207, published 1910 by Alfred Williams & Company, Raleigh, North Carolina. Presented on Archive.org.

On 30 May 1873 at the diocesan convention in Fayetteville, N.C., Lyman was elected assistant bishop of the Diocese of North Carolina; on 11 Dec. 1873 consecration services were held at Christ Church (/christ-episcopal-church), Raleigh, the first such ceremony in the diocese. Following the selection of Raleigh as his official residence, he built a house at North and Wilmington streets, where he housed his collection of art works. His summer home, Buena Vista, was in Hillsborough. The family became members of the Church of the Good Shepherd (http://www.cgs-raleigh.org/history) on Hillsborough Street, Raleigh, which had been founded in 1874 and to which he left a legacy in his will for the construction of a new sanctuary. At the death of Bishop Thomas Atkinson (/biography/atkinson-thomas) on 4 Jan. 1881, Lyman succeeded to the bishopric of North Carolina (fourth of North Carolina and one hundred and third in succession of the American episcopacy). In 1883 the Diocese of East Carolina was formed from the Diocese of North Carolina, with Alfred Augustin Watson, whom Lyman had consecrated, elected first bishop.

Lyman attended several Lambeth conferences in England and traveled in Europe. In 1886 he was selected as successor to the Right Reverend Abram Newkirk Little-john to supervise American Episcopal churches on the Continent. He was the recipient of honorary degrees from Hamilton College (D.C.L.), the College of Saint James (D.D.), and The University of North Carolina (/university-north-carolina-chapel-hi) (LL.D.).

Bishop Lyman was married twice. On 24 June 1845 he married Anna Margaret Albert, and they had six children: Albert Benedict, M.D., Frances Augusta, William Whittingham, Theodore Benedict, Augustus Julian, and Anna Cornelia Roma. Anna Lyman died on 13 Apr. 1889. On 6 Feb. 1893 he married Susan Boone Robertson. After his death at age seventy-eight, he was interred in Oakwood Cemetery (/oakwood-cemetery), Raleigh; in 1914 he was reinterred in the sanctuary of the Church of the Good Shepherd, and a stone marks the location. On display in the Parish House of Christ Church, Raleigh, are portraits of all the Episcopal bishops of North Carolina. Lyman was succeeded by Joseph Blount Cheshire (/biography/cheshire-joseph-blount-jr) (1850–1932), whom he consecrated.

References:

Durham Morning Herald, 3 July 1927.

Marshall De Lancey Haywood, Lives of the Bishops of North Carolina (1910). (https://archive.org/details/cu31924006802015)

William Whittingham Lyman (St. Helena, Calif.), personal contact.

Raleigh Sesquicentennial Commission, Raleigh: Capital of North Carolina (1942).

Raleigh Times, 3 Mar. 1973.

LaRene R. Ward, Therefore with Angels and Archangels: The Church of the Good Shepherd, 1874–1974 (1974).

Image Credits:

Haywood, Marshall De Lancey. Lives of the bishops of North Carolina from the establishment of the episcopate in that state down to the division of the diocese. Raleigh, N.C.: Alfred Williams & Company. 1910.
207. https://archive.org/details/cu31924006802015 (https://archive.org/details/cu31924006802015) (accessed June 30, 2014).

Subjects:

Tahkeeostee Farm and Bishop Theodore Benedict Lyman

Bishop Theodore B. Lyman was born in Brighton, Massachusetts on November 27, 1815, the son of Asa Lyman, a Congregational minister, and of Mary Benedict, his wife.

In 1837 Theodore Lyman graduated from Hamilton College in Clinton, NY; he then entered the General Theological Seminary, from which he graduated in 1840. He was ordained in Baltimore, Maryland on September 20, 1840 and elevated to the priesthood in Hagerstown, Maryland, on December 19,1841. On June 24, 1845, Lyman married Miss Anna Margaret Albert. In 1850 he became rector of Trinity Church in Pittsburg, PA.

In May 1860, following his wife's inheritance of a large sum on the death of her father, Lyman and his family (which now included four sons and one daughter) sailed for Europe, where they would remain for the ensuing ten years. During his time abroad, Lyman founded the Episcopal Church of St. Paul in Rome. The family traveled extensively, journeying to Sardinia, Egypt, Mt. Sinai, Jerusalem, Constantinople, and Russia, among other locales.

Upon his return to the United States in the summer of 1870, Lyman accepted the rectorship of the important Trinity Church in San Francisco. On May 30, 1873, the Convention of the (Episcopal)Diocese of North Carolina elected Lyman Assistant Bishop of the diocese. In 1881, Lyman became Bishop Of North Carolina. In 1883 the Diocese of East Carolina, covering the eastern third of the state, was created; Lyman remained Bishop of central and western North Carolina.

Throughout his service in North Carolina, Lyman traveled the diocese extensively, visiting most parishes at least once a year. Lyman's colleague, Rev. Joseph Blount Cheshire, who succeeded Lyman as Bishop of North Carolina, described Lyman's enthusiasm for Western North Carolina: "He was keenly alive to the natural beauties of the this part of the State; its invigorating atmosphere seemed like a stimulating cordial to his spirits; its forest-clad mountains had an irresistible fascination for him; he felt that he should like to settle down to enjoy the charm of each peaceful valley in a permanent home among them." (In The Carolina Churchman, February, 1911)

In September of 1882, Bishop Lyman, together with W. R. Cox and R.H. Battle, Jr. purchased an acre of land on the West Bank of the French Broad River from Ephraim Clayton, who sold it to them for $1.00, "to encourage religion, morality, and education"; the deed reserves to Clayton and his heirs the right to use "the road to the Chapel located on said piece of land". The property is described as lying north of Smith Mill Creek, between the Paint Rock and Duck Town branches of the WNC RR.

The 1883-84 "City Directory and Gazeteer" for Asheville (Davison) lists "St. Andrew's Episcopal Chapel" at "Silver Springs". Silver Springs was on the west bank of the French Broad, adjacent to Smith's Bridge. Theodore Lyman is listed both as a resident of Asheville, on Haywood St., and as an "Asheville Farmer" with 170 acres in the 1883-84 city directory. An article in the Buffalo Courier January 16, 1890, about the Biltmore Estate, contains this paragraph: "Further up the river (from the estate) is Mr. Theodore B. Lyman's park, called Tahkeeostee Farm. Mr. Lyman's picturesque cottage lies nestled in a hollow on the sunny side of the hill, forming a striking contrast to the grandeur of its stately neighbor, which is to crown the crest of the mountain whose base rests upon the opposite shore."

According to NCSU's "Biographical Dictionary of North Carolina Architects and Builders", architects Frank Niernsee and A. Gamewell Lamotte designed a "Swiss Chalet and Chapel" for Theodore B. Lyman. This was reported in the Manufacturers' Record of March 3, 1893, and in The Churchman, April 22, 1893. The 1896-97 city directory lists him as living in West Asheville. That directory would have been prepared in 1895, approximately a year after Lyman's death in December of 1893.

The Buffalo Courier Jan. 16, 1890 Pg. 4

A VANDERBILT FAD

The Youngest Brother Building a Palace in the Wilderness

Creating a Baronial Estate in the Mountains of North Carolina – Artificial Lakes – Artificial Forests – Great Grandeur and Enormous Expense

It was with a view of ascertaining what is really being done that the correspondent galloped down Main Street to the Asheville Junction, two miles south of the city. Here the Western North Carolina Railroad crosses the Swannanoa, which runs in a westerly direction and empties into the French Broad. In the vast triangle formed by the intersection of these rivers lies the 6,000 acres which form this Vanderbilt property.

Further up the river is Mr. Theodore B. Lyman's park, called Tahkeeostee Farm. Mr. Lyman's picturesque cottage lies nestled in a hollow on the sunny side of the hill, forming a striking contrast to the grandeur of its sisterly neighbor, which is to crown the crest of the mountain whose base rests upon the opposite shore.

The main entrance of the Vanderbilt property is exactly at the ford across the Swannanoa, where Vanderbilt intends to build an iron bridge, thus giving him a more direct communication with the city. From this point the main driveway will circle in and out among the hills for the distance of four miles, until by a series of gradual ascents the summit of the mountain is reached.

THE BUFFALO COURIER: THURSDAY, JANUARY 16, 1890.

A VANDERBILT FAD.

The Youngest Brother Building a Palace in a Wilderness.

Creating a Baronial Estate in the Mountains of North Carolina—Artificial Lakes—Artificial Forests—Great Grandeur and Enormous Expense.

Asheville (N. C.) Cor. New York World.

It was with a view of ascertaining what was really being done that the correspondent galloped down Main Street to the Asheville Junction, two miles south of the city. Here the Western North Carolina Railroad crosses the Swannanoa, which runs in a westerly direction and empties into the French Broad. In the vast triangle formed by the intersection of these rivers lies the 6,000 acres which form the Vanderbilt property.

Further up the river is Mr. Theodore B. Lyman's park, called Tahkeeostee Farm. Mr. Lyman's picturesque cottage lies nestled in a hollow on the sunny side of the hill, forming a striking contrast to the grandeur of its stately neighbor, which is to crown the crest of the mountain whose base rests upon the opposite shore.

The main entrance of the Vanderbilt property is exactly at the ford across the Swannanoa, where Vanderbilt intends to build an iron bridge, thus giving him a more direct communication with the city. From this point the main driveway will circle in and out among the hills for the distance of four miles, until by a series of gradual ascents the summit of the mountain is reached.

From "The Churchman", April 22, 1893 p. 569 (Google Books)

"The services of Messrs. Niernesee & LaMotte, Columbia, SC, architects, have been engaged by the Rt. Rev. Theo. B. Lyman, Bishop of North Carolina, to design and furnish drawings for a Swiss chalet to be erected in the mountains of western North Carolina. The same firm is also designing a handsome chapel for the same place."

Portrait of Theodore Benedict Lyman, Fourth Bishop of North Carolina. From Marshall De Lancey Haywood's Lives of the Bishops of North Carolina, p. 207, published 1910 by Alfred Williams & Company, Raleigh, North Carolina. Presented on Archive.org.

ASHEVILLE FROM TAHEETOSHEE FARM.

Description of Asheville and West Asheville, which was a separate town, in County Homes, a magazine published in Asheville by the Tomlinson brothers, in h
December 1890 issue.

State of North Carolina
Buncombe County

This indenture made on the 21st day of September 1882 between Ephraim Clayton of said county and state of the one Part and T. B. Lyman, W.R. Cox, and R.H. Battle Jr., Trustees of the Diocese of the Episcopal Church of North Carolina of the other Part, witnesseth: that for and in consideration of the sum of one dollar in hand paid and to encourage religion, morality, and education, the said Ephraim Clayton has given, granted, bargained and sold and by these presents doth give, grant, bargain, and sell unto the said T. B. Lyman, W.R. Cox, and R. H. Battle Jr., Trustees aforesaid and their successors in office, a certain tract or parcel of land lying and being in the state and county aforesaid on the west side of the French Broad River below Silver Spring and just north of Smith Mill Creek and between the Paint Rock and Duck Town branch of the Western North Carolina RR –

Beginning at a stake on the Leicester Road where the Paint Creek branch of the WNCRR crosses said road and runs West 22 poles to a stake, then north 34 degrees East 90 to a -? Pine – thence N 82 degrees East -?- poles to an oak stump, thence South 27 degrees E 10 poles and 10 -?- along said Paint Rock Branch to the beginning corner containing one acre more or less –

To have and to hold together with all and singular the privileges and appurtenances thereto belonging or in any wise appertaining to the said T.B. Lyman, W.R. Cox, and R.H. Battle Jr., Trustees of the Diocese of the Episcopal Church of North Carolina as aforesaid and their successors in office in fee simple, absolutely and forever free and discharged of and all encumbrances whatever, in trust for the use and benefit of the said diocese of the Episcopal Church of NC, provided only that the said Ephraim Clayton, his heirs and assigns, shall have the free use of the road to the Chapel located on said piece of land hereby conveyed, and right of way across the same by said road as long as said road shall be a private way.

In testimony whereof the said Party of the first part now consents to set his hand and seal this day,

THIS INDENTURE, MADE THIS THE 28TH DAY OF February A.D. 1907 by and between Albert L. Cox and Francis A. Cox of the County of Edgecombe and state of North Carolina Parties of the first part, and Mrs. Rose A. Logan, wife of W.E. Logan of the County of Buncombe and state of North Carolina, Party of the second part witnesseth:

That the said parties of the first part, for and in consideration of the sum of Two Thousand Three hundred and twelve and 25/100's Dollars to them in hand paid by the party of the second part, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged, have given, granted, bargained, sold, conveyed and confirmed, and by these presents do give, grant, bargain, sell, convey, and confirm unto the said party of the second part, her heirs and assigns forever . . . . . .
a certain piece, parcel, or lot of land, situate, lying and being in the County of Buncombe and State of North Carolina in West Asheville adjoining the lands of T.B. Lyman Brown and Logan Mrs. Sarah A. Deaver and others and bounded and more particularly described as follows:

Beginning on a stake 84.5 ft. N. 86 degrees 15' from the old Black Oak now from the NE corner of the Lyman's Tract and the SE corner of the J L Henry "Silver Springs" tract
From Brown and Logan---thence with this linen 86 degrees15' 1287 ft crossing a branch to the eastern margin of the Haywood Road; -----with said margin of said Road S 27 degrees 30"W 2815 ft to a stake N 18 degrees 30' & 15 ft from the NW corner of Mrs. S.D. Peterson's ? store house, thence with her line and Mrs. Sarah Deaver's line S 60 degrees 30'& recrossing the branch 182 ft to a small double poplar, the northern one forked, thence with Mrs. Sarah Deaver's line N 74 degrees & 330 ft to a stake on top of the ridge, thence with her line and line of Mrs. Rose A. Logan S 33 degrees 30' & 6006 ft to a stake, thence with the Deaver line N 47 degrees & 403 ft to a Spanish Oak stump and stake, thence with the Deaver line S 29 degrees & 198 ft to a stake T.B. Lyman's corner thence with his line N 52 degrees & 214.5 ft to stake 10 feet North of a branch, thence N 20 degrees & 174.2 feet recrossing the branch to the beginning containing 12.322 acres exclusive of the Road to Tahkeeostee Farm and valued at one hundred and eighty seven dollars and fifty cents per acre making the consideration Two thousand and three hundred and twelve dollars and twenty-five cents.
This tract of land is a portion or part of the land property allotted to the said Albert L. Cox and Francis A. Cox by special proceedings recorded in minute book of special proceedings No. 5 at page 351 etsey. of the Superior Court in the county of Buncombe and State of North Carolina.

Orville Duncan MacAlpine, pediatrician (1949)

"Mac" MacAlpine was born and raised on a Michigan farm. His premedical education was at Columbia Junior College, Tacoma Park, Maryland. He obtained his medical degree in 1940 from the College of Medical Evangelists, now Loma Linda Medical School, in California.

After a year of internship in Michigan at Saginaw Hospital, MacAlpine entered the military. He served as an assistant regimental surgeon with the 70th Infantry Division with thirteen months in the European Theater. He was on duty at the 1st General Hospital in Paris on June 6, 1945—VE Day—and August 14, 1945—VJ Day. While in Germany, he visited Hitler's Berlin bunker and bombed-out headquarters. MacAlpine appropriated a sliver of wood from the remains of Der Führer's desk—now a family treasure. He later attended the trials of the Nazi war leaders in Nuremberg.

When discharged in 1946, MacAlpine resumed his training with a year in infectious diseases at Herman Kiefer Hospital in Detroit and two years in pediatrics at White Memorial Hospital in Los Angeles.

Like classmate Don Vollmer, Mac MacAlpine heard of the beauty of Asheville from Jack Powell. While seeking a place to practice, MacAlpine visited and met Louis Waller, another Loma Linda Medical School graduate. Both MacAlpine and Vollmer arrived here to begin practice on January 1, 1949.

MacAlpine opened an office in the City Building but soon moved to West Asheville, where most of the Seventh-day Adventist physicians were located.

An exceptionally competent and devoted practitioner, MacAlpine earned the loyalty and affection of a large number of Asheville and West Asheville families.

MacAlpine retired in 1982 at age 70. He died after a short illness at age 90.

History of Medicine in Asheville*, Dr. Freeman Stephens, 2013 pp. 259, 260

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES MONDAY, JUNE 17, 2002

■ GUEST COMMENTARY

MacAlpine: One physician's remarkable contribution

LARRY ROSENBERG

By Larry Rosenberg

On Sunday, Nov. 11 2001, a memorial service was held at Foster Seventh Day Adventist Church for Dr. Orville MacAlpine, M.D. who had passed at the age of 89 on Nov. 3 2001, after serving the medical community for over 40 years in Asheville.

Dr. MacAlpine arrived in Asheville in 1949 after completing his pediatric training at Loma Linda City in 1948. Dr. MacAlpine had assumed the practice of Dr. John Ward, one of the earlier pediatricians in Asheville, and practiced out of the old Memorial Mission Hospital which is now the Parkway Office building, up until the new hospital was built, which we know today as Mission St. Joseph.

Dr. MacAlpine, like many of the physicians of his day, initially practiced out of what was known as the City/County building up at the courthouse, though he moved his practice to Haywood Road in the mid 1950s. Dr. MacAlpine made many house calls in his day as well as relying on mothers to be able to express what they thought was the matter with their child. Dr. MacAlpine was like many of the doctor's of his generation. He grew up in rural Michigan, taught school initially in a one room schoolhouse in Michigan, then decided he did not want to remain a teacher.

He had an opportunity on scholarship to go to college at Columbia College in Tocoma Park, Md., and complete his pre-medical studies. He was married to Mrs. Leone Duffy-MacAlpine and they moved from Maryland to Loma Linda, Calif., where he studied medicine and graduated in 1940.

Dr. MacAlpine practiced for one year after completing his internship though like many of the physicians of his day he was called to service during the World War II and was an attending general medical officer during the Battle of the Bulge.

Dr. MacAlpine made many house calls, just as many other pediatricians in Asheville such as Drs. MacGuffin, Mary Helen McConnell and Larry Metcalf.

In those days the pediatricians made their own house calls unless they were out of town. Dr. MacAlpine on many occasions said that you can tell a lot about a child by making house calls as to what is going on in the house with them. He also made the commment that mothers know what is causing a child to be sick if you listen to the mother. Dr. MacAlpine was well aware of the social influences on children as well as what the expectations of parents are for their children.

He was an advocate of children not being around second hand smoke and was an advocate against smoking in the home. He was concerned about the advent of allergies that children so often have in closed quarters around parents who smoke and the many allergens that are in the home environment.

In his gentle way he knew how to soothe children as well as comfort a distraught mother and be a good listener to an impatient father.

Dr. MacAlpine leaves us with fond memories of a devoted physician, devoted husband to his wife Leone, and father to his sons, James Edward and Robert Thomas MacAlpine, as well as his grandchildren Jill and Trent MacAlpine.

He leaves us, his patients, with fond memories of a gentle man who was devoted to the practice of medicine and the care of children.

Larry Rosenberg, M.D. is a physician in family practice. He is an Asheville native and resident.

Four Rotarians are honored

Times Reports

Four members of the Rotary Club of West Asheville have received the Paul Harris Fellow Award.

They are Balfour Brookshire, B. Allan Culberson Jr., Dr. Orville MacAlpine and Walter Tipton.

The awards were presented by District 767 District Gov. S.C. "Mark" Markanda, of Matthews.

The four received the awards at a spring ladies night dinner at Asheville Country Club.

The award is named for Paul Harris who founded Rotary in 1905 in Chicago. Rotary International provide scholarships for study in foreign countries for U.S. students and brings students from other countries to the U.S. for study.

The four local Rotarians were honored for their work in behalf of Rotary International.

In 1985, the Rotary Foundation of Rotary International provided 945 scholarships to students and professionals, so they could pursue their educational goals in countries other than their own.

Last year, Rotary International began a "stop polio by 2005" program as part of the Rotary Foundation. This 20-year project will use $6 million each year for a "polio-plus" program, which will immunize all the children of the world by 2005. A Rotary International immunization task force and area operational committees have been put to work.

The program has innoculated more than 50,000 children in Panama and 12 million in Mexico in January 1986. Another team was back in Mexico in March 1986 to innoculate additional Mexican children. Teams have been sent to other countries around the world with reports coming in to Rotary International in Evanston, Ill.

As the work is completed, Paul Harris Fellow Awards are supported by donations from members of Rotary Clubs, by projects conducted by each club and donations from the Rotarians receiving the award.

Bishop Paul Hardin, who serves as counsel for church and public relations at Givens Estates' United Methodist Retirement Community, was speaker at the dinner.

FILE PHOTO

Babe, left, and Jane Maloy talk about the good old days at Babe's drive-in restaurant in this 1997 photo. Babe Maloy died Wednesday.

Restaurateur Babe Maloy dies at 85

By Barbara Blake
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — For 25 years, in the 1950s, '60s and early '70s, the happening places in Asheville were in a triangle on Tunnel Road near the eastern end of the Beaucatcher Tunnel.

Wink's, Buck's and Babe Maloy's, in that order. The coolest drive-ins in town.

Soon after sunset on Friday and Saturday nights, Asheville's young cruisers would migrate en masse to the city's main commercial drag, first hitting Wink's and Buck's on the west side of Tunnel Road, then crossing over to the east side to visit Babe's, legendary for its chipped ham sandwiches, Fat Boy burgers and fried chicken served with rolls and a sweet jug of honey.

As the kids in their Chevys, Fords and GTOs made their sojourn up and down this neon mecca, through the tunnel and back again, Babe Maloy would be inside his restaurant, smiling benevolently at his youthful customers as they revved their motors, wolfed down onion rings and paid court to their dates.

Babe Maloy loved those kids. He loved their mischievous innocence, their passion for cruising and life in general. And he loved having a hand in making memories during a time when breaking the speed limit or sneaking a bottle of beer was a horrific infraction, and Coke was a drink, not a drug.

Babe Maloy died unexpectedly of heart failure Wednesday morning at the age of 85, at home with his wife, Jane, and son, Dennis, near the strip of Tunnel Road where his legendary drive-in was the scene of so many memories in the making.

Please see BABE on B2

BABE: Businessman played role in Tunnel Road growth

Continued from B1

Although his own short-term memory had suffered in recent years, his son said, Maloy never forgot the years when Babe's was one of the crown jewels of Tunnel Road.

"The drive-in was his baby," Dennis Maloy said Wednesday evening. "He just loved all the kids who came ... all the customers were like family to him, and he was so appreciative of the community for all the support they gave him. It was a magical time."

"I never met him, but he sure left me with some good memories," said Donna Oakes, who spent some of her dating years at Babe's with her future husband, whom she married in 1970. "Everybody would be out on Saturday night, and you'd just drive around and see which of your friends were there, and we'd eat onion rings and Fat Boys. Those were good times."

The owners of the three drive-ins in the triangle were close — "Buck" Buchanan, the Winkenwerder family, which owned Wink's, and Maloy, whose actual name was George C. Maloy, but nobody ever knew it.

"Back in those days, businessmen weren't jealous of each other, trying to run each other out of business — they wanted to help each other," Dennis Maloy said. "And they (Buchanan and the Winkenwerders) were a lot of support to him, a lot of help."

After opening the original Babe's on Tunnel Road 50 years ago next month, Maloy went on to become a successful restaurateur, opening Babe's stores in Knoxville and Charlotte and other restaurants in Wilmington, Del., and Savannah and Augusta, Ga.

But the Babe's on Tunnel Road was the special one, his son said.

"Dad always used to say if he had a nickel for every pound of rubber in the parking lot from kids scratching off, he'd be a millionaire," Dennis Maloy said, smiling through his tears. "He loved all those kids, and the families that would come all the way from Tennessee to eat chicken in the rough and rolls and honey."

Babe Maloy's ashes will be scattered along Tunnel Road where so many memories were made.

"Dad couldn't remember a lot in the last year, and he would get frustrated that he couldn't remember words," his son said. "But he always remembered those days ... he always remembered Tunnel Road. That was his spot. That was his baby."

On Your Way Home Stop At

Featuring:

CHIPPED HAM SANDWICH AND FRENCH FRIED ONIONS

Next Jaycee Project in September

STRATE SHOW

Watch papers for more about this

jAYCEE wATER fOLLIES, aUGUST 1952

BROTHERS MEET IN GERMANY—Pvt. Conrad Maney, left, Warrant Officer Howard Maney, center, and Pfc. Donald Maney, right, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Hughie L. Maney of 108 Pennsylvania avenue, met recently while serving in Germany. Warrant Officer Maney entered service with the National Guard in 1940, and is serving with a field artillery unit of the 30th division. Pfc. Maney entered service in February, 1943, and is serving with an air forces radar unit. Pvt. Maney, who entered service in June, 1943, is serving with a field artillery unit. Two other brothers are in service: T. Sgt. Gilbert Maney, a war prisoner of the Germans, and Sgt. Forrest Maney, with a military police unit at Fort Jackson, S. C. Warrant Officer Maney's wife resides at 41 Central street, and Pfc. Maney's wife resides in West Asheville. The others are single..

Asheville Citizen May 4, 1945

6/30/02

BOB TERRELL
columnist

Brothers enjoy reunion near end of war

Maney Bros.

"My God, what are you doing over here?" Howard Maney asked his kid brother, Conrad. This was in March of 1945 and Conrad had just walked into an old house near Magdeburg, Germany, where Howard was quartered by the Army. Magdeburg was under heavy fire from the U.S. Army, which was trying to seize it.

Five of the Maney brothers of Asheville were in service — Howard, a warrant officer in the Army's 30th Division Field Artillery; Gilbert, a staff sergeant aerial gunner in the Army Air Forces; Forrest, a sergeant in an Army MP battalion; Donald, a private first class radar operator in the 82nd Airborne; and Conrad, a private in the 70th Field Artillery. Another brother, Carleton, was too young to go to war.

Conrad's unit had just crossed the Rhine as the Battle of the Bulge was winding down and was swinging around to the Ruhr Pocket where 150,000 German soldiers were cut off. (All later surrendered.) The Army had pulled Conrad's batallion off the line and moved it to the rear near Magdeburg. Near Conrad's unit, a building was being used for supply, and one day he saw a truck parked there with markings of the 113th field artillery. The driver told him the 113th was about five miles down the road. The driver knew Conrad's brother Howard and said he was at the base.

Conrad asked for permission to go and see his brother, and his commanding officer made his command car and driver available, and in that smart fashion, Conrad made his way to Howard's company, found the house where his brother was quartered and walked in.

After they had talked a minute, Howard said, "Come on, I want to show you something."

They walked down to a German schoolhouse where the 113th had set up a radar operation, and as they approached the school Conrad saw another brother, Donald, later an Asheville police officer, coming down the street. Howard knew Donald was there but surprised Conrad.

What a reunion the brothers had! Conrad, who was 19, had not seen Howard, 24, in three years, nor Donald, 21, in two years. They sat at a fountain in the small square of the town and talked for six hours, the time Conrad had been granted by his commander.

Howard and Donald drove him back to base about twilight with shells exploding in Magdeburg and some coming near the road they were driving.

"I thought," Conrad said, "that if one of those shells hit our jeep that our mother would get three sad letters from the government at the same time."

But they made it back.

Conrad did not see Donald again until the war was over, but he went to a USO show in a small town nearby and found Howard seated near him.

None of the Maney boys were wounded or hurt during the war. On Gilbert's first mission over Germany as a gunner on a B-17, his plane was shot down and crash landed in a bay. Gilbert was unscathed and the crew survived. A French fishing boat picked them up and turned them over to the Germans. Gilbert spent two years in Stalag 13, a German POW camp.

Forrest Maney, whose MP battalion herded German prisoners here in the States, had been a star blocking back on those great 1941 and '42 football teams at Asheville High.

Forrest and Gilbert are now deceased, and the other four brothers are still alive and kicking.

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES, ASHEVILLE N.C.
Sunday, September 6, 1959

—USAF Photo

MRS. MARY E. MANEY displays the Air Force Commendation Medal presented her in ceremonies by Col. Gene H. Tibbets, right, commander of Langley AFB, Va. Mrs. Maney accepted the medal posthumously awarded her husband, Major William H. Maney, son of Mrs. R. J. Warner of 33 Herron Ave., for outstanding and meritorious service as wing air installation officer at Bentwaters Royal Air Force Station, England, from Jan. 1, 1956, to Jan. 1, 1958. Also at the ceremonies were Mrs. Maney's children, Margaret E., left, Mary R. and Benjamin H. Maney.

CALVIN MARSHALL
. . . Dies At 68

Former City Vice Mayor Calvin Marshall, 68, Dies

Former Asheville Vice Mayor Calvin William Marshall, a West Asheville businessman who served two terms on City Council from 1971-75, died Tuesday morning at an Asheville hospital. He was 68. A-C

The former councilman had entered St. Joseph's Hospital a little more than a week ago.

7/12/78

A spokesman for Groce Funeral Home, which is in charge of arrangements, said private graveside services will be held at the convenience of the family.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the funeral home. Contributions may be made to the Oxford Orphanage at Oxford, to the Crippled Children's Hospital in Greenville, S.C., or to Eliada Home in Asheville.

A native of Pittsburgh, Pa., Marshall owned and operated Marshall's Amoco Station on Haywood Road, located across the street from his home at 586 Haywood Road.

He had operated the station continuously since 1937 except for a two-year period during World War II when he served with the United States Army in Washington, D.C.

It was not unusual to see the vice mayor pumping gas at the station while he served on City Council.

Long active in civic and community affairs, Marshall was interested in the revitalization of downtown Asheville and in improvements to the city's water system.

As his business grew, Marshall also became president of Marshall's Fuel Oil and Service Co., the Amoco distributor for Buncombe and Madison counties.

Educated in Pennsylvania public schools, he also attended Kiskiminitas Springs Prep School and Culver Military Academy. He was a member of Trinity United Methodist Church, the Asheville Moose Lodge, the American Legion, the Forty and Eight Club and West Asheville Masonic Lodge No. 665. He was a shriner and member of the Scottish and York Rites and the BPOE.

He was also a member of the board of directors of the Appalachian Savings and Loan Association.

Surviving are the wife, Janet Aileen Hoerr Marshall, to whom he was married in 1935; a son, Calvin John Marshall of Asheville; two daughters, Aileen Kay Hoyle of Asheville and Susan A. Nance of Charlotte; a sister, Betty Jane Mize of West Palm Beach, Fla.; and five grandchildren.

He was the son of the late Calvin Clifford and Vera Ruth Welch Marshall.

Calvin W. Marshall

A friend of Calvin W. Marshall paid him the ultimate tribute Wednesday: "He was a wonderful human being."

Memories and stories supported the tribute. It was recalled that during a recent winter, Marshall saw ducks frozen in a pond he had had constructured near Amboy Road. "Marshall could have bought every duck in Buncombe County," the friend said, "but he went to their rescue."

During his long and successful business and political careers, Marshall went to the rescue of many human beings, too. He helped dozens of people get started in business. And when citizens came to City Council or called him late at night with complaints, Marshall was never too busy or sleepy to hear callers out and seek a remedy. A-C 7/13/78

While Marshall was vice mayor, an elderly woman came before City Council with a grievance. She asked that all the "senior neighbors" stand. Marshall, who was sitting with council, stood up, too. The vignette demonstrated that he considered himself one of the people, and that is a sterling quality in a public man.

Marshall, who died Tuesday, will be remembered also for keeping faith in himself and in his community. Through lean years and good years, he remained confident.

This man who built businesses, helped govern a city, provided counsel to so many, and who rescued ducks will not be forgotten.

1967

nday , Saturday, Feb. 4,

A-B Queen

Lynda Reighard, right, was crowned Asheville-Biltmore College Homecoming Queen by Sandy Mastin, the 1966 Queen, at ceremonies Friday night at the A-B Homecoming basketball game with Maryville College. Miss Reighard, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Evans Reighard of 17 Hibriten Dr., is a senior majoring in psychology.

Sandy Mastin - Ormond Ave.

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 192[illegible]

Miss Matney Is Leader In Vance School Activities

Teacher Of 6B Grade Closely Identified With Community Life.

MISS GRACE DEW MATNEY

Miss Grace Dew Matney, teacher of 6B grade at Vance school in West Asheville, is a native of western North Carolina, being born in Watauga county.

She is the daughter of the Rev. W. C. Matney, now of Canton, Methodist minister, and with her family lived in many different places so her education was gained in number of schools. She graduated from the high school of Athens, Tenn., and later from the University of Chattanooga, at Chattanooga, Tenn. She also attended the East Tennessee Teachers' college at Johnson City, Tenn., and the Asheville Normal school.

Her first experience in teaching was at Canton. Later she taught in the schools of Winston-Salem. Being offered a teaching position in Oklahoma and anxious to broaden her experience, Miss Matney taught for a year in Oklahoma.

She came to Asheville to teach eight years ago. The year she was a teacher in the Asheville schools she taught the 6th grade of the Murray school. The next year she was transferred to the Aycock school where she taught the 6th grade again.

Since the Vance school has been built Miss Matney has taught the 6th grade there. During the six years she has taught at Vance school Miss Matney has become closely identified with the school and community life. When a program is to be given, or a club organized, Miss Matney is the teacher at Vance who is called upon to do the work of perfecting the organization. Her help is sought if a band is to be organized, or if an operetta is to be given. During the past six years she has been in charge of dozens of extra curricular activities.

Last year Miss Matney was advisor and director of the Vance student honor society. The club is open only to students making an average of A or more. The honor club has not been organized yet for this season. Miss Matney is director of athletics for girls at the Vance school. She has had charge of the Girl Reserve work at the school for several years.

Miss Matney is much interested in teaching the individual pupil. For the best development of boys and girls opportunity to do the things they like to do and do well should be offered them, she says. Opportunities to excel at music, athletics, acting, or club work should be given students as well as opportunity to excel in the more conventional studies, she believes.

Miss Matney takes an active part in the North Carolina Teachers' association, and in the Parent Teacher organization at Vance school. She makes her home at 83 Westwood place, West Asheville, with her sister Mrs. C. A. Hawkins. She spends her week ends at Canton, with her parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Matney.

Bruce Emory Research

—J. P. Brady Photo

SLIDING THROUGH TURN—Although these cars appear to be standing still, they're very much in motion, sliding through the fourth turn at the New Asheville Speedway Sunday afternoon to avoid a wreck that developed before them. No. 33 is Tom Mitchell of Brevard, winner of the hobby race. No. 19 is Alvin Brown who was running second at the time. Tommy Brown is in No. 3 and Bruce Austin in No. 8. Seventeen cars jammed into the pileup, some backward (as the one just behind Alvin Brown's car), some broadside, and some head-on, but all drivers controled their machines and only Bud Bishop's was damaged. It was the one that started the commotion by bouncing off the concrete wall.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Plemmons Is Winner!

Dickie, Banjo Outrun Earnhardt In Race At New Asheville Track

By BOB TERRELL
Citizen Sports Editor

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C. 13
Monday, July 22, 1963

It finally happened!

Gritting their teeth, stomping their gas pedals and shooting through traffic like cab drivers in New York, Dickie Plemmons and Banjo Matthews outran Ralph Earnhardt at the New Asheville Speedway before 2,500 spectators Sunday afternoon.

Dickie won the race—his first victory here since opening night of this season—and he was the happiest man in town for doing so. Banjo roared home in second place, several feet ahead of Earnhardt, who had started the race in quest of his 10th straight win on the 1.3-mile speedway.

"They just outran me—flat out," said Earnhardt after the race. "I was getting everything my car had to offer, but I couldn't do it."

The day's biggest surprise came when Asheville's Bob Pressley, who has been running faster and faster each week, put his late-model sportsman Ford on the pole, qualifying faster than Dickie, Banjo, Earnhardt and the rest.

For 12 laps Pressley led the field, but on the 13th, Dickie trapped him in traffic and roared into the lead. Banjo and Earnhardt also streamed by Pressley right on Dickie's tail, and that's the way they ran the rest of the race—one, two, three, four—although Banjo did some smooth jockeying trying to get by Plemmons. Dickie, however, stayed on it all the way and rolled home in front.

"I was running this race for Mr. Moore," said Banjo, referring to Howard Moore, who is still recovering in an Asheville hospital from a broken arm and leg he received when hit by a car in the pits last Sunday. Moore owns the car Banjo drove, the one usually driven by Harold Moore, son of the injured man.

And Banjo really ran. Plemmons, Banjo and Earnhardt were coming off the fourth turn like three rocks from a slingshot and turning the track at terrific speed.

At the start of the race Pressley took the lead, Earnhardt was second, Plemmons fell in third and Banjo fourth. On the second lap, however, Dickie and Banjo roared around Earnhardt and from there on it was a bumper to bumper battle among the leaders.

At the end of the race the first four sportsman cars and first three hobby cars were checked by NASCAR Steward Roby Combs for legality and all engines met with track specifications.

The hobby race produced a thriller. Tom Mitchell of Brevard won the race after a close duel with Alvin Brown of Asheville.

On the 16th lap of the race, the hobby drivers proved their skill in handling their machines. Bud Bishop of Brevard and Wade Hensley of Asheville bumped in the fourth turn and next thing they knew Bishop banged into the concrete wall and rebounded broadside onto the track.

There were 17 cars running in the race at the time and every last one of them came piling in. No one got through. But Bishop's was the only car damaged as the other drivers dodged and ducked and brought their racers to a standstill without major mishap.

After that wreck, Alvin Brown, running second, made several attempts to regain the lead, but he spun out of contention in the first turn as a result and settled for a fourth place finish.

Harry Coates of Enka ran second to Mitchell and Hensley came in third.

SPORTSMAN FEATURE

Pos.	Driver, Hometown	Car No.
1	Dickie Plemmons, Asheville	18
2	Banjo Matthews, Asheville	38
3	Ralph Earnhardt, Kannapolis	V8
4	Bob Pressley, Asheville	54
5	Ned Seitzer, Claremont	7
6	Roy Trantham, Asheville	6
7	Pee Wee Griffin, Asheville	32
8	Jack Ingram, Asheville	11
9	Jack Brittain, Icard	42
10	Jack Sprinkle, Asheville	92
11	Clarence Ogle, Swannanoa	48
12	Charles Ollis, Arden	00
13	John Allison, Black Mountain	45
14	Maurice Robinson, Weaverville	5
15	Charles Lowe, Waynesville	91
16	Gene Black, Arden	82
17	Jack Rogers, Greenville, S. C.	73
18	Carl Maynor, Asheville	U

HOBBY FEATURE

1	Tommy Mitchell, Brevard	33
2	Harry Coates, Enka	18
3	Wade Hensley, Asheville	11
4	Alvin Brown, Asheville	19
5	Tommy Brown, Black Mountain	3
6	George Miller, Asheville	10
7	Charlie Morgan, Enka	1
8	Reeves Reeves, Waynesville	14
9	Fred Parker, Brevard	88
10	Max Ledbetter, Franklin	21
11	Bruce Austin, Asheville	8
12	Bill Davis, Asheville	00
13	James Rice, Barnardsville	44
14	Gerald Slepp, Asheville	20
15	Bud Bishop, Brevard	53
16	Allen Silver, Marshall	47
17	Bud Harrison, Asheville	28
18	Sherman Collins, Marshall	7

Asheville Citizen July 22, 1963

RETIRING TEACHER, Mrs. Ada Mauney, was honored by friends and co-workers. Robert K. Phillips, principal of Hall Fletcher Junior High School, left, and Supt. of Asheville Schools W. P. Griffin, look at a certificate noting Mrs. Mauney's 35 years of service to this system. She taught one year at Newton Elementary before joining the staff of Hall Fletcher in 1937, where she has taught since. She also taught a number of years in the summer Demonstration School of what was the Asheville Teachers College, where she received her B.S. degree in education. (Staff Photo)

Asheville Citizen June 10, 1964

THE ASHEVILLE TIMES MONDAY, MARCH 2, 1942

Defense Stamps That Perform Double Duty

Members of the West Asheville Methodist church are being patriotic and at the same time trying to pay off their $50,000 debt. Throughou the Sunday school, children and adults are contributing defense stamps, to be converted into defense bonds and used towards payment of the church debt. The above picture shows a group representing classes of the junior department, which yesterday presented at morning service the first completed $5 book of 10-cent stamps. This is one of the methods devised by the 9,000 club which was organized by Dr. J. B. Anderson to raise $9,000 a year until the debt is retired. Shown here, in a scene depicting the completion of the first book of stamps, are the following Seated, Troy Collins, Rae Smith, Martha Jean Moore, Mrs. Henry C. Sprinkle, wife of the pastor; standing: Glenn May, Maxine Clontz, Norman Ingle, Dr. Sprinkle, the pastor; Barbara Patterson, Laura Heise and Bo Dawson.

Asheville Times March 2, 1942

HEAD HALL FLETCHER STUDENTS—Glenn May, right, son of Mr. and Mrs. John B. May of 179 Brucemont circle, was named president of the student body at Hall Fletcher junior high school this morning. Sammy Fain, left, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Fain of 72 Brownwood avenue, was elected vice-president, and Nell Bannister, center, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Bannister of 256 Brevard road, was elected secretary.

Asheville Times May 12, 1944

Asheville Citizen
March 10, 1929

Community Life Centers About Organized Groups

West Asheville Folks Combine Efforts In Unity Plan

By GLENN W. NAVES

The people of West Asheville believe in organization.

And, incidentally, they believe in co-operation, and that a combination of these two elements is essential to community growth and progress.

Consequently, they have embodied the two in a number of well organized community groups, each of which is varied in policy and purpose so as to conform with the needs of everybody from the business man down to the boys and girls who are going to school and training themselves to be future citizens.

Beginning several years ago, public spirited citizens of the community grouped themselves in the belief that business, religion, social work, education and community government can best be conducted when each is thoroughly organized. And these organizations have grown with the progressive expansion of that section until each is a valuable asset, something which just as essential in a sense as the streets, schools and churches are because many of these benefits have been obtained through the efforts of one or more of the organizations.

Club Is Oldest

The largest and oldest of these groups are the West Asheville club, the West Asheville Community club and the West Asheville Merchants Association.

The former was organized in November, 1925 with S. D. Hall as president. Other presidents have been: Don C. Young, 1926, Hugh Sowers, 1927 and H. B. Posey, whose term will expire in November of this year. Both Mr. Posey and Mr. Sowers are bankers, the former being cashier of the Bank of West Asheville and the latter connected with the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. Mr. Young is representative No. 1 from Buncombe county in the General Assembly. G. G. Morgan was elected the first secretary and after his resignation was succeeded by Bert Starnes, who has served in that capacity since.

The club's membership of around 75, includes business and professional men of every calling—lawyers, bankers, ministers, physicians, merchants, public officials, and even one fire chief, a mayor and a few "politicians." The fire chief is A. L. Duckett, of the Asheville fire department, the mayor, Gallatin Roberts and the "politicians" include Mr. Young, who is also among Asheville's best known attorneys.

The club has since its organization shown a deep interest in the upbuilding and progress of the community, and at present has on schedule a number of plans in that direction.

Community Club

Shortly after the West Asheville club was formed the ladies of the community decided that they should also have a similar organization so the West Asheville Community club was formed.

The club has its musical and literary de[illegible] which have separate meetings and give programs in which the members participate. One of the most popular of these features is the monthly musical program, usually held at the home of a member. Local talent is used and a visiting artist entertains with vocal or instrumental numbers, or perhaps lectures on some interesting phase of music study. Each month the program is planned under the supervision of a selected member and is arranged so as to provide variety and an opportunity for each member to exercise their talent.

In many other ways the club takes an active part in the social, and church and educational life of the community, and has a large and active membership, many of whom are charter members.

Merchants Group

The West Asheville Merchants Association was organized in January, 1926 with a charter membership of 13 business men. The organization has since grown to 60 members, including practically every business concern in the community.

In accordance with tentative plans this organization has continued to function as a mutual benefit group for business men and citizens, and has accomplished much in the expansion of the business interests of West Asheville.

J. R. Mills, who died about two years ago, was the first president. Other officers elected, at the initial meeting who are still serving are O. J. Judd, vice president and V. F. Brown, secretary. John May succeeded Mr. Mills as president.

Other Organizations

Other groups pprovide the essential organization element for the people, of the comunity.

Young people's organizations include two troops of the Boy Scouts of America; the Junior Music club; the Business Girls' Circle; the Young Men of the Presbyterian church, and others.

One of the Scout troops has been organized at the Methodist church and is sponsored by the pastor, the Rev. J. S. Hiatt, and others, Troop 5 of the Presbyterian church is under the leadership of Jimmy Haley, patrol leader and F. Bonnotte, Scoutmaster.

The Junior Music club was organized by Mrs. A. X. Blanchard and has since grown from eight to eighty members. The group was formed so as to give the children of the community with musical talent an opportunity to benefit from study and contact with each other, and to maintain their interest in music. The club is known as one of the most active in West Asheville.

Other organizations are the Calvary Baptist church orchestra and male [illegible] the Junior choir of the Methodist church; Business Girls' Circle, Woman's Auxiliary, Men of the Church and Young Men of the Church, of the Presbyterian church, the Woman's Missionary groups of the community churches, the B. Y. P. U., Epworth League and Christian Endeavor organizations, the Mitchell Avenue Home club, the Friendship club, the Parent Teacher Association of Hall Fletcher, Aycock, Eugene Rankin, and Vance schools, the Sunday school groups and others.

Fraternal organizations include the West Asheville chapter, Order of Eastern Star, Locke Craig Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Red Men, Moose, Odd Fellows and the A. F. and A. M. Masonic

Antis Announce Candidates For 7 Council Posts

Angel, Sullivan, Cathey, May, Wright, Morgan, Brown On Ticket

HEADQUARTERS TO BE OPENED TODAY

Plan To Wage Vigorous Fight Against Present Council Members

Names of seven candidates who will seek nomination to city council posts on the anti-organization ticket in the April 18 Democratic primary, were announced last night by leaders of that political group.

The slate, completed at a meeting of "anti" leaders yesterday afternoon, is composed of:

J. O. Angel, manager of Pearce-Young-Angel company; W. B. Cathey, realtor; Wesley W. Brown, building contractor; Edwin N. Wright, attorney; John B. May, merchant; G. Gordon Morgan, secretary of the French Broad laundry, Inc.; and J. H. Sullivan, Southern Railway engineer.

Charles M. Britt, broker, was named campaign manager, and plans were made to open headquarters in the Jackson building today.

Plan Vigorous Campaign

Spokesmen for the group said the ticket was chosen after long and careful consideration, and indicated a vigorous campaign will be conducted between now and the primary two weeks hence.

They pointed out that the candidates they will support represent a cross-section of business and professional leaders and also come from widely scattered sections of the city. Two are from West Asheville and the other five reside in areas of the city east of the French Broad river.

Announcement of the ticket dispelled earlier predictions by some political observers that the anti-organization group would not enter the race, and assured a heated campaign before the primary on April 18.

The organization ticket, brought out more than two weeks ago, is composed of the present councilmen: J. E. Divelbiss, Jr., Howard Etheridge, Eugene Carland, O. E. Starnes, Carl Bamford, Mayor Holmes Bryson and Vice-Mayor L. Lyons Lee.

Sketches Of Candidates

Brief biographical sketches of the anti-organization candidates follow:

W. B. Cathey was born at Candler and has resided in Asheville for the past 23 years. He is district manager of Cody Realty and Mortgage company and a past president of the Asheville Real Estate board. He is chairman of the board of stewards of the West Asheville Wesleyan Methodist church and chairman of the building committee of the Wesleyan Methodist church for the western district of the North Carolina diocese. He resides at 97 St. Dunstan's road.

Edward N. Wright, of 24 Farrwood road, was born in Asheville and has been practicing law here for more than 20 years. He is a trustee of the First Baptist church and a member of the American Legion. At one time he was chairman of the city school board and is at present a trustee of the Y. W. C. A. He was educated at Wake Forest college and at Harvard university.

Wesley W. Brown, of 26 White Fawn drive, is secretary of the Asheville Lions club and past commander of both the Kiffin Rockwell American Legion post and the local post of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War. He is an Elk and a member of the First Christian church. Mr. Brown has resided in Asheville for the past 16 years.

Angel Is Native Carolinian

James O. Angel, of 121 Edwin place, is a native North Carolinian and for the past ten years has been manager of Pearce-Young-Angel wholesale fruit and produce dealers. He is a Kiwanian, member of the board of stewards of Central Methodist church and past grand counselor of the United Commercial Travelers in North and South Carolina. He also is a 32nd degree Mason.

John B. May, operator of May's market in West Asheville, resides at 179 Brucemont circle. He is a native of Asheville, a member of the West Asheville Methodist church, the West Asheville Masonic lodge, American Legion, and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics. He is president of the Mutual Distributing company and also one of its organizers; a director of the Associated Grocers stores and a member of the International Typographical union. Mr. May has resided in West Asheville for the past 15 years.

G. Gordon Morgan, of 26 Richmond avenue, has been a resident of Asheville for the past 23 years. He received his education at Candler high school, Mars Hill college and Emanuel Business college here. Mr. Morgan has been employed by Northup McDuffie hardware company and the Southern Coal company. For the past ten years he has been secretary of the French Broad laundry in West Asheville. He is vice-president of the West Asheville club and a member of Calvary Baptist church.

Veteran Engineer

J. H. Sullivan, of 218 South French Broad avenue, is a veteran Southern railway engineer. He has been in the employ of the company for 50 years and came to Asheville from Rowan county in 1896. He is secretary-treasurer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and chairman of the general adjustment committee of that organization. He belongs to the Masonic order and is a Shriner. He also is a member of Haywood Street Methodist church.

This year will mark the first time since 1935 a council ticket has been opposed. In the 1935 election the Independents offered a ticket but were defeated in the primary. In 1937 there was no opposition.

J. O. ANGEL

WESLEY W. BROWN

EDWIN N. WRIGHT

JOHN B. MAY

G. GORDON MORGAN

J. H. SULLIVAN

W. B. CATHEY

ANTI-ORGANIZATION SLATE—These seven men will seek nomination to the city council posts in the April 18 Democratic primary on the anti-organization ticket. Their names were announced last night following a conference of "anti" leaders yesterday afternoon. Charles M. Britt was named campaign manager.

LAWRENCE DUDLEY ROGERS MAY KING ALLEN

AT FOOD DEALERS MEET — Leaders of today's business sessions of the North Carolina Food Dealers association convention, which opened in the George Vanderbilt hotel last night, are shown above. They include John L. Lawrence, West Asheville grocer and president of the A-G stores of Asheville, who presided at the morning session; Charles Dudley, secretary of the Charlotte Merchants association; Watson Rogers, president of the National Food Brokers association of Washington, D. C.; John B. May of Asheville, president of the NCFDA; Jennings King of Charlotte, Carolinas manager for the California Packing corporation, and J. LeRoy Allen of Raleigh, association director. Two hundred members are attending the three-day meet.

Times, Wednesday, April 9, 1952

FISHBURNE HORTON HYLDBURG

MICHAEL MAY THOMAS ATKINS

APPLY FOR CHARTER—Members of the temporary West Asheville youth center committee have applied for a charter as a non-profit corporation to purchase a lot and build a center. The Rev. W. G. Thomas is chairman of the committee. He is shown with Judge Shelby E. Horton, Carl A. Hyldburg, W. E. Michael Jr., John B. May, Harry T. Atkins and Frank B. Fishburne.

We Are Proud Of The Part We Play In The Life Of This Community

We Carry A Complete Line
Of The Finest Quality

STAPLE & FANCY GROCERIES
FRUITS -- VEGETABLES
MEATS

MAY'S MARKET

MEMBER A-G STORES

747 Haywood Road Phone 3704

May's Market
Morris May, left
Frank Leppert, right

May's Market
Morris May

A FAMILY OF GROCERS!

By Margaret M. Clayton

Exterior view of May's Market, a small urban market in Asheville, N. C.

In a day of giant discount stores and huge supermarkets, it should not be forgotten that there are still small family stores that are filling an important need in their communities.

Such a store is May's Market, Inc., at 747 Haywood Road, Asheville, N. C., owned and managed

Frank T. Leppert, Jr.

by Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Leppert, Jr. Mrs. Leppert is the former Nancy May, whose family has been prominent in the food field for two generations. Her father, the late John B. May, and her brother, R. Morris May (recently deceased), both served as president of the North Carolina Food Dealers Association and her husband, Frank Leppert, is presently on the Board of Directors.

The then 1600 sq. ft. May's Market was founded in 1928 by John B. May. His daughter has helped in the store since 1943 when Uncle Sam took all her brothers and husband off to war. Nancy still works there constantly, keeping books and running the store along with her husband Frank Leppert. Frank has been at the store since his return to civilian life.

He was in the field artillery corps in active service during World War II, arriving home on Christmas Day in 1945 and going into business with his father-in-law. At this time the store was expanded to 5,000 sq. ft. and remodeled.

Frank Leppert says he likes being a grocer "just fine" and his wife seems to enjoy being the wife, daughter, and sister of grocers, in addition to being one herself!

May's Market is an urban market with brick exterior and a yellow plastic sign and parking for 12 cars. The ceiling is of white metal with fluorescent strip lighting, the floor of wood, and the walls of painted plaster.

The store gives special attention to meats—and no wonder, the butcher, Ralph Pittillo, has been with them for 43 years! Everybody knows him; and he knows just what everyone wants. There are nine full-time and nine part-time employees. Hours open are 8:30 a.m.-9:30 p.m., six days a week.

There are three 25′ gondolas, 20′ of self-service meat counter, and 15′ of non-foods. Also 20′ of refrigerated produce, 16′ of dry produce, 34′ of frozen foods, 16′ of dairy, 12′ of bakery and 10′ of ice cream. There is also a separate 10′ x 12′ space for tobaccos.

Produce center does double duty with sundries on two shelves above.

Interior view of May's Market.

Meat counter is short but stocked full with meat.

Customers are treated well—given credit, delivery for a $1.00 fee, and flowers and food in sickness and bereavement. They even have a special 2′ x 5′ bulletin board, given to the store by a customer, which is covered with pictures of the customers' children. The store also furnishes a poster advertising community affairs.

"Many customers who have moved out of the neighborhood still come back here to shop." Leppert says.

The store gives to and participates in civic and charitable drives. They hire handicapped persons where possible and have helped boys in trouble—even given them jobs when no one else would, and work with them to rehabilitate themselves.

"One who was brought in by a detention officer," Leppert observed, "is now vice-president of a bank."

The store uses no advertising in the newspapers, radio or TV, but does circularize handbills and use bag stuffers. They have a profitable service whereby they sell meat and some groceries to restaurants, to army and national guard reserves, and to city schools for home economics courses.

They believe in "Promotions on Specials." Formerly, they used to give away appliances, but no longer. They also used to give free poinsettias to all at Christmastime, but the plants got to be to expensive. Now the store just features groceries with a special price tie-in.

Frank Leppert is president of the Lions Club of West Asheville, vice president of the Heart Association of Buncombe County, on the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board of the City of Asheville, on the Board for the Civic Arts Council, and the Board of Better Business Bureau of the Greater Asheville Area. As mentioned before, he is currently on the Board of Directors of NCFDA. He has been twice president of the West Asheville Business Association, and is a member of St. George's Episcopal Church.

Frank Leppert attends the NCFDA Management Seminar at Chapel Hill every year, feeling it is very important.

"It brings out the things you ought to do," he explained, "An example in our case is that one seminar emphasized the delegating of authority. We followed this idea and it was a good thing we did because it was important to us when my late brother-in-law, Morris May, who operated one of our other stores. Stoney Knob Super Market, passed away suddenly with a heart attack.

Frank and Nancy Leppert have one daughter, Nancy Ellen, who is the mother of their three grandsons, Frank, aged eight, Bryan, aged five, and Phillip Morris, aged one.

Asked what, in his opinion, is the chief problem facing the food retailer of today, Leppert replied,

"Trying to make a profit. Since the wage and hour law, we have to pay the minimum, whether the employee is worth it or not. The new safety law (OSHA) is quite a problem, too."

THE CAROLINA FOOD DEALER SALUTES THE MAY FAMILY, CONGRATULATES THEM ON THE OUTSTANDING CONTRIBUTIONS THEY HAVE MADE TO THE FOOD INDUSTRY AND WISHES MR. AND MRS. FRANK T. LEPPERT, JR. CONTINUED SUCCESS IN THE FUTURE.

Quality Cookies!
Priced Right!
Sell Fast!

FFV

Famous Foods of Virginia

Southern Biscuit Company
Richmond, Va. 23204

PRICED RIGHT FOR QUICK TURNOVER
... and Consistently Promoted!

Quality Seafoods...from the Same Quality Controlled Cannery

Represented By Archibald & Martin

MAY VOGLER REDDEN

LEADERS ON FOOD DEALERS PROGRAM — Monroe M. Redden, 12th district representative, was principal speaker today before the North Carolina Food Dealers' association at George Vanderbilt hotel. With Mr. Redden are James B. Vogler, secretary, who introduced him, and John B. May, retiring president.

Asheville Times September 9, 1947

DUDLEY ROGERS MAY KING ALLEN

LEADERS OF FOOD DEALERS' GROUP—This picture was made yesterday at the George Vanderbilt hotel as the North Carolina Food Dealers' association got down to business on the second day of the three-day convention. Leaders shown in the picture, are: Charles Dudley, secretary of the Charlotte Merchants association; Watson Rogers, president of the National Food Brokers association of Washington, D. C.; John B. May of Asheville, president of the NCFDA; Jennings King of Charlotte, Carolinas manager for the California Packing corporation, and J. LeRoy Allen, of Raleigh, association director.

Asheville Times September 9, 1947

FATHER OF FIRST 1951 BUNCOMBE COUNTY BABY RECEIVES GIFT CERTIFICATES FROM PARTICIPATING MERCHANTS THROUGH WISE PROGRAM.

SHOWN ABOVE is Hugh B. Stapleton, father of first Buncombe County Baby born in 1951, as he appeared on the WISE Baby Program. Participating Merchants shown in the picture are W. E. Michael—Cobbles Department Store, Irving Kassack—Pollock's, Joe Cooper—Field's, Max Crohn—Middlemount Flower Shop, John Ehle—Imperial Life Ins. Co., Richard E. Young—Eckerd's, Charles Dunwody Jr.—Ralph Bell Jewelers, J. Nick Davis—Asheville Laundry, Burke Harlan—Sterchi's, Charles Berryman—Berryman's Ambulance Service. Absent when the photo was made—B. J. Koontz—Biltmore Dairy Farms, and John B. May—May's Market. Seated at the right is Harold Moon, Program Director of WISE.

Asheville Citizen January 7, 1951

A FAMILY OF GROCERS!

By Margaret M. Clayton

Exterior view of May's Market, a small urban market in Asheville, N. C.

In a day of giant discount stores and huge supermarkets, it should not be forgotten that there are still small family stores that are filling an important need in their communities.

Such a store is May's Market, Inc., at 747 Haywood Road, Asheville, N. C., owned and managed

Frank T. Leppert, Jr.

by Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Leppert, Jr. Mrs. Leppert is the former Nancy May, whose family has been prominent in the food field for two generations. Her father, the late John B. May, and her brother, R. Morris May (recently deceased), both served as president of the North Carolina Food Dealers Association and her husband, Frank Leppert, is presently on the Board of Directors.

The then 1600 sq. ft. May's Market was founded in 1928 by John B. May. His daughter has helped in the store since 1943 when Uncle Sam took all her brothers and husband off to war. Nancy still works there constantly, keeping books and running the store along with her husband Frank Leppert. Frank has been at the store since his return to civilian life.

He was in the field artillery corps in active service during World War II, arriving home on Christmas Day in 1945 and going into business with his father-in-law. At this time the store was expanded to 5,000 sq. ft. and remodeled.

Frank Leppert says he likes being a grocer "just fine" and his wife seems to enjoy being the wife, daughter, and sister of grocers, in addition to being one herself!

May's Market is an urban market with brick exterior and a yellow plastic sign and parking for 12 cars. The ceiling is of white metal with fluorescent strip lighting, the floor of wood, and the walls of painted plaster.

The store gives special attention to meats—and no wonder, the butcher, Ralph Pittillo, has been with them for 43 years! Everybody knows him; and he knows just what everyone wants. There are nine full-time and nine part-time employees. Hours open are 8:30 a.m.-9:30 p.m., six days a week.

There are three 25′ gondolas, 20′ of self-service meat counter, and 15′ of non-foods. Also 20′ of refrigerated produce, 16′ of dry produce, 34′ of frozen foods, 16′ of dairy, 12′ of bakery and 10′ of ice cream. There is also a separate 10′ x 12′ space for tobaccos.

Produce center does double duty with sundries on two shelves above.

Interior view of May's Market.

Meat counter is short but stocked full with meat.

Customers are treated well—given credit, delivery for a $1.00 fee, and flowers and food in sickness and bereavement. They even have a special 2′ x 5′ bulletin board, given to the store by a customer, which is covered with pictures of the customers' children. The store also furnishes a poster advertising community affairs.

"Many customers who have moved out of the neighborhood still come back here to shop." Leppert says.

The store gives to and participates in civic and charitable drives. They hire handicapped persons where possible and have helped boys in trouble—even given them jobs when no one else would, and work with them to rehabilitate themselves.

"One who was brought in by a detention officer," Leppert observed, "is now vice-president of a bank."

The store uses no advertising in the newspapers, radio or TV, but does circularize handbills and use bag stuffers. They have a profitable service whereby they sell meat and some groceries to restaurants, to army and national guard reserves, and to city schools for home economics courses.

They believe in "Promotions on Specials." Formerly, they used to give away appliances, but no longer. They also used to give free poinsettias to all at Christmastime, but the plants got to be to expensive. Now the store just features groceries with a special price tie-in.

Frank Leppert is president of the Lions Club of West Asheville, vice president of the Heart Association of Buncombe County, on the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board of the City of Asheville, on the Board for the Civic Arts Council, and the Board of Better Business Bureau of the Greater Asheville Area. As mentioned before, he is currently on the Board of Directors of NCFDA. He has been twice president of the West Asheville Business Association, and is a member of St. George's Episcopal Church.

Frank Leppert attends the NCFDA Management Seminar at Chapel Hill every year, feeling it is very important.

"It brings out the things you ought to do," he explained, "An example in our case is that one seminar emphasized the delegating of authority. We followed this idea and it was a good thing we did because it was important to us when my late brother-in-law, Morris May, who operated one of our other stores. Stoney Knob Super Market, passed away suddenly with a heart attack.

Frank and Nancy Leppert have one daughter, Nancy Ellen, who is the mother of their three grandsons, Frank, aged eight, Bryan, aged five, and Phillip Morris, aged one.

Asked what, in his opinion, is the chief problem facing the food retailer of today, Leppert replied,

"Trying to make a profit. Since the wage and hour law, we have to pay the minimum, whether the employee is worth it or not. The new safety law (OSHA) is quite a problem, too."

THE CAROLINA FOOD DEALER SALUTES THE MAY FAMILY, CONGRATULATES THEM ON THE OUTSTANDING CONTRIBUTIONS THEY HAVE MADE TO THE FOOD INDUSTRY AND WISHES MR. AND MRS. FRANK T. LEPPERT, JR. CONTINUED SUCCESS IN THE FUTURE.

Quality Cookies!
Priced Right!
Sell Fast!

FFV

Famous Foods of Virginia

Southern Biscuit Company
Richmond, Va. 23204

PRICED RIGHT FOR QUICK TURNOVER
... and Consistently Promoted!

Quality Seafoods...from the Same Quality Controlled Cannery

Represented By Archibald & Martin

MAY VOGLER REDDEN

LEADERS ON FOOD DEALERS PROGRAM — Monroe M. Redden, 12th district representative, was principal speaker today before the North Carolina Food Dealers' association at George Vanderbilt hotel. With Mr. Redden are James B. Vogler, secretary, who introduced him, and John B. May, retiring president.

Asheville Times September 9, 1947

DUDLEY ROGERS MAY KING ALLEN

LEADERS OF FOOD DEALERS' GROUP—This picture was made yesterday at the George Vanderbilt hotel as the North Carolina Food Dealers' association got down to business on the second day of the three-day convention. Leaders shown in the picture, are: Charles Dudley, secretary of the Charlotte Merchants association; Watson Rogers, president of the National Food Brokers association of Washington, D. C.; John B. May of Asheville, president of the NCFDA; Jennings King of Charlotte, Carolinas manager for the California Packing corporation, and J. LeRoy Allen, of Raleigh, association director.

Asheville Times September 9, 1947

FATHER OF FIRST 1951 BUNCOMBE COUNTY BABY RECEIVES GIFT CERTIFICATES FROM PARTICIPATING MERCHANTS THROUGH WISE PROGRAM.

SHOWN ABOVE is Hugh B. Stapleton, father of first Buncombe County Baby born in 1951, as he appeared on the WISE Baby Program. Participating Merchants shown in the picture are W. E. Michael—Cobbles Department Store, Irving Kassack—Pollock's, Joe Cooper—Field's, Max Crohn—Middlemount Flower Shop, John Ehle—Imperial Life Ins. Co., Richard E. Young—Eckerd's, Charles Dunwody Jr.—Ralph Bell Jewelers, J. Nick Davis—Asheville Laundry, Burke Harlan—Sterchi's, Charles Berryman—Berryman's Ambulance Service. Absent when the photo was made—H. J. Koontz—Biltmore Dairy Farms, and John B. May—May's Market. Seated at the right is Harold Moon, Program Director of WISE.

Asheville Citizen January 7, 1951

July 03

Left to right:

Johnny May
Henry May
Nancy May Leppert
George May
Glenn May Martha May
July 2003

SUNDAY, JUNE 2, 1929

LOCAL GIRL IS HIGHLY HONORED

Excellent Record Made At Mars Hill By Madeline May

Miss Madeline May of 197 Brucemont Circle has returned to her home in West Asheville after graduating from Mars Hill College where she made an enviable record in scholastic and literary circles during her school years. Miss May was signally honored by her class mates by being elected, the president of the senior class.

The Asheville girl has captured numerous honors in several intercollegiate debates and maintained an "A" grade in all her studies while at the Baptist institution. She plans to enter Meredith College at Raleigh where she will be an applicant for a B. A. degree. She studied associate arts while at the Madison county school.

In addition to being the president of the 1929 senior class Miss May also earned the following honors:

Intercollegiate debater, 1927, 1928 1929; vice president and secretary of non pareil literary society; secretary, Scribleris Club, 1928-29; secretary of her freshman class; anniversary Marshall, 1929; commencement Marshall, 1927; associate editor college annual, 1928; associate editor college newspaper, 1927; officer in Sunday school association, 1928-29; officer in B. Y. P. U. society, 1927-28-29; officer in Buncombe county club, member Y. W. A. council; and officer in International Relations Club.

Earns Honors

Miss Madeline May, of 197 Brucemont Circle, West Asheville, who captured many honors at Mars Hill College during her course there. Her scholastic years were crowned by her election as president of the senior class.

Asheville Citizen June 2, 1929

Dr. L. B. Mcbrayer

NC-191, Asheville, NC, USA

Latitude & Longitude: 35° 32' 40.82676", -82° 35' 50.4906"

ShareThis

North Carolina State Historical Marker

Marker Text:

> "Leader in fight against tuberculosis in North Carolina, Superintendent of State Sanatorium in Hoke County, 1914-24. His birthplace is 400 ft. W."

Louis Burgin McBrayer, physician and tuberculosis specialist, was born on December 27, 1868, the only child of Adolphus and Lou A. Case McBrayer. As a young boy he attended Venable School and Newton Academy in Asheville, as well as Judson College in Hendersonville. After finishing high school, McBrayer entered Louisville Medical College in Louisville, Kentucky, where he received the M.D. degree in 1889.

After his graduation from medical school, McBrayer returned to North Carolina, operating a general practice in Asheville until 1914. He also served as Buncombe County coroner from 1901 to 1907, and the Asheville heath officer from 1910 to 1914. He operated as chief surgeon at Asheville's Mission Hospital and for the Southern Railway. Considered one of the finest physicians in North Carolina, from 1908 to 1914, McBrayer was president of the State Board of Medical Examiners.

The effects of tuberculosis intrigued McBrayer during his time in Asheville. Determined to help in fighting the disease, McBrayer took a post in April 1914 as superintendent of the North Carolina State Sanatorium in Hoke County, and as head of the Bureau of Tuberculosis inside the State Board of Health. He held the positions for the next ten years, before moving to Southern Pines. He served as head of the North Carolina Medical Society beginning in 1915, and backed the incorporation of Hospital Savings Association as a Blue Cross plan in 1935.

McBrayer married Lillian Cordelia Deaver on July 20, 1890, and they had three children: Reuben Adolphus, Sadie Lou, and Louis Burgin II. Before his death on April 1, 1938, McBrayer served as chairman of the board of trustees for the Order of Odd Fellows orphanage in Goldsboro, as well as grand marshall of the Sovereign Lodge in 1934. McBrayer also dabbled in genealogy, coauthoring McBrayer Genealogy with Mrs. Charles R. Whitaker in 1926. He is buried at Bethesda Cemetery in Aberdeen.

References:

William S. Powell, ed., Dictionary of North Carolina Biography, IV, 121—sketch by Paul M. McCain
William S. Powell, ed., Encyclopedia of North Carolina History (2006)
Dorothy Long, ed., Medicine in North Carolina, 2 vols. (1972)
L. B. McBrayer and Mrs. Charles R. Whitaker, McBrayer Genealogy (1926)

Marker data and essay from North Carolina Office of Archives and History (see www.ncmarkers.com).

Published on NCpedia (http://ncpedia.org)

McBrayer, Louis Burgin [1]

No votes yet

McBrayer, Louis Burgin

by Paul M. Mccain, 1991

27 Dec. 1868–1 Apr. 1938

A photograph of Dr. Louis Burgin McBrayer. Image from the Internet Archive / N.C. Government & Heritage Library.

[2]Louis Burgin McBrayer, physician, medical administrator, and pioneer in the fight against tuberculosis, was born near Wolf Top Mountain in Buncombe County [3], the only child of Adolphus and Lou A. Case McBrayer. He attended Venable School (later Montford School) and Newton Academy, both in Asheville, and Judson College in Hendersonville. In 1889 he received an M.D. degree from Louisville Medical College (now the University of Louisville).

Returning to North Carolina, McBrayer was in general practice in Asheville until 1914. During this period he was elected coroner of Buncombe County for three terms (1901–7) and health officer of Asheville (1910–14). Under his leadership, Asheville set up a model Health Department with a laboratory to curb typhoid. McBrayer was also a surgeon at Asheville's Mission Hospital (1904–14) as well as a surgeon for the Southern Railway 4. From 1908 to 1914 he served as president of the State Board of Medical Examiners.

On 2 Apr. 1914 McBrayer moved to Sanatorium (now McCain) to become superintendent of North Carolina's Sanatorium for the Treatment of Tuberculosis and chief of the Bureau of Tuberculosis of the State Board of Health. He held both positions until 1924, when he moved to Southern Pines. In 1915 he organized the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association and was managing director from 1915 to 1937. He was president of the North Carolina State Medical Society [5] in 1915 and of the Southern Conference on Tuberculosis in 1924–25. In 1921 he became secretary of the Medical Society and served until 1937. McBrayer edited the society's annual Transactions from 1918 to 1937 as well as the section on North Carolina in Southern Medicine and Surgery (1920). He was one of the incorporators of the Hospital Savings Association as a Blue Cross plan in 1935.

McBrayer married Lillian Cordelia (Cordie) Deaver (1867–1921) on 20 July 1890, and they had three children: Reuben Adolphus, Sarah Louise (Sadie Lou) (Mrs. Paul Pressly McCain [6]), and Louis Burgin II. He was a Democrat, a Baptist, and a member of Kiwanis. Also active in the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, he served as chairman of the board of trustees of its home for orphans in Goldsboro and was grand marshall of the Sovereign Lodge in 1933–34. McBrayer was buried in the Bethesda Cemetery, Aberdeen.

References:

Dorothy Long, ed., Medicine in North Carolina, vols. 1–2 (1972).

The Sanatorium Sun, May 1938.

Mrs. Charles R. Whitaker and L. B. McBrayer, McBrayer Genealogy (1926).

Who Was Who in America, vol. 1 (1943).

Additional Resources:

"Dr. L. B. McBrayer." N.C. Highway Historical Marker P-35, N.C. Office of Archives & History. http://www.ncmarkers.com/Markers.aspx?sp=Markers&k=Markers&sv=P-35 [7] (accessed September 9, 2013).

"Dr. Louis. B. McBrayer, Leader In War on Tuberculosis, Dies." The Pilot [Southern Pines & Aberdeen, N.C.] April 8, 1938. http://library.digitalnc.org/cdm/ref/collection/newspilot/id/9238 [8] (accessed September 9, 2013).

Brenizer, Addison G. "Doctor Lewis Burgin McBrayer." Transactions of the Medical Society of the State of North Carolina [serial]. Raleigh, N.C.: Edwards & Broughton. 1938. 87-88. http://archive.org/stream/transactions851938medi#page/86/mode/2up [9] (accessed September 9, 2013).

Image Credits:

"Lewis B. McBrayer, M.D., Asheville." Photograph. One hundred year history of the North Carolina State Board of Medical Examiners, 1859-1959. Raleigh, N.C. : The Board. 1959. 37. Internet Archive. http://archive.org/stream/onehundredyearhi00proc#page/n47/mode/2up [2]

Subjects:
Biography [10]
Physicians [11]

Print this page | Return to Marker

ID:P-35

Marker Text:
DR. L. B. McBRAYER
Leader in fight against tuberculosis in North Carolina, Superintendent of State Sanatorium in Hoke County, 1914-24. His birthplace is 400 ft. W.

Essay:

Louis Burgin McBrayer, physician and tuberculosis specialist, was born on December 27, 1868, the only child of Adolphus and Lou A. Case McBrayer. As a young boy he attended Venable School and Newton Academy in Asheville, as well as Judson College in Hendersonville. After finishing high school, McBrayer entered Louisville Medical College in Louisville, Kentucky, where he received the M.D. degree in 1889.

After his graduation from medical school, McBrayer returned to North Carolina, operating a general practice in Asheville until 1914. He also served as Buncombe County coroner from 1901 to 1907, and the Asheville heath officer from 1910 to 1914. He operated as chief surgeon at Asheville's Mission Hospital and for the Southern Railway. Considered one of the finest physicians in North Carolina, from 1908 to 1914, McBrayer was president of the State Board of Medical Examiners.

The effects of tuberculosis intrigued McBrayer during his time in Asheville. Determined to help in fighting the disease, McBrayer took a post in April 1914 as superintendent of the North Carolina State Sanatorium in Hoke County, and as head of the Bureau of Tuberculosis inside the State Board of Health. He held the positions for the next ten years, before moving to Southern Pines. He served as head of the North Carolina Medical Society beginning in 1915, and backed the incorporation of Hospital Savings Association as a Blue Cross plan in 1935.

McBrayer married Lillian Cordelia Deaver on July 20, 1890, and they had three children: Reuben Adolphus, Sadie Lou, and Louis Burgin II. Before his death on April 1, 1938, McBrayer served as chairman of the board of trustees for the Order of Odd Fellows orphanage in Goldsboro, as well as grand marshall of the Sovereign Lodge in 1934. McBrayer also dabbled in genealogy, coauthoring McBrayer Genealogy with Mrs. Charles R. Whitaker in 1926. He is buried at Bethesda Cemetery in Aberdeen.

References:
William S. Powell, ed., Dictionary of North Carolina Biography, IV, 121—sketch by Paul M. McCain
William S. Powell, ed., Encyclopedia of North Carolina History (2006)

Dorothy Long, ed., Medicine in North Carolina, 2 vols. (1972)
L. B. McBrayer and Mrs. Charles R. Whitaker, McBrayer Genealogy (1926)

Location:
NC 191 south of Asheville
County: Buncombe

Original Date Cast: 1952-P

© 2009 North Carolina Office of Archives & History — Department of Cultural Resources

Gentlemen from W.E. Logan's croquet party at his home, 124 Logan Ave., West Asheville, NC, ca. 1895. W.E. Logan (1860-1916) is on the far left. Lewis Burgin McBrayer (1869-1920), W.E.'s brother-in-law, is on the far right.

Louis Burgin McBrayer I., Louis Burgin McBrayer II., Louis Burgin McBrayer III., Southern Pines, N. C.

Lillian Codelia "Cordie" Deaver McBrayer (1868 – 1920 or 21)
Wife of Dr. L.B. McBrayer, married July 20, 1890

MOORE COUNTY'S LEADING
NEWS-WEEKLY

THE PILOT

A Paper Devoted to the Upbuilding of the Sandhill Territory of North Carolina

VOL. 18, NO. 19. Southern Pines and Aberdeen, North Carolina, Friday, April 8, 1938.

N. C. Collection
N. C. University Library

FIRST IN CIRCULA
ADVER

Dr. Louis B. McBrayer, Leader In War on Tuberculosis, Dies

Former Head of State Association and Secretary of State Medical Society Passes at 69

Funeral services for Dr. Louis Burgin McBrayer, former Executive Director of the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association and for many years Secretary of the North Carolina Medical Society, were held in Bethesda Church, Aberdeen last Saturday afternoon. Dr. McBrayer passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. P. P. McCain, at Sanatorium, early last Friday morning following a long illness of pernicious anaemia.

Services were conducted by the Rev. J. Fred Stinson of the Southern Pines Baptist Church, assisted by the Rev. A. D. Caswell of the Presbyterian Church of Raeford. Surviving members of the Sandhills Sixteen, of which Dr. McBrayer was a member, sang. The church was filled to overflowing with friends and associates of one who had played a prominent part in the upbuilding of this section of the state, as well as in medicine. The medical fraternity was represented by more than 100 physicians from this and other states, and delegations were present from various organizations, including the Southern Pines Chamber of Commerce, the Sandhills Kiwanis Club, the U. S. Highway No. 1 Association, in all of which Dr. McBrayer was active during his lifetime.

Dr. McBrayer was born in Buncombe county, December 27, 1868, the son of Adolphus and Lou Case McBrayer. He attended Newton Academy, Asheville; Judson College, Hendersonville and received his M. D. from the University of Louisville, Ky., in 1890. He held his first public office as Coroner of Buncombe county in 1901. He was surgeon for ten years on the staff of Mission Hospital, Asheville, and was a surgeon for the Southern Railway. He organized and built the Asheville model city health department which attracted attention throughout the nation; designed and put into use the first sanitary service closets ever built, later adopted throughout the United States. By proper sanitation and hygiene he reduced the typhoid rate of Asheville from 150 with 15 deaths annually, to 15 cases and no deaths. He organized the first medical milk commission in the South in charge of certified milk. He was first president of the North Carolina Public Health Association. In 1903 he was Grand Master of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, serving as Grand Representative to the Soverign Grand Lodge for six years. He organized the Rebekah branch of the Odd Fellows in North Carolina.

From 1914 to 1924 he was superintendent of the North Carolina State Sanatorium at Montrose and was chief of the Bureau of Tuberculosis of the State Board of Health, organ-

(Please turn to page 10)

Dies in 70th Year

DR. LOUIS B. McBRAYER

(Continued from page one)

izing the State for its fight against tuberculosis, continuing this work as managing-director until 1937. He founded the training school for nurses at the State Sanitorium, serving as dean for ten years. He was first vice-president of the State Medical Society in 1906; president of the State Board of Medical Examiners from 1908 to 1914; president of the Medical Society of the state in 1915; secretary-treasurer from 1921 to 1937, and was a charter member of the Southern Conference of Tuberculosis and a former president. He was a Fellow of the American College of Physicians.

Dr. McBrayer came to Southern Pines in 1924 and took a keen interest in the development of the town and the Sandhills resort area. He served two terms as president of the Chamber of Commerce and was a director until 1936. He was president of the Sandhills Fruit Growers Association and also served two terms of president of the U. S. Highway No. 1 Association.

He was married to Miss Lillian Cordelia Deaver, Asheville, who died at the State Sanatorium in 1921. He is survived by two sons, Dr. Reuben A. McBrayer, Summit, N. J. and Louis Burgin McBrayer, Jr., Greensboro, and a daughter, Mrs. Sarah Louise McCain, wife of Dr. P. P. McCain, superintendent of the State Sanatorium.

Flowers left for Lewis McBrayer

A Talented ManDr. LEWIS BURGIN McBRAYERThere is a continuing question about the spelling of his first name. The article here spells it "Lewis." The genealogy book written by him and his cousin, Mrs. C. R. Whitaker, uses the spelling "Louis" for him, his son and his grandson as shown in the caption of the picture below taken from the book. Adding to the confusion is the WW I Registration Card found on Ancestry.com for his son with the name written in his hand as "Lewis BurginMcBrayer, Jr.." So maybe we should just refer to him as Dr. L. B. McBrayer as it is most commonly found.In Defiance - Volume 18, Number 4 - Page 8 Dr. Lewis Burgin McBrayer; A Big Man and His Big Work Head of State's Campaign Against Tuberculosis – What He Has Done and What May BeExpected of Him.A big man insufficiently motivated furnishes cause for inexpressible sadness, and a big idea running looseoften smashes scores of small men who through ignorance or perversity seek to block its progress; but couplethe two and history is made, lives and souls are saved and the world made a better and cleaner habitation foreven the small fry by the work of the leader and his principle. The physical health of mankind sub-divides intomany causes large enough to demand the highest self-sacrifice, the intensest zeal and most finished workmanship; but among the many ills which flesh should not be heir to tuberculosis has probably the most horror for the greatest number. North Carolina's fight against tb's dread disease has at times lagged for one cause and another, but largely because it was waiting for a big man to jump into the breach, close up the ranks, boss the job and deliver a prolonged consistent attack on the enemy's stronghold.That time has passed: the fight, God willing. is henceforth to be a winning one The overburdened State Department of Health has found the leader for the anti-tuberculosis forces; arid Dr. Lewis Burgin McBrayer of Asheville eminently fit, has elected to give himself to the ideal.That the people of the State may come to a realization of what manner of man Doctor McBrayer is, and why the prophecy is made that he will show results. The Observer undertakes to give an estimate of him, what he has done, how and why he has done it and why the people have a right to expect effectiveness from their champion.Doctor McBrayer is primarily a winner; and he wins because he fights for principle - for others, not self-aggrandizement. To those familiar with his work as city health officer of Asheville he needs no introduction as a capable workman who delivers the goods. Asheville has a national reputation as a sanitary town and a death rate especially low, in spite of the fact it is a resort patronized by tubercular patients. He was elected health officer in 1900. The job, as others, came to him unsolicited and he at first refused to accept. Themayor insisting, after considering the public need, he agreed to take up the work AS CITY HEALTH OFFICER.Once entered upon his duties,his time, his talents and his energies were given unsparingly. In the fouryears he was in charge he saw develop—rather. he developed - in every detail the most complete health department in the South, and a department perhaps nearer perfection than any in the United States. This is proven by the records at Asheville, the common testimony of health workers from all over the country and by the death rate from all diseases The city's appropriation for the department was increased $10,000 a year during his term of service, and just as he was leaving all the machinery had been arranged for the levying of a special tax for the collection of all kinds of refuse, trash and garbage. To this tax, which has since been levied, there was no objection made by the citizens.While at the head of Asheville health department Doctor McBrayer established The Asheville Health Bulletin the first city health bulletin in the United States to be admitted to the mails as second-class matter.This not only helped Asheville, but served as a model to cities throughout the Nation.KNOWS TUBERCULOSIS.At Asheville his work brought him into contact with tuberculosis, especially the public health side of it, as he would probably have never been able to see it in any other town in the country. The laws of Asheville are the most progressive and advanced in dealing with this plague of any city in the United States and his partin getting them enacted was no small one.Early in this year the State Board of Health turned to this man who had shown himself especially fitted towage a consistent and effective fight on behalf of the health of the public and asked him to take charge of theState Tuberculosis Sanatorium. Quite promptly he refused the offer ----State tasks are often thankless and arenever well enough paid to appeal financially to a private citizen of the doctor's capabilities. Secretary Rankin, however, kept urging and Doctor McBrayer finally seeing the matter in the light of a duty imposed on him by his religion of service, consented to undertake the task, which was made larger— and therefor, more to his liking —by the decision of the State Board of Health to combine with the sanatorium and make of it the dynamo to furnish the generating current for the fight of North Carolina against tuberculosis.NOT A MONEY JOB.Fortunately, he is not dependent solely upon his salary for a living, as he had accumulated sufficient meansto provide for his family; but there is nothing in his past life of service which justify the belief that be wouldhave refused such a splendid chance for yeomanly work if he had been a poor man. He could well have felt thatthe impress left by him on Asheville was one that could not die and would be of lasting good not only to hisown city, but through it, to the whole of mankind.In Defiance - Volume 18, Number 4 - Page 9The work on behalf of the State enlarges his field of usefulness and the call to arms was thereforeimperative. At this time in his life, his going to the sanatorium really means that he has devoted the ripeexperience and trained talent of the best days of his life to service to his own people.MANY-SIDED MAN.But, effective as Doctor McBrayer is and as devoted as is his service, the idea must not be entertained thathe is merely a physician, with the physician's interests alone. Calling him a big man was the use of nomisnomer; and the big man must always have many interests.Born in Buncombe County December 27, 1869, a son of the late Adolphus McBrayer, he is of Scotch-Irishdescent, and his mother, Laura A. Case was one of the prominent pioneer families of the section. First attending the public schools and later private institutions, he finished his literary training at Judson College,Hendersonville, while the late Dr. J.B. Boone was its president. The Summer after he was 18 years of age hebegan the study of medicine, first reading under Dr. J. A. Burroughs, and then going to Louisville Medical College, from which he graduated in February, 1890, barely 21 years of age, but third in a class of 103, although the first and second honor men and many others had had a year more time in the school than he.FAMILY OF ABILITY.Shortly after graduation be married Miss Cordie Deaver of Asheville, daughter of R. M. and Sarah A. Deaver.Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. McBrayer: Reuben, 22 years of age and an A. B. of Wake ForestCollege, now in his Junior year of medicine in the University of Pennsylvania; Miss Sadie, aged 19, a Junior of the State Normal College, and Lewis McBrayer, 13, now a high school junior.Before the Board at Examiners the year after his graduation. Doctor McBrayer took a high stand, and in the November election was chosen as county coroner, an office which the Asheville lawyers said he magnified.He held this office for six years, refusing to accept a fourth term.From the outset he took a prominent part In the county medical soclety, as president inaugurated its annual banquet, and in 1905 was elected the president of the State Medical Society, in 1906 at Charlotte theState society elected him orator and his oration at Morehead City the following year at once placed him in the front rank of the public speakers of the State. In 1908 he was elected a member of the State Board of Examinerswhich office he held until that June.In June 1911, he was selected as the first president of the State HealthOfficers Association and his executive ability and far-sightedness played an important part in the success andhigh state of efficiency which that organization attained.PRESIDENT STATE SOCIETY.At present he is president of the State Medical Society, has been for four years a member of the committeeon public policy and legislation of the State society and also serves on a like committee of the examiners.Believing in his profession as a means of serving his fellow men, he takes an active interest in anything thatmakes for progress in medicine. When he left Asheville he was vice president of the Mission of the GoodSamaritan, a member of Associated Charities, of the county and city boards of health. on the staff of the Mission Hospital, consulting surgeon for the Southern Railway, a director of the State School for the Feeble-Minded, director of the North Carolina Conference for Social Service and health officer for the city.Always busy, he liked his work and people, the members of his own profession esteemed him and so didthe public.MEMBER OF BAPTIST CHURCH.While Doctor McBrayer's religion is essentially a belief in service, he has long been an active and consistentmember of the Baptist Church, making his profession of faith and being baptized at the age of 11 years. InAsheville he was at one time superintendent of the West End Baptist Sunday school. and when Governor Craigleft Asheville became substitute teacher of the First Church Baraca class. He holds membership in severalfraternal orders, but has been most active, as an Odd Fellow. In 1900 he became grand warden of the GrandLodge and in 1903 grand master, For about nine years he has been a trustee of the Odd Fellow's Orphans Home. He took hold of the Patriachs' Militant branch in this State, threw life into it, early became its head and now is (text missing in original document printing)POLITICS.Having been in public life so constantly, Doctor McBrayer could never have escaped activity in politics, but this has been characterized by high ideals. The people have always known where to place him, for he has always been found fighting for what he thought right. He believes that politics is all-pervading having its placein fraternal organizations, medical societies, bar and press associations and Church, as well as in nominatingconventions. It Is therefore the duty of man, in his view, to take a strong, honorable stand in politics of all kinds.After the convention which nominated J. M, Gudger, Jr., for Congress in 1900 and in which the doctor hadcharge of the Gudger forces, one of his friends remarked that Doctor McBrayer was equally at home at abanquet, a. prayer meeting or a political convention.As a writer and speaker he has won recognition. Easy and fluent on the floor, he also writes brilliantly andIn Defiance - Volume 18, Number 4 - Page 10 scientifically. He is a contributing editor of The State Health Bulletin and has written many contributions for State papers.WILL DELIVER GOODS.In fact, Dr. L. B McBrayer doesn't know how many things he can do. He's done everything he ever set outto do and so much that he hasn't had time to try more different things. Temporary defeat does not discouragehim and he can't understand failure. Believing that right will prevail, he first of all picks out the right courseand to this he sticks so tenaciously that he cannot be shaken loose. He has been momentarily balked of his object now and then, but he has never been licked.. He has gone into the State-wide crusade against tuberculosis with the same old spirit, has made a wonderfully good beginning under difficulties that would bring dismay to most men and is still on the job. believing in his work living his religion and not in the least frightened by the size of his task.It the job licks him (and who can believe it will?) there will have been a fight that will make the wholecountry sit up and take notice. There's no way to down a big man who is a practical idealist. (CHARLOTTE DAILY OBSERVER - North Carolina - Sunday, 27 September 1914 - page 25 - GenealogyBank.com)While this article was 'buried" on page 25 out of 28 total, it was a longer article than the lead article on page 1 headlined "Germans Make Gains; Both Sides Continue Hard Fight." Dr. McBrayer shared his page with a number of articles and two advertisements. One ad was an Automobile Directory listing the following cars: Buick, ChaseMotor Truck, Ford (a touring car cost $595), Hudson, Hupmobile, Saxon, Briscoe and Overland.Dr. McBrayer was also a poet. In my personal collection of McBrayer memorabilia, there is a small 32 page booklet, "The Doctor's There - A Note of Appreciation" which was distributed by the G. W. Carnrick Company of NewYork and London. While the booklet is not dated, it is believed to have been in the latter part of the 1910's. Thefirst 21 pages are devoted to poems and stories about doctors. The rest is advertising for Carnrick's products, most of which are glandular products such as desiccated brain, spinal cord, liver and thyroid.On page 2 is Dr. McBrayer's poem.One of the products advertised in the booklet is "Kinazyme," a rational therapeutic adjuvant to the ordinaryhygienic measures used in the treatment of tuberculosis. It was composed of thyroid, pituitary, spleen, pancreas and liver with calcium tablets. One of the doctors promoting its use was "the superintendent of a large publicsanitarium" who uses it in the treatment of tuberculosis. But I'm sure you can all make a good guess who that was!The Doctor's ThereWhen in the cottage blessed with Love's sweet storeA babe is born and o'er the rustic doorIs hung the crown of motherhood, and fairIs all within—the Doctor's there.When 'neath the pall of mystic Death's weird spellA mother' heart is broken by the knellOf all that's dear, and on the stairNo baby feet—the Doctor's there.When virtue flees and breath of ruthless lustEats into the soul as does the gnawing rust,When no one else with her the shame will share,With mother's touch—the Doctor's there.Where blossoms Life's sweet Bud at blush of day,Where breath of withered rose at eve-tide steals awayOn the South wind—in joy and care,An uncrowned king—the Doctor's there.L B. McBrayer, M. D., Asheville, N. C.In Defiance - Volume 18, Number 4 - Page 11

- Mel and Carole

Added: Jun. 27, 2011

Privacy Statement and Terms of Service

L.B.McBRAYER,M.D.
1868 — 1938

Marriage Asheville 1953

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE N. C.
Thursday, November 5, 1953

Grace Devine Is Bride Of A. W. McCabe

Miss Grace M. Devine, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hugh P. Devine of Asheville, became the bride of Arthur William McCabe, North Platte, Neb., son of Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas McCabe of North Platte, Saturday morning in St. Lawrence Roman Catholic Church.

The Rt. Rev. Msgr. Louis J. Bour, pastor, conducted the service. White chrysanthemums were used in the decorations, and a program was presented by Mrs. Dorothy Peeke, organist, and James Flynn, vocalist.

The bride was given in marriage by J. D. Brown. She wore a royal blue silk gabardine suit, matching hat and a white orchid.

Mrs. Vance O. Ayers, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and wore a beige gabardine suit with brown accessories and a white rose corsage.

Vance O. Ayers, brother-in-law of the bride, was best man. Ushers were Claude Pless and William E. Wilson, brother-in-law of the bride.

A wedding breakfast followed in the Grove Room, Battery Park Hotel.

The couple left for a trip north and upon returning will reside at 48 Grove Street. Mrs. McCabe attended St. Genevieve-of-the-Pines. Mr. McCabe was graduated from St. Mary College, St. Mary, Kan.

— Juanita Wilson Photo

MR. AND MRS. ARTHUR WILLIAM McCABE

BRANNON McCABE MRS. McCABE RAUCHWERGER

ATTENDING SEMINAR—Four Asheville persons are attending a two-week National Security Seminar at Donaldson Air Force Base in Greenville, S. C. Lt. Col. J. L. Brannon and Lt. Col. S. M. Rauchwerger are reserve officers, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur McCabe represent Civil Defense. The seminar is designed to acquaint civilians and reserve officers with the nation's military and economic strength and weaknesses. It is conducted by the Industrial College of the Armed Forces.

M. L. McCall Is Improving His Circulation Service

Hustler Will Give Race To Winner Is Belief Of His Friends

M. L. McCall, 75 Logan Avenue, West Asheville, has been with The Citizen only a short time, but during his brief connection he has established a record for improved collections and is showing a steady increase.

McCall handles The Citizen route to the right of Haywood and between the Bridge and the end of the car line. McCall came to The Citizen from the Southern Railway and his many friends who are still with the railroad company are eager to see eager to see him succeed in his new field as shown by the number who have already favored him with their subscriptions.

McCall says he is in The Citizen contest to determine the Best All-Round carrier to win one of the better prizes and judging from the showing he has already made, some of the other fellows are going to have to hustle to be ahead of him when the final count is made.

Merits are given to the men for good service, improved collections, advance payments by both old and new subscribers, increases, new start orders, reporting on time, good delivery service, etc., while demerits are scored agains them for stop orders, poor collections, deceases, repoting late and for poor deliveries.

Hustler

M. L. McCall, who handles The Citizen between the West Asheville bridge and the end of the car line to the right of Haywood road and makes a good job of it. He is out to win in The Citizen Carrier contest.

Asheville Citizen August 12, 1930

THE SUNDAY CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

NEWS OF WEST ASHEVILLE

Citizen Bureau, 729½ Haywood Road
Telephone 1602

West Asheville's Two Model Homes

Above are the two model homes selected by the West Asheville Community Club for the community exhibition during Better Homes Week, beginning tomorrow and ending April 26. At the top is the beautiful Spanish type stucco residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hauk, 165 Vermont Avenue, the model large home. The spacious living room with its arched entrance is shown at the left. Lower right is the model small home, the property of Misses Fannie B. and DeKtta McCoy, which is located at 25 Clinton Avenue. The well-lighted and cozy living room with its modern furnishings and interior decorating, planned by the Community Club, is shown at the left. —Staff Photo by Michael

Asheville Citizen April 21, 1929

Organization Sponsors Model Home Exhibition

West Asheville Plans Varied Program For Civic Event

With the opening at noon of the first of two model homes planned for the community exhibition, the Better Homes Week campaign was launched in West Asheville yesterday by the West Asheville Community club and other organizations.

Co-sponsors of the campaign and community program for the event include schools, churches and a large group of citizens enthused with civic pride.

The model small home, a brick bungalow located at 25 Clinton avenue, the property of the Misses Fannie and DeEtta McCoy, has been furnished and decorated along modern lines, with landscape work done by a competent designer. At the opening a large number of people were present, and viewed the beautiful and well arranged interior decorations and furniture. During Better Homes Week, April 20-28, the home will be in charge of a hostess committee headed by Mrs. Raymond H. Omcer, chairman of the Model Homes committee of the Community Club.

Interior Decoration

Interior decorating was in charge of C. W. Marshall, of Denton and company, who recently came to Asheville from Daytona Beach, Fla. Mr. Marshall is known as one of the most competent interior decorators in the South, having assisted in beautifying the interiors of some of its finest homes. In addition to a number of the largest and costliest homes in Miami, he did interior decorating work in the Daytona Beach homes of John D. Rockefeller, Sr., J. E. Delaney, lumber king, Albert Brumley, of the New York stock exchange, and others. The interior decorating of the beautiful Daytona Beach Golf and Country club home and the Halifax district hospital was also handled by him.

The furniture for the model home was furnished by the West Asheville branch of Sterchi Brothers. This is the fourth home the concern has furnished in Asheville in connection with community events.

Mrs. W. C. Brownson, former president of the Community Club, and well-known landscape artist, supervised the landscape planning for the home. Mrs. Brownson is noted for her interest in this work, and her beautiful planning of the grounds at Aycock school on Haywood road has been commended by citizens and civic groups of the community.

Model Large Home

The model large home which will be open on the final two days of Better Homes Week, is located at 165 Vermont avenue, and is the property of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hauk. One of the most beautiful homes in West Asheville, its selection as the model large home was influenced by the ideal arrangement of the furnishings and interior decorating which made it suitable for exhibition purposes.

While on exhibition the home will be in charge of Mrs. Hauk and a committee composed of members of the Community Club.

Prize Awards

A number of prizes will be awarded in connection with the campaign. These prizes have been donated by West Asheville merchants and will be on exhibition at the model small home until the final evening when they will be given to winners in contests to be conducted. The contests pertain to the improvement of homes and grounds and merchants donating awards include the Carolina Power and Light company, Sterchi Brothers, Barker's department store, I. M. Teague, Shelder's Pharmacy, and D. L. Moyde, manager of the Southern Hardware corporation.

Judges appointed for the contests are the Rev. J. S. Hiatt, pastor of the West Asheville Methodist church, Mrs. W. C. Brownson and Mrs. C. B. Anderson.

Clean-up Campaign

In connection with Better Homes Week, the city-wide "Clean-up Campaign" planned by civic organizations and citizens of Asheville, is being promoted in every section of West Asheville. Residents are being urged to clean up unsightly grounds and premises, and where needed to repaint homes and other buildings. As a result of the efforts made in this direction many improvements are now being made. A number of homes have been repaired and painted, and lawns and shrubbery given attention, lending a more beautiful atmosphere to the community.

The West Asheville "clean-up" program will be directed by a group of organized workers, cooperating with the civic organizations and city officials. Plans are being made to assist home owners in planning improvements and promoting their interest in a better and more beautiful community.

Hundreds of people are expected to visit the two model homes during the exhibition week, and their inclusion in the plans of the club for Better Homes Week has attracted community-wide interest and commendation.

Asheville Citizen April 21, 1929

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN
TUESDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1919.

YOUNG BOY MISSING SINCE EARLY SATURDAY

Whether Raymond McFallin Has Met With Foul Play Still Speculative. No Trace of the Boy.

Raymond McFallin, a 14 year old boy and brother-in-law to E. W. Collins, 113 Westwood place, failed to return home Sunday morning from the depot where he works at night, and whether the lad has met with foul play, or whether he has run away from his home, is a matter of speculation. Efforts Sunday and all day yesterday failed to reveal any trace of his whereabouts.

The last time he was seen was Sunday morning about 10:30 o'clock at Brown's crossing, and no trace of where he went from there has been found.

He wore light riding pants, leather leggins, a brown coat and black cap, when he left the station Sunday morning. The boy has black hair and weighs about 105 pounds. Any person knowing anything about where the boy has gone and whether he has been abducted are asked to communicate with police headquarters or E. W. Collins, 113 Westwood place.

OUT THERE

News and briefs from around the region

NAMELESS NO MORE

Rhododendron Creek it is.

Twelve-year-old Henry McGuire of West Asheville won a contest to name a creek that runs through his community. Henry did several interviews with long-time West Asheville residents who remember the old Rhododendron Park that was near the confluence of the unnamed creek and Hominy Creek at the Aston Park Health Center.

The Asheville Greenway Commission wants to put a greenway along the creek, which runs along Sand Hill Road south of Wachovia Bank on Haywood Road, through the West Asheville Park, crossing Shelburne Road and into Hominy Creek.

Asheville City Council will adopt the name "Rhododendron Creek" on Tuesday. The city will then forward the decision to the U.S. Board of Geographic Names for official recognition and adoption.

Asheville Citizen August 7, 2003

The Police Review

VOLUME 6 MARCH, 1927 NUMBER 3

JAMES L. McHONE
Patrolman
ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

James L. McHone born February 18th, 1875 in Madison County, North Carolina, where he enjoyed the peaceful, tranquil existence of a farmer.

For thirty-five years he was a resident of his native County and like all farmers arose with the lark, went out with the early birds and CAUGHT the worms.

You have heard the old saying about "taking the man out of the country but not being able to take the country out of the man?"

Well Officer McHone doesn't want the country out of him—he knows that's where he gained his valuable knowledge and he knows as does every one else most men that amount to any thing are products of the country or small towns.

There aren't any hay seeds on him and never were, he thought the ground and not himself the proper place for them.

Did you ever see a neater or handsomer officer?

6 feet 2½ inches tall and 245 pounds heavy.

Officer McHone came with the department in 1920 and likes it because he finds it interesting.

He likes it for another reason—he likes to serve the public and the public likes to have him because he is courteous and efficient.

He still has the trait of the farmer—he would rather think or listen than talk—at least he doesn't like to talk of himself which makes it difficult to give him a fair write-up.

He resides at No. 57 Nevada Avenue.

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY, MARCH 25, 1934

Family Stairsteps -- 7 Children In 10 Years

Ten years of married life have brought the Rev. and Mrs. Paul McIntyre, of Deaver's View, the seven children with whom they are pictured above. Mr. McIntyre was only 20 years of age and his wife 16 when they met in her home city of Cincinnati and were married. Mr. McIntyre, an evangelist in the Wesleyan M. E. church, and his family came to Deaver's View from Fletcher, N. C., last September. He is a native of Asheville and has relatives living here. Reading from left to right, members of the family are: Mr. McIntyre, 30, and Stanley Lee McIntyre, 9 months; Mrs. McIntyre, 26; Paul, Jr., 9; Betty Jane, 8, Ruth, 6; Jack, 4; Lorraine, 3; and Peggy Anne, 2.

Asheville Citizen March 25, 1934

MAJOR M'KEE WILL TALK TO THE BOYS

Major S. R. McKee, of the faculty of the Hingham school will address the boys' meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock on the subject of "Temptation." For the first time in the history of the boys' meetings, a special musical program has been arranged which will include selections by W. R. Hammersiough and Mrs. R. Stanley Goodheart.

The meetings for boys originated with the basketball league, it having been one of the rules of the league that all players should attend the Sunday afternoon meetings. The league has closed but it has been decided to continue the meetings and it is believed that the former members of teams will attend with regularity. All boys of the city whether members of the organization or not are invited to hear Major McKee Sunday afternoon.

Asheville Citizen March 7, 1912

Col. M'Kee Passes At Age Of 82

Col. S. Reid McKee, 82, of Bingham Heights, who retired in 1928 as superintendent of Bingham school, died about noon yesterday in a local hospital following a short illness.

Following his retirement, which resulted from ill health, Col. McKee remained active in church and civic affairs.

Born in Mecklenberg county in 1864, he was educated at the Fort Mill academy in South Carolina, where he graduated in 1883. He then attended Davidson college and graduated in 1888 with a B.A. degree.

Bingham Instructor

Following his graduation from Davidson, Col. McKee went to Bingham school, then at Mebane, as an instructor. He remained with the school for four years, coming to Asheville in 1891 when the institution was moved here after fire had destroyed a large part of the building at Mebane.

In 1892 he went to Johns Hopkins university as a graduate student and received his Ph.D degree there in 1895. Chemistry, physics, and minerology were the subjects he studied, and after receiving his degree Col. McKee became professor of chemistry at Ogden college, Bowling Green, Ky. While holding this post he married Miss Mary Kerr Bingham, daughter of Col. Robert Bingham, grandson of the founder of Bingham school and at that time head of the school. Mrs. McKee died in 1932.

In 1899 he became professor of chemistry at Southwestern university, Clarksville, Tenn., a Presbyterian institution. Six years later he left that university to return to Bingham school.

Science Master

He served as science master at Bingham school from 1905 until 1915, when he became vice-superintendent. Upon retirement of Col. Bingham as active head in 1920, Col. McKee became superintendent.

He was a member of Alpha Epsilon fraternity and of the First Presbyterian church, where he served as an elder for many years.

Col. McKee is survived by one son, Robert Bingham McKee, two daughters, the Misses Martha Reid and Sadie Temple McKee, all of Bingham Heights; one brother, W. N. McKee of Matthews; and a sister-in-law, Mrs. R. T. Grinnan of Bingham Heights.

Funeral arrangements, under the direction of Morris-Gearing funeral home, were incomplete last night.

COL. S. REID M'KEE

—Continued From Page One

Col. M'Kee

Asheville Citizen September 30, 1946

FRIDAY MORNING, JANUARY 11, 1929

ASHEVILLE MAN KILLED BY TRAIN

Mangled Body Of Walter McKenzie Found At Hot Springs

A coroner's jury reported "death caused by fall from a freight train" following an inquest held at Hot Springs early yesterday morning over the body of Walter Lee McKenzie, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. McKenzie, of 300 Westwood Place, West Asheville. Dr. Frank Roberts, of Marshall, Madison county coroner, informed The Citizen in long distance telephone message last night. Dr. Roberts was called to Hot Springs from Marshall to attend the inquest and post-mortem examination.

Young McKenzie was killed late Wednesday night. His mangled and decapitated body was found by boys who were running alongside a freight train which was slowly passing through the town. It is believed that the train was the same one from which the youth fell to his death. The incident was reported to Craig Ramsey, chief of police of Hot Springs, and Sheriff R. R. Ramsey, of Marshall, was also notified. The train dispatcher at Hot Springs had the body removed from the track and held, pending an inquest.

Boys Silent

Six boys, said to have been companions of the youth were held and questioned. However, officers at Hot Springs said last night that they refused to give any information or even divulge their names. A relative of the deceased also stated last night that the boys, all of whom are said to live in Asheville, had refused to give any information as to how McKenzie met his death, and have not given their names. No charges had been preferred against them last night.

The head and left arm of the youth were completely severed from the body by the train wheels, Dr Roberts stated.

Body Brought Here

The father, who is foreman of the Asheville Cotton Mills, left late yesterday afternoon for Hot Springs, and brought the body of his son to West Asheville.

The youth had recently ended a period of four years service in the U. S. Navy, and was spending some time with his parents.

Funeral service will be held at the home at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon, the Rev. J. B. Grice, pastor of the West Asheville Baptist church, officiating. Interment will be in the Greenwood cemetery.

Pall bearers, composed of boyhood friends of the deceased, will be Frank Brown, Arnold Brinkley, Robert Whittaker, Clarence Howell, Roy Meadows and Fred McIntyre.

Surviving are the parents, and two brothers, Frank, of Asheville, and Clarence E., Jr., of South Bend, Ind.; also four sisters, Misses Margaret, Thelma, and Nellie McKenzie, and Mrs. J. M. Taylor, all of Asheville.

Asheville Citizen January 11, 1929

—Citizen Photo—Shloman

WOMAN OF THE WEEK

The secret of getting things done is organization of projects, according to Mrs. William P. McLean of 14 Stewart St. She should be able to pass this on from experience.

After meeting Mr. McLean while he was serving in the U. S. Army, the former Miss Joyce Cox of Corpus Christi, Tex., came to Asheville as a bride in 1945. Since that time she has made a very definite place for herself in the community. She terms herself a handyman and chauffeur.

Her friends say she is one individual who turns off more work than half a dozen would attempt. At the West Asheville Presbyterian Church where she and her husband are active members, she has been known to take down the Venetian blinds, take them home, wash them and replace them in no time at all. Addressing 600 envelopes for the church office is an overnight job. She sees a job needing to be done and is at it before anyone else thinks of doing it.

Presently serving her second year as president of Eugene Rankin PTA and third year as head of the Women of the Church she spends one day a month as a clerical helper at the Well-Baby Clinic. (She is a former secretary.)

In spite of all the community service crowded into her life, Mrs. McLean says the welfare of her family comes first. She and Mr. McLean, a letter carrier, so arrange their schedules that one parent is at home with their sons, Billy, who will be nine years old Jan. 1, and Benny, nearly seven. They enjoy working together on projects. Last summer they completed a guest room in the attic of the house and then built a patio. At present they are helping the boys with their Christmas microscopes and telescopes.

Mrs. McLean finds time to grow African violets from leaf cuttings, make her own and some of the boys' clothes and bake Christmas cookies for all of the teachers at the school.

Her sense of humor is another asset. Recently she was to participate in a program at a PTA meeting and arranged her notes carefully on the rostrum. When the time came for her speech she found the speaker preceding her had picked up her notes with his own. She laughed and asked for her notes back.

Asheville Citizen
January 1962

LAST RITES FOR VICTIMS OF AIR CRASH SET TODAY

Gardner And McMillan Will Be Buried At Double Funeral

Funeral services for three West Asheville youths who were killed in an airplane crash near Fletcher Sunday afternoon will be conducted today.

The bodies of Graham Gardner, 18, pilot of the plane, and Sam McMillan, passenger, will be placed in a single grave at Green Hill cemetery. The body of Paul Yow, 22, also a passenger in the plane, was sent to Asheboro, N. C., yesterday for burial this afternoon.

Services for Gardner and McMillan, life-long chums, will be conducted from the West Asheville Baptist church this afternoon at 3 o'clock with the Rev. F. M. Dowell, pastor of the church, and the Rev. G. T. Bond, pastor of the West Asheville Methodist church, officiating.

Gardner is survived by his parents, Dr. G. D. Gardner and Mrs. Fannie Gardner, of West Asheville, and one sister Lois Jean Gardner. McMillan is survived by his mother, Mrs. S. A. McMillan and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. J. J. Stokes, of Washington, D. C., Josephine, Robert, Hope and Rose McMillan of West Asheville.

Yow is survived by his widow and a four-day-old baby. Mrs. Yow, a patient at the Aston Park hospital, was told of her husband's death yesterday. Dr. C. A. Hensley told her of the tragedy which claimed the life of her husband. She is reported to have received the news bravely.

Active Pallbearers

The bodies of McMillan and Gardner will be placed in steel caskets of the same design and will be buried in the same grave. Active pallbearers for Gardner will be, Louis Lutz, Donald Ingle, Ray Householder, Lawrence Miller, Henry Shook, and Eugene Currence. Active pallbearers for McMillan will be: Glen Starnes, William Beckle, William Carter, Harold Franklin, Nelson Austin and Frank Austin.

Honorary pallbearers will be, Judge Carl B. Hyatt, George A. Digges, Jr., Dr. H. G. Brookshire, John B. Anderson, Dr. S. S. Fay, George Pennell, Dr. T. W. Sumner, J. Scroop Styles, Ernest C. May, J. W. McRary, R. E. Currence, Philip C. Cocke, Jr., Ellis C. Jones, Sam Cathey, C. H. Bartlett, L. Roy Young, G. T. Verran, D. A. Riddle, Russell Riddle, Melton Glenn, W. W. Edwards, D. T. Blackwell, William Jacobes, James Solesbee, Albert S. McMain, Fred V. Riddle, Roy Riddle, Leon Miller, Dr. G. E. Brookshire, Ted Bryson, Paul Brewer, and Johnnie Holmes.

The three youths were killed almost instantly Sunday afternoon when the two-seated Eaglerock biplane Gardner was piloting crashed near Fletcher when Gardner attempted to take the machine through a "wing-over" when the plane was at an altitude of approximately 300 feet.

T. J. Roberts, operator of the Asheville-Hendersonville airport, and owner of the plane which Gardner was flying, advised federal authorities of the accident Sunday. Officials of the Federal service were expected to arrive in Asheville to investigate the crash.

Coroner J. F. Brooks, of Henderson county, viewed the wrecked plane and came here to view the bodies of the three youths. He did not call an inquest. Dr. Brooks said that he was not notified of the accident Sunday and did not learn of the tragedy until yesterday morning. He said that he did not authorize the removal of the three bodies from the scene of the crash in Henderson county.

Asheville Citizen May 5, 1931

MAY 6, 1931

RITES HELD FOR CRASH VICTIMS

Final Chapter In Long Friendship Written For Two Boys

The final chapter of a life-long friendship between Graham Gardner, 18, and Sam McMillan, 17, was written yesterday afternoon when the bodies of the two youths were placed in a single grave in the Green Hills cemetery in West Asheville.

The two youths met their death Sunday afternoon when an airplane which Gardner was piloting crashed near Fletcher, in Henderson county. Paul Yow, 22, a second passenger in the plane, was also killed. Funeral rites for Yow were held yesterday afternoon at Asheboro, N. C.

Scores of friends of Gardner and McMillan, who associated with the two in the activities of the West Asheville Baptist church Sunday school, attended the rites for the two youths yesterday afternoon at the West Asheville Baptist church. The Rev. F. M. Dowell, pastor of the church, officiated at the services. He was assisted by the Rev. G. T. Bond, pastor of the West Asheville Methodist church.

Active pallbearers for Gardner were: Louis Lutz, Donald Ingle, Ray Householder, Lawrence Miller, Henry Shook and Eugene Currence. Active pallbearers for McMillan were: Glen Starnes, William Beckle, William Carter, Harold Frankin, Nelson Austin and Frank Austin.

Honorary pallbearers were: Judge Carl B. Hyatt, George A. Digges, Jr., Dr. H. G. Brookshire, John B. Anderson, Dr. S. S. Fay, George Pennell, Dr. T. W. Sumner, J. Scroop Styles, Ernest C. May, J. W. McRary, R. E. Currence, Philip C. Cocke, Jr., Ellis C. Jones, Sam Cathey, C. H. Bartlett, L. Roy Young, G. T. Verran, D. A. Riddle, Russell Riddle, Melton Glenn, W. W. Edwards, D. T. Blackwell, William Jacobes, James Solesbee, Albert S. McMain, Fred V. Riddle, Roy Riddle, Leon Miller, Dr. G. E. Brookshire, Ted Bryson, Paul Brewer, and Johnnie Holmes, Dr. L. R. Russell, Fletcher.

Know your child's teacher

Steve Dixon/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Emma Elementary School teacher Suzanne Bigsby talks with Roy McNeil during "Meet the Teacher Day." McNeil's 10-year-old grandson Jacob Arrington, second from left, will be in Bigsby's fourth grade class. His other grandson Zachery, 7, at left, will be a first-grader. Accompanying McNeil is "Kaiser," his Doberman, who is a search and rescue dog.

MR. AND MRS. H. P. MEDLER and their two teen-age children by former marriages, Gene and Judy, will make their home at 42 Cranford Rd., Malvern Hills. Before their marriage May 15, Mrs. Medler was Mrs. Margaret H. Jarvis of Asheville. Mr. Medler, formerly of Chevy Chase, Md., is a district representative of middle Atlantic states for Ritter Co., Inc., Medical Division. He purchased the English type house, originally built and owned by Newton Anderson, former headmaster of Asheville School for Boys, through Rex S. Smathers Jr. (Juanita Wilson Photo)

Asheville Citizen July 4, 1964

Ashvegas scopes out the W. Asheville underground

Written by

Jason Sandford

Christopher Mello

Purchase Image

Christopher Mello works in his West Asheville garden, planted largely in red hues. "I really want the garden to be as red and dark and moody as I can get it," he said, "a real Morticia Adams sort of place," / Jason Sandford/JSANDFORD@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

One freaky Eden

Big chunks of hard metal, some of it slightly rusted, sit in odd juxtaposition to tender shoots of spring seedlings.

There are shovels planted, heads up, like so many heavy-topped saplings. There's a cascading water fountain formed by layered pieces of steel. And there are plants — all kinds of plants, many with deep blue or dark red foliage.

But it's also a garden full of whimsy. Blue bottles stuck over tree limbs. There's the occasional doll's head and other odd sculpture.

Once known as "Gnomon," which is the indicator on a sun dial, the garden might generally be known as West Asheville's freaky Eden. But most know it simply as "Christopher's Garden."

Christopher Mello, a rare West Asheville native, is the garden's creator, its resident keeper. The garden grows at the busy corner of Westwood Place and Waynesville Avenue, just off Haywood Road behind the Rocket Club. It sits adjacent to the 307 Flash art studio of Mello and three other artists who are welders and potters. Mello, who used to work in steel, now works in ceramics.

Mello and his garden used to thrive at Curve Studios in the River Arts District, but he moved his studio and his garden about eight years ago into a space that once was home to a mobile home and known as a hangout for homeless people.

"It was a really rough corner," Mello says.

Since then, he's pruned and planted, sculpted and doted. "I kept digging and cleaning. It's my driving passion," Mello says. "I almost can't help myself."

Mello describes his garden as a semi-public space. "It's a little bit park, a little bit community garden."

Visitors are welcome to drop in and explore, practice their yoga or bring a blanket and read a book. In the long-term, Mello sees the garden as a vehicle to sell artwork. In the short term, it's a place for him to grow beans and cabbages and lettuces, flowers and trees.

2009-12: Gnomon

The Gnomon is the garden that Christopher Mello has created on the corner of Westwood and Waynesville Avenue off Haywood Road behind the Rocket Club and the bio-diesel pump. A gnomon is the shadow caster of a sundial and the name is in memory of a fallen gardening friend, Randy Palmer. Rest in peace Randy.

The garden is five years old now and is basically a collection of all the red and black leaved plants that i can find. Also included are plants with unusual flower shapes and colors and fragrances. I am now incorporating many edibles in the mix, lettuces, cabbages, and kales are the main thrust of the winter garden. As the garden is adjacent to My art studio at 307 Waynesville Avenue, visitors will find my rusty metal and ceramic work abounding. Perhaps the strongest feature in the garden is the waterfall constructed of giant metal plates that were once the water tower for the Chesterfield Mill in the river arts district.

This is a purposefully dark and moody garden. Hopefully as beautiful to visitors as it is to me. It is an intentionally public space and visitors are invited to revisit the garden anytime. daylight only please. Always welcome are donations of blue bottle and "dead" shovels.

Event extras: Christopher's artful creation will be available for sale

Additional photos from the day of the stroll.

Outside Clyde

Living the life of gardening on the low spot of a North Carolina mountaintop.

Monday, August 23, 2010

The Garden Of Christopher Mello

Gnomon

I stopped by

While I was in the neighborhood.

To leave Christopher a beat up old shovel

Found high atop a mountain over the border in Haywood County.

Posted byChristopher C. NC at9:15 PM

Monday, May 21, 2012

Christopher Mello's Garden

(Our vacation started earlier in the week with visits to other gardens in Raleigh, N.C., Richmond, Norfolk and Seaford, Virginia). We then headed back to Asheville for the Fling which officially started on Thursday evening with a meet and greet as a local jazz bar. On Friday morning, the garden tours began. I'm starting here with the gardens on the Garden Fling tour first. I'll be blogging about the other gardens on our trip later.)

Day 1 of the Asheville Garden Blogger's Fling started off with a bang with a visit to Christopher Mello's garden. The focus in this garden wasn't really the plants but a dazzling array of bottle trees and found objects including old rusty shovels and Tonka trucks (yes Tonka trucks!). Asheville is a meca for artists - an appropriate beginning for our tour!

Here is Mr. Mello talking about his artistic vision. I missed some of this because I was engrossed in photographing so you will have to refer to more attentive bloggers for the story behind this!

A circle of old shovels surrounds a gravel area filled with Tonka Trucks

Larkspur and company

It had rained the night before and the morning was overcast, perfect for taking photographs. We really lucked out on the weather. Most of the days were cloudy and cool. It seems like everyone grows poppies in North Carolina and you see them along the roadway borders as well. They were so beautiful. I love this combination!

A rusty trough of sedums with bottle tree (Smoke Tree - Cotinus coggygria)

www.phillipoliver.net

www.phillipoliver.net

www.phillipoliver.net

www.phillipoliver.net

Campanula (C. punctata "Cherry Bells") and Ninebark (Physocarpus opulifolius)

Asheville Garden Bloggers Fling: Christopher Mello's garden has the blues

May 30th, 2012

Blue bottles on blue trees

Blue chairs

Blue flying baby heads

Blue walls

Blue rocks

And 'Blue Pearl' poppies, the bluer ones in this group—a new cultivar selected by Christopher Mello, who welcomed nearly 90 garden bloggers into his eclectic, colorful, recycled-art garden on the first day of the Asheville Garden Bloggers Fling earlier this month.

Christopher also invites the public into his garden, particularly with enticing features like his shaggy, circular lawn…

…and corral of shovel heads on rebar stakes…

…which surrounds a gravel pit and a herd of Tonka trucks. What child—of any age—could resist?

There were plenty of pretty flowers and colorful foliage too, especially in shades of pink, purple, and red, like this campanula.

Dusky poppies

Pretty container plantings

And succulents in a recycled metal container

Christopher Mello has a remarkable ability to see possibilities in scrap metal, like this rustic, stylized stream and pond.

A tableau of tiny plants pops up through an old metal grate

Another skull? Oh yes, Asheville's gardens are teeming with them. It's a regular boneyard out there.

In Christopher's no-holds-barred garden, even a dead tree can be the most colorful focal point in sight. He painted this one bright orange and festooned the ends with blue bottles—a twist on the old Southern tradition.

A dainty, chartreuse vine twines its way up, adding additional color.

A new American Gothic? Big thanks to Christopher for sharing his free-spirited garden with us.

Secret gardens: Unlock the magic of WNC's botanical wonders

By Jen Nathan Orris on 07/30/2013 10:01 AM

Morticia's paradise
With its dark purple trees and blue poppies, Christopher D. Mello's West Asheville garden is a gothic haven. Over the past decade, he has selected the inkiest hues for plants and features in this plot of the unusual —radiating rows of clover and vintage toy trucks give the garden a whimsical, yet slightly Addams Family feel.

And a row of shovels — handles stuck in the ground, blades pointing to the sky like Stonehenge — can be seen from the street, along with bottle sculptures and other plants that would make Morticia Addams and her macabre family proud.

No gate separates the garden from West Asheville's busy streets. It's tucked behind an auto shop, around the corner from Harvest Records and not far from West Asheville Lounge and Kitchen. "Hardcore gardeners are going to poke their heads in and come in," says Mello. He sees the property's lack of signs and gates as a "bravery filter" that tempts adventurous visitors into crossing a permeable threshold, though he says he likes to meet visitors before they make themselves at home.

A remote visit is possible, if you're feeling timid: Mello hopes to make the garden visible from outer space, or more conveniently, Google Earth. He says a "modern-day narcissism" drives him to make his property so distinctive that anyone with a satellite, or access to a 3-D mapping program, can enjoy it.

"I'm trying to get everything in the garden to be either really bizarre or really fragrant or really purple," says Mello. Once he achieves these deep swaths of color, he imagines the property as a home for equally creative performance art. He hopes to host dance parties or perhaps theater-in-the-round productions on a stage made from Tinkertoys or Lincoln Logs.

Mello's garden has no formal name or website, although he occasionally posts a "Christopher's Garden" sign that can be seen from the street. Look for the blue and red bottles peeking out from above the hedges at the corner of Westwood Place and Waynesville Avenue in West Asheville. The garden is private property, however, so be respectful and stick to daytime visits. Catch Mello with a shovel in his hand for an impromptu tour.

NEW BAND UNIFORMS—First of the 100 new uniforms ordered for Lee Edwards High School Band by the Dad's Club are modeled here by Lois Smith and Bill Melton. The musicians' uniforms are red and the majorettes' outfits are white. Jan 5 - 54

CHUBBY TOT

This chubby little tot is Beulah Menasche, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sol Menasche, of 775 Haywood Road, West Asheville. She is six months old and is the picture of health and happiness.

Asheville Citizen-Times
June 22, 1930

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Merrimon, James G.

NORTH CAROLINA ROOMS
Pack Memorial Public Library

OVER

—Citizen Photo

THE PORTRAIT of James Gibbon Merrimon is among a collection of oil paintings in the Buncombe County Courthouse. Son of the late Judge James H. Merrimon and a nephew of the late Chief Justice Augustus S. Merrimon of the State Supreme Court, James Merrimon died Jan. 20, 1948 at the age of 81. He received his early education in the schools of Asheville and at Bingham Military School at Mebane. He studied law with Judge Bynum in Greensboro and received his law license in 1888. He was a member of the law firm of Merrimon, Adams and Adams here for many years and was highly regarded as an attorney and counsellor at law. He once served as president of the Buncombe County Bar Association. A great deal of his time also was devoted to the Buncombe County law library, which he was instrumental in founding and developing. He was also an ardent gardener. The portrait, which hangs in the law library, was done in 1939 by Dorothy Swain, daughter of the late J. E. Swain of Asheville, who now teaches art in an Arizona school. Miss Swain, now Mrs. Dorothy Lewis, is a graduate of Randolph-Macon College and has studied art and worked in various parts of the country, including Chicago, California and New York. Her brother, Robert S. Swain, is the district solicitor here. (This is the 11th in a feature series by Staff Writer Luther W. Shaw on portraits in the Buncombe County Courthouse.) Ash Cit 10-6-66

To Protect and Defend against the Unspeakable Crime"–by Clifford Davids

Posted on February 28, 2013

Grace Green holding a new arrival from Faith Cottage

James Gibbon Merrimon, who practiced law in Asheville, North Carolina for over six decades, came from judicial royalty. He was the son of Judge James H. Merrimon and the nephew of Augustus S. Merrimon, the Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court. A pillar of the legal community and a pitbull in the courtroom, he was also known for his love of flowers, and was an honorary member of the Asheville Garden Club.

After he passed at 89 years old in 1948, his obituary stated that he had served as the legal guide of an unnamed orphanage for a great many years–a work of which the public was generally unaware. The article went on to say "His reward was in the knowledge that he had served the little ones well who had no one else to fight their battles. It was from this work, of which he rarely spoke, that he received some of the greatest satisfaction in his life." The "unnamed orphanage" referred to in that obituary was Eliada Homes, and its Founder and General Manager was none other than the Rev. Lucius Bunyan Compton.

Compton could be a difficult client, often acting from instinct and emotion without considering the consequences. He would then leave it to Merrimon to clear up any outstanding legal issues that might arise from the protection and defense of the children under his care. But the elderly attorney was steadfast, and believed strongly in the work Compton was doing by providing a home for the homeless child at Eliada, and a safe haven for girls in trouble at Faith Cottage.

Starting in the mid-1930's, Merrimon handled the legal matters for both the orphanage and rescue home–which included anything from financial bequests to auto insurance and personal injury claims to the education and welfare of the children. He also represented Compton during his criminal trial in 1943, obtaining a not guilty verdict to the sexual assault charges filed against him by four of the girls under his care at Eliada.

Miss Grace Green, Compton's executive assistant who was responsible for running the orphanage in his absence, dealt directly with Merrimon on many of the most sensitive matters involving the children. The situation highlighted in this posting, involving a case of statutory rape with a resulting pregnancy between a young girl and her father, was handled quickly and efficiently by the resolute attorney. It all began with an urgent telegram about this delicate and possibly dangerous situation, which Merrimon responded to with his usual logic–once again providing the orphanage with his wise counsel.

———————————

Charge to the account of _____ $_____

CLASS OF SERVICE DESIRED

DOMESTIC	CABLE
TELEGRAM	ORDINARY
DAY LETTER	URGENT RATE
SERIAL	DEFERRED
NIGHT LETTER	NIGHT LETTER

Patrons should check class of service desired; otherwise the message will be transmitted as a telegram or ordinary cablegram.

WESTERN UNION

A. N. WILLIAMS
PRESIDENT

1206

CHECK

ACCOUNTING INFORMATION

TIME FILED

Send the following telegram, subject to the terms on back hereof, which are hereby agreed to

FOR VICTORY BUY WAR BONDS TODAY

7/25/45

Miss Green says there is a girl at Faith Cottage, with a baby 3 or 4 months old, it was born out there. The baby is by her own father. She has heard her father is going to try to take the baby, but so far he doesn't know where she is. She is leaving the baby at the Eliada. And the girl intends to leave here for eastern part of the state.

She wants to know if she could change the baby's name and her own, too, for her own protection so that her father can never find her.

Western Union Telegram

———————————

July 25, 1945

Miss Grace Green, Eliada Orphanage

R.F.D. Ashville, N.C.

Dear Miss Green:

Mrs. Thomas has shown me the memorandum made when you were in the office this morning regarding the baby and girl at Faith Cottage. I had talked to Mr. Compton about this matter and he promised to get me the name of the man.

Under the common law, any person can change his name at will, without any legal proceeding, by adopting another name. Some states have statutes in regard to making this change and it is said the statutory method has distinct advantages, in that it is definite and constitutes a matter of record which is easily proven even after the death of all contemporaneous witnesses.

An illegitimate baby inherits from the mother, but not from he father–it is her child, and the father is only responsible for its maintenance during minority in such amount as the court might fix. The child would not inherit from the father at all.

In North Carolina, we have a statute about change of name, which says that any person who wishes, for a good cause, to change his name must file an application before the Clerk of the Superior Court of the County in which he lives, having first given ten days notice of the change by publication at the Courthouse door and in his application the reason for desiring the change must be given, must show good character, etc. The Clerk then grants the Order making the change and the person is entitled to all the privileges and protection under the new name. He can't change his name but once under the statute.

There is no reason why this girl can't, if she leaves here, take any name she pleases so far as I know, provided she lives in North Carolina. The baby takes her name anyway, whatever it is. That is the only name it has. I suppose a birth certificate was given and this birth certificate would have to show the name of the mother and father. All persons are required to have birth certificates and the doctor's duty is to furnish it. He is guilty of a misdemeanor if he does not. It might be forwarded to the Department in Raleigh. I don't know of any provision in North Carolina that enables birth certificates to be withheld. I want to take this matter up with the Solicitor, if I can.

The birth of every child must be registered. General Statutes 130-85, etc. This certificate must be filed within five days after the birth, and it is the duty of the physician or the mid-wife to file it. The contents of the birth certificate are set forth in great detail, and it is required that all institutions shall keep records of such persons.

I will talk to the authorities about the matter, but the Eliada Orphanage can't afford to get into trouble by not making report of births at Faith Cottage.

Yours very truly,

J.G. Merrimon

JGM-T

JUDGE MERRIMON SUCCUMBS AFTER LENGTHY ILLNESS

Noted Lawyer Saw Service in Civil War; Burial Plans Pending

Judge James H. Merrimon, one of the state's foremost lawyers, died yesterday afternoon at 5:35 o'clock at the home of his son, J. G. Merrimon, in West Asheville, after an illness of several months. Definite arrangements for the funeral services have been postponed, pending the arrival of members of the family now out of the city, who are expected Friday.

Months ago Judge Merrimon's vigorous strength began to fail, and he spent some months in Johns Hopkins hospital, returning somewhat improved. It was realized at that time, however, that there was no hope of permanent recovery.

James Harvey Merrimon was born in 1832 in Hooper's Creek township, Henderson county, North Carolina, the son of Rev. Dr. Branch Hamlin Merrimon and Mrs. Merrimon (nee Mary Paxton, of the well known Transylvania county family of Paxtons). The family removed to Asheville in 1855 or '56, and here Judge Merrimon attended the first school taught by Professor Tuck and later the noted academy of Colonel Stephen Lee's in Chunn's Cove. Later, with his brothers, he was a student in Emory and Henry college, in Virginia, where he was when the Civil war between the states began.

CONFEDERATE SOLDIER.

Judge Merrimon returned to Asheville at the outbreak of the war and soon thereafter enlisted in the Confederate service, being adjutant in a cavalry brigade and seeing active service until the surrender. Judge Merrimon was loyal to the cause for which he fought not only during the War but thereafter, and could never be silent when the War Between the States was referred to as the war of the "Rebellion." Those who sought argument on this point found arrayed against them a champion both zealous and profoundly informed on the subject.

Returning to Asheville after the war, Judge Merrimon studied law at the school of former justice of the supreme court, Richmond Pearson, and was admitted to practice in the courts. In 1886 he was chosen judge of the superior court of this, then the 12th district, in which place he continued several years. His brother, Hon. Augustus S. Merrimon, former United States senator from North Carolina, was at that time a justice of the supreme court. Resigning, Judge Merrimon resumed the practice of law here.

Judge Merrimon was married to Miss Julia Lynch, who died a number of years ago, and leaves surviving him two daughters, Mrs. Vincent Erb and Miss Evelyn Merrimon; two sons, James G. Merrimon and Houston Merrimon; two sisters, Misses Eliza and Mary Merrimon, all residing here.

Judge Merrimon was a consistent member of the Methodist church, as was natural, since there served this denomination as minis-

[Continued on Page Two]

JUDGE MERRIMON SUCCUMBS AFTER LENGTHY ILLNESS

Served in War Between the States; Burial Plans Pending

[Continued from Page One]

ters both his father and grandfather, the latter being a well-known preacher living near Dinwiddie Court-House, Virginia, from which place the Merrimon family came originally.

Honors of various kinds came to Judge Merrimon from various sources. His sterling integrity was universally recognized, his innate courtesy was of the old school, and those intimately acquainted with him knew that his intellect was of a high order. He was fond of literature, of that which deserved to be called literature, since he alertly rejected shams, no matter how well disguised, and his store of books worth while was large. He was a modest man, and it is because he modestly refrained from furnishing any sketch of his life to the biographies of eminent North Carolinians that exact dates as to his life are unavailable now.

A NOTED LAWYER.

But it is chiefly as a lawyer that Judge Merrimon is known to most people. In his profession he was a leader among leaders in this state. Possessing a legal mind, a love for his profession and a forceful energy, he was an advocate whose ability caused his appearance in almost every lawsuit of great importance in this section, and he often appeared in the supreme court of the United States. In counsel, he was regarded as a reliant resource in time of need. Few lawyers, it is admitted, were so well grounded in the fundamentals of the law as was Judge Merrimon, and few were so capable of practically applying legal knowledge. Judges of the higher courts listened with deference to his views, and he was held in the highest regard, both personally and as a lawyer, by the late Judge Pritchard, among other udges.

For some years Judge Merrimon had lived a very quiet life, rarely accepting any new cases and spending much of his time among his books at his handsome home on South French Broad avenue. The original family home was on the street which was later named Merrimon avenue in honor of the family.

DEATH CLAIMS J. G. MERRIMON AT HOME HERE

Ash. Citizen 1-20-48

Heart Attack Is Fatal To Veteran Member Of Buncombe County Bar.

WAS 81 YEARS OLD

Stricken While Working In Garden At Home; Funeral Plans Incomplete.

James Gibbon Merrimon, 81, veteran Asheville attorney, died at his home 96 Westwood place this morning of a heart attack.

Mr. Merrimon was stricken in the garden near his home around 10:30 a. m.

Though he still maintained offices, he had limited his legal practice for the past several years, but was considered to be in good health.

An ardent gardner, for many years he had devoted much of his time to growing flowers. A great deal of his time also was devoted to the Buncombe county legal library on the sixth floor of the courthouse, which he was instrumental in founding and developing.

For many years he was associated with Junius G. Adams, Sr., and the late John S. Adams in the law firm of Merrimon, Adams and Adams.

He received his early education at the old Bingham school at Mebane and studied law privately here and in Greensboro. Before joining the firm of Merrimon, Adams and Adams, he practiced for a while with his father, the late Judge James H. Merrimon.

He was a past president of the Buncombe County Bar association, a member of the American Bar association, the North Carolina State bar, and for the past eight years served as chairman of the library committee of the local bar association.

Mrr. Merrimon received his law license in 1888.

Surviving are the widow; one son, James H. Merrimon of Enka; three daughters, Mrs. Dave Harris of Christ School, Mrs. R. G. Waldron of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. John P. Brown of Asheville; two sisters, Miss Evelyn Merrimon of New York city and Mrs. Vincent Erb of Asheville; and five grandchildren.

Funeral plans were incomplete this afternoon. Arrangements are under direction of Brownell, Dunn and Lovin funeral home.

Memorial Public Library
Asheville, N. C.

N.C. -- Asheville -- Biography -- Merrimon, James Gibbon

JAMES GIBBON MERRIMON

James Gibbon Merrimon, Veteran Attorney, Dead

Funeral Services Are Set For Tomorrow Afternoon

James Gibbon Merrimon, 81-year-old veteran of the Buncombe county bar, died yesterday morning about 10:30 o'clock in the garden of his home at 98 Westwood place. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Funeral services will be conducted in the chapel of Brownell-Dunn and Lovin funeral home on Spruce street at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon with the Rev. Gale D. Webbe in charge. Burial will be in Riverside cemetery.

Pallbearers will be Edwin Hartshorn, J. G. Adams, Jr., George Shuford, Kenneth Lee, Hubert C. Jarvis, and Edward Atkinson.

The family has requested that no flowers be sent.

Although his advanced age had forced Mr. Merrimon to curtail his activities somewhat, he was still active and had continued the practice of law. He was somewhat frail, but he had appeared in his usual health and the heart attack which occurred while he was in his garden yesterday morning came without warning.

For many years Mr. Merrimon had maintained a fine garden and he was especially interested in flowers. It was his chief relaxation from the gruelling work of his office, and his zeal never flagged. An honorary membership in the Asheville Garden club was a tribute to his interest in flowers.

Mr. Merrimon was the son of the late Judge and Mrs. James H. Merrimon and a nephew of the late Augustus Merrimon, member of the North Carolina supreme court.

He received his early education in the schools of Asheville and at Bingham Military school at Mebane. He studied law with Judge Bynum in Greensboro.

He was a member of the law firm of Merrimon, Adams and Adams here for many years, and was highly regarded as an attorney and counsellor at law. Other members of this firm were Judge Junius G. Adams and the late John Sneed Adams.

Mr. Merrimon was a past president of the Buncombe County Bar association and a former member of the board of law examiners. During World War I he served as a federal appeal agent.

During his later years Mr. Merrimon was made chairman of the law library committee of the County Bar association, and on this project, which he considered a great constructive work, Mr. Merrimon lavished many hours of patient toil and labor. It was largely because of his interest that legislation which enabled the library to reach its present high state of efficiency was passed. He never tired of pushing his beloved library, and members of the bar who have profited by this labor of love on his part are high in their praise for what he did.

Another interesting thing he was instrumental in promoting was a collection of photographs of deceased members of the bar. More than a hundred of these, collected as a result of his patience and energy, adorn the walls of the law library.

In his personal life Mr. Merrimon was always quiet and unassuming. He was the trusted advisor of many who were not able to pay large fees, especially of institutions in which he was interested. He served as the legal guide of an orphanage, for example, for a great many years—a work of which the public generally knew nothing. His reward was in the knowledge that he had served well those little ones who had no one save those of kind heart to fight their battles. It was from this sort of work, of which he rarely spoke, that he received some of his greatest satisfaction in life.

Surviving are the widow; one son, James H. Merrimon of Enka; three daughters, Mrs. Dave Harris of Christ School, Mrs. R. G. Waldron of Detroit, Mich., and Mrs. John P. Brown of Asheville; two sisters, Miss Evelyn Merrimon of New York city and Mrs. Vincent Erb of Asheville; and five grandchildren.

MERRIMON RITES SET HERE TODAY

Veteran Attorney To Be Buried In Riverside Cemetery

Funeral services for James Gibbon Merrimon, 81, veteran attorney and former city corporation counsel, who died Tuesday morning in the garden of his home on Westwood place, will be conducted at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the chapel of Brownell-Dunn and Lovin funeral home.

The Rev. Gale D. Webbe, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal church, will officiate. Interment will be in Riverside cemetery.

The family has requested that no flowers be sent.

Pallbearers will be Edwin Hartshorn, J. G. Adams, Jr., George Shuford, Kenneth Lee, Hubert C. Jarvis and Edward Atkinson.

Mr. Merrimon, a past president of the county bar association, was a member of the legal firm of Merrimon, Adams and Adams here for a number of years. He was a former member of the board of law examiners and during World War I served as a federal appeal agent.

It was during the administration of Ottis Green that he served as corporation counsel.

James G. Merrimon

Just 10 years ago this month The Citizen took occasion to congratulate James G. Merrimon upon his completion of 50 years of service as an attorney at law. Among other things, we said:

> If there is one trait above another which has unvaryingly characterized Mr. Merrimon during all his period, it has been a high sense of professional rectitude.
>
> He has always asserted the rights and defended the interests of his numberless clients with force and intelligence but he has scrupulously avoided—because he has always abhorred—the tactics of the professional trickster. He has always had a high concept of the attorney's obligations both to his client and to the process of orderly justice. He has discharged these obligations himself and has not hesitated to insist that other lawyers do like wise . . .
>
> Such professional honesty is not a common commodity today. It has never been plentiful. It sets apart and distinguishes the man who possesses it.

Mr. Merrimon has fallen on sleep, full of years and rich veneration. No word that we might add to the above 10 years later would detract one whit from his career of service or alter the great stature of his character. He grew into old age with grace and humility. Death came to him quite poetically in the flower garden he tended with more than the ordinary passion of a hobbyist.

Few professions have been decorated by men of such utter loyalty, uncompromising honesty and fearless integrity. Like William Blackstone, he sought to serve the law with "an earnest and entire devotion." In so doing, in his own way he served all men.

MOUNTAIN Xpress
www.mountainx.com

BEARING THE BRUNT

POVERTY IN ASHEVILLE AFTER THE CRASH p. 10

140 Carrier St.

May 5-11, 2010

DOWN AND OUT IN ASHEVILLE

THE MANY FACES OF LOCAL POVERTY

by David Forbes

The senior citizen

Marie Messer, 79, has lived in her West Asheville home since 1977. After renting for more than a decade, she and her husband bought the house in 1990. But he succumbed to Alzheimer's and died in a nursing home in 2004.

A former secretary at the Blue Ridge Assembly in Black Mountain, Messer is long retired; her only income is her pension and Social Security. The mortgage payments ate up most of it, leaving little to pay for basics such as food or medicine (at one point, Messer was subsisting chiefly on peanut butter and crackers).

"I was having a hard time making my house payments," she explains. "I worried I was going to be homeless. I couldn't pay my light bill, my water bill, my phone bill. All that was more than I could afford and put gas in my car. Then I had to file for bankruptcy: That cost $1,000."

After trying various social-service agencies in vain, Messer contacted Pisgah Legal. They helped her cut her mortgage payments in half, which she says has made a huge difference.

"I still make it; I'm going on," she says, smiling. "Pisgah Legal called me the other day, asked if I needed anything else. 'Nope, I'm OK now,' I told them."

"It's hard to do anything when you're my age. It's hard to get out of bed in the morning," she adds with a chuckle. "But I'm in good shape for the shape I'm in."

Keeping her home: Marie Messer, a 79-year-old retiree, in the kitchen of the West Asheville home she nearly lost due to mounting mortgage payments

PHOTO COURTESY OF PISGAH LEGAL SERVICES

Married Fifty Years

MR. and MRS. J. F. METCALF

Couple Observes 50th Wedding Anniversary

J. F. Metcalfs Frown On Divorce, Work To Be Independent

"They don't last long enough." is the only trouble with modern marriages agreed Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Metcalf, of 18 State street yesterday as they celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary.

The Metcalfs were wed in the Upper Laurel section of Madison county on November 20 1887 The bride was 15 years old and the bridegroom 20.

What do you think of divorce?

"Well" says Mr Metcalf, "we never thought about it because we don't believe in divorces. Marriage is still a serious proposition to us and will be as long as we live If younger people considered it in that light there would be less marital difficulty"

Thus the aged couple with the sparkle of youth still in their eyes summed up the philosophy which has carried them through a half-century of wedded bliss, and in the words of both, "made us just as happy today as we were 50 years ago."

They have spent all of their years in Buncombe and Madison counties with the exception of a short time in Tennessee, and now operate a small grocery store in the same building in which their home is situated.

The couple has nine children, all alive, 24 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren, but prefer to be independent and make their living from the store they operate.

Mrs Metcalf pointed to her silver hair and gave notice that although she might look the older she was still five years younger than her husband.

They paused long enough between customers to be photographed, but other than dress up in their Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes did not celebrate the occasion.

"We're just happy to be alive." Mrs Metcalf commented. She did not hesitate to attribute their successful and happy married life largely to the kindness and character of her husband.

"He has lived a clean Christian life ever since I have known him," she remarked.

"And for sometime before that," added the husband.

Times, Wednesday, April 9, 1952

FISHBURNE HORTON HYLDBURG

MICHAEL MAY THOMAS ATKINS

APPLY FOR CHARTER—Members of the temporary West Asheville youth center committee have applied for a charter as a non-profit corporation to purchase a lot and build a center. The Rev. W. G. Thomas is chairman of the committee. He is shown with Judge Shelby E. Horton, Carl A. Hyldburg, W. E. Michael Jr., John B. May, Harry T. Atkins and Frank B. Fishburne.

W. E. MICHAEL

★ ★ ★

Ed Michael Dies In City At Age Of 61

W. E. (Ed) Michael Jr., 61, owner and operator of Cobble's Department Store at 717 Haywood Rd., died at 4 a.m. Sunday in an Asheville hospital following a brief illness.

Mr. Michael had been active for many years in church, lodge, civic service club and business affairs in West Asheville.

A resident of Asheville since 1906, he was born Dec. 2, 1900, in Rowan County, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Michael Sr.

His first job was as a carrier for the old Asheville Gazette. Mr. Michael attended the Asheville city schools and studied accounting and was engaged in the drug business in West Asheville for 34 years.

Upon graduating from high school, he was for a time associated with Bilbro's Pharmacy, owned and managed by Quenton T. Bilbro. Mr. Michael was later associated for 18 years with Dan W. Foster in operation of the Palace Drug Store.

In 1948 he purchased Cobble's Department Store, one of the oldest department stores in West Asheville.

Mr. Michael was married in 1929 to Miss Margaret Frances Smith of Charleston, S. C., and resided at 19 Brucemont Circle

Since serving as District 31-A Governor of Lions Clubs in 1956-57 for WNC, Mr. Michael held the position of international counselor for Lions International.

He was a past president of the West Asheville Lions Club, a former Zone Chairman, Deputy District Governor, and District 31-A Cabinet secretary-treasurer for WNC Lions Clubs.

A charter member and first president of the West Asheville Club, Mr. Michael had compiled a perfect attendance record, was a Key Member and had received an extension award from Lions International.

Mr. Michael was a past master of the John A. Nichols Lodge No. 650, AF and AM, and had served as chairman of the West Asheville division of the United Fund of Asheville and Buncombe County.

He had been a member of the Review Board of the Buncombe County Committee on Public Solicitations.

Mr. Michael was an active member of the West Asheville Business Association, the Asheville Chamber of Commerce, the West Asheville Presbyterian Church, was a former member of the board of trustees and secretary of executive committee of the Asheville Orthopedic Hospital.

He had also served as a member of the board of trustees and finance committee of the West Asheville Masonic Lodge.

Surviving, in addition to the widow, are the mother, Mrs. Alda S. Michael Sr. of Asheville; one brother, Morris S. Michael of Asheville; three sisters, Mrs. T. A. Gamble and Mrs. Eulala Sluder of Asheville and Mrs. Clara M. Johnson of Alexandria, Va.

Services will be held at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in the West Asheville Presbyterian Church. Dr. W. G. Thomas, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in Forest Lawn Cemetery at Enka.

Active pallbearers will be Dan W. Foster, Elmer Blake, Norman Trueblood, Morris May, Dan S. Judd and Robert R. Barnes.

Honorary pallbearers will be Robert W. Easley Jr., Mike W. Brown, Judge Sam Cathey, F. Jack Cole, Troyl B. Dysart, Dr. S. S. Fay, Hubert Kanipe, Floyd L. Miles, Irwin Monk, Herbert Noble, G. H. Rhodes, Charlie Spencer, Roy A. Taylor, Dr. Paul Young, Judge W. A. Hart, Bill Shull, Lawrence E. Stoker, R. F. Moody.

Members of the District 31-A Lions Club cabinet, John A. Nichols Masonic Lodge, and past and present members of the N.C. State Lions Club Council also will serve as honorary pallbearers.

The body will remain in Groce Funeral Homel chapel until taken to the church to lie in state 30 minutes prior to services.

FATHER OF FIRST 1951 BUNCOMBE COUNTY BABY RECEIVES GIFT CERTIFICATES FROM PARTICIPATING MERCHANTS THROUGH WISE PROGRAM.

SHOWN ABOVE is Hugh B. Stapleton, father of first Buncombe County Baby born in 1951, as he appeared on the WISE Baby Program. Participating Merchants shown in the picture are W. E. Michael—Cobbles Department Store, Irving Kassack—Pollock's, Joe Cooper—Field's, Max Crohn—Middlemount Flower Shop, John Ehle—Imperial Life Ins. Co., Richard E. Young—Eckerd's, Charles Dunwody Jr.—Ralph Bell Jewelers, J. Nick Davis—Asheville Laundry, Burke Harlan—Sterchi's, Charles Berryman—Berryman's Ambulance Service. Absent when the photo was made—H. J. Koontz—Biltmore Dairy Farms, and John B. May—May's Market. Seated at the right is Harold Moon, Program Director of WISE.

Asheville Citizen January 7, 1951

An enduring legacy of bricks, mortar and integrity

James V. Miller, Asheville's master brick mason

Forty-seven years after his death, he is well remembered here

By Ed Brackett
Times Writer

The reputation of James V. Miller — the black man who rose from slavery parentage to become one of the city's greatest builders — rests on firm foundations, say those who knew him.

Miller, one of the city's most prolific builders, constructed several vintage structures, including the Municipal Building housing the Asheville police and fire departments and churches including St. Matthias, Hopkin's Chapel and Mt. Zion. He also built several downtown buildings for the Tench Coxe and David Millard families and constructed many houses in the Emma section in western Asheville.

Miller was a hard worker who developed a fascination for masonry as a child, recalled Annie Mae Bolden, Miller's last surviving child. He frequently worked on churches and other projects for free.

"He was definitely a hero," said Anthony L. Kimbrough, who is researching Miller for presentations in schools and libraries. "He probably spent a million bricks up and down Asheville."

The Miller name "cropped up several times" during a 1960s inventory of downtown buildings, remembered Doug Swaim, a preservation specialist with the state department of archives and history. Many of Miller's sons were masons, too.

At a time when blacks were referred to as "coloreds" and treated as second class citizens, Miller's business thrived, and many of his clients were white.

Born of a slave mother in Rutherfordton, Miller moved to Asheville with his family shortly after the Civil War. His marriage in 1881 produced five sons and a daughter. He died in 1940 at age 82.

BOLDEN

"He was an honest man," Bolden said. "The white people in Asheville, colored as well, they trusted him."

Bolden lived for several years at the 14-room house in Emma that Miller built in 1900. That and many of the other 26 houses he built in the community still stand along Brickyard Road, she said.

Miller collected rent from the houses for several years, and — with his building fees — earned a comfortable living. He was also a popular public speaker, despite his lack of schooling.

"When he was a little boy, he wouldn't go to school," Bolden said. "That's the thing nobody could understand — so it (his ability) must've come from the lord."

She said Miller taught masonry free to young blacks all his life — "He felt that is what he must do" — even after being bedridden about five years before his death. His also tutored his sons, and each became a "crackerjack bricklayer," she said.

Some brothers started their own firm, and the youngest, John, built the Asheville Post Office. They all received their knack for the craft from their father, Bolden said.

Quentin K. Miller, grandson of James and the son of Lee Otus (the only Miller sibling to turn to medicine), said many people had probably forgotten the contributions made by his grandfather.

"I think it's probably because of age," he said. "Not peoples' ages just so much as they've simply forgotten that at that time a black man could've been capable of doing all that.

"I'd say that very little has been written about him," said Miller, who is also assistant superintendent for Asheville schools. "Even during the time he was building, and certainly in this age, very little has been written."

Bolden said her father was an exacting man who was kind and sympathetic at the same time.

"He wanted everything right — no, no, you mustn't make any mistakes on his job," Bolden said. "If it's a third of a ½-inch out of plumb, it's got to come down and be built again. He was like that — that was his method.

"His life was like this: Be a man, whoever you are. Be honest, whoever you are. Work — he wasn't lazy — and make a living. Give a man an honest day's work, then pay your debts."

Hopkins Chapel AMEZ

He also constructed St. Matthias

EWART BALL/Times

The downtown municipal building is still in use today

Stately old structure houses Asheville police and fire departments

Asheville Citizen February 26, 1987

COLORED MASONS END MEET HERE

The colored Masons of this district yesterday ended their annual meeting here. James E. Shepard, of Durham, grand master was in charge. The meeting was attended by several grand officers and James V. Miller, district deputy, had charge of the local arrangements. The meeting next year will be held at Sylva.

Asheville Citizen July 6, 1924

THE STORY OF THE MILLER CLAN

OF

EMMA STATION

As told by Aunt Annie Mae to her devoted niece
Barbara

Dedicated

to Her Daughter Juanita,

Her Nieces, Nephews, Great, Great, Great

Recalled from memory

June 1972

Asheville, North Carolina

INTRODUCTION

We referred to our grandparents' farm as

"Out Home"

Hence, the title of this family history

will be

"Out Home at Emma Station"

"United in Memory"

TABLE OF CONTENT

Outline

Title Page

Time--Years Covered

Descendants

Pictures

Family Health Record

General Information
Cause of Death

Life Story of

James Victor Miller
Violet Miller
Children of James and Violet
~~Life Story of Louisa (Pa's Mother)~~
Louisa (Pa's Mother)
Elizabeth Kyles (Ma's Mother)

History of Emma Station

The Gathering Time ("Out Home")

Hog Killing Time
Soap Making
Lard Making
Cows, Milk, Butter
Kraut
Taking Corn to the Mill
The Grape Arbor

"Violet Hill"

The Depression and "Out Home"

The following pages will introduce the first draft of --Our Family History. It is Oral History--not yet complete or corrected.

The outline needs improving; it is also incomplete.

To be included in final copy:

1. Statistical Proof of data

   Example: Slave records--if they can be found

   Freedom papers--if they can be found

   Property deeds, newspaper articles, etc.

2. Pictures of family

   Pictures of buildings constructed by James V. Miller Construction Company.

3. Drawings or sketches, etc.

4. Summary on History of Asheville.

5. The final copy will be in book form and bound.

6. There will be copies for all family members and each child. Each copy will have many blank pages for additional information to be added through the years.

Will mail letter to all family sometime during year to state progress & give above info & ask for Suggestions & Criticisms after you read it. I haven't done too good a job - I'm just blundering along

Historical Happenings--Events during the Life and T mes of Louisa Miller and Elizabeth Kyles

General Information on Mohawk Indian Tribe

"History Pages" for Recording Future Events and Family History

Name Pages

Birth's, Dates, etc.

Down Memory Lane at Emma w~~ith Col. Stanley V. McDowell~~

Letter from Aunt Annie Mae to Present and Future Generations

Time

The Years between 1822-1972

Place

Asheville, North Carolina

Descendants

of

James and Violet

Pictures of Six Children

Pictures of Churches and Public Buildings constructed by James V. Miller Sons & Company

Picture of Home at Emma

Children of Sons of James and Violet-- names, ages, addresses and occupations

Violet Hill

Family Health Record

A LETTER TO THOMAS WOLFE

Dear Thomas Wolfe,

Who said, "You can't go home again?" Even you could now. You wouldn't know the place. Much housing has been torn down around your homestead. It stands alone as a symbol of an era in honor of you and your talent.

You are no longer an alien in your own home town, but a "Boy of the Mountains" of whom all are proud. They even re-stocked your books on the library shelves, and the grandest honor of all is a fine new theater being constructed across the street from the old home place.

Speaking of the home place, it is considered a museum. The new theater will perform your works as well as others and the world will beat a path to your door on

The spirit of the mountains is as you left it, convenial, friendly, open, questioning, always ready to converse, always wanting to know where the stranger "comes from." Easy going, easy talking, a ready smile.

"Y'all come back now!" dear Tom Wolfe, you can come home again.

In writing the family history it really did surprise me to find out my great-grandmother cooked for years in your mother's boarding house. I already knew your father and my grandfather had offices in the same old building on Pack Square.

There's a "new Asheville" arising in masonry as well as attitude. Imagine if you can--the ancestors of the black builders of the magnificent Grove Park Inn now walking through the front door as guests! So are the bars lowered everywhere else in town. You would have approved.

Much has taken place over the years to bring about "the change." We needn't go into all the ugliness of it. What is most important is--that it did happen, making our town a much happier city to live in for all races.

Human beings don't change much, but when they do, it's for the better.

Come home again, Tom Wolfe, come home.

From a descendant of an "early settler" who knew your family

PICTURES

of

JAMES and VIOLET MILLER

THE HISTORY of ASHEVILLE

JAMES VESTER MILLER

1860-1940

Born on April 21 in Rutherford, North Carolina. Died a few days short of his eightieth birthday. He moved with his mother to Asheville, North Carolina as a young boy. They lived on S. Beaumont Street. He would not attend school. He was a truant. As a boy he liked to work around construction sights. He carried water to men who cut trees to build Hopkins Chapel. He was a water boy on the construction sight of the Vanderbilt Mansion (Biltmore, North Carolina). At the time he was about nine years old!

When he was twenty-one (21) years old, he married Violet Agnes Jackson on August 25, 1881.

He had little knowledge of reading or writing. It was Violet who taught him to read and write. With her three years of schooling, his keen intelligence enabled him to absorb rapidly. After that he picked up knowledge on his own. He had no other schooling except that which Violet taught him.

At first he worked for others learning on the job, doing all types of construction work. Soon after his marriage as a young man, Pa worked in the brick yard at Fletcher, North Carolina. He worked there on weekends and walked the eleven

(11) miles from Asheville to Fletcher (and the eleven miles returning). He and a group who worked there walked on Friday and returned on Sunday. They stayed in an old cabin, a twenty-two mile round trip on foot.

It must be stated here that mountaineer families, in many homes, referred to their parents as Ma and Pa. So in turn did the grandchildren use the same terms.

Then he started working for himself, laying brick and eventually started contracting. Pa and Violet lived in a house on a street that was eventually named Miller Street. Pa owned all the houses on Miller Street!! A dirt road, but it is still there and still named Miller Street, although none of the houses remain. All the children were born on what was then South Beaumont Street--six children altogether--five boys and one girl. Their names were John, Thomas, Edward, Lee Otus, Charles and Annie Mae.

Pa was eventually able to build a new home, but for three years Ma wouldn't live in the house. She didn't want to live in the country. But, finally, on February 1, 1900, Violet moved into a large gracious twelve (12) room brick home, five miles out of town at Emma Station, North Carolina. The history of Emma is another chapter covered separately in this family history.

When Ma wouldn't move into the new home, it was rented to the Hendricks family. The Millers and the Hendricks have remained life-long friends through three generations.

Their paths have crossed and recrossed these many years. Dr. Robert Hendricks and Dr. Lee Otus Miller (son of James V. Miller who built the home at Emma) remained life long friends.

Description

Pa was tall, lanky, thin, blue-eyed and blond. Keen featured, yes, and white complexioned. In a crowd on the street his grandchildren often didn't recognize him. Often while standing on a downtown street corner talking to his friends, if the grandchildren didn't recognize him, he called them over to introduce them.

Pa, in looks was a white man, but in today's language "Black inside." He lived as a black man and thought as a black man and had his feet firmly planted on the ground. His father, of course, was white. In his village he was called the "mayor." All the people for miles around came to him for counsel.

James V. Miller trained all of his sons and many, many others to lay brick. The Miller family were among the finest brick masons in the whole area. He first worked as a subcontractor for the Cox estate; Then went into business for himself.

He had four teams of mules who were used to haul the brick from the freight depot to wherever they were working. He raised the feed for the mules on his own big farm. He employed two white drivers and two Negro drivers.

Pa built twenty-nine (29) rental houses on Brickyard Street in Emma and all except four were rented to whites. All four of the drivers who drove the teams of mules lived in the houses on Brickyard Street.

There were other brick houses built at Emma. Four and eight-rooms, one of which he gave his daughter Annie Mae. Emma was three miles from Pack Square, the center of town. In the city of Asheville James V. Miller constructed the following churches:

St. Matthias Episcopal Church

Mount Zion

Hopkins Chapel

Varicks Chapel (corner of Bartlett and French Broad)

Hill Street Church

St. James

Others are

Hillcrest Housing Project

Hill Street School (1st one)

Many of the old buildings in downtown shopping section from College Street to Patten Avenue

Haywood Street

He built a telephone building that used to be on Haywood Street;

The Wilson Building on Eagle Street

One of the last large projects, the present-day Post Office in Asheville

In Grandfather's Day and Time People Accepted Hard Work
As a Way of Life

Grandpa didn't throw money around. He made money, but he didn't spend it foolishly. He was a good investor at that time and thought he was doing a wise thing when he invested in land. Unfortunately the depression struck at the same time. However, this is ahead of the story.

Grandpa was a 33rd Degree Mason. District Representative of North Carolina. He did much traveling over a wide area in performing his duties and obligations to the Lodge.

All the boys and sister lived "out Home" while single and after they married until they were able to build their own homes. It was like a family compound!

All the boys and adopted sons were taught the construction trade by Pa. They were assured of earning a good living inthose days. Much of Old Asheville was constructed by J. V. Miller and his boys. He was the leading contractor in those days.

In 1914 Pa bought a Model T Ford--with an old crank! After the "Model T" came ~~in~~ an "Oakland." His third car was a lovely new Buick!

Pa had to retire from the work he dearly loved in the late 1920s due to a heart condition (doctor's orders)! after which he stayed at home, miserable in his retirement! He was accustomed to a busy day--"bossing" as head contractor. He was lonesome for the work he followed all his life and that was "giving orders"!! Violet didn't take them, you know!! They both lived for Sundays and visits from the children and the grands. Ma cooked all day Saturday for the children. She stuffed the kitchen drawer as usual. The grandchildren had just left their own dinner table, but Ma's was something special. The drawer was the whole width of the table. The table was handmade--and that special drawer was never empty. In the cellar Pa had stored dandelion and grape wine by the gallon for the grownups. He'd buy dandelions by the bushel from all the neighborhood boys. He would make the dandelion wine by himself. In this house hospitality abounded.

In 1936 Pa was invited to speak at Hopkins Chapel (which he built) on College Street. He was to speak on the history of the church. He was a fine public speaker. He led the congregation in song. His two favorites: "Bless Be the Tie that Binds" and "What a Fellowship." In later years he loved the song "Will the Circle be Unbroken," and "Deep River" was a favorite also. Aunt Sallie was present at this service and returned to give the gist of his speech. She said, "When he finished, there wasn't a dry eye in the packed house." Ma asked, "What went on?" (since she didn't attend). Pa looked up from his dinner plate and proceeded to reply, "Violet, I told the Negro where he come from, and I told him where he's going, too, if he didn't change his ways!"

Grandfather passed in 1940 on April 6. He was able to remain at Emma on the farm until his death. Aunt Anie Mae came home from Kentucky to care for him when Ma died. He was happy with her decision. He lived four and a half years after Ma died. He passed almost on the same day and month. Ma died April 13, 1936. Son Charlie passed April 6, also (1959).

FAMILY RECORD

James Vester Miller

Born:	Rutherforton, North Carolina
Date of Birth:	April 21, 1860
Deceased:	April 6, 1940
Buried:	Violet Hill Cemetery
	Emma Station, North Carolina

James and Violet lie buried side by side in Violet Hill Cemetery overlooking the old home and named in memory of Violet.

PICTURES OF CHURCHES CONSTRUCTED

by

JAMES V. MILLER

and

SONS

JAMES VESTER MILLER

Born: April 21, 1860

Rutherforton, North Carolina

Married: August 25, 1881

Died: April 6, 1940

Lived: 80 years

Married 55 years

Wife

VIOLET AGNES MILLER

Born: November 1, 1864

Spartenburg, South Carolina

Married: August 25, 1881

Died: April 13, 1936

Lived: 72 years

Married 55 years

LOUISA MILLER

Mother of James V. Miller

Born:	Rutherford, North Carolina
Lived:	Asheville, North Carolina (later years)
Birthdate:	1822 (approximately)
Died:	1902 /At 80 years of age
Buried:	Cemetery at South Asheville in Miller lot.

Born a slave and remained one for first forty-three years of her life

1865 freedom declared
1822 born
43

THirty-eight years old when son James Victor was born.

Louisa Miller was the mother of six children.

The three youngest children were fathered by a black father. Their names were:

Gus
John
Charlie
} Never married. All died of TB

The three older children were full blooded brothers and sister. They had the same father--the slave holder. Their names were:

James--the oldest, our grandfather

Lee--shorter than James; went to work in steel mills in Pittsburgh

Deliahia--the only sister. Passed probably at 80.. She was not tall, lived late years at Emma.

The family moved by wagon to Asheville and lived on what is now Ridge Street--but then called Baptist Hill. Aunt Annie Mae remembers Deliahia well.

All Pa's brothers and sisters are buried in South Asheville Cemetery in the Millter lot.

Recalled by Annie Mae:

Pa said when he was a little boy he would eat the food that was left on the plates of the Vances (slaveholders). Rutherfordton, N.C.

When slavery ended the Vances gave a piece of land to Pa's mother with a three room house on it. It was located in Rutherfordton. Pa took Annie Mae on a trip to Rutherfordton years later--and pointed out the spot where the little house once stood. Six children and their mother lived in this house.

Pa's mother Louisa cooked for the Thomas Wolfe family many years until she was disabled. Her earlier years were lived as a slave of the Vance family in Rutherfordton, N.C. The Thomas Wolfe family home is located on Spruce Street in Asheville N.C. For many years a boarding house and family home. Now a museum in honor of Thomas Wolfe's fame as a world renowned author.

When Louisa was no longer able to work she went to live at Emma with her son James and his wife Violet. Pa's sister Delihia lived with the family also. She still cooked for the Wolfes when Pa and Ma first married. She was very fond of Ma and Ma was fond of Louisa. Lived to see Pa and Ma build the new house at Emma and go to live there until she passed. Louisa died of typhoid pneumonia. Aunt Annie Mae remembers Louisa being taken from the house at Emma in a white casket.

VIOLET
Violet Agnes Jackson
1864-1936

Born: November 1, 1864; Spartenburg, South Carolina

Died: 1936 at 72 years of age "Out Home" at Emma

Buried: In "Violet Hill" Cemetery; named for her

When her father died, an aunt (her father's sister) brought her to Asheville to live with an aunt. She was very young. Violet had four sisters ~~and one brother.~~ They remained in Spartenburg with the mother. Violet lived in a two-story double house on Valley Street. Mrs. Cogwell (longtime friend of the family) lived there also . She stood with Ma (Violet) when she was married. Mrs. Lottie Baird lived there also. She too was a life-long friend of the Miller family.

Violet attended school in Asheville but only as far as the third grade. Her aunt operated a small laundry, and Violet had to work. Occasionally she attended school. This aunt believed more in work than education. She lived there with her aunt until she was married to James Victor Miller. They lived in a house James owned on a street then named South Beaumont, later renamed Miller Street. Pa owned all the houses on Miller Street!

All the children of James and Violet were born in that house on South Beaumont, six children altogether--five

The new house at Emma took one year to build, but it took Violet three years to move in! She didn't want to live in the country. There were twelve rooms to furnish. For a start she attended an auction at the home of a Dr. Mann (Dentist). The kitchen had a big coal stove, round oak, with a water heater built in on one end of stove. It held ten gallons. Aunt Annie Mae remembers she had to draw water from the well to fill it up!

There was a big kitchen table with a big drawer where the left over food was kept full of surprises for the grandchildren on Sunday. It was always full of chicken and dumplings, custard and biscuits.

In the kitchen there was a second work table. Shelves held pots and pans. Another receptacle held coal and wood. As you entered off the back porch the first thing you saw was the shelf that held the two pails of well water and that common dipper! (For those who may never have seen one, it was a metal cup on a long handle used for drinking fresh well water out of the pail (on a shelf in the kitchen). Nobody thought about sanitation in those days. As far as it is known, nobody ever got sick from that fine well water--or the DIPPER! Didn't we always say, "Draw some fresh water?" Grandfather's well was seventy-five feet deep, rocked up with native rock; his own construction.

Down the path from Ma's lived the only daughter of the family. Aunt Annie Mae, but she is another story all by herself. That comes later.

All the boys and one daughter lived at home until each built his own home. It was like a family compound. Even though adult, the family lived under one roof with parents. All of the boys and adopted sons were taught the construction trade by Pa (J. V. Miller). They were assured of earning a good living in those days. Much of "Old" Asheville was constructed by J. V. Miller and Boys.

It is difficult to separate the life of Violet from that of the family. The lives of Violet and James were too interwoven. They were a team. Ma's life was her family. In trying to write separate chapters, there is unavoidable repetition.

Ma, through years, remained a devoted wife, compassionate, gentle and patient. Her life was one of hard work--very hard. It was an accepted way of life. She was on her feet from sun-up 'til sundown.

Grandchildren spent weeks at a time in summer ("running wild," we used to say!) Grandma spent most of her time keeping us clean and cooking for the many grandchildren. We enjoyed and looked forward to going "Out Home," when summer came. We were city children who appreciated the country. T e cousins enjoyed each other. "Out Home" we never lacked something to do; there was no such thing as radio and television. We created our own fun and games. We did the chores--feeding the animals, picking the vegetables, helping with meals. We would pick apples, corn or beans and Grandma would prepare them. Out we would rush to play. Somebody's turn to help set the table and then out to play again.

W.
LEE MILLER

Brother of James Victor Miller

Grandfather's brother Lee married twice. From his first marriage there was born one son, named Willie Lee Miller. This son married Mary Young. They lived in West Asheville. From this union were born six children. Willie Lee was a brick mason for 46 years.

1) Bulah
2) Eleanor--died 1938 at 19 years
3) James--died 1939
4) Ray--died 1937
5) Lewis
6) ?

Willie Lee passed in 1936--August 21. Mary his wife passed in 1936--July 14.

Grandfather's second marriage produced five children:

1) Eldridge--now deceased
2) Eulalia--now deceased
3) Elizabeth--now deceased
4) George--living in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania
5) Lee--living in Durham, North Carolina

Eldridge married Fannie Gilson; lived in Guthrie, Oklahoma; had one daughter, Margaret Emma.

Eulalia married Joseph H. Bell; lived in Durham, North Carolina, had two children--Elizabeth (Betty Bell Young), living in Washington, D.C., and J. Karl Bell, now living in Bethesda, Maryland.

12-4-2004

St. Matthias Episcopal holds so much to be proud of

By Robin Daniel
GUEST COLUMN

On a Sunday afternoon, a concert of chamber music at St. Matthias Episcopal Church is the opening for a discovery. It sneaks up on you.

You do not expect an 1894 building to command your attention. The music continues and the audience remains alert, but you focus on the windows and then on the handcarved woodwork. At this moment the architecture becomes the music.

You meet the gentleman/minister at the door and he comments on how much the music has contributed to the restoration of the church. (There is no fee to enter the concert, and the pots at the foyer take contribution without much to-do on the part of the minister.) This must be what they call Grace.

On going out you are still mentally holding on to the feel of the ceiling, curved down from a peak in the center along the same line of the aisle and then rounded at the front where the choir and minister perform. The boards are narrow, maybe an inch and a half wide. Somebody had to know how to do that. Somebody had to lie on his back to secure the boards.

You wish you could meet the man who created the ceiling, the man who loved this place and who had the skill to make this church. You wish.

That man was James Vester Miller, the same artisan who built the Asheville Police and Fire Department building and who made the bricks by hand. His relatives still attend St. Matthias Episcopal Church and are proud of Miller's accomplishment. You too will be proud of him when you see what he accomplished.

Miller was born a slave in 1867.

Captain Thomas S. Patten donated nearly 10 acres of land to build the first building, "Trinity Chapel."

It took the land to build the chapel, so remember Patten.

Then how can this church have lasted for more than 100 years? In evidence are the architectural skills of a builder who shared his craft and who made beauty part of his personal objective.

In evidence is the location up on a hill where you can see it and from there see Mount Pisgah to the west. That makes two tall heroes.

It helps, too, to have three freshly painted red doors to welcome anyone who wants to hear the music.

An academic writer in the 1960s noted that historically, civilizations expressed their highest values in the height of their buildings: Egypt with pyramids, Europe and America with Church spires, and modern America with skyscraper offices for business.

Meet James Abbott, a minister who retired in Asheville and intends to stay here. Chances are you or one of your friends have chosen the steeple, too.

Meet Ron Lambe, music director who helps to improve the church by exchanging his leadership for a place to practice and play music with friends.

The organ has been updated and refurbished, too.

Remember that the first Sunday of the month marks eight years for the concert series. Dec. 5, however, will feature a Christmas chorale at 3:30 p.m., instead of the usual chamber music schedule.

For questions, call James Abbott at 252-0643. The church is at 1 Dunbar St.

Robin Daniel is a community volunteer who lives in Asheville. E-mail her at robindaniel@bellsouth.net.

Web Extra

CITIZEN-TIMES.com

For a photo gallery of the church, visit CITIZEN-TIMES.com.

Asheville Citizen December 4, 2004

Cpl. Miller Goes Back To Base After Furlough

Cpl. Robert R. Miller returned to his base today after spending a 10-day furlough visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Miller of Vermont avenue, West Asheville.

CPL. MILLER

He is stationed at Memphis, Tenn., with the flight engineers of the ferry command, in the army air corps. Before being sent here he was graduated from mechanics school at Gulfport, Miss., and later attended transition school at St. Joseph, Mo.

He is a graduate of Lee Edwards high school in the class of 1940 and was a student at Eastern Carolina Teachers' college at the time he entered the army.

Since being attached to the ferry command, Cpl. Miller has been overseas one time.

A brother, Jack Miller, is stationed at Camp Barkeley, Tex., where he is attending officer candidate school.

He has been in the army for four months and prior to that time was working with the civil service in Washington.

Asheville Times May 28, 1943

Mills Is Promoted To Technical Sergeant

Sgt. Charles E. Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. O. Mills, of 51 Virginia avenue, West Asheville, has been promoted to the grade of technical sergeant, it was learned here today.

SGT. MILLS

He is attached to an armored division.

Before entering the service Sgt. Mills was connected with Commercial Stationers here and was active in young people's work at the West Asheville Methodist church.

Asheville Times June 5, 1943

THE ASHEVILLE TIMES December 9, 1941

Lee Edwards Students Helping Uncle Sam

Boys and girls of Asheville are well versed on current events and foreign affairs as are their elders these days and when it comes to buying defense stamps and bonds, they are not likely to let anyone get ahead of them. The student council of Lee Edwards high school is sponsoring a sale of stamps and bonds at the school and today—the first day of sale—in 15 minutes dispensed with some eight dollars worth. Shown above are three of the students buying from Edwin Mills, general manager of the sales. They are, left to right, Jim Vaden, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Vaden of Cumberland circle, Edwin Mills, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Mills of 51 Virginia avenue, Miss Carolyn Agnew, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Agnew of 16 Anandale avenue, and Miss Mary Jean Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Anderson of 1 Edgemont apartments. They are seniors. With the purchase of one 10-cent stamp, a stamp album is provided, and thus a new form of stamp collecting becomes a little more than just a hobby, since it helps Uncle Sam at the same time. Students at David Millard junior high school bought more than $1.00 worth of defense stamps in one week.

– Citizen Times Photo – Gamble.

IMPORTANT CORRESPONDENCE occupies the attention of a youngster who, like Marlissa Mills, is at her most earnest in addressing a certain well-known Yultide traveler. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Mills, are sure Santa Claus knows that she lives at 24 Westgate Rd.

Asheville Citizen December 23, 1956

Asheville Citizen
March 10, 1929

Community Life Centers About Organized Groups

West Asheville Folks Combine Efforts In Unity Plan

By GLENN W. NAVES

The people of West Asheville believe in organization.

And, incidentally, they believe in co-operation, and that a combination of these two elements is essential to community growth and progress.

Consequently, they have embodied the two in a number of well organized community groups, each of which is varied in policy and purpose so as to conform with the needs of everybody from the business man down to the boys and girls who are going to school and training themselves to be future citizens.

Beginning several years ago, public spirited citizens of the community grouped themselves in the belief that business, religion, social work, education and community government can best be conducted when each is thoroughly organized. And these organizations have grown with the progressive expansion of that section until each is a valuable asset, something which just as essential in a sense as the streets, schools and churches are because many of these benefits have been obtained through the efforts of one or more of the organizations.

Club Is Oldest

The largest and oldest of these groups are the West Asheville club, the West Asheville Community club and the West Asheville Merchants Association.

The former was organized in November, 1925 with S. D. Hall as president. Other presidents have been: Don C. Young, 1926, Hugh Sowers, 1927 and H. B. Posey, whose term will expire in November of this year. Both Mr. Posey and Mr. Sowers are bankers, the former being cashier of the Bank of West Asheville and the latter connected with the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. Mr. Young is representative No. 1 from Buncombe county in the General Assembly. G. G. Morgan was elected the first secretary and after his resignation was succeeded by Bert Starnes, who has served in that capacity since.

The club's membership of around 75, includes business and professional men of every calling—lawyers, bankers, ministers, physicians, merchants, public officials, and even one fire chief, a mayor and a few "politicians." The fire chief is A. L. Duckett, of the Asheville fire department, the mayor, Gallatin Roberts and the "politicians" include Mr. Young, who is also among Asheville's best known attorneys.

The club has since its organization shown a deep interest in the upbuilding and progress of the community, and at present has on schedule a number of plans in that direction.

Community Club

Shortly after the West Asheville club was formed the ladies of the community decided that they should also have a similar organization so the West Asheville Community club was formed.

The club has its musical and literary de-------- which have separate meetings and give programs in which the members participate. One of the most popular of these features is the monthly musical program, usually held at the home of a member. Local talent is used and a visiting artist entertains with vocal or instrumental numbers, or perhaps lectures on some interesting phase of music study. Each month the program is planned under the supervision of a selected member and is arranged so as to provide variety and an opportunity for each member to exercise their talent.

In many other ways the club takes an active part in the social, and church and educational life of the community, and has a large and active membership, many of whom are charter members.

Merchants Group

The West Asheville Merchants Association was organized in January, 1926 with a charter membership of 13 business men. The organization has since grown to 60 members, including practically every business concern in the community.

In accordance with tentative plans this organization has continued to function as a mutual benefit group for business men and citizens and has accomplished much in the expansion of the business interests of West Asheville.

J. R. Mills, who died about two years ago, was the first president. Other officers elected, at the initial meeting who are still serving are O. J. Judd, vice president and V. F. Brown, secretary. John May succeeded Mr. Mills as president.

Other Organizations

Other groups pprovide the essential organization element for the people, of the comunity.

Young people's organizations include two troops of the Boy Scouts of America; the Junior Music club; the Business Girls' Circle; the Young Men of the Presbyterian church, and others.

One of the Scout troops has been organized at the Methodist church and is sponsored by the pastor, the Rev. J. S. Hiatt, and others. Troop 5 of the Presbyterian church is under the leadership of Jimmy Haley, patrol leader and F. Bonnotte, Scoutmaster.

The Junior Music club was organized by Mrs. A. X. Blanchard and has since grown from eight to eighty members. The group was formed so as to give the children of the community with musical talent an opportunity to benefit from study and contact with each other, and to maintain their interest in music. The club is known as one of the most active in West Asheville.

Other organizations are the Calvary Baptist church orchestra and male quartet, the Junior Choir of the Methodist church; Business Girls' Circle, Woman's Auxiliary, Men of the Church and Young Men of the Church, of the Presbyterian church, the Woman's Missionary groups of the community churches, the B. Y. P. U., Epworth League and Christian Endeavor organizations, the Mitchell Avenue Home club, the Friendship club, the Mothers' Club Association of Hall Fletcher, Aycock, Eugene Rankin, and Vance schools, the Sunday school groups and others.

Fraternal organizations include the West Asheville chapter, Order of Eastern Star, Locke Craig Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Red Men, Moose, Odd Fellows and the A. F. and A. M. Masonic

WEST ASHEVILLE PIGEONS FINISH FIRST IN RACES

Eleven pigeons owned by John Mimidis, of West Asheville, finished first in the second race of the Asheville Pigeon club held Sunday, it was announced yesterday. The birds flew over a 50-mile course from Morganton to Asheville, all of those entered by Mr. Mimidis arriving first at their houses in West Asheville.

Other winners were J. H. Horne, second place, and R. S. Merriney, third place. The birds belonging to Mr. Mimidis won the Asheville-Marion race several week ago. A. E. Mutton, of Asheville, has offered a silver cup for the winning entry in a 100-mile race to be held here soon, it was announced yesterday.

Asheville Citizen October 1929

Harry P. Mitchell Dies; Local Official

Harry P. Mitchell, a member of the Buncombe County Board of Commissioners for the past nine years and former county purchasing agent, died in a hospital here about 9 a. m. today following a lengthy illness. He was 65.

Known as "Red" to friends and associates, Mr. Mitchell had been in declining health for several years. He had been hospitalized several times in recent months.

Mr. Mitchell retired from the full-time job of purchasing agent last December, but retained his post on the Board of Commissioners. He had been purchasing agent for 21 years, and had been reelected to a four-year term on the board last November.

A native of Buncombe County, Mr. Mitchell was a son of the late Thomas Jefferson and He attended Asheville public schools and Business College.

Prior to his appointment as county purchasing agent in 1943, Mr. Mitchell had been in the building materials business.

He was married in 1921 to the former Miss Margaret Louise Williamson of Winston-Salem, who survives.

Also surviving are two daughters, Mrs. James M. Atkinson of Asheville and Mrs. Fred Ruth Jr. of Sarasota, Fla., one sister, Mrs. L. W. Griffin of Columbia, S. C., and five grandchildren.

Mr. Mitchell was appointed to the County Board of Commissioners in December of 1955 to serve the unexpired term of the late George D. Young. He was elected to the same office the following year.

He won reelection to a two-year term in 1958, and, when the term was increased to four years, he was again reelected in 1960 and 1964.

He was in charge of the food stamp office here during World War II. Following that he worked as a statistician with the County Welfare Department for several months before being appointed purchasing agent.

A veteran of World War I, Mr. Mitchell was active for many years in the American Legion. He was a past commander of Rockwell-Ballew Post No. 2.

He had served as a director and president of the N. C. Association of County Commissioners. He was elected a director of the association in 1958 and elected president in 1963.

Mr. Mitchell had also served on the Welfare Committee of the National Association of Counties. He was a member of the West Asheville Presbyterian Church, and had served as chairman of the church's Board of Deacons.

At the time of his death he was an elder of the church and was a member of the Edwards Memorial Bible Class.

He was also a member of the Chef de Gare Voiture, Western North Carolina 40 and 8.

Mr. Mitchell resided with his wife at 155 Sulphur Springs Rd., West Asheville.

The family will receive friends at Groce Funeral Home from 7 to 9 p. m. tomorrow.

Asheville Citizen 1965

Miss Mitchell Joins Army Nurse Corps

Miss Louise Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry P. Mitchell of 140 Virginia avenue, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the army nurse corps.

She left Asheville Monday for Camp Rucker, Ala., where she will receive a 30-day period of basic training, upon completion of which she will be assigned to the nursing staff of Lawson General hospital, Atlanta.

A graduate of Lee Edwards high school, Lt. Mitchell graduated from the Biltmore hospital school of nursing last year.

LT. LOUISE MITCHELL

Asheville Citizen April 8, 1945

White Duck takes flight

ERIN BRETHAUER/EBRETHAU@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

Ben Mixson talks to people about their meals during the soft opening of the White Duck Taco Shop on Wednesday afternoon. The restaurant officially opened Friday.

Taco shop 1 of 2 new eateries in still-evolving River Arts District

MADE FROM SCRATCH building a restaurant

ABOUT THE SERIES

This is the most recent installment in "Made from Scratch," a series following Laura Reuss and Ben Mixson's journey to opening and making a success of a new restaurant in the River Arts District. In addition to print stories like this one, Citizen-Times reporter Carol Motsinger and photographer Erin Brethauer update the story regularly online at CITIZEN-TIMES.com/madefromscratch.

By Carol Motsinger
CMOTSINGER@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

ASHEVILLE — The White Duck Taco Shop on Roberts Street is no longer the wooden skeleton of a newborn idea.

When Ben Mixson and Laura Reuss opened the restaurant's double doors at 11 a.m. Friday, it was the couple's final step in the transformation of what had been an empty space into a living, moving organism, fleshed out with paint and plaster.

But the eight weeks they spent renovating their leased section of The Hatchery Studios will never be far away: Mixson made a display of their permits, with his much-used work gloves anchoring the paper record of all their long days and restless nights, bottomless coffee mugs and to-do lists.

"It's just got a lot of history to it," he said of the monument to their work, mounted on a wall across from the restaurant's bathrooms. "It's been a lot of time, energy and money. It's really a reminder of what all we've been through."

Mixson is able to retire his work gloves, but the renovation — and sophistication — of the River Arts District is still a work in progress.

Working together

The movement toward establishing the River Arts District as a nighttime eating and drinking destination has accelerated with the opening of White Duck Taco Shop, as well as The Junction on Depot Street.

The Junction opened Wednesday in Pink Dog Creative, the former home of a textile manufacturer that also now houses artist studios, galleries and the Asheville Area Arts Council. The brightly colored building will celebrate its Visit CITIZEN-TIMES.com for White Duck Taco Shop photo galleries.

Please see TACO on A5

official opening June 10 during the first day of the River Arts District annual studio stroll.

Tanya Triber, who owns The Junction with her husband, Charles, stopped by White Duck Taco Shop on Friday to pick up lunch for her husband, who hasn't really slowed down since their restaurant opened, she said.

She invited Mixson and Reuss to their "soft opening" earlier in the week. (A "soft" opening precedes the official grand opening, allowing business owners to work out any kinks before celebrating.)

The two couples' support of each other's ventures speaks to the district's emphasis on collaboration over competition.

"There is a real sense of us all wanting to work together," said Chall Gray, owner and producer of The Magnetic Field, a café, bar and theater on Depot Street that opened more than five months ago. He ate at The Junction on Friday afternoon.

"(Restaurateurs) are working together to get people to come to the River Arts District to let people know you can come here to eat and drink," Gray said.

For Charles Triber, The Junction is "being established before the big wave" of development of more diverse cultural options in the district. "We have about two or three more years," he said.

But he trusts in his investment in the area, he said. A native of Columbia, S.C., he met Tanya while living in Portland, Ore. He's seen the flourishing of similar post-industrial neighborhoods in cities like Portland.

"When we moved here, we knew the River Arts District was going to be the place to be," he said. "You could feel this energy."

Closing a chapter

When Mixson closed on the sale of his condo in his former hometown, Park City, Utah, Sept. 15, he knew he would open a restaurant in Asheville. He didn't know this dream would take him to the River Arts District, but once they found The Hatchery, it was home, he said.

The shop even looks like Reuss and Mixson's West Asheville home: She made the restaurant tables out of old doors, a technique she perfected doing their dining room. Art from street artist Ishmael covers White Duck Taco's walls. Ishmael is a friend of Mixson's, and his work appears throughout their house.

Mixson said the journey to opening White Duck truly started the minute he closed on the condo. And not too long after 11 a.m. Friday, the end of that journey — and the beginning of another — walked through the bright red doors.

Julie Luong, of West Asheville, was the first customer, and after eating her fill of Reuss's shrimp tacos, she left the building with more tacos to-go for her roommate.

"Everything looks good here," she said. "I love the variety. ... I'll be back."

Luong had a quest of her own to find the spot, however: She said she drove past it a few times.

Clear signage is something Mixson added to his list of things to address in his handy green notebook, a constant companion since the fall. The work never stops; There are printed menus to make, to-go bags to purchase.

IF YOU GO

What: White Duck Taco Shop.
Where: 1 Roberts St., inside The Hatchery Studios.
When: Open this weekend 11 a.m.-2:30 p.m. and 4:30-9 p.m.
Prices: Tacos range from $2.75-$3.25.
Learn more: 258-1660.

John Yurko and his daughter, Ava, 8, look up at the menu at the White Duck Taco Shop on Friday.

John Yurko, who ate an early lunch with his daughter Ava, 8, said that popular 12 Bones Smokehouse on nearby Riverside Drive "is a really good case study of what you can do with no real visibility."

"They (are wildly successful) because they have really good, quality food," he said.

Next steps

Pink Dog Creative co-owners Hedy Fischer and Randy Shull wanted to ensure their space in the River Arts District included a restaurant because it "draws people to the district," Fischer said.

"We really felt it was an opportunity to really impact the nature of the River Arts District," she said.

Shull, an artist who has a studio in Pink Dog, first worked along the river in 1991.

There were substantial studios back then, he said, but there are some factors that have held back the development of the district beyond the artist studios system that defines the area today.

Because so many of the buildings are on the floodplain, it makes it much more expensive to insure the buildings, for example. It needs to be affordable to foster development, "but we are just not in a place where people are going to invest in unaffordable areas," Shull said.

He suggests more green spaces connecting the district to nearby downtown would improve accessibility. He also hopes for better sidewalks and designated parking, he said.

One recent addition has already helped the district's image: The new Glen Rock Apartments on Depot Street has helped "dispel the myth that it's not safe to be here at night," Shull said.

Gray said he wants members of the River Arts District community to "continue the way we've been going."

"There are six restaurants and four places to get a drink now," he said, noting that customer interest has led to The Magnetic Field cafe's expanded hours and new Saturday brunch service. "And I think it's rapidly becoming a place to go in the evenings."

Noon was the time to go to White Duck Taco Shop on Friday. The rush hit then, and Reuss, Mixson and their staff of four served 80 people before the picnic tables outside finally emptied.

PHOTOS BY ERIN BRETHAUER/EBRETHAU@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

White Duck Taco Shop customers eat their tacos outside on the patio during the restaurant's official opening day on Friday.

Reuss, with her blond locks piled practically in a bun, stayed focused on each order ticket, speaking only to give directions cushioned in "pleases" and "thank yous." For the first time in two months, she wore new pants free of paint stains as she buzzed about the kitchen.

They had to lock the double doors for a couple of hours in the afternoon, so Reuss could prep for dinner and Mixson could go to the bank to get more $10 bills.

Although the transformation of the restaurant is complete, a new kind of work will continue for the couple. Their future, and that of the whole neighborhood, is certainly uncertain. Restaurants are a risky business, especially in these economically trying times.

But if Friday's busy reception is any indication, Mixson and Reuss might still have long days and restless nights, bottomless coffee cups and to-do lists in their future.

"We have to work on operating things," Mixson said breathlessly during what was the three-minute break he had to talk on the phone between lunch and dinner service Friday. "We were really busy. I am going to have to find another cook today."

mostly '55

—Citizen Photo

CHEERLEADERS HAVE BEEN CHOSEN for the 1953-54 school year at Lee H. Edwards High School. They will appear at the Asheville-Canton game tonight at Memorial Stadium. L to R are: Dick Wood, Barbara Moffitt, Marcie Hampton, Shelly Church, Margaret Jarman and Don Westmoreland. Members of the cheerleading squad who are not pictured are Beth Gilman, Beth Owens and Al Isaac. Sept 11 - 1953

MOODY'S JEWELERS

Moody's Jewelers, 735 Haywood Road In West Asheville, was founded In 1948 by E. C. Moody, owner. The store was just this year moved to its present location. Moody's features such famous names as Bulova and Elgin watches, Keepsake Diamonds, world - known Samsonite luggage, Speidel and J.B. watch bands, and Gibson greeting cards.

MOODY

E. C. Moody is a Certified Master Watchmaker, having received a diploma from the Horological Institute of America. He says, "We are well equipped to repair all makes and types of watches."

Moody, who is married and has one son, is a member of the West Asheville Lions Club, West Asheville Business Association, and the Grace Baptist Church.

Asheville Citizen November 17, 1960

Dunwell Avenue

JOHN N. MOODY of 1407 Haywood Road, Asheville, is a pretty proud angler these days. Last week, below Redmon's Dam, (a popular spot for catching catfish) Moody snaked out the whopper shown above. Moody's catch weighed a little over 31 pounds and measured an even 38 inches. He caught it on a red-worm, and he reports the cat fought for thirty minutes. His line tested at 35 pounds. Moody was with his uncle, Hillard Fisher, when he caught it.

Asheville Citizen September 11, 1949

MORNING, SEPTEMBER 25, 1927

From Asheville To Miami In Canoe

Wendall Moore, right, and Gus Matthews, Asheville boys, will leave in their canoe Tuesday, paddling down the French Broad, Little Tennessee, Tennessee, Ohio and Mississippi rivers to New Orleans, and from New Orleans around the Florida coast to the Florida Keys. They will be six months on the trip and will conduct an advertising campaign for the Chamber of Commerce along the route. Both of the young men were life guards at Recreation Park swimming pool this last summer and they will give exhibitions at all of the Southern pools along their route. Advance publicity will be sent out by the Chamber of Commerce and they will distribute Land of the Sky literature along their way.

Mountains To Gulf Trip To Be Made In A Canoe

Asheville Young Men Plan Adventurous 6-Month Excursion

Emulating Robert Louis Stevenson in his "Inland Voyage," Gus Matthews, son of Dr. A. Matthews, and Wendell H. Moore, son of Mrs. Herbert W. Pelton, 19 Kenilworth Road, will leave Asheville Tuesday in a canoe for Miami, Fla.

Mr. Matthews and Mr. Moore were life guards at Recreation Park this past summer and there conceived the plan for paddling through the various rivers down to the Gulf of Mexico and then around the coast to Miami. From there they will explore the Florida keys and come up the east coast to Jacksonville. They plan to be on their way six months.

The young men are both college men, Matthews having attended North Carolina State College and Moore, Wake Forest. Both have athletic records of note. En route they will advertise Asheville and the Land of the Sky for the Asheville Chamber of Commerce, carrying and distributing literature at all stops. They will wear Asheville sport togs and will give swimming and diving exhibitions at all swimming pools along the route that are open, especially in the South.

To Asheville W. N. C.

Their canoe has been painted attractively and on the sides they have their itinerary and "Asheville, The Land of the Sky." They had planned for some time to make the trip, but just recently the Chamber of Commerce became interested in the unique plan and the attention that it would attract for Asheville. From the mountains to the sea in a canoe, making a devious course of many thousands of miles is no small task and is certain to attract considerable comment in every city through which the young men pass.

Their route will be down the French Broad River into the Little Tennessee River, then into the Tennessee River. From the Tennessee River they will come into the Ohio River at Paducah, Ky., and into the Mississippi River at Cairo, Ill. They will then go down the "Big Muddy" to New Orleans and from there they will take a course around the coast to the Florida keys.

The Asheville Chamber of Commerce is planning the trip for the young adventurers by writing the chambers of commerce in every city and town along the route, giving the approximate date of their arrival. The canoeists will keep in touch with the Asheville Chamber and other letters will precede them on their extreme Southern route.

The trip has fired the imagination of the boys of Asheville and there has been heard much comment on the adventure among them. The trip is one that appeals to old and young alike and they will be received cordially everywhere, officials of the Chamber of Commerce said last night, following a meeting with the young men in which their Asheville advertising campaign was discussed.

WILL CANOE DOWN TO MEXICAN GULF

Gus. Matthews, Wendell Moore Start On Perilous Journey

Gus. Matthews and Wendell Moore, both of whom have been life guards at Recreation Park, and are well known locally, will push their canoe in the waters of the French Broad river this morning and set off for the Gulf of Mexico.

Their novel expedition is attracting much attention. It is being sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce. They will journey down the French Broad river to the Little Tennessee thence to the Mississippi, and down to New Orleans. They carry complete camp equipment, and bear with them a full supply of Chamber of Commerce literature.

After they reach the Gulf of Mexico they expect to push along the coast to Miami, visiting cities en route. They expect to be gone six months. Mr. Moore is a graduate of Wake Forest College and Mr. Matthews is from State College. The Paramount News will take pictures of their departure.

Asheville Times September 27, 1927

Above—
TO ATTEMPT 6,000-MILE VOYAGE IN CANOE. Wendall Moore (left) and Gus Matthews, two Asheville, N. C., canoeists, plan to follow the winding rivers to the Gulf of Mexico and from there go around the coast to Miami, Fla.
—Wide World Photo

CANOEISTS REACH MEMPHIS, TENN.

Makes A Record Run Of 250 Miles; Get Much Publicity

Making a record run of 250 miles from Paducah, Ky., by way of the Mississippi river, the two Asheville canoeists who are enroute to Miami, Fla., arrived at Memphis, Tenn., Friday, according to advices received at the Asheville Chamber of Commerce. Wendell Moore and Gus Matthews who are making the trip in their frail craft, a 17-foot canoe, are in high spirits and are enjoying the trek.

In order to make the fast run which brought them in to Memphis in record time the two voyagers paddled by shifts and slept in the canoe by turns so that their craft was constantly in motion during the three days of the trip.

Eight hundred miles of the broad Mississippi river now lie between the canoeists and the next large port of call, New Orleans. They expect to arrive in the Crescent City within two weeks. The trip to that point will not be a record run as the two boys intend to take it by easy stages and to travel only by daylight.

Much interest is being aroused by the canoe and the papers, in every city visited by the travelers, have printed numerous stories in regard to this unique pilgrimage. Chambers of commerce along the route are co-operating with the Asheville Chamber of Commerce in keeping in touch with the canoeists.

THE ASHEVILLE TIMES NOVEMBER 13, 1927

Young Canoeists Now Well On Way To New Orleans

Gus Matthews, one of the two Asheville boys now making their way from here to Miami by canoe, in a letter to his father, Dr. A. Matthews, has declared his willingness to continue the trip on to New York should some one defray the additional expenses. The two boys are now between Vicksburg, Miss., and New Orleans. Matthews is accompanied by Wendell H. Moore.

Matthews' letter was full of interesting accounts of the trip. He declared the Mississippi water so foul to drink that it needed a "chaser." The two have been boiling water with prunes to make it palatable.

Thousands of geese have been flying over their heads on their annual migration south, the boys said. These geese, and ducks, shot occasoinally by the two pilgrims, have been furnishing them with excellent food. Matthews said the two of them had been paddling in long shifts. One night they covered 75 miles.

The trip which the two boys are making is sponsored by the Asheville Chamber of Commerce. Their canoe is painted to show the start and goal of the trip. It has been the object of much interest on the river, Matthews said.

CANOEISTS REACH NEW ORLEANS

Matthews And Moore Say They Are Enjoying The Trip

"The Misogynist," a small canoe in which Gus Matthews and Wendell Moore left Asheville September 28, was scheduled to leave New Orleans, La., this morning. The entire journey has been made from Asheville to New Orleans by water. The goal of the venturous inland seamen is Miami, which they hope to achieve within a few weeks.

In their long trip, Matthews and Moore went over the waters of the French Broad, Tennessee, Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. Along the route they are distributing Asheville Chamber of Commerce data concerning Asheville and Western North Carolina.

Each night the canoeists camp wherever darkness overtakes them. They are equipped with cooking and camping utensils and have written home that they have enjoyed the voyage thoroughly.

Asheville Times November 22, 1927

CITIZEN-TIMES, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY, APRIL 8, 1945

AWARDS WILL BE PRESENTED KIN OF TWO FLIERS

Decorations To Be Given Mother Of Bradley, Wife Of Moore

Decorations that have been awarded to two Asheville fliers who are prisoners of the Germans will be presented to their next of kin at a meeting of the Next of Kin club at 3 p. m. today in the Langren hotel.

First Lt. Clyde W. Bradley's Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal with two Oak Leaf clusters will be presented to his mother, and the Air Medal awarded to Sgt. Wiley M. Moore, Jr., will be given to his wife. The medals will be presented by Lt. Col. Kenneth W. Klise of the Army Airways Communications System headquarters here.

Lt. Bradley, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde W. Bradley of 28 Chatham road, pilot of a B-17 bomber, was first reported missing since April 18, 1944, but later his parents were informed he was a prisoner of war.

Distinguished Flying Cross

The Distinguished Flying Cross was given him for "extraordinary achievement on 25 bombing missions over enemy-occupied continental Europe," and the citation says his "actions are an inspiring example for his fellow fliers." The Air Medal was given for "exceptionally meritorious achievement," and each Oak Leaf cluster was awarded in lieu of another Air Medal.

Sgt. Moore, husband of Mrs. Jessie Burris Moore of 118 Stewart street, radio operator-gunner on a B-17, was first reported missing since last October 7, but it was learned in December that he is a prisoner.

Sgt. Moore, who was with the third bombardment division, was given the Air Medal for "exceptionally meritorious achievement while participating in heavy bombardment missions" over Europe.

Close friends and relatives of men who are missing or prisoners are invited to be present, as well as relatives and friends of the two men who are to be honored.

In addition to the presentation ceremony, the club's program will be marked by talks by returned prisoners of war and by music.

The Gosnell trio will be heard, and Joy Gosnell, five, will sing a special number, while Marcia Ann Hudson, four, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Hudson, Jr., a niece of Lt. Bradley, will sing "Coming In On a Wing and a Prayer."

Former Prisoners To Talk

The speakers will include Capt. Ernest M. Gruenberg, recently released from a German prison camp, who is now at the Army Redistribution station, and Cpl. Leon Lowman of Asheville, recently repatriated from a Japanese prison camp. Cpl. Lowman, after the program, will meet with next of kin of servicemen in Japanese prisons to answer questions.

The Rev. Harold Tyer, pastor of the First Christian church, will conduct the devotional program, and Mayor L. Lyons Lee will introduce Col. Klise.

Immediately preceding the meeting, those who will accept the awards will be guests of the club at a luncheon in the Governor Vance room of the Langren.

THEIR MEDALS TO BE PRESENTED—The decorations that have been awarded these Asheville men, both of whom are prisoners of the Germans, will be presented to their next of kin at a meeting of the Next of Kin club at 3 p. m. today. They are 1st Lt. Clyde W. Bradley, Jr., left, and Sgt. Wiley M. Moore, Jr.

Moore Freed From Nazi Prison Camp

Sgt. Wiley M. Moore, husband of Mrs. Jessie Mae Burris Moore of 118 Stewart street, has been released from a prisoner of war camp in Germany and is now in Paris, his wife has been notified.

He was listed as missing in action since October 7, 1944, over Holland, and was later reported a prisoner of war of the German government.

A radio gunner on a B-17, he entered service in October, 1942, and was sent overseas from Drew field, Tampa, Fla., last August. He attended Lee Edwards high school and was employed by the American Enka corporation prior to entering service.

SGT. WILEY M. MOORE

Asheville Citizen April 29, 1945

William Moore

MY PEOPLE
AND THE PROMISED LAND

By

F. Jack Cole

"MY PEOPLE AND THE PROMISED LAND"

Introduction		Page 1
Chapter 1	Captain William Hamilton Moore and "This Is Eden's Land"	Page 3
Chapter 2	"A Small Bit of History" written by Owen H. Gudger	Page
Chapter 3	William Moore's Report	Page
Chapter 4	Zachariah Candler	(to be written)
Chapter 5	Rev. Perminter Morgan	(to be written)
Chapter 6	Hominy Baptist Church	(to be written)
Chapter 7	Jesse Israel	(to be written)
Chapter 8	Thomas Jones	(to be written)
Chapter 9	Col. Samuel Bell Gudger	(to be written)
Chapter 10	Montmorenci Methodist Church	(to be written)
Chapter 11	John Hawkins	(to be written)
Chapter 12	Col. John Starnes	(to be written)
Chapter 13	Oak Forest Presbyterian Church	(to be written)
Chapter 14	Thomas Logan Gaston	(to be written)
Chapter 15	Thomas Jefferson Harkins	(to be written)
Chapter 16	Acton Methodist Church	(to be written)
Chapter 17	American Enka and The coming of The Dutchmen	(to be written)
Chapter 18	Conclusion	(to be written)
	Bibliography	Page 17
	Genealogy of Writer	Page 18

INTRODUCTION TO "MY PEOPLE AND THE PROMISED LAND"

This is the story of "My People" who came to the mountains of Western North Carolina to settle in the view of Mount Pisgah and the "Promised Land" of Hominy Valley. Dr. Foster A. Sondley in his "A History of Buncombe County" (Vol. I, page 405) writing in regard to mountains says "The most prominent of the Western North Carolina mountains is Pisgah, partly in Buncombe County. It is rendered more prominent by the shape of Little Pisgah next to it on the south and presenting a striking resemblance to a "rat" or a squirrel in its outline. By whom the name of Pisgah was given to the mountain of North Carolina so called or when that designation was suggested first, seems to be unknown."

Sondley's "Asheville and Buncombe County" (page 43) further states "No doubt the name was taken from the mountain of that name east of the Dead Sea from which Moses is said to have viewed "The Promised Land," and was given to the North Carolina Peak because of its extensive outlook." For his entire life, the writer of this story has greatly admired this magnificent mountain. Mt. Pisgah rises to a height of 5721 feet. Buncombe and Haywood lines cross the Pisgah peak. To the east Little Pisgah rises 5240 feet and four counties join at its peak - to the north, Buncombe - to the east, Henderson - to the south, Transylvania and to the west, Haywood. On the north face of Pisgah Ripshin Ridge leads to the valley below and is very heavily covered with thick Laurel and Rhododendron devils. In order to follow down the ridgeline to the lower valley a hiker many times must get down on hands and knees and crawl as did this writer as a teenager.

From Ripshin Ridge springs the headwaters of the South Hominy. Hominy Creek has two headwaters one in the south on the North side of Mt. Pisgah as it towers majestically south west of Hominy Valley. The South Hominy flows to the north east until it joins The North Hominy in the village of "Old Candlertown." The North Hominy springs from the Western slopes of Holland Mountain and near Newfound mountains in Haywood County. Flowing first south west then south until it is joined by Dutch Cove Creek east of Canton, it then flows east to enter Buncombe County and join The South Hominy in "Old Candlertown" in the heart of the valley. The Hominy flowing east empties into the west side of the French Broad River south west of Asheville. This is across the French Broad from the world known Biltmore Estate built by the late George Vanderbilt, who chose the site looking south west across the basin of the French Broad where the Hominy enters to view Mt. Pisgah.

F. Jack Cole,Sr.
Asheville, North Carolina
January 15, 1974

MY PEOPLE AND THE PROMISED LAND

"The Living Bible" pharaphrased, Tyndale House Publishers

Deuteronomy 34, page 179:

1. "Then Moses climbed from the plains of Moab to Pisgah Peak in Mount Nebo, across from Jericho. And the Lord painted out to him the Promised Land."

4. "It is the Promised Land, "the Lord told Moses," I promised Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob that I would give it to their descendants. Now you have seen it, but you will not enter it."

5. " So Moses, the disciple of the Lord, died in the land."

"The Living Bible," pharaphrased.

From the scriptures of the "Old Testament" from the Peak of Mt. Pisgah, Moses overlooked the Promised Land.

'Eden's Land'

The present Sand Hill Road runs through the tract of land granted in 1787 to Capt. William Moore, the Indian fighter who became the first settler west of the French Broad River. The 450-acres of valley land with commanding views of Mount Pisgah was described as "Eden's land" by the pioneer.

Picture From "The Asheville Times" April 9, 1973

"From The Top Of Mount Pisgah Moses Overlooked The Promised Land"

On the right Mount Pisgah On the left Little Pisgah or "The Rat"

A version of how "Hominy Creek' was named was given by Dr. Foster A. Sondley in "A History of Buncombe County. (Vol. I, page 425)

"For many years, before and after the Revolutionary War, the dividing line between the western parts of North Carolina and South Carolina had not been located. The country for some miles South of Greenville, South Carolina, to Swannanoa River, North Carolina was in consequence disputed. Over this region, and even to the north of it, South Carolinians made hunting tours. Before that war one of the South Carolina hunting parties visited The French Broad and crossed a short distance above the mouth of Swannanoa. In their hunt, they camped the first night on an unnamed stream tributary to the French Broad. Having hominy for supper they named the creek on which they were encamped, "Hominy." Next they encamped on another stream of which they had never heard and named it "Newfound."

Another version of how Hominy Creek was named is given by Professor William F. Lewis, retired faculty member of Asheville School as he wrote in his "Historic Hominy Valley."

"There is an old Indian legend that once while they were making some hominy on a creek bank some of it spilled into the water. From that time on the Indians called it "Connehannee" - Hominy Creek. The Valley of the Hominy was first occupied by the Shawanowee (Shawnee) Indians. Long before the white man came they had left and it was used by the Cherokees as a hunting ground by agreement with the English Colonial government. The white man was supposed to have free access. When they came in and began to "take up" the lands the Cherokees felt their rights had been invaded."

From in "Strangers in High Places" MICHAEL FROME tells it this way (page 61).

"The Cherokee, together with virtually every other Indian nation, stood with the British. The Indians were provided hatchets, guns, and ammunition from the revived French in Canada and from the British. (page 62.) In the same July when the signing of The Declaration of Independence was being hailed throughout the colonies, Dragging Canoe unloosed his forces. They swooped down upon the Catawaba settlements in North Carolina. Together with Tories, sometimes dressed as Indians, they ravaged the South Carolina and Georgia borders. Cattle and horses were driven off, cabins burned, men, women, and children terrified or massacred." (page 62.)

Clarence W. Griffin in his "History of Old Tryon and Rutherford Counties" (page 34) reports the Indian attacks this way. "During the first week in July, while the Provencial Council was in session at Halifax, the Cherokees had fallen on the inhabitants in South Carolina, plundered homes, killed some settlers, carried off prisoners. Others attacked the forts on the Holstein and Watauga. Most of the settlers escaped, having been warned. Some twenty women and children were victims of the tomahawks. Unsuccessful in their assault on the forts, the Indian warriors crossed the mountains and fell on the unsuspecting families on Crooked Creek near Rutherfordton, and coming up the Toe, invaded the frontiers of Rowan. The unheralded appearance of these murderous bands caused great consternation. (page 34). On July 12, 1776, General Griffith Rutherford wrote to the Council on safety"asking aid." I plead for expedition." (Page 34).

"He asked for 1000 lbs. more powder and salt - at least 300 bushels. (page 34). Before twenty-four hours had elapsed he dispatched another express that the Indians were making great progress in destroying and murdering in Rowan. "Thirty seven persons were killed last Wednesday and Thursday on the Catawba." (page 34). Rutherford acted with energy that has ever distinguished him. Within a week he was on the frontier with near 2500 men, for western North Carolinians had sprung to arms at the first call, animated by a consuming purpose to inflict heavy punishment upon their murderous foe." (page 35.)

"President Rutledge, of South Carolina, had earlier suggested a joint movement on the part of North and South Carolina and Virginia against the Indians. He proposed to send Major Williamson with 1100 men against the Lower Cherokees, and that a force from North Carolina should attack the Middle Towns and joining Williamson should proceed against Valley River and the Hiwassee, while the Virginians should come down the Holstein and attack the over hill towns. (page 35). The Council of Safety agreed to this. On September 1, Rutherford, with a great cavalcade of horses bearing his provisions and ammunition, entered Swannanoa Gap and pressed forward. He took 2000 privates and 80 light horses, with supplies for forty days carried by 1400 pack horses."

This is the recounting of events taking place leading Captain William Moore with General Rutherfords expedition against the Cherokees. The path which they followed from Davidsons Fort (Old Fort) across the Swannanoa Gap was made by the Buffalo which roamed the area, until the last buffalo ~~calf~~ BULL was killed by Joseph Rice at Bull Creek Gap which is named for this event. Sondley,"History of Buncombe County", (page 424). Also the Indians used the Buffalo Trail. Proffesor Lewis in "Historic Hominy Valley" said "This was a part of an Indian Trail that ran from the Smokies through Swannanoa Gap to the central part of the state. It was called by the Indians "Swannanoa" or "Big Trail or "King's Highway."

From the Swannanoa Gap General Rutherford's soldiers followed the westward flow of the Swannanoa River until it emptied into the French Broad River. Proceeding up the east banks of the French Broad to the mouth of Hominy Creek where they were able to ford the French Broad , they then proceeded west up the Valley of Hominy Creek along the Buffalo and Indial Trail which was much of the time parallel to the creek.

The expedition of troops came to a halt to make camp for the night on the banks of the Hominy several miles up stream. It was then that Capt. William Moore as reported by Nancy Brown (April 9, 1973 The Asheville Times - Eden's Land Revisited) said "The man swung wearily from the saddle. He had been riding all day at the head of a calvary of soldiers while his horse drank from the swift creek. He gazed around him at the valley chosen for the night's campsite. Struck by its beauty, he said to himself, "This is Eden's Land." Silently, he made a promise. Thus the man who became the first white settler west of the French Broad River decided his destiny. In the frontier era that followed, Moore's destiny and that of Western North Carolina were to become inseparable."

John Parris (July 10, 1955 The Asheville Citizen) wrote "He looked out over the grassy fields, the canebreaks and the tree covered mountains, then turned to his brother-in-law (General Griffith Rutherford) and said, "This is Eden's Land." Some day, he promised himself, he would come back here with his family and settle down and grow old and be buried in the rich earth of this "Promised Land."

This promise to return and make a home in Hominy Valley was made by this Scotch - Irish Presbyterian turned soldier of necessity to protect the frontier settlement of the young new nation. Capt. Moore was awed by the beauty of the valley as it stretched out leading to the headwaters of the South Hominy where the south west skyline is dominated by majestic Mount Pisgah. There is not a question, that in his mind, he thought "This is the Promised Land." Proceeding next day westward the expedition against the Cherokee's was completed in a matter of days. John Parris (July 10, 1965 The Asheville Citizen) wrote "Moore and his men unleosed a whirlwing of fire and destruction against the Cherokee and rendered them forever useless to the British."

Upon the expeditions returning home to Salisbury in Rowan County General Rutherford the second time sent Capt. William Moore and a company of 97 men on an assault against Cherokee towns not destroyed in the first expedition.

Professor Lewis wrote "Historic Hominy Valley" - "The results of the Rutherford expedition were inconclusive. The soldiers knew that while they had destroyed many Indian villages, they had not destroyed the threat of the Indians. Under a misapprehension on the part of the civil authorities in 1777, Captain Moore was allowed to return to the site of the camp on Hominy Creek and build an outpost supported by block houses within bugle call of each other from Swannanoa Gap to the Moore Fort and beyond. Later, this line of block houses was extended from South Carolina to Knoxville, Tennessee. Thus Hominy Valley can boast that its first settler was the man who conceived the idea that opened up our mountain land to full settlement with the frontier thus protected many hundreds of families teemed through the mountains to get the lands described by Daniel Boone and others."

"There in the field of plowed ground is the site of Moore's Fort."

Alex Crowell

STATE OF NORTH-CAROLINA NO. 1031

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME, GREETING.

KNOW Ye That We for and in consideration of the sum of Ten Pounds for every hundred acres hereby paid into our Treasury by William Moore have given and granted, and by these Presents do give and grant unto the said William Moore a Tract of Land, containing Four hundred and fifty Acres Lying and being One Mile Below Burke [illegible] On both sides of Honey Creek as it runs the South West side of the Road that leads from the Fording of French Broad River to the Cherokee Nation Beginning at a Post Oak the North side of the Creek in a bottom then East twenty five Chains to a Stake and five Oaks then South Eighty a large Branch [illegible] Creek aforesaid a course thereof [illegible] to a Stake then North twenty five Chains to a Stake then [illegible] Lying and Lying [illegible] Honey Creek to the Beginning as by the Plat hereunto annexed doth appear; together with all Woods, Waters, Mines, Minerals, Hereditaments, and Appurtenances to the said Land belonging or appertaining: To hold to the said William Moore his Heirs and Assigns for ever. Yielding and paying to us such Sums of Money yearly, or otherwise, our General Assembly from time to time may direct, PROVIDED ALWAYS, That the said William Moore shall cause this Grant to be registered in the Register's Office of our ~~said~~ County of Burke within Twelve Months from the Date hereof, otherwise the same shall be void and of none effect.

IN TESTIMONY whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and our Great Seal hereunto affixed. WITNESS RICHARD CASWELL, Esquire, our Governor, Captain General, and Commander in Chief, at Hillsborough the Seventh Day of August in the 11th year of our Independence and in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and Eighty Seven

9-A

"SURVEY"

State of North Carolina, Burke County, October 5, 1784

By: J. J. McDowell, Deputy

"HERE LIES SAMUEL DAVIDSON FIRST WHITE SETTLER OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA KILLED HERE BY CHEROKEES, 1784"

"Ric Cole, right and David Pott 1972 Visit Samuel Davidsons Grave for Scout Citizenship Merit Badge"

The top of Skyview Memorial Park path up Jones Mountain leads to Samuel Davidson's grave.

family. Upon arrival he found his services were needed in the army in pursuing the war against the British and could not return to Hominy Valley with his family until after the close of the Revolution. Mr. Owen Gudger a descendant of Captain Moore and local historian writes a much more dramatic story, which gives an interpretation that Moore's Fort helped defeat the British at King's Mountain. Owen Gudger's complete story is included as an additional chapter. THE FAMILY OF Capt. William Hamilton Moore ~~was~~ WERE born in Scotland. ~~As a young child, he~~ THEY moved with his family to Ulster, Ireland - where there was then trouble and continues in 1974. At the age of 15, with his nine brothers, Moore sailed to the new world. They first settled in Pennsylvania near Philadelphia. Later they moved south and settled in Bordens Grant in Virginia. Moore with his brothers, Charles and James, being men of action traveled south again this time to Spartanburg where Charles became a permanent settler. The Moore brothers were active in the State Militia. The head of the militia was an officer named James Cathey. The next move of William and James was to South Muddy Creek in Old Tryon County (now lower McDowell).

Capt. William Moore married Ann Cathey a granddaughter of James Cathey. While living on Muddy Creek, Moore acquired a number of tracts of land. Moore and Ann Cathey had ~~seven~~ SIX children. Three sons - William, Thomas and Robert. They also had three daughters - Alice, Mary and Rachel. Each of the daughters married Penlands - John,Robert and George Penland.

Among historical writers there is not a clear indication as to the number of times Capt. William Hamilton Moore was married. Arthur in his "History of Western North Carolina" wrote that he was General Griffith Rutherford's brother-in-law. Writer Wilma Dykeman in her "The French Broad" repeats this statement. Many Moore family descendants think he was married only two times. First to Ann Cathey. This writer examined a copy of a deed to the McDowell bottom land just west of Marion, which his signature signed by witnesses William Moore and Ann Moore and Charles M. McFeeters. This deed is recorded in Salisbury Deed Book 6, Page 595. The copy of this deed is in possession of Mrs. John Poteat of Marion, who says she has spent some five years in research of the William Moore history beginning in Scotland through Ireland to Philadelphia in Pennsylvania. Mrs. Poteat said, "It is thought that Ann Cathey while Moore was on his military expeditions became ill and returned to her family living then in Salisbury for them to care for her. Mrs. Poteat said it is thought she died and is burried in Salisbury. Mrs. Poteat concludes that if Moore was married to Rutherford's sister it was a brief time."

Mrs. Poteat states that her research shows that Ann Cathey, daughter of George Cathey and granddaughter of Capt. James Cathey, Commander of the Militia, was baptized in the Augusta Stone (Presbyterian) Church, Augusta County, Virginia.

As to whether Capt. Moore was married two or three times, it probably does not matter. All indications are that he was a very active man. He acquired several tracts of land and took a great interest in the affairs of the local government while living on Muddy Creek, Tryon County (now lower McDowell County).

Tryon and Rutherford Counties (page 8).

"Pursuant to an act of the General Assembly of the Province, aforesaid, bearing date fifth day of December, 1768 and in the ninth year of His Majesty's Reighn, for dividing Mecklinburg into two distinct counties by the names of Mecklenburg and Tryon counties, and for other purposes, etc. His Majesty's Commission under the Great Seal of the Province aforesaid appointed William Moore (SK and others) Justices assigned to keep the peace for the county of Tryon." (page 9) " Justices of the Peace whose names appear in the minute docket for 1770 include (Sic) William Moore and others." "The January court minutes mention William Moore as coroner." Moore was a Justice of the Peace in 1771, 1772, 1773, a commissioner in 1774. (Colonial Records of N.C. Vol. 8, pages 518) Griffin page 14 writes "Until the adoption of the Constitution in 1776, the Colonial Assembly consisted of an upper house, known as His Majesty's Council, composed of the Governor (Tryon) and a number of men appointed by the King; and the Lower House made up of delegates elected by the people. The history of the various assemblies is one of continued strife between the Governor and The Lower House, or House of Commons. To the House of Commons Tryon County, as well as other counties of the province sent its representatives. (Sic) one of the men representing Tryon from the time of its formation 1769 until 1776 was William Moore." "The Tryon County Committee of Safety was formally organized in July (1775). On October 25, 1775, William Moore was one of the signers to an Oath." (page 28-29 Griffin H. T. & R.).

"Test"

"We, the subscribers professing our allegiance to the King and acknowledging the Constitutional Executive Power of government, do solemnly profess, testify and declare, that we do absolutely believe, that neither the Parliament of Great Britain nor any member or constituent branch thereof hath a right to impose taxes upon these colonies to regulate the internal police thereof and that all attempts by fraud or force to establish and exercise such a claim and power are violations of the peace and security of the people, and ought to be resisted to the utmost. And the people of this province singly and collectively are bound by the Acts and Resolutions of the Continental and Provincial Congresses, because in both they are freely represented by persons chosen by themselves, and we do solemnly and sincerely promise and engage under the sanction of virtue, home and the sacred love of liberty of our country, to maintain and support all and every the acts, resolutions and regulations of the said Continental and Provincial Congresses to the utmost of our power and abilities."

"In testimony, we have hereunto set our hands the 25th day of October, A.D. 1775" "William Graham, Chairman". Listed among the signers of this oath is William Moore. (Col. Rec. Vol. 10, page 296-298).

In December , 1775, Washington had begun the siege of Boston. (Col. Rec. Vol. 10, page 296-298).

"Resolved: That Mr. William Moore be now appointed Commissary for the Regiment of Tryon County in the present immergency for this Province, to go against those that are against the cause of American Liberty, and that said William Moore shall now on sight prepare wagons, provisions and such things as lie in his power for the support of the said regiment, and be ready at Major Thomas Beatie's by the 15th instant with such support. William Graham, Chairman". (Col. Rec. Vol. 10, page 423-424).

From these references of Moore's participation in local government we see he is an early supporter of the belief that the Parliament of Great Britain did not have the right to impose taxes on the colonies and had no right to regulate the internal police.

Captain William Moore married Margaret Patton, September 11, 1784. Margaret was the daughter of Benjamin Patton, who was one of the signers of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, May 20, 1775. This was over a year before the signing in Philadelphia, July 4, 1776 of our national Declaration of Independence. In 1794, Captain Moore and his family moved to the "Promised Land" in Hominy Valley.

Sand Hill Road Highway Marker, near Moore Fort

1955 Governor Dan Killian Moore dedicated this D. A. R. marker located on Sand Hill Road near Capt. William Moore home.

Homestead Was Here

On the rise of land directly behind the historical marker on Sand Hill Road stood the homestead of Capt. William Moore, who discovered the beauty of Western North Carolina while riding with the Rutherford expedition against the Cherokees and returned to carve a frontier farm out of the wilderness. He built a two-story log house here in 1784.

13-B

Mary Gudger Moore, (Mary Caroline Gudger Moore daughter of Samuel Bell Gudger and Elizabeth Siler Lowry Gudger married William Hamilton Moore; son of Capt. Charles Moore and wife Margaret Penland Moore), in "A Sketch of The Old Moore Homestead" written by request of "Asheville Times" (no date given) wrote " He built cabins surrounded by a stockade and lived in it for a few years. He brought the first wagon across the French Broad river and was the first white man to settle on the west side of the French Broad River in Buncombe County. About 1795, he built a comfortable house of hewn logs, the lumber necessary for floors, doors, etc. was sawed by hand. Nails, hinges, etc. were made by a blacksmith. This house was large and commodious for that period and was the center of much social life - his friends coming from different parts of the country to share his hospitality and enjoy the restful quiet and beauty of this new land. It has seen the dawn of two centuries, its walls have echoed the tread of dignified masters, the melody of contented slaves, the happy laughter of sons and daughters, merry wedding bells and funeral dirges. What memories it brings and yet it stands, a charming old house facing Mount Pisgah with apple trees, beautiful old gnarled pear trees, sweet scented plum trees, roses, honeysuckle, lilacs, snowballs, surround it and a cool spring nearby."

In this home, "In the Promised Land" a second family of children were raised by William Moore and Margaret Patton Moore. These included daughters Ann (married John Rutherford), Margaret (married Benjamin Tutt); sons Thomas C. Moore (who went to Georgia), Samuel C. Moore, and the youngest son Charles Moore married first Margaret Penland and second married Lucinda Killian.

Charles Moore, later referred to as Capt. Charles Moore after he served in the war of 1812, fell heir to his father's home property.

June Glenn, Photographer June 1973

Alex Crowell Showing Nancy Brower the spring and knoll near by on which the Moore House was built. This is along side of the present Sand Hill Road.

On November 12, 1812 Captain William Hamilton Moore died and was laid to rest on the crest of a hill which at that time had a view to the south west where Mount Pisgah stands dominating the sky line.

Today, in the graveyard now grown up with trees and undergrowth of at least one generation, lies Captain Moore's grave. The stone marker has fallen as has his wife Margaret's which is also shattered by the elements nature and time. Keeping them company are the unnamed field stones which probably mark the graves of "Daddy Jim" and "Mammy Sue" who stayed with their master. There are other field and granite stones projecting above the ground marking no doubt the final resting place of "Unknown soldiers" who were casulties in the defense of "Moore's Fort", falling to make our land free.

Captain William Moore was the first white man to settle in Hominy Valley, "The Promised Land." He was the leader shortly followed by many other families to move to Hominy Valley. The first members of other families to follow into Hominy Valley after Captain Moore were William Jones, Thomas Jones, Robert Henry, John Penland, Zachariah Candler, Jesse Israel, John Hawkins, John Webb, Edmond Sams, the children of Rev. Perminter Morgan including Stephen, Jesse, James, and Martha Morgan.

Living throughout Western North Carolina and our state are children of the first settlers of Hominy Valley. It is worthy to note that among these are represented most every profession known today including soldiers, doctors, lawyers, teachers, merchants, engineers, bankers, and a great many who have entered the political field of represenatives to both state and federal offices, county commissioners, judges even a governor of our great state.

Wylma Dykeman writing in "The French Broad" page 46-47 has this to say (See Sketch) "So it is today in 1974 that the grave of Captain William

"The French Broad", by Wilma Dykeman

William Moore didn't mind a fight. He was from Ulster Province, Ireland, and when, after removing to America, the Revolution came, he was glad to join in on the side of revolt. In 1776 his wife's brother, General Griffith Rutherford, was assigned to make an expedition against the Cherokees who were coming to Britain's aid and massacring colonists all along the border. Moore became a captain of one of the companies under Rutherford and marched with him over the Swannanoa Gap, down the French Broad and along the route already described in chapter two as Rutherford's Trace. Being at war neither blinded nor bewildered young Captain Moore. He saw the untouched, and—better—unclaimed, fertility of the land he passed through. Perhaps he responded to its green beauty too, seeing something of the fresh landscape of Ireland in these tree-covered mountains, thick canebrakes, grassy balds. The next year following the Indian expedition, in 1777, Captain Moore came back over the Blue Ridge to the French Broad River, not in war but in peace. A few miles west of the present city of Asheville, he built a small log-cabin fort, but before he could bring his family and begin their new life there, the Continental Army demanded his services once more.

Six years later, in 1783, the General Assembly of North Carolina opened a tract of the lands west of the Blue Ridge for settlement, and with a grant of six hundred and forty acres from Governor Richard Caswell, ex-Captain Moore returned, in 1784, to the French Broad and his "land on Hominy Creek" near its junction with the river. With wife and slaves, three daughters and three sons, he forgot soldiering and became a homesteader, one of a typical pattern for much of the river's settlement as it came: hunter, trader, soldier, speculator, they saw and stayed to conquer or be conquered. William Moore's grave is also in a public ground, near one of the North Carolina county schools. There lies a fragment of history on the classroom step, if teacher and pupils can lift their heads from the textbook monotony men have made of their own living past to sense for a moment one day or one night of the fear, satisfaction, drudgery, determination in the life of this first lone settler of their vast region. The stone says simply: "William Moore, died Nov. 11, 1812, AE 86 y's." But where, in what book, are the complexity and wealth of those years?

When Samuel Davidson first saw the French Broad, or why he decided to settle there, or if he even saw it before he decided, no one has bothered to record. His is the only pathetic one of these three brief chronicles. It also contains a measure of irony such as only the processes of history can perfect.

After the defeat of the Cherokees in 1776, North Carolina had an understanding

"The French Broad", by Wilma Dykeman

Moore, the first settler to come to the "Promised Land Hominy Valley" lies silently in a growth of woods, shall it be said unknown and forgotten? Forgotten, No. as his being here lives in the memory of some of his descendants and is recorded in the words of writers of history and stories. His grave forgotten? Yes. unless there are some who will come forward with thoughts and say "This graveyard is historic ground I would like to see it made worthy of the memory of these first citizens, for what they did and what they stood for. Let's do something about it!"

"Russ" Cole and Capt. William Moore headstone

Margararet Penland Moore, stone down and nature taking over.

excellent

Grave Stone of Captian William Moore

Grave Yard

Moore's grave west of Sandhill School

Grave stone of one of the slaves of Captian William Moore

THIS PAGE IS OUT OF RUSS COLE'S PAPER ON THE " CHEROKEE INDIANS"

Capt. William Moore Grave is in woods located behind this sign of AMERICAN ENKA COMPANY

Troop 4 Boy Scouts who wanted to to take on project and clean up Capt. William Moore's grave.
Richard Pott, Russ Cole, John Ellege & James Bowen

William Moore Died November 11, 1812 Age 86 Years

William Moore Died November 11, 1812 Age 86 years

Captain William Hamilton Moore, His grave forgotten?? ? ?

BIBLIOGRAPHY AND NOTES

"A History of Buncombe County" Vol. 1 & 2
Foster A. Sondley, L.L.D.

"History of Old Tryon and Rutherford Counties"
Clarence W. Griffin

"The French Broad"
Wilma Dykeman

"Strangers In High Places"
Michael Frome

"Historic Hominy Valley"
Prof. William Lewis

"The Asheville Citizen"
John Parris

"The Asheville Times"
Mary Caroline Gudger

"The Asheville Times"
Nancy Brower

"A Small Bit of History"
Owen H. Gudger

The Pack Memorial Library, Carolina Room and Foster A. Sondley References.

The Carson House, References.

Mrs. John A. Poteat, Marion, N. C.

Miss Dorthy Moore Gaston, Enka, N. C.

Gordon Morgan, "The Morgan Family History".

Christine Israel Miller, The Israel Family History, Candler, N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Rice, Gudger Family History

Alec Crowell, Enka, North Carolina.

Holmes Bryson, Enka, N. C.

Photographer, June Glenn, Jr., Asheville Citizen-Times.

Photographer, Malcolm Gamble, Asheville Citizen-Times.

GENEALOGY OF WRITER

Captain William Hamilton Moore	1726-1812
Margaret Patton Moore	1749-1814
Charles Moore	1791-1873
Margaret Penland Moore	1789-1828
Rachel Evaline Moore Candler	1814-1853
George Washington Candler	1808-1862
Margaret Candler Harkins	1836-1913
Thomas Jefferson Harkins	1829-1914
Ida Sue Harkins Gaston	1863-1935
Russell Jones Gaston	1858-1921
Opal Jones Gaston Cole	1891-1963
Benjamin Harrison Cole	1888-1970
Frederick Jack Cole, Sr.	1919-
Carolyn Josephine Mathews	1926-
Children:
Frederic Jack Cole, Jr.	1957-
Russell Mathews Cole	1959-
Rebecca Jo Cole	1966-

WILLIAM MOORE'S REPORT

Note: This extract copied from North Carolina University Magazine, New Series, Vol. VII, No. 3, page 90.

Brigade General Rutherford:-
Dear Sir,

. . . . . "I enlisted men Oct. 19, 1776. Marched Oct. 29. Arrived at Cathey's Fort, and then down Scott's Creek and from Scott's place we took a blind path which led us down to the Tuckysege (Tuckaseegee) through a mountainous very bad way. We continued our march very briskly in expectation of getting to the town of Too-Cowee (Stekoa) before night. But it lying at a greater distance than we expected we were obliged to tie up our horses and lay by till next morning. When we found a ford and crossed the river, and then a very large mountain where we came upon a very plain path, very much used by the Indians driving from the middle settlements to the aforesaid town (Stekoa). We continued our march along the said path about two miles when we came in sight of the town, which lay very scattered; then we came to consultation to see which was the best way to attack it. But our small army consisting of but 97 men, we found we were not able to surround it, so we consulted and rushed into the center of the town in order to surprise it. But the enemy being alarmed of our coming were all fled save two, who trying to make their escape, sprang into the river, and we pursued to the bank, and as they were rising the bank on the other side we fired upon them and shot one of them down, and the other getting out of reach of our guns, and making up to the mountains, some of our men crossed the river on foot and pursued and some went to the ford and crossed on horses and headed him, killed and scalped him with the other. When we returned into the town and found that they had moved all of their valuable effects, save corn, pompions, beans, peas, and other trifling things of which we found an abundance in every house. The town consisted of 25 houses, some of them new erections and one curious Townhouse framed and ready for covering. We took what corn we had need of and what trifling plunder was to be got, and then set fire to the town. Then we concluded to follow the track of the Indians which crossed the river and led us a direct course north. We continued our march about a mile, and there we perceived a great pillow of smoke rise out of the mountains, which we found rose out of the woods, being set on fire with a view, as we supposed, to blind their tracks so we could not pursue them. Upon which Captain McFadden and myself took a small part of the men in order to make further discoveries, and left the main body behind upon a piece of advantageous ground until our return. We marched over a large mountain and came upon a very beautiful river which we had no knowledge of. We crossed the river and came immediately upon Indian camps which they had newly left; we went over a second mountain into a large cove upon south fork of said river where we found a great deal of sign, several camping places and the fires burning very briskly, night coming on we were obliged to return to our main body awhile before day. When day appeared we made ready and marched our men until the place we had been the night before. Our advance guard being forward, perceived two squaws and a lad who came down the creek as far as we had been the night before, and when they perceived our tracks they were retreating to the camp from whence they came which was within 3/4 mile. The signal was given, then we pursued and captured them all prisoners. Unfortunately our men shouted in the chase and fired a gun which aroused them at the camp and they made their escape into the mountains. The prisoners led us to the camp where we found abundance of plunder of horses and other goods to the amount of 700 pounds. We took some horses belonging to the poor inhabitants of the frontier which we brought in and delivered to the owners. Our provisions falling short we were obliged to steer homeward. That night we lay upon a prodigious mountain where we had a severe shock of earthquake which surprised our men very much. Then we steered our course about east and southeast two days through prodigious mountains almost impossible and struck the road in Richland Creek Mountain. From thence we marched to Pidgeon where we vendued off all the plunder . . .

William Moore
On the Service of the United States

Nov. 7. 1778

FROM: THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, July 8, 1959

OWEN H. GUDGER

★ ★ ★

Owen Gudger, Attorney, Scholar, Dies

July 8, 1959

Owen H. Gudger, 79, research scholar, historian and former Asheville postmaster, died unexpectedly of a heart attack about 3:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Admired and respected as one of the city's leading citizens, Mr. Gudger formerly practiced law and had served as juvenile court judge. He was for years a civic and political leader.

At one time a newspaper publisher, he had owned the old Asheville Gazette, forerunner of the Asheville Times.

In recent years, Mr. Gudger's health impaired his activities. He suffered a broken hip in 1948 on a trip to Albany, Ga. and was injured in an automobile accident there the following Spring. His recovery from these injuries had never been fully realized.

Death came as he sat outside with Mrs. Gudger at their Carolina Apartments residence, waiting for a brother, Wirt Gudger, with whom they planned an afternoon automobile ride.

Mr. Gudger was born in the Actons section of Buncombe County March 13, 1880, a son of the late Dr. David M. and Louisa Taylor Gudger. The Gudgers and Taylors were two of Buncombe's oldest families.

Educated at Sand Hill School, Mr. Gudger's first job was on the old Gazette. He moved up through a series of jobs on the paper unil he bought control. He sold out after a brief experience in the newspaper field and studied law, being admitted to the bar in 1909.

Long active in state Democratic politics, he successfully managed the Democratic Congressional campaign in the old 10th District in 1910 and again in 1912.

In 1913, he was named postmaster by President Wilson and served until Republican President Warren G. Harding went into the White House eight years later.

It was once said of Mr. Gudger that "as an accepted fact, no postmaster during the existence of the Asheville office had served his government with greater zeal or with more conscientious concern."

During the 1920s, Mr. Gudger practiced law, sold real estate and developed a keen insight into Asheville's history. His interest in and his appreciation for the color and drama of local history quickly built his reputation as an authority.

In 1933 he became chairman of the Asheville elections board and also a member of the Buncombe County Board of tax assessors.

In 1937, he was named judge of the city-county juvenile court and here, too, he threw his full energies into the job. He quickly won recognition for his work in helping unfortunate wayward children. He served as judge until 1941.

As a juvenile court judge, Mr. Gudger was almost a father to many of the children that came within his jurisdiction. It was not unusual for Judge Gudger to unselfishly labor to place children in homes where they would receive the most care.

He was a member of First Presbyterian Church and of the Masons and Elks.

Mr. Gudger spent several recent years preparing a history of Asheville. Among his writings was an essay on the influence of George W. Vanderbilt on the conservation of natural resources in the Western North Carolina mountains and in the United States.

Conservation was also close to the heart of Mr. Gudger, who was an ardent fisherman, mountain climber and gardener.

In addition to the brother and widow, the former Miss Nelle Murray Loche, Mr. Gudger is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Jeanette G. Bradley, of Hyattsville, Md., and Mrs. Florence G. Haines of Asheville and a number of nieces and nephews.

Morris-Hendon - Black Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements which were incomplete Tuesday night.

"A SMALL BIT OF HISTORY"

Written by: Owen H. Gudger

"The Moore Fort"

7. THE MOORE FORT

This is where history began in Western North Carolina. In 1775, the Cherokee Indians, having allied themselves with the British, began attacking settlers below the mountains in North Georgia, Upper South Carolina, and along the Catawba River in North Carolina, killing some thirty or more settlers along that stream, and throughly arousing the population of the three States. At that time, the plateau region between the Blue Ridge Mountains and the present Tennessee State line was held by the Cherokee Indians. That portion lying south and west of the Balsam Mountains was where the Indians lived, and that portion east and north of the Balsam Mountains, up to the Virginia line, was the Indian hunting ground, which, by treaty with the English, no white man was allowed to settle.

Up to that time white people were supposed to be allowed to pass through that country over into what is now Tennessee, but due to friction that had developed between the early settlers below the mountains, and the Indians, it had proved unsafe for white people to go through. Some settlements had already developed over in that portion now known as Tennessee, being founded by settlers coming down through the valley of Virginia. These settlements, together with those in Southwest Virginia and Southern Kentucky, were not approved by the colonial governments, which were controlled by the wealthy planters in the Tidewater Belt of Virginia, North and South Carolina, who had purposely pushed these settlers back between them and the mountains, as a buffer against the Indians. When these attacks were made on these settlers, it didn't concern the wealthy planters in the Tidewater Belt, but these Scots-Irish fellows had already prepared themselves to take care of the situation if war should arise, which was now on them. So General Griffith Rutherford was commissioned to promptly organize an army to deal with the Cherokees; Williamson of South Carolina and Christian of Georgia were commissioned to do the same. After several months of preparation, Rutherford got together an army, starting at Salisbury, North Carolina, and marching westward to the Davidson Fort on the Catawba River. He had assembled company after company of light horsemen, and on reaching that point, now known as Old Fort, he had 2,500 men, all mounted. Remaining there a very short while, he moved upstream near its head. There camp was made for the night. The following morning they reached the Swannanoa Gap, now known as Ridgecrest. At this point they entered what was known as The Swannanoa, the main Indian trail. This is known to the Indians as the Main Trail, or in English parlance, The King's Highway. Some say it had been blazed by buffalo herds which had gone westward through Buncombe, Haywood, Jackson, and Swain counties to Bigtown, near Bryson City, and beyond. This trail led down the Swannanoa, from the left bank of the same, to a point near Biltmore, where the trail turned and crossed through what is now known as the Biltmore Estate, to a well-known Indian ford on the French Broad River, which later became known as the War Ford to some, and the Rutherford Ford to others. Here a fairly easy crossing was made by this army, and possibly at this point, or a little further on, they were joined by Hardin of Rutherford County, with 600 horsemen.

After crossing Hominy Creek, at a point not now well known, they reached a point where the Old Wilderness Trail, running north and south, crossed the Swannanoa Trail. Here they were met by couriers who had come up from South Carolina to tell them of the movements of Williamson who would join them later, as he was coming up by the Walhalla route. This point is about where the Oak Forest Presbyterian Church now stands, then or later known as Sandhill. After this conference they moved westward about a half mile, where camp was pitched for the night. This was on Bench Bottom, immediately behind the old Acton Methodist Church. There they camped for the night.

The following morning they broke camp and struck westward, where they had more fording of streams, until they reached the ford of Pigeon River, at the present town of Canton. Evidently running across some difficulties at this crossing, they moved up-stream about four miles to a point not far from where the east and west forks of the Pigeon River come together. Then they headed cross-country through Pigeon Gap, down Scots Creek, to a point shortly above the present town of Sylva. There they again camped for the night. Turning to the left they headed for the Indian ford on the Tuckasegee River. After traversing the ford, they crossed over to the Tennessee River near the present town of Franklin, where there was quite an Indian village that they destroyed. Up to this point, Rutherford had met with no opposition from the Indians, but Williamson, who joined him at this point, had been ambushed by the Indians further up the Tennessee River, and had sustained some losses. Rutherford at this point left Williamson to hold the place, and he pushed on some distance to the Hiawassee section to meet Christian of Georgia, whom he never did contact, but on this trip Rutherford destroyed several Indian towns and villages, and returning to Franklin, he started to his home, which was at Salisbury, North Carolina, where he reported thirty or forty Indian villages destroyed, and very slight loss of his own.

The following winter, a very important meeting was held at Salisbury with the civil-colonial authorities and these military authorities: Rutherford, Captain William Moore, who was second in command to Rutherford, together with Williamson of South Carolina, and John Sevier of the Tennessee section, where the strategy to be used was discussed and decided on. It was very evident to Rutherford, Captain Moore, John Sevier and these military men, that the Indian warriors had not been fully drawn into combat and from then on it would take quite an army to hold them off. The civil authorities, however, made up mostly of the wealthy planters of the Tidewater Belt, wanted Rutherford's army and all other trained soldiers taken eastward and southward and incorporated into the main Continental Army. This, of course, did not meet with the approval of Rutherford, Moore and Sevier, particularly, so it was agreed that Moore might build a fort on Hominy Creek and take a small part of the troops with him to help hold the Indians off. Just where Hominy Creek was located was a secret known only to these military authorities, the civil authorities supposing that it was somewhere around the foot of the mountains. But, as a matter of fact, it was thirty or thirty-five miles back over the Blue Ridge, in what was known then as Indian territory. So when this meeting broke up in the Spring of 1777, possibly one half of Rutherford's army marched across the mountains with Captain Moore, where this fort was built on Hominy Creek, about seven miles west of Asheville.

This army proceeded to build a series of block houses from the Swannanoa Gap to the Moore Fort; also a series of block houses surrounding the entire Hominy Valley, and block houses up and down the Old Wilderness Trail from the South Carolina line to the mouth of Bear Creek in Madison County, all of these block houses being in bugle call one of the other. The bugle was an ox or cow horn. Secret calls passed from one block house to the other if trouble arose, which brought troops from the Moore Fort in a hurry. This defense line, as they called it, from the South Carolina line to the mouth of Bear Creek, was maintained by Moore. Williamson of South Carolina extended the line from the South Carolina line to Augusta, Georgia. John Sevier set up block houses north of Bear Creek to Fort White, now Knoxville, Tennessee.

At that time there was quite a large population lying between the wealthy planters of the Tidewater Belt and the Blue Ridge, who had been anxious to get through to the rich lands lying over in Tennessee and Kentucky.

This defense line, set up between Augusta, Georgia, and Fort White, very effectively shut off the Indians from further bothering any of those who wanted to cross over, the consequence being that hundreds of families began teaming through the mountains to get to those fine lands described by Daniel Boone and others, lying beyond the Appalachians. Many of them found log houses already built and ready for occupancy, built by John Sevier and his group.

Of course this defense line and these operations were a top military secret. These fellows knew that the wealthy planters, many of them in sympathy with the English, would interfere if there was any way to do it, as so many of them sympathized with the English, and were disloyal to the American cause.

At the Moore Fort on Hominy Creek, preparations had been made for these numerous migrants who would be passing through, to be entertained. Captain Moore had built on the opposite side of Hominy Creek, accomodations for a large group of Negro slaves to make crops and food, for not only the troops, but also the many migrants. Two very interesting old Negroes were put in charge, one named Daddy Jim, and the other named Mammy Sue, one of whom claimed to be the son of an African King, the other the daughter of another African King. They possessed some education, possibly being members of an African Arab tribe, and not themselves real Negroes. They had quarters for strangers passing through, and these guests were highly entertained. When these migrants reached the Watauga settlement, the men were incorporated into the armies of John Sevier, and made some of the most brilliant fighters the world has ever known.

When Cornwallis came over to Savannah, Georgia, and started his march northward, sweeping everything before him and sending out officers who established outposts to enforce every citizen into the British Army under penalty of death, the country became thoroughly aroused. John Sevier, and Isaac Shelby crossed over from the Watauga settlements with an army to deal with these outposts, and fought four or more battles in upper South Carolina, taking more prisoners than their own army amounted to. Meanwhile, the Southern Continental Army was badly defeated by Cornwallis at Camden, South Carolina. Sevier and Shelby, it was learned by Cornwallis, were headed for Gillespie Gap to cross into Tennessee with these prisoners, and Cornwallis immediately dispatched General Ferguson, with quite an army, to overtake Sevier and Shelby and recapture these British prisoners.

Ferguson headed north and reached Gilberttown, two miles above Rutherford, where he thought he would head them off, but it is reported they made their way through the woods and escaped from Ferguson. The facts are, however, they came through the Saluda Gap and made their way by way of Moore Fort, down the French Broad Valley, into Tennessee, where they soon sent the prisoners on into Virginia, sending word to Campbell of Virginia to come with what troops he had. Instead of waiting for Ferguson to cross over the mountains, as had been planned, Sevier immediately began to get all the troops possible that could be spared, and crossed over the mountains by way of the Gillespie Gap to the Pleasant Gardens, near Marion, North Carolina, where it was learned that Ferguson had broken camp at Gilberttown, and it was thought he was headed for Ninety-Six, South Carolina, to join General Kruger.

At this time it was thought that the British planned for quite a large army of Cherokee Indians to come aid General Ferguson in crossing the mountains to wipe out these fellows in the Watauga settlements. John Sevier, on reaching Pleasant Gardens, knowing this, picked Daniel Smith and Joseph Lytle, and two other leaders of bold bands of Indian fighters, and dispatched them in the night to cross the mountains and apprise Captain Moore and his forces of this plan, and to supplement Moore's forces in holding the Indians off at this critical moment; for it was Sevier's determination to wipe out this British Army under Ferguson, if possible.

STATE OF NORTH-CAROLINA No. 1031

TO ALL TO WHOM THESE PRESENTS SHALL COME, GREETING.

KNOW Ye That We for and in consideration of the sum of Ten Pounds for every hundred acres hereby paid into our Treasury by William Moore have given and granted, and by these Presents do give and grant unto the said William Moore a Tract or Land, containing Five hundred and fifty Acres lying and being on the Waters of Bowlings Branch on the Waters of Fishing Creek in Bute County Beginning at a Pine on the North side of the Creek on a bottom then West twenty five Chains to a State and one Oak then South Eighty a large Branch of Fishing Creek passing a long the said Branch to a State in it Twenty five Chains to a State then East Twenty Chains to a State then North Twenty Chains to the Beginning as by the Plat hereunto annexed doth appear; together with all Woods, Waters, Mines, Minerals, Hereditments, and Appurtenances to the said Land belonging or appertaining: To hold to the said William Moore his Heirs and Assigns for ever. Yielding and paying to us such Sums of Money yearly, or otherwise, our General Assembly from time to time may direct, PROVIDED ALWAYS, That the said William Moore shall cause this Grant to be registered in the Register's Office of our said County of Bute within Twelve Months from the Date hereof, otherwise the same shall be void and of none Effect.

IN TESTIMONY whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent, and our Great Seal hereunto affixed. WITNESS RICHARD CASWELL, Esquire, our Governor, Captain General, and Commander in Chief, at Hillsborough the Seventh Day of August in the Eleventh year of our Independence and in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and [illegible]

Carolina Bush
County October the 5th 1784.

By a Scale of 40 Chains to the Inch

Surveyed for William Moore four hundred and fifty Acres of Land lying on both Sides of Hominy Branch and both Sides of the Path that Leads from the Fording of French Broad River to the Catawba Nation. Beginning at a Post Oak on the North Side of the Bush in a hollow. Runs West
Twenty Chains to a Stake and two Post Oaks thence South Cording a large Branch the path and Bush along said above the Ind Outher Lands
Cro Dat Sixty Chains to a Stake thence East
Twenty five Chains to a Stake thence North Paling the Corner of his Own Imery and Existing Hominy. Bush to the Beginning

Jno. McDowell
Jos. McDowell

By Jos McDowell Dept Surr

WILLIAM MOORE'S REPORT

Note: This extract copied from North Carolina University Magazine, New Series, Vol. VII, No. 3, page 90.

Brigade General Rutherford:-
Dear Sir,

. . . . . "I enlisted men Oct. 19, 1776. Marched Oct. 29. Arrived at Cathey's Fort, and then down Scott's Creek and from Scott's place we took a blind path which led us down to the Tuckysege (Tuckaseegee) through a mountainous very bad way. We continued our march very briskly in expectation of getting to the town of Too-Cowee (Stekoa) before night. But it lying at a greater distance than we expected we were obliged to tie up our horses and lay by till next morning. When we found a ford and crossed the river, and then a very large mountain where we came upon a very plain path, very much used by the Indians driving from the middle settlements to the aforesaid town (Stekoa). We continued our march along the said path about two miles when we came in sight of the town, which lay very scattered; then we came to consultation to see which was the best way to attack it. But our small army consisting of but 97 men, we found we were not able to surround it, so we consulted and rushed into the center of the town in order to surprise it. But the enemy being alarmed of our coming were all fled save two, who trying to make their escape, sprang into the river, and we pursued to the bank, and as they were rising the bank on the other side we fired upon them and shot one of them down, and the other getting out of reach of our guns, and making up to the mountains, some of our men crossed the river on foot and pursued and some went to the ford and crossed on horses and headed him, killed and scalped him with the other. When we returned into the town and found that they had moved all of their valuable effects, save corn, pompions, beans, peas, and other trifling things of which we found an abundance in every house.. The town consisted of 25 houses, some of them new erections and one curious Townhouse framed and ready for covering. We took what corn we had need of and what trifling plunder was to be got, and then set fire to the town. Then we concluded to follow the track of the Indians which crossed the river and led us a direct course north. We continued our march about a mile, and there we perceived a great pillow of smoke rise out of the mountains, which we found rose out of the woods, being set on fire with a view, as we supposed, to blind their tracks so we could not pursue them. Upon which Captain McFadden and myself took a small part of the men in order to make further discoveries, and left the main body behind upon a piece of advantageous ground until our return. We marched over a large mountain and came upon a very beautiful river which we had no knowledge of. We crossed the river and came immediately upon Indian camps which they had newly left; we went over a second mountain into a large cove upon south fork of said river where we found a great deal of sign, several camping places and the fires burning very briskly, night coming on we were obliged to return to our main body awhile before day. When day appeared we made ready and marched our men until the place we had been the night before. Our advance guard being forward, perceived two squaws and a lad who came down the creek as far as we had been the night before, and when they perceived our tracks they were retreating to the camp from whence they came which was within 3/4 mile. The signal was given, then we pursued and captured them all prisoners. Unfortunately our men shouted in the chase and fired a gun which aroused them at the camp and they made their escape into the mountains. The prisoners led us to the camp where we found abundance of plunder of horses and other goods to the amount of 700 pounds. We took some horses belonging to the poor inhabitants of the frontier which we brought in and delivered to the owners. Our provisions falling short we were obliged to steer homeward. That night we lay upon a prodigious mountain where we had a severe shock of earthquake which surprised our men very much. Then we steered our course about east and southeast two days through prodigious mountains almost impossible and struck the road in Richland Creek Mountain. From thence we marched to Pidgeon where we vendued off all the plunder . . .

William Moore
On the Service of the United States

Nov. 7. 1778

'ROUGH AND READY GUARDS' was the affectionate nickname given the members of Company F, 14th North Carolina Regiment, commanded by Zebulon Baird Vance in the War Between the States. When Sen. and Mrs. Vance in 1890 opened their summer home, "Gombroom," a few miles from Black Mountain, they invited surviving members of the company to hold their annual reunion there to celebrate its opening. The photograph shown, now the property of the Sondley Reference Library, was made on this happy occasion. In the picture (L to R) are: First row (on ground), William Gudger, Azalea; Dr. David M. Gudger, Sand Hill; J. M. Gudger Sr., Asheville; Gay Williams, Ivy; Billy Hunter, French Broad; Dick Baird, Reems Creek; Thomas Brooks, Candler; and Wesley Hicks, company cook, Asheville; second row (on first and second steps), James M. Smith, William Garrison, Reems Creek; J. J. White, Swannanoa; Baechus Westall, Swannanoa; J. M. (Jess) Green, Asheville; Andy Hunter, French Broad; Alf Walton, Haw Creek Rd.; background group, John M. Stepp, Black Mountain; Jim Hughey, Bull Creek; Albert (Bert) Lytle, Fairview; Sen. and Mrs. Vance; Riley Powers, Skyland; Riley Pitillo, Brush Creek, and Berry Gaston, Sand Hill. Four members of the company who were surviving at the time the photograph was made were unable to attend the annual reunion that day. They were: Robert Williams, Fairview; George White and Bedent Smith, Reems Creek, and Thomas Johnston, Asheville. Identification of persons in the photograph was worked out by Owen Gudger of Asheville.

DIED
Nov. 11 1812
Æ. 86 Yrs.

Enka Landmark Demolished

A crew of workers has been busy during the past week demolishing the old Gaston farmhouse, one of the last outstanding landmarks which was found in Enka six years ago when the Rayon factory purchased the location for the Enka plant.

The farmhouse was built by Russell L. Jones something over a hundred years ago and after weathering more than a century of storms the building was just about as staunch as could be made with the use of solid heart timber, which was plentiful in this region at that time. Nails were unknown at the time construction work was done, and pegs were used. It was in these days also that it was the fashion to build a big kitchen in the yard, where the slaves could do the cooking without interfering with the white folks in "The Big House". The Gaston residence had four large rooms, two above and two below, which was afterwards added to when it became necessary to have additional space.

Mr. Jones gave this place to his daughter, Martha, who had married Perry Gaston. They moved into the house sixty-three years ago. The Gaston family have lived in this house continuously until ten or twelve years ago, when it was sold to R. C. Crowell and a few years later to the American Enka Corporation. Among those of the family who have resided in this old landmark are: T. P. Gaston, E. L. Gaston, C. P. Gaston, Mrs. Chas. Ingram, Mrs. W. E. Fletcher, Mrs. Mamie Howie, and Mrs. Wayne Alexander.

During the past six years since the acquisition of this property by the American Enka Corporation the old landmark has been used as a Dutch School and other purposes.

ANOTHER VIEW

Old Landmark Gone

Unusual History Lesson

Taking a page from Wilma Dykeman's book, "The French Broad," instead of a history book, students at Sand Hill Grammar School got an unusual history lesson this week. History buff F. Jack Cole lectured the group on the life of Capt. William Moore, first white settler west of the French Broad River, then led students to the pioneer's gravesite near the school. In her book, Miss Dykeman wrote: "William Moore's grave is ... in a public ground, near one of the North Carolina county schools. There lies a fragment of history on the classroom step, if teacher and pupils can lift their heads from the textbook monotony men have made of their own living past to sense for a moment one day or one night of the fear, satisfaction, drudgery, determination in the life of this first lone settler of their vast region." (Staff Photo by June Glenn Jr.)

ASHEVILLE TIMES...4-16-76

B.o. Moore, William

F. JACK COLE
MOSES AND THE CHILDREN OF ISRAEL
JUNE GLENN JR PTOTO

F. JACK COLE
SAND HILL GRAMMEL
STUDENTS VISIT
GRAVE OF CAPT. WM.
HAMILTON MOORE
BEHIND SAND HILL
SCHOOL AT MOORE
CEMETERY

WHILE VISITING CEMETERY THEY FOUND GRAVESTONE
OF GEORGE CANDLER
WHO MARRIED
MOORES DAUGHTER
EVALINE MOORE,
CANDLER. GEORGES OLDEST SON WAS
WILLIAM GASTON CANDLER
4-15-1834

CANDLER'S SISTER
MARRIED (MARGARET)
THOMAS JEFFERSON
HARKINS

ABLS Local History Project
WEST ASHEVILLE
Photographic Collection Documentation Form

Item number: _____

Date received: Nov 7, 1998

Location: West Branch

Received by: K. Loughmiller

1. FORMAT:
Print? ✓ Color? _____ Black & white? ✓

Negative? _____ Post card? _____ Slide? _____ Stereo View? _____

2. SIZE? 4 x 5 _____ 5 x 7 _____ 8 x 10 ✓ 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 _____

3. Date taken? 4-16-76

4. Geographic location shown in photo? Moore Cemetery, Enka, behind Sand Hill School

5. Group associated with photo? Sand Hill Grammar School students

6. Persons in photo, left to right? F. Jack Cole + unidentified students from Sand Hill Grammar School, April 16, 1976

7. Photographer? June Glenn, Jr Citizen-Times

8. Additional information: Includes newspaper clipping of photo + text

9. DISPOSITION:
Return original to donor: ✓ Original donated to archive: _____

10. Release signed? _____ Receipt number: _____

Donor: F. Jack Cole

Address: 73 Evelyn Place, Asheville, NC 28801

Telephone: 255-8241

Make two (120 mm) neg
and one 5 x 7 print

H918-5

ABLS Local History Project
WEST ASHEVILLE
Photographic Collection Documentation Form

Item number: _____

Date received: Nov 7, 1998

Location: West Branch

Received by: K. Loughmiller

1. FORMAT:
Print? ✓ Color? _____ Black & white? ✓

Negative? _____ Post card? _____ Slide? _____ Stereo View? _____

2. SIZE? 4 x 5 _____ 5 x 7 7½ x 9 8 x 10 _____ 3 1/2 x 5 1/2 _____

3. Date taken? Aug 27, 1978 SE McDowell Co

4. Geographic location shown in photo? Mills Fk of S. Muddy Creek in Dysartsville, NC

5. Group associated with photo? F. Jack Cole, William H. Moore

6. Persons in photo, left to right? Bratcher Biggerstaff of Dysartsville

7. Photographer? ? Citizen-Times

8. Additional information: Log house built by William Moore on the Mills Fk of S. Muddy Creek in Dysartsville, NC — before 1790

9. DISPOSITION:
Return original to donor: ✓ Original donated to archive: _____

10. Release signed? _____ Receipt number: _____

Donor: F. Jack Cole

Address: 73 Evelyn Pl Asheville NC 28804

Telephone: 255-8244

Please make two (120 mm) negatives) 20 ea 5x7 prints

H919.5

Bio / Moore, William

COMMEMORATIVE CERMONY
CAPTAIN WILLIAM HAMILTON MOORE (1716 - 1812)
DESCENDANTS
2:30 P.M. CAPTAINS DRIVE
CAPTAIN WILLIAM HAMILTON MOORE CEMETERY
OFF SAND HILL SCHOOL ROAD

WELCOME AND HISTORY OF CAPTAIN WILLIAM HAMILTON MOORE

F. JACK COLE

GREETINGS
GOODAFTERNOON COUSINS, WELCOME TO THIS HISTORIC CEMETERY AND THIS COMMEMORATIVE CERMONY.

I AM JACK COLE ONE OF THE THREE MEMBERS OF THE DESCENDANTS COMMITTEE JOINING WITH AMERICAN ENKA COMPANY INVITING YOU TO THIS CERMONY.

AT THIS TIME LET ME RECOGNIZE THE OTHER TWO MEMBERS OF THE COMMITTEE:

FIRST YOUR COUSIN COKE CANDLER, REPRESENTING CANDLER DECENDANTS, FORMER CHAIRMAN OF BUNCOMBE COUNTY'S BOARD OF COMMISSIONERS. (COKE PLEASE HOLD UP YOUR HAND OR STEP OUT)

SECOND, YOUR COUSIN ROBERT HALL, OF ASHEVILLE, FORMERLY OF SYLVA REPRESENTING KILLIAN DECENDANTS. (BOB PLEASE HOLD UP YOUR HAND)

MAY I SAY WE ARE ALL COUSINS OR NEAR COUSINS.

BEING A COLE AND I WILL NOT GO INTO THE GENEALOGY AND ANCESTRY OF THE COLE FAMILY. THE RECORDS OF WHICH CAME TO NEW AMSTERDAM FROM HOLLAND IN 1630, THIS COLE TREASURER OF THE WEST INDIES TRADING COMPANY MAY HAVE BEEN INVOLVED IN THE TRADING OF THE ISLE OF MANNATTAN FROM THE INDIANS. MY FATHER BEN COLE CAME TO HOMINY VALLEY FROM NEW JERSEY MET MY MOTHER, OPAL GASTON, DAUGHTER OF RUSSELL JONES GASTON AND IDA HARKINS GASTON.

SO I REPRESENT ON THIS COMMITTEE THE HARKINS AND GASTON DECENDANTS WHO GO BACK THROUGH MARGARET CANDLER, DAUGHTER OF GEORGE AND RACHEL MOORE CANDLER, DAUGHTER OF CHARLES AND MARGARET PENLAND MOORE AND GRANDDAUGHTER OF CAPTAIN WILLIAM MOORE.

I PROMISED JAKE JOLLIFF OF AMERICAN ENKA THAT I WOULD KEEP MY SPEECH SHORT SO I WILL NOT DIGRESS FURTHER INTO FAMILY GENEALOGY AT THIS TIME, BUT TELL THE STORY OF CAPTAIN MOORE AND HIS BEING THE FIRST WHITE SETTLER WEST OF THE FRENCH BROAD RIVER.

IT IS SAID THAT THE FAMILY OF CAPTAIN WILLIAM HAMILTON MOORE ORIGINALLY LIVED IN SCOTLAND. THEY MOVED TO ULSTER PROVIDENCE NORTH IRELAND TO A SETTLEMENT UNDER THE DUKE OF HAMILTON. WILLIAM MOORE WAS BORN IN THE YEAR 1726. HIS FATHER'S NAME WAS ALSO WILLIAM MOORE AND HIS MOTHER WAS A HAMILTON. HE WAS GIVEN THE NAME OF WILLIAM HAMILTON MOORE. THERE WAS FIGHTING IN NORTH IRELAND THEN AS IT CONTINUES TODAY BETWEEN THE CATHOLIC IRISH AND THE PROTESTANT PRESBYTERIANS. HIS FATHER WAS ONE OF THE DEFENDERS OF DERRY. WE KNOW IT TODAY AS LONDON DERRY.

AT THE AGE OF 15, WILLIAM, WITH NINE OF HIS BROTHERS SAILED TO PHILADELPHIA WHERE THEY SETTLED BRIEFLY. LATER WITH SOME OF HIS BROTHERS MOVED SOUTH IN THE VALLEY OF VIRGINIA TO BORDENS GRANT, AUGUSTA COUNTY.

THE COMMANDER OF COMPANY 3 OF THE LOCAL MILITIA IN AUGUSTA COUNTY WAS CAPTAIN JAMES CATHEY. THE MILITIA LISTING IN COMPANY 2 INDLCUDED WILL MOORE, JOHN MOORE, DAVID MOORE, ALEX MOORE, ANDREW MOORE AND JAS GREENLEE (WHO LATER SETTLED IN THE AREA THAT IS NOW MCDOWELL COUNTY.

WILLIAM MOORE MARRIED ANN CATHEY, GRANDDAUGHTER OF CAPTAIN JAMES CATHEY. WILLIAM AND HIS BROTHER CHARLES AND JAMES WERE MEN OF ACTION IN THE MILITIA AND MOVED FROM VIRGINIA TO SOUTH CAROLINA NEAR SPARTANBURG WHERE CHARLES SETTLED. OUT OF SPARTANBURG IS THE TOWN OF MOORE WHERE CHARLES SETTLED.

WILLIAM NEXT MOVED INTO NORTH CAROLINA AND SETTLED IN ROWAN COUNTY NOW MCDOWELL FIRST ON A TRACT WHERE LAKE JAMES IS NOW LOCATED IN SHADRACK'S CREEK GRANT 70-1779 AND LATER TO THE MILLFORK OF SOUTH MUDDY CREEK GRANT NO1232, DYSARTSVILLE AT PILOT MOUNTAIN WHERE HE BUILT A HOME AND HE AND ANN CATHEY HAD SIX CHILDREN, WILLIAM, THOMAS, ROBERT, SONS, AND DAUGHTERS, ALLIE MARRIED JOHN PENLAND; MARY MARRIED ROBERT PENLAND; RACHEL MARRIED GEORGE PENLAND.

A NUMBER OF WRITERS INCLUDING WILMA DYKEMAN AND HISTORIAN ASHE RECORD THAT WILLIAM MOORE WAS MARRIED TO MARGARET RUTHERFORD SISTER OF GENERAL GRIFFITH RUTHERFORD. IF SO IT WAS PERHAPS SOMETIME BETWEEN 1768-1774. (THERE ARE NO CHILDREN)

IT IS THOUGHT THAT HIS WIFE, ANN CATHEY, BECAME ILL AND WENT TO HER FAMILY IN SALISBURY WHERE IT IS THOUGHT THAT SHE DIED AND IS BURRIED IN THYATIRA CHURCH YARD (PRESBYTERIAN) IN SALISBURY.

ON AUGUST 4, 1774, WILLIAM MOORE MARRIED MARGARET PATTON (BORN 1749, SHE WAS 25 AND WILLIAM AT THAT TIME 48).

MARGARET PATTON WAS THE DAUGHTER OF BENJAMIN PATTON ONE OF THE SIGNERS OF THE MECKLENBURG DECLARATION.

WE KNOW WILLIAM AND MARGARET HAD THE FOLLOWING CHILDREN:

ANN MARRIED JOHN RUTHERFORD
MARGARET MARRIED BENJAMIN TUTT
A DAUGHTER _____ MARRIED BALLEW
SONS: THOMAS C.; SAMUEL C.
CHARLES MARRIED MARGARET PENLAND, FIRST THEN LUCINDA KILLIAN.
CHARLES AND LUCINDA KILLIAN MOORE ARE BURRIED IN OAK FOREST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH CEMETERY.

IN 1776, WHEN THE CHEROKEE ATTACKED THE WHITE SETTLERS ON THE CATAWBA. WILLIAM MOORE WAS A MEMBER OF GENERAL GRIFFITH RUTHORFORD'S EXPEDITION AGAINST THE CHEROKEES. LATER WITH 97 MEN HE ENLISTED ON OCTOBER 19, 1776, HE LED A SECOND ATTACK AGAINST THE CHEROKEES. IN NOVEMBER 1776, HE BUILT A FORT ON THIS LAND TO DEFEND AGAINST THE CHEROKEES AND MADE A VOW TO RETURN AND BRING HIS FAMILY AND SETTLE. WILMA DYKEMAN IN HER BOOK THE FRENCH BROAD BEST TELLS THE STORY OF HIS LIFE...

"THE FRENCH BROAD", BY WILMA DYKEMAN

WILLIAM MOORE DIDN'T MIND A FIGHT. HE WAS FROM ULSTER PROVIDENCE, IRELAND, AND WHEN, AFTER REMOVING TO AMERICA, THE REVOLUTION CAME, HE WAS GLAD TO JOIN IN ON THE SIDE OF REVOLT. IN 1776 HIS WIFE'S BROTHER, GENERAL GRIFFITH RUTHERFORD, WAS ASSIGNED TO MAKE AN EXPEDITION AGAINST THE CHEROKEES WHO WERE COMING TO BRITAIN'S AID AND MASSACRING COLONISTS ALL ALONG THE BORDER. MOORE BECAME A CAPTAIN OF ONE OF THE COMPAINES UNDER RUTHERFORD AND MARCHED WITH HIM OVER THE SWANNANOA GAP, DOWN THE FRENCH BROAD AND ALONG THE ROUTE ALREADY DESCRIBED IN CHAPTER TWO AS RUTHERFORD'S TRACE. BEING AT WAR NEITHER BLINDED NOR BEWILDERED YOUNG CAPTAIN MOORE. HE SAW THE UNTOUCHED, AND --BETTER-- UNCLAIMED, FERTILITY OF THE LAND HE PASSED THROUGH. PERHAPS HE RESPONDED TO ITS GREEN BEAUTY TOO, SEEING SOMETHING OF THE FRESH LANDSCAPE OF IRELAND IN THESE TREE-COVERED MOUNTAINS, THICK CANEBRAKES, GRASSY BALDS. THE NEXT YEAR FOLLOWING THE INDIAN EXPEDITION, IN 1777, CAPTAIN MOORE CAME BACK OVER THE BLUE RIDGE TO THE FRENCH BROAD RIVER, NOT IN WAR BUT IN PEACE. A FEW MILES WEST OF THE PRESENT CITY OF ASHEVILLE, HE BUILT A SMALL LOG-CABIN FORT, BUT BEFORE HE COUND BRING HIS FAMILY AND BEGIN THEIR NEW LIFE THERE, THE CONTINENTAL ARMY DEMANDED HIS SERVICES ONCE MORE.

SIX YEARS LATER, IN 1783, THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY OF NORTH CAROLINA OPENED A TRACT OF THE LANDS WEST OF THE BLUE RIDGE FOR SETTLEMENT, AND WITH A GRANT OF SIX HUNDRED AND FORTY ACRES FROM GOVERNOR RICHARD CASWELL, EX-CAPTAIN MOORE RETURNED, IN 1784, TO THE FRENCH BROAD AND HIS "LAND ON HOMINY CREEK" NEAR ITS JUNCTION WITH THE RIVER. WITH WIFE AND SLAVES, THREE DAUGHTERS AND THREE SONS, HE FORGOT SOLDIERING AND BECAME A HOMESTEADER, ONE OF A TYPICAL PATTERN FOR MUCH OF THE RIVER'S SETTLEMENT AS IT CAME: HUNTER, TRADER, SOLDIER, SPECULATOR, THEY SAW AND STAYED TO CONQUER OR BE CONQUERED. WILLIAM MOORE'S GRAVE IS ALSO IN A PUBLIC GROUND, NEAR ONE OF THE NORTH CAROLINA COUNTY SCHOOLS. THERE LIES A FRAGMENT OF HISTORY ON THE CLASSROOM STEP, IF TEACHER AND PUPILS CAN LIFT THEIR HEADS FROM THE TEXTBOOK MONOTONY MEN HAVE MADE OF THEIR OWN LIVING PAST TO SENSE FOR A MOMENT ONE DAY OR ONE NIGHT OF THE FEAR, SATISFACTION, DRUDGERY, DETERMINAT IN THE LIFE OF THIS FIRST LONE SETTLER OF THEIR VAST REGION. THE STONE SAY SIMPLY: "WILLIAM MOORE, DIED NOVEMBER 11, 1812, AE 86 Y'S." BUT WHERE, IN WHAT BOOK, ARE THE COMPLEXITY AND WEALTH OF THOSE YEARS?

COMMEMORATIVE CEREMONY

CAPTAIN WILLIAM HAMILTON MOORE (1726-1812) DESCENDANTS

COMMEMORATION OF THE RESTORATION THE CAPTAIN WILLIAM HAMILTON MOORE CEMETERY

NOVEMBER 8, 1981

2:30 P.M. CAPTAIN'S DIRVE (OFF SAND HILL SCHOOL ROAD)

Welcome and History of Captain William Hamilton Moore

F. Jack Cole

American Enka's Rehabilitation of the Cemetery, Introduction of Special Guest and American Enka Officials

Coke Candler

Introduction of DAN KILLIAN MOORE, Former North Carolina Governor

Robert Hall

Remarks DAN KILLIAN MOORE

Recognition of Other Guests Coke Candler

Closing Remarks and Appreciation F. Jack Cole

R E C E P T I O N

3:00 P.M. Enka Lake Club

Lake Drive, Enka

"The French Broad", by Wilma Dykeman

William Moore didn't mind a fight. He was from Ulster Province, Ireland, and when, after removing to America, the Revolution came, he was glad to join in on the side of revolt. In 1776 his wife's brother, General Griffith Rutherford, was assigned to make an expedition against the Cherokees who were coming to Britain's aid and massacring colonists all along the border. Moore became a captain of one of the companies under Rutherford and marched with him over the Swannanoa Gap, down the French Broad and along the route already described in chapter two as Rutherford's Trace. Being at war neither blinded nor bewildered young Captain Moore. He saw the untouched, and—better—unclaimed, fertility of the land he passed through. Perhaps he responded to its green beauty too, seeing something of the fresh landscape of Ireland in these tree-covered mountains, thick canebrakes, grassy balds. The next year following the Indian expedition, in 1777, Captain Moore came back over the Blue Ridge to the French Broad River, not in war but in peace. A few miles west of the present city of Asheville, he built a small log-cabin fort, but before he could bring his family and begin their new life there, the Continental Army demanded his services once more.

Six years later, in 1783, the General Assembly of North Carolina opened a tract of the lands west of the Blue Ridge for settlement, and with a grant of six hundred and forty acres from Governor Richard Caswell, ex-Captain Moore returned, in 1784, to the French Broad and his "land on Hominy Creek" near its junction with the river. With wife and slaves, three daughters and three sons, he forgot soldiering and became a homesteader, one of a typical pattern for much of the river's settlement as it came: hunter, trader, soldier, speculator, they saw and stayed to conquer or be conquered. William Moore's grave is also in a public ground, near one of the North Carolina county schools. There lies a fragment of history on the classroom step, if teacher and pupils can lift their heads from the textbook monotony men have made of their own living past to sense for a moment one day or one night of the fear, satisfaction, drudgery, determination in the life of this first lone settler of their vast region. The stone says simply: "William Moore, died Nov. 11, 1812, AE 86 y's." But where, in what book, are the complexity and wealth of those years?

Having [illegible] Made

F. JACK COLE
73 EVELYN PL
ASHEVILLE, NC 28801

11/8/1981 PHOTO MALCOLM GAMBLE
THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN
F. JACK COLE
DAN K. MOORE
ROBERT HALL
COKE CANDLER
CAPT WILLIAM HAMILTON MOORE USMC (RETD)

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

Serving W.N.C.

Dedicated to the Upbuilding of Western North Carolina

112th Year • No. 313 Asheville, N.C. 28802, Monday, Nov. 9, 1981 20 Pages 25 Cents

A NEW GENERATION — Looking at refurbished graves in Captain William Hamilton Moore Cemetery near Sand Hill School Sunday were four of Moore's great, great grandsons. From left they were: F. Jack Cole, former Gov. Dan K. Moore, Robert Hall and Coke Candler. (Staff Photo by Malcolm Gamble)

Descendants Meet For Moore Rites

By CLYDE OSBORNE
Staff Writer

More than 100 of his descendants attended the commemorative rites at the rehabilitated graveyard of Captain William Hamilton Moore near the Sand Hill School Sunday afternoon.

Moore, who built a log fort on Hominy Creek in the 1770s, was the first white settler west of the French Broad River.

The cemetery where Moore, family members and his slaves were buried was in a sad state of disrepair, overgrown with trees, brush, weeds and vines, until American Enka Corporation, informed of the situation, set about to remedy it.

The cemetery is on land owned by Enka.

F. Jack Cole, a great, great grandson of Moore, welcomed the commemoration group, which included cousins, aunts, uncles and others of his relatives.

The event turned into a big reunion. There were folks from California, Florida, the Carolinas and other states, all visiting with each other.

Former Gov. Dan K. Moore, a great, great grandson, thanked Enka for the work done on the cemetery. "You have preserved a part of North Carolina history," he said.

The Revolutionary War captain's descendants, said Moore, have played a large role in the development of Western North Carolina, North Carolina and the nation. They have been doctors, lawyers, government leaders, bankers, engineers and members of other professions.

Cole, Coke Candler and Robert Hall formed a committee that worked with Enka in the restoration project. The headstones found in the cemetery were broken and scattered over a wide area when Walter Batts, Enka manager of site operations, first visited the graveyard. The bits and pieces of the headstones were collected and cemented together.

The underbrush and trees were cut out of the area. Graves that had been marked with native stones were also refurbished. Now the site looks like what it is — a well-cared-for cemetery.

Cole, reviewing the history of his ancestor, said that Moore was born in Scotland, then moved into the Derry section of Northern Ireland where the situation in the mid-eighteenth century was pretty much as it is today with Roman Catholics and Protestant Presbyterians fighting.

William Moore was one of nine brothers who a few years later sailed to Philadephia, moved on into Virginia, then to Moore near Spartanburg, S. C. The captain later moved into the region of Rowan that is now McDowell County.

When Indians began massacring colonists of that region at the behest of the British, Moore joined his wife's —Turn To Page Two

Moore

—Continued From Page One

brother, General Griffith Rutherford, on an expedition to drive the Cherokees back into the the mountains. The captain liked the looks of the land he passed through, and later built a fort and a cabin on Hominy Creek.

With the fort built, he went back into Rowan County to bring his family, but the war demanded his time again.

It was after the Revolution that he returned to the property with his family and slaves.

He had a 640-acre grant for the tract from Governor Richard Caswell when he returned in 1784.

William Moore was 86 when he died Nov. 11, 1812.

A reception at Enka Lake Club concluded the commemoration rites.

FEATURES
EDITORIALS

SECTION D
ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES
Sunday, Aug. 27, 1978

Too Many 'Bill Moores'!

It All Started In Philadelphia In 1739 With Nine Brothers From Ulster

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Much of the material for this article was supplied through the kindness of Mrs. John Poteat, of Marion, probably the top authority on the history of the William Moore family, and Mrs. Mildred Fossett, formerly of Marion and now of Asheville. Another helpful source was F. Jack Cole, of Asheville, a descendant of Capt. Bill Moore. The author of the article incidentally, is not related to the Capt. Bill Moore who settled on the west bank of the French Broad. He does, however, subscribe to the theory that there are too many Bill Moores.)

By BILL MOORE
Citizen-Times Staff Writer

Capt. Bill Moore, first permanent settler west of the French Broad River, had a good name.

It was a fine name, but it had one drawback, at least for historians. There were too many Moores in this part of the country in those days and particularly too many Bill Moores.

The story of the real Bill Moore started back in Philadelphia in 1739, or thereabouts, when nine sturdy brothers came ashore from a ship newly-arrived from Ulster in Northern Ireland.

Tradition says they stepped into a nearby tavern and ordered a big bowl of punch.

They toasted a colorful past.

They toasted a promising future.

Then they started down the Appalachian Trail to the Carolinas and opportunity.

Their name was Moore and they constituted a tribe that was to leave a mark on the Southeast.

One of them was William Hamilton Moore who was to become one of the first settlers of Asheville.

These Moores were Scotch-Irish, part of the migration of

It appears certain that William Moore sojourned in Augusta County, Va., for some time, for he married Ann Cathey, granddaughter of another emigrant, there.

William Moore and his wife later left Virginia at a date uncertain and settled on South Muddy Creek in what is now McDowell County in North Carolina.

There he built a house, started a family and started to clear a farm that eventually included 1,000 acres.

The location of the farm is certain but the frequent changes in the name of the county can be confusing.

William Moore's first farm is located in what first was Anson County, then old Tryon County, then became Rowan County, later became Burke County and finally became McDowell County.

Some of the land he later acquired was located in Mecklenburg County, then in Rowan County and finally in Rutherford County.

None of the land moved an inch, of course. The changes were caused by the "splitting off" of new, smaller North Carolina counties from older, large ones.

The years 1747 and 1748 were years of unrest in Colonial America because of a dispute with Spain. The period was called "The Spanish Alarm" and as a result listings were made of all men of military age in the colonies.

One of those lists, called the roster of Captain Samuel Cobrin's Company, included men in the Western part of North Carolina and South Carolina. It includes William, John and James Moore.

The William Moore listed was almost certainly the Bill Moore who became one of the first settlers of Asheville. James and John probably were his brothers.

By 1748 William Moore was 22 years old, a settled man with a wife, children, land and citizenship.

Too Many Bill Moores!

It All Started In Philadelphia In 1739

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Much of the material for this article was supplied through the kindness of Mrs. John Poteat, of Marion, probably the top authority on the history of the William Moore family, and Mrs. Mildred Fossett, formerly of Marion and now of Asheville. Another helpful source was F. Jack Cole, of Asheville, a descendant of Capt. Bill Moore. The author of the article incidentally, is not related to the Capt. Bill Moore who settled on the west bank of the French Broad. He does, however, subscribe to the theory that there are too many Bill Moores.)

By BILL MOORE
Citizen-Times Staff Writer

Capt. Bill Moore, first permanent settler west of the French Broad River, had a good name.

It was a fine name, but it had one drawback, at least for historians. There were too many Moores in this part of the country in those days and particularly too many Bill Moores.

The story of the real Bill Moore started back in Philadelphia in 1739, or thereabouts, when nine sturdy brothers came ashore from a ship newly-arrived from Ulster in Northern Ireland.

Tradition says they stepped into a nearby tavern and ordered a big bowl of punch.

They toasted a colorful past.

They toasted a promising future.

Then they started down the Appalachian Trail to the Carolinas and opportunity.

Their name was Moore and they constituted a tribe that was to leave a mark on the Southeast.

One of them was William Hamilton Moore who was to become one of the first settlers of Asheville.

These Moores were Scotch-Irish, part of the migration of the 1700s that peopled the Blue Ridge and the Appalachian with settlers of remarkable strength and vitality.

According to an historian named Hanna who wrote a book called "The Scotch-Irish," the Moores got to Ireland because an Irish clan leader named O'Neil got into trouble with the government of the English Queen Elizabeth.

Con O'Neil was chieftan of the northern half of Ireland's County Down, just across the North Channel of the Irish Sea from Scotland.

The English queen's minister was preparing to hang O'Neil when his wife made a deal with two Scottish lords that was to save his life.

The lords were Hugh Montgomery of Braidstone and Sir James Hamilton of Dunlop, both in northern Ayrshire.

Montgomery and Hamilton and their followers crossed the channel and rescued O'Neil as they had promised. Each received a third of O'Neil's lands.

O'Neil later "ran through" his third. The rights of Hamilton and Montgomery to hold their portions later were confirmed by King James with the proviso that the lands be resettled with people from Scotland.

The Moores were among the families resettled from Scotland to County Down. The resettlement took place in the early 1600s, mostly in 1606.

The Moores from Ayrshire were by no means the first Moores in Ireland: there had been Moores in Ireland since the Celtic wave of immigration in pre-Christian times.

The Ayrshire Moores are credited by Historian Hanna with having fought gallantly in the siege of Londonderry in 1688-89.

The fighting at Londonberry was part of the conflict between the Protestants of northern Ireland and the Irish Catholics. It is an argument not yet settled.

So the Moores who disembarked that day in Philadelphia were men not unaccustomed to conflict and violence.

They were, moreover, hardy men, survivors to the core. It was as well. They were about to tackle a continent that would test them to the fullest.

William Hamilton Moore, the man who became the first white settler west of the French Broad River, was born in 1726. If he landed in Philadelphia in 1739, he would have been 13 years old. If, as other reports have it, the Moore brothers did not arrive in this country until 1741, William Moore would have been 15 years old.

The Moore brothers next appear in Borden's Grant and Augusta County, Virginia.

It appears likely that at least one Moore brother, David, settled in Borden's Grant permanently and reared a family there.

The other brothers appear to have stayed for different lengths of time and then moved south as they pleased.

The doings of the Moores in Borden's Grant are discussed in Waddell's "Annals of Augusta County." Here, for the first time, appears a complaint that becomes familiar to anyone trying to trace the family.

Historian Waddell wrote, "On account of the great sameness of the given names of the Moore Clan, with many Williams and Johns, it is difficult to draw positive conclusions (about their history.)"

It appears certain that William Moore sojourned in Augusta County, Va., for some time, for he married Ann Cathey, granddaughter of another emigrant, there.

William Moore and his wife later left Virginia at a date uncertain and settled on South Muddy Creek in what is now McDowell County in North Carolina.

There he built a house, started a family and started to clear a farm that eventually included 1,000 acres.

The location of the farm is certain but the frequent changes in the name of the county can be confusing.

William Moore's first farm is located in what first was Anson County, then old Tryon County, then became Rowan County, later became Burke County and finally became McDowell County.

Some of the land he later acquired was located in Mecklenburg County, then in Rowan County and finally in Rutherford County.

None of the land moved an inch, of course. The changes were caused by the "splitting off" of new, smaller North Carolina counties from older, large ones.

The years 1747 and 1748 were years of unrest in Colonial America because of a dispute with Spain. The period was called "The Spanish Alarm" and as a result listings were made of all men of military age in the colonies.

One of those lists, called the roster of Captain Samuel Cobrin's Company, included men in the Western part of North Carolina and South Carolina. It includes William, John and James Moore.

The William Moore listed was almost certainly the Bill Moore who became one of the first settlers of Asheville. James and John probably were his brothers.

By 1748 William Moore was 22 years old, a settled man with a wife, children, land and citizenship.

John Moore, later settled near Blacksburg in upper York County, South Carolina.

He and his wife, Elizabeth, reared a family that is said to have included 12 sons.

Another brother, Charles, settled in the Tyger River section of South Carolina near Spartanburg.

While living on South Muddy Creek William and Ann Moore had six children. They were sons William, Robert and Thomas and daughters Alice, Mary and Rachel.

William Moore was active, certainly, in public affairs in the years leading up to the Revolution, but there is doubt about precisely what he did.

A man named William Moore was a justice of the peace in 1771, 1772, 1773 and a representative of the colony in 1774.

A man named William Moore was a member of the Committee of Public Safety for Old Tryon County when the committee was organized in July of 1775.

A man named William Moore was a signer of a declaration supporting the acts of the Continental Congress (as opposed to Parliament) in October of 1775.

A man named William Moore was named commissary officer for the Regiment of Tryon County in December of 1775.

Were all of these William Moores the man who later came to Buncombe County?

Perhaps.

But the late Dr. Christopher Crittenden, head of the North Carolina Archives, said in a letter that it is probable that the compiler of the index of the state's Colonial Records confused entries referring to individuals of the same prominent name.

In other words, too many Moores, and, particularly, too many Bill Moores.

What is certain, however, is that Buncombe County's Bill Moore during those years formed a friendship with Griffith Rutherford, prominent colonist and a noted Indian fighter.

It is certain that in 1776, the Cherokees, armed and spurred by British agents, were raiding white settlements in South Carolina and along the Holstein and Watauga Rivers in Tennessee.

It is certain, also, that in that same year Griffith Rutherford led an army of almost 2,000 frontiersmen on an expedition against the Cherokees.

William Moore went along as a militia captain in charge of a company of mounted infantry.

Rutherford's army moved west from Old Fort, up the Swannanoa Gap and along the Swannanoa River to the French Broad River.

Here William Moore got his first look at the land along the banks of the Hominy Creek that he later was to settle and where he was to live out his days.

He was then 40 years old, not ancient, certainly, but by pioneer standards certainly no longer a young man.

Rutherford continued on westward across the mountains, to the Cherokee towns.

The Cherokees wisely declined to give battle, preferring instead to fade away in front of Rutherford's 2,000 men.

THIS ST
white settler near Hominy

Rutherford was for the Indian villages and While he did not defe ford's scorched earth po to make extended raids and shelter themselves
After Rutherford ha
pedition, he apparently tiveness of his campaig
He sent Captain Bill
this time with much les
Capt. Moore left Ca
pany of mounted infantr
Stekoa on the Oconoluft could find.
Capt. Moore was als
pany of mounted infantr
The command arran
with the South Carolini numbered more than 97
It is remarkable th concentrate on Moore's
But he moved fast,

rg.
William and Ann
illiam, Robert and Rachel.
in public affairs in but there is doubt

ıstice of the peace of the colony in ember of the Com-nty when the com-

igner of a declara-l Congress (as op-

med commissary
y in December of

ıe man who later

ıden, head of the
that it is probable
s Colonial Records
f the same promi-

., particularly, too

ıncombe County's endship with Grifl a noted Indian

kees, armed and ıite settlements in Watauga Rivers in

ır Griffith Ruther-men on an expedi-

captain in charge

Old Fort, up the ıoa River to the

at the land along
r was to settle and

, certainly, but by oung man.
ıcross the moun-

battle, preferring rd's 2,000 men.

THIS STONE MARKS the final resting place of Capt. Bill Moore, the first white settler west of the French Broad River. The grave is in a private cemetery near Hominy Creek.

Rutherford was forced to content himself with burning the Indian villages and destroying their food supplies.

While he did not defeat the Cherokees militarily, Rutherford's scorched earth policy destroyed the Cherokees' ability to make extended raids. They were too busy trying to feed and shelter themselves to find time to go raiding.

After Rutherford had returned to Salisbury with his expedition, he apparently had second thoughts about the effectiveness of his campaign.

He sent Captain Bill Moore back again, on a second raid, this time with much less force.

Capt. Moore left Cathey's Fort on Oct. 19 with a company of mounted infantrymen. His orders were to proceed to Stekoa on the Oconoluftee River to punish any Cherokees he could find.

Capt. Moore was also ordered to rendezvous with a company of mounted infantry coming up from South Carolina.

The command arrangements were ambiguous and even with the South Carolinians present the detachment never numbered more than 97 men.

It is remarkable that the enraged Cherokees did not concentrate on Moore's little band and crush it.

But he moved fast, acted quickly and got away with it. He, too, burned and plundered.

By Nov. 7 he was out of Indian country and writing a report to General Rutherford.

It wasn't much; merely a workmanlike account of his conduct of the raid.

But he also wrote a private note to General Rutherford in which he let the general know about his expedition.

The note said:

"I have one thing to remark, which is this:

"That whenever there is separate companies united into one body, without a head commander of the whole, I shall never embark on such an expedition hereafter, for, when every officer is commander, there is no command."

It was plain common sense; it was the beginning of military awareness. It is a stricture that has been repeated many times since by military men.

In 1777, Moore returned to the banks of Hominy Creek where he supervised the construction of a blockhouse.

It reportedly was one of a chain of small forts that ran along the French Broad River valley and served the settlers as a sort of early warning system against Indian raids.

Not much of Capt. Bill Moore's career between 1777 and 1790 is known with any certainty.

There was, for instance, a William Moore present at the battle of Kings Mountain when a force of American rebels wiped out an equal force of American Loyalists.

Was that William Moore the one who later settled in Buncome County?

It is more of the familiar problem: too many Moores and, particularly, too many Bill Moores.

There were at least nine William Moores enlisted in the regiments of the North Carolina line, the regular troops who fought well against Cornwallis in eastern North Carolina.

Was one of them the Bill Moore who settled here?

It seems unlikely that a man with military experience would have sat out the Revolutionary War from 1777 on, but where did the man go and what did he do?

The noted historian and author Wilma Dykeman, in her book "The French Broad," included a chapter on Capt. Bill Moore. In it she eloquently expressed the dismay felt by historians over the lack of detail about his life.

"But where," she wrote, "In what book, are the complexity and wealth of those years?"

F. Jack Cole, presently a member of Asheville City Council, is a descendant of Capt. Bill Moore. In 1974 Cole wrote and published a monograph on the subject of his distinguished ancestor.

Cole wrote that two stories about Capt. Bill Moore's service in the Revolution prevailed across the years.

One was that he did, indeed, enlist in the Carolina Line and fought as an infantryman until the end of the war.

The other is that he played a key, although mysterious, part in bringing about victory in the battle of King's Mountain.

Sometime before the Revolutionary War, Moore's first wife, Ann, died. She is buried, according to Cole, in Salisbury.

There is a tale to the effect that Moore then married Margaret Rutherford, a sister of Griffith Rutherford. This has been repeated by some historians.

Cole, however, concludes that if Moore did in fact marry Gen. Rutherford's sister, the marriage lasted only a short time.

What is certain is that Moore married Margaret Patton, daughter of Benjamin Patton, one of the signers of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, and proceeded to sire a second family.

He had not forgotten Hominy Creek. In 1787 he was awarded four grants to 1,200 acres on both sides of Hominy Creek. They were of the customary grants given to Revolutionary War veterans by the new (and moneyless) state of North Carolina.

The census of 1790 shows that Capt. Bill Moore still was living then on South Muddy Creek in McDowell County near the present community of Dysartsville.

But in 1794 this indomitable old man turned his back on the safety and ease of the well-settled farm in McDowell County, packed up his belongings and moved up the Blue Ridge to the banks of Hominy Creek.

He was then 68 years old, a great age for those times, patriarch of a growing family and well off, at least in terms of land and loved ones.

But there was something about Buncombe County, something that he couldn't escape. He had to live there and live there he did.

In 1795 he built a comfortable house that became the center of social life in the French Broad valley.

Shortly after he settled in what was to become Buncombe County, other families followed and settled here, too.

They were the Joneses (William and Thomas), the Robert Henrys, the John Penlands, Zachariah Chandler, Jesse Israel, John Hawkins, John Webb, Edmond Sams and the Morgans, among others.

Their children inevitably met, mingled with and married the children of Capt. Bill Moore.

From them issued the doctors, lawyers, teachers, legislators, merchants, bankers, engineers, soldiers and just people who for almost 200 years helped make this part of the world a pleasant, functioning place to live.

On Nov. 12, 1812, Capt. Bill Moore, honored, respected and surrounded by a loving family, died. He was 86 years old.

He is buried in a private cemetery on the crest of a hill along Hominy Creek, overlooked by Mount Pisgah.

He was, in many ways, a remarkable man. He was, perhaps, more remarkable than we can say now with certainty.

But, despite the trouble with names, the missing details of his life and, even the missing years, he was and still is a little larger than life-size here in Buncombe County.

ll County
Carolina

IEVILLE TIMES

Monday
April 9, 1973

ort is believground just l Road is in

Eden's Land Revisited

William Moore, Indian Fighter, Decided His Destiny On The Banks Of Hominy Creek

By NANCY BROWER
Times Staff Writer

The man swung wearily from the saddle. He had been riding all day at the head of a column of soldiers. While his horse drank from the swift creek, he gazed around him at the valley chosen for the night's campsite. Struck by its beauty, he said to himself, "This is Eden's land." Silently, he made a promise.

The man was Capt. William Moore and his Eden was on the banks of Hominy Creek west of what is now Asheville. He first saw it on the last day of October in 1776 while autumn's colors still glowed on the mountainsides.

When the campfires were lighted, the valley took on a feeling of home for the 50-year-old man. He was leading a troop of lighthorse cavalry as a part of Gen. Griffith Rutherford's campaign against the Cherokees, who had murdered 37 settlers on the upper Catawba near Old Fort on two bloody days that summer. Moore vowed that when the expedition against the Indians was over he would return to this valley and make it his own.

Thus the man who became the first white settler west of the French Broad River decided his destiny. In the frontier era that followed, Moore's destiny and that of Western North Carolina were to become inseparable.

Part of the land where Moore stood and proclaimed his Eden and where he returned to establish a fort and later a homestead is soon to be developed into approximately 16 homesites by Carlyle E. Snuffer, Asheville builder. The tract recently purchased by Snuffer for development lies alongside a newly cut and unnamed road beside Sand Hill School in the Enka community.

With the opening of this road to serve Snuffer's land, the grave of Captain Moore was found in a small, overgrown cemetery which had been virtually lost and forgotten since its discovery in 1938 by researchers of the depression-era Federal Writers' Project compiling information for the North Carolina guide book.

The old cemetery is adjacent to, but not part of, the tract Snuffer bought. It is bordered by American Enka Corp. lands.

The old Moore family burial ground is on a knoll, which before it became overgrown, commanded a magnificent view of Mount Pisgah. Only a few headstones remain. Many graves, probably those of gravestone marks his death in 1812. Little is known of the eventful years between.

Writer Wilma Dykeman expressed the frustration many Moore researchers have felt due to the scarcity of records. In her book, "The French Broad," she ends a section on Moore with the question, "But where, in what book, are the complexity and wealth of those years?"

Miss Dykeman wrote that Moore's first wife was General Rutherford's sister and that she came with him to the new land. Other sources say that Moore's wife was a member of the Cathey family. (Could she have been Cathey Rutherford?) One account says Moore's wife died in Rowan County while he was off fighting the Cherokees.

All sources agree that less than a year after that fateful October night, sometime in 1777, Moore set out from his home bound for Hominy Valley with slaves and provisions. There on the banks of Hominy Creek in a place now known as "the old fort field" he cleared land and built a fort within sight of the little cemetery.

Historians say that once again Moore's services were required in the War for Independence and he left a slave couple, Jim and Sue, the first black people in the Western part of the state, on his new lands and went back to the fight.

The late Owen Gudger, a Moore descendant, tells a different and far more exciting story of this period in Captain Moore's life in a booklet, "A Small Bit of History," he wrote for descendants of the soldier-turned-settler. Holmes Bryson Jr., also a Moore descendant, located a copy of the old booklet.

Gudger wrote that Moore did not go elsewhere to join the fight but remained at "Moore Fort" with a company of soldiers who constructed a long line of blockhouses designed to hold back the Cherokees. Moore Fort, being near the junction of two major Indian trails, was headquarters for this series of outposts spaced, Gudger said, just a bugle call apart.

Gudger explained plausibly that little is recorded of Moore's defense action because the exact nature and location of it were purposely withheld from the commanders of the Continental Army because they were certain to agree with the landowners in the populous East that all of Rutherford's army should rally to defend the tidewater plantations.

reinforced by a host of Cherokee warriors as he expected, the outcome of the historic battle of Kings Mountain would have been different. But, he wrote, Moore's men and forts held back the Cherokees and the victorious American forces took prisoner every British soldier on the mountain battlefield, dealing such a blow to the British army as to pave the way for the surrender at Yorktown a year later.

Gudger wrote that in the years that followed, Moore's series of forts continued to provide a barrier which made possible the safe passage across the mountains of thousands of migrants on the first great push westward.

When the Revolutionary War was won, the young nation found it had no money to pay its soldiers. It paid them in land.

Moore gathered all his possessions from his home in Rowan County and set out with three sons and three daughters to establish a homestead near the fort on the banks of Hominy Creek. The wagon loaded with his household goods was said to be the first ever to cross the French Broad River. He built a two-story log house —possibly incorporating the fort into it — on his cleared land in 1784.

In one of the first land grants in Western North Carolina, 450 acres on Hominy Creek were conveyed to Capt. William Moore in 1787. The original document is owned by Miss Dorothy Moore Gaston of Enka community, a descendant of the pioneer.

The house known as the Moore homestead, through perhaps not the original log dwelling, stood on a knoll overlooking the present Sand Hill Road until about 1930, when it was razed to make way for a modern house.

Alex Crowell, a Moore descendant, who has lived in the Hominy area all his 75 years and farmed much of the original land grant, pointed out that the house stood on the knoll to the left of the stone roadside monument denoting the location of the homestead. He said it was built there so that the spring water which now feeds the small branch running beside the road could be used in the house.

When the house was razed, the ancient timbers reportedly were purchased by an Asheville antiques shop, The Treasure Chest, then located on Walnut Street, to create an authentic setting for its early Americana.

Historians agree that the Moore homestead was the last outpost of civilization in Western North Carolina for many years. Settlers passing through on their way to the new lands in the West found hospitality there.

Sometime soon after settling here, Moore took as his second wife, Margaret Patton, the daughter of Benjamin Patton of Black Mountain, a signer of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence.

History records that three of Capt. Moore's daughters and one of his sons married Penlands and reared families in Western North Carolina. Moore's children and his children's children created a civilization that pushed back the frontier

Charles, youngest son of Capt. Moore by his second marriage, married Margaret Penland, whose gravestone is still legible in the long-lost cemetery. There is no evidence of the grave of Charles, who founded San Hill Academy, early seat of learning in the mountains.

Charles Moore's daughter, Rachel Evaline, married George W. Candler, whose family gave the community of Candler its name. Rachel's gravestone, carved with the date of her death, Sept. 19, 1853, is still standing in the Moore family cemetery.

George W. Candler represented Buncombe County in the North Carolina House of Commons in 1842 and again in 1868.

The Candlers' daughter, Margaret, married Thomas Jefferson Harkins, creating the lineage from which State Rep. Herschel Harkins is descended.

Another daughter of George W. Candler and Rachel E. Moore, Mary J., married Col. Virgil S. Lusk, Asheville attorney, who served as Buncombe County representative to the state legislature along with his wife's brother, William Gaston Candler, during the 1897 term.

The daughter of Virgil Lusk and Mary Candler married Samuel Jefferson Pegram. Their son, Sam Pegram, married Mary Jane Shuford, who still owns a small portion of the original 450-acre land grant near the old cemetery. When the burial ground was first rediscovered, it was thought by some to be a part of Mrs. Pegram's holdings.

The daughter of Margaret Candler and Thomas Jefferson Harkins married Russell Jones Gaston. The Gastons were pro-acres of ount Pis pioneer.

l return-lderness.

that owed, Moore's destiny and : of Western North Carolina were to become inseparable.

Part of the land where Moore stood and proclaimed his Eden and where he returned to establish a fort and later a homestead is soon to be developed into approximately 16 homesites by Carlyle E. Snuffer, Asheville builder. The tract recently purchased by Snuffer for development lies alongside a newly cut and unnamed road beside Sand Hill School in the Enka community.

With the opening of this road to serve Snuffer's land, the grave of Captain Moore was found in a small, overgrown cemetery which had been virtually lost and forgotten since its discovery in 1938 by researchers of the depression-era Federal Writers' Project compiling information for the North Carolina guide book.

The old cemetery is adjacent to, but not part of, the tract Snuffer bought. It is bordered by American Enka Corp. lands.

The old Moore family burial ground is on a knoll, which before it became overgrown, commanded a magnificent view of Mount Pisgah. Only a few headstones remain. Many graves, probably those of slaves, apparently had only fieldstones as markers. Sunken gravesites indicate approximately 20 burials had taken place in the cemetery. Latest interment date legible is 1874.

When it became known that the area near the graveyard was to be developed, concern was expressed for the preservation of the historic site. Snuffer stressed that his plans for the adjacent tract will in no way jeopardize the cemetery.

F. Jack Cole, a direct descendant of Capt. Moore, doing genealogical research for the Sons of the Confederacy, had located the burial plot at about the same time it came to light as a result of the land transfer to Snuffer.

Cole's 13-year-old son, Russell, wrote a research paper for school on Capt. Moore's life. Partly as a result of Russell's research, Troop 4, Boy Scouts, who meet at Central United Methodist Church, have volunteered to cut away the underbrush and otherwise tidy up the historic cemetery as a community service, the senior Cole, chairman of the troop committee, reported.

At the close of a successful campaign against the Cherokees, who were allied with the British in the Revolutionary War, Moore returned to his home near Salisbury in Rowan County. He made preparations there to keep his promise to return to "Eden's land."

The man of destiny was also a man of some mystery. History records his coming to Western North Carolina in 1776 and his and sale, the first black people in the Western part of the state, on his new lands and went back to the fight.

The late Owen Gudger, a Moore descendant, tells a different and far more exciting story of this period in Captain Moore's life in a booklet, "A Small Bit of History," he wrote for descendants of the soldier-turned-settler. Holmes Bryson Jr., also a Moore descendant, located a copy of the old booklet.

Gudger wrote that Moore did not go elsewhere to join the fight but remained at "Moore Fort" with a company of soldiers who constructed a long line of blockhouses designed to hold back the Cherokees. Moore Fort, being near the junction of two major Indian trails, was headquarters for this series of outposts spaced, Gudger said, just a bugle call apart.

Gudger explained plausibly that little is recorded of Moore's defense action because the exact nature and location of it were purposely withheld from the commanders of the Continental Army because they were certain to agree with the landowners in the populous East that all of Rutherford's army should rally to defend the tidewater plantations.

But, Gudger explained, Moore knew the Cherokees and their strength and he had the support of such military strategists as John Sevier, a frontier fighter like himself, in his efforts to place his soldiers and their crude forts between the British and their Indian allies.

According to Gudger, Moore's holding action in the West changed the course of American history. He wrote that had England's Cornwallis been land in 1764.

In one of the f land grants in Western Nort rolina, 450 acres on Hominy Creek were conveyed to Capt. William Moore in 1787. The original document is owned by Miss Dorothy Moore Gaston of Enka community, a descendant of the pioneer.

The house known as the Moore homestead, through perhaps not the original log dwelling, stood on a knoll overlooking the present Sand Hill Road until about 1930, when it was razed to make way for a modern house.

Alex Crowell, a Moore descendant, who has lived in the Hominy area all his 75 years and farmed much of the original land grant, pointed out that the house stood on the knoll to the left of the stone roadside monument denoting the location of the homestead. He said it was built there so that the spring water which now feeds the small branch running beside the road could be used in the house.

When the house was razed, the ancient timbers reportedly were purchased by an Asheville antiques shop, The Treasure Chest, then located on Walnut Street, to create an authentic setting for its early Americana.

In its latter years, the Moore homestead was the home of Dr. David M. Gudger, who, according to Crowell, married Mary Moore, Capt. Moore's granddaughter. Owen Gudger, who served as judge of the city-county juvenile court in 1940 and was a former Asheville postmaster, was born there.

Stones from the foundation of Moore's fort were used in the present Oak Forest Presbyterian Church on Sand Hill Road.

date of her death, Sept. 19, 1853, is still standing in the Moore family cemetery.

George W. Candler represented Buncombe County in the North Carolina House of Commons in 1842 and again in 1868.

The Candlers' daughter, Margaret, married Thomas Jefferson Harkins, creating the lineage from which State Rep. Herschel Harkins is descended.

Another daughter of George W. Candler and Rachel E. Moore, Mary J., married Col. Virgil S. Lusk, Asheville attorney, who served as Buncombe County representative to the state legislature along with his wife's brother, William Gaston Candler, during the 1897 term.

The daughter of Virgil Lusk and Mary Candler married Samuel Jefferson Pegram. Their son, Sam Pegram, married Mary Jane Shuford, who still owns a small portion of the original 450-acre land grant near the old cemetery. When the burial ground was first rediscovered, it was thought by some to be a part of Mrs. Pegram's holdings.

The daughter of Margaret Candler and Thomas Jefferson Harkins married Russell Jones Gaston. The Gastons were prominent in North Carolina history. A Gaston wrote the North Carolina state song and Gaston County was named for him.

The Gaston homestead was on the banks of the French Broad River near old Owen Field. Josiah Perry Gaston, born in 1832, walked back from the Civil War battlefields in Virginia in the spring of 1865 with his discharge in his hand, bringing news of Lee's surrender at Appomattox to Asheville, where skirmishes were still being fought.

It took the soldier three weeks to make the walk, Cole's research shows, and Gaston's clothes were in tatters and infested with vermin. He called from a distance as he approached his home for someone to bring him clothes, Cole related. Gaston bathed in the river and put on the clean garments before attempting to convince townspeople that the war was over and the South defeated.

The United Daughters of the Confederacy ultimately placed a historical marker on Gaston's grave in the old Oak Forest Cemetery.

Cole, whose mother was Opal Jones Gaston, said the living descendants of Capt. William Moore include many area civic and business leaders, such as former Governor Dan K. Moore, Rep. Harkins, Robert C. Hall, an officer in the Bank of Asheville; Thomas L. Mallonee, Bryson, Walter Moore Gaston, Coke Candler, former chairman of the Board of County Commissioners, Dr. Charles Z. Candler and Dr. Candler A. Willis. He said that many other Western North Carolinians share much the same heritage.

Capt. William Moore died on his homestead in 1812 at age 86, having held the fort for 36 years. He had changed his Eden from a frontier to a homeland. His destiny was fulfilled.

Moore's Gravestone

The fallen headstone marking the grave of Capt. William Moore in the ancient cemetery rediscovered this spring gives no hint that he was a man of destiny.

Staff Photos By June Glenn Jr., Malcolm Gamble

WILLIAM MOORE
DIED
Nov. 11, 1812
Æ. 86 y's.

The Asheville (N. C.) Times, Friday, April 7, 1961

G. G. Morgan Retires From Blind Shop

G. Gordon Morgan of 30 Vandalia Ave. retired today as manager of the Lions Workshop For the Blind after almost 20 years' service with the shop.

Morgan, a native of the Candler section, had been directing the blind workers at the Lions Club-sponsored shop at 639 Biltmore Ave. since 1941.

He has a 15-year perfect attendance membership with the Lions Club and has served on the board of deacons and as a Sunday School teacher at Calvary Baptist Church for 44 years.

Morgan attended the old Candler Academy, Mars Hill College and the old Emanuel Business College.

Prior to becoming manager of the Lions Workshop, which is now known as the Lions Club Industries for the Blind of Western North Carolina, he was secretary-treasurer of the old French Broad Laundry for 13 years.

Morgan's wife is the former Miss Elsie L. Parham. They have two sons, G. G. Morgan Jr., a major in the U. S. Air Force stationed in San Bernardino, Calif., and William C. Morgan, a district manager in the Asheville Citizen-Times circulation department; and a daughter, Mrs. G. W. Bentley, teacher and librarian at Erwin High School.

Morgan, who says he has never had much time for fishing, is seriously thinking of taking up the sport. He recently bought a vacation home near Daytona Beach, Fla., and he and his wife plan to spend much of their time there in the future.

MRS. C. M. MORGAN

A letter from Horse Creek, N. C. written by John C. Burgner to Mr. Wm. Francis and dated 1820. . . . A faded and hand-illuminated booklet on the "Grammatical Analysis of British Classical Poetry" inscribed by William Francis, and dated 1829. . . . A deed of conveyance on which both paper and ink are browned by the years since 1832. . . . A copy of the Christian Observer, Philadelphia, dated May 19, 1849, carrying an editorial on a meeting of the American Anti-Slavery Society attended by such historical characters as Wendell Phillips, Edmund Quincy, Wm. Lloyd Garrison, and Lucretia Mott, and regretting the absence of Hon. William Jay and Rev. Henry Ward Beecher "due to severe indisposition." . . . .

These and many other items of historical interest, all of them museum pieces, are from the souvenir and scrap-book collection of Mrs. C. M. Morgan, 45 Clinton Avenue, West Asheville. But these historic documents are secondary in her heart—her most prized possession being a page from her daughter's kindergarten scrap book. The William Francis mentioned in these documents was the great-grandfather of Mrs. Morgan who, before her marriage to Lt. Cassius M. Morgan of Biltmore station, Asheville Fire Department, was Miss Nora Francis of Waynesville. "I'm just a native western North Carolina girl," Mrs. Morgan told me.

Just a native western North Carolina girl? In my opinion that title carries with it the aristocracy of aristocracies in America.

It is unusual for our "News Personality of the Week" to be a woman. But then, Mrs. Morgan is an unusual woman. Her record of service to her community stands on a level with our most civic-minded men.

Daughter of the late John Francis of Haywood County, Mrs. Morgan finshed high school in Waynesville, then continued her studies at Western Carolina Teachers college, Asheville college, and the University of Alabama. She taught school for five years before her marriage to Lt. Morgan in 1922. Mr. Morgan was working for the Champion Fibre company at the time, having gone to Waynesville after his discharge from the 105th engineers following World War I. When I visited Mrs. Morgan's home this week I was impressed by her just pride in a framed certificate hanging on the wall of her tastefully furnished living room: a certificate signed by President Woodrow Wilson in recognition of Cash Morgan's having been wounded in the service of his country.

Mrs. Morgan did not continue her teaching career after the family moved to Asheville. She was too busy maintaining her beautiful little home and caring for her family. "But," she said, "I have always kept my teaching certificate up-to-date, because it is a firm belief of mine that women should be equipped to earn a living just the same as men do." The modern trend even in the South, where for so long it was considered "unusual" for a girl to work, bears out the good judgment of Mrs. Morgan.

Mrs. Morgan has been a member of the West Asheville Presbyterian church for twenty years. It was here that she began her first purely civic work, rising to the important position of Recording Secretary of the Asheville Presbyterial, which place she held for four years. Today she is chairman of the War Service roll, its records, and the service flag of the church.

CONTINUED ON BACK PAGE

For three years Mrs. Morgan was on the Advisory Board of the Salvation Army. Of this service, which was terminated only by a hospitalization last year, Mrs. Morgan said, "I believe I got more pure joy out of my work with the Salvation Army than anything, unless it was my American Legion work." Mrs. Morgan is a Past President of the American Legion Auxiliary, Kiffin Rockwell Unit. She served in 1938-39, and it was during her administration that the present very-much-alive Junior Auxiliary was formed.

When the occasion requires it, Mrs. Morgan wears a merit pin for the work she has done in emergency first aid for the American Red Cross. "And Mr. Cushing, you'd be surprised how often a teacher of a fourth grade has use for emergency first aid. Only today I had a little boy with a persistent bleeding nose. The usual things did not stop it. I was grateful that Capt. Lane Hall of the fire department had taught us how to employ direct pressure over the temple to stop such bleeding. Little boys in school just will get hurt. I'm glad to know what to do for them."

Being both a mother and a teacher, Mrs. Morgan has learned well "what to do" for children under almost any circumstances. And even her present teaching of the fourth grade at Sand Hill school is an expression of her fine patriotic spirit. Her daughter, Miss Kathryn Morgan, who is much like her charming mother, is grown and working as secretary to Dr. C. C. Crump; so Mrs. Morgan found much time from her household duties. With war industry taking so many of our teachers away to high-salaried jobs, Mrs. Morgan volunteered her services as a teacher. "When the war work is over and former teachers come back from industry to their regular profession, I will of course leave off teaching to make a place for someone who needs the work."

Until illness forced this patriotic woman and mother to give up many of her civic activities, Mrs. C. M. Morgan was one of the most dependable workers for our men going away to the armed services. For these men Kiffin Rockwell Post of the American Legion has a "Send-off" party, with coffee and doughnuts and a kit bag for each man. Until recently Mrs. Morgan never missed a day helping at these parties from their beginning more than two years ago.

Consistency and patriotism are both jewels. They shine brightly from the brown depths of Mrs. C. M. Morgan's flashing eyes.

West Asheville News May 12, 1944

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE N.C.
Tuesday, May 6, 1952

DONALD MORGAN, left, newly-elected president of the student body of Lee H. Edwards High School, is congratulated by Joe Sevier, president of the students this year. Morgan's term includes the 1952-53 school year. He was president of the student government at Hall Fletcher Junior High School, is president of the junior class and was vice president of the sophomore class. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Morgan of 846 Haywood Road. Sevier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Sevier of Clayton Street, will be graduated from high school this year. The election for vice president will be held Wednesday with Terry Lathrop and Jim Shurling, presidential candidates with Morgan, as candidates. (Citizen Photo)

6D ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES, Sun., Jan. 26, 1969

JAMES GARY MORGAN, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Morgan of 85 Ormond Ave., has been awarded a scholarship by the French Broad River Garden Club Foundation Inc. He is currently on the dean's list at the University of Georgia, where he is a sophomore majoring in landscape architecture.

BUSMAN'S HOLIDAY is an apt phrase for Kyle Morgan's vacation here. Engaged in rocket research at the White Sands (N.M.) Proving Grounds, Kyle, formerly of Asheville, presented nephew Richie Harshaw with a toy rocket and they've been busily launching it ever since. At left, they prepare the water-compressed air "vehicle" for its flight, at right, the photographer catches it just off the "pad." Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Z. K. Morgan of 238 Westwood Pl., has been working for Western Electric Co. on the Nike series. He'll be here for about 10 days.

Asheville Citizen September 10, 1959

STUFFED SHIRTS—Three West Asheville youths have a trick to play with passing motorists, who from the road below might be inclined to think the stuffed gentlemen above are the real thing. "We just wanted to watch the expressions on the people's faces when they passed by," was the explanation of Stacy Morgan, 13, who alotg with brother Roger Morgan, 16, and Jimmy Snipes, 13, placed the dummies in the treetops above Trotter place in West Asheville near their homes. To the sports minded passer-by recalling the dismal record compiled last year by the coach of his favorite football team, such a sight might remind him the football season is rapidly approaching. (Times Photo by Malcolm Gamble.)

MONDAY, MAY 13, 1946

MAKINGS OF A FISH DINNER—Z. K. Morgan of 238 Westwood place, West Asheville, denies that he was fishing for his breakfast when he hooked the six and one-half pound small mouth bass proudly displayed above, but he does admit that it was about 6:30 o'clock last Wednesday morning when he made his catch at Beaver lake. Caught with a casting rod, using a Jitterbug plug, the bass measured 23 inches from stem to stern. However, this is not the largest small mouth bass Mr. Morgan has dragged from Beaver lake waters. He has one mounted at home measuring 25 inches and weighing eight and three-fourths pounds.

Asheville Citizen May 12, 1946

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1935

Does Her Part To Boost Cheer Fund

Little Betty Jean Morris, of 174 Dorchester avenue, West Asheville, is shown above as she added her dime yesterday afternoon to the growing number on the board on Patton avenue of the Salvation Army. The money goes toward providing Christmas cheer for the hungry and needy. And was Betty Jean happy to do her part? Take another look. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. V. Morris.

Mulford's Monkeys

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

See, Hear, Speak, But Mainly Eat

By LUTHER SHAW

People collect all kinds of things, stamps, books, records, rocks, insects—just anything.

Even monkeys.

Bentley Mulford of 302 Virginia Ave., and with the SPCA, has been collecting them for a year almost—he already has three.

Monkey collecting isn't like just any old collecting. Monkeys don't grow on trees.

Well not on trees around here anyway. Monkeys grow on banana trees.

ALL KINDS

Now there are all kinds of monkeys—spider monkeys, Rhesus monkeys, monkey monkeys and—oh well, that's enough to get us started because those are the only types Mulford has.

Spider monkeys, which don't resemble spiders, come from southern Mexico and South America.

The other ones, Rhesus monkeys, live in India. Incidentally, this species is used in connection with Salk vaccine testing.

How do you go about collecting monkeys? It's easy.

You just find an ex-GI who no longer wants his—the one he picked up in service and brought home to the dissolution, disappointment, dejection and eventual disposal of his wife.

BIG EATERS

That's how Bentley got his anyway—gifts from GI's who didn't want 'em.

Monkeys are big eaters—they like bananas best, and any rare tropical fruits you may happen to have around the house. Bentley says they eat sweet potatoes and like 'em.

They're really vegetarians, but will nibble at ground beef.

They love bugs.

Bentley won't sell — he just loves the hairy apes. But he'll show them to you if you ask him. Or, you can start your own collection.

—Citizen Photo

PLAYFUL PET in Citizen photographic studio screeched at the photographer and took a nip out of his master's helping hand.

Asheville Citizen January 1, 1957

FRANCIS McKENNA MULVANEY

Mr. T. R. Good, since March 1, Superintendent of the Asheville division, Southern Railway, walked into his office at the depot. Frank Mulvaney, his Chief Clerk, and I were sitting there talking. Mostly about beagle hounds and rabbit hunting. Mulvaney introduced me to Mr. Good, the eleventh railway superintendent under whom Francis McKenna Mulvaney has served as Chief Clerk since 1922.

"I'm with the West Asheville News. Just trying to see if there's anything good I can write about our new City Councilman," I said to Boss Good in a weak attempt at a joke.

"You can find a lot of good words to say about Frank," the big handsome man replied. And almost everyone who knows Frank Mulvaney says the same thing.

You've heard of the Rock of Gibralta, of course. Well, Frank Mulvaney is the man who is as steady as that rock. It may be that he inherited his loyalty to Southern Railway from his late father, Mr. S. John Mulvaney, who retired as assistant general superintendent of this Southern institution, and who once served for six years as superintendent of the Asheville division. Mrs. Mary Mulvaney, relict of John and mother of Frank and Paul and Pat (long well-known at the Southern Railway ticket office) and Mrs. A. S. Dixon of Fairview, lives at 26 Pearl Street and still watches fondly over her fine family.

Frank's father, originally from Kickapoo, Ill., was a railway man all his life. He served all over the Southern system, happened to be stationed at Vicksburg, Miss., back in the Gay Nineties, when Francis McKenna Mulvaney was born. Loyal Catholics all, this splendid family of Irish extraction sent their children to the best of schools. Frank's education began at parochial school in Greenville, Miss. He attended Marist College, a military school in Atlanta. His college work was completed at St. Bernard's, Cullman, Ala., where he graduated in its commercial course.

From that time to this Frank Mulvaney has known no other work except "railroading." His first job, at 18, was as stenographer and clerk at Bristol. In 1916 he came to Asheville as secretary to Mr. W. C. Hudson. Six years later he was promoted to Chief Clerk of the Superintendent, a position he has held without interruption for 24 years.

Now I've never known just what a Chief Clerk on a railroad did. Frank Mulvaney was too modest to tell me, but it's easy enough to learn the job's requirements from other sources. In the first place, there are several chief clerks on each division, each in a different line of work: Dispatcher's office, call office, yard office, maintenance office. But when we think of a railroad's chief clerk, the average person thinks first of Chief Clerk to the Superintendent. In this case, our capable friend, Frank Mulvaney. From my knowledge of Army organization, I'd say that a railway division's superintendent is like an Army brigadier general; who has as his executive officer a full colonel. The General sees what needs to be done. He issues necessary orders, and his Executive Officer (in this case Mr. Mulvaney) carries them out. On an important railway division the work is voluminous. So much that Frank has to forego much of the civic and club work he has done so long in the interests of his profession, "railroading." He works on correspondence, pay-rolls, personnel, repair, construction, and a thousand other details of the job all day long. Then at night he goes back to the office and talks his important letters into a dictaphone, from which his secretary, Mrs. H. B. Stroup (sister of my publisher-boss Walter Ward) will write them next day. Mrs. Annie Stroup has been Mulvaney's chief assistant for many years.

Many of you who know him recall the intense interest Frank Mulvaney always gives to every club or civic matter. "But," as he said to me, "I don't want to suggest a project unless I'm prepared to pitch in and do as much of the actual work as anyone. And during the war years there has literally been no time for anything but moving people and materiel by rail." Anyone can see the practical sense in that. All railroaders have really been on their toes every minute these past five years or so.

Only last week the Asheville City Council was faced by the important matter of selecting a citizen to succeed Vice-Mayor and City Councilman Jas. Divelbiss, Jr., who had moved to his new home outside the city limits. It is to the great credit of our Councilmen that they selected as their co-worker in Asheville's governing board as stable, sensible, and interested a citizen as Frank Mulvaney. Mr. Mulvaney is most humble in his attitude toward this responsible task. He has the best interests of his fellows sincerely at heart. "I am honored more than I can either express or understand," he said with his kindest of smiles, "but after all, I'm just an ordinary or 'garden variety' of citizen."

Which causes me to reflect that most of our American lives are nurtured by the "garden variety" of things. There is nothing spectacular about a potato, but without it there would be a lot of underfed, weak, and unhealthy people; so I think Frank Mulvaney's unguilded kind of citizenship is the very kind we need in responsible positions.

In 1926 Francis McKenna Mulvaney married Kathryn Bradford, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Bradford, who lived on Hiawassee street. They have five children: Frank, Jr., Asheville-Biltmore College; Mary Ann, Lee Edwards Hi; Joseph, Hall Fletcher; Marjorie and Kathryn, who attend school at St. Joan of Arc. The Mulvaney home is at 173 Brucemont Circle, West Asheville.

When Frank is not on his job or with his family at home or at church, he uses his spare time fishing and hunting. Mostly just in talking about those sports in recent years, since it takes quite a lot of attention on the part of a Chief Clerk when passing along The Boss's orders to some 2,000 railway employees on the Asheville division of Southern Railway. However, he does have some beagles which he at least likes to dream about as chasing rabbits. That was what we were talking about when Superintendent Good walked in. Frank was telling me quite a yarn:

"It was back in the days when hunting with ferrets was still permitted. You know what a ferret is? Somehing like a weasel. Hunters had them trained to go down in a den and chase Br'er Rabbit out after he holed up.

"Well, one day several of us were hunting in Haywood county. One of the boys had a ferret. The farmer whose land we hunted on went with us, saw the ferret for the first time when John took one out of a coat pocket and put it into the hole where a cottontail had hidden.

"About a week later we went back there again. First thing the farmer said when we arrived was, 'Mister, did yuh bring thatthere pocket-dog with yuh?'"

At which Frank Mulvaney laughed and laughed again. The Boss got up from his desk and left the room shaking his head rather sadly, I thought. He stopped at the door and said, "I'm going down the line to look over a construction job, Frank. If you see one of those pocketdogs while I'm gone, save it till I get back."

THE NEWS PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

* * *

By TOM CUSHING

West Asheville News March 15, 1946

Pick The Next Mayor of Asheville

FRANK MULVANEY

EARL W. ELLER

Either of these two city councilmen, who ran first and second in sday's Democratic primary, may be the next mayor. Standings in General Election, May 10, however, may alter the situation.

FRANK MULVANEY LEADS SLATE AT POLLS WITH LIGHT VOTE CAST

With only 20 per cent of tl registered Democrats of Ashevil going to the polls last Tuesda the seven incumbent city counci men are assured of retaining o fice for the next two years. The is no Republican opposition in tl general election, Tuesday, May 1

The main surprise of the ele tion was that Mayor Clarence J Morgan ran fourth in a close ra with 123 votes separating hi from Frank Mulvaney, of We Asheville, chief clerk with tl Southern Railway here, who le the ticket with 3,745 votes. Ea Eller was a close runner-up wi),773. Walter I. Abernethy plac third with 3,679.

In view of the surging flood rumors that have been rampa all over the city for the last s months, the primary campaign w remarkably free from mud slin ing. Opposition aspirants in the radio broadcasts spoke in genera ities and no names were calle Apparently the public did not ri to the bait of time worn accus tions. Many people expected se sational developments to come o of the widespread gambling one ations, but the powder was w and didn't explode.

Various reasons are given f the regular organization lam slide. In the first place oppo tion contenders filed at the la minute and only ten days remain for campaigning. The five m who sought to unseat the prese council had no organization or p litical backers and theirs was personal vote to a large exter For a month or more before tl filing deadline, April 9, a numb of businessmen were approach to enter the councilmanic ga without avail. For one reason another they held back. [illegible] [illegible] several months the City A ministration has given signs of i dependence of action and an u willingness to be dictated to l some of the old-time political lea ers. When Field Marshal E. Greene, due to failing health, r linquished his hold on the Dem cratic Party reins, his mantle fe to Weldon Weir, director of pu lic works. He is conceded to ha an almost air-tight precinct o ganization throughout the ci that even veterans boasting longer political service recor would find hard to crack. It is rumored that an undercover stru gle has been going on by at lea one powerful non-office holdi political chieftain to capitalize Mr. Greene's retirement, but M Weir and his lieutenants have he a firm grip. This apparently w reflected in Tuesday's election r sults.

The 19th West Asheville precin stood out as the rock-ribbed o ganization precinct of the cit leading all others, and casting vote ranging from 417 for M Mulvaney to 332 for Mr. Abern thy. Ed Burge led in one c precinct, the 18th, over all come with 90 votes, Mayor Clare Morgan being next with 85

Asheville's City Council: seated (L to R) Mayor Earl Eller, Vice Mayor Frank Mulvaney and Councilman Clarence E. Morgan. Back row: Councilmen Robert I. Presley, Theodore B. Sumner, W. F. Algary and J. Walter McRary.

Council Is Policy-Making Body

Since 1931, Asheville has had a Council-Manager form of city government.

The Council, under this form, acts with the authority and importance of a board of directors.

It is the policy-making body, making decisions that guide the City Manager in administration of city affairs.

Asheville has seven members of the City Council. Earl W. Eller is mayor, Frank M. Mulvaney is vice mayor. Clarence E. Morgan, Theodore B. Sumner, J. Walter McRary, Robert I. Presley and William F. Algary are the other members.

* * *

The Council holds regular weekly meetings at 4 p. m. each Thursday. These sessions are always open to the public and public attendance and participation in matters of public interest are encouraged by the Council.

City Council is elected by the voters of the city. Elections are held following party primaries every other Spring on odd-numbered years. The next city election will be in May, 1957.

What does the Council do? Elected by the people, it is directly responsible to them for decisions it makes. The Council sets the course of what the city government will do. The city manager determines how it will be done.

Council charts its course of policy in the form of ordinances and resolutions. The budget ordinance, for example, simply authorizes a plan of expenditures for a set fiscal period. A resolution may express the Council's viewpoint on an important public matter.

In every phase, Council operates to decide what things need doing, how the people feel about them, what the city government can both afford and practically accomplish, and, finally, to take action once the other factors have been resolved.

Foyer of City Building

Carrying out these policies and decisions then becomes the responsibility of the city manager. The Council, being responsible to the people, has the role of requiring effective administration. In all cases, this is done through the city manager. A close working relationship between council and manager, essential for good government has resulted.

* * *

The Council makes other appointments, including the city clerk and corporation counsel, as well as a substitute Police Court judge.

It appoints members to a number of boards and commissions, among them being the Planning and Zoning Commission, Zoning Board of Adjustment, City School Board, Library Board of Trustees, a director and one member on the Civil Service Commission and the Municipal Board of Elections.

The Council is the sounding board of public opinion. It is subject to public opinion at the polls. Thus, in exercising the ballot, each voter has a direct and clear voice in how his city is operated.

Six Incumbents Of City Council And Morrison File For Primary

ABERNETHY

ADAMS

ELLER

MORGAN

MORRISON

MULVANEY

PETERSON

Asheville Citizen March 2, 1951

T. C. Robinson Is Mentioned As Opponent

By FRED TOUNSLEY

Six incumbent members of City Council formally put themselves into the upcoming municipal primary race yesterday as the name of a retired police captain was injected into discussion of possible candidates who might contest the administration ticket.

Also recording himself as a council candidate yesterday was Graham Morrison, furniture store executive, who has been nominated by the administration to inherit the toga which Councilman C. Fred Brown plans to put aside at the end of his present term. Morrison has never before made a political race.

Although the principal himself could not be contacted for comment, a usually reliable source pointed to T. C. Robinson, former Asheville policeman, as one of four candidates opposition forces have corraled to pit against the administration. Robinson, a former police captain, retired from the force three years ago. He resides at 58 West Haywood Street.

Council members' action in officially going on record that they would seek renomination in the April 17 primary merely confirmed an earlier announcement by Mayor Clarence E. Morgan that all incumbents except Brown again would stand for office.

Filing yesterday, in addition to the mayor, were Councilmen Frank Mulvaney, Earl Eller, James Adams, Walter I. Abernathy and Myron Peterson.

With the administration ticket formally declared, main interest yesterday shifted to "who was going to get what" in the incumbent slate is returned to office.

Sources close to Council predicted that Mayor Morgan would be renewed to that post, provided he is renominated, but were less positive about who would fall heir to Brown's office of vice mayor. It was pointed out, and possibly significantly, that Councilman Eller will become the senior member of the group, from the standpoint of years of service, when Brown bows out. Eller is now completing his fifth term.

It was further claimed that Eller's loyalty to the administration had been tested and proven when the councilmen reportedly rejected a bid to accept a place on the opposition ticket. Mulvaney, too, was understood to have received and spurned a similar offer. The anti-administration group has let it be known that it does not intend to enter candidates against this pair but will content itself with contesting for the five remaining posts.

Southern Railway System Magazine IIES
December, 1953

Standing but five and a half feet tall, Francis McKenna "Frank" Mulvaney, chief clerk to the Southern's superintendent at Asheville, N. C., nevertheless is a "big man" in the minds of many residents of the mountain resort city.

In four consecutive city elections (1947, 1949, 1951 and 1953) Asheville voters have shown their confidence in Frank Mulvaney by re-electing him each time to city councilman, a post to which he was first appointed by the city's mayor in 1946. In the last three elections, Mulvaney "led the ticket," receiving the highest number of votes among the seven men on th "incumbent ticket" who were re-elected councilmen.

Frank speaks with open humility when he discusses his work as a councilman in his adopted home town (he was born in Vicksburg, Miss.). Quiet and unassuming, he accepts the role of "servant of the people" with sincerity, saying his principal aim is to "do the best for the most."

Moreover, he is not a politician in the normally accepted sense. He has never taken even an hour off from his job with the Southern to campaign for votes. His job always comes first.

In March, 1946, when a letter from the mayor of Asheville informed him of his selection to fill the unexpired term of a councilman who had moved from the city, his first reaction was: "Will it affect my job?"

Reassured by the fact that council members met once a week at a time which wouldn't interfere with his railway job, Frank accepted the appointment. Shortly afterward his "political career" began.

Those who know Frank Mulvaney wouldn't be surprised that he would consider declining the honored position of councilman if acceptance meant his job would suffer even slightly from it. Like hundreds of other chief clerks on the Southern, he is assigned many and varied duties, each, as it is dealt with, demanding his full attention.

In the evenings Southern Chief Clerk Frank Mulvaney devotes time to the second of his two careers. As a councilman for the City of Asheville, he studies a report on a proposed city improvement project.

An attempt was made to describe the job of chief clerk to a railroad division superintendent by an Asheville newspaper writer who "introduced" Mulvaney to the paper's readers shortly after his appointment to city councilman.

"From my knowledge of Army organization," the reporter wrote, "I'd say that a railway division superintendent is like an Army brigadier general, who has as his executive officer a full colonel. The general sees what needs to be done. He issues necessary orders, and his executive officer (in this case Mr. Mulvaney) carries them out. On an important railway division the work is voluminous."

The reporter was partly right, but Mulvaney will tell you that an attempt to describe any railroad chief clerk's duties so briefly is as impossible as trying to pass a diesel locomotive through the eye of a needle. His main job, of course, is coordinating the countless details necessary to the orderly operation of the superintendent's office. Many of the chores he handles himself.

Even 40 years of service haven't dimmed the likable chief clerk's love for the railroad. You might say that Frank Mulvaney was born to railroading. His father, S. John Mulvaney, worked on the Southern for many years beginning as a brakeman back in the "link and pin coupler" days. At that time a man's reputation as a railroader sometimes rose proportionately with his ability to preserve his fingers intact.

To an impressionable young boy, the fourth of ten children, the tales of accidents and near-accidents told by the elder Mulvaney served only to heighten desire to be a part of the excitement and adventure of railroading.

S. John Mulvaney worked his way up to superintendent of the Southern's Asheville division, serving on that job from 1920 until 1926 when he retired as assistant to general superintendent. He died in 1934.

Frank, himself, established at least a chronological tie with the Southern when he was born on March 25, 1894, almost coincident with the birth of the Southern Railway Company occurring a few months later.

Shortly after his nineteenth birthday his own career with the Southern began when he was hired as a clerk-stenographer in the division engineer's office at Bristol, Va.-Tenn. Three years later, in 1916, Frank's father was transferred from his job as trainmaster at Bristol to the same position at Asheville. Frank moved there with his family. Wishing to continue his already well-started Southern career, the younger Mulvaney got a job as clerk-accountant in the Asheville division engineer's office.

Mulvaney became chief clerk to the Asheville division superintendent in July, 1921, and has held the job ever since. During his 32 years as chief clerk, 13 different superintendents at Asheville have learned to rely on the ever-helpful son of one of their predecessors. Frank's experience and his knowledge about the division's operations are well known and always respected.

Once a week the popular Southern chief clerk assumes the role of "city father." Every Thursday at 4 p.m. he and his fellow councilmen assemble in the large, courtroom-like council room at Asheville's city hall and carry out their duties as the city's governing body. All matters relating to the health and welfare of Asheville's citizens are referred to the council. City ordinances are enacted or repealed, as the need demands, after careful consideration by the seven councilmen. The public is invited to add its voice to council discussions on proposed actions.

Asheville has what is commonly known as a "city manager" type of government. Council members appoint a mayor and vice-mayor from among themselves but the offices are chiefly honorary and for organizational purposes. The elective body names the city manager, corporation counsel and city clerk. It designates depositories for city funds and since all city officials must be bonded it establishes the amount of each official's bond. A number of other miscellaneous duties come under the council's direction.

Public approval of Frank Mulvaney as a member of the city's lawmaking group bears out the remarks of two Asheville newspapers made shortly after his appointment in 1946.

One paper, the Asheville Citizen, said: "In the selection of Mr. Mulvaney, members of the council feel that they have named a man who is eminently qualified to render service to the community."

The West Asheville News said this: "It is to the great credit of our Councilmen that they selected as their co-worker in Asheville's governing board as stable, sensible, and interested a citizen as Frank Mulvaney."

Despite these editorial sentiments and subsequent "votes of confidence" from Asheville voters, Frank

At work in the office of the Southern's Asheville division superintendent, Mr. Mulvaney deals with many things that have become very familiar to him in 40 years of railroading.

Councilman Mulvaney visits informally with Asheville City Manager, J. Weldon Weir (right), and City Attorney, Robert Wells, in Mr. Weir's office.

The Mulvaney family at home. Beginning at left, son-in-law Guy Morris, Sr., Mary Ann (Mrs. Morris), Mrs. Mulvaney, baby Guy Morris, Jr., Mr. Mulvaney, Kay and Frank, Jr. Not present were another son and daughter, Joseph and Marjorie.

Rabbit hunting with his beagles in the mountains near Asheville, Frank Mulvaney enjoys complete relaxation from his railroading and civic duties.

still maintains that he's just an ordinary, "garden variety" citizen. He originally mentioned this appraisal of himself to the News reporter who interviewed him for the above-mentioned article, leading the reporter to remark:

"Most of our American lives are nurtured by the 'garden variety' of things. There is nothing spectacular about a potato, but without it there would be a lot of underfed, weak, and unhealthy people; so I think Frank Mulvaney's ungilded kind of citizenship is the very kind we need in responsible positions."

Although he may modestly turn aside any attempts to describe him as a city leader, Mulvaney is still a hero to his family, and especially to his youngest daughter. Sixteen-year-old Kay thinks her dad is "the mostest" and has kept a scrapbook of all local newspaper accounts of Frank's civic activities.

The Mulvaney family lives in a well-kept, two-story white house located in a quiet, wooded residential section of West Asheville. In addition to Kay, the family consists of Mrs. Mulvaney, Frank, Jr., Joseph, Mrs. Guy Morris (Mary Ann), and Mrs. Charles Kenna (Marjorie). Of the children, only Frank, Jr., recently discharged after a tour of duty with the U. S. Army in Korea, and Kay live at home. Mary Ann lives in Asheville and Marjorie makes her home in Falls Church, Va. Joseph is a staff sergeant serving with the Air Force in Phoenix, Ariz.

In hunting season, when he is not railroading or helping to run the city government, Frank Mulvaney usually can be found in the mountains surrounding Asheville where he wages a private battle against high meat prices. Rabbits abound here and with the help of a 12-gauge shotgun and his seven beagle hounds—which he boards out between hunting seasons—he seldom comes home without a few bunnies to augment the family meat larder.

People who have known the Southern chief clerk for some years say that he has a stock of jokes which any Hollywood gag writer would envy. He seldom tells the same one twice. And no one enjoys a Mulvaney joke better than Mulvaney himself. After he reels one off he claps his hands, leans back in his chair and roars with laughter.

Frank Mulvaney's wit and good humor undoubtedly account for much of his popularity with Asheville citizens and with Southern Railway folks with whom he comes in contact. Local Southern employees are among his most faithful voters. Even those from Southern points far removed from Asheville, whose only contact with him has been through telephone conversations, know him "by ear" as the same fun-loving, courteous gentleman who always demonstrates genuine desire to be of service.

Asheville's present city manager, J. Weldon Weir, gave a rock-solid reason for Mulvaney's appeal to voters when he said recently, "Frank does more for other people than he does for himself."

With a reputation like that it is not difficult to see why Francis McKenna Mulvaney, a little man with a big heart, merits the title "Choice of the People of Asheville, N. C."

* * *

EARLY BIRD—Vice Mayor Frank M. Mulvaney is among the first customers to utilize the drive-up window at the brand new West Asheville Branch of the Bank of Asheville at Westgate. The bank opened for business at 9 a. m. today. The teller is Mrs. George W. Ledford.

Asheville Times May 245 1957

FRANK MULVANEY
. . . retires

Retires From SR Post

Frank Mulvaney Winds Up 46 Years Of Railroading

Frank M. Mulvaney, chief clerk to the Asheville division superintendent of the Southern Railway System, closed out 46 years of railroading with his retirement Saturday.

One of the city's best-known citizens, Mulvaney is vice mayor and has been a member of City Council since 1946. He has held his present Railroad post since 1922.

E. R. Oliver Jr., Southern division superintendent, said of Mulvaney's retirement, "I hate to see him leave. He certainly has been a wonderful co-worker. His retirement means for us the loss of a fine fellow and an honest, faithful and conscientious worker for the Southern Railway. We all wish him all possible happiness in his retirement."

Mulvaney himself said, "Physically I am not ready for retirement as I am in good health, and I'm not retiring in the true sense of the word. However, since I have qualified for retirement with the railroad, I am retiring from that particular vocation."

He said he has no immediate future plans, other than continuing his present governmental duties.

Mulvaney is famed as a storyteller, and frequently livens up informal City Council sessions with items from an apparently boundless supply of humor, much of it from his long railroad experience.

A native of Vicksburg, Miss., he is the son of the late S. John Mulvaney, who was assistant to the general superintendent of the Southern Railway at the time of his death.

He started his railroad career in 1913 as a clerk-stenographer for Southern at Bristol, Va. He came to Asheville as a clerk-accountant in 1917, became secretary to the Asheville division superintendent in 1920, and was made chief clerk to the Murphy division superintendent in 1921. He took his present post in 1922 and has served as chief clerk to 13 division superintendents.

Mulvaney's favorite vocation is hunting rabbits with beagles.

He is an active member of St. Joan of Arc Catholic Church in West Asheville. He and Mrs. Mulvaney live at 173 Brucemont Circle. Their five children are Frank M. Mulvaney Jr. of Canton, Mrs. Russell Roland of Topeka, Kan., and Joseph Mulvaney, Mrs. Guy Morris and Mrs. Marjorie Kenna, all of Asheville. There are nine grandchildren.

Asheville Citizen August 2, 1959

DESPITE WINDY WEATHER, which made it difficult for the beagles to trail, competition in the 13-inch female class got under way Monday in the first day of the four-day Western Carolina Beagle Club trials at the club's enclosed grounds off the Fanning Bridge Road near Fletcher. A total of 81 dogs are entered in the class, which ends Tuesday morning. Competition in the male 13-inch class will begin at noon Tuesday. The above Asheville trio has entered dogs in the trial. They are, left to right, Dick Chandler, Asheville city police patrolman, Frank M. Mulvaney, member of the City Council, and Arnold Phillips, long-time president of the Western Carolina Beagle Club. The trials end Thursday. Competition in the 15-inch beagle class begins at noon Wednesday. Judges for the trials include Harold Estes of Gaffney, S.C., and R. A. Webster of Graham, N.C. (Staff Photo by Al Geremonte)

Frank Mulvaney was the voice of the railroad in Asheville

Visiting our past

Frank Mulvaney and the Southern Railway were born in the same year, 1894. In 1916, he came to Asheville, following his father, S. John Mulvaney, superintendent of the Virginia and Southwestern line in Bristol, whom the Railway had called to remedy the destruction caused by a historic flood.

Rob Neufeld

During a 1976 interview with Dr. Louis Silveri of UNC Asheville, Mulvaney, who died in 1993, said "My father "was a man who always wanted his family at home ... After the flood, it was necessary to put on an extra clerk in the roadway department here ... and he persuaded me to come and take the job. I was reluctant to do so because I had all my friends (in Bristol), but I considered his feelings and my mother's feelings, and I have been here ever since."

Mulvaney retired after more than 46 years from his position as Asheville's Division chief clerk, people would not let him shed the mantle of expert. "One of my friends said, 'Frank, you'll be able to retire from retirement,'" Mulvaney told Alice C. Smith in 1986 when he was 92.

Weldon Weir tapped Mulvaney to run for City Council in 1946, and Mulvaney went on to parley his popularity into 23 years of elected office positions. His love of the railroad was never far from his mind.

In his account, "Railroad History in Western North Carolina and Asheville," Mulvaney looks back to the "linking pin days," when yardmen had to go between cars to insert pins in couplings. "You don't see it now," Mulvaney told Silveri, "but at that time there'd be a majority of railroad men with fingers off, arms off, legs off." Brakemen rode atop cars to apply hand brakes while descending steep grades. Hot boxes dried up, causing axle bearings to heat and lead to derailments.

Yet, Mulvaney always waxed nostalgic about old-time railroading and passenger service. The railroad man provided an important service, made good wages, shared his good fortune with the community and was very visible. "Every boy," Mulvaney told Smith, "seemed to be attracted to the casual way that a railroad man in full brass-buttoned uniform boarded trains and started on long journeys, filled with excitement."

> "I have often said that passenger train traveling was the most comfortable of any ... I have thought that automobiles are getting so numerous, parking space so scarce, that in the future people would come back to rail passenger service."
>
> FRANK MULVANEY

Then, there's the taste of that sausage, procured by the manager of dining cars from local markets — and more: stately porters, china dishes, fresh fruit vended by "news butches," strolls to the water fountain, nights in Pullman cars. You could leave Asheville in the early evening and arrive the next morning in Washington D.C., Jacksonville, or Cincinnati.

"I have often said," Mulvaney reflected, "that passenger train traveling was the most comfortable of any ... I have thought that automobiles are getting so numerous, parking space so scarce, that in the future people would come back to rail passenger service."

SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

Frank Mulvaney, shown in this undated photo, recounted many tales of the railroad industry in Asheville, including his account, "Railroad History in Western North Carolina and Asheville."

Frank Mulvaney died, a half year after the death of Kathryn Mulvaney, his wife for more than 60 years.

mostly 54

Local High School girls pictured above will model in a 7-hour Back-To-School Fashion Show at Belk's Friday . . . L to R: (front row) Sarah Ann Livingston, St. Genevieve; Rosalind Harris, Rebecca Parris, Lee Edwards; Annette Hawkins, West Buncombe; Pat Horton, Lee Edwards; (back row) Gwen Shipman, Lee Edwards; Shirley Merrill, Sand Hill; Sarah Dillingham, Swannanoa High; Kay Mulvaney, Lee Edwards; Ann Monteath, Lee Edwards. Not present when photo was made: Joanna Huff, Lee Edwards and Ann Dillingham, Barnardsville High.

Asheville Citizen September 11, 1949

'SNIFFY'S MAGIC BLOCKS,' designed by William J. Murphy, 100 Cordova Street, are being manufactured by the Morgan Manufacturing Company and will go on sale tomorrow. Murphy is shown above with a box of the new blocks which are made of lacquered maple.

Ash. Cit-T 9/11/49

New Type Of Alphabet Blocks Being Made Here

William J. Murphy, 100 Cordova Street, has designed a new type of children's alphabet block set which has been put into production by the Morgan Manufacturing Company.

The blocks go on sale in Asheville and at other points across the country tomorrow.

The novelty feature of the blocks is the design which permits the spelling of 16 three-letter words in such a way that when the word has been spelled correctly a picture of the object designated by the word is shown on the side of the blocks. This feat is made possible by ingenious designs so that the central portions are the same for several of the pictures.

The blocks are made of lacquered maple and are printed on a printing press in several colors. The complete set shows a jigsaw puzzle picture showing a child's prayer. On the other side of the set a house, a train and other objects are shown. The letters are stamped on the ends of the blocks and when they are set up to spell any of the 16 words the composite or section pictures illustrating the words appear.

Murphy and his wife, operating as the Eurasia Corporation, have been engaged for some years in importing toys from Europe. They have also manufactured other block sets through another production company, but the rapidity with which orders piled up for the new blocks makes them feel that this portion of the business is the one that is destined to run into heavy volume.

The set is known as "Sniffy's Magic Blocks", being named after a forlorn looking little rabbit whose image appears on the corner and on some of the blocks.

PAN HANDLE PETE AND "RE-PETE" BIG PICNIC ATTRACTION

Star attraction at the 1955 Federation picnics is the combination of Panhandle Pete Nash, the one man band, and Eddie "Re-Pete" Nash, his nine year old son who is following right along in his father's footsteps.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., TUESDAY, JULY 15, 1947

HOWARD NASH

TO PERFORM AT FESTIVAL — Howard Nash, variously known as "Pandle Pete" and "the one-mand band," will perform again at the 20th annual Mountain Dance and Folk festival in the City auditorium July 24-26 after several years' absence from the fete, it has been announced by Bascom Lamar Lunsford, founder and director. The performer is said to play more instruments at one time than most persons can play separately, some of them being of his own contrivance, and it is his delight to burlesque such venerable old tunes as "Wabash Cannon Ball," "Little Brown Jug," and "Worried Man Blues."

Youth Jamboree Opens Wednesday

Youngsters from throughout the Appalachian Highlands are polishing up their dancing shoes and tuning up their fiddles for Asheville's finest annual festival of mountain dancing and singing.

It's the four-day, 11th annual Mountain Youth Jamboree, opening Wednesday night in Asheville City Auditorium.

Children of school age and younger from the western counties of North Carolina and at least eight other states will perform in the colorful springtime event.

Twenty - eight square dance teams in three divisions — elementary, junior and senior — will whirl through lively, intricate patterns the first three nights of the Jamboree in hopes of reaching the finals Saturday night.

Division winners in the square dance team competition Saturday night will vie with last year's champions for handsome trophies. The 1958 division champions were: Elementary, Haw Creek; Junior, David Millard; and Senior, McKee High School, Cullowhee.

For the first time this year, distinction in presenting awards will be made between clogging and smooth dancing teams. Heretofore, the "cloggers" have been judged with the smooth dancing teams.

In addition to the teams competing for awards, at least four teams will give exhibition performances.

Another highlight of the Jamboree will be what has come to be known as the "individual talent" portion of the festival.

Some 150 youngsters with their old time fiddles, guitars, mandolins and dulcimers will ring out with strains of such folk tunes as "Molly Malone," "Barbara Allen," "Coming Around the Mountain" and "Old Joe Clark."

The tunes will be quickly recognized as part of the priceless tradition and heritage of folklore handed down by generations of mountain folk.

The Jamboree was founded by Hubert Hayes, who continues to be its moving spirit. Over the years, his enthusiasm for the traditional songs and dances has become boundless.

Sponsored by the Asheville Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Jamboree has attracted nation-wide publicity, with articles and pictures in many leading newspapers and magazines.

Capacity crowds often jam City Auditorium to see the earnest rivalry between square dance teams, individual and group talent performers.

The Jamboree will begin each evening at 7:15 p.m., except Saturday, when it will start at 7 p.m. Participating teams have been asked to be present by 6:25 p.m. on nights they are to perform.

the boy with the banjo is Eddie Nash, 13, of Hall Fletcher Junior High, Asheville.

Rickey Ray, 9, of St. Joan of Arc School, who'll be singing "Tom Dooley" at the Jamboree.

Asheville Citizen April 12, 1959

Farmers Federation News

Vol. XXXV No. 11 JULY, 1955

THE 1955 PICNICS — BETTER THAN EVER!

Howard "Panhandle Pete" Nash was pictured at the Hayesville picnic as he participated in a fiddling contest with Steve Ledford of Mitchell county. Pete uses a "bull" fiddle and attempts to keep pace with Ledford's fancy fiddling.

Howard "Panhandle Pete" Nash, The One-Man-Band is attending all the picnics this year where he plays 17 musical instruments at one time.

N.C. - Asheville

'Whippoorwill' Will Have A Strong Southern Accent

By BOB CONWAY

"The Whippoorwill," the Robert Mitchum movie now being filmed in the Asheville area, promises to have a strong Southern accent —with some 225 North Carolinians and three Virginians in the cast as compared with only 11 professionals from Hollywood and two or three from New York.

Leading the Southern forces in this saga of mountaineer dewers and revenuers are members of three dramatic groups—Asheville Community Theater, "Horn in the West" at Boone, and the Barter Theater at Abingdon, Va.

ACT thespians have nine speaking parts, "Horn in the West" performers two, and Barter Theater players four.

Mrs. Frances Koon, a charter member of ACT, will have one of the most important roles in "Whippoorwill" to be portrayed by a non-professional — that of Mrs. Sarah Doolin, mother of Lucas Doolin (Mitchum).

Other roles to be played by Asheville Community Theater members are:

John Stamberger as chief of Memphis detectives, Ed Wilkinson as chief ATU enforcement officer, Holmes Bryson as a regional ATU agent, John Beakley and John Hunter as moonshiners, Dan Bly as a gas station attendant, Donald Remer as a court clerk, and Hershel Ponder as a pool hall wisecracker.

Charles Elledge, principal of Marion High School, still wearing the beard he grew for "Horn in the West" this summer, will portray a mountaineer.

Phil West, another veteran of the Boone outdoor stage, will play the part of Mr. Edwards, an ATU agent.

Heading the Barter Theater contingent will be the Virginia dramatic group's founder and producer, Robert Porterfield, who will be seen as a preacher. With him will be three other Barterites —Jerry Hardin, Mitch Ryan, and George Fontaine, the latter from Kernersville (Forsyth County), N. C. 9/11/57 Mail

Taking a break from his desk at the Asheville employment office, manager B. C. Wilson will assume the role of Mr. Ledbetter, a store owner and the father of the female lead in the picture, Roxanna Ledbetter (Sandra Knight).

Four local people in "Whippoorwill" have the comparatively easy task of merely being themselves. Grappler Pete Managoff will be seen as a wrestler; Jack Fortune of the Sky Club will play a waiter captain; Sara Catonia of Chez Paul a waitress, and Fred Brown of WLOS-TV a television commentator.

Jack Kosslyn, casting director for DRM Productions, said last night that he is still looking for an experienced actress to play the role of a housewife.

He explained she should be approximately 30 years old and attractive, but not the glamor type.

Interviews for this role will be held from 2 to 4 p. m. today in the offices of DRM Productions at the Battery Park Hotel.

R. L. Sluder, former Asheville detective who now operates at the switchboard at police headquarters, will wear the same uniform, but will portray a different role—that of a jailer.

Karl Fleming, Citizen staff writer who has chronicled the exploits of Alcoholic Tax Unit agents for this newspaper will appear on the screen as an ATU man himself.

Larry Scruggs of Canton, who sought film roles unsuccessfully in Hollywood for two years, and then returned home to break the ice, will play the part of a truck driver.

Betsy Justice Willingham will be seen as the girl friend of Kogan, the movie's No. 1 villain, while Mrs. Lucy Masters will appear as the mother of Jed Moultrie, a moonshiner.

Russ Offhouse, known as "Farmer Russ" on WLOS-TV, has the part of an obnoxious character in a night club.

Two Asheville ABC men, Luther Anderson and Charles Giglia will portray Eastern gangsters, while a third, Harry Horton Sr. will play a mountaineer. Howard Rowe also will depict a mountaineer, and Gard Chandler, Jack Cannon and Jim Case Jr. will act the part of corn squeezins' specialists.

Dean of the cast is Blackwell Lunsford, 75, who will also be seen as a mountaineer.

Pauline Quinn, who had a bit part in "The Swan," filmed here in 1955, will appear in "The Whippoorwill" and is acting as a stand-in for the female lead.

Two country music singers who will have non-musical roles are James Howard Nash, better known as 'Panhandle Pete," who will be seen as a moonshiner, and "Cowboy Claude" Casey, who plays a gangster.

Slated to face the camera behind bars are Gaither Benison, maintenance man at the Battery Park Hotel, as a drunk in jail, Sam Dinkins of the employment office, as another prisoner.

In a church sequence in the movie will be adults Gaither Robinson, James Sluder, Gene W. Chandler, Abe Masters, C. B. Joyner, and Kelly Shope and children Susie Brown, Jane Page, Diana and Sharon Cole, Jerry Strange, Brenda Snyder, and Gwendolyn McCracken.

Asheville Citizen September 11, 1957

—Citizen-Times Photo

CERTAIN TO BE SEEN in the 1960 Mountain Youth Jamboree opening Wednesday night in City Auditorium are Eddie Nash, 14 (left), of 21 Hayes St. and Larry Hensley, 17, of Leicester RFD 1. Nash attends Hall Fletcher Junior High School and Hensley, Erwin High School. The Jamboree, also to feature 25 square dance teams, will continue through Saturday.

Youth Jamboree Opens Wednesday

The Mountain Youth Jamboree annual folklore spectacular for the dancing and singing youth of Western North Carolina, will be held Wednesday through Saturday night in City Auditorium.

The annual Asheville Junior Chamber of Commerce event promises top entertainment this year with 25 square dance teams and dozens of talented individuals scheduled for appearances.

Founded by Hubert Hayes, the Jamboree each year has continued to attract more dance teams, more individual talent performers and increasingly more spectators.

Bill Peyton of the Jaycees, a veteran leader of the Jamboree, heads this year's show committee.

Auditioning for the individual talent phase, hampered earlier by the snowy weather, has recently gotten under way. Show officials say the tryouts have revealed "exceptional" talent.

Howard Nash, Known As Panhandle Pete, Dies

After many years of entertaining people all over the United States, J. Howard Nash died Tuesday morning in a Lumberton hospital following a long illness.

Known especially to Western North Carolina residents as Panhandle Pete, the One Man Band, Nash played his own conglomeration of instruments, conventional and unconventional.

Nash, 59, developed his "band" until it included 32 instruments weighing more than 100 pounds, which he carried, tied on, or slung around his shoulders.

He started learning to play when he was seven years of age and started his novelty act in 1937. He used such things as cowbells, automobile horns and exhaust whistles to add to his instrumental sound.

He appeared at folk festivals, including Bascom Lamar Lunsford's Mountain Dance and Folk Festival in Asheville, for years; won awards at the Farmers Federation's annual picnics during the 1940's and '50s; appeared on the Arthur Godfrey television show in 1953; and toured New York for the Farmers Federation.

J. HOWARD NASH

Groce Funeral Home will announce arrangements.

Asheville Citizen October 1, 1972

M7988

FP-142

EDDIE NASH

Contact:
Eddie Nash
21 Lynndall

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE N.C.
Friday, May 9, 1952

THESE STUDENTS have been selected by the West Asheville Memorial American Legion Post Auxiliary to attend the annual Girls' State June 13-19 in Greensboro: L to R, Miss Joyce Keller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beach Keller, 33 Sand Hill School Road; and Miss Virginia Nave, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Nave, Brevard Road. They were picked on the basis of their scolastic records, leadership ability and character. The Girls' State will be held at the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina. (Citizen Photo)

Asheville Citizen May 9, 1952

SHOOTS WOMAN, DEFIES CROWD AT GUN POINT

Robert Neighbors Kills His Wife On Road West Of City

HOLDS DYING WOMAN IN ARMS

West Asheville Man Is Lodged In Jail After Shooting

After firing three bullets from a small calibre automatic into her body Robert Neighbors, 45, of 1554 Haywood road, lifted his wife's head from the pavement and flourishing the gun defied witnesses to the shooting to approach while she lay dying in his arms.

The slaying occurred about 7 o'clock on Deaverview road when Neighbors approached a car in which his wife, Nannie Neighbors, 36, was seated with Cecil Hughes, of Emma, whose aid she had enlisted at the Neighbors home a few minutes befor to search for her husband who had left saying he was going after more liquor.

After holding the small crowd that had gathered following the shooting off at the point of a gun, Neighbors attempted to resist when members of the sheriff's department arrived to place him in custody. The officers, however, were able to subdue him without difficulty and found that his wife, who was still in his arms, was dead.

Brought To Jail

After being placed under arrest he was rushed to the Buncombe county jail and refused to talk of his act. From several witnesses officers last night were fabricating the story of the shooting.

Neighbors left his home about 45 minutes before the shooting, his father-in-law, J. L. Sluder stated, and Mrs. Neighbors pleaded with her son Jack Cannon and a step-son of Neighbors, to follow and prevent him from securing additional liquor. Having the son refuse to follow his step-father, Mrs. Neighbors enlisted the aid of Cecil Hughes of Emma to accompany her in quest of her husband. Hughes was driving the family coupe with Mrs. Neighbors down Deaverview Road when they noticed Neighbors walking toward the car his hand on his hip pocket.

"I advised Mrs. Neighbors," Hughes stated, "to get out of the car and avert possible trouble. She replied that he would not harm anyone. Reaching the car, which I had stoped, he opened the door where Mrs. Neighbors was sitting and said: '—— you this is my chance.' He then began to fire and I opened the door on my side and ran across a field. I heard three reports and hurried to Mrs.

bors was sitting and said: '—— you this is my chance.' He then began to fire and I opened the door on my side and ran across a field. I heard three reports and hurried to Mrs. Neighbor's home to advise her family."

Falls From Car

After firing upon his wife who fell from the seat of the car to the pavement, Neighbors is said to have walked away for about 20 feet, returned to his wife, and lifted her head from the road. He sat down on the pavement and rested his wife's head in his lap.

Carey Sumner, employe of the Southern railway, who was passing the scene at the time of the shooting stopped his car and approached Neighbors. Sumner stated he asked Neighbors what was the matter and that Neighbors stated "What does it look like." Summer stated he made a gesture as if to place his hand on Mrs. Neighbors to ascertain if she was dead and that Neighbors became indignant and ordered him away.

Mrs. F. B. Spoons, who was near the shooting, advised deputies she approached Neighbors and asked him what was the trouble. "She was in my car with another fellow and that is no way to act. She had no business with him." Mrs. Spoons said he replied.

When deputies A. G. McDowell and Sam Coggins reached Neighbors they claimed he made efforts to get his pistol but was overpowered by the officers and placed under arrest. Enroute to the county jail he declined to talk, officers stated.

Handcuff Father

J. L. Sluder, father of the dead woman, made an effort to attack Neighbors with a knife and was handcuffed by the officers until the removal of the defendant. According to Sluder, Neighbors had been drinking earlier in the day and left his home on the Haywood road to secure more liquor.

Coroner W. E. Baker ordered the body of the woman moved to Clayton and Hyer's funeral home in West Asheville and set the inquest for this morning at 11 o'clock. Dr. Baker stated the woman had been shot three times the bullets entering the chest and ranging toward the heart. It was not determined how long she lived after being shot by her husband.

The woman is survived by the defendant, her parents, three children, Jack, Mary, and Harry Cannon, and two brothers, Bryan Sluder of Asheville and G. Sluder of Haywood county. Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

Asheville Citizen April 21, 1930

Neighbors Is Charged With Murder Of Wife

True Bill Found While Victim's Funeral Progresses

Even as the wife whom Robert Neighbors, of 1554 Haywood road, killed early Sunday night was being buried yesterday, the Buncombe county grand jury returned a true bill of indictment for murder against the 45-year-old ex-service man.

Immediately upon report of the grand jury in the case, Solicitor R. M. Wells announced that he would not attempt to try the case at the current term of superior court, but would be ready to call the case for trial at the May term.

Neighbors still is held in the county jail without bond. He maintains that he remembers nothing of the shooting or of events leading up to it.

Meantime, funeral services for the victim of the shooting, Mrs. Nannie Neighbors, 36, were held yesterday afternoon at the funeral establishment of Clayton and Hyer. The Rev. T. G. Mangham officiated, and burial was in Cedar Hill cemetery.

The tragedy was enacted on Deaverview road about 7 o'clock Sunday night. Mrs. Neighbors and Cecil Hughes, a friend of the family, had set out in the Neighbors automobile to search for the husband, who supposedly had gone in search of liquor. As they drove up beside him, Neighbors was said to have wrenched open the door of the car fired three bullets into Mrs. Neighbors' heart. She toppled to the roadside and died almost at once. Neighbors, seated on the ground, held his wife's head in his lap, calling her name and talking until officers arrived, disarmed him and took him to jail.

A strange light was thrown upon the case yesterday when it was learned that on the very day of the shooting arrangements for Neighbors to enter a veterans hospital had been completed and along with the commission a transportation order was received. Had the letter borne a special delivery stamp and been delivered Sunday instead of Monday, it is quite probable that Mrs. Neighbors would still be alive.

Asheville Citizen April 23, 1930

Sunday, June 27, 1999

MAURICE W. NEIGHBORS

ASHEVILLE – Maurice Weldon Neighbors, 73, of 64 Trotter Place, died Friday, June 25, 1999, at the Asheville V.A. Medical Center Nursing Home.

A lifelong resident of Buncombe County, he retired as the former owner and operator of Neighbors Specialty Sales, was a member of Abernethy United Methodist Church, a graduate of Lee H. Edwards High School and Cecil's Business College. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II.

M.W. Neighbors

He was a member of the Asheville Junior Chamber of Commerce, where he received the Key Man Award; member of the Asheville Jaycees, where he served as state chairman of the Jaycees Prisoner Rehabilitation; president of the Asheville Area Tourist Association; served on the board of directors of Parents Without Partners (PWP).

Neighbors was the designer of the "I like calling North Carolina home" promotion, the North Carolina bicentennial plates, the "Welcome to North Carolina" license plates and the Lady in Distress (restoration of Statue of Liberty) promotion.

He was the son of the late Thomas Newton and Alva Lee Burnette Neighbors. He was preceded in death by two sisters, Katherine Plemmons and Betty Penland.

Surviving are one daughter and son-in-law, Gloria and Dallas Lunsford of Belmont; one son, Robert T. Neighbors of Greenville, S.C.; two grandchildren, Melanie Lunsford, Dallas Lunsford Jr., both of Belmont; three sisters, Martha Brown of Madison Heights, Va., Carolyn Lindsey of Port Charlotte, Fla., and Sandy Knapp of N. Lauderdale, Fla.

Services will be held at 12:30 p.m. Monday at Abernethy United Methodist Church. The Rev. Patrick Welch will officiate. Burial will be in Riverside Cemetery.

The family will receive friends at 11 a.m. until the service hour on Monday at the church.

Anders-Rice Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Sunday, June 27, 1999

Entrepreneur who wrote several famous jingles dies

By Phil Alexander
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE – Anyone who has been a resident of North Carolina for 20 years or more may remember the simple little jingle to "I Like Calling North Carolina Home," a tourism promotional campaign in the late 1970s.

Maurice Neighbors, the Asheville entrepreneur who came up with the idea that appeared on television and on car plates and T-shirts, died Friday at Oteen VA Medical Center Nursing Home. He was 73.

Neighbors was a hawker by trade, selling promotional items to such customers as the Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce under the neighbors of Neighbors Specialty Sales. He operated the business out of his Trotter Place home in West Asheville.

So it came naturally for him to market the car plates not only for the tourism campaign but also for the state bicentennial and "Welcome to North Carolina." A 1977 photo in the Asheville Times featured Neighbors with a shirt inspired from watching South Carolina tourists buy up Myrtle Beach T-shirts. "I'm bullish on Asheville, N.C.," Neighbors' shirt read.

"He was just a normal person with a lot of heart and a lot of interest in the City of Asheville," former Mayor Gene Ochsenreiter said. "He was a real nice guy, just very congenial with a plus-plus personality."

Neighbors was active in the community, receiving the Key Man Award from the Asheville Junior Chamber of Commerce, later the Jaycees. He was state chairman of the Jaycees Prisoner Rehabilitation program and served as president of the Asheville Area Tourist Association.

"He was just a real advocate for Asheville," said former Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce Executive Vice President Jim Ellis, who described Neighbors as a go-getter with a gentle personality. "He was aggressive and bullish, and yet I saw a real gentle side to him, too," Ellis said.

Neighbors' family, which includes a son and a daughter, will receive friends at 11 a.m. Monday at Abernethy United Methodist Church, where Neighbors was a member. The memorial service will begin at the church at 12:30 p.m., and he will be buried in Riverside Cemetery.

NEIGHBORS' PROMOTIONS

- "I Like Calling North Carolina Home"
- The North Carolina bicentennial plates
- The "Welcome to North Carolina" license plates
- The Lady in Distress (restoration of Statue of Liberty) promotion

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE N. C.
Thursday, May 14, 1953

— Army Photo by Sgt. Ed W. Chabet

TAKING TIME OUT from his duties to show a couple of Korean natives his musical instrument is Cpl. Grady Nichols (center), husband of Mrs. Rubye E. Nichols of 21 Mitchell Avenue, West Asheville. Nichols plays in the 45th Infantry Division Band somewhere in Korea. He arrived in the Far East last April and is expected to return home within the next few months.

Paul Nichols: 'Those Butterflies Are There...'

30 Years Of Big Band Music

You Name It — They Play It

By TONY KISS
Staff Writer

He's been doing it for 30 years, but he says the butterflies still soar in his stomach.

Several times a week, Paul Nichols climbs onto the bandstand, fires up his 12-person orchestra and pounds out tunes made famous in the big band era.

"Those butterflies are there until I strike up the music," Nichols said a few days ago. "Each job is a challenge. No two dances are the same.

"It's a case of winning over the audience every time we play."

Nichols has apparently had little trouble winning audiences. His orchestra has been making music in these mountains since the mid-1950s.

The group plays an assortment of sounds — Latin American, waltz, soft rock, disco and even country — but is best known for big band hits, Nichols said.

To mark the orchestra's 30th anniversary, Nichols and his crew will perform a special show June 1 at the Edgewood Restarurant on Merrimon Avenue, where they frequently appear.

The program will be taped and broadcast later on a local radio station, the band leader said.

Nichols and his brother Grady launched the band after the orchestra they were playing with folded.

For several years, the band was known as the Grady Nichols Orchestra.

"This group had some some outstanding contracts, and so we put together a new band and picked them up," Nichols said.

Prior to starting the band, Nichols spent a decade playing in various big bands. "I played with a band while I was still in high school, in Illinois," he said. "In those days, a lot of the fellows were in the service, and so some of the local bands used high school kids."

In the early days, the Grady Nichols Orchestra played for civic groups, fraternal clubs, conventions and even high school proms. Their first show was staged at the George Vanderbilt Hotel, now an aparatment building next to the Asheville Civic Center.

Over the years, the band has changed in lineup. Grady Nichols left about 17 years ago, and the group became known as the Paul Nichols Orchestra.

Members have come and gone, but one musician who stayed is 85-year-old pianist Mary Glass. "She's remarkable," Nichols said. "She's been a choir director for years. And she used to play the piano for the silent movies."

Nichols said when he started the band, he never expected it to last three decades.

"The other bands I've been with never lasted this long," he said. "I don't know why we've stayed so together so long. I guess its because we try to please the people.

"We don't tie ourselves down to just the past. We do a variety of music. And we try to play every request we get."

Nichols, who also runs a furniture store in west Asheville, said he's not planning to retire anytime soon and has brought several of his children into the musical fold.

"I've not given any thought to retiring," he said. "Things have been going along so well."

It's 'all in the family' at this furniture store

By LeeAnn Donnelly
STAFF WRITER

For nearly 60 years, Home Furniture has been a familiar fixture among the businesses dotting Haywood Road in West Asheville. The Weddle/Nichols family has owned and operated the business since 1933.

Tim Nichols, grandson of the original proprietor, A.C. Weddle, currently manages the three-level store at 797 Haywood Road.

Sofas, loveseats, bedding and accessories appear at every turn throughout the 10,000 square-foot space. Matching art pieces, homey throw blankets, flowers and plants compliment each furniture group, lending ideas to customers making decorating decisions.

The luxurious surroundings are a far cry from the 2,000-square-foot store Weddle started with during the Depression, Nichols said. The original store space on Herron Avenue had a dirt floor basement, he added.

"We're the oldest business, yet we're the newest," said Nichols of maintaining current styles and trends. "You can't stand still."

Weddle took a gamble, said Nichols, when he decided to open up a business smack in the middle of the Depression. But Weddle's years as a manager with Sturkey Furniture gave him the experience to make a success out of the store.

"He started it with a $2,000 life insurance policy," said Nichols.

Wartime presented problems in that most folks couldn't afford to buy new furniture, so Weddle made profits from reconditioning used pieces.

Nichols' father, Paul, worked alongside his father-in-law for a number of years at both the original location and in

❖ See Family store on page 5

JETTA FRASER/CITIZEN-TIMES

Three generations of the Nichols Family at Home Furniture have worked hard to keep customers happy for nearly 60 years. The West Asheville store is located at 797 Haywood Road. Standing left to right, Tim Nichols, Al Nichols and Janet Nichols. Seated, left to right, Roy Rathbone, Paul Nichols and Clara Nichols.

Family store

❖ Continued from page 1

the store's present location.

Now, though, Nichols' father acts as adviser.

Family businesses, according to Nichols, are a "dying breed," largely because of chain operations.

"The chains can many times gang up on you. Their buying volumes make a big difference," he said. Although, with the Rowe Furniture and Sealey City programs, Home Furniture has been able to compete with the bigger stores.

By selling those two lines exclusively, Nichols said the store can receive special attention from either manufacturer – as well as the benefits of being one of the only furniture stores that sells those lines.

"Even though I'm a little business, I have the buying volume of (a chain-operated store). We've had a 22 percent increase this year. We did as much in sales in June during a recession year as we did in the year 1986," he said.

Nichols attributes the store's success to the eight-member staff and their professional work attitudes.

MISS NICHOLS DIES SUDDENLY AT HOME HERE

Veteran Teacher Stricken While Preparing To Leave For School.

Miss Rena Nichols, dean of girls at Hall Fletcher junior high school and a member of the city school system for the past 35 years died suddenly this morning at 9 o'clock at her home, 210 Merrimon avenue, as she was preparing to go to school.

A native of Henderson county, Miss Nichols resided here since early childhood, and was well known in educational circles. Her first experiences in teaching was in Yancey county, where she spent four years in community work.

In 1908 Miss Nichols returned to Asheville and since that time has taught all grades from the third to and including high school. When Hall Fletcher opened in 1926 she was appointed dean of girls.

Attended School Here

Miss Nichols attended Montford grammar school and graduated from Orange street school when it was a high school. She also was graduated from Asheville Normal and Collegiate college, which is now known as Asheville college.

Following graduation from the latter she worked for four years with the Presbyterian Home Mission board of New York city, being stationed near Burnsville. Her duties consisted of some teaching, but mostly of welfare work.

Miss Nichols served on the Community Chest board for a number of years, serving as treasurer of this organization for one year. She also is a former president of the Business and Professional Women's club, and was on the Y. W. C. A board of directors for six years.

DIES SUDDENLY

MISS RENA NICHOLS

Club President

She was also a member of the Fortnightly Book club, and a former president of this group. Miss Nichols also was a member of the North Carolina Education association, the National Dean's association, which is a branch of the National Education association, and the State Dean's association. A member of the Central Methodist church she was a Sunday school teacher there for many years.

Traveling was one of Miss Nichols' hobbies. She had traveled in every section of the United States, in Eastern and Western Canada, Cuba, and went to Europe in 1924.

Surviving are two brothers, J. W. Nichols, with whom she made her home here, and S. H. Nichols of Meridian, Miss., one sister, Mrs. William O'Neill, Jr., of Chicago, and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements, under the direction of Morris-Gearing Funeral home, are incomplete.

Asheville Times August 26, 1943

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, SATURDAY, APRIL 29, 1916.

WEST ASEVILLE TOWN BOARD HOLDS MEETING

DECIDES TO GRADE ROAD TO SULPHUR SPRINGS.

Considerable Business Transacted by the Aldermen, and Permits For New Building Are Issued.

One of the busiest meetings for some time past was held last night by the members of the West Asheville board of aldermen who meet every Friday night. To a committee of property owners, residing along Beverly road, who presented a petition asking for a sewer line about 300 feet in length, the board offered to furnish the engineers to survey the line if the petitioners will pay for the construction of the line. A similar proposition was offered to property owners of Majestic avenue who presented a similar petition. The board will hear the petitioners again next week and in the intervening time the propositions will be considered.

The board made an agreement with A. S. Nicholson, appointing him to take charge of the sanitary department of the town. Mr. Nicholson is to furnish his own team, and will be permitted to retain the fees collected for his work from the citizens of the town.

It was decided to survey Haywood road from Sand Hill road to Sulphur Springs and to lay off the road forty feet wide. The road is one and one-half miles in length, and will be graded forty feet wide to C. M. Dill's place. From then on to Sulphur Springs it will be graded to a width of twenty-four feet.

It was decided to open a street on the car line from Beacham's curve to the concrete bridge, provided the right of way may be secured free of any cost to the town. It is proposed to grade the street to a width of thirty-five feet if the deal can be consummated.

A consolidation of the two fire companies of the town was authorized, company No. 2 to move its equipment to the quarters of company No. 1.

The board will meet next Wednesday night in session with the committee of the chamber of commerce of West Asheville and the citizens' committee to select a site for the proposed new city hall. This matter has been under consideration for some time past and although no action has been taken other than the appointment of committees it is thought that the matter will soon be brought to a head.

The building activity in West Asheville, which has been so marked for the past few months shows no signs of abatement. The board granted last night two new building permits, the estimated cost of which totaled $1,800.00.

N. C., SUNDAY, APRIL 14, 1929

Pals For Sixty-Two Years

Mr and Mrs. J. H. Nicholson, of West Asheville, who today will celebrate together Mrs. Nicholson's 80th birthday anniversary.

Mrs. J. H. Nicholson Is Eighty Years Old Today

Happy Couple To Join In Celebration Of Anniversary

Today Mrs. J. H. Nicholson, who for over 62 years has been the "partner" of J. H. Nicholson, pioneer Asheville business man, will celebrate her 80th birthday anniversary with her husband at their little cottage home on 6 Mildred avenue, West Asheville.

The festivities today will mark the celebration of three important events in their lives in less than a year. One was their 62nd wedding anniversary last November 8, and the other was the 81st birthday of Mr. Nicholson which came February 8.

"We're going to get all the children who are living back home Sunday, mother and I, and we're going to have one more birthday dinner," Mr. Nicholson told a Citizen reporter yesterday.

Four Children

Of eleven children who have blessed the home of the aged couple, only four will gather for the birthday dinner today. Seven have gone into the Great Beyond. Those living are Mrs. Sarah McKinney, T. P., J. R., and D. L. Nicholson, all of Asheville.

After years of hard work together, many of which they spent conducting a mercantile business in West Asheville, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson have retired to their little home to rest and grow old together. Both are charming conversationalists, and their reminiscent stories of life together for over 62 years and the old days when Asheville was only a small and somewhat isolated city on a mountain frontier, and West Asheville, "the west" of the Blue Ridge metropolis, was a mere village, are very interesting.

Take Things Easy

"You know," Mr. Nicholson remarked recently with a merry twinkle in his eyes, "when folks begin to get old they ought to slow up and take things easy. That's the very reason why I closed out my store in 1925 after mother and I had run 'er for 26 years. My wife is almost as old as I am, and we've worked hard together. She has been a real helper and companion to me, and so we're taking a rest now."

Since coming here from Transylvania county in 1899, thirty years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson have moved only once. "Wasn't much of a move then, we only moved across the street," was the way he put it in his story.

Mr. Nicholson was born in Transylvania county February 8, 1848 and has spent his entire life in Western North Carolina. He and Mrs. Nicholson have seen some remarkable changes in this section during the past fifty years. After several years of gradual and progressive growth they have seen West Asheville united with Asheville in a move for a greater city, and business and industrial development grow from comparatively obscurity in the South to national prominence.

Conditions Change

When they came to Asheville in 1899 conditions were far different to what they are now, or even ten or fifteen years ago. Good roads, especially the network of State and national highways which have materially reduced the distance from Asheville to all parts of America, and the present street system were only realistic as a part of the hopes and plans of a growing city and section of the state. The school system as it now is had not made its advent, and educational facilities were only in the course of development.

Automobiles so far as Western North Carolina was concerned were not, and carriages and horses, the property of livery stables and private owners, were the only means of conveyance except the single railway line of the Southern.

So, after a comparison of conditions then and now, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson, with many other pioneer men and women of this section, willingly admit that the "good old days" were not so good when compared with the modern age.

Mr. Nicholson is one of the oldest Citizen ubscribers in the State, having read the paper for years.

Married 64 Years

Here we have Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Nicholson, of 6 Mildred avenue, West Asheville, whose combined ages total 163 years. They will celebrate their 64th wedding anniversary October 8. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson came to Asheville from Transylvania in 1899, 31 years ago. For many years, he was engaged in business here. The couple are two of the oldest Citizen subscribers in Western North Carolina. —Staff Photo by Michael.

Asheville citizen September 14, 1930

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1936

FUNERAL RITES WILL BE TODAY

West Asheville Man, 88, Had Lived Here For 40 Years

Funeral services for James Harrison Nicholson, 88, widely known West Asheville resident who died early yesterday morning at his home, 6 Mildred avenue, will be conducted at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at Calvary Baptist church.

The Rev. J. B. Groce, the Rev. E. Nane Starnes, the Rev. J. R. Owen and Captain H. M. Jones will officiate. Burial will be in Green Hills cemetery. The body will lie in state at the church from 2 o'clock until the hour of burial.

Active pallbearers are to be A. C. Rhudy, J. D. Dermid, W. E. Lyday, J. A. Sluder, H. A. Graham, C. A. McLean. Honorary pallbearers: E. P. White, Dr. P. B. Ort, Judge R. M. Wells, Zeb Curtis, Don Young, W. E. Shuford, J. D. Sallade, Cleveland Franklin, H. A. Fuller, C. R. Steelman, C. A. Robeson, Homer Davis, Anson Brown, Fred chael, E. R. Glenn, F. C. Johnson, G. R. Murphy, M. A. Farlow, R. V. Evans, J. W. Hedge, J. W. McElroy, M. W. Hamrick, C. H. Miller, H. W. Elliott, W. T. Duncan, Percy Franklin, L. D. Warren, C. E. Wood, W. P. Miller, G. W. Fairchild, L. G. Miller. Flower bearers are to be Misses Virginia Seay, Jean Swett, Wanda Rhudy, Letia McKinney, Hazel Nicholson, and Virginia Sluder.

Surviving Mr. Nicholson are three sons, G. P., D. M. and J. R. Nicholson, all of Asheville; one daughter, Mrs. Lulu McKinney, of Asheville; five brothers, F. M. and H. P. Nicholson, of Henderson county, A. S. and J. E. Nicholson, of West Asheville, and A. P. Nicholson of Greenville, S. C.; and one sister, Mrs. Maurice Rickman, of Greenville.

Mr. Nicholson came to West Asheville from his father's farm near Brevard about 40 years ago. For 26 years he was in the grocery business in West Asheville and was the first resident of West Asheville to have lights, telephone and water in his home.

Dunn-Groce funeral home is in charge.

J. R. NICHOLSON

Friday, November 16, 1951

100-PER-CENTERS—Teachers, lunch room attendants and janitors of Hall Fletcher Junior High School—all 27 of them—reported 100 per cent to the Red Cross Blood Center this afternoon to donate blood for Americans fighting in Korea. Meanwhile, the some 500 students at the school, impressed by their teachers' response to the nation-wide appeal for blood went home for the afternoon to sell their parents and friends on the idea of making a contribution. Shown registering with Mrs. Horace G. Posey are, from left to right, Marvin Nockow, Mrs. Frances Brown, Mrs. Clara Silvey, Miss Jean Brown, Miss Betty Robinson and Mrs. Sylvia Airheart.

West Asheville People

O

THE ASHEVILLE TIMES

'GOLD STAR' MOTHER OF ASHEVILLE TELLS OF TRIP TO FRANCE

An account of the pilgrimage of American war mothers and widows to the graves of sons and husbands who gave their lives in France at least 12 years ago, was related to The Times Wednesday by Mrs. Emma A. Ogilvie, 1334 Haywood road.

Mrs. Ogilvie returned to her home here last Sunday after completing her pilgrimage to the grave of her son, Lester W. Ogilvie, buried in the Oise-Aisne cemetery. Sgt Ogilvie was killed near Soissons Aug. 25, 1918, by shellfire.

The picture of the bereaved mothers and widows, kneeling before graves of loved ones they had not seen for many years, was a touching one. Many mothers broke down completely when they arrived at the cemetery, Mrs. Ogilvie said, but the beauty of the place, the thoughtfulness of the U. S. Government in providing everything for the mothers' comfort, made it less painful.

"It was hard to believe that our sons had given their lives on that site," Mrs. Ogilvie said. "Poppies were blooming everywhere. The grass was very green and the white crosses, 6,000 of them, made a scene of beauty hard to imagine."

Mrs. Ogilvie's greatest impression of the pilgrimage was of the kindness and thoughtfulness of the government, and of the army officers who had the mothers in charge during their two weeks in France.

From the moment the "gold star" mothers arrived in New York, to start their pilgrimage, until they returned, the women had not a thought nor a care about the trip, she said.

Everything was provided. Their laundry was done for them. Bills and tips were paid. They were taken everywhere without confusion. For each group of women, Mrs. Ogilvie explained, there were provided an officer, a guide, a nurse, a physician and an interpreter.

Displays Medals.

Mrs. Ogilvie displayed the identification card furnished by the government. It was contained in a transparent envelope, written in English on one side, and in French on the other, bidding the reader give courteous treatment and assistance if necessary to the bearer She showed also two medals, one presented the mothers by the U. S Lines, which transported them, and the other by the government. One of the medals had a gold star in solid gold.

Mrs. Ogilvie showed also a copy of a poem which she read to other members of the pilgrimage during her trip across on the S S Roosevelt. Capt. Fried heard her read the poem and had the ship's press strike 150 copies for the others, she explained.

The pilgrims were taken to the best hotels in Paris. They were given sight-seeing tours of the city, went to Versailles and to Fontainebleau, and they were taken on an extensive tour of the battlefield country. They were given ample time to themselves for shopping and individual sight-seeing.

Divided Into Groups.

In the group going to Oise-Aisne cemetery there were only 19 women Before leaving Paris, the pilgrims were divided into groups, according to the cemetery they wished to visit

When they arrived at Oise-Aisne Mrs. Ogilvie said, 19 American flags were fluttering from 19 crosses, the graves to be visited by the 19 women. Each pilgrims was then presented with a beautiful wreath, furnished by the government, to be placed on the graves.

The mothers were left to themselves when they reached the cemetery.

Mrs. Ogilvie said her group spent two mornings and three afternoons at the cemetery. Nearby, the government had erected a pretty tea room where they could rest and get refreshment. The trip, she said, could not have been made more pleasant.

Visit Roosevelt Grave.

When they were ready to leave, she continued, a Frenchman presented them with a large quantity of flowers, to be strewn as a farewell on the graves. They took other flowers to the grave of Quentin Roosevelt on their way back to Paris.

Mrs. Ogilvie came to Asheville six years ago. She is a widow, her husband having died about 15 years ago. Her son, Lester, was in Butler, Pa.,

Asheville Times August 6, 1930

Small-business owner heads chamber board

y Mark Barrett
BARRETT@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

ASHEVILLE — Leaders of the sheville Area Chamber of Commerce really meant it when hey decided a few years ago that he chamber's top position hould alternate between someone from a small business and omeone from a large one.

Alice io Oglesby, head of io esign & illustration, became hair of the chamber board during the chamber's annual meeting Monday night at the Grove 'ark Inn.

Oglesby said the company as one part-time worker beides herself. She replaces Michael Willet, regional president for BB&T Corp., a Winston-Salem-based company that is among the nation's 20 largest banks.

Oglesby said her company may be the smallest in the chamber's history to be home to the head of its board.

Rotating the job "keeps the dialogue open" between people

Please see CHAMBER on B3

Visit CITIZEN-TIMES.com for a photo gallery.

JOHN COUTLAKIS/JCOUTLAKIS@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

Florence Scarborough, left, and her husband Steve of BB&T bank, and Sharon Owen of Sisters of Mercy are among the large crowd socializing during the 113th annual meeting of the Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce that features an awards dinner at the Grove Park Inn.

CHAMBER: Membership holding steady

ontinued from B1

vho work at large businesses and those at small nes, she said.

That interest in small usiness is one of the reasons the chamber's membership has held steady at bout 2,000 during a bad conomy while those of nany other chambers has allen 10 percent or more, Oglesby and Willett said.

People at small businesses "saw the chamber s a way to sort of give lift o their businesses, help et them off the ground," Willett said.

Also Monday, the hamber named:

- Bob Kendrick, owner of Kendrick & Associates, Small Business Leader of the Year in the category of 15 or fewer employees and Michael hore, partner at FLS Energy, Small Business eader of the Year in the ategory of 16 or more employees.
- Celeste Collins, executive director of On-Track Financial Services, ecipient of the Athena Award, given to an advocate of women in business.
- Mark Rosenstein, vinner of the William A.V. Cecil Leadership Award, given to a leader in the tourism industry. Rosenstein is the former owner of the Marketplace Restaurant.
- Pat Smith, retired executive director of the Community Foundation of Western North Carolina, recipient of the Asheville Savings Bank Excellence in Public Service Award.
- Former state Rep. Wilma Sherrill recipient of the Mission Hospitals Good Health-Good Business Award for her efforts to raise funds for the N.C. Center for Health and Wellness at UNC Asheville.
- Pat Fugate Hock of Progress Energy and co-chair of the chamber's fundraising campaign the chamber's Volunteer of the Year.

Also recognized was Rick Lutovsky, who is retiring in September at the end of 10 years as chamber president and chief executive officer.

Before the meeting, Willett praised Lutovsky's work on several public policy issues and, with others, to get the chamber's new building on Merrimon Avenue constructed.

JOHN COUTLAKIS/JCOUTLAKIS@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

Alice Oglesby is the news head of the Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce board.

Ashe. Citizen Sept. 29, 1912

Store of Henry J. Olive

HENRY J. OLIVE.

General Merchandise.

The evolution of the general merchandise store of the town, to the modern department store of the city, is a most natural one, and nowhere has this been better illustrated than in the history of the establishment of Henry J. Olive, located in the western part of the city just at the entrance to Smith's bridge on the French Broad river.

Fourteen years ago Mr. Olive began business on a modest scale, dealing in general merchandise and country produce, but he has long since outgrown the country store period of his career, and now occupies three buildings in a group. The largest of these is 50x80 feet, is of modern construction and contains 4,000 feet of well lighted and ventilated floor space, stocked with as choice a selection of groceries, hardware, dry goods, clothing, hats, caps, shoes, millinery, ladies' ready-made wear, notions and everything kept in a high-grade department store. The other buildings, 25x40 and 25x60, are used for the most part for reserve stock and the heavier articles handled, such as hay, grain, seeds, feed and hardware. Mr. Olive also has a branch store in West Asheville, near the terminus of the street railway line and this venture has been most successful, having as its patrons the most discriminating housewives of that growing suburb. It is his intention, next year, to open a line of improved agricultural implements, for which he has a constant demand. Mr. Olive is not of that class of merchants who sit idly by waiting for customers to come to him, but is a hustler and is constantly on the go. Although a large part of his trade comes from the farmers, his place being particularly convenient for them, he has also built up a large city business, the entire community being covered by a most excellent delivery system, to which an automobile has recently been added. Being in the suburbs, where rents and other expenses are comparatively low, he is able to sell at most reasonable prices and people are beginning to grasp this fac, to their advantage. It is not the fine store, but the prices that attract in these days of expensive living. Mr. Olive is a native of Wake county, but has lived in Asheville for the past 20 years and has been actively identified with the growth of the city, fully keeping pace with it in his own enterprize.

Asheville Citizen September 29, 1912

264 JAN

HENRY J. OLIVE

GENERAL

MERCHANDISE

546 West Haywood St.

(Smith's Bridge.)

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Telephone connection.

E0.05

$5 in checks good for 10c

$10 in checks good for

25c, $15 in checks

good for 45c. in trade

264 JAN

HENRY J. OLIVE
GENERAL
MERCHANDISE
546 West Haywood St.
(Smith's Bridge.)
ASHEVILLE, N. C.
Telephone connection.

E0.05

$5 in checks good for 10c
$10 in checks good for 25c, $15 in checks
good for 45c in trade

ASHEVILLE GAZETTE-NEWS.

Dr. P. B. Orr.

Dr. P. B. Orr is a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, class of 1901, and has been in active practice in this city ever since. He is a member of the staff of the Asheville Hospital, and of the Buncombe County Medical Society.

Dr. P.B. Orr is a graduate of Jefferson Medical College, class of 1901. He has been in active practice in this city ever since. He is a member of the staff of the Asheville Hospital, and of the Buncombe County Medical Society.

Asheville Gazette News Mid-Winter Edition February 1905

Aug. 7 948 Subscriptions $33,000.00
For a New Mission Hospital

WATCH IT GROW

The New Mission Hospital Acknowledges the Following Subscriptions received through Aug. 6th of $10.00 and over and all received Aug. 7th above $5.00. Watch the list grow. Have You Subscribed Yet?

Mrs. Howard M. Baker	$ 1,000.00
Mar. D. C. Waddell	1,000.00
Mrs. Tench Coxe	1,000.00
Mr. Brewster Chapman	1,000.00
Guy Weaver	10.00
J. M. Roberts	15.00
J. A. Sinclair	25.00
Burton & Holt	200.00
N. A. Henck	20.00
Florence A. Bishop	75.00
Citizen Co.	100.00
Gazette-News Co.	100.00
Mrs. J. E. Woodcock	100.00
W. Vance Brown	200.00
Mrs. T. Settle	200.00
Miss G. Belknap	200.00
Mrs. J. J. Brown	200.00
Miss E. Johnston	250.00
S. Lipinsky	250.00
Mr. and Mrs. Philip Henry	500.00
Miss Fanny Patton	500.00
Dr. H. H. Briggs	500.00
C. N. Maxwell	10.00
A. C. Goodman	12.00
Smith's Drug Store	100.00
S. M. Stevens	25.00
J. A. Perry	25.00
Paul H. Ringer	50.00
Dr. and Mrs. Jordan	300.00
D. Ledbetter	20.00
F. Webb Griffith	25.00
Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lord	25.00
Dr. and Mrs. Jas. B. Greene	100.00
R. P. Hayes	100.00
C. Rankin	50.00
Houston Merriman	40.00
Kate Smith	10.00
Mrs. Robert Johnston	50.00
Mrs. J. A. Baker	25.00
R. W. Hammerslough	10.00
Inland Press	50.00
L. L. Alexander	20.00
Jos C. Bradford	10.00
J. C. Wilbar	10.00
A. R. Johnson & Co	10.00
Mrs. H. J. Cartwright	12.00
Harriet Cushman Wilkie	20.00
Ralph B. Arbogast	10.00
Mrs. C. A. Raysor	10.00
L. M. McCormick	50.00
Allen C. McDonald	10.00
Training School, Mission Hospital	44.00
Ike Swartzberg	15.00
L. H. Pollock	10.00
A. H. Katz	10.00
Nichols Shoe Co.	100.00
L. Blomberg	50.00
M. L. Rock	10.00
Bennie Argantar	10.00
A. B. Hare	10.00
V. Fleishman	10.00
H. L. Finkelstein	50.00
J. M. Lorick	10.00
Harry L. Parker	12.00
Jno. H. Powell	100.00
M. R. Campbell	25.00
A. H. Malone	10.00
K. R. Millard	25.00
Ottis Green Hardware Co.	50.00
S. J. Woodcock	100.00
J. C. Pritchard	50.00
Mrs. J. C. Pritchard	25.00
Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Rollins	25.00
Julius C. Martin	25.00
M. Lipinsky	20.00
Mrs. H. A. Gudger	15.00
J. E. Bradford	10.00
Lillie B. Lance	15.00
Capt. and Mrs. J. E. Ray	50.00
A. & E. T. R. R. Co.	100.00
Bell	50.00
Mr. and Mrs. Jno. A. Camp-A. Samuels	20.00
Hugh C. Brown	25.00
A. Blomberg	25.00
Alpha Ira Ruby	10.00
C. R. Fogus	25.00
S. Sternberg & Co.	150.00
Fortune & Roberts	20.00
J. M. Westall	100.00
Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Honess	25.00
O. G. Shackleton	10.00
Mrs. A. D. Sproat	10.00
S. O. Bradley	20.00
Vonno L. Gudger	10.00
L. B. McBrayer	100.00
R. W. Betts	10.00
H. L. Nettles	10.00
S. J. East	10.00
Sam J. Phillipson	25.00
A. W. Calloway	25.00
M. A. Kelly	50.00
L. A. Merrimon	75.00
Yates & McGuire	100.00
Wm. W. West	10.00
H. Rodwood & Co.	50.00
J. H. Law	50.00
W. H. Westall	60.00
E. W. Grove	1,000.00
Wm. J. East	15.00
J. M. Childs	10.00
Sam Stern	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Hewitt	250.00
M. L. Stevens	10.00
A. E. Rankin	20.00
J. H. Manley	10.00
Miss Jane Oakley	25.00
E. W. Grove, Jr.	50.00
S. A. Lynch	100.00
H. D. Child	100.00
W. A. Newell	10.00
M. E. Child	25.00
Mrs. James Little	25.00
F. Zimmerman & Son	10.00
S. Finestein	10.00
Winston Walden	20.00
Frank S. Foster	25.00
S. I. Blomberg	20.00
W. C. Howerton	10.00
R. E. Mumpower	15.00
H. A. Dunham	50.00
J. M. Parker	20.00
Dr. A. T. Pritchard	25.00
Wm. J. East	10.00
R. U. Garrett	25.00
Mrs. Josie V. Law	10.00
Peoples Steam and Dye Works	10.00
T. Hardegg	10.00
W. R. Nixon	10.00
Dr. Alice Johnston	10.00
Annie Thompson	10.00
Miss Euphia Owen	12.00
Mrs. Ella W. Nash	60.00
S. P. Chapman	50.00
R. W. Patton	12.00
Donald W. Randolph	10.00
F. E. Johnston	25.00
Chas. G. Lee	25.00
Ed. R. Bawn's Bible Class	25.00
W. T. Weaver	100.00
Harmon A. Miller	100.00
D. S. Ellas	10.00
Ed. W. Whiteside	10.00
Louise S. Williamson	10.00
W. R. Williamson	25.00
C. M. Chedester	10.00
G. Alexander	10.00
L. L. Whitehead	10.00
R. R. Williams	20.00
Asheville Fish Co.	15.00
Brown Undertaking Co.	15.00
Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Long	15.00
David H. Fater	10.00
P. E. Hare	10.00
Lorenze C. Ray	20.00
Allison Drug Store	24.65
Mrs. Daisy Coxe Wright	500.00
Dr. Silvio Von Ruck	100.00
C. M. Miller	10.00
Miss Mary Stewart	15.00
Miss Lea V. Stevens	10.00
H. V. King	10.00
J. A. Porter	10.00
T. S. Morrison	100.00
Miss Florence Stephens	10.00
Gaston Mears	100.00
Chas. A. Webb	100.00
Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Clayton	10.00
Elbert C. Chambers	10.00
Miss Q. M. Carson	10.00
Zeb F. Curtis	50.00
Hills Market	50.00
A. K. Orr	25.00
Dr. D. E. Sevier	25.00
Mrs. J. G. Merrimon	20.00
Miss Helen Murphy	10.00
Mrs. Isabella Rose Field	10.00
Felmet Bros.	25.00
G. W. Dorman	10.00
Miss R. L. Cocke	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Reynolds	25.00
Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Minor	500.00
Cash from Rose'Craggon	32.00
Baseball Game	59.50
S. T. Logan	20.00
J. J. Mackey	10.00
F. Reid Russell	10.00
J. E. Fulgum	20.00
T. M. Mashburn	25.00
Estell Webb	12.00
Calvin B. Waller	10.00
G. H. Wright	25.00
V. F. Hawkins	10.00
H. K. Northrop	10.00
Harry Howell	25.00
W. H. Zimmerman	15.00
Asheville Dry Goods Co.	25.00
David Jacobson	10.00
F. T. Hunt	10.00
Franklin Else	10.00
F. Stikeleather	25.00
Francis M. Wright	50.00
Asheville Cotton Mills	100.00
H. B. Zagier	50.00
Miss Nannie Alexander	10.00
A. C. Payne	15.00
C. E. Graham, Greenville	100.00
W. E. Logan	100.00
Alice Dougherty	10.00
W. R. Carter	10.00
Miss Mattie Harris	10.00
J. E. Carpenter	10.00
Mrs. Deschler	10.00
Weaver V. Wilson	10.00
Mrs. A. B. Lewis	10.00
R. M. Nolan	10.00
H. J. Olive	100.00
J. L. Welch	15.00
B. M. Jones	20.00
J. W. Glazer	10.00
J. W. Wolfe	50.00
Dr. and Mrs. Hunt	50.00
R. E. Bowles	5.00
Marion E. Ely	10.00
Asheville Tannery	150.00
L. L. Merchant	15.00
W. H. Bird	25.00
T. P. Johnston & Co.	25.00
Brown Book Co.	50.00
Noland Brown Co.	50.00
An Earnest Citizen	5.00
Mrs. Edwin D. Keeling	5.00
Mrs. Katherin E. Banks	5.00
J. R. Patterson & Son	25.00
Jno. M. Acee	5.00
O. R. Hanger	5.00
Polly E. Morrow	5.00
H. W. Plummer	50.00
R. R. Rawles	25.00
E. M. Lyda	25.00
Mrs. M. J. Bradfield	5.00
Wm. Thos. J. Revell	5.00
W. R. Ballard	5.00
Mrs. Chas. K. Uber	5.00
Miss Moore	5.00
D. R. Buttle	5.00
Mrs. K. W. Smith	5.00
A. B. Brown	5.00
Jno. Hannon	10.00
Anita Dalton	10.00
R. G. Watson	25.00
P. S. Dula	5.00
Martha H. Patton	25.00
Mrs. Chas. E. Rudd	50.00
Thos. L. Lawrence	50.00
Jno. E. Barnard	10.00
E. G. Sawyer	50.00
Burt E. Nichols	5.00
C. P. Rymer	10.00
Jas. P. Sawyer	100.00
P. B. Orr	50.00
L. B. Shelton	5.00
F. B. Ingle	5.00
Z. T. Ledbetter	5.00
Otto Cooper	5.00
R. B. Sands	25.00
Union Plumbing Co.	25.00
R. D. Moore	10.00
J. Brannagan	5.00
Susan C. Dukes	5.00
F. T. H. Woods	5.00
Katherine Birkemyer	5.00
F. Birkemeyer	5.00
Richard E. Kibler	20.00
R. C. Grinestaff	25.00
Employees Carolina Mch. Co.	15.00
Zeman Weaver	10.00
Gus Galloway	5.00
W. A. Peebles	5.00
A. G. Barnett	10.00
Ed. H. Brown	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Brown	25.00
Mrs. Grace S. Ray	10.00
M. T. Rhinehart	5.00
H. C. Buckner	10.00
M. M. Sullivan	25.00
P. A. Donnahoe	25.00
J. T. Bledsoe	25.00
F. R. Baker	10.00
C. T. Hawk	20.00
T. D. McCall	10.00
J. C. Lipe	5.00
R. J. Luther	5.00
R. J. Dowlin	5.00
Lillie M. Holcombe	5.00
J. P. Kitchen	10.00
G. S. Arthur	10.00
Colored People Subscribing to Fund.
W. P. Brooks	5.00
Jno. W. Walker	10.00
Jas. Lance	10.00
Jno. R. Reyls	10.00
Leo Johnston	10.00
Rufus Weaver	10.00
Samuel S. Patton	10.00
Scofield Miller	10.00
Louis Clowney	10.00
Sarah Murrough	10.00
J. A. Wilson	10.00
A. H. Gaston	10.00
Joseph Bynum	5.00
Rev. R. J. Martin	5.00
Jno. F. Pearson	5.00
Jno. R. Fowler	5.00
Chas. Reynolds	5.00
Ed. Young	5.00
Jno. Young	5.00
Geo. C. Justus	5.00
H. F. Pearson	5.00
A. T. Schaeffer	5.00

Asheville Gazette News August 8, 1913

Asheville Citizen SATURDAY, DECEMBER 7, 2002

Community remembers a quiet historical figure

Visiting our past

After death, people are long remembered — as responses to the story about Dr. P.B. Orr, printed here two weeks ago, have shown.

Rob Neufeld

Whereas certain individuals affect history in ways that make the textbooks, others permeate the future with lives led meaningfully if not famously.

Dr. Porter Bynum Orr of West Asheville delivered 6,000 babies in 46 years, starting in 1901.

He also removed people's goiters with a high-voltage, low-current device; administered his own anesthesia for tonsillitis patients; and made regular house calls to sufferers of chronic and terminal conditions.

Nita Neal Jenkins recalls the awe with which she had viewed Dr. Orr's residence at 574 Haywood Road in 1914.

"Father and I walked to the end of the (street)car line to get some hardware," she relates. "There was an iron gate in front of the house, which looked very large. There was a dog in the yard that attracted me because I love animals. I went up to the gate and stared in for a long time until my father led me away."

The 13-room brick house (the Orrs later enlarged it; now it accommodates Rainbow Mountain School) was unusual in both its size and its location on the new main drag.

Inside, it contained many fine furnishings, as Jenkins noted, having befriended Orr's daughter, Sarah, at Aycock School. It also embraced a household that came under Dr. Orr's protectiveness and his wife Nancy's liberality.

Porter Bynum Orr Jr., six years Sarah's junior, recalls being served his mother's biscuits in the breakfast nook. "The soft insides made excellent missiles when wadded into hard balls. ... Even our daddy entered into a battle occasionally."

Generally, papa Orr, when not on call, was engaged in more serious activities, particularly raising livestock and cultivating plants.

"My father was born only seven years after the War of Northern Aggression," P.B. Jr. writes in a memoir. "His dad died when my dad was only nine years old. ... Dad learned how to survive. He wanted to produce as much of what his family ate as he possibly could."

Despite the rambunctious disorder around his hearth, Dr. Orr lent a great deal of order to his world: bringing unimpeachable trustworthiness to his intimate profession; maintaining livestock in an urbanizing community (Joe Creasman's Haywood Road cow-pasturing has become legendary); keeping his first son, Bynum, out of the military, despite his son's wishes; and wearing a homegrown rose in his lapel every day.

As with the secure-in-their-standing upper class, Dr. Orr's family values did not include a strict adherence to social conventions.

Nita Jenkins recalls Nancy Orr wrapping Sarah in bulgy bandages for a Halloween mummy costume and then exclaiming, "You look pregnant!"

Dr. Orr let his spitz dog lie all over him, shedding white hair on his suit, while the family stood ready to grab a brush and whisk him clean if emergency called.

Rob Neufeld writes the weekly local history feature, "Visiting Our Past," for the Citizen-Times, and may be reached at 251-1415 or rneufeld@charter.net.

P.B. Orr Jr./
SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

Dr. P.B. Orr of West Asheville, shown here in a photo taken toward the end of his life.

Asheville Citizen SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 16, 2002

West Asheville beech tree has presided over area's growth

Visiting our past

In urban West Asheville's early days, having a baby usually meant sending for Dr. P.B. Orr, who would jump in his buggy, driven by his man, Joe Christian, and make house calls, day and night. As he and his town prospered, Orr built a residence at 574 Haywood Road, one of the first that far north on that street. He built it himself.

Rob Neufeld

Dr. Orr made the interior bricks of his new structure (now Rainbow Mountain School) from clay scooped from the banks of Smith Mill Creek at his first West Asheville residence on Louisiana Avenue. He also constructed a greenhouse (no longer standing), entered from the basement, and planted his acreage, which had extended from Haywood Road to State Street.

"There was a big apple orchard," Orr's daughter, Ava Orr Keener, said in a 1991 interview, "and we had a vineyard and cherry trees and all the fruits that grew in this area, and then a vegetable garden, too." Orr's cows, kept in an adjacent barn, had been pastured on his creekside property on Louisiana Avenue, and Joe Christian's leading of the cows there had been a Pied Piper affair in the 1920s, as neighborhood children tagged along.

Although the Orr house has undergone changes, it has survived better than most historic structures. Still, Keener was pained by the loss of a heritage established by parents she'd worshipped. "I don't look in that direction too much," she noted regarding the house.

The being that continues to look over the house — and that had witnessed its genesis — is a giant copper beech tree, which has now gained the distinction of "Treasured Tree" status from Quality Forward. The beech tree has outlived its contemporaries on Haywood Road — the Balm of Gilead trees that had given the Trinity United Methodist Church across the way its 1871 name (Balm Grove); and the legendary hanging tree on Dorchester Avenue.

Orr's beech has witnessed the city's electric streetcars coming as far as Brevard Road and their dismantling in 1937. It has witnessed trips to the A&P for staples such as flour and sugar when most food had been home-grown and trips to Ingles, after large gardens had become things of the past. It has witnessed the Great Depression, when Dr. Orr didn't even bother billing patients who couldn't afford to pay.

For many years, although Orr had an office in the Drhumor Building downtown, he also had one in his home. His home was his castle. He always was there for meals, he loved and closely supervised his children, he devoted large amounts of time to his gardens, and he read. He read mostly the Bible and Bible commentaries, Keener said, and, as time went on, grew more and more wary of influences outside his well-ordered, flourishing and caring domain.

Calendar features trees

Quality Forward's calendar of treasured trees, photographed by Benjamin Porter, includes the copper beech at Rainbow Mountain School. The calendar is available at Quality Forward, 29 Page Ave., Asheville, and at other locations. There will be a sale of the calendar and of photo prints at Barnes & Noble, from 3 to 5 p.m., Sat., Dec. 7. Also on hand is a T-shirt, produced by West Asheville Library, that sports a map of treasured tree locations. Call 254-1776 for more information.

Benjamin Porter SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

This 100-plus-year-old copper beech tree in on the site of Rainbow Mountain School, formerly Dr. P.B. Orr's residence.

Rob Neufeld writes the weekly local history feature "Visiting Our Past," for the Citizen-Times, and maybe reached at 251-1415 or rneufeld@charter.net.

N.C. -Asheville - Biography - Orr, Dr. P. B.

Asheville Citizen
June 7, 1947

DR. P. B. ORR

DEATH CLAIMS DR. P. B. ORR IN HOSPITAL HERE

Funeral For Prominent Physician Will Be Held Tomorrow

Dr. Porter Bynum Orr, about 75, of 574 Haywood road, West Asheville, prominent Asheville physician, died at noon yesterday in a local hospital following an illness of three months. He suffered a cerebral thrombosis about three months ago.

Dr. Orr, who spent his life in service for others, both professionally and personally, had not taken a vacation in 40 years. He was a member of Calvary Baptist church and was devoted to the church and to his family and home.

His love for flowers had given him his main outlet from work and his rose garden is considered one of the finest gardens in this section.

Practiced Here 47 Years

Dr. Orr was born on the Biltmore estate, the son of the late John P. and Sarah Jarrett Orr, both of whom were members of prominent Western North Carolina families. He graduated from Bingham Military academy, Louisville Medical college, Louisville, Ky., and from Jefferson Medical college, Philadelphia. He had practiced his profession here for 47 years.

Surviving are the widow, the former Miss Nancy Emmaline Clarke, of Asheville, whom Dr. Orr married in 1902; three sons, Bynum DeCosta Orr, of Asheville, P. B. Orr, Jr., of Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Clarke Putnam Orr, of Abelene, Tex.; two daughters, Miss Sarah Orr, of New York city, and Mrs. Frank H. Keener, of Asheville; four grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. W. E. Britt and Mrs. E. C. Jarrett, both of Asheville, and a niece, Mrs. Allen Riddick, of Asheville.

Funeral Tomorrow

Funeral services will be held in Calvary Baptist church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock with the Rev. T. A. Groce, the Rev. J. B. Grice, the Rev. Julian A. Bandy, and the Rev. Colonel D. Bessinger officiating. Interment will be in Jarrett private cemetery, the older portion of Green Hills cemetery.

Pallbearers will be Oscar Stanton, J. L. Martin, Walter Ruby, N. W. Hamrick, Jr., Guy Brookshire, and H. L. Bishop.

Honorary pallbearers will be members of the Buncombe County Medical society.

The body will lie in state at the church from 2 p. m. tomorrow until time for the services.

Morris-Gearing funeral home is in charge of arrangements.

DR. P. B. ORR

Funeral services for Dr. Porter Bynum Orr, about 75, prominent Asheville physician, were conducted in Calvary Baptist church yesterday.

Dr. Orr, who resided at 574 Haywood road, died at noon Friday in a local hospital following an illness of about three months.

The Rev. T. A. Groce, the Rev. J. B. Grice, the Rev. Julian A. Bandy, and the Rev. Colonel D. Bessinger officiated. Interment was in Jarrett private cemetery.

Dr. Orr is survived by the widow, the former Miss Nancy Emmaline Clarke, of Asheville; three sons, Bynum DeCosta Orr, of Asheville, P. B. Orr, Jr., of Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Clarke Putnam Orr, of Abelene, Tex.; two daughters, Miss Sarah Orr, of New York city, and Mrs. Frank H. Keener, of Asheville; four grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. W. E. Britt and Mrs. E. C. Jarrett, both of Asheville, and a niece, Mrs. Allen Riddick, of Asheville.

NORTH CAROLINA ROOMS
Pack Memorial Public Library

DR. P. B. ORR DIES; HAD PRACTICED 47 YEARS IN THIS AREA

Ash. Times 6/7/42

Dr. Porter Bynum Orr, about 75, Asheville physician, died in a hospital here yesterday after an illness of three months. He had been ill since suffering a cerebral thrombosis.

Dr. Orr had been engaged in medical practice here for 47 years and during that time had devoted his energies to active service for others. He had not taken a vacation since 1907.

A member of Calvary Baptist church, he was devoted to church, family, and home and his rose garden which is considered one of the finest in this area. It was through his love for flowers that he found his chief relaxation from the duties of professional life.

Born on the Biltmore estate, Dr. Orr was the son of the late John P. and Sarah Jarrett Orr, both members of prominent Western North Carolina families. He was educated at the old Bingham military academy, Louisville Medical college, and Jefferson Medical college in Philadelphia.

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow at 3 o'clock in Calvary Baptist church with the Rev. T. A. Groce, the Rev. J. B. Grice, the Rev. Julian A. Bandy, and the Rev. Colonel D. Bessinger officiating. Interment will be in Jarrett private cemetery, the older portion of Green Hills cemetery.

Surviving are the widow, the former Miss Nancy Emmaline Clarke, of Asheville, whom Dr. Orr married in 1902; three sons, Bynum DeCosta Orr, of Asheville, P. B. Orr, Jr., of Oak Ridge, Tenn., and Clarke Putnam Orr, of Abelene, Tex.; two daughters, Miss Sarah Orr, of New York city and Mrs. Frank H. Keener, of Asheville; four grandchildren; two sisters, Mrs. W. E. Britt and Mrs. E. C. Jarrett, both of Asheville, and a niece, Mrs. Allen Riddick, of Asheville.

Funeral Tomorrow

Pallbearers will be Oscar Stanton, J. L. Martin, Walter Ruby, N. W. Hamrick, Jr., Guy Brookshire, and H. L. Bishop.

Honorary pallbearers will be members of the Buncombe County Medical society.

The body will lie in state at the church from 2 p. m. tomorrow until time for the services.

Morris-Gearing funeral home is in charge of arrangements.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C. 3
Saturday, July 27, 1963

Osborne, Former Publisher, Printing Firm Owner, Dies

Samuel Brooks Osborne, 83, of 228 Montford Ave., owner and operator of the Osborne Printing Co. until his retirement 12 years ago, died in his home at 3 p. m. Friday after a long illness.

A native of Brevard, he was a son of the late W. K. and Mary Thomas Osborne. He was a former publisher of The Brevard News, which later became The Transylvania Times.

Mr. Osborne came to Asheville in 1926 and founded The West Asheville News, now known as The Asheville News. At one time Mr. Osborne also operated a newspaper in Andrews.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Ella Monroe Osborne of the home, two sons, Cameron B. and Keith, both of Asheville; a daughter, Mrs. H. Guy Hensley of Asheville; a brother, Dr. V. W. Osborne of Atlanta, Ga.; a sister, Mrs. J. K. Mills of Brevard, and four grandchildren.

Services will be held at 2:30 p. m. Sunday in Morris-Hendon-Black Funeral Home chapel, with the Rev. C. A. Zabriskie officiating. Burial will follow in Green Hills Cemetery.

C. B. OSBORNE

Drs. Ed J. Evans, J. E Owens and B. L. Frink

DENTISTS

Over Imperial Theatre—32½ Patton Avenue

Have just opened modern offices for the benefit of all who wish to take advantage of our best services at moderate prices. Thorough examinations and price quotations are free to all. Come to see us.

Dr. Ed Evans has a record of dental work giving good service for 22 years, 12 years of this time in Asheville.

Dr. J. E. Owen, successfully operated a 7-chair office for several years in Montana.

Dr. B. L. Frink also has had 9 years valuable experience in North Carolina and was formerly with Dr. Ed J. Evans, in Asheville.

WE ARE OPEN FROM 8 A. M. UNTIL 8 P. M.

"GOOD TEETH MEANS GOOD HEALTH"

Asheville Citizen March 29, 1925

URGE ACTION ON AIR FIELD PLAN

Asheville Aviators Fly From Spartanburg, S. C. To This City

Dr. J. E. Owen and Donald R. Johnston, Asheville aviators, who flew from Greenville, S. C., to the Dillingham fied in the Haw Creek section yesterday morning in 40 minutes, said that if Asheville delays too long in the establishment of an airplane landing field it will likely be left off the airways map being prepared by the government.

Dr. Owen and Mr. Johnston said that at the opening of the Spartanburg flying field more than 15,000 persons were present. The aviators urged that the field be established here at once as a matter of policy in obtaining national publicity. They are flying a Waco commercial plane and have organized a new company known as the Johnston-Owen Airplane company, they said.

Asheville Times October 2, 1927

Daring Plane 'Theft' Charged To Asheville Pilot

WARRANT IS ISSUED FOR DR. OWENS AT RALEIGH

Sheriff Seeks Local Man And Two Others For Larceny

TRIO RISKS DEATH LEAVING AIRPORT

Claim Craft Attached; Indictments Will Be Sought In Case

RALEIGH, Nov. 2. (AP) Three airmen who dared death in taking off with a cold motor from a dark field early this morning in a plane technically stolen from the Sheriff of Wake County, tonight were the objects of search by county authorities who held warrants against them charging larceny of property under attachment. It was said at the courthouse that indictments would be sent to the grand jury Monday charging them with assault with a deadly weapon and carrying a concealed weapon, and that they would be held in contempt of court if they were returned.

The three men, who staged the first airplane "robbery" in the history of flying here, were named in the warrants as:

Dr. J. E. Owens, Asheville, assistant chief pilot of the Eastern Air Express' J. R. Waren, Patterson, N. J., expert employed by the Wright Aero Corporation, and Echford Hodgson, mechanic of the Air Express Line.

Dr. J. E. Owens, who practiced dentistry in Asheville for some time and is very popular here as an aviator, is well known all over the south for his expert handling of airplanes. He owned an Eaglerock plane and kept it here on the Fletcher landing field for some time and was one of the first instructors of aviation in this section of the country, some time before Asheville considered seriously the construction of an airport.

After becoming proficient in both straight and stunt flying and having acquired more than a local reputation as a pilot, Dr Owens left Asheville and "barnstormed" about the country with various air circus aggregations. He was with the Mabel Cody Flying Circus for some time, taking part in the air carnival here a year ago at the Fletcher field, now the Asheville-Hendersonville airport.

Dr. Owens has many friends in this vicinity who believe that there must be some mistake in the dispatch received relative to the story of today. Dr. Owens was a conspicuous participant in the air derby at Miami, Fla., last spring and was one of the winners in the stunt events.

Asheville Citizen November 3, 1929

THE WEATHER
NORTH CAROLINA: Probably rain and colder Monday; Tuesday fair.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZE

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1868 (AP) NEWSPAPER ASSOCIATED PRESS ASHEVILLE, N. C., MONDAY MORNING, NOVEMBER 4, 1929 12 PAGES

'DOC' OWENS JAILED IN NEW YORK FOR PLANE THEFT

Asheville Citizen November 4, 1929

GUN USED TO GET SHIP IN RALEIGH FOR HOP, CHARGE

Three Are Held For Wake County As Fugitives

SHERIFF ON WAY WITH WARRANTS

Owen Says Found Note But Could Get No Explanation

(Special To The Citizen)

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The City of Savannah, a Bellanca monoplane of the Eastern Air Express, which Sheriff N. F. Turner, of Raleigh, N. C., declared was taken from the Raleigh airport by force and at the point of a gun on Saturday, was landed at Holmes Airport, near Jackson Heights, Queens, at six o'clock today. About noon Detective Edmund Bowers, of the Astoria precinct police station, walked into the Holmes airport operations office and arrested three men on the telegraphed instructions of the Raleigh sheriff and they were locked up in the Queens County jail tonight charged with being fugitives from justice in North Carolina.

The three men, who accompanied Detective Bowers without protest, are Dr. J. E. Owens, pilot of the City of Savannah; Eckford Hodgson, co-pilot and mechanic, and John Warren of 43 Walnut Street, Belleville, N. J., who was a passenger on the plane.

The telegraphed instructions on which the three men were arrested alleged that the sheriff charged them with grand larceny, assault with deadly weapons and resisting an officer.

GO TO GET TRIO

RALEIGH, Nov. 3. (AP)—Sheriff Numa F. Turner and Deputy Sheriff Oliver Smith left Raleigh tonight for New York armed with requisition papers calling for the return to Raleigh of Dr. J. E. Owens, assistant chief pilot of the Eastern Air Express and two others to face charges of larceny of an airplane and assault with a deadly weapon.

Dr. Owen's Story

Owens said that he knew nothing about the charges, that he had merely flown the plane north in accordance with instructions from the air express company which has its terminal and headquarters at Holmes Airport.

He said that he started the trip north from Camden, S. C., on Friday, that he put the plane up at the Raleigh airport for the night on Friday and that the following morning when he arrived at the airport to resume the flight he found a note on yellow paper stuck in the plane. The note, which bore a two-cent stamp, said "Do not touch, by order of the sheriff's office." He said he asked an airport attendant about the note and not being able to get any satisfactory explanation, took off the note and flew away.

A representative of the Air Express company at Holmes Airport today said that they had been waiting for more than a week for the start of repossession proceedings on the plane by the U. S. Acceptance Corporation. He said that his company knew nothing of the sheriff's actions and that at the end of the week it was decided to move the City of Savannah north.

Although Warren was only a passenger, he was arrested, the police said, because the sheriff alleged he became an accessory when he helped start the plane. The three men, who will be arraigned this morning, insisted that they would fight extradition.

DARING TAKEOFF

(Special To The Citizen)

RALEIGH, Nov. 3. (AP)—Three men, a monoplane and a gun figured in one of the strangest narratives ever originating from a flying field, as told by Elton Lee, night watchman at the Raleigh airport.

Lee said three men came to the hangar about 2 o'clock Saturday morning and engaged him in conversation. He said they looked over the plane, "City of Savannah," and loitered about for about an hour. Suddenly, he said, one of the men drew a gun and poked it in his ribs, commanding him to keep quiet. The men rigged up a makeshift spark-plug to replace one removed from the engine's motor, started the motor and taxied out on the field, taking off immediately in the face of possible disaster from darkness and a "cold" motor.

The men in the story are Dr. J. E. Owen, former Asheville dentist and now assistant chief pilot of the Eastern Air Express; J. R. Warren, of Paterson, N. J., expert employed by the Wright Aeronautical corporation, and Echford Hodgson, Eastern Air Express mechanic. All were under arrest in New York tonight as fugitives from Justice in North Carolina.

The story has to do with the alleged "theft" Saturday of a monoplane, "City of Savannah," owned by the Eastern Air Express and under attachment by the United States Acceptance Corporation, which claimed a balance due on the purchase. The Eastern Air Express operated two other planes, "City of Raleigh" and "City of Columbia," which also were under attachment.

The "City of Savannah" was flown here Friday from Camden, S. C., by Dr. Owens. It was closely followed by "The City of Raleigh," in charge of David Betchel, of Philadelphia, reprentative of the United States Acceptance Corporation, who claimed a balance due on the three Bellanca monoplanes used by the Eastern Air Express in launching the line.

According to Mr Betchel, the planes had been ordered grounded in Camden and had been there three days when Owens gave him the slip Friday and took off in "The City of Savannah." He said he immediately followed him in "The City of Raleigh" landing at Curtiss Field airport here a few minutes after the first ship.

The ships were hangared at the airport and the two factions went to a local hotel. The credit representative claimed that there were papers for the seizure of the planes, two of which were bought on terms and another paid for. He explained he was after the paid-for plane too, in order to balance depreciation of the other two.

Dr. Owens said that the air line was willing to pay for the ships but that they had been represented as new when bought, whereas actually they had been flown for a good many hours.

Mr. Bechtel retained Clyde A. Douglass, local attorney and late Friday night took out attachment papers on both planes, Sheriff Turner posting them on the ships and deputizing Elton Lee, night watchman at the field to guard them.

About 2 o'clock in the morning, Lee said, three men appeared and engaged him in conversation. They looked over the plane, loitering for nearly an hour, the watchman said. Then one of their number put a gun in his ribs and told him to keep quiet.

Lee kept quiet.

The men took over the plane, from which a spark plug had been removed by the sheriff's men, and lacking another plug of the right size, rigged a makeshift plug for the hole. They taxied onto the field and roared off into the night.

Saturday morning the warrants were issued for the three men when it was ascertained at the hotel that they were missing, and Mr. Bechtel and his attorney appeared at the county jail and the attachment proceedings on the "City of Raleigh" vacated so that it might be moved North.

Shortly afterward it took the air under the control of a credit corporation pilot.

It is reported that indictments charging the three airmen with assault with a deadly weapon, carrying a concealed weapon and contempt of court would be handed the Wake county grand jury when it convenes tomorrow. Wake county officers already held warrants charging the men with larceny of property under attachment.

Here For Carrier Field Opening

Here are two ships and three airmen who took part yesterday in the first day's flying of an extensive program, opening Carrier Field in West Asheville as a municipal airport. From left to right is E. B. Smith, the owner of one of the visiting planes; Bonnie Rowe, noted parachute jumper and stunt flyer; Dr. J. E. Owen, of Asheville; and George Keightly, member of the famous "Early Birds," who is one of the oldest pilots in experience in the country. The program at the field will continue today and tomorrow. —Staff Photo by Michael.

Asheville Times August 31, 1930

Carrier Field Is Opened As Municipal Flying Port

Rowe, Parachute Star On Program With Pilots For Today, Monday

Carrier field on the French Broad river in West Asheville, proposed as a municipal airport for Asheville, was opened yesterday when a squadron of several planes took to the air from the port, carrying passengers and visitors on flights over the city.

Heading the list of pilots who arrived at the field yesterday were George Keightly, member of the famous "Early Birds" and one of the oldest pilots in the country, and Dr. J. E. Owen, of Asheville. Keightly flew a Wright whirlwind motor plane, while Owens piloted a J-A5 ship with a Hispano-Suiza motor.

Throughout the day crowds gathered to watch the opening flights, and a large number of automobiles were driven to the field which is within ten minutes' drive from Pack Square, going via Clingman avenue across the West Asheville bridge, out Haywood road to State street, and down State street to the field. Another route is to follow Riverview drive from Haywood road.

An exensive program of stunt and passenger flying parachute jumping and wingwalking demonstrations has been arranged for today and tomorrow, Labor Day. Pilots Owen and Keightly will remain to fly ships and several other planes will be on the field both days. Plenty of parking space has been arranged and the field will be open from in the morning until in the late afternoon.

Bonnie Rowe Is Here

As a special attraction, Bonnie Rowe, famous parachute jumper and stunt flyer who holds the All American spot parachute championship, will be at the field today and tomorrow to give several demonstrations in the air. His program will include a number of high altitude parachute leaps.

Rowe, who has performed in almost every state in the Union, and frequently has made as many as nine parachute jumps in a single week, has been in Asheville several days. He is 32 years old and made his first trip 14 years ago when he leaped 5,000 feet from a balloon over Corinth, Mississippi. Since then he has gained a wide reputation as an expert air performer and has traveled widely in this country while giving demonstrations. He won the first prize at the Cleveland air races in July, 1929, for the delayed parachute jump, the most dangerous feat yet devised for air performers.

The metaphorical expression "he dropped in," describes very well the visits Rowe makes to the home of his father and mother in Buford, Ga. Occasionally an airplane will soar high over the Georgia countryside and a man leaps out. The plane continues on to Atlanta as the white folds of a parachute unfold to take the air. Safe on the ground, the jumper folds his parachute and turns toward Gainesville.

The neighbors and friends of the Rowe family know then that a famous son has returned home to visit his father and mother.

Rowe is a friendly, modest chap of slight physique, with more records to his credit than he has inches to his heighth, and is devoted to his professional career, if risking his neck and swapping grins with the Grim Reaper can be called a profession.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN,
WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 29, 1930

ASHEVILLE PILOT WINS IN FLORIDA AIR COMPETITION

Flying an International plane powered with a 150 h. p. Hispano-Suesa motor, Dr. J. E. Owen, Asheville dentist and civilian pilot won a silver cup as first prize award in a dead-stick landing contest held in connection with the recent Miami, Florida air meet, it was announced yesterday. Dr. Owen, who has returned to Asheville to resume offices over Scrugg's Drug store, Pack Square, came to the city from Anderson, S. C., after returning the winning plane to its owner, Tony Drake, of Anderson.

Dr. Owen with other pilots toured the state of Florida by air, winning several other prizes after the Miami All American meet closed. In Tampa he won second prize in a relay race against a speedier plane than his borrowed International, and also won first place in a bombing event. In Orlando, the Asheville pilot won fifth place in a dead-stick landing meet.

Asheville Citizen January 29, 1930

Here For Carrier Field Opening

Asheville August 31, 1930

Left to right: E.B. Smith, Bonnie Rowe, J.E. Owen, George Keightly

DR. OWEN FORCED OUT OF AIR RACE IN CALIFORNIA

Dr J. E Owen, Asheville dentist-aviator, who was forced out of the Santa Monica-Cleveland handicap air derby by motor trouble on Sunday, announced last night he might enter the speed race to Cleveland next week, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Calexico, Cal.

Dr Owen left Calexico yesterday for Santa Monica where he expects a new motor shipped to him from Detroit.

Dr Owen and Luther Johnson left Asheville about two weeks ago to take part in the races and later in the derby at Cleveland. Johnson is flying a plane owned by Robert Turner, of Asheville

Asheville Citizen Aug. 31, 1931

Dr. Owen Announces His Candidacy For Congress

Will Run On 'Popular Representation Platform'

Dr. J. E. Owen, Asheville dentist and aviator, yesterday announced his candidacy for congress on a "Popular Representation Platform." Congressman Zebulon Weaver represents this district and it is assumed that he will be a candidate again at the Democratic primary on June 4, 1934.

In explaining his "Popular Representation Platform," Dr. Owen said: "Up to now, the people have listened to the voices of silver-tongued politicians. This time, the candidate will listen to the voice of the people. Their problems and my problems are alike. We have lived together our entire lives. They know me and I know them. As their representative and knowing their wants, for their wants are my wants, my representation of their wants becomes comprehensive representation. Beginning with this thought, I have enlarged upon the theme of 'Popular Representation' and offer to the people of this district the opportunity for the first time in their lives to take part in building our political platform.

"Each and every person in this district who believes that political bosses and gang tactics in politics should give way to my definition of 'Popular Representation' is hereby urgently requested to send me their views on what type of platform is the right platform. When I have received the intelligent composite thought of this district, I shall have a platform that can rightly be called 'Popular Representation.' No other platform will ever defeat it."

In announcing his candidacy, Dr. Owen said that he also announces himself free and independent from all political rings; all traditional politics; all entangling alliances; and does not come to the people with a cut and dried program handed him by political bosses.

Dr. Owen has been closely affiliated with politics of the state for several years, especially in this district. He has been a strong and active supporter of Senator Robert R. Reynolds for years and assisted Senator Reynolds in his campaign against Senator Cameron Morrison, as well as in his former political efforts, one against Senator Overman in 1926.

Dr. Owen said that he will have more to say about his plans as soon as he has received what he considers the cross-section opinions of the congressional district.

Asheville Citizen February 18, 1934

The Condition of
Your TEETH Affects Your HEALTH

Have Them Examined
Regularly

19 Years of DENTAL EXPERIENCE Back of My Work

Our Prices Are Low

Extractions	50c up
Fillings	$1.00 and up
Bridge Work	$5 and $6
Plates	$10.00 and up

DR. OWEN

New Location
21½ N. Pack Square

Day and Night
Phone 232

Asheville Citizen July 12, 1935

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Owen, Dr. James Edward (Pamphlet File) Citizen-Times 10-12-45

THE NEWS PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

By TOM CUSHING

DR. JAMES EDWARD OWEN

"Dock" Owen has grown up.

Not only that, but he has hit the jack-pot. Quite definitely.

Who is this native Ashevillian, now matured emotionally and just about ready to show the home folks he is a mechanical genius? If you know him personally, then he simply is "Dock" Owen to you (though I heartily dislike calling any honest-to-goodness doctor by the nickname "Dock").

If you do not know Dr. James Edward Owen well enough to call him by his first name, and if you are one who listens to the gossips who are invariably wrong, you are apt to have this fine man catalogued as "that dizzy Dock Owen"; or "that flying fool"; or more erroneously than any other general impression of the man, you may have heard of Dr. Owen as one who looks too frequently on the wine when it is red, or something. Having hunted and knocked around with him extensively for more than ten years, I know he does not drink a drop of any alcoholic beverage, and has no vicious habits—unless being able to intelligently talk your arm off on almost any subject is a vicious habit.

As to Dr. Owen being a "flying fool", I might trail along with the general impression. That is, if such distinction means a pilot can do more tricks with an airplane than a monkey can do on a thousand yards of grapevine. A war-time pilot myself, I can safely say Dr. Owen can get more out of less airplane than any other flier I ever knew. I would not fly the length of Ben Sanford's belt with him myself, but that's because I'm an old fraidy-cat rather than a slight on Dr. Owen's flying ability. In a contest of aerial stunting against a hawk, I'd bet on the Doctor every time. That he won the national championship for accuracy landing to a mark at the All American Air Races in Miami, in 1928, should tell you if Dock Owen can steer a plane or not.

Locally, Dr. J. E. Owen is best known as a dentist who practices his profession between periods of flying one of the two or three planes he usually has in a hangar (or sitting out in the open field) at his home on the Sweeten Creek road. Actually, he is considered by other dentists to be a superior operator in his profession, and is still listed as the youngest man to ever graduate from Atlanta Dental college, where he took his DDS degree in 1916.

Just 20 years before that date, January 31, 1896, to be exact, James Edward Owen was born on Biltmore Avenue, Asheville, just across the street from the new Coca Cola bottling plant. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Owen. A division manager for the American tobacco company, the senior Owen was remembered in the will of the late sponsor of Duke U., Mr. J. B. Duke, who called Dr. Owen's father the best tobacco salesman he ever had.

James E. Owen attended public schools in Asheville, but left senior high to attend Mars Hill college and, on graduation, took up the study of dentistry. In 1916, still more a boy than a doctor, young Owen and the very pretty Grace Gibbs, daughter of Robert Gibbs, well-known Mars Hill merchant, were married. The bride and groom left immediately for Billings, Montana, and Dr. Owen began his practice there.

I could and really should write a full-length story about the children of Dr. and Mrs. Owen. Margaret, the first child, is now Mrs. Wm. Nichols. Her husband is a flying instructor at Bennettsville, S. C., and Mrs. Nichols is civilian personnel officer at Moore hospital. The Nichols live at Grovemont.

First Lt. John Owen was born in Montana 24 years ago. He inherited all his father's love of flying and early in World War II went into service, to become both a pilot and a bombardier. You may recall when another Asheville boy, Lt. George Smith, son of our American Legion commander, Capt. Robert Lee Smith, gave his life as a pilot in the Army and was brought back home for burial. His friend and flying classmate, Lt. John Owen, was one of the seven pilots who came as young Smith's honor guard. So far as I am able to learn Dr. Owen's son is the only survivor of the seven. Adding to the glory piled on glory by Buncombe boys in war service, young Lt. Johnny Owen, bombardier, sank the third Japanese cruiser ever destroyed by high altitude bombing. That was in the conclusive Battle of the Bismark Sea. After five years service, Lt. Owen is once more a civilian, studying for his AB degree at the U. of N. C.

In 1924 Dr. J. E. Owen brought his family home to western North Carolina. He has practiced dentistry here ever since. With certain adventures into the blue sky to add space to a prosaic profession. Out in Montana he had learned to fly right after World War I. On coming back home he flew with N. E. Storms at Dillingham field in Haw Creek, and when time permitted, this "Farmer Flyer" as he is known to professional air men, barn-stormed all over the south with flying circuses, notably the Gates-Day outfit.

In 1927 (or "After Lindbergh", as Dr. Owen puts it) flying became very popular. Owen, leaving his dental office in the care of an able assistant, took the position as head test pilot for New Standard Aircraft Co., and the famous "Tony" Fokker aircraft plant, Teeterboro, N. Y. Later he flew as chief pilot for Eastern

PACK MEMORIAL PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Air Express, now Eastern Airlines, and covered the longest division in the U. S. at that time: New York to Camden to Miami.

Then came the stock market crash of 15 years ago. Dr. Owen, financially embarrassed along with many of our very best people, resumed his dental practice here. When he could he flew as exhibition pilot at National and other air races. It was our own flying toof' den'ist who originated the aptly-named "crazy acrobatics" of air shows in those days; crazy acrobatics being stunt flying at low altitudes and at stalling speeds. You know—like picking a handkerchief off the ground with a wing-tip. Br-r-r-!

There followed a period during which his routine work failed to provide exercise enough for Dr. J. E. Owen's extremely versatile mind. He started building auto trailers, prompted by experiments in box spar construction used in airplane wings. Dr. Owen soon joined with Clinton Wood, brother of the motorboat genius, Garr Wood, who invented the dump body now universally used in unloading trucks. Going through the Gar Wood factories in Detroit, Clinton Wood told his partner, Owen, "This hundred-million dollar plant was built on one simple little idea: the dump-bed unloading principle of trucks."

Dock Owen asked, "Well, why don't you load as well as unload —mechanically?"

"We've spent millions trying to find a practical loader idea. All we have for our pains is a Rube Goldberg type of invention . . . don't make me laugh!"

Dr. Owen's "loader" idea did not make HIM laugh; it kept him awake at night. You see, Dr. J. E. Owen is a man who believes everything is possible to him who thinks and works and refuses to quit. Being that kind of fellow himself, the doctor thought and worked and never during a waking moment abandoned his truck-loading idea. "If you can load mechanically, you can unload the same way. . ."

He went to bed, but not to sleep. His thinking went like this: "truck-loader . . . dump body . . . airplane engineering . . . dump-truck bodies . . . you can haul dirt and dump it out. Why can't you load? . . . flying . . . wing flaps down coming in to land . . . you have to get your wheels down . . . retractable landing gear . . . hum-m-m! . . .

Dock Owen bounced out of bed. He went right to work, didn't stop till he'd built a loader out of wood and put it on his car. He called his mother. "What do you think of it, Mom?"

"Why, Son . . . it will work!"

And work it did, and does. The simple principle of a man shovelling coal: stiff-armed at first; then, with arm bending at the elbow, he lifts a full shovel and dumps it over his shoulder. With this idea in mind, Doctor James Edward Owen has invented a loader which promises quite definitely to revolutionize the movement of heavy material. With the help of Joe McNeill, brilliant manufacturer of Marion, N. C., the Owen loader has been put in production: a most efficient machine which can be mounted on almost any standard truck of one-ton or more capacity. This loader will complete the efficiency of movement of materials; for now the same truck with one driver can load, transport, and unload dirt, coal, and like materials. It is likewise an unbelievable time-saver.

Joe McNeill of Marion knows a good thing when he sees it. Dock Owen told Joe about his loader on one Sunday evening. Monday Mr. McNeill brought his chief engineer to see the Doctor's working model. That same day the manufacturer agreed to put the hydraulic loader in production. And Asheville lost what promises to be an amazing industry to our small neighboring town of Marion.

I firmly believe there is more unrecognized genius in Asheville and West Asheville than any place of comparable population on earth. Tom Wolfe and his books; the late Ralph Arbogast whose bombsight never helped win the war because people would not believe he had anything worth while; Norman Hildebrand, than whom there is no more brilliant thinker along engineering lines; Jim Gasque, whom few home folks would credit till he published one of his two greatest books ever written on bass fishing; and there are more besides this. Doctor James E. Owen, whom people thought of as "dizzy" until he made the industrial world sit up and take notice with his truck-loading invention.

Truly, "the prophet is not without honor save in his own country." You might remember that to your own benefit or profit when some future Asheville genius starts to tell you about something you think at first is a crack-pot idea. All I can say is that if Dock Owen's kind of thinking is crack-pot, I wish I were as crazy as a loon and had a little of what Doctor James E. Owen has on the ball!

NORTH CAROLINA ROOM
Pack Memorial Public Library

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., FRIDAY, JULY 25, 1947

MAYDEAN

JUNEDEAN

FLYING TWINS—When the 15-year-old Batchelder twins—Maydean and Juneedean—first became interested in flying, their brother-in-law, Dr. J. E. Owen, Asheville dentist and flier, took them under his wing to train them in a few do's and don'ts in aviation. Today, after two years, the youngsters, although too young to apply for commercial licenses, are soloing here with the aid of an instructor. Dr. Owen purchased for the twins a new Airocoupe last May as a gift and the girls plan to do some flying on their own hook when age permits them to obtain licenses. Natives of Vermont, the twins have made their home with Dr. and Mrs. Owen on Sweeten Creek road for the past two years.

The Flying Farmer Was Really A Dentist

Dr. J. E. Owen, who was billed as the "Flying Farmer" during the late 20s and early 30s when he toured the country as a barnstorming aviator, has moved his dental office to a specially constructed building adjoining one of his airplane hangars at Owen Field on Amboy road. The airfield, now also equipped for automobile drag races, was formerly known as Carrier Field. In left photo, Doc checks the engine of a small plane under repair at the field. Center picture shows him at the controls of his four-place Piper, and at right a patient in his office gets a dental checkup. Dr. Owen quit the "crazy ship" flying, for which he was famed while aviation was still an art that only "screw balls would monkey with," because he felt that it was setting a dangerous example for young pilots.

—Times Photo by June Glenn Jr.

He still holds the record for dead-stick landings, a stunt that was outlawed when the first controls were written on flying by the Department of Commerce.

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Owen, Dr. J.E.

Planes, Pains Keep Him Busy

By JAY HENSLEY

Doc Owen will fill your tooth or teach you to fly an airplane.

Once he patched up his old planes in the back room of his mid-town dental office. Now he practices dentistry in the corner of his airport hanger.

Dr. J. E. Owen is an old-time barnstorming aviator and holder of the All-American dead-stick landing title.

Filling a tooth or a gas tank is all in a day's work for him. He's equally at ease working inside a patient's mouth or tinkering with the innards of an airplane engine.

One of the pioneer fliers of the South, Dr. Owen has attained national recognition in aviation in his some 41 years as a pilot. He once worked as assistant chief pilot for a young airlines company and claims he flew the first commercial airliner from New York to Miami.

Doc has pieced together dozens of wrecked airplanes in his spare time. At 64 he envisions advances in aviation within his lifetime that will eliminate most of the dangers of human error from flying.

Dr. Owen is still a flyer, and he figures that his airport is probably the oldest private flying field in the country. It has been called Carrier Field since the days it was used for horse racing.

Part of his 3,400-foot runway has been black topped recently and is now used on some weekends for automobile drag racing. Near the south end of the runway, close by Amboy road, are his two corrugated metal hangers. A section of one of them is partitioned off and is used as a workshop by himself and other pilots. His dental office is a neat masonry room at one corner of the hanger.

Dr. Owen is a native of Asheville. He was born in 1896 in a house that still stands on Biltmore avenue within a short distance of St. Joseph's Hospital. He played on the 1911 football team at Asheville High School, and later attended Mars Hill College and the old Atlanta Dental College.

His first solo flight took place on a prairie near Laurel, Mont., in 1919. It was in an old war surplus ship, a Flying Jenny with a water-cooled Curtis OX-5, eight-cylinder, V-type engine.

Doc was about 23, as he recalls it, and was practicing dentistry near Billings, Mont., when he heard of the plane and was told that it was for sale. Andy Anderson, Canadian war ace who was one of the pioneer air mail pilots in this country, ran a garage there and offered to fly the Jenny in for Doc.

Airplanes were just a joke to most people in those days, according to Doc, and anyone who would monkey around with such a machine was considered a screwball. He was never one to pay much attention to what others were thinking of him, however. He bought the plane.

"Air ships had been used successfully as war machines, but not much had been done with them as a means of civilian transportation," Dr. Owen recalls. Andy flew the plane and Doc would ride with him on Sunday afternoons. They couldn't get paying passengers for the Jenny, but once in awhile duck hunters would pay them $15 to scare the fowl off the lake.

Andy also had a job checking the power lines for the railroad, Dr. Owen remembers. Doc had never had any formal instruction in flying the plane, but once when his friend took a trip to Butte, Mont., for a week, the dentist was tinkering around with the ship and suddenly he became a pilot.

Doc says he really had no intention of flying that day. Andy was away, though, and he thought he would just crank the Jenny up and listen to the engine.

But with that old OX-5's eight cylinder roaring in his ears, and him sitting there in the cockpit with the wind from the prop

NORTH CAROLINA ROOMS
Pack Memorial Public Library

surging over his face, he soon found himself taxiing down the field, which was just wide open prairie.

And the first thing he knew, he was in the air. After glinding along for a couple of miles he let the ship down on the prairie again, but just long enough to find out if he could land the Jenny as easily as he got it into the air.

Doc kept that up all afternoon and when Andy returned to his garage he found he had an eager pilot on his hands. The stick and throttle were about all there was inside a ship to get acquainted with in those days, Doc says. But on the outside was all the uncertainty of empty space, capricious winds and bailing wire that might or might not hold the ship together.

Dr. Owen returned to Asheville in 1921 or '22. Henry Westall was doing some flying here then, as Doc recalls. Westall had flown a Canadian Jenny into Asheville in 1919 and used the field that is now covered by the waters of Beaver Lake for the first "flying field." It was then called Baird's Bottoms.

Westall became the first commercial pilot in the state shortly after that landing in Baird's Bottoms. N. E. Storms, who was in the tire business on Spruce street along about that time, had also bought a Jenny. They used a hill in Haw Creek, called Dillingham's Hill, for a flying field for a couple of years, Doc recalls.

Dr. Owen's barnstorming career included tours with the New Standard Flying Service in 1927 and the Gates-Day Flying Circus. It was with the flying circus that he first toured the country, and he hauled passengers for $1 a ride when he was with the flying service.

As assistant chief pilot for Eastern Air Express Lines, which was the first passenger airline from New York City to Miami, Fla., he was in charge of flights from Camden, S. C., to Miami, and used a six-place Ballanca single - engine 300-horsepower ship that would cruise at 120 miles per hour.

Dead reckoning and a magnetic compass were the only means of navigation in those days, Doc says, and the trip from New York to Miami often took 14 hours.

Dr. Owen is also an inventor. One of his major mechanical developments, the Owen Loader, is widely used today in construction work and by city maintenance departments.

The Owen Loader, which was put into production shortly after World War II, was originally a scoop attachment that works over the cab of a dump truck, picks up a load of material from the ground in front of the vehicle, and empties it into the bed of the truck.

Doc also worked out a design for one of the first house trailers mass-produced in the South.

It was in 1930 that Dr. Owen won several prizes in aerial events on a tour of the state of Florida, including a large silver cup presented by the Miami Aero Club as first in the All-American dead-stick landing event.

That competition involved raising a ship to 1,000 feet, cutting the engine and drifting in to a certain point on the field. The pilot whose wheel hub came the closest to the marked was judged the winner.

Doc rolled to within four and one-half feet of the mark, and laughingly explains that his record was never broken because the event was outlawed by the Department of Commerce shortly thereafter. The stunt, because of the extreme danger involved, is no longer permitted in aerial competition.

Just after the Miami met, Dr. Owen took part in stunt flying events at the "Queen of the Air" show in Tampa. Doc was known as the "flying farmer" in those days and made comedy flying a major part of his act.

It was shortly after the Department of Commerce was organized that Doc made one of his numerous rebellions against conformity. Prior to 1927 there were no controls on aviation, and pilots could fly upside down with passengers in their planes, loop and stunt or practically anything else they had the nerve for, as Doc recalls it.

A license examiner from Washington called on him, but he refused to apply for a permit to fly. "I argued the Grandfather Clause, because I was flying before the law was passed that demanded that a pilot have a license," he said.

But it wasn't too long before he gave in and took out a transport pilot's permit. His license number is among the first 5,000 issued —No. 5,287 to be exact.

Dr. Owen's home port, now called Owen Airport, was opened as an airport under the name of Carrier Field about 1925. A stunt flying program that included parachute jumping was used to draw a crowd on opening day.

Doc had used the field extensively for many years, however, and had taken thousands on joy rides from its runway. He recalls vividly the first lessons that he gave Fred W. Glover of West Asheville, the Air Force major who became a fighter pilot ace during World War II.

In 1945 Dr. Owen was at Asheville-Hendersonville Airport when Maj. Glover staged a flying exhibition in a P-51 Mustang for 5,000 spectators.

Dr. Owen says that he has never received any serious injury in an airplane accident, although he has made more than 25 forced landings in his lifetime.

"Back in the old days a pilot had to work half a day to get a ship in shape to fly for one hour," he recalls. During those days, about one out of every three landings would be forced, he added.

It was during those days that Doc went to Brevard one weekend and bought a Waco 9, a three-place with an OX-5 surplus engine from a defunct real estate firm.

The pilot had flown the plane into a tree, and Doc bought the wrecked craft and rebuilt it. It was the wing from that plane that he re-worked in the back room of his dental office, which was then located on Pack Square over what was at that time Grant's Drug Store.

When Doc got the wing re-assembled it was too long to bring down the steps and out of the building. He had to remove two windows from the room and lower the airplane wing to the street below through the opening.

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Owen , Dr. J.E.

Flying Dentist Dr. J. E. Owen Dies

Dr. J. E. Owen, known as well for his flying and inventing as for his dental practice, died en route to an Asheville hospital at 6:10 p.m. Wednesday after suffering a heart attack.

A - CITIZEN

A lifelong resident of Buncombe County, "Doc" Owen was stricken while cleaning his office at Carrier Field on Amboy Road following last weekend's flooding of that area. He was 68.

OCT 8 1964

His flying accomplishments were numerous and outstanding.

One of the pioneer fliers of the South, he claimed to have flown the first commercial airliner from New York to Miami for the firm now known as Eastern Air Lines. He served as chief pilot for the same company for some time. In 1960 he was still the holder of the All-American dead-stick landing title, won in the Miami All-American races in 1930. He won several other events in that same contest.

His flying career dates back to 1919 when he soloed near Laurel Mont., in an old war surplus ship. A flyer first and a dentist second, he established what he called the oldest private flying field in the country. It has been called Carrier Field since the days it was used for horse racing.

DR. J. E. OWEN

For many years, before retiring in 1963, he maintained his dental office in the corner of his airport hanger at Carrier Field.

He attended high school at Asheville High School, attended Mars Hill College and graduated from the old Atlanta Dental College, now part of Emory University. He first practiced dentistry in Billings, Mont. and returned to Asheville in 1922. He went into practice with his uncle, Dr. Ed J. Evans.

As an inventor Dr. Owen contributed such items as the Dempster Dump Master in 1937, later well known in military circles as the Dempster Dumpster. He made many improvements on the Dump Master over the years. A device known as the Owen Loader was invented by Dr. Owen in the 1940s and was being manufactured in 1945 at Marion Machine Co. in Marion. The loader was for loading and unloading trucks automatically. He also designed and built the Owen trailer in 1936.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Eva Batchelder Owen; a son, John of Mars Hill; a daughter, Mrs. Margaret Gibbs Nichols of Asheville; one brother, Paul E. of Richmond, Va. and one sister, Mrs. Mary L. Bly of Asheville.

Arrangements are under the direction of Berryman-Hall Funeral Home.

PACK MEMORIAL PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Asheville Natives Pioneered Early Aviation Efforts Her

By LEON SILER

Henry Westall, "Doc" Owen — their names probably would head any roster of flying's Western North Carolina pioneers. Asheville was home to both.

Westall flew for less than 18 months, then quit; Owen flew for 40 years, and wouldn't have quit at all if he could have had his way.

Westall was a "business" flyer and Owen, who was Dr. James E. Owen, dentist, flew for the fun of it. In their contrasting ways they demonstrated happily to young adventurers of their generation that getting places with a pair of wings and an engine was as simple amid high mountains as anywhere else.

Westall was first. In 1917 he had joined the aviation section of the Army Signal Corps, predecessor of the later Army Air Corps and the present Air Force. He was sent Park Field, Memphis, where he learned quickly to look carefully in all directions while aloft. The day he got there, four Park Field aviators had been killed in two separate collisions of Army airplanes.

He moved on to a Fort Worth, Texas, flying field where another Army aviator, the famous dancer Vernon Castle, was killed. He next became an instructor at Brooks Field, San Antonio. Then, the war over, he came home.

Some Chamber of Commerce members got together with Westall one day. Talk of aviation resulted in 30 or 40 businessmen subscribing $3,000 with which Westall would buy a training plane and a collection of parts from the Canadian government and bring it to Asheville.

It was in this plane, labeled "ASHEVILLE" in large letters, that Westall took off June 19, 1919, from Baird's Bottoms.

The impressive name Asheville Aerial Corporation was given to the organization formed to manage this earliest of Asheville air enterprises. An office was opened in the Commerce building.

It cost $15 to take a ride with Westall during the heyday of the AAC's operations. Scott Dillingham was one of the customers; the next year, Dillingham and his friend Worth Lyerly would buy the plane from the AAC for just what Westal: paid for it.

Westall flew to Knoxville to give an exhibition at a fair, and to Morganton to help entertain returning soldiers. Both flights across the mountains were "firsts." In July, still 1919, he flew to Winston-Salem and Fort Bragg, ran into a rainstorm at Concord on the return trip, and got home in August.

His next-to-last flight came the following year. He piloted the "ASHEVILLE" from Rome, Georgia, to Asheville, landed at Baird's Bottoms, got out and kissed the wing, and quit. It was then that Dillingham and Lyerly took the plane over. Two or three years later Westall, thinking of returning to flying, went to Charlotte to "check out" with an instructor. The check flight ended in a crash when some children got in the way as the plane landed, and Westall was badly injured. He never flew a plane again.

"Doc" Owen had been out in Billings, Montana, meantime. He had graduated from Mars Hill College, learned dentistry, and gone to Montana to practice. Somebody took him for a ride in a wartime "Jenny," and for the next 40 years he found it difficult to keep his feet on the ground.

He and his growing family returned to Asheville soon, and thereafter, between dental patients, life for "Doc" was pretty much just one airplane after another. Needing a place to keep the planes, he acquired some acreage along Amboy road in Asheville and created Carrier Field, later to be called Owen Airport.

He turned his dentistry business over to an assistant in 1927, and joined an aircraft company in New Jersey as a test pilot. Then he turned chief pilot for a New York-Miami airline out of which grew the Eastern Airlines of today. There was the 1929 stock market crash, and Dr. Owen returned to dentistry and to a number of inventions such as a mechanical truck loader.

ASHEVILLE'S FIRST AIRPLANE with Henry Westall in the pilot's seat was a common sight in Asheville around 1919 and 1920. Purchased from the Canadian army as war surplus the craft cost $2,000. The money was raised by selling shares at $50 each with no one being allowed to purchase more than two shares. This was done so that if the ship cracked up no one would be badly hurt financially. Westall flew the plane on trips to several states after a final landing in Baird Bottoms, now the of Beaver Lake, he gave up flying completely.

The Asheville (N. C.) Times, Thursday, Oct. 16, 1952

Rivals Hall Fletcher, David Millard Clash In Memorial Stadium Tonight

Junior High Tilt Dedicated To Memory Of Late Bob Owens

What looms as a battle of arch rivals is on tap tonight when the Hall Fletcher Rebels and the David Millard Terriers clash in an intra-city Junior High School football headliner in Memorial Stadium at 8 p. m.

The game marks the first meeting between the schools in some six years. Up until this year the schools combined their squads in what was known as the Millard-Fletcher Mighty Mites.

The famous Mighty Mites were forced to disband when it became near impossible to arrange an annual schedule. And at the end of last fall it was decided by the schools to field separate teams and thus give more boys an opportunity to participate in junior high football.

For both teams tonight's game is more or less in memory of Bobby Owens of Hall Fletcher, whose tragic death was felt deeply by all who knew him. Owens, who was considered a brilliant football prospect was the victim of polio. His death influenced Coaches Marvin Nockow and Joe Eblen to cancel their remaining practices and games, and it was only last Thursday that Hall Fletcher resumed drills in preparation for its clash with the Terriers.

Young Jerry Little was shifted to halfback in an effort to fill Bobby Owens' shoes, and has shown steady improvement in that position.

However, Coach Nockow reported several injuries had cropped up in the Hall Fletcher camp which may hamper the Rebels. Halfback Bobby Ray is out with a virus infection; end Charlie Floyd has a throat infection, and fullback Jimmy Heise is suffering from a cut hand. Limited action is predicted for them, Nockow said.

Meanwhile, David Millard is expected to be at full strength.

The Rebels are expected to stick with their Straight-T offense, while Coach Herb Coman's Terriers will run from both the Single-Wing and Split-T.

Probable starters for Hall Fletcher may have Jimmy Mills, Buddy Burrell, Billy Swann or Charlie Floyd at ends; Buster Watts and Winford Marshall at tackles; Russell Steele and Ray Mills at guards and Larry Henderson in center.

The backfield will have Jerry Brezeale at quarterback, Jerry Henderson at fullback and Bobby Snelson and Jerry Little or Robert Ray at halfbacks.

For the David Millard Terriers it may be Bruce Peterson and Henry Wilson at ends; Billy Gureninger, David Steppe or Pete Waldrop at tackles; Burt Sutton and Arthur Honeycutt at guards and Ray Bishop in center.

The backs include Pearce Weaver or Bradley Anderson at quarterback; Mike Guthrie and Leonard Payne at halfbacks and Lamar White or Cliff Foster in fullback.

The Terriers go into the game with a 1-2 record with both losses coming at the hands of Canton, while Hall Fletcher has played but one game this year losing to the same Canton team, 19-12.

Thursday, October 2, 1952

Bobby Owens Dies After Polio Attack

Bobby Owens, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Owens of 20 Westwood Place, died about 1:30 p. m. today in an Asheville hospital where he was admitted late yesterday afternoon suffering from acute bulbar polio.

Young Owens was a ninth grade student at Hall Fletcher Junior High School and a member of the school's football team.

He suffered a choking spell about 4:50 p. m. yesterday and firemen were called to the Owens home with a resuscitator. Firemen gave emergency treatment and he received dispensary treatment at Memorial Mission Hospital prior to being admitted to the Asheville Orthopedic Hospital.

Surviving, in addition to the parents, are a brother, Roy Jr., a sister, Linda Sharon, both of the home; the maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Gault, Sr. of Gastonia; and an aunt and three uncles.

His father is a former Buncombe County deputy sheriff and a ex-member of the State Highway Patrol.

Funeral arrangements, under the direction of Berryman Funeral Home, are incomplete.

The Asheville (N. C.) Times, Thursday, Oct. 16, 1952

Junior High Tilt Dedicated To Memory Of Late Bob Owens

What looms as a battle of arch rivals is on tap tonight when the Hall Fletcher Rebels and the David Millard Terriers clash in an intra-city Junior High School football headliner in Memorial Stadium at 8 p. m.

The game marks the first meeting between the schools in some six years. Up until this year the schools combined their squads in what was known as the Millard-Fletcher Mighty Mites.

The famous Mighty Mites were forced to disband when it became near impossible to arrange an annual schedule. And at the end of last fall it was decided by the schools to field separate teams and thus give more boys an opportunity to participate in junior high football.

For both teams tonight's game is more or less in memory of Bobby Owens of Hall Fletcher, whose tragic death was felt deeply by all who knew him. Owens, who was considered a brilliant football prospect was the victim of polio. His death influenced Coaches Marvin Nockow and Joe Eblen to cancel their remaining practices and games, and it was only last Thursday that Hall Fletcher resumed drills in preparation for its clash with the Terriers.

Young Jerry Little was shifted to halfback in an effort to fill Bobby Owens' shoes, and has shown steady improvement in that position.

However, Coach Nockow reported several injuries had cropped up in the Hall Fletcher camp which may hamper the Rebels. Halfback Bobby Ray is out with a virus infection; end Charlie Floyd has a throat infection, and fullback Jimmy Heise is suffering from a cut hand. Limited action is predicted for them, Nockow said.

Bruce Emory Research

AUGUST 10, 1943

Owen Tells Of Bailing Out Of Falling Bomber Over Jungles In Dark

By BRIGHT W. PADGITT

Bailing out of a falling bomber in bad weather and the darkness of 1 a. m. over an Australian jungle, struggling through the wilds without food and having only dew-covered grass for water, and coming out intact with an air medal decoration to fight the Japs again and again.

That is one of the adventures of First Lt. John R. (Rip) Owen, 23, son of Mrs. Grace Gibbs Owen of Mars Hill and Dr. J. E. Owen of Asheville, who is home on a 15-day stop-over en route from the Southwest Pacific war zone to the third air force replacement depot at Tampa, Fla.

Lt. Owen attributes some of his accomplishments to luck and most of his reasons for being alive to that fickle lady. He was at the front in the New Guinea and Australian areas for exactly a year, July 22, 1942, to July 22, 1943, including traveling time from the west coast.

(Continued On Page Three)

As part record of his adventures and service with the U. S. air forces, Lt. Owen is officially credited with 35 combat missions and was awarded the air medal for distinguished service in 25 of these missions in the Southwest Pacific. He wears a ribbon for the medal, the Southwest Pacific campaign ribbon with one star for the Buna campaign, with another due for the Bismarck sea battle, the American Defense ribbon for being in service one year before Pearl Harbor and the American Theater ribbon for anti-submarine patrol between Key West and Cape Sable, Nova Scotia. He holds one citation from Lt. Gen. George C. Kenney, commanding the air force in which Lt. Owen served in the Australian-New Guinea theater, and another is pending in the war department for his part in the Bismarck sea battle in which he is credited with a direct hit on a Jap cruiser which was making fast evasive circles in an effort to dodge the aerial bombs from Lt. Owen's squadron.

Lt. Owen's biggest adventure, although he got a bigger thrill out of the Bismarck sea battle, was his leap into the darkness over the Australian jungle. He and five other members of the bomber crew bailed out 35 miles north of Port Moresby at 1 a. m., October 13, 1942, after their bomber had bucked bad weather for several hours and the last few gallons of gas were rushing through the feed lines.

Unknown Territory

Although all members of the crew managed to reach safety, they did not see each other after leaping into the dark. All landed in widely separated sections, their parachutes being pulled about by the winds. They landed in unknown territory.

Lt. Owen said he wandered in what he hoped was a reasonably straight line for about five days. During that time he had no food and the only water he had came from morning dew on grass he chewed and from one swallow of swamp water which he tried when thirst became almost unbearable. He tried to drink the swamp water during the third day. His only weapon was a sheath knife and he had no emergency kit.

LT. JOHN R. OWEN.

The most fearful experiences Lt. Owen had during his five days in the jungle were soldier ants and crocodiles. During one of his days in the jungle, Lt. Owen climbed a tall tree in an effort to get his bearings. While up in the tree, a large army of the soldier ants, which are red ants about half an inch long, climbed the tree and formed an imprisoning ring around the tree. To reach the ground, Lt. Owen had to slide through these ants. He succeeded in getting them off his body by rolling in the swamp.

Crocodiles Came Along

His second bad period came after he had built a raft, after reaching a river, using dead logs and parts of his parachute. The raft rode the water well enough but it was soon entirely surrounded by giant crocodiles. They did not swamp the raft and he owes his life to the fact that the reptiles did not attack. He was soon picked up by a group of natives (Kanakes), who were in outrigger canoes, and was taken to the coast. The natives fed him and at the coast he was taken up by a crash boat and taken to a hospital at Port Moresby. He was in the hospital only three days before rejoining his squadron.

An unusual incident attends Lt. Owen's Bismarck sea experience. He was squadron bombardier on the flight that caused the sinking of the Jap cruiser. The flight consisted of five B-25 bombers. They made four direct hits, sinking the ship. He wanted to get an official army picture of the sinking, but was unable to do so. Then, during last March in a copy of The Citizen-Times he found the picture he wanted. It was published as an official release of the sinking of the Jap cruiser, having been taken from one of the bombers of the flight by an aerial cameraman crew member. He has the clipping in his pocket, but said he still wants an official war department print.

Can't Understand War

Lt. Owen said the Australian and New Guinea "natives" can't understand why the white men are fighting, but they hate the Japs and like the Americans. The reason the natives hate the Japs so much is because they steal their pigs. Lt. Owen said as long as the Japs stole only the wives, the natives could take that, but when they began taking their pigs, that was the last straw. Wives are plentiful and pigs are precious possessions.

Lt. Owen said the most important factor toward morale is mail from home. He said families and friends should keep a stream of mail going out. The men have plenty of reading material, they have sufficient cigarettes and candy, which are regulation issues, but they want unlimited supplies of mail and snapshots of folks at home. They also want the home newspapers—anything that breathes the atmosphere of home. He said the food situation is improving rapidly and general living conditions are much better than they were a few months ago.

The natives of the Southwest Pacific like all the Americans, Lt. Owen said, and readily help them build their thatch huts and do their laundry. He said it is very encouraging to see the way the Americans and British are getting along. He pointed out that in the battle for Buna, the Australians and Americans learned to respect and admire each other. The going was really tough and it was here the Australians, speaking in their own slang terms, said of the Americans they are "fair dinkum," or very much okeh.

Deweese in Squadron

Lt. Owen said that Sgt. Carl Deweese, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Deweese of West Asheville, was a gunner in his squadron and is still in combat in the New Guinea area.

In writing Lt. Owen's citation with his air medal, Gen. Kenney said he was "awarded the medal in recognition of his courageous, fearless service to is combat organization, his fellow American airmen, his country, his home and to you." The letter was addressed to Mrs. Owen. Lt. Owen was decorated for meritorious achivement in aerial fights in the Southwest Pacific area from September 4 to December 22, 1942, during which time he took part in 25 operational missions over territory that was continually patroled by enemy fighter craft. After that time, Lt. Owen continued for 10 more missions and further additions to his record are pending, it was learned.

Lt. Owen was educated in the city schools of Asheville, graduating from Lee Edwards high school and at Mars Hill college. He received his flight training at Hick's Field, Fort Worth, Texas, Lowry Field, Denver, Colo., and Olando air base at Orlando, Fla., where he received his commission as second lieutenant in September, 1941. When he went to Australia last summer he was an instructor at Westover Field, Springfield, Mass. He was promoted to first lieutenant in January at his base in New Guinea.

Lt. Owen's father, Dr. Owen of Asheville, has a long record in aviation, including commercial flying, private aviation and submarine patrols of the civil air patrol off the coast of Nort Carolina. Lt. Owen has been around airplanes ever since he can remember.

Asheville times August 10, 1943

West Asheville People

P

Scoutmaster For 15 Years

Palmer Always Ready To Help A Boy

By BRUCE GOURLAY
Citizen-Times Staff Writer

There is no pay for being a Scoutmaster, but the job isn't much less complicated than that of being president of General Motors. There are vital decisions to be made and the finished product totals in the thousands.

Here is where any similarity ends, however, for there is no salary in the six figure bracket and the finished product is not automobiles—but men.

John Palmer, Scoutmaster of Boy Scout Troop Five, sponsored by West Asheville Presbyterian Church, in his 15 years as Scoutmaster of two different troops has come in contact with some 2,000 boys whom he has come to call by their first names.

Boys who are now lawyers, ministers, professors, businessmen, doctors—boys who are still boys. One may some day become president of General Motors—one may be more successful than that.

Palmer asserts he will help any boy because, he says, "who knows, he may be our leader towards everlasting peace."

There were seven Scouts in Troop Five when Palmer became its Scoutmaster six years ago. Today there are 77 on the roster with 50 to 60 Scouts participating in each Monday night meeting. Last year Troop Five turned out 16 Eagle Scouts, the most of any Troop in the area.

It was also last year that Palmer received the Daniel Boone Council's Scoutmaster of the Year "distinguished leadership citation."

"My motto," Palmer said, "is that a boy can't be a Scout unless he is a Christian. When he takes the Boy Scout oath, he commits himself."

And when a boy becomes a Scout in Troop Five, Palmer pays a visit to the boy's home, explaining the Scout program and what's expected of him.

"I place a time limit for the boy to develop and adjust to the program, Palmer said. If he does not come along, I go to him and try to give him a kind of a boost. Without the parents' help I can't do a whole lot, "but I usually get 150 per cent cooperation from the parents," he said.

Often a parent will call Palmer as a mother did recently. "She asked if Scouting didn't include obedience. I talked with the young man, (Palmer seldom speaks of his Scouts as boys, instead he considers them young men) and found that the mother would do better to respect and trust the boy more. He was at the age where he had to have companionship, with boys his own age."

This proved to be the winning combination. Palmer's suggestions usually are.

"I'm a believer in seeing the Scout through his own eyes. I try to see the boy as he really is. I've had Scouts come to me with problems I know they haven't talked over with their parents," he said. When a boy needs to have a "down to earth" talk with an adult, without hesitation Palmer will plan a weekend motor trip with the boy.

The Scoutmaster, in 15 years, has "gone through" six cars because of his willingness to help any boy who may need it.

Palmer, who was a Scout for two years "back in the days when dues were three cents a week," (now they are 10 cents weekly) says "Scouting to me has been an obsession. When I die I guess there will be six little Scouts as pallbearers."

A handful of Scouting magazines lay on a living room table in the Palmer house at 20 Dallas St. as he talked. Across the room sat one of Troop Five's five assistant Scoutmasters who was quick to point any detail the burly Scoutmaster might modestly omit.

"During the war (Palmer served during World War II with the Air Force) I promised that if the Almighty was good enough to let me come back, I would spend my life letting other boys have what I didn't have when I grew up," he revealed.

"Scouting is character building," Palmer said turning back to his present activities. "We keep that in the back of our mind whatever we do—be it camping, hiking or fishing. An idle mind is the devil's workshop," Palmer said.

Scouting activities include, first of all, the weekly meeting night. Troop Five meets Monday night. Following a set opening with the pledge of allegiance to the flag, one of the Scouts is called on to lead the group in prayer.

After a business session, the program varies. Included may be lectures on different phases of Scouting and indoor or outdoor games. "We try to stay within the National Boy Scout suggested program," Palmer said.

"Physical fitness is the theme at the present time,' he continued. "We usually spend 15 to 20 minutes on various phases of physical fitness."

There are also the special programs. Currently the Troop has a fishing trip in the Troop-owned bus in mind. A prize is offered for the biggest fish caught.

On a larger scale, Palmer's Troop will visit Okefenokee Swamp in Florida during next Easter's school vacation. At least once a year Palmer has taken a group of his Scouts on a 72-mile hike along the Appalachian Trail.

The Scoutmaster calls these the most touching encounters the boy experiences in Scouting; his "being away from the clamor of city life, closer to the Maker."

Palmer has also taken Scout delegations to Philmont Scout Ranch in Cimaron, N. M., and the National Jamboree in Pennsylvania.

A complete record of each Troop Five Scout is kept by its Scoutmaster. Once a year Palmer awards a Scoutmasters Award to one of his Scouts who has taken the most interest in Scouting affairs.

Last year the award was won by 13-year-old Richard Littrel who had a perfect Scout meeting attendance record and who participated in each Scout affair held by his Troop during the year. The award, a complete flashbulb camera outfit, was donated by Palmer.

A native of Cherokee County, John Palmer has resided in Asheville since 1928. He is employed as a commercial painter by Imperial Paint Co.

He and his wife have never had a son, but he has helped hundreds of boys go out better equipped to cope with life. And Palmer is the first to credit his five assistant Scoutmasters executives of the Daniel Boone Council, whom he describes as "best in the world."

—Citizen-Times Photo

SCOUTMASTER JOHN PALMER points to a type of wood at an instruction session of a meeting of Boy Scout Troop Five in West Asheville Presbyterian Church. Palmer, who has seen Troop Five grow from seven to 77 Scouts in his six years at the helm, is typical of the many dedicated Scoutmasters within the Daniel Boone Council.

WEST ASHEVILLE MAN'S SON TO GO ON LONG CRUISE

Horace P. Parker, Jr., son of Dr. H. P. Parker, of 95 Vermont avenue, West Asheville, will sail from San Francisco, California, within a few days for a lengthy cruise of two and one-half years, according to news reaching friends here. Mr. Parker, who has just completed his work at the U. S. Submarine Training school at New London, Conn., has served four years in the U. S. Navy.

He was married to Miss Elinor Roberts, of Ilion, N. Y., at Vallejo, Calif., May 19, Caplain Day of the U. S. S. Chaumont, performing the ceremony in the Methodist church.

Asheville Citizen June 6, 1929

Mostly 54

Local High School girls pictured above will model in a 7-hour Back-To-School Fashion Show at Belk's Friday . . . L to R: (front row) Sarah Ann Livingston, St. Genevieve; Rosalind Harris, Rebecca Parris, Lee Edwards; Annette Hawkins, West Buncombe; Pat Horton, Lee Edwards; (back row) Gwen Shipman, Lee Edwards; Shirley Merrill, Sand Hill; Sarah Dillingham, Swannanoa High; Kay Mulvaney, Lee Edwards; Ann Monteath, Lee Edwards. Not present when photo was made: Joanna Huff, Lee Edwards and Ann Dillingham, Barnardsville High.

BRING ON THE CHOW—About to enjoy his mother's cooking at breakfast today for the first time in eight months, is Lionel Patterson, seaman, U. S. Navy, who is spending a 14-day leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Patterson, 492 Haywood Road. Patterson, who reenlisted in the Navy in August, 1950, recently returned to the States aboard the USS Missouri. He joined the crew of the Missouri two days before she sailed for Korea last August. Patterson graduated from Lee H. Ewards High School in 1944. He served in the Navy from August, 1945, to July, 1946. Prior to reenlisting, he was a student at Dell School of Criminology. He will rejoin the "Big Mo" at Portsmouth, Va., following his leave. The ship will participate in a midshipmen's training cruise this summer in the North Atlantic.

Asheville Citizen May 1, 1951

MAY, 1956

PATTON THOMAS

LINGO DEMAREE LANNING

FIRST SPADEFUL—C. C. Demaree, chairman of the building committee, turns the first spadeful of earth for the new educational building of West Asheville Presbyterian Church. Assisting at the ground-breaking ceremony this week were W. G. Lingo, chairman of the board of trustees; Sam Patton, a member of the building committee; J. W. Lanning, vice chairman of the board of deacons; and the Rev W. G. Thomas, pastor. The new building will cost $74,000. The new building will contain classrooms, nursery, kindergarten, a chapel, kitchen and fellowship hall Work began Wednesday.

Asheville Citizen May 1956

Asheville Citizen SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 2002

First Family story confirms the relevance of legacies

Visiting our past

There were about 100 families living in what is now Buncombe County in 1800. If you do the math, you might estimate 7 million living descendants. Any one of these 7 million might apply to the Old Buncombe County Genealogical Society for membership in First Families of Old Buncombe.

Rob Neufeld

A few months ago, Bud Patton of West Asheville became the first. He thought he'd qualify through James Patton, owner of the Warm Springs and the Eagle hotels, but that great-great-great grandfather had arrived late, in 1807. So Bud switched over to the side of his family descended from James and Rhoda Alexander, whose granddaughter Rhoda had married William Davidson Patton.

James Alexander, a Revolutionary War soldier from Lincoln County, had moved to what was then Burke County in 1784, according to his testimony before the court that awarded him a military pension in 1854. In 1792, he became one of the justices of the peace who organized Buncombe County. Yet, it is yeoman accomplishments that provide the enduring legacy for Bud Patton.

"James Alexander settled at the old 'Alexander Place' on Bee Tree," wrote another descendant, Foster A. Sondley, in his 1930 history of Buncombe County, "which in one hundred and forty-five years was never out of his possession and that of his descendents." When the Alexander and Patton lines joined, the penchant for land tenureship doubled.

James Patton strove to define the family legacy in 1839 when he composed a letter to his grandchildren that chronicled his exodus from Ireland to Pennsylvania to North Carolina. He advised, "You see, children, nothing was too humble for me that was honest. ... I was not ashamed of anything that soap and water would wash out." When at age 16, Bud Patton was directed to read the great letter, he wisecracked to his uncle Gus that his ancestor was nothing but a bootlegger —referring to one of James Patton's many ventures, buying rye and having it distilled.

A willingness to engage in bold ventures is another Patton legacy. Bud's father, Gene, took it to an extreme, starting and ending an enterprise every year or two. "The Merry Adventures of Gene Patton" could easily fill several articles. Gene's father, Burgin Alexander Patton, was different. He was steady — more like James Patton and like Bud, Bud says. When Burgin's four brothers had gone west in the early 1900s to become wheat farmers, Burgin was the one who stayed home with a dying father and then his widowed mother.

SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

Burgin Alexander Patton's four brothers — left to right, Jim and George on top, Ernest and Gus below — all went west in the 1900s, while Burgin stayed home. He had to superimpose his image (bottom right) onto the photo of his venturesome siblings.

Burgin Patton also accumulated and held onto land, including Spivey Mountain.

Today, Bud Patton owns one-half of Spivey Mountain; the other parts are still in his family's possession.

Rob Neufeld writes the weekly local history feature, "Visiting Our Past" for the Citizen-Times; and may be reached at 251-1415 or rneufeld@charter.net.

FOR SALE!

The Daily Citizen of September 29th says: "An advertisement appears in this issue calculated to attract unusual attention; for it offers an opportunity to those in quest of beautiful sites for homes to become possessed of joint ownership of the bewitchingly charming prospects obtained from Richmond Hill. That hill every citizen of Asheville knows, and every visitor has been taught to know it; for it is so unique in its charms, so rich and rare, in combination of all the attributes of the perfect landscape, that to have come to Asheville and then gone away without seeing Richmond Hill were to have gone to New York without seeing Central Park, or to come down to the stereotyped illustration, to have seen the play of Hamlet performed with the part of Hamlet omitted. And in fact, from the peculiar position of that eminence and its contiguous grounds, there is a peculiar significance of outlook. There is mountain and vale and forest and field, and here and there, far and near, glimpses of the river in little lake like pictures, adding that feature and charm so generally deficient in the southern landscape. Truly, the opportunity offered is a rare one: for while the rest river and mountain and valley in generous distribution, it is here at this special spot that nature has been most generous and most tasteful in her combinations and distributions."

The above described property lies on the west side of the French Broad, and opposite the northwestern boundary of the City of Asheville. Eighty five acres, cut into four lots, containing from 12 to 30 acres each, well timbered and watered. Charming sites for

SUBURBAN HOMES.

The first to purchase will get the best bargain.

Upon the completion of my new house, say December 1, next, I shall offer for sale or for a long lease the cottage in which I now live. The cottage contains eight rooms, and has all the belongings of a comfortable summer home, such as servants' houses, large stable and carriage house, dairy, hot and cold water, etc.

The land to go with property will include

25 OR 83 OR 186 ACRES,

At the option of the purchaser. The title to the property carries with it the right of way over my road and bridge.

TERMS:—One fourth cash, balance on time to suit the purchaser, ten years if desired.

Dairy may be leased or sold separately. With it will go 20 milk cows, large cow house, 4 tenants' houses, 200 acres of improved land, and all the appurtenances of a well established business. Apply to

RICHMOND PEARSON.

Asheville Democrat October 10, 1889

The Pearson Land Sale.

The Pearson land sale for the past three days has been one of the biggest events of the kind which has ever occurred in Asheville. For property which a month or two ago Mr. Pearson paid $30,000 he has realized between $80,000 and $90,000, and the promise is that a portion of the city which seemed to be going without improvent of any sort will become the field for future extension of business. Mr. Pearson has already made extensive improvements in opening and grading streets and he will also build several handsome houses on lots which he has retained. The diversity of interest secured by the sale of lots to variour parties will further assure improvements. Among the purchasers are some of our most enterprising business men.

Asheville Democrat June 5, 1890

ASHEVILLE, N. C., THURSDAY, JULY 10, 1890.

THE 4TH OF JULY PICNIC.

How an Asheville Man Entertained the People of the Town.

Mr. Richmond Pearson's "go as you please" fourth of July celebration was a memorable occasion. The thousand men who were engaged to work for one hour at the close of day upon Lake Shore drive near Richmond Hill made a holiday and spent the morning in town. They were swollen by other large numbers of people taking a holiday on the Fourth. The stores were all closed and nearly the whole town turned out, taking the free electric and steam cars to the scene of the picnic. The 1,000 laborers marched off in procession at 4 o'clock. The Asheville band and the Zouave band of Atlanta made music for the throngs. Two huge trains at the R. and D. depots received a mass of humanity and drew them out four or five miles along the French Broad. Nearly every livery and private team of the town was utilized and when all were united on the hills of Montford Park, where the work of improvement is going on, when the thousand workmen went to shovelling with songs and shouts, in full view of the great crowd, while the two bands played from opposite hill tops, the scene was one of the most exhilarating animation. This exhibition continued for two hours, the thirst of the crowd being allayed with lemonade and ice tea liberally served to all. As night closed in and the crowd began to disperse, the majority strolling off down to the railroad track along the banks of the French Broad, a brilliant display of fireworks was exhibited from the hill tops. A single huge train brought the crowd back to town, but not before eleven o'clock.

Mr. Pearson bore the entire expense of the occasion and the crowd gave unmistakable evidences of their appreciation of his liberality. The occasion was enjoyed by everybody notwithstanding the lateness of the hour at which the main part of the crowd got home.

The spirit and the enthusiasm with which Mr. Richmond Pearson goes into the improvement and the advertisement of his beautiful estate gives assurance that before many more fourths of July pass his faith will be justified in a suburb which will outrival in its ornamentation any in the beautiful environments of Asheville.

Asheville Democrat July 10, 1890

THURSDAY EVENING, MARCH 12, 1896

PEARSON'S MANIFESTO.

Instruction, Advice and Suggestion—Room For Pops.

RALEIGH, March 12.—Congressman Richmond Pearson is sending out a circular letter, addressed to his friends in the 9th district. In it he gives a short account, under six heads, of the condition of such legislation as interests them, and also the political outlook as it impresses him. He says his main trouble and embarrassment grows out of pension claims, nearly every case having baffled and delayed him. He frankly admits he cannot hope for much success until the Pickler bill becomes a law. Pickler has incorporated Pearson's bill as section 1 of his own, and Pearson says it will become a law unless vetoed. He declares he will stand by free silver, and adds that all the friends of the white metal ought to stand by the Republican party. He opposes the new single issue silver party, and says it appears to be dominated by Senator Tillman of South Carolina. He has notified the latter that he must "shinny on his own side" and not try to work his policies in North Carolina. He goes on to say of Tillman:

"After disfranchising nearly all the blacks and a great per cent. of the poor white men of South Carolina, he can do as he pleases down there, but our people will not stand his method or break ranks and join the new party even though it should be endorsed by such able and astute and unselfish statesmen as Senator Butler and Dr. J. J. Mott."

As to fusion he says: "We might as well begin to prepare for the fight on fusion lines. It is perfectly evident that no man and thousand men can stop fusion now. Let's be fair and liberal with our Populist friends and independent Democratic friends who have turned their backs finally and steadfastly against barbarism and all its folly and bigotry and misery. We made the last fight to recover our liberties; we will make this one to preserve our recoveries. We will fight to a finish before we will ever allow our poor and ignorant people to be ground down as they are in South Carolina and Mississippi, so go ahead and agree on your tickets and be especially liberal in such counties as Rutherford, Buncombe, Jackson, Macon, Swain, Clay and Yancey, where we must have a joint fight in order to be sure of victory."

In conclusion Pearson says: "I am glad to tell you that we will hereafter have some new garden seed for the old ladies and flower seed for the girls. Members tells me they will put this bill through in a few days."

Asheville Daily Citizen March 12, 1896

Ref NC.
975.63 W5274

RICHMOND PEARSON was born at Richmond Hill, Yadkin county, N. C., January 26th, 1852. He graduated at Princeton College in 1872, delivering the valedictory; studied law under his father, the late Chief Justice Pearson. Married, March 30th, 1882, to Miss Gabrielle Thomas, of Richmond, Va. He was nominated for the Senate in 1878 by the Democratic party in Surry and Yadkin, but was defeated. He moved to Buncombe county several years ago, and now has one of the most attractive places, a few miles from Asheville, in the county—Richmond Hill—he having adopted the name of his old native place in Yadkin county. He has done much in the way of making improvements in and around the city of Asheville. He represented his county in the House in 1885, and his course at that time, as well as at the session of 1887, was such as eminently met the hearty approval of his constituents.

Chronology of Richmond Pearson and Richmond Hill

1852	Born January 26 at his father's home, also called Richmond Hill, in Yadkin County, North Carolina, and later attended Horner's School in Oxford, North Carolina
1872	Received Bachelor of Arts degree from Princeton University and delivered the Valedictory Address
1872–1874	Studied law under his father Richmond Mumford Pearson, who was Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court for 20 years
1874	Was admitted to the North Carolina Bar
1875	Received Master of Arts degree from Princeton and delivered the Master's Oration
1874–1877	Served as United States Consul in Belgium
1878	Nominated for the Senate by the Democratic Party in Surry and Yadkin Counties, but was defeated
1882	Married Gabrielle Thomas of Richmond, Virginia
1884–1886	Served in the North Carolina General Assembly
1885	Served in the Lower House of the North Carolina Legislature
1886	A son, named Richmond Pearson, Jr., was born
1889	Built Richmond Hill
1890	Organized a gala 4th-of-July celebration to promo land development project on Richmond Hill
1890	Daughter Marjorie Noel Pearson was born on January 12
1893	Son James Thomas Pearson was born on June 24
1895	Served in the United States Congress representing Ninth North Carolina District. Served on the Forei Affairs committee.
1900	Son Richmond Pearson, Jr., died of scarlet fever

1901 Appointed by President Theodore Roosevelt to be United States Consul in Genoa, Italy

1902 Promoted to Minister to Persia

1907–1909 Served as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Greece and Montenegro

1909 Resigned from diplomatic service and returned to the United States to concentrate on his law practice 1923 Richmond Pearson died at Richmond Hill.

1924 Gabrielle Thomas Pearson died in New York shortly after arriving home from a trip to Persia.

1924–1951 Marjorie and Thomas Pearson left Richmond Hill under the charge of a caretaker as they traveled and worked around the world.

1951 Marjorie and Thomas returned to Richmond Hill to open the mansion as a museum.

1963 Thomas Pearson died on April 16 of a heart ailment.

1972 Marjorie Pearson died on May 25 after a long illness. Richmond Hill was willed to a cousin, General Hayne Davis Boyden.

1974 Boyden sold Richmond Hill to the North Carolina Baptist Homes, Inc.—with the stipulation that the house be preserved for at least ten years, during which the Preservation Society of Asheville and Buncombe County made many efforts to preserve the mansion.

1974 A public auction was held to sell the mansion's furnishings and other treasures from Marjorie Pearson's estate.

Gabrielle Pearson

Richmond Pearson

1977–1978 The Western North Carolina Baptist Retirement Home was built on the former Pearson property

1981 The Preservation Society of Asheville and Buncombe County purchased 7 1/2 acres of adjoining land, anticipating a possible future need to move the mansion.

1981 The Baptist Retirement Homes offered to sell Richmond Hill to the Preservation Society of Asheville and Buncombe County for the sum of $1.00, providing that the mansion be moved off the property within one year.

1984 After the Preservation Society conducted a three-year fund-raising campaign to raise $100,000, the Richmond Hill mansion was moved 600 feet to the east.

1987 Richmond Hill was purchased by The Education Center, Inc., a Greensboro firm that planned to rehabilitate the mansion.

1988 The Education Center purchased 40 additional, adjoining acres that were once part of the original Richmond Hill estate.

1989 Richmond Hill opened as an elegant inn and conference center in September of 1989.

RICHMOND PEARSON ON THE PROPOSED PARK

The Sentinel says ex-Congressman Richmond Pearson, of Asheville, who is in Knoxville to participate in the White memorial exercises, was seen by a Sentinel reporter this morning and was asked for an expression upon the proposed Appalachian national park. He said:

"As to the proposed Appalachian national park and forest reserve, I am an ardent supporter of the movement, looking to its establishment. I have been in sympathy with the project from the beginning, and have worked for its success. During my terms in congress, I supported the movement. I believe that the establishment will receive support in all the territory embraced in the area surrounded by Danville, Lynchburg and Roanoke, Va., Bristol, Knoxville and Chattanooga, Atlanta and Augusta, Ga., Columbia and Spartanburg, S. C., and Charlotte and Greensboro, N. C. Of course, it will require a great amount of work and time to see this park materialize, yet it is my opinion that congress will see the wisdom in the movement and will vote to carry out the project. One reason which will cause the movement to be supported is that the streams which rise in the proposed park territory flow in every direction and penetrate such a large number of congressional districts. In the lower part of North and South Carolina there are thousands of spindles in the cotton mills which are propelled by some of these streams. It is to the interest of the people where these mills are located to support the park, as it means the preservation of the forests and thereby the continued flow of these streams in after years. The late President William McKinley was a warm advocate of the park, as is Secretary Wilson, of the department of agriculture. I have not heard President Roosevelt express his views upon the project, but sincerely hope that he will favor it."

Asheville Citizen October 22, 1901

FOR SALE!

"The scene is near Asheville, N. C., and is a representative view in a North Carolina valley; on either side are those glorious accessories, the hills, clothed with verdure to their very tops, while down the center the famous French Broad courses its winding way. The railroad may be seen now crossing and recrossing in many a place, and then pushing along the river side for a long distance until some erratic bend coerces it into a change of course. It is indeed a beauty spot, and affords much subject for careful study. Mr. Brown is a true artist in feeling. We have seen prints from many a one of his lovely negatives, of which this view is one of the best."—Wilson's Photographic Magazine, July, 1889, Page 438.

The hills overlooking the above view, lying on the west side of the French Broad, and opposite the northwestern boundary of the City of Asheville. Eighty-five acres, cut into four lots, containing from 12 to 30 acres each; well timbered and watered. Charming sites for

SUBURBAN HOMES.

The first to purchase will get the best bargain.

Upon the completion of my new house, say December 1, next, I shall offer for sale or for a long lease the cottage in which I now live. The cottage contains eight rooms, and has all the belongings of a comfortable summer home, such as servants' houses, large stable and carriage house, ice house, dairy, hot and cold water, etc.

The land to go with the property will include

25 OR 83 OR 186 ACRES,

At the option of the purchaser. The title to the property carries with it the right of way over my road and bridge.

TERMS:

One-fourth cash, balance on time to suit the purchaser; ten years if desired.

Dairy may be leased or sold separately. With it will go 20 milk cows, large cow house, 4 tenants' houses, 200 acres of improved land, and all the appurtenances of a well established business. Apply to

RICHMOND PEARSON.

Asheville Daily Citizen September 29, 1889

RICHMOND PEARSON DECLARES PRIMARY VOTE WILL GOVERN

Says Roosevelt Will Receive Overwhelming Vote in Primaries and That Delegates to Republican Convention Will Be So Bound.

The old Taft organization may elect the delegates from North Carolina Chicago convention, but they will be bound to vote for Theodore Roosevelt, because the colonel's name will appear on the primary ballots, and the republican voters will give him an overwhelming majority.

This is the import of a statement made yesterday to The Citizen by Richmond Pearson. In the democratic view it means a fierce political fight in which existing arrangements will be smashed, a battle in which delegates and backers not for Roosevelt will fight desperately to prevent being tied hand and foot and delivered at Chicago for the colonel by instructions from the Roosevelt voters. Republicans not for Roosevelt do not minimize the danger to them threatened by the invocation of Roosevelt's name at the polls.

Replying to the question by a citizen representative if he was surprised by the action of the congressional convention Saturday, Mr. Pearson said: "Frankly, I was; in fact, doubly surprised, for I did not believe that any of the delegates would ignore the instructions requiring equal representation for both wings of the party, nor did I believe that any considerable number of delegates would ignore the obvious interests of Congressman Britt. As soon as I ascertained that the resolution of instructions would be treated as a 'scrap of paper,' I forbade the use of my name, and declined to cross the threshold of the convention. Now that all overtures and efforts towards conciliation have been rejected by the former adherents of Mr. Taft, the friends of Theodore Roosevelt will support him in the primaries against Burton or anybody else."

It was indicated that there was an efficient Roosevelt organization which would see that Roosevelt's name appeared on the primary ballots in every county, and that congressional districts would be well organized. It is understood that at the present time nine of the delegates so far chosen are counted as old Taft organization men, and six as Roosevelt men. It is inferred that Mr. Pearson's interpretation of the primary law is that if a plurality—not necessarily a majority of the republican voters in any district vote for Roosevelt as their choice for president, the delegates from that district will be bound to vote for him in Chicago. And this is evidently the view of the state board of elections, since it recently decided to have the vote canvassed and telegraphed to Chicago before the balloting in convention begins.

There is no law to jail delegates who should refuse to be bound, but the view of those supporting Mr. Pearson is that no delegate will dare disregard the popular vote. "If Charley Harris and Tom Harkins don't vote for Roosevelt after the voters of this district have declared for him as they will do, the sheriff will be a busy man," declared one extreme Roosevelt man.

But those who are not pronounced for Roosevelt, whether against him or merely willing to leave the selection to the convention, have a hot shot to fire at his champion. "How is Mr. Pearson properly a Roosevelt representative when he resigned from the Progressive national committee, and then at the Buncombe county committee meeting introduced a resolution that Roosevelt ought not to be a candidate," they demand. "Why was this decision to run Roosevelt in the primaries not made until after Pearson was defeated as a delegate?"

The answer of Mr. Pearson's friends is that he is a republican, and offered the resolution to promote harmony, but the offer of conciliation was rejected by the move of the Taft crowd to take everything, conceding nothing to the Roosevelt forces. "It is the same old determination on the part of the old organization to rule or ruin," said a Roosevelt man. Then he proceeded to point out a few facts. "This district gave Taft 2,700 votes," said he, "and Roosevelt 10,900; yet manipulation makes both delegates anti-Roosevelt. Macon county, for instance, gave Taft forty-nine votes and Roosevelt 741, yet its delegates to Saturday's convention stood 6 to 3 for Taft crowd delegates.

Asheville Citizen Mar. 29, 1916

ASHEVILLE MAN WINS PLACE ON PERSIAN MISSION

Richmond Pearson, Jr., Will Be Assistant to Administrator.

Richmond Pearson, Jr., son of Richmond Pearson, of Asheville, is the recipient of an unusual honor from the hands of the State Department at Washington and of the Persian Government. He has recently been appointed Special Assistant to Dr. A. C. Millspaugh, of Augusta, Mich., who has been made Administrator General of the Finances for the Persian Government.

Some while back the Persian Government requested the State Department to recommend a man to direct the finances of the Government and to also recommend a personnel of some 10 or 12 men to go with the Director General as his assistants. Dr. Millspaugh, who has been the Economic Advisor of the State Department, was selected as the man to be recommended and some 12 others, including Mr. Pearson, were recommended as his assistants.

The party will leave for the Persian Capitol, Teheran, within three weeks. The work of the men will continue over a period of three years.

These men are not going as a special commission from the American Government, but as private citizens of the United States, recommended by the American Government to the Persian Government.

In view of the high honor paid his son, interest attaches to the fact that Mr. Pearson, Sr., was the American Minister to Persia during the years 1902 to 1907.

Mr. Pearson, who is only 29 years old, was born in Asheville where his father has resided for many years. He is a graduate of Princeton University, of the class of 1915, specializing in modern languages. His economic training was secured while Foreign Exchange Editor of the New York Evening Post for two years, and frim his position in the Research Department of the American International Corporation.

During the war Mr. Pearson was a captain in the 23rd Infantry of the Second Division. He was also attached to the staff of Major General E. M. Lewis, commander of the Old Hickory Division. Mr. Pearson is a member of Old Hickory Association.

On account of his bravery, Mr. Pearson received three medals while he was in France. Two were from the Belgium Government and one from the Montenegrin Government. The two from the Belgian Government were the Order of the Crown, and the Croix De Guerre. The one from the Montenegrin Government was the Order of Danilo.

Mrs. Thomas G. Cheesborough, of this city, is the aunt of Mr. Pearson.

Asheville Citizen September 9, 1922

RICHMOND PEARSON'S CONDITION SERIOUS

Former American Diplomat Is Growing Worse at His Home at Richmond Hill, Near City.

Richmond Pearson, probably one of the best known North Carolinians in consular and diplomatic circles of past years, is seriously sick at his home, Richmond Hill, near the City. A report from the home last night was to the effect that his condition was considered slightly worse.

Mr. Pearson was appointed as American Consul to Verviers and Liege by President Grant when he was only 21 years old. In the Roosevelt administration he was Consul to Genoa for several years. Then he served as U. S. minister to Persia and later to Greece and Montenegro, leaving the diplomatic services in 1908, since which time he has lived at his home at Richmond Hill.

In his earlier years he served in the North Carolina General Assembly and was later representative in Congress twice, having been elected by the largest majority ever given a Republican in this district.

Asheville Citizen September 10, 1923

The Late Richmond Pearson

Richmond Pearson, aged 71 years, thrice Congressman from this District, member of the U. S. Consular service and later U. S. Minister to foreign countries, including Greece and Montenegro, died at his home, Richmond Hill, near the city, on Wednesday afternoon. Funeral services were held at St. Mary's Episcopal Church Friday. Interment followed at Riverside Cemetery.

Mr. Pearson was a son of the late Richmond Mumford Pearson, for about 30 years Chief Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court and who, for about the same period, conducted a law school at Richmond Hill, in Yadkin County, which attracted students from all over the South, many of whom are leading lawyers of the "old school" today.

The deceased was valedictorian of his class at Harvard, and at the age of 23 years was appointed to the Consular service by President Grant. He later served in several important posts in Consular and Diplomatic Service, retiring from active duties in 1909. Since that time he has lived in partial retirement at his home here.

Asheville Citizen September 16, 1923

Richmond Pearson, Former Diplomat, Congressman And Orator, Dies At Home Here

Had Been in Declining Health for Long Time, Unconscious Two Days.

FUNERAL SERVICES FRIDAY AFTERNOON

Last Diplomatic Service Was as Minister to Greece and Montenegro

Richmond Pearson, former Congressman, Consul and Minister from the United States to several foreign countries, died at his home at Richmond Hill, near the city, yesterday afternoon just before 2 o'clock, following a prolonged illness. He was 74 years old. His condition had been serious for several days and for two days prior to the end he was unconscious.

Funeral services will be held at St. Mary's Episcopal Church on Charlotte Street Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, in charge of Rev. Father Charles Mercer Hall. Interment will follow in the family plot in Riverside Cemetery.

Surviving are Mrs. Pearson, formerly Miss Gabrielle Thomas, of Richmond, Va., one daughter, Miss Marjorie Pearson, of Baltimore, Md., who has been at the bedside of her father for the past week or more, and one son, Thomas Pearson, member of the commission of Americans working on the finances of Persia, who, of course, will not be able to come home. One son, Richmond, died many years ago, at the age of 14.

Mrs. Walter B. Howe, Washington, D. C., a niece, will be here for the funeral services. Neither of three distinguished nephews, Richmond Pearson Hobson, of Los Angeles, Calif.; Colonel Richmond Pearson Davis, nor Lieutenant Hayne Boyden, of the Marine Air Service, will be able to get here for the funeral services.

Mr. Pearson was born in Yadkin County, January 26, 1852, son of Richmond Mumford Pearson and Margaret Williams Pearson. His father was a jurist continuously for 42 years and was Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina from a period several years before the War between the States until his death in 1878. This was during a period of bitterness as a result of reconstruction measures.

Among his forebearers were many of the distinguished names in the records of North Carolina and Tennessee families. In his own life service Richmond Pearson lived up to the high mark established before him.

His early education was received at Horner's School, Oxford, North Carolina and he subsequently entered Princeton University at the age of 16. Graduating four years later he delivered the valedictory address for his class in 1872.

Upon leaving college he returned to North Carolina, where for two years he studied law under his father, and in 1874 was licensed to practice.

Appointed Consul to Verviers and Liege by President Grant at the age of 23 he abandoned the prospects of a brilliant legal career for the foreign mission.

In 1875 he paid a brief visit to the United States and delivered the Master's oration in Princeton in that year. He was awarded the A. M. degree, the A. B. degree having been conferred upon him when he graduated. He returned to Belgium for two more years in the foreign service.

In 1877, Mr. Pearson resigned from the consular service and returned to the United States. Upon his return he resumed the practice of law in partnership with John D. Davis in St. Louis. He was called back to North Carolina by the death of his distinguished father in 1878 and having been named sole executor of the estate, he found it imposible to return to St. Louis and this time definitely gave up the practice of law.

On March 20, 1882, he married Gabrielle Thomas, daughter of James Thomas, Jr., of Richmond, Va.

During the years which followed Richmond Pearson entered wholeheartedly into politics and these years were marked by the untiring energy with which he rendered public service in his native State. He was elected to the North Carolina General Assembly in 1884 and again in 1886. Eight years later he was elected to Congress and served three successive terms, carrying the ninth district, which had been Democratic for a quarter of a century, by the largest majority ever given a Republican. While in Congress he served on the Committee on Foreign Affairs and on the subcommittee of three which drafted the resolutions ordering war against Spain.

In December, 1901, Richmond Pearson was appointed United States Consul at Genoa, Italy, by President Theodore Roosevelt, but had hardly been at his post a year when he was appointed minister to Persia.

He discharged the duties of his post with such success that President Roosevelt cabled his "commendation for energetic and efficient service," and soon after appointed him Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Greece and Montenegro, which post he held for two years.

In 1909 he resigned from the diplomatic service and returned to the United States and retired from public life. His last years were spent quietly at his home on Richmond Hill.

Public-spirited in all his dealings, Mr. Pearson was a valuable asset to Buncombe County during the period of growth extending over the past 15 years, and numerous roads and other improvements were made posible through his efforts.

While in Congress, Mr. Pearson attracted international attention by playing a game of chess with a member of Parliament in England, via cable.

His son, Thomas Pearson, who is now serving as a member of a commission invited by the Shah of Pershia, to investigate and adjust the financial condition in that country, served during the World War with distinction and was awarded four decorations for bravery while with the A. E. F. He served with the rank of captain.

Richmond Pearson was an orator of considerable note and attracted considerable attention while serving in Congress, as the result of his oratory and forceful bearing.

He was a member of the Metropolitan Club, of Washington and the Massachusetts Society of Mayflower Descendants.

18

PEARSON'S PARADISE

Other giants walked these magnificent hills, and some like Richmond Pearson are still remembered here if in no other way than by the things they built and left. Pearson moved here in 1879 and bought 300 acres of land overlooking Asheville from the west bank of the French Broad River. He is remembered for Pearson Drive, running from Montford Avenue down the hill, across the river, and up the other side to his home on Richmond Hill, and for Pearson's Bridge, which he built across the French Broad. The Great Flood of 1916 washed the bridge away.

Pearson's bridge spans the French Broad around 1900.

He was a single man of wealth who had already begun a career in foreign service when he came to Asheville, purchased his land, and named it Richmond Hill, the same as his father's land where he had been born in Yadkin County.

An 1872 honors graduate of Princeton, valedictorian of his class, Pearson was admitted to the North Carolina Bar in 1874 and was appointed that same year by President Ulysses S. Grant as U. S. consul at Verviers and Liege, Belgium, a position he held until 1877 when he returned to his Yadkin County home.

For a long time his family had served in the high ranks of the military, foreign service, and politics. His father was Richmond Mumford Pearson, chief justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court (1858-1878). His mother was Mrs. Margaret Williams Pearson, whose father was John Williams of Knoxville, U. S. senator from Tennessee and U. S. minister to Guatemala by appointment of President John Quincy Adams in 1825.

Richmond Pearson's eldest sister, Ellen Brent, married Daniel G. Fowle, governor of North Carolina from 1888 to 1891, and his sister Sally married J. M. Hobson of Alabama. Their son, Captain (later Admiral) Richmond Pearson Hobson, achieved fame in the Spanish-American War by sinking the Merrimac, a collier, in the harbor of Santiago, Cuba, in June 1898. One of his wife's aunts married Dr. J. L. M. Curry of Alabama, U. S. minister to Spain in the first Cleveland administration.

So the Pearson family had power and wealth, and Richmond was a level-headed young man who used his shares wisely.

On March 30, 1882, Pearson married Gabrielle Thomas, daughter of a Richmond tobacco merchant, and in 1889 moved her into the house he had built that year on Richmond Hill. The hill was also called Pearson's View for the magnificent vistas seen from the farm.

Like George W. Vanderbilt, who followed him to Asheville a decade later, Pearson spent considerable money building up his farm. When he bought the land and built his house, he said his farmland was so poor that the jackrabbits had to carry their food in knapsacks when crossing it.

His major stroke was the hiring of James E. Alexander, an outstanding farmer and businessman who turned the land into a sparkling jewel on the high hill overlooking the river. Wherever Pearson was in the world–and he was in some faraway places–he stayed in touch with Alexander and often issued orders to him through the mails.

Turnout for Richmond Pearson's offer of a dollar a man for an hour's work building a road on his estate July 4, 1890, followed by a barbecue for all participants and their families.

Pearson was a Republican member of the North Carolina Legislature from 1885 to 1889, and of the lower house of Congress from 1895 to 1901 when President Roosevelt appointed him U. S. consul at Genoa, Italy, in December. The president next appointed him U. S. minister to Persia (1902-07), and he handled that assignment so well that Roosevelt named him Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Menipotentiary to Greece and Montenegro (1907-09). He retired from government service then to live as the country gentleman he was with his wife and three children on his beloved farm in Asheville.

An outstanding chess player, Pearson sought excitement, and in June 1897 as a member of Congress, he headed a House team in a chess match with a House of Commons team in London. After two evenings of playing by international cable, the game was declared a draw.

On the Fourth of July 1890, Pearson got the attention of everyone in Western North Carolina when he pitched a holiday barbeque with food and fireworks for a thousand people on Richmond Hill. He let it be known that every man who wanted to come was welcome, and that all should bring work tools because he intended to build one mile of finished road in one hour on his farm. He offered to pay a thousand men one dollar each for an hour's work in building the road. They began the job at eleven a.m. and finished at noon, and the road was done. Then everyone repaired to the barbeque tables.

The Asheville Daily Citizen editorialized: "Would that there were many such public spirited gentlemen in our midst and Asheville's boom would not be equaled anywhere. When the laboring classes are protected and encouraged, prosperity will be the result."

All his life, Richmond Pearson spent time caring for others. The poet and musician Sidney Lanier, who developed tuberculosis in a northern prison during the Civil War, was told by his physician early in 1881 that his only hope was to seek "tent life in a pure, high climate." At Pearson's invitation he came to Richmond Hill even before the mansion was built, and camped for several months in the open air before his death later that year at the age of thirty-nine.

Lanier faced death squarely. Not long before he died, he wrote a bit of verse welcoming death:

> "Look out Death; I am coming.
> Art thou not glad? What talks we'll have,
> What memories of old battles.
> Come, bring the bowl, Death; I am thirsty."

Lanier wrote to his wife of Pearson: "The Mr. Pearson who owns the land is a young man, son of Judge Pearson—a prominent lawyer of this state—who, after having practised law a while and after travelling extensively in Europe and in the West, has bought this beautiful tract of land lying almost entirely enclosed by the Swannanoa and French Broad Rivers, and is devoting much money—with which he seems to be abundantly supplied—to making it a sort of mountain Eden."

Pearson died September 12, 1923, at his home on Richmond Hill and was buried in the family plot in Riverside Cemetery. Mrs. Pearson survived him by a little more than a year and was buried beside him.

From "Historic Asheville", Bob Terrell, 1997

Richmond Hill House

Previous Site

Next Site

Richmond Hill House
Photo courtesy of Richmond Hill House

The Richmond Hill House is located northwest of Asheville on a bluff high above the French Broad River. The Victorian mansion was built in 1889 as the private residence of ambassador and congressman Richmond Pearson. Considered one of the most elegant and innovative buildings of its time, the house was designed by James G. Hill of Washington D.C., Supervising Architect of the U.S. Treasury in the 1870s and 1880s. The site of the estate, originally purchased by Richmond Pearson's father, was part of 820 acres inherited by Richmond Pearson and his four siblings.

Historic view of Richmond Hill House
Photo courtesy of North Carolina Collection, Pack Memorial Public Library, Asheville, North Carolina

By 1879, Pearson had spent nearly $3,000 purchasing his siblings' shares and held full title to the property. In 1882, Richmond married Gabrielle Thomas and a few years later, the couple moved to Asheville and decided to build a home on the estate. Despite being a 30 minute carriage ride away from Asheville, Richmond Hill was a center of social and political activity for many years. The Queen Anne style mansion could accommodate large gatherings and Richmond's beautiful and vivacious wife, Gabrielle, was a gracious hostess. After Richmond's death in 1923 and Gabrielle's death in 1924, the estate was left to their two children Marjorie Noel and James Thomas Pearson.

The house remained closed for nearly 27 years until Marjorie and Thomas returned, made some renovations and opened it to the public as a museum in 1953. Both Thomas and his father collected valuable objects from all over the world. These objects, combined with family heirlooms and antiques awed visitors to Richmond Hill, many of whom were conducted through the house by Thomas Pearson himself. Neither Marjorie nor Thomas ever married. Before Thomas's death in 1963, he and his sister sold the remaining Pearson property along the French Broad River, including 29 acres of the Richmond Hill tract, to developers of the Bingham Heights residential community. Following Marjorie's death in 1972, the Pearson family sold Richmond Hill to the Western North Carolina Baptist Retirement Home. After many years as a focal point in the community, the mansion faced demolition in 1978. In an effort to preserve and rehabilitate Richmond Hill, the Preservation Society of Asheville and Buncombe County moved the house 600 feet from its original location in 1984, on land that was part of the original estate. The Mansion was reopened as an inn in 1989.

The Oak Hall in Richmond Hill House
Photo courtesy of the Richmond Hill Inn

The Richmond Hill House is located at 87 Richmond Hill Dr. The inn is open to the public; for

North Carolina Collection
Pack Memorial Library, Asheville, NC

RICHMOND HILL SUMMER HOUSE

AN IDEAL HOME

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1932

KNOW YOUR COMMUNITY

DO YOU KNOW THAT back in 1897, William McKinley, twenty-fifth president of the United States, made a brief visit to Asheville? The above picture was taken at the old Battery Park hotel and shows the president seated in a carriage with a group of prominent Asheville citizens. They are, from left to right, the late Mayor J. E. Rankin, Richmond Pearson, lawyer, congressman and at one time Ambassador to Persia and Greece, President McKinley and Ed McKissick, manager of the Battery Park hotel.

Today's suggestion was made by Mrs. Grace R. Branch, 115 Norwood avenue, Asheville.

Mountain Topics

Ad Cit, By George W. McCoy 9-28-52

In honor of the memory of two distinguished North Carolina citizens, historical markers will be unveiled in Buncombe County next Saturday with appropriate exercises sponsored by the State Department of Archives and History, Raleigh.

The two are the late Richmond Pearson, diplomat, and the late Louis Burgin McBrayer, M. D. Both were highly gifted and achieved distinction in their fields.

The ceremony at the Pearson marker will be held at 3 p. m. Saturday at the northeast end of the Smoky Park Highway Bridge over the French Broad River, within sight of the Pearson homeplace, Richmond Hill.

The ceremony at the McBrayer marker will be held at 11 a. m. Saturday on the west side of N. C. Highway 191 (Brevard Road) at Sandy Bottoms near the mouth of Bent Creek. It is five miles south of Asheville and close by the birthplace of the physician.

* * * * *

Richmond Pearson, long a prominent figure in the life of Asheville and Western North Carolina, was born January 26, 1852, in Yadkin County. He was the son of Richmond Mumford Pearson, chief justice of the N. C. Supreme Court (1858-1878), and of Mrs. Margaret McClung (Williams) Pearson.

RICHMOND PEARSON

Richmond Pearson's paternal grandparents were Col. Richmond Pearson of Rowan County and his second wife, Elizabeth (Mumford) Pearson of Massachusetts. His mother's father was John Williams of Knoxville, U. S. senator from Tennessee and U. S. minister to Guatemala by appointment of President John Quincy Adams in 1825. John Williams' wife, Melinda (White) Williams, was a sister of Senator Hugh Lawson White of Tennessee.

Richmond Pearson was one of several children. His eldest sister, Ellen Brent, married Daniel G. Fowle, Governor of North Carolina from 1888-91. His sister Sally married J. M. Hobson of Alabama and their son, Captain (later Admiral) Richmond Pearson Hobson, achieved fame in the Spanish-American War by sinking the Merrimac, a collier, in the harbor of Santiago, Cuba, in June, 1898. Another sister, Mary, who married Captain E. Hayne Davis, C. S. A., of Statesville, was the mother of Major General Richmond Pearson Davis, U. S. A., and the grandmother of Brigadier General Hayne Davis Boyden (U. S. M. C., ret.) who now lives in Asheville.

* * * * *

Richmond Pearson graduated with honors at Princeton and was valedictorian of his class in 1872. He then studied law under his father and in 1874 was admitted to the N. C. bar. In that year, President Grant appointed him U. S. consul at Verviers and Liege, Belgium, and he remained in that position until 1877.

In 1879, the year following the death of his father, Pearson acquired some 300 or more acres overlooking Asheville from the west bank of the French Broad River. From that time onward, his life and activities were identified with this section. He named his place Richmond Hill, after his father's old home in Yadkin County, and for many years it was the center of social and political activities.

To reach his property, Pearson, in the 1880s, built a road from Asheville and it became known as Pearson Drive. He also built a bridge (Pearson's Bridge) over the French Broad River and it stood until the 1916 flood washed it away. In 1889 he began construction of a large frame house on the property which is three miles from Pack Square. Pearson tilled a portion of his hilly acreage and once jokingly referred to his farm as so poor that even jackrabbits had to carry their food in knapsacks when traveling over it.

In 1881, Sidney Lanier, the poet, accepted the invitation of his kinsman; Richmond Pearson, to come to Richmond Hill. In the late spring or early summer he pitched his tent and camped there for some two months in a vain effort to recover his health.

In 1882, Pearson married Gabrielle Thomas, daughter of James Thomas Jr., tobacco merchant of Richmond, Va. Their son, Thomas, and daughter, Marjorie, still own and reside at Richmond Hill where the house is filled with the lares and penates of generations.

One of Mrs. Richmond Pearson's sisters was the wife of Dr. J. L. M. Curry of Alabama, U. S. minister to Spain in the first Cleveland administration.

* * * * *

Pearson, a Republican, was a member of the N. C. Legislature (1885-89) and of the lower house of Congress (1895-1901). In June 1897, he headed the House team in a chess match with a House of Commons team which had issued the challenge. Played by cable, the game lasted two evenings and ended in a draw.

In Congress, Pearson was a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee. President Theodore Roosevelt appointed him U. S. consul at Genoa, Italy, in December, 1901; U. S. minister to Persia (1902-07) and minister to Greece and Montenegro (1907-09).

Retiring in 1909, Pearson spent his remaining years at Richmond Hill. He died there September 12, 1923. Mrs. Pearson survived him by a little more than a year.

* * * * *

Mrs. Peeke And Mrs. Allison Nominated For State Honor

Two Western North Carolina women are among the 16 district nominees for State Mother of the Year, to be named at a luncheon March 23 in Raleigh. Both have received recognition in the Asheville Citizen Woman of the Week feature.

Mrs. William J. Peeke of 29 King St., Asheville, the former Dorothy Gaskins, is the wife of a realtor. They have three children, a son now serving in Vietnam; two daughters and a foster daughter.

Mrs. Peeke has taught general and choral music in the David Millard Junior High School since 1938. She serves as director of the Kiwanis Boys Choir, and is counselor for the Mozart Junior Music Club.

The Women's Society of Christian Service of the Methodist Church, of which she is a member awarded her a Life Membership in 1962 in recognition and appreciation for her unselfish and varied responsibilities in the Church. She has been honored many times in the local and State Federation of Music Clubs. She is nominated for State Mother of the Year by the Asheville Music Club

Mrs. Daniel M. Allison, (Emma Johnson) of Sylva, married Dan Moore Allison, a merchant who later became Clerk of Superior Court of Jackson County, and then operated an Automobile dealership until 1967. Four children, two girls and two boys were born to them.

MRS. WILLIAM J. PEEKE

MRS. DANIEL M. ALLISON

Mrs. Allison has ably demonstrated that while she gave her family and home her first loyalty, she has reached out into the community to serve it in many ways of leadership and responsibilities. Her activities in the civic, religious, educational and cultural life of Sylva are numerous. Wherever she has served and in whatever capacity, she has displayed clear thinking, good judgment and good planning. With a warm heart and a tender insight into other persons' needs, she has touched and enriched lives of many beyond the threshold of her home.

She has shared her material as well as spiritual gifts with those less fortunate.

The Twentieth Century Club of Sylva nominates Mrs. Allison for State Mother of the Year with great appreciation for her service and leadership in their activities and to practically every other civic, church, educational and cultural organization in the community.

The State Mother will go to New York for the American Mothers Committee, Inc. Annual Conference May 5 to 9 to be held at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. At a gala luncheon in the Grand Ballroom of that hotel on May 9, the American Mother of the Year will be chosen from among the State Mothers.

CAROLE CURRIE
columnist

Teacher gets honored by symphony

When the first notes of the North Carolina Symphony concert sound in Thomas Wolfe Auditorium on May 16, Dorothy "Dot" Peeke will be beaming as she sits, surrounded by family and friends, savoring every note of the concert that is in her honor.

The auditorium could easily be filled with those whose lives she has touched in her long career as a music teacher, church organist and community volunteer. The North Carolina Symphony is especially dear to her heart because through the years she led hundreds of her students to hear the state symphony's concerts.

When she taught at Hill Street School, she walked to the auditorium with fourth-graders for the concerts. "Many of the children had never heard a symphony before," said Peeke. "I think they were really inspired."

Dorothy Gaskins Peeke grew up in Asheville, a piano student of Elta Blanchard and Grace Carroll. When she went to college at Woman's College (now the University of North Carolina at Greensboro), she said, "I just knew music was what I wanted to do."

Her first job was at David Millard Junior High as band, choral and orchestra director. Through the years, she taught music at Hill Street Middle School, South French Broad Junior High and Asheville High.

At the end of the school day, she didn't go home and just put her feet up. She and her husband brought up three active children and Peeke's musical talents were always in demand as a choir director or church organist. She stayed active in her own church, Central United Methodist, and was involved at local and state levels in the National Federation of Music Clubs. Peeke helped organize the North Carolina Symphony Guild. She was also active in the American Guild of Organists, and was president of Asheville Chamber Music.

When Dorothy joins, she usually leads, serving as an officer and digging in up to her elbows. Many of her efforts have been toward getting funds for student scholarships.

"I always heard about old age and read about it. It never occurred to me I would get old and here I am, 85," said Peeke, now a resident of the assisted living area of the WNC Baptist Home. Yet, when a group gathers there and when the call for volunteers goes out, her hand always goes up. She's taken her years of dedicated service so much for granted that when she was told the N.C. Symphony concert was in her honor, Peeke exclaimed, "Oh, you know not! This just can't be!"

The May 16 concert begins at 8 p.m. in the Thomas Wolfe Auditorium. Tickets are $15 for adults, $12 for seniors and students, and free for students 12 and under accompanied by a ticketed adult. Tickets are available at the Civic Center box office, 251-5505.

Former Marine Exposes Silver Shirts

Sensational stories of stolen army machine guns, secret drills in the California mountains and a plot to seize the government of the United States, as revealed by Virgil Hayes, former U. S. marine, have spurred the congressional committee investigating un-American activities to double its efforts to lay bare the secrets of the Silver Shirts in the San Diego area. Hayes is shown, seated, telling Volney P. Mooney, committee counsel, at Los Angeles, of drilling Silver Shirts in military tactics, small arms firing and street fighting. He also asserted he was offered $50 to steal government machine guns and $20 a case for ammunition. Inset is the card issued to Hayes as an instructor.

Asheville Citizen August 12, 1934

AUGUST 22, 1934

NAME FOURTH IN NEW INDICTMENT AGAINST PELLEY

H. M. Hardwicke Added To Gallahad Press Defendants

A fourth man, H. M. Hardwicke, was indicted along with William Dudley Pelley, Don D. Kellogg, and Robert C. Summerville, by the county grand jury yesterday for alleged security law violations in the sale of stock in the Galahad Press, Inc., now bankrupt.

Galahad Press, Inc., was nominal publisher of Liberation, organ of the Silver Shirt Legion of America, of which Pelley was commander-in-chief.

All but Hardwicke, who makes his home in Charlotte, were indicted on similar charges in June. The four are scheduled to face trial in superior court at the criminal term which starts September 17.

Hirdwicke is expected to be arrested soon. The others have been under $2,500 bond since their arrest after the first indictment.

Hardwicke's connection with the Pelley organizations was prior to their coming to Asheville, it was understood.

The first count of the 16-count indictment alleges the sale of unregistered stock of Galahad Press, Inc. The second count charges fraud. The third and fourth counts charge that the four men conspired to sell the alleged worthless stock. The fifth through the 15th counts claim illegal sale of stock, with each count naming a purchaser. The 16th count charges conspiracy in the sale of the stock to these 11 purchasers.

Purchasers claimed by the indictment to have been victimized by Pelley and his aides are Nila Allen, Lulu Wolbach, Bertha Allar, Fannie T. Sturgis, Helen Blocklin, Lon Morse, Ellida Morse, Anna M. Brinkley, Kathryn DeGouche', Hazel O. Chatelain, and Ross W. Chatelain.

Asheville Citizen August 22, 1934

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

Section Two | Tuesday, February 7, 195

Solicitor Seeks To Bring Pelley Back To State

Silver Shirt Leader Paroled; McLean Plans To Initiate Action

North Carolina officials announced last night they will attempt to imprison the former leader of the Silver Shirts of America—William Dudley Pelley.

Solicitor William McLean of Asheville said he would appeal through the state attorney general's office for Pelley's return.

The U. S. Parole Board announced in Washington yesterday that the former Asheville publisher would be paroled February 1 from a Federal penitentiary at Terre Haute, Ind. The 60-year-old prisoner was locked up there after his conviction at Noblesville, Ind., for sedition.

Still hanging over his head is a two-to-three year prison sentence in North Carolina. That judgment was affirmed by the State Supreme Court June 24, 1942. The Buncombe Superior Court judgment held that Pelley had violated terms of a suspended sentence given him here in 1935 on conviction of violating State laws governing securities dealings. North Carolina made no effort to invoke the sentence in 1942 because Pelley then was under Federal indictment in Indiana.

Pelley in 1935 was sentenced to one to two years and the sentence was suspended upon condition that he pay $1,000 fine and be of good behavior for five years. But in October, 1939, Superior Court Judge Zeb V. Nettles issued a capias here for Pelley to answer charges that he had violated terms of the suspended sentence.

Pelley appealed to the U. S. Supreme Court to resist extradition from Washington, D. C., where he and appeared before the Dies Un-American Committee. In January, 1942, Superior Court Judge F. Don Phillips held that Pelley had violated the conditions and sentenced him to the two-to-three years. Pelley appealed.

Judge Phillips held that the goateed defendant had libeled the President of the United States, had published advertisements containing "untrue, deceptive and misleading statements"; published "grossly inaccurate reports" of the 1935 trial, and organized "a secret political and military organization."

Pelley had appeared on the Asheville scene April 2, 1932. He said he would open a school of economics. Earlier he had lived in Pasadena, Calif. It was while living there in 1928, he once wrote in a magazine article, that he "died." He claimed to have left the world for seven to 10 minutes. Since then, he wrote, his life had been "saturated with things mystical, spiritual and esoteric."

In January of 1933 Pelley organized his Silver Shirts headquarters here and began weekly publication of the order's magazine, "Liberation." About the same time he opened Gallahad College.

The master of the Silver Shirts obtained a divorce from Marion Harriet Pelley on July 9, 1934. Fifteen days later he married Minnie Helen Hauseman on a mountaintop near here.

In January of 1935 he was convicted of violating blue sky laws and was given the prison sentence which was suspended pending good behavior.

He claimed a membership of 75,000 in his Silver Shirt organization. In September of 1936 he announced his candidacy for President of the United States; platform "For Christ and the Constitution."

He began publication work in his Skyland Press in suburban Biltmore in 1939. This firm supplanted Gallahad Press which had been placed in bankruptcy in 1934.

In late summer of 1939 he sought to restrain the Dies Un-American Activities Committee from summoning him to testify, but a Federal judge rejected his plea. His next step was to file a $3,150,000 damage suit against members of the Dies committee. He charged he had been injured by their statements.

Pelley disappeared from North Carolina, and in 1939 officers moved into his offices and impounded stacks of records. Judge Nettles then directed that a capias be issued for him.

Pelley was a frank admirer of Nazi and Fascist totalitarian regimes in Europe but denied that his Silver Shirts were in any way connected with German nazism or Italian fascism.

• • •

Asheville Citizen February 7, 1950

Pelley Held Under Bond For This State

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 14. (AP)—William Dudley Pelley, former Silver Shirt leader paroled from prison today, was ordered back to North Carolina to face a prison sentnce.

Gov. Henry F. Schricker ordered the extradition at a hearing which climaxed a busy court day for Pelley, who was released from the Federal prison at Terre Haute, Ind., this morning.

Pelley was taken into custody by Sheriff John Trieweiler at Terre Haute for North Carolina, but within a few hours was free again on a writ of habeas corpus. His attorneys put up $1,000 bond.

The attorneys then sped to Indianapolis for the extradition hearing. The 59-year-old former leader of the Silver Shirts did not appear personally for the hearing and it could not be learned where he was.

Two law officers from Asheville, N. C.—Deputy Sheriff J. C. Gibbs and City Detective H. F. Brownlee—said they would arrest Pelley as soon as they could find him.

The extradition order doesn't mean that Pelley will go back to North Carolina immediately, Charles F. O'Connor, Indiana deputy attorney general, said.

The legal maneuver at Terre Haute today gives him freedom on bond until a hearing can be held there before Superior Court Judge Clay A. Phillips March 8. This hearing will be on the writ under which Phillips freed Pelley on bond today.

Pelley, who had spent more than seven years in the Federal prison on a war-time sedition charge, is wanted in North Carolina on a charge of violating a suspended sentence. He was convicted there and sentenced to a two-to-three year term for violating the state securities sales law.

Pelley, graying and with sagging cheeks, smoked a cigarette and sipped a soft drink while his attorneys obtained the habeas corpus writ at Terre Haute.

He was sentenced in Federal Court at Indianapolis August 12, 1942, to 15 years on the sedition charge. He was convicted on an indictment charging him with attempting to incite mutiny in the nation's armed forces during the war and also of attempting to obstruct recruiting.

Asheville Citizen February 15, 1950

'The Whole World. .'

—Photos by John Love

Nine-year-old Carolyn Penley of Eugene Rankin Elementary School was among the first of a colorful array of youthful singers, instrumentalists and dancers to perform at City Auditorium last night. She sang "He's Got The Whole World In His Hands." Sammy Cowan of West Asheville was another pint-sized artist. Sammy's three years old.

Funeral Is Held For Aged Veteran Sunday

Funeral service for Ransome Penley, 86, Confederate veteran, who died at his home at 44 Hazel Mill road, West Asheville, Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock, was conducted at Gash's Creek Baptist church Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The veteran was a member of the Zeb Vance Camp of Confederate Veterans, and is survived by his widow, several children and grandchildren.

Asheville Citizen May 7, 1929

GEORGE PENNELL FIRST VICTIM OF NEW ORDINANCE

George Pennell, city corporation counsel who drafted the new city license tax ordinance, fell victim to his own work late yesterday afternoon. The new ordinance provides for a tax of $5 on each male dog within the city limits.

Dogcatcher Thomas Pruitt feeling that he should make some Saturday afternoon collections approached the attorney and collected $5 as tax on Mr. Pennell's dog. The corporation counsel earned the distinction of being the first resident here to pay his 1929 dog license.

Asheville Citizen June 29, 1929

Pennell Gives Civitans 'Tallyho Ride' Of Asheville In Late Nineteenth Ceutury

By PETE GILPIN
Citizen Staff Writer

Attorney George C. Pennell Tuesday took Asheville Civitans on a fanciful trip of an Asheville that no modern tourist bureau could match. Ash Citizen

Speaking at the club's luncheon meeting in George Vanderbilt Hotel, Pennell harked back to his hometown in the 19th century.

Most of it was news to the assembled members, the majority not natives. 1-3-62

First Pennell conjured up the image of a "tallyho" which belonged to Frank Coxe's grandfather. Then, all figuratively jammed aboard, the tour began.

First, there was the site of the hotel in which they were meeting, at one time a girl's Female Academy. Then on to the center of Morristown, later renamed Asheville. Pack Square's location was set so many feet from the mounds of Indian graves from an even earlier time. The grave site, he pointed out, is the present locale for the S. H. Kress & Co. store.

Five different courthouses were situated on Pack Square and the first one must have been a doozy. It was built of logs with no underpinning, Pennell said, and caused one judge to threaten his resignation. The jurist said he was being eaten up with fleas from hogs and couldn't hear the testimony because of the noise from animals' rooting.

The present Plaza Theater once was the location of the stocks and whipping post. And Tom Wolfe's famed angel had a home where the Jackson Building now stands.

Even in those days, native son Pennell recalled, you could pick up a "parking ticket" by hitching your horse to the hitching ring on Pack Square reserved for the sheriff.

And, speaking of sheriffs, there was one who aroused his constituents' ire for not taking the proper precautions in handling unique punishment. Seems three women had erred from the path of the law and were sentenced to be dunked three times in a pool where Pritchard Park is located.

As one woman went down for the second time, up floated her petticoat. As she was brought to the surface, her pantaloons were plainly visible, a sight which stirred the crowd to high indignation that their chief law officer had not taken better precautions.

Pennell recalled the days when 7,000 tuberculosis victims were part of the population. Patients being brought in at the train station might well be greeted by the sight of coffins in the station waiting to be transported away.

The Wake Forest-graduated lawyer also cited how his alma mater benefitted from the old Melk estate. The 60-room mansion was once a show place in the west end, but when sold later a $4,000 trust was set up for the college.

Original Standard Oil stock was purchased and later original Coca-Cola stock was bought with the original $4,000 spiraling to more than $1,000,000.

Up and down Patton and Biltmore avenues, describing a day when the streets not only had different names but would never have been recognized by his listeners, Pennell roamed, occasionally switching to a street car. And, he pointed out, Asheville was the second town in the nation to have street cars.

"We had progressive citizens in those days," he quipped.

There was the house on Victoria

Asheville Citizen January 3, 1962

HOLD FUNERAL FOR PENNELL'S BOY ON TUESDAY

Young Son of City Attorney Follows His Mother And Baby Brother To Grave.

Jack Gardner Pennell, seven-year-old son of George Pennell, city attorney, died at his home, 77 Chestnut street, at 10 40 o'clock Sunday morning. He had been critically ill of toxicnephritis for about a week.

Funeral services will be held at the residence at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The Rev. J. B. Grice, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, the Rev. T. A. Groce, pastor of West Asheville Methodist church, and the Rev. R. O Arbuckle, of Reeds chapel will conduct the services. Burial will be in Green Hill cemetery.

Pall bearers will be A L. Duckett, E. C. Greene, Fred L. Sale, John W Fortson, Mayor Gallatin Roberts and J. E. Kanipe.

The boy was a member of the Sunday school of West End Baptist church and the 1-B grade at Orange street school. He is survived by his father. His mother and baby brother died her about three months ago.

In respect to Mr. Pennell in his great sorrow, the city commissioners called off their daily meeting Monday.

Asheville Times November 14, 1927

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Pennell, George Clingman

Pennell Services Saturday

Services for George Clingman Pennell, 73, of 15 N. Kensington Rd., well-known Asheville attorney and civic leader who died Thursday morning, will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday in First Baptist Church.

NOV 18 1966

Dr. W. Perry Crouch, former pastor, Dr. Cecil E. Sherman, pastor, and Dr. Forrest Feezor will officiate. Burial will be in Green Hills Cemetery.

Masonic graveside rites will be conducted by members of Mt. Hermon Lodge 118, AF & AM.

A - CITIZEN

Pallbearers will be Dr. William T. Pennell, Dr. Roy F. Roberts, Dan G. Crouch, Emory M. Wilde, Robert T. Willson, Dewey J. O'Kelly, Harold Roberts and Cecil C. Curtiss.

Honorary pallbearers will be William C. Hampton, Larkin M. Smith, Willis H. Groce, Dr. Samuel L. Crow, Dr. Walter Clark, A. C. Carter, Wade M. Steelman, Zebulon Lee, Paul Boling, Melvin L. Riesenberg, Joseph D. DeNardo, Julius S. Harrill, Clark Pennell, Morris May, D. Ross May, Sam M. Cathey, Reuben Barnitz, James Worley, C. R. Hunter, Ray F. Wyrick, J. Nick Davis, Ernest Z. Stines, Dr. Coy Carpenter, Dr. Jesse Chapman, Dr. J. B. Anderson, Col. Arthur J. Wilburn, Coleman Zageir, John E. Jervis, Robert Barnes, John J. Denton and members of the Citizens' Bible Class, Buncombe County Bar Association, the board of deacons of the church and board of directors of Green Hills Cemetery Association.

Morris-Hendon Funeral Home is in charge.

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Pennell, George Clingman

George Pennell, Attorney, Dies

NOV 17 1966
A - CITIZEN

Attorney George Clingman Pennell, active in many facets of Asheville life for more than half a century, died at 12:05 a.m. in a local hospital. He was 73.

Mr. Pennell was a member of the law firm of Sale, Pennell & Pennell, one of the oldest in the city, until that firm dissolved in 1953. He had practiced law since 1915.

Among Mr. Pennell's public service was eight years as corporation counsel for the city of Asheville; six years as attorney for the City School Board and eight years as chairman of the County Board of Elections.

He was co-author with his brother, the late Judge of County Court Burgin Pennell, of Pennells' Asheville Code in 1923. It contains the Charter, ordinances and public utilities franchises for the city.

But Mr. Pennell's interests extended far beyond the practice of law. He was known almost equally well as a churchman, an historian, circus buff, champion of labor and cemeterian.

George Pennell was born May 12, 1893, in Asheville, son of the late Thomas LeRoy Pennell, who died in 1931 and Mrs. Frances Sharpe Pennell, who died in 1906. His parents had come to Asheville from Caldwell County.

He attended Queen Carson School and Asheville High School and was graduated from Wake Forest College with a bachelor of law degree in 1914, and he started the general practice of law here shortly afterward. He was licensed to practice law in the Supreme Court of North Carolina, the Supreme Court of the United States, the Circuit Court of Appeals and the U. S. District Court, the U.S. Treasury, Department of Revenue and the Interstate Commerce Commission. He was a member of the North Carolina Bar, Buncombe County Bar, District Bar and Interstate Commerce Commission associations.

Mr. Pennell served for many years as a deacon of the First Baptist Church and recently was nominated as a Life Deacon. He wrote the church history and for 22 years broadcast the Sunday School lesson of the Citizens Bible Class from the church chapel.

He served on numerous boards, commissions and foundations of the North Carolina State Baptist Convention and was a trustee of the North Carolina Baptist Foundation for six years and of Mars Hill College.

A former trustee of Wake Forest and the School of Medicine there, he was vice president of the Wake Forest College General Alumni Association four years, of the Wake Forest Deacon Club three years and the Wake Forest Athletic Association, three years.

At Wake Forest, he had been a cheer leader, president of the Honor Roll Council, junior-sophomore debater, president of the law class, president of the Student Senate, editor of the YMCA Handbook, anniversary orator and commencement orator. He maintained this interest in Wake Forest over the years, having been president of the Wake Forest Alumni Association of Buncombe County and was serving as class representative for the Half Century Classes.

Mr. Pennell was master of Mt. Hermon Lodge No. 118, AF & AM, in 1951 and was general chairman of the 100th anniversary celebration of the lodge, for which he wrote the history. He also was a member of Esther Chapter No. 12, Order of the Eastern Star, and of the Woodmen of the World, serving 15 years as district deputy Grand Sachem of the Improved Order of Redmen.

Mr. Pennell had said that his only hobby was running a cemetery, and for 39 years he served without compensation as superintendent - treasurer of Green Hills Cemetery. He was a member of the American Cemetery Association (director six years, secretary-treasurer four years) and currently was a legal advisor to the association. He also was a member of the Southern and North Carolina Cemetery Associations and had written numerous treatises on the Law of Cemeteries.

Mr. Pennell's history of the City of Asheville, "Tallyhoing Around Historic Asheville," has been delivered 85 times to Asheville civic groups and other organizations.

Mr. Pennell did legal work for almost 200 circus, rodeo and carnival clients and counted his friends and acquaintances among show people by the hundreds.

He was for 30 years attorney for Asheville Central Labor Union and practically all of its locals and served as attorney for the N. C. State Federation of Labor for many years.

MEMORIAL PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASHEVILLE, N.C.

He is survived by the widow, Madeline White Pennell; a son, Dr. Timothy C. Pennell, an instructor in the Department of Surgery of Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Winston-Salem; a daughter, Mrs. Luther G. Brewer of Cary; and grandchildren Melanie and George Clifton Pennell and Gordon, Rosemary and Timothy Brewer.

GEORGE C. PENNELL

WNC Elections 2001

Inside:

- List of municipal races in WNC's 17 counties, Page A4
- Regional races to watch, Page A4
- A look at the issues that the new Asheville City Council will face, Page A5

Terry M. Bellamy

Chuck Cloninger

H. K. Edgerton

Nine running for mayor's job

Sixteen file for Asheville council seats

Dave Goree

By Melissa Williams
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — Candidate filing for statewide municipal elections closed at noon Friday, and 25 hopefuls will vie for your vote in the Oct. 9 primary.

Mayor Leni Sitnick, the city's first four-year, full-time mayor, isn't seeking re-election, and nine residents are in the hunt for her seat.

Another sixteen residents are looking for jobs as council members, only two less than the 18 who ran for seats in 1998.

The primary will winnow down the race to two candidates for mayor, and two candidates for each available seat on council.

By state law, the race is non-partisan, which rules out the option of voting strictly along party lines. That sits well with voters who like to choose candidates on the issues and not solely based on party affiliation.

But others, like life-long Libertarian Clark Walter, think such connections help grease the wheels of democracy.

"Most citizens don't follow politics," he said, "and over half of them are so passive they don't even vote. It's a noble idea to vote for a man or a woman and what they stand for, but it requires a lot of work and participation in the political process. I think you're better off voting for the platform of a party if you don't know who the candidates are."

To some degree, Walter is right. In the last municipal election, with the wide choice of council candidates, about 20,000 of the county's 130,881 registered voters actually voted. In that November's general election, the number blossomed to 38,405 voters — still only a third of people qualified to vote.

"With a partisan election, you have a rough idea of where candidates stand," said UNCA political science professor Bill Sabo.

Please see RACE on A4

Mickey Mahaffey

Brian Peterson

Charlie Worley

CANDIDATES FOR MAYOR

2001 Candidates for Mayor of Asheville Primary (Oct. 9):

- Terry M. Bellamy
- William E. Boyd (no photo provided)
- Chuck Cloninger
- H. K. Edgerton
- Dave Goree
- Mickey Mahaffey
- Brian Peterson
- Bill Porter (no photo provided)
- Charlie Worley

COUNCIL CANDIDATES

2001 Candidates for Asheville City Council Primary (Oct. 9):

- George Bancroft
- Harold "Cicada" Brokaw
- Bernard B. Carman
- Jim Ellis
- Fred J. English
- Barbara Field
- Edward Hay
- Sharon K. Martin
- Carl Mumpower
- Brownie Newman
- Susan O'Neil
- Sam Webb
- Rod A. Whiteside
- Kevin Rollins
- Joe Dunn
- Holly Jones

Continued from A1

"But with a non-partisan race, trying to distinguish the candidates tends to discourage voters. The more complex the choice, the harder it is to choose."

But this year, the nine-deep field of candidates in quest of the mayor's seat is bound to generate the lion's share of interest.

Four sitting council members are challenging each other to become the next mayor. The remaining two council members are looking to retain their current seats. And they'll all have to work with each other as they simultaneously campaign against each other.

Anyone who's attended City Council meetings since the election filing season opened on July 6, knows that Sitnick has made a point not to allow any commentary that she deems a "campaign speech."

Sitnick said she still intends to bring the gavel down on any political grandstanding.

"With six members of City Council running for office," she said, "the only campaign speeches I'm going to allow are mine."

Contact Williams at 236-8971 or MWilliams@CITIZEN-TIMES.com

Peterson guarantees 'common-sense leadership'

By Melissa Williams
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — Councilman Brian Peterson says he wants to take the city's helm as mayor "to ensure that city council continues to be open and responsive to the concerns of all Asheville residents."

Peterson, currently in his first tenure on council, said he'd bring "common-sense leadership" to the city if elected to a higher post.

"I believe that city government needs to focus more on bread-and-butter, basic city service instead of pie-in-the-sky plans cooked up by out-of-town consultants."

Peterson, who lives in West Asheville with his wife Cynthia Cooke, said he sees himself as a protector of the city's neighborhoods, and would continue that role as mayor.

Brian Peterson

"I believe that protecting and improving our neighborhoods is vital to the city's future," he said. "Asheville has prospered because this is a wonderful place to live. Issues such as better enforcement of traffic laws and zoning rules need to be addressed. In addition, more resources need to be allocated for community policing, traffic calming, street and sidewalk repair and neighborhood parks."

Peterson said he's up to the challenge.

"I have endeavored to be a strong and independent voice for the residents of Asheville."

BRIAN PETERSON

Age: 38
Education: Bachelor of arts, Washington & Lee University, J.D., University of North Carolina Law School
Occupation: Attorney, law firm of Grimes & Teich
Civic activities: Member of Calvary Baptist Church, former president and current board member of the Coalition of Asheville Neighborhoods, vice president of the West Asheville Estates Neighborhood Association

Asheville City Councilman
Brian Peterson

For more information or questions, please contact Brian Peterson at 251-0800 or send e-mail to: brian.peterson@grimesandteich.com

Brian Peterson lives in West Asheville and is involved in our community. He is Vice President of the West Asheville Estates Neighborhood Association. Other current or past community involvement in West Asheville includes:

- Haywood Road Master Plan Advisory Committee
- West Asheville Business Association
- West Asheville History Project
- VFW Post 891

Brian Peterson was elected to Asheville City Council in 1999. As a Councilman, Peterson has worked hard to protect and improve all of Asheville's neighborhoods. He believes in open and responsive city government.

Brian Peterson is an attorney with the law firm of Grimes and Teich. He is married to Cynthia Cooke who is also an attorney and a small business owner. They attend Calvary Baptist Church.

Brian Peterson
42 Vance Crescent
Asheville, NC 28806

PRSRT-STD
U.S. Postage Paid
Asheville, NC
Permit # 461

*ECRWSHC-023

Peterson starts law practice in wake of scandal, censure, separation

By Melissa Williams
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — He's calling it "a summer of change."

For Asheville City Councilman Brian Peterson, that may not be saying enough.

In the past few months, Peterson, 40, has faced personal and political turmoil unlike any he's experienced before in his four years on City Council.

The Fort Bragg native has been publicly accused by police of being in the company of a suspected prostitute, been formally censured, separated from his wife of six years and left his job with the law firm of Grimes & Teich.

The last change, he said, was a move to start his own law practice specializing in Social Security disability claims and worker's compensation. He opened the firm, called Brian Peterson Law Offices, on Monday.

Right now, the office is "a bit disorganized," Peterson said. He and his legal assistants are still buying office supplies, getting used to the phone system and keeping track of the 150 some clients who came with Peterson from Grimes & Teich.

He said striking out on his own after nearly 10 years with that firm wasn't a new idea.

"It's something that's kind of been brewing for six months," he said Wednesday. "It's been a long term kind of change."

He denied that the move was spurred by his recent political troubles. During Memorial Day weekend, Peterson was cited for a traffic violation after

Please see PETERSON on A5

Brian Peterson

PETERSON:

Continued from A1

police said he picked up a suspected prostitute. Neither he nor the woman was charged with solicitation.

It was the second time in as many years that the councilman has been stopped by police in the early hours with a woman in his car.

Then, in early June, the rest of City Council formally censured Peterson for "conduct (that) ... tends to undermine and damage the council's credibility with the public in general and with law enforcement in particular."

Before any of that happened, Peterson's wife and law school sweetheart, Cynthia L. Cooke had moved out of their West Asheville home.

"It's definitely been a summer of change, and it's still pretty hectic," he said. "I don't even have a kitchen table or a microwave yet."

Henry Teich wouldn't comment Wednesday on the reasons for Peterson's leaving his job as a partner with Grimes & Teich.

"All I can say is he's no longer with the firm," Teich said.

Peterson joined Grimes & Teich in 1994, fresh out of law school at Chapel Hill. When Peterson made an unsuccessful 1996 bid for the 51st State House District, Teich was more forthcoming about his colleague.

"He's a look-out-for-the-underdog kind of guy," he said. "And he's effective, tenacious — that's why we hired him. I mean, the guy will work all day and all night on a problem."

For years, Grimes & Teich has had an advertisement on the back cover of the Bell South telephone book and that ad has included a picture of Peterson. This year, Peterson's picture is gone — a decision he said was made in May.

Lavoy Spooner, an area director with Bell South, said the deadline for artwork on such ads was May 1. That was more than three weeks before Peterson's last controversial traffic stop.

Peterson said he plans to concentrate on solidifying his law firm and won't seek re-election to his council seat, which expires on Dec. 2.

"Maybe I'd run for office again when I'm 60, but for now I need to work on this," he said. "I'll probably look back in a couple of years and wonder why I didn't do it sooner."

Asheville Citizen July 24, 2003

WEDNESDAY,
October 10, 2001

Peterson, Worley top mayoral candidates

Field, Cloninger lose City Council seats

By Jason Sandford
ASSISTANT METRO EDITOR

ASHEVILLE — Brian Peterson, a first-term member of Asheville City Council who has campaigned on a promise to be a "neighborhood mayor," topped the ticket in Tuesday's primary election for mayor, while four-term incumbent Councilwoman Barbara Field, apparently lost her seat.

Peterson will face fellow Councilman Charlie Worley in the Nov. 6 election, according to the Buncombe County Board of Elections' unofficial returns Tuesday night. Peterson collected 3,618 votes, while Worley tallied 2,639 votes.

"I've spoken up on issues people care about," Peterson said after watching results come in at the elections board office in downtown Asheville. "It's not just what I've said during the last two weeks, but what I've said during the last two years on council."

Chuck Cloninger, council's vice mayor, lost his bid for mayor and will lose his council seat, according to the results. Cloninger notched 1,821 votes.

In the crowded race for three open City Council seats, Field didn't collect enough votes to finish among the top six candidates who will move on. The six who did are Joe Dunn, Holly Jones, Carl Mumpower, Brownie Newman, Jim Ellis and Councilman Edward Hay. Dunn collected 5,607 votes, while Jones had 4,646, Mumpower tallied 4,442, Newman got 4,199, Ellis had 3,708 and Hay nabbed 2,728 votes.

Field was dogged by controversy over comments she made last month as council discussed a resolution regarding the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Field had said she disagreed with the use of the word "cowardly" to describe the attacks in the resolution. She later apologized for the comments.

In Hendersonville, incumbent Mayor Fred Niehoff Jr. will face Mark White next month in the race for mayor, according to unofficial results. For council, incumbent Mary Jo Padgett advanced with Ron Stephens, Jon Laughter and Mark Cordaro. The four are vying for two open council seats.

Tuesday's results in Asheville will pit pro-neighborhood Peterson against pro-business Worley.

The results also set up the unusual scenario of council appointing one person to fill the vacancy created when either Peterson or Worley takes the mayor's seat, because neither of their seats was up for election Tuesday night.

Candidates heading to general election

MAYOR

Brian Peterson

Charles Worley

CITY COUNCIL

Joe Dunn

Edward Hay

Carl Mumpower

Jim Ellis

Holly Jones

Brownie Newman

Five Brothers Serving In Fighting Forces

CURTIS EUGENE LECIL LESTER MURPHY

The five brothers, pictured above, sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Pettit of 169 Laurel loop, West Asheville, are doing their full share in the war effort by serving in the United States army.

Pettit Family Is Furnishing U. S. With Small Army — 5 Brothers Are In The Service

The Pettit brothers—five strong—are lined up now and ready to give the Germans and Japs some real trouble. The five sons of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Pettit of 169 Laurel loop are all members of the United States army.

Sergeant Murphy Pettit, 22, is serving with the first engineers at Camp Blanding, Fla.; Acting Corporal Eugene Pettit, 27, is in the signal air warning service at the army airport at Florence, S. C.; Private First Class Curtis Pettit, 24, is a cook at the army airport at Orlando, Fla.; Private Lecil Pettit is a teletype operator in the air raid warning service at Maxwell Field, Montgomery, Ala., and Lester Pettit is a bookkeeper in the quartermaster corps at Camp Sutton.

All of the boys with the exception of one volunteered, and with the exception of Sergeant Pettit, all have entered the service since November of last year. Lecil and Lester are twin.

Before entering the army as a selectee, Eugene was a foreman for the American Enka corporation. Curtis was in the restaurant business in Washington. Lecil was connected with the Underwood Typewriter company and Lester was with the Southern Bell Telephone company at Columbia, S. C.

All of the boys were reared in Asheville and attended Lee Edwards high school. Sergeant Pettit entered the army as soon as he finished his schooling.

The father, who is employed by the Jones Construction company, also has been doing his share in the war effort in connection with army construction projects. He recently has been working in Alabama but is being transferred to Charlotte.

Curtis is at home with his parents for a short furlough now and will return to his army duties Thursday.

Asheville Times May 19, 1942

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, Saturday, May 7, 1966

—Photo by Malcolm Gamble

MRS. PHILLIPS MRS. BRYSON

Mother's Love Goes Second Mile

By MARY LACY BYRD

The highest type of Motherhood is exemplified in the life of Mrs. Edna Walsh Phillips of 78 Fairfax Avenue.

Born and reared in West Asheville, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Walsh, she attended Asheville Normal and graduated from Haywood Institute at Clyde. She went into the teaching profession and served as a school principal and later taught second grade at Johnson School.

Mrs. Phillips was the typical mother of a growing family with varied interest until tragedy struck full-force in August 1950. The oldest daughter, Katherine P. Bryson, the mother of three children and another baby expected momentarily, was stricken with polio.

After every known treatment had been tried at the Orthopedic Hospital, it was known that life for Katherine from now on would be that of an iron-lung patient. The home at 78 Fairfax Avenue that had been built for her by her father, was remadeled and equipped to provide care for her and Mrs. Phillips assumed the responsibility of constant care.

After 16 years as mother-nurse - companion with strong family ties of the Walsh family background undergirding her, and the spiritual strength that has come to both mother and daughter, Mrs. Phillips has no regrets. She has been able to maintain a home, be a mother to Katherine and Ellis Anne, now Mrs. Charles Starnes of Arden, and to enjoy being a grandmother to five.

Reading had always been a favorite pastime for Mrs. Phillips and now she has been able to enjoy sharing that with Katherine. They both enjoy reading the Bible daily. Mrs. Phillips' favorite passage is Romans 8-35-39. She also enjoys keeping Katherine's correspondence up-to-date and that means letters and cards to all parts of the world.

Friends are always welcome at the Phillips' home and several thousands annually visit with these two women and leave feeling much better than when they arrived. As members of the Grace Baptist Church, the church fellowship is shared in the home.

The one outside activity that Mrs. Phillips has clung to, is that of a Birthday Club which was organized 25 years ago by a small group of women as a Breakfast Club and later changed. They always manage to have a dinner meeting on members' birthdays, and this has helped through the years. Telephoning has also helped to keep contacts with friends and to brighten the days.

Mrs. Phillips says she has done nothing more than any other mother would have done under like circumstances but she has gone the second mile in service and love with her inspiring attitude.

School's Life Skills Class Teaches Practical Skills, Self-Confidence

By FREDA BARRY
Staff Writer

Rag dolls, stuffed animals, bottles of perfume, bikes, tickets for private airplane rides and a semi-precious diamond ring are just a few of the items Archie Pierce has collected for the auction she puts on for her Life Skills class at Hall Fletcher Middle School every year.

The auction is held in the classroom and gives the kids a chance to do a little Christmas shopping for themselves. Other teachers, students and friends tote in shopping bags full of all kinds of goodies every year for the auction, and the kids always manage to supply a few surprises of their own.

One year, she was sure that one little boy would go for the bike on which the whole class worked so hard to restore to its former beauty. But he bid on a genuine, second-hand leather coat for his mom and got that instead of the bike.

Another little boy traded in his tokens not for a toy for himself but for a doll he was sure his little sister would love.

The tokens that the kids use to trade for Christmas items are collected throughout the year; a blue token is awarded for each book read; a red token is awarded for math problems solved; and white tokens are used to reward good behavior in class or on the school bus.

The award tokens are stored in the classroom in glass jars with the children's names on them for safe-keeping until auction time — Pierce has discovered that old poker chips serve just fine as tokens.

She used to reward the class with sweet rolls, but when that got to be too fattening for everyone concerned, she decided on the tokens to be used in exchange for toys and dolls at the Christmas auction.

The idea actually originated when she was given a wreck of a bicycle to do with as she could for her class.

"The boys got so interested,

— See CLASS, Page 11

CHRISTMAS AUCTION — Archie Pierce has collected all kinds of dolls and toys for her Life Skills class auction at Hall Fletcher Middle School. (Photo by Freda Barry)

Asheville Citizen
Date not known

BIKE SHOP — Virginia Cox and Vince Finley get a few tips on the art of bike repair from their teacher, Archie Pierce. Her Life Skills class restores old bikes to give to other kids at Christmas and for their own class auction as well. (Photo by Freda Barry) wanting to fix it up and everything, I decided to reward them for each bit of repair work done," she said.

Class

— Continued From Page 10

The idea grew into a yearly project not only to collect tokens for the auction but to repair old bikes to present to other children who just might really need a bike under their Christmas tree. And, of course, one would be put aside for the class auction.

Fellow teacher Richard Davis pitched in by turning over his vocational workshop so the Life Skills students could take their turn repairing and painting old bikes in time for Christmas.

Such hands-on experience is the very essence of a Life Skills class.

"Most of what we try to teach is common sense, even for such everyday stuff as grocery shopping," said Pierce.

"In class, they learn to work out their shopping budgets, using store ads to estimate what they can afford to buy. Then Barbara Clark and I take the kids out in groups of six to go to a grocery store. The next day, we cook a meal together, and that teaches them even more."

The purpose of the class is to teach the youngsters common sense life skills that they can use far beyond their school years, such as housekeeping skills, baby-sitting, basic first aid and other health courses in addition to basic reading, writing and arithmetic.

Playing a part in that kind of education is very important to Pierce, who says, "To me, it's a calling. Even though it's very frustrating at times, it does teach you to be patient."

One of the biggest stumbling blocks in teaching such a group is the negative attitude that many young people come to class with, but she meets each day and each child with such boundless energy that there's no doubt that she does indeed back up her claim:

"A positive attitude is something that can be taught," she declares. "If you provide them with one good experience after another and couple that with love and discipline, negative attitudes can be overcome.

"You have to be firm with these kids — with any kid — but you also have to let them know that you love them."

Asheville Citizen
date not known

History professor and Asheville native Dan Pierce fits right in at the Tastee Diner on Haywood Road, where he's likely to run into fellow NASCAR fans.

Southern Historian at Heart

Professor and author Dan Pierce honors his own roots as he explores Southern history for his books and his classes at The University of North Carolina at Asheville.

By Arnold Wengrow

PHOTOGRAPHY BY MATT ROSE

Dan Pierce admits it freely. Growing up in West Asheville, he spent much of his youth trying to dodge the "redneck" and "cracker" labels. Then, while in graduate school at The University of Alabama, he took a course taught by the noted Southern historian Grady McWhiney. And as McWhiney talked about Celtic culture in the Old South, Pierce began to see himself — and the people he grew up with — in a light that gave him pride.

"At a certain point, you either change the way you talk and take on a totally different lifestyle, or you embrace who you are."

"The first book we read was Plain Folk of the Old South by Frank Owsley," Pierce says. "It opened my eyes to notions about the history of ordinary working-class people, that there was something important there."

So important that not only did Pierce stop denying his roots, he's well on his way to becoming a Southern historian of note, chairing the History Department at the University of North Carolina at Asheville and writing books as he explores the grit and determination of the Southern working class.

Racing convert

If, as Grady McWhiney claimed, "cracker" is rooted in the Gaelic "craic" for "entertaining conversation," the word nails Pierce. He looks and talks a little like a mash-up of Andy Griffith and Bill Clinton, with a hint of Gomer and Goober thrown in. He even refers to himself, with pride, as the "token cracker" on campus.

Pierce writes serious history but strives to reach more than historians. His first book, The Great Smokies: From Natural Habitat to National Park, is something of a bestseller. While most academic books find their primary audiences on college campuses and are considered successes if their sales top out at several hundred copies, Pierce's book has sold nearly 5,000 copies and continues to do well in park bookstores.

In the book, Pierce doesn't focus on the businessmen and politicians who created the park. The chapter of which he's most proud tells the story of the farm families who were removed from their land. Many of their stories he collected firsthand. One of his favorites is from Glenn Cardwell, the mayor of Pittman Center, Tennessee, who grew up in Greenbrier section, now part of the park. As Pierce tells it, one day, when he was eight or nine years old, Cardwell followed a trail going up through the woods on his father's farmland and came upon a still.

"Well, he goes running, 'Daddy, Daddy, there's a still up there,' " Pierce relates. "His father says, 'Boy, shut your mouth.' Now, his dad was a good Baptist deacon, but there wasn't any conflict. In fact, the sheriff of the county was his best customer."

Pierce's second book, Real NASCAR: White Lightning, Red Clay, and Big Bill France (see a review on page 16) was published by UNC Press in April and is likely to reach an even bigger audience. He wrote it to show why hundreds of thousands of people in the Piedmont love stock car racing. Pierce himself is a latecomer to motor sports. As a child, he considered the Friday night noise from the Asheville Speedway near his house a nuisance. Then, in 1994, a former college roommate talked Pierce into attending a then-Winston Cup race at Bristol Motor Speedway. Pierce was an instant convert.

Since that experience, he's attended at least one top-division NASCAR race each season. The first thing he does each day is check out NASCAR news and gossip on the Internet, then update his blog, RealNASCAR.com. And in his campus office, alongside diplomas and awards hanging on his walls, you'll find the side panel from the Number 22 Caterpillar Dodge Challenger that Dave Blaney drove in the 2006 NASCAR Sprint Cup.

Feisty spirit

For Pierce, his fascination with NASCAR comes not only from the thrills generated by a herd of high-performance autos screaming around a track. Underneath the flash, Pierce appreciates the spirit he sees in both the drivers and the fans. It's the same spirit that intrigued him in McWhiney's class. It's the notion, he says, of "how people who are in difficult circumstances, who are low down on the economic scale, low down on the social scale, create their own world, whether it's making art out of junk or making your car drive faster than anybody else in your neighborhood."

What he prized all along about his West Asheville neighbors and didn't realize, he says, "was their was lack of pretense. They are who they are."

Just like Pierce.

"At a certain point, you either change the way you talk and take on a totally different lifestyle," he says, "or you embrace who you are."

Arnold Wengrow lives and writes in Asheville and is a theater director and a contributing editor of Theatre Design and Technology journal.

BlueRidgeNow.com
Times-News Online

This copy is for your personal, noncommercial use only. You can order presentation-ready copies for distribution to your colleagues, clients or customers here or use the "Reprints" tool that appears above any article. Order a reprint of this article now.

'White Liquor and Red Clay' tells the story of mountain moonshine and NASCAR

By Lindsay Lancaster

Published: Sunday, May 31, 2009 at 4:30 a.m.

Knox Crowell/Times-News

Close your eyes and picture a mountain moonshiner. Do you see a long-bearded man in overalls with a mindless grin, missing a few teeth and falling down drunk?

Dan Pierce, Asheville native and chair of the University of North Carolina at Asheville's history department, says that stereotype is widely assumed. It's also mostly wrong.

He ought to know. He's literally written the book on Appalachian moonshining.

"The thing that I found most interesting is really how the reality differed from a lot of the image," Pierce says. "Part of that image, I think, comes from people who probably drank too much of their product. ... Junior Johnson always said, 'Liquor is for selling, not for drinking.'"

Johnson, an early NASCAR superstar, is a famous moonshiner from Wilkes County who ran 'shine for his daddy from age 8 through his 20s. After getting caught at his father's still, Johnson, now 77, was sentenced in 1956 to a year and a day in jail. In the 1980s, President Ronald Reagan pardoned him for his conviction, restoring his right to vote and hold a passport.

Pierce's book, "White Liquor and Red Clay: NASCAR in the era of Big Bill Franz," is scheduled for release in February. To get folks interested in his book, Pierce recently presented the program "Under the Influence: A Southern Appalachian History of Moonshine" at the Transylvania County Public Library.

"It is an important part of the culture," Pierce says.

Mountain Dew

Homemade whiskey — aka White Lightning, Kickapoo, Moonshine, Happy Sally, Ruckus Juice, Joy Juice, Hooch, Panther's Breath, Mountain Dew, Hillbilly Pop — was a key ingredient of social life in the past. Folks justified keeping it around for its helpful medicinal purposes.

"If it didn't cure what was wrong with you, it would at least make you feel better temporarily," Pierce says. "The origins of whiskey in the region go back to the first white settlers in the area. Whiskey was very much a part of life."

Not to mention, it was a fundamental part of the economy for people living in the mountains.

After the government began to tax the drink, the illegal spirits became known as moonshine because it was often made late at night, when the moon provided the only light, to evade authorities.

For people who lived in the backwoods and didn't have money to pay taxes, whiskey was a way to get money.

"There just were not a lot of economic alternatives for people," Pierce says.

In many communities, if you weren't actually making moonshine, you at least had a hand in some part in it. Merchants made profits from selling sugar, which speeds up the process of making whiskey.

Legal tender

Moonshining used to be legal. It wasn't until after the Civil War (1861 to 1865) that it became illegal.

In the early days of making Joy Juice, local law enforcement officers were often related to people who owned a still. Enforcement was mostly the responsibility of the Alcohol Tax Unit (ATU) agents.

But once the government began taxing whiskey in the late 1700s, small producers could no longer make a profit. The temperance movement came about in the 1830s and 1840s.

Then in the late 19th and early 20th century, prohibition gained a foothold.

In the early years of the 20th century, production of illegal alcohol went up again. Many states, including North Carolina, passed prohibition laws before national laws were passed in 1920.

With no legal alcohol available, demand for White Lightning increased drastically.

In the 1920s, the business evolved from small batches to a much more industrialized, black market trade. The size of stills swelled to 1,000-plus gallon capacities.

Then the political winds shifted again and prohibition was repealed in 1933. By the late 1950s and early '60s, moonshining began to die down.

Federal laws changed and penalties for moonshining became much stiffer. The market for 'shine shrank and there was no longer as much reward in return for the risk.

"It's not gone, obviously," Pierce says.

But it is far less common.

The NASCAR connection

It's widely believed that the production of moonshine helped jumpstart the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing, or NASCAR. The organization began when race car driver Big Bill France — the first president of NASCAR — organized a meeting between drivers, mechanics and car owners to standardize rules for racing in 1947.

Before NASCAR's first race in 1948, moonshine runners often held informal races.

Moonshiners had to distribute their product secretively. Some hid it under straw or chickens in a truck. The other, more popular method required a souped-up car to outrun law enforcement. The cars had to be fast enough to not get caught — even while fully loaded. A fully loaded car careening through the hills of North Carolina might have had 22 six-gallon cases of whiskey.

Moonshiners had a couple advantages when it came to outrunning the law. Law enforcement vehicles simply weren't equipped to drive as fast. Frequently, the same mechanics worked on bootlegger and police cars. The mechanics admitted to doing better work on the 'shiners' cars because the bootleggers paid in cash.

Copyright © 2010 BlueRidgeNow.com — All rights reserved. Restricted use only.

Contrary to stereotypes, moonshine makers and moonshine runners were intelligent, excellent mechanics who knew how to turbo-charge a Ford with a flat-head V-8.

NASCAR driver Johnson, who now legally sells "Junior Johnson's Midnight Moon Carolina Moonshine" an 80 proof, corn-based liquor, is regarded as the fastest moonshine runner of all time. In fact, he was faster running "Hillbilly Pop" on the highway than he ever was on the race track, Pierce says.

Johnson gave up running White Lightning in 1955 to race for NASCAR. He was an overnight success.

Another bootlegger from Wilkes told Pierce that moonshine runners were anxious for the law to chase them to see how well their cars could run. Their hot cars typically had super-stiff rear suspensions, designed to hide the weight of the moonshine in the trunk.

The Southern men in that era were often steeped in the "hellofafellow" ethos: high testosterone and risk-taking, Pierce says. Running whiskey gave them the opportunity to live that out and get an adrenaline rush.

Another moonshine connection to NASCAR that Pierce shares: A major moonshine bust occurred around 1967 in Macon, Ga. To get to the still, you had to go through a passageway that was in the ticket booth at a racetrack.

Pierce earned his doctorate in history from the University of Tennessee. He is the author of "The Great Smokies: From Natural Habitat to National Park." A noted NASCAR historian, Pierce has written widely on the topic, including encyclopedia articles and an entry on "The Most Southern Sport on Earth: NASCAR and the Unions" for the Journal of Southern Culture.

Dispelling the myths

In at least one case, the stereotype of what a mountain moonshiner looks like wasn't completely a myth.

Pierce likes to show audiences video clips of the late Marvin "Popcorn" Sutton, who is popular on YouTube.com and wrote the book "Me and My Likker." The lanky Sutton sported a long beard and overalls and spoke with a deep Southern drawl.

In March, the 62-year-old moonshiner was found dead in his car in Parrottsville, Tenn., just days before he was to begin serving a jail sentence for illegally producing distilled spirits and possessing a firearm. His death was deemed a suicide, caused by carbon monoxide poisoning.

Sutton had been caught with three 1,000 gallon capacity stills, 800 gallons of liquor and plenty of materials needed to make moonshine.

"This was an industrial process," says Pierce, who was interviewed by the Wall Street Journal for Sutton's obituary.

Despite Sutton's appearance and speech, most moonshiners were not identifiable by their looks.

"Stereotypes of the moonshiner in legend and lore is myth," Pierce says.

Pierce was interviewed a few years ago for a History Channel documentary, "Hillbilly: The Real Story." At the time he was interviewed, he didn't know the documentary's title. But he didn't take offense.

"One of our greatest strengths is that we can laugh along with the stereotypes and then turn them to our own benefit," Pierce says. "The Mountaineer Hotels on Tunnel Road in Asheville, Gatlinburg and Maggie Valley are great examples of this unique Appalachian trait."

Pierce is happy to dispel the myth that moonshiners weren't the sharpest tools in the shed.

"They were very entrepreneurial. They had incredible business sense," Pierce says. "A lot of these people became very successful once they got out of the moonshine business."

Lancaster can be reached at lindsay.lancaster@blueridgenow.com.

UNC asheville MAGAZINE
Spring 2010

Dan Pierce brings history to life

By Melissa Stanz

Combining his love of history and NASCAR, Associate Professor Dan Pierce has authored a new book, Real NASCAR: White Lightning, Red Clay, and Big Bill France (University of North Carolina Press, February 2010).

> Dr. Pierce recognized my passion for this subject and forced me to continue the journey on seeking out the true story. I'm honored that he considered my work valued enough to assist him in his journey."
>
> —Will Tate '05

Library Journal enthusiastically recommends it as "an important work that would serve an academic audience as well as general readers."

An easy read that speeds along like a pace car, the book details the history of NASCAR and its primary players from the 1940s through the 1970s. It also establishes solid ties between the sport that currently claims more than 75 million fans and the illegal liquor industry of the 1940s—a controversial topic mostly ignored by NASCAR officials.

"I thought all the talk about illegal liquor and bootlegging in the early days was overblown until I dug into it," said Pierce. "But my research confirms that almost all the top drivers in the early years did moonshine runs, and that the illegal liquor industry permeated the organization, including drivers, mechanics and owners."

Real NASCAR tells research-based stories—the same kinds of stories Pierce loves to use in the classroom. He believes stories are the best way to bring history to life.

Alumnus Will Tate '05 agrees. "Dr. Pierce's challenge to pursue knowledge, facts and storytelling was a spark in my mind. He always asked that students tell a story when answering a question. And although I know that history is a lot of facts, dates, people and places, Dr. Pierce wanted us to put it in a story, in context, where it related to something else."

Racing legend Junior Johnson is shown following the Grand National race at the Asheville-Weaverville Speedway in August 1961. Johnson won despite the hole in his windshield caused by flying debris as the track began to break apart. When NASCAR shortened the race because of track conditions, fans rioted and kept the drivers from leaving for four hours.

Pierce credits his dad with helping him develop his storytelling skills. As a Baptist preacher, his father told stories from the pulpit every Sunday. "I never realized how much I was absorbing—the structure and the stories—but I did. I'm a big believer in using stories." While he was learning the power of stories, Pierce also fell in love with history. When he was 12, he traveled with another student and a teacher to Europe for the summer. It was a life-defining experience. "My teacher, Jean Bennett, loved history and she was an incredible teacher, taking us to many countries and bringing history alive. I thought I would study European history even into graduate school."

The desire to study European history was overshadowed when Pierce began working on his master's degree at the University of Alabama. "I studied with two professors who were on the cutting edge of Southern history," he said. "One professor, Forrest McDonald, really simplified things for me. Then I took a Southern culture class that was all about working class Southerners—people like my grandfathers. That's when I really understood that everyone has a story, and they are all valuable."

Understanding the value of working- class peoples' stories is something Pierce emphasizes in his classes. He enjoys teaching about the lives of people who have been marginalized because it helps them have a voice. "Anyone is a proper subject for an historian," he said.

Learning that is a revelation for students, but they embrace it quickly. The History Department requires all history majors to write a senior thesis, and many choose to write about relatives, everyday people or little-known subjects. Pierce notes that when the papers are turned in, students have not only completed original research but have also become experts in their subject matter.

Recently, two students chose NASCAR subjects for their senior papers and Real NASCAR benefited from their research. "Dr. Pierce recognized my passion for this subject and forced me to continue the journey on seeking out the true story. I'm honored that he considered my work valued enough to assist him in his journey," said Tate.

Bryan Greene '08, another NASCAR fan, also chose to do his senior thesis on the sport. "During our second meeting to discuss my paper, I rambled on and on about facts and dates and Dr. Pierce just smiled and nodded," Greene recalled. "When I finished touting my racing expertise, Dr. Pierce removed his glasses and warned me about the mistake of becoming an antiquarian instead of a historian. I needed to focus on explaining my findings rather than regurgitating them. I was shocked at first that he would be so blunt with me, but soon realized how much that one statement would improve my research. I rewrote the paper that night."

Since Pierce is the author of two books, several magazine and encyclopedia articles, and a weekly blog, you might think writing was a natural gift for him. Not so. "Until I was studying for my master's degree, I never made better than a C in writing. It did not come naturally for me. I had to work at it and break it down," Pierce said.

He emphasizes this to his students regularly. "I tell them any idiot can do this if you work at it, but you have to have a thick skin and take constructive criticism."

Greene, who is now a coach and teacher in Rockingham, N.C., has a special appreciation for Pierce's teaching style. He said, "Dr. Pierce is very forthcoming with his own education and how he improved as a student and a writer through his undergrad, grad school and doctoral experiences. He expects his students to improve as well. If you accept this unspoken challenge then you will not only be successful in his class but also throughout your collegiate career. So far, it has worked for me in my professional career as well. I find myself using this same philosophy of high expectations in my classes and for my teams."

Despite his successes, Pierce continues to seek constructive criticism. Paul Bergeron, a favorite University of Tennessee graduate school professor, is commonly called upon to review his writing. And Pierce is grateful for the feedback.

"You need people in your life that care enough about you to tell you the truth. And anyone that makes me look smarter than I am—that's a good thing," Pierce laughed.

With some help from Bergeron, Pierce published his first book, The Great Smokies: From Natural Habitat to National Park (University of Tennessee Press, November 2000). It was the inaugural selection for Tennessee Reads, a book club featuring titles from the University of Tennessee Press.

Now, Real NASCAR, his second book, is flying off the shelves nearly as fast as race cars themselves. Since its release, Pierce was asked to pen an op-ed for the New York Times, has appeared on morning radio shows across the country and has garnered rave reviews. He now writes a monthly history column for NASCAR Illustrated and blogs at realnascar.com. He's also working on a guidebook of NASCAR historical sites.

While it's safe to say that none of the fame has gone to his head, Pierce isn't resting on his laurels either. He continues to teach popular courses on Southern history. He is mentoring students on their undergraduate research projects. And he's begun imagining his next book, a text on moonshining in the 20th century.

"I want to know how it worked, what it financed and ferret out the illegal activities versus the legitimate enterprises," he explained.

It sounds like the perfect project for an atypical history professor with a knack for bringing the stories of common people to life in really big ways.

Read more stories (back to contents)

SHARE

The New York Times

PRINTER FRIENDLY FORMAT SPONSORED BY CAREY MULLIGAN

March 14, 2010

OP-ED CONTRIBUTOR

Nascar's 190-M.P.H. Beanball

By DANIEL S. PIERCE

Asheville, N.C.

LAST Sunday the Nascar driver Carl Edwards drove his Ford into Brad Keselowski's Dodge as the two raced around the Atlanta Motor Speedway at 190 miles per hour. Keselowski's car flew into the air and crashed into the wall along the track's front stretch.

Wrecks are nothing new in Nascar. But usually they're accidents. This time, though, Edwards unapologetically admitted that he wrecked his rival in retaliation for an incident last year in Talladega, Ala., where Keselowski knocked Edwards's car into the fence and out of the race.

What's surprising is that this was no surprise. In January, Nascar's vice president for competition, Robin Pemberton, had in effect given approval to such rough racing when he announced that the Daytona brass were loosening the reins on driver behavior on and off the track. "Boys, have at it and have a good time," he said.

The slap-on-the-wrist penalty that Edwards received for hitting Keselowski confirmed that, at least for now, Nascar is planning to let drivers police themselves.

This has left a lot of people shocked — and brought the sport a flood of news media attention. For many non-fans, it seems proof that Nascar is a violent activity for aggressive rednecks.

But the truth is quite different. Nascar — like almost all sports, particularly at the professional level — has an unwritten code of social behavior. And when that code is violated, there are consequences. The new rules simply let that code take its full effect.

Think of it this way: Baseball has plunking and we have, well, crashing. After all, Edwards's retaliatory wrecking of Keselowski was not much different from the Giants' Barry Zito plunking the Brewers' Prince Fielder in the back with a pitch the other day, six months after Fielder had embarrassed the Giants with an ostentatious home-run celebration.

Indeed, the new rules simply take Nascar back to its roots. Edwards's move was part of the sport's tradition, as old as stock-car racing itself, and as much a part of its DNA as moonshine, street racing and red-dirt tracks. Stock-car racing's passionate following was built on drivers "cuttin' 'em a flip" on the track and fighting it out afterward in the infield.

Longtime fans have great memories of incidents like the 10-lap demolition derby that took place at Bowman Gray Stadium in Winston-Salem, N.C., in 1966, when Curtis Turner and Bobby Allison "got into it" and repeatedly rammed each other until their cars died.

Most historians point to the 1979 Daytona 500 as the moment Nascar began to capture the nation's eye. But that attention came not from Richard Petty winning the race, but from Donnie Allison and Cale Yarborough battling for the lead on the final lap and then duking it out in the infield after their cars slid to a stop, all on national television.

Given the traditions of the sport, while Keselowski probably deserved a plunking, what Edwards delivered was more akin to a beanball to the head — too dangerous and beyond the boundaries of a proper retaliatory response.

However, don't be surprised if Edwards puts Keselowski into the wall — or vice versa — next week at Bristol Motor Speedway in Tennessee or in two weeks at the Martinsville Speedway in Virginia, where the cars don't reach such high speeds and the dangers of seriously injuring either a driver or a fan are not so high.

This might look like barbarity in steel-and-glass form. But it's not. Stock-car racing isn't simply about speed; it is an intricate dance of complex strategies and fearless maneuvering.

At 200 miles per hour, there are no referees to call foul; the only effective arbiter, at least during the race, is the unwritten code of the drivers themselves. Nascar's new rules are simply the wise recognition of that fact.

Daniel S. Pierce is the chairman of the history department at the University of North Carolina, Asheville, and author of "Real Nascar: White Lightning, Red Clay and Big Bill France."

Copyright 2010 The New York Times Company

PINNER AGAIN ELECTED HEAD OF COSMIC CLUB

Sanders Picked As First Vice-President; Others Are Re-Elected

Beaman L. Pinner, Asheville druggist, was re-elected president of the Cosmic club for another six-months period at the organization's weekly meeting at the S. and W. cafeteria last night.

The club named George Sanders first vice-president and re-elected George W. Mitchell second vice-president, William Morgan secretary, Allison F. Howell treasurer, and Joe Hough chaplain.

Carl Rhinehardt and James O'Kelly were elected to the board of directors for one-year terms, and Charles Beaver and Bailey McGruder were named first and second alternate directors, respectively, for half-year periods.

The new officers will be installed January 6, with a dance following the induction rites.

James Crownover, of Sayles Biltmore Bleacheries, was introduced as a new member last night. Visitors included Tiny Parker and Gene Clayton.

The club voted to hold an abbreviated meeting next Thursday night to give members an opportunity to see the Clemson-Kentucky basketball game at Enka.

T. Furman Stokes, chairman of the club's nominating com presided over last night's meeting.

RENAMED TO POST—Cosmic club members last night elected Beaman L. Pinner, Asheville druggist, president of the organization for another six-month period.

Asheville Citizen December 13, 1939

RECEIVES CHARTER—Beaman E. Pinner, commander of the newly organized West Asheville Memorial post of the American Legion, is pictured as he receives the charter from Fred Bauman, commander of the Rockwell Bailey post of the American Legion, at a meeting last night in Rhododendron clubhouse. Other officers of the post are George Hull, senior vice commander, Harry Woolford, junior vice commander, Jim Fullam, adjutant, C. W. Chapman, finance officer, Harold Sams, police advocate, the Rev. John L. Roueche, chaplain, Allen Raines, sergeant at arms, and George Mitchell, historian.

HENDERSON PINNER OCHSENREITER MRS. BELL DR. MURPHY

NEW CITY SCHOOL BOARD ORGANIZES—Members of the newly-appointed city school board met yesterday afternoon at David Millard junior high school and named Pierce Henderson chairman and Mrs. Frank Bell vice-chairman. The picture above was made as the meeting got under way after the members had been given the oath of office by S. M. Connor, business manager of the city schools. In the picture are Mr. Henderson, B. R. Pinner, Gene Ochsenreiter, Mrs. Bell, and Dr. G. Westbrook Murphy.

Asheville Citizen April 8, 1947

Asheville Citizen April 5, 1949

PINNER JOHNSON CONNOR BYERS MRS. LEE

THE NEW CITY SCHOOL BOARD met yesterday in the David Millard Junior High School and renamed J. W. Byers as city school superintendent and S. M. Connor as business manager, and reappointed secretaries to the superintendent, business manager and high school principal. During a brief session, it witnessed the administration of the oath of office to a new member, Herbert E. Johnson. Johnson is shown being sworn in by Connor, while Byers and Beaman Pinnner and Mrs. E. G. Lee, members of the board, observed the proceedings. Johnson suceeds Pierce P. Henderson, who was chairman of the board. A new chairman is expected to be named at the next meeting of the board.

MEMBERS OF THE WEST ASHEVILLE BRANCH YMCA filled posts in the organization's committee of management during a recent election conducted by mail. Two of the committeemen named are shown here. At left is Beaman L. Pinner and, right, Ben L. Jarrett. Also elected to the committee were Bob Nahikian and Clyde Roberts, who were unable to be present for this picture. (Citizen Photo)

PINNER'S DRUG STORE BEGAN BACK IN 1933

Pinner's Drug Store, 619 Haywood Road in West Asheville, originated in 1933 at the corner of Woodfin and Market Streets, according to Beaman Pinner, owner and founder. The company moved to its present location in 1941.

Mr. and Mrs. Pinner (Evelyn) have one son, Zack, who is a senior at Lee Edwards High School, and quarterback on the school football team.

PINNER

Pinner is past president of the Cosmic Club, W. N. C. Drug Club, the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and First Commander of the West Asheville Memorial Legion Post No. 335, serving a second term. He is a veteran of World War II.

Mrs. Pinner is president of the West Asheville Legion Auxiliary.

Asheville Citizen December 1, 1960

Fountain And Druggist Together Since 1933

By NANCY BROWER

An honest-to-goodness drug store soda fountain where the druggist himself takes a turn as soda jerk is hard to find.

NANCY BROWER

Beaman Pinner has had such a fountain since 1933 and he says he still makes the best chocolate ice cream sodas in town. The small fountain in Pinner's Drug Store at 619 Haywood Road is of Roaring '20s vintage and has the marble panels that mark the genuine article. It is backed with mirrors framed in stained glass and mahogany and topped by a St. Joseph's Aspirin clock.

JAN 8 1976

There's carbonated water on tap, five flavors of ice cream, including raspberry ripple, lots of gooey syrups top them off. No grill, no sandwiches, no coffee pot, no menu. Just an uncomplicated soda fountain where folks can step up and say, "Hey, doc, give me a cherry Coke."

'Hey, Doc, Give Me A Dope'

Pinner took over a drugstore in the Woodfin Apartments building in 1933. In those days, the old YMCA was across the street. Pinner said men used to gather for bowling at the Y and come to his place to quench their thirsts afterward. They'd step up to the same fountain he has today and say, "Hey, doc, give me a dope." Dope was slang for Coca-Cola at the time, Pinner said.

In 1941, Pinner moved his drugstore business (and the soda fountain) to its present location. The building it occupies had been a neighborhood grocery store. Kids who went to nearby schools were happy to see a soda fountain installed. Pinner's Drug Store became an after-school hangout. A Times

Randy Gamble mans the fountain these days, but Pinner takes over when Gamble goes out to deliver prescriptions. He said some people come "across town" for his real oldtime, rich, thick, creamy milkshakes. He said his secret is Biltmore Dairy products (he has had nothing else in his store since 1933) and a heavy hand with the chocolate syrup.

7 Out Of 10 Chocolate

"If I sell 10 milkshakes," the druggist said, seven of them will be chocolate." A Pinner's chocolate milkshake is not pale tan, but darkly delicious.

Beaman Pinner takes the greatest pride in his chocolate sodas. If he hears someone specify an "old fashioned" chocolate soda, he slips behind the fountain to create the concoction himself. He said not many people know the secret of a good soda, namely how much to fizz it with carbonated water.

Cherry smashes, vanilla cokes, and ice cream cones round out the treats at the old soda fountain. Much of the fun of going there is listening to "Doc" make a colorful, rapid-fire conversation as one leans against the fountain and sips something cold and sweet through a straw.

"I was the son of a country doctor," he begins a tale. "I was an only child, so my mother wanted to make me a junior. My father didn't like that 'junior' business. So he named me Be A Man. Beaman Lindsey Pinner is my name."

— Staff Photo By MALCOLM GAMBLE

Substitute Soda Jerk

West Asheville pharmacist Beaman Pinner at his soda fountain in 1976. He died Sunday at age 76.

Beaman Pinner Dies At Age 76

From Staff Reports

Beaman L. Pinner, whose drug store in West Asheville was a community focal point for almost half a century, died Sunday in an Asheville hospital.

Some mothers in residential areas along that section of Haywood Road didn't think they could get their children through a minor illness without Beaman Pinner.

Pinner, 76, was an active member of the community, and from his home at 148 Brucemont Circle or Pinner's Drugstore at 619 Haywood Road, he kept in touch with the people he served. He served for 17 years on the school board.

Owner and operator of Pinner's Drugstore, he could be found at the soda fountain mixing shakes and building banana splits as well as in the prescription department dispensing medicine.

The small soda fountain, of the Roaring '20s style, is backed by mirrors framed in stained glass and mahogany. Pinner brought it with him when he moved from Woodfin Street in Asheville in 1941.

Pinner, a native of Pomaria, S.C., took over a drugstore in Woodfin Apartments in 1933. When he moved it to West Asheville he remodeled a building on Haywood Road that had been a neighborhood grocery. His drugstore became a favorite gathering place for children from schools in the area.

Pinner was appointed to the Asheville City Board of Education in 1947. He was vice chairman of the board for a time, and at one point served for some time as temporary chairman.

He was a graduate of Newberry College and an Army veteran of World War II.

Pinner was a member of North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association, Asheville Cosmic Club and St. Mark's Lutheran Church.

He was a charter member and past commander of West Asheville American Legion Post No. 335 and a charter member of West Asheville Business Association. He was past president of WNC Drug Club and Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Surviving are his wife, Evelyn Chester Pinner; a son, Zach E. Pinner of Hilton Head, S.C.; and a grandchild.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Wednesday in the chapel of Grace Funeral Home. The Rev. Lewis O. Dasher will officiate. Burial will be in Green Hills Cemetery.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Tuesday at the funeral home.

Memorials may be made to St. Mark's Lutheran Church, 10 North Liberty St., Asheville, N.C. 28801, or to Buncombe County Chapter of American Cancer Society, 260 Merrimon Ave., Asheville, N.C. 28801.

Beaman Pinner born Sept. 30, 1909; died, May 1986, in Asheville.

Businessman, Racer, Richard Plemmons, Dies In Asheville

Richard Merritt "Dickie" Plemmons, former race car driver and a member of NASCAR racing, died Friday in an Asheville hospital. He was 57.

PLEMMONS

Plemmons, of 111½ Hansel Ave., Asheville, was owner of Dickie's Food Stores.

A resident of Buncombe County for 50 years, he was former owner of Dickie's T.V., Dick Plemmons Manufacturing Co., and Dickie's T.V. Softball Team. He was a member of Clayton Avenue Freewill Baptist Church and a Marine veteran.

He was the son of the late Julius Bryant and Elsie Thomerson Plemmons.

Surviving are his wife, Annette Freeman Plemmons; a daughter, Missy A. Plemmons of the home; three sons, Ricky R., Chip L. and Tracy Buzzy Plemmons of Asheville, and four grandchildren.

Services will be at 1:30 p.m. Sunday in the chapel of Anders-Rice Funeral Home. The Rev. T.A. Holder will officiate. Burial will be in Ashelawn Gardens of Memory.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Saturday at the funeral home.

Asheville Citizen October 27, 1990

A Man And His Creation

No, this isn't a new table game being offered this Christmas. It's a solar water heater, and Herb Pomfrey, standing behind the heater, built the device in three days with an investment of $202 in parts. (Staff photo by Malcolm Gamble)

Builds Own Solar Heater

Herb Pomfrey Is In Hot Water

By MICHAEL GINSBERG
Times Staff Writer

From hidden televisions to solar water heaters, Herb M. Pomfrey has found that his building projects are always getting him into hot water.

DEC 3 1975

The 22-year-old junior biology major at the University of North Carolina at Asheville says he developed his first project when he was about 10 years old.

A Times

He put an old television inside his bedroom closet and hooked up the controls alongside his bed, along with an electric device for opening and closing the closet door.

After bedtime, Pomfrey says, the TV would go on, "and if I heard someone coming, I'd shut it off and close the door."

The arrangement backfired one day, Pomfrey says, when his mother, passing by, heard the closet door shut. She came in, opened the closet door, and saw the last bit of light fade from the screen.

Pomfrey's latest project involved different risks. With an investment of $202 in parts, all purchased locally, and three days of labor, Pomfrey last June built a solar water heater for his West Asheville home at 20 Eola Street.

On a day with six hours of sunlight, Pomfrey says, the heater provides 40 gallons of hot water. On cloudy days the heater is less than 50 per cent effective, but the water remains hot enough for showering for two days. "When it rains we don't get any hot water from the heater."

Pomfrey says the low point of effectiveness came in mid-October, just before the leaves fell, when the heater was producing only nine to 10 gallons per day. The solar collector sits behind the house and the neighbors' trees blocked the sunlight. "We can't really ask them to cut their trees down," Pomfrey says.

Turn To Page Seventeen

Solar Water Heater

The idea of building a solar water heater came to Pomfrey several years ago. "Then, when our electric bills started jumping, I decided something had to be done.

"I was scared to put down the money for the parts at first because I wasn't sure it was going to work."

After doing some research, Pomfrey decided to build. He bought glass and plastic sheets and piping at building supply stores and found an old water tank in a junk yard. In three days, it was completed.

After he finished building, Pomfrey went to class. When he returned, he found that a small square on the collector was left uncovered and water circulating through the pipes was getting hot. He ran into the house, yelling to his wife, Sue, "Look, hey, hot water."

As Pomfrey explains it, the system of heating the water is fairly simple. Water is stored in the tank, which is located inside the house. It flows through piping to the outside collector, below the level of the tank "so we don't need a pump."

The solar collector is a flat 30-sq.-foot screen, built on an angle. It has a layer of glass and plastic outside, and pipes for circulating the water inside. Insulating material and a wooden frame surround the screens and pipes.

Pomfrey explains that the sun's rays heat the water as it flows through. The hot water is lighter than colder water, so it flows back up to the tank. The system includes an apparatus to keep water from freezing and alarm that sounds in case the water does approach freezing level. There are also simple controls to switch to electric water heating for backup. "Even with further advancements in solar heating, there will always have to be a backup system," Pomfrey says.

Pomfrey expects the system to pay for itself in two years. "Through the summer months we saved about 45 per cent in our electric bills."

Despite the savings, Pomfrey says he knows of no one else in Asheville who's built a solar water heater. He says his interest is in energy conservation, not financial rewards.

Mrs. Pomfrey says, however, "I hope the field opens up in Asheville so Herb can get going on it." And Pomfrey admits that, although he's a pre-dental student, he might consider getting into solar heating construction.

Since completing construction of the water heater, Pomfrey has built a solar still to distill water for a steam iron. His next project is more ambitious: a solar water heater for a friend's 48-by-24-foot swimming pool. He expects the heating to require twelve reflectors, each larger than his, at a construction cost of $3,000.

After that? "We're looking into building a house and there will be some solar considerations for heating it."

It's a long way from hiding televisions in bedroom closets.

FRIDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 31, 1926

CASHIER

It was upon the shoulders of H. B. Posey, cashier, that most of the work in launching the new bank in West Asheville fell, and to him is accorded congratulations for the manner in which he has accomplished the task.

WEST ASHEVILLE BANK GROWING

H. B. Posey Is Credited With Good Showing Of Institution

H. B. Posey, cashier of the Bank of West Asheville, is the guiding spirit of the financial institution "across the river." Its growth has been remarkable, and regular dividends of 10 per cent have been paid for several years.

G. D. Carter is the president; Dr. J. G. Anderson, vice president; Mr. Posey, cashier, and Mrs. Fannie C. Posey, assistant cashier.

The directors are: Gallatin Roberts, M. L. Maney, Robert M. Wells, Dr. J. G. Anderson, G. A. Shieder, G. D. Carter, John A. Grobes, Mrs. W. E. Logan, J. S. Mardis and H. B. Posey.

Asheville Citizen February 18, 1928

Asheville Citizen
March 10, 1929

Community Life Centers About Organized Groups

West Asheville Folks Combine Efforts In Unity Plan

By GLENN W. NAVES

The people of West Asheville believe in organization.

And, incidentally, they believe in co-operation, and that a combination of these two elements is essential to community growth and progress.

Consequently, they have embodied the two in a number of well organized community groups, each of which is varied in policy and purpose so as to conform with the needs of everybody from the business man down to the boys and girls who are going to school and training themselves to be future citizens.

Beginning several years ago, public spirited citizens of the community grouped themselves in the belief that business, religion, social work, education and community government can best be conducted when each is thoroughly organized. And these organizations have grown with the progressive expansion of that section until each is a valuable asset, something which just as essential in a sense as the streets, schools and churches are because many of these benefits have been obtained through the efforts of one or more of the organizations.

Club Is Oldest

The largest and oldest of these groups are the West Asheville club, the West Asheville Community club and the West Asheville Merchants Association.

The former was organized in November, 1925 with S. D. Hall as president. Other presidents have been: Don C. Young, 1926, Hugh Sowers, 1927 and H. B. Posey, whose term will expire in November of this year. Both Mr. Posey and Mr. Sowers are bankers, the former being cashier of the Bank of West Asheville and the latter connected with the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. Mr. Young is representative No. 1 from Buncombe county in the General Assembly. G. G. Morgan was elected the first secretary and after his resignation was succeeded by Bert Starnes, who has served in that capacity since.

The club's membership of around 75, includes business and professional men of every calling—lawyers, bankers, ministers, physicians, merchants, public officials, and even one fire chief, a mayor and a few "politicians." The fire chief is A. L. Duckett, of the Asheville fire department, the mayor, Gallatin Roberts and the "politicians" include Mr. Young, who is also among Asheville's best known attorneys.

The club has since its organization shown a deep interest in the upbuilding and progress of the community, and at present has on schedule a number of plans in that direction.

Community Club

Shortly after the West Asheville club was formed the ladies of the community decided that they should also have a similar organization as the West Asheville Community club was formed.

The club has its musical and literary de-------- which have separate meetings and give programs in which the members participate. One of the most popular of these features is the monthly musical program, usually held at the home of a member. Local talent is used and a visiting artist entertains with vocal or instrumental numbers, or perhaps lectures on some interesting phase of music study. Each month the program is planned under the supervision of a selected member and is arranged so as to provide variety and an opportunity for each member to exercise their talent.

In many other ways the club takes an active part in the social, and church and educational life of the community, and has a large and active membership, many of whom are charter members.

Merchants Group

The West Asheville Merchants Association was organized in January, 1926 with a charter membership of 13 business men. The organization has since grown to 60 members, including practically every business concern in the community.

In accordance with tentative plans this organization has continued to function as a mutual benefit group for business men and citizens, and has accomplished much in the expansion of the business interests of West Asheville.

J. R. Mills, who died about two years ago, was the first president. Other officers elected at the initial meeting who are still serving are O. J. Judd, vice president and V. F. Brown, secretary. John May succeeded Mr. Mills as president.

Other Organizations

Other groups pprovide the essential organization element for the people, of the comunity.

Young people's organizations include two troops of the Boy Scouts of America; the Junior Music club; the Business Girls' Circle; the Young Men of the Presbyterian church, and others.

One of the Scout troops has been organized at the Methodist church and is sponsored by the pastor, the Rev. J. S. Hiatt, and others. Troop 3 of the Presbyterian church is under the leadership of Jimmy Haley, patrol leader and F. Bonnotte, Scoutmaster.

The Junior Music club was organized by Mrs. A. X. Blanchard and has since grown from eight to eighty members. The group was formed so as to give the children of the community with musical talent an opportunity to benefit from study and contact with each other, and to maintain their interest in music. The club is known as one of the most active in West Asheville.

Other organizations are the Calvary Baptist church orchestra and male quartet, the Junior choir of the Methodist church, Business Girls' Circle, Woman's Auxiliary, Men of the Church and Young Men of the Church, of the Presbyterian church, the Woman's Missionary groups of the community churches, the B. Y. P. U., Epworth League and Christian Endeavor organizations, the Mitchell Avenue Home club, the Friendship club, the Parent Teacher Association of Hall Fletcher, Aycock, Eugene Rankin, and Vance schools, the Sunday school groups and others.

Fraternal organizations include the West Asheville chapter, Order of Eastern Star, Locke Craig Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Red Men, Moose, Odd Fellows and the A. F. and A. M. Masonic

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Posey, Humphrey B

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C.
Wednesday, April 28, 1965

H. B. Posey, Bank Veteran, Dies At Home

Humphrey B. Posey, 84, of 29 Richmond Ave., died Tuesday in his home after a short illness.

He was a native of Henderson County and had lived in Asheville for the past 50 years. He was the son of Woodfin and Wilmetta Brittain Posey.

He was a former Asheville insurance agent and vice president and cashier of the old West Asheville Bank.

For several years, Mr. Posey was appraiser for the Federal Land Bank here. He was active in Trinity Methodist Church, where he was a former chairman of the board of stewards. He was a charter member of the board of trustees of Aston Park Hospital.

Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Nelle P. Whiteside of the home; a sister, Mrs. J. L. Iler of Greenville, S. C.; a brother, John Posey of York, S. C.; two grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Services will be held Thursday at 11 a. m. in the chapel of Groce Funeral Home.

Dr. Embree H. Blackard will officiate and burial will be in Green Hill Cemetery. Pallbearers will be Bill and Norman Posey, Eugene and Posey Glenn, Reuben Mendez and Jack Lyle.

PACK MEMORIAL PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Highway named after racing legend

By Keith Jarrett
SENIOR WRITER

BENT CREEK — He wouldn't have thought much about the speed limit — a piddling 45 mph — and he probably would have been embarrassed about all the fuss, but Bob Pressley would have been honored to have a highway named after him.

Bob Pressley

On the one-year anniversary of the death of the Asheville racing legend, family and friends gathered at Bent Creek Baptist Church Tuesday for a ceremony that included the official renaming of a section of Brevard Road/N.C. 191 as the Bob Pressley Highway.

"Pa-Paw would have been proud," said Coleman Pressley, Bob's grandson and the son of NASCAR racer Robert Pressley.

About 30 people met at the church to remember Bob, who grew up running a Model A Ford up and down the two-mile stretch of Bent Creek from Sardis Road to the Blue Ridge Parkway that now bears his name.

The five-lane highway runs right past the Bent Creek Cemetery where Pressley is buried.

A seven-time track champion at Asheville Motor Speedway who had more than 500 victories in a four-decade career in short-track racing, Pressley died of cancer April 27, 2004, at age 71.

"He was more than a racecar driver," said Doris Pressley, Bob's widow. "He was a very caring person and a humble man, but he would have been so proud of this.

"He did so much for his community. We had a wrecker service, and I don't know how many times he went out at two or three in the morning to help somebody out."

Tommy Thompson became the flagman at AMS in 1962, when Pressley began his racing career.

"He was a good friend, and I'm so happy to see this day come," said Thompson. "I'm happy for Doris and the kids and the grandkids to be here and see this honor. It's too bad they couldn't do this when he was alive."

Coleman, 16, is racing at Hickory Motor Speedway, continuing the family tradition.

"Something like this doesn't take away the pain of losing pa-paw, but it's a nice honor for him," he said.

"It's going to be cool driving up and down this highway every day and seeing that sign."

John Fletcher/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

A portion of N.C. 191 was dedicated in honor of local racecar driving legend Bob Pressley on Wednesday during a ceremony at Bent Creek Baptist Church. Members of Pressley's family were there for the dedication, including: his niece, McKenzie Pressley, left, his son Ken Pressley, his daughter Patricia Warren, his son Michael Pressley and his widow, Doris Pressley. Bob Pressley died of cancer one year ago Wednesday.

Asheville Citizen April 28, 2005

2-4-2006

Concert to benefit shelter program

ASHEVILLE — The Outreach Committee of West Asheville Presbyterian Church will host a concert of local musicians to benefit the Hospitality House and Room in the Inn shelter program. The concert will take place at 4 p.m. Feb. 19 at the church, 690 Haywood Road. Admission is $10 for adults and $5 for children younger than 12.

All proceeds benefit Room in the Inn, a shelter program serving women out of local churches on a rotation basis. Performers will include Woody Wood, The Rib Tips, Malcolm Holcombe, Aaron Price, Mad Tea Party, Song o' Sky Sweet Adelines, Katie Kasben, Daniel Coolik and the Asheville Slavic Church Women's Choir.

FILE PHOTO

Local performers Aaron Price, shown above, Woody Wood, The Rib Tips, Malcolm Holcombe, Mad Tea Party, Song o' Sky Sweet Adelines, Katie Kasben, Daniel Coolik and the Asheville Slavic Church Women's Choir will perform at 4 p.m. Feb. 19 at a benefit for Hospitality House and Room in the Inn shelter program.

Asheville Citizen February 4, 2006

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 1, 1934

Creek Here Offers Fine Skating

Wilfred W. Prince, pensioned Boston police officer, yesterday afternoon donned ice skates he has been unable to use since coming to Asheville four years ago for his health, and sped up and down Beaverdam creek just above the bridge at Beaver Lake. Mr. Prince, who makes his home at 51 Princeton drive, West Asheville, said he formerly enjoyed ice skating at Boston and had been longing for a chance to try the sport since coming here. The creek was frozen solid yesterday and Beaver Lake was covered with ice but it was too thin for skaters.

West Asheville People

R

It's beginning to smell a lot like

John Coutlakis/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Daniel Rader, 6, sniffs scented candles at his family home in West Asheville. Mom Kelly uses many products to get that holiday smell to their home.

Christmas

Products abound to give your home the scents of the season

By Eden Foster
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — Smell the season ... pungent evergreen, holiday baking, sweet cinnamon.

But that evergreen smell doesn't always come from the tree. Today, it often comes in a bottle, a candle or a spray.

The home industry is rapidly expanding by developing new scents and imaginative new delivery systems.

Even olfactory research has gained momentum with the award of the 2004 Nobel Prize in medicine to two researchers for their investigation into how our bodies detect and process smells.

Entering Kelly Rader's West Asheville home is like walking into olfactory paradise. During the holidays, her living room smells like a freshly cut pine tree, her young sons' rooms smell like cotton sheets hung to dry in the sun, and her kitchen draws you in with the smell of mulled cider simmering on the stove.

"When your house smells good, your mind feels good," said Rader. "(Using room fragrance) adds a fresh, powerful punch to my day and it makes me feel good and enhances my mood."

Rader takes advantage of a number of new products on the market to add scent to her home. She burns fragrance-infused candles even during the day, mists the air with potent but subtle room sprays, and uses "plug-ins" in her wall sockets. busy mother of three, Rader finds certain fragrances have different effects on her mood.

The Police Review

VOLUME 6 MARCH, 1927 NUMBER 3

ARTHUR D. RAMSEY
Patrolman
ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

The subject of this little sketch is Arthur D. Ramsey who was born in Madison County, North Carolina, December 13, 1892, so is just passing his 34th year of existence. He has grown to be a real he-man as he is six feet two inches tall and weighs two hundred pounds.

He received his appointment with the department, June 1, 1923 and is considered one of the most efficient officers on the force.

Previous to coming with the department he had nine years military service with Uncle Sam, having enlisted March 8, 1911. He was in the following companies during that period: Co. K, 19th Infantry; Co. E, 26th Engineers; Co. D, 2nd Engineers; Co. E, 5th Reg. Engineers. At the time of his discharge, October 16, 1920, he was Store Keeper, Quartermasters Department, ranking as a Staff Sergeant. He served in different parts of this country and at Vera Cruz and Mexico, also spent twelve months in Europe in the World War.

He says he likes police work and is a great advocate of discipline and believes there would be very little efficiency in any police department without it.

He gives as his opinion how police work could be made more attractive by having good working conditions, more pay and by keeping the police department out of politics.

He believes that prevention of crime and detection of criminals could be brought to a higher degree of perfection by a closer co-operation between the citizens and the police officers.

Officer Ramsey lives at No. 84 Indiana Avenue.

HONORED ON HIS EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY

J. E. Rankin, chairman of the board and trust officer of the American National Bank, and one of Asheville's leading and most highly respected citizens, yesterday enjoyed his eightieth birthday. Mr. Rankin is hale and hearty and seems good for many more active years of service to the community.

He served for three years as Mayor and has always been active in every movement for the upbuilding of Asheville and Western North Carolina. His business career has won him Statewide recognition for his ability and devotion to North Carolina.

Last night, Mr. Rankin was the honor guest at a dinner given at the home of one of his sons, A. E. Rankin, president of the American National Bank, at his home on Orange Street. At the dinner were all members of the Rankin family.

Asheville Citizen April 28, 1925

October 5-53
mostly 54 graduates

GRISWOLD MERRICK '55 RASH '54

AUSTIN '54 BAKER '54 CHAPMAN '54

CLUB OFFICERS—New officers of the Monogram Club at Lee Edwards High School, are Bobbie Baker, president; Judy Griswold, vice president; Susan Merrick, secretary; Bobbie Rash, treasurer; Shirley Austin, recorder and Mary Lou Chapman, reporter.

FOUNDATION OF WEST ASHEVILLE LIBRARY LAID BY CAPT. J. E. RAY

HE "LOVES TO SEE HIS BOOKS AT WORK"

Noted Veteran, "As Old as Asheville," Gives 300 Books as a Start to Library Across the River, For the town in Which He is Taking a Great Interest.

CAPT. J. E. RAY,
Founder of West Asheville's Public Library.

Some day, when West Asheville has doubled and trebled its present population of 4,000 people, its citizens will point to a library building there, with well filled shelves and a big reading room, and say:

"Yes, Captain Ray—Captain J. E. Ray, you know—started that library."

The visitor will agree, and there will be recalled to him the beginning of that library of the future, now housed in a single room over a business house in West Asheville. There are 300 volumes, possibly more, on the shelves, and they offer the seeker after mental refreshment a well-balanced menu. There are books of travel, taking the reader to strange lands. Of first-class fiction there is no dearth, and histories there are in plenty. A long table down the middle of the room is filled with magazines and periodicals. Pictures are on the walls and everything invites the visitor to sink into one of the chairs and there rest both body and mind at one and the same time.

Begin Even Race.

The point is that West Asheville and its library are beginning an even race with the town having a little the better start. A few years ago West Asheville simply—well, compared with what it is today, it simply wasn't. It had a most admirable site for a large city, it is quite true, but the city was lacking. And so was the library. Then somebody discovered West Asheville, along about the time the splendid concrete bridge which spans the river was built, and which Mayor J. E. Rankin, a personal friend of Captain Ray, helped to build. After the bridge was thrown across the French Broad the street cars followed, and then the people and the library. Now there is on the other side of the river a most thriving, prosperous and healthful community, with the longest paved street in the state running through it, with handsome and substantial business blocks, a bank, comfortable homes by the hundred and with the foundations laid for a library. And a library, as it has been pointed out, is as necessary as a grocery store or other business house.

Library Will Grow.

So, then, while the municipality has the wee trifle of a start towards coming greatness, the library is close behind. As one grows, so will the other, and this is already manifest in this way:

There's a great brick structure now well towards completion in West Asheville. This is the new public school, destined to house 700 pupils. That is, there are 700 pupils ready to fill the building when completed. By that time there will be still more, of course. But in this handsome new building there will be set apart one room for the home of Captain Ray's library. It will be a much larger and better adapted room than the one where the books now rest, and from the windows of the room may be seen the mountains whose beauty alone will detract the attention of the library visitor from reading of the volumes. There will be a young lady in charge of the room, and its entire convenience will make it of far more general use than even at present.

So this is evidence that the library is about to catch up with the town in its growth. For without doubt, others inspired by the example of Captain Ray, will add still more books to those soon to be placed in this room, and so the list will grow and grow until a building all its own is demanded for the West Asheville library. And Captain J. E. Ray will have been responsible for it all.

Captain Ray is as old as Asheville, which is his home. He was born on the same day that the city was incorporated, but his looks and personal appearance are deceiving in this respect. He says he likes to see his books at work, and although he has many and loves them all, still he decided to part with at least 300 of them that others might enjoy them too. That is the kind of a man Captain Ray is. He has seen Asheville grow from nothing to its present importance. He has seen West Asheville start its remarkable growth to a town of importance. During all these years, with a record of brilliant service in the Confederate army, his heart is still as young as it was sixty years ago, and that, after all, it is the only thing that counts, declare those who have thought deeply on such matters.

Asheville Citizen February 11, 1917

BOOKS AND PICTURES GIVEN BY COL. RAY

Colonel J. M. Ray, Who Likes to See Books at Work, Starts Public Library For West Asheville.

Colonel J. M. Ray is just as old as Asheville—although he doesn't look it. In other words, Colonel Ray was born the same year that Asheville was incorporated. Asked when this was, Mayor J. E. Rankin replied that Colonel Ray could, if he wished, give the desired information.

But whenever that was, it was several years ago, and Colonel Ray has seen many and wonderful changes in Asheville since then. He has kept pace with the growth of the city, however. He remembers the time when the ground now covered by the federal building was a place to be shunned by teams. It was a low place, and the land there was boggy. Teams were easily mired and the place had an unenviable reputation, says Colonel Ray. Since those days Asheville has prospered, and a suburb of many homes has arisen across the city, and so Colonel Ray has transferred his activities to that younger branch of Asheville.

"I have many books," said he, "and I have always liked to see my books at work. So I started a library across the river, over there in West Asheville."

The public library of West Asheville is composed of 100 volumes, donated by Colonel Ray, with many pictures, enough in fact, to line the walls of the two rooms which are at present the home of the library. The books are of various kinds and are being read by the children and the grown people, too. They are at work, as Colonel Ray expressed it, and this is what books are for. There will be, eventually, a room in the new school building provided for the library, where the books will be more accessible to the 700 school children.

"I hardly know of a town which has grown, without the stimulation of oil or gas discoveries, like West Asheville has during the past few years," said Colonel Ray, the other day. "It has every natural advantage required for a big city, and personally that is my opinion of what West Asheville will some day be."

Asheville Citizen February 1, 1917

Capt. J. E. Ray, Aged Confederate Died Yesterday in His 87th Year

Well Known and Highly Respected Citizen Dead Here.

Captain J. E. Ray, one of the oldest and most widely known residents of Asheville died yesterday morning in his eighty-seventh year at his home on Hillside street, this city, as a result of a short illness. For more than a half century he has been actively identified with the religious, social and civic life of Asheville. Captain Ray, who served with distinction in the Confederate army during the war between the states, has been an active member of the veterans and has been a regular attendant at all reunion of his fellow soldiers. His death came as a sad blow to the Confederates, who left yesterday afternoon for the reunion in Houston, Texas.

He is survived by his son, Edwin L. Ray, president of the Citizen's bank, this city; his daughter, Miss Ethel Ray of Asheville; and the following brothers and sisters: General James M. Ray, formerly of the Confederate army; Dr. F. A. Sondley, Mrs. G. M. Roberts and Mrs. J. E. Millard.

Funeral services will be held at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Central Methodist church, conducted by Rev. Dr. E. K. McLarty, the pastor, and by Rev. H. Y. Leeper.

Honorary pallbearers will be: Dr. R. H. Reeves, D. W. Cauble, J. E. Rankin, W. R. Whitson, John H. Weaver, M. F. Stikeleather.

Active pallbearers will be: John A. Campbell, George S. Powell, A. H. Cobb, Eugene Bearden, Eugene Sawyer and Joe W. Sender.

West Asheville News October 3, 1920

Rays honored after service to community

FROM STAFF REPORTS

Marie Ray retired two years ago from Buncombe County Schools after 40 years of teaching music education in North Carolina. North Buncombe Elementary School named a theater in her honor, according to Jeff Ray.

Leroy Ray, who came to Asheville in 1962 and set up Ray's Home Improvement, was in the business for 38 years before turning the store over to his son Jeff. Leroy Ray was active for 30 years in the Asheville Kiwanis Club and was honored with a distinguished service award.

Mr. Ray, who was formerly married to Mary Farmer, who died in 1987, has three children. They are Katie Leigh Luther, Karen Lynn Donner and Jeff Ray. He has seven grandchildren.

Mrs. Ray's children are Julie Flowers Lewis and Hal Flowers. She has four grandchildren.

PHOTO COURTESY OF JEFF RAY

Jeff Ray of Asheville brought in this picture of Marie Flowers Ray and Leroy Ray for publication in the Citizen-Times.

Asheville Citizen August 26, 2005

The Police Review

VOLUME 6 MARCH, 1927 NUMBER 3

HAMILTON E. REDMAN
Patrolman
ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

Hamilton E. Redman was born July 9th, 1890, in Fairview, North Carolina, but didn't like the view and at the discerning age of one year moved to Asheville, apparently this view is exactly to his fancy because he has anchored himself in the town in a very permanent way by tying up with the police department.

This event took place in June, 1920.

When Officer Redman is anchored he is ANCHORED.

Of course you have always heard, large bodies move clowly and he is of rather generous size—6 feet 2 inches up and 230 pounds heavy whether he is up or down.

But we mean he moves slowly only in this sense, he fully decides what he wants to do and then isn't given to moving with every wind of opinion that blows; he is entirely capable of doing his own thinking and acting.

Ever since that first move of his at the age of one year, he has been an independent thinker and knows "he wants what he wants when he wants it."

He hasn't made many moves in his career but they have been wise ones, at least they appear so to us.

Certainly this last move is a fine thing for him and an even better thing for the community.

His work down in the Panama Canal Zone was policing in character so Officer Redman came to this department with valuable knowledge bearing on his work.

Officer Redman lives at 82 Herron Avenue, West Asheville.

Neighborhood groups strive to improve West Asheville

By Lynne Billings
STAFF WRITER

West Asheville residents are enthusiastic about living there but say it has its pluses and minuses like any area of the city. West Asheville includes a number of neighborhood associations that are working to preserve and enhance its attractive features.

Martha Hungerford was the first president of the West Asheville Estates Neighborhood Association, and her husband, Jimmy Hungerford, is the current president. They have lived in West Asheville for 25 years.

Several years ago, the City of Asheville was going to take down the maple trees along Vermont Avenue and give us new sidewalks," Mrs. Hungerford said. "We managed to save the trees. The trees on Vermont are absolutely beautiful."

"That's when we really started the (neighborhood) association. My husband and I have tried to keep it going," she said. The annual neighborhood block party was held Sept. 16 in front of the Hungerfords' home.

Their neighborhood association received a grant to plant new trees, and Jimmy Hungerford, and Charlie Ploss, the Hungerfords' son-in-law, have planted 15 new maple trees.

Steve Dixon/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER
Gloria Johnson, president of the Burton Street Community, takes time to smell the flowers at her home on Burton Street.

"We have a Neighborhood Watch. We're friends with the police," she said, and she walks her dog in the evening and feels comfortable. In fact, people come from all over the neighborhood and other neighborhoods to walk, run, and walk dogs along Vermont Avenue.

"We have a park at the bottom of the street. We would like to have a speed bump. So far we haven't managed to get that," she said.

Gloria Johnson is president of the Burton Street Community.

"I love living on Burton Street. I've been there all my life. I wouldn't live anywhere else. The neighbors will do anything for you," Johnson said.

"Our main concern right now is the traffic on our street. Cars just speed up and down Burton Street in front of the Community Center. If a child should run out in front of one of them, it's just a tragedy," she said.

The City of Asheville Parks and Recreation Department has said that the Burton Street Community Center has been approved for a grant to re-do the center and its old playground equipment, Johnson said.

"We've been waiting for a long time to get that (playground equipment) replaced," she said.

Also, the community has requested that the streets be paved.

"That was about four or five years ago, and nothing has been done as of yet," Johnson said.

Periodically, there are problems with the selling of drugs, she said.

"We had a march on Burton Street against drugs," Johnson said. "I had a talk with our community and told them 'When you see things going on, report it, so that's what we started doing'."

Lane Reid lives and works in West Asheville. He and business partner Joey Cain own a business there, Image 420 Screen Printing at 420 Haywood Road. Reid is also president of the Falconhurst Residential Association.

Falconhurst is bordered by Louisiana Avenue, Haywood Road and Patton Avenue, three busy roads, but, "It's a great quiet neighborhood, and it's so close to everything," Reid said. He and his family have lived there for about 10 years.

"We know all of our neighbors. ... We help each other, and everyone keeps an eye on everybody else," he said.

The association will have a block party in October.

"We get a permit, block a couple of streets off, set up tables in the middle of the road, and everybody brings great food for a potluck meal," he said.

"When we moved in it was affordable," he said. West Asheville is probably still affordable and has many young people moving in, he said.

However, "There's no sidewalks. I don't think they've paved the road in our neighborhood in eight years. We have grass growing in some of the streets," he said, with a chuckle that seemed to indicate he didn't mind too much.

He doesn't mind the cruising along Patton Avenue either, Reid said, but the screeching of tires from reckless driving late at night does disturb him.

As for his business, "The rents were very reasonable when we started out," he said. The area is getting built up, with a lot of new businesses moving in.

Reid is naturally very concerned about what will happen with I-240. "The status keeps changing," he said. "I try and go to all the meetings, but it's hard to keep up," with that and business and family.

Contact Billings at 232-6013 or LBillings@CITIZEN-TIMES.com

ASHEVILLE
CITIZEN-TIMES
VOICE OF THE MOUNTAINS
SUNDAY
July 4, 1999
$1.50

HEALTH CARE: INSURANCE OF SMALL-BUSINESS EMPLOYEES

Health insurance hurts small firms

Skyrocketing premium costs make covering employees difficult

By John Boyle
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE – Ask Lane Reid about the ever-escalating health insurance rates for his small business, and he sighs and laughs. But it's not a happy laugh.

"I know every time they call me about the renewal, the rates are going up," said Reid, who employs five people at his West Asheville business, Image 420 Screenprinting. "Usually, it goes up about 10 percent a year. Yet our costs haven't gone up that much. You just know it's never going to go down."

While most companies, including smaller businesses, enjoyed something of a health insurance rate increase honeymoon when managed care swept the country a few years ago, those idyllic days of static rates are long gone. Health insurance costs just keep rising, which puts a particular crunch on smaller businesses. They have smaller revenue streams to begin with and often don't get as attractive rates as bigger companies because their pool of employees – the potential insured – is smaller.

In 1987, the health benefit cost per employee was $1,751 in the United States, according to the Employee Benefit Research Institute and Mercer/Foster-Higgins. By 1998, that figure had soared to $4,164. About 70 percent of health insurance in America is employer-based.

In North Carolina, 352,018 employees are in small group plans. The N.C. Department of Insurance estimates that the total of premiums written in the small group health insurance market in 1998 was $843.1 million.

Insurance companies stay in business by "spreading risk" among the insured. Essentially, that means enrolling far more healthy people than ones who tend to get sick and require big payouts. This way, companies take in more in premiums than they pay out in reimbursements – and they can make a profit.

Smaller companies – typically 50 employees or less – have smaller pools of employees to spread the risk among. That often translates into higher rates.

"We're spending about $12,000 a year on insurance," Reid said, adding that his company is fairly unusual in that it pays 100 percent of the insurance plan cost for

❖ See Insurance on page A9

JOHN COUTLAKIS/CITIZEN-TIMES

Lane Reid, right, the owner of Image 420 Screenprinting, says annual health insurance rate increases of 10 percent or more are making it hard for him to provide 100 percent coverage for his five employees. Here, he and employee Lee Buckner are printing designs on T-shirts.

Premium increases blamed on drugs, equipment

❖ Insurance from page A1

employees. "It's getting to where it's very hard to pay that."

Susan Morgan and business partner Liz Koenig run Accelerated Benefits Solutions, a West Asheville agency that helps small businesses find health insurance plans. Over the past few years, they've delivered plenty of bad news to small companies regarding rate jumps.

"We just delivered a renewal for a local organization, a $208 employee rate," Morgan said of the 45-employee operation. "Four years ago, we were looking at an employee rate of about a hundred bucks."

The organization's $208 rate constitutes a 25 percent increase.

"If these small businesses raised their product rates that much, they'd drive themselves out of business," Morgan said.

Cheryl Wolfe, chief executive officer of the Asheville Board of Realtors, says she routinely budgets for a 20 percent health insurance rate increase. Faced with a 20 percent increase this year, she switched the organization's 13 employees to Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, the largest carrier in the state. Offering good health coverage has become a necessary perk in the modern workplace if you want to keep good employees, she said.

"We pay 100 percent for the employee, and they pay the difference for the family," Wolfe said. "It is a good deal, but I don't know how long we'll be able to do that. You hate to take a benefit away, but if costs keep going up you have to make decisions."

Most companies have the employ[illegible] pay some portion of the prem[illegible]

Wolfe, who worked previously for a large medical provider company, suggests that Medicare cutbacks have caused medical providers to make up the slack elsewhere, which in turn drives up insurance rates. This is partly true – the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 will cut $115 billion in Medicare spending by 2002 – but experts say the recent rate increases are more complex than that.

"If I had to identify one reason for increased premiums it would be the huge costs of pharmaceuticals," said Tom Jacks, deputy commissioner for the Life and Health Division of the N.C. Department of Insurance. "Drugs are probably the most important factor in the rising cost of insurance."

He also mentioned the influence of managed care.

Paul Goldbeck, a senior vice president with Aon Consulting, the fifth-largest human resources consulting firm in the country, says "there's definitely been an uptick (in premium rates), going back six to 12 months." Part of that is because of the end of the managed care cost savings.

"Managed care's initial impact tends to be on the price side of the cost equation – negotiating lower prices," Goldbeck said from his office in Winston-Salem. "But you can benefit from it for only so long. There's only so much the providers can give back."

In 1996, the average premium growth for employers was just 1 percent, and average premiums actually dropped in 1997, according to the Alliance for Health Reform, a non-partisan, nonprofit organization based in Washington, D.C. One survey suggested that employers' premiums rose 4 percent in 1998 and will rise 8.5 percent this year.

Western North Carolina's lack of huge employers, a contrast to other parts of the state, makes some insurance carriers reluctant to come into the area, which can further drive up premiums. Also, with the recent consolidation of Memorial Mission and St. Joseph's hospitals, some insurance industry workers feel the lack of competition scares off insurance carriers.

"Here we've got about 10 carriers to choose from, and they're not all competitive," Morgan said. "We do some business in Charlotte and Hickory, and there are about 35 carriers to choose from."

The state has 73 carriers listed as serving North Carolina. The Department of Insurance has approval authority to regulate rates only of Blue Cross and of health maintenance organizations.

When it comes to rising premium costs, Blue Cross and the HMOs are held to caps of 15 percent plus the rate of inflation.

Another factor driving up rates is ever-improving – and expensive – medical technology. Some critics, Morgan and Koenig among them, suggest that doctors overbill for these tests, as well as for regular office visits.

"People have got to open up their eyes and see what's going on," Koenig said. "People go in and pay their co-payment and say, 'Great.' Then the next year they get a 48 percent increase."

"In our opinion, it's not the insurance companies (driving the rate increases)," said Morgan, whose company has about 140 small bus[illegible]ss clients. "It's the doctors. I me[illegible] how much money do you have to make?"

Exact costs of fraud and abuse of the health care system are tough to pinpoint, and estimates vary from between 3 and 25 percent of total annual health care costs, according to the Source Book of Health Insurance Data. But in the early 1990s, the General Accounting Office estimated the cost of fraud at 10 percent of annual health care costs, or $100 billion.

Naturally, assertions of overcharging or outright fraud rankle doctors and doctor's office administrators.

"It is often difficult to diagnose what is ailing someone," said Elizabeth Lancaster, chief executive officer of Asheville Family Health, a 16-doctor practice with 51 employees. "I can tell you they don't do unnecessary tests."

In part, doctors must go through a process of elimination to arrive at a diagnosis, she says. But there is another consideration when ordering tests.

"I can also tell you it's a litigious society in which we live, and doctors are somewhat forced to have a defense," Lancaster said.

She notes that reimbursements to the practice – what insurance companies pay out for certain procedures or visits – have largely remained static for the past few years, or even gone down. She cites a recent Blue Cross and Blue Shield reimbursement increase of .6 percent for a simple office visit.

"That is negligible. That's 46 cents," Lancaster said. "On another one, the most complex type of office visit, they've gone down 22.9 percent. They lowered (the reimbursement) by $30.84."

Asked if doctors were getting rich, she laughed and suggested the insurance companies are a better place to look.

And by the way, her office's insurance rates for those 51 employees went up 40 percent last year. Asheville Family Health spends $80,000 annually on health insurance.

Not surprisingly, insurance companies say they're not getting rich, either.

Bob Greczyn is an executive vice president and the chief operating officer at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina, which insures 1.8 million people statewide. He cites soaring pharmaceutical costs and expensive technology as the main culprits in rising insurance rates.

"Ultimately, if you look at most health insurance companies, if they're profitable the profit margins are not very high," Greczyn said. "Especially in the context of other businesses, they're actually quite low – probably way less than 5 percent. At Blue Cross, we've struggled with operating losses the last few years. We're trying to get back to having a positive bottom line."

What all this comes down to is this: small companies, like everyone else, can expect health insurance rates to keep rising.

Jean Holliday, a supervisor with the Life and Health Division, foresees no relief for small businesses, or any companies, really when it comes to insurance rates.

"We anticipate seeing quite a few double-digit increases in the years to come, not only for small companies but the large ones, too," she said.

John Boyle at 232-5847 or e-mail at [illegible]yle@CITIZEN-TIMES.com

FRIDAY, JUNE 18, 1943

THE NEWS PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

(Continued from page one)

ROM MILLER REID

By Tom Cushing

With this issue Rom Miller Reid leaves his post as editor of the West Asheville News to take a position on the advertising staff of the Charlotte, N. C. "News."

For 10 years Rom Reid has been the neighbor as well as the purveyor of news to all West Asheville and its vicinity. His weekly column, "The News Personality of the Week" has been a feature of this paper usually sought first by the reader; and if turn about is really fair play, then paeans of praise should be sung at Rom's farewell: for never has he failed to be a good neighbor or to have a good word to say about the other fellow.

Under Rom Reid's guiding editorial hand this West Asheville News has been characterized by its neighborliness. Anyone of the many hundreds of Rom Reid's friends knows that his expansive good nature and innate spirit of brotherly love would never permit a touch of maliciousness or vindictiveness to mar any news sheet he might edit. That there is some good in the worst of us has been an axiom of Mr. Reid's editorial career.

He was born in Statesville, N. C. Sept. 17, 1908, and vows he was named just plain "Rom" and not some romantic - sounding "Romulus". His father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Reid of 21 S. Ann St., brought him to Asheville as a young child and lived in West Asheville when this thriving community was a sparsely settled, practically rural suburb of Asheville. He attended Asheville public schools, and graduated from high school before going to the University of North Carolina where, as he says, he just "freelanced" in the studies, taking such subjects as he chose rather than working toward any degree. This independent spirit in his education has unquestionably added much to his well-rounded ability as a newspaper man.

Reid's first touch of the indelible printer's ink was rubbed into his spirit when he was just a child, carrying papers to every section of the city for the old Asheville Gazette News, the Citizen, and the Times. Even then, though the section was nothing more than a large country village, Rom liked West Asheville territory best. Today he recalls most pleasantly the period in which he worked for the old Citizen when Ray DeVault was circulation manager and Randall Harris, now business manager of the Asheville Citizen-Times, was cashier.

Interviewing a professional interviewer is not easy; but in quick grabs over the telephone or in his office the writer gets from Rom Reid a humorous anecdote now and then. He laughs when he remembers the days he worked carrying papers for the old Gazette and Times. Ownership of the daily changed so fast that Rom says half the time the boys did not know whom they were working for. One Sunday morning after deliveries had been made some of the paper's workers were gathered in the back room to engage in a bit of "African golf". A stranger entered and asked what was going on. One of the players scarcely looked up as he inquired, "What business is it of yours? Who are you, anyway?" The stranger had bought the paper business the day before!

Returning from the University, Rom Reid went to work in the circulation department of the Asheville Times under Ralph Corn. Pat Burdette, present city manager of Asheville, was then publisher of the paper, and D. Hiden Ramsey, now general manager of both dailies, was editor. One day Rom made a bet with one of the boys in his department, that he could get a quick raise in pay out of Mr. Burdette. Whereupon young Reid trembled his way into the sanctum of the publisher, and based his plea on the fact that he had just married the former Miss Harriet Gatling and, as a man of greater responsibility, just plain needed more money. Mr. Burdette granted the raise, adding, "Young man, you are not worth it, but we can't let your wife down."

The roseate days of the local gone-but-not-forgotten Real Estate Boom-erang came, and Rom Reid was well established in the advertising department of the paper when advertising lineage at high rates gushed from the pens of every expanding real estate office. Young Reid, wiser than many of his elders, suspected something was wrong with all this prosperity when he, not overly experienced, was offered a job as advertising and public relations man with a real estate company . . . at the almost unheard-of salary of $75 per week. His only job would be to prepare one ad a day, then sit in the swanky office of the firm and look wise. Rom shied away from this too-good offer, kept his regular job, and so was able to keep on eating when the real estate boomerang flew back to crack Asheville very painfully on the nose.

Rom's next job was in the advertising department of the Times when that paper was purchased by Don Ellas, present owner-director of radio station WWNC. Shortly afterward Reid took a position in Columbus, Georgia, his main reason for changing being a thirst for knowledge of this section in which he had set The Great Novel that Rom, like all young writers, meant . . . and still means . . . to write. In the Georgia town a close personal friendship developed between the Asheville man and Julian Harris, son of the great writer of the 'Uncle Remus' tales, Joel Chandler Harris. Julian Harris, editor and publisher of the Columbus Enquirer at the time, won the Pulitzer Prize for his expose of the Ku Klux Klan.

While in Columbus, Mr. and Mrs. Reid lived in the same beautiful old Colonial home that the Marquis de LaFayette had as his residence when he was in that part of the country. Except for the fact that Rom has forbidden me to mention it, I should like to tell you about the "consolation party" given after the defeat of Al Smith of the Presidency by the owner of this fine Georgia home where the Reids resided. President Franklin D. Roosevelt, living in Warm Springs at the time, was an honored guest at the party, and today the memory of that day is sweet to the Rom Reids. (Note to Walter A. Ward, publisher of the West Asheville News: Rom will be in Charlotte when this appears; so please leave this part of the story in.)

Asheville and West Asheville have seen the Rom Reid family grow to include two sons, Richard, 17, a graduate of Lee Edwards high school and the aeronautics post-graduate course there, and Robert 15, a student at Hall Fletcher high school. Richard is soon to enter the armed services.

There is on old poem which says "A rose to the living is more than sumptious wreaths to the dead." This line could be almost a motto to our friend and neighbor, Rom Miller Reid. As he leaves West Asheville to take up a new and, it is to be hoped temporary, residence in Charlotte, his host of friends here in the mountains wish for him the best that life can bestow; with the added best of all, that he and his family will remember always: Buncombe county is a most pleasant place; and welcome to the Rom Reids will be as full when they return as the community's loss is great when they depart.

West Asheville News June 18, 1943

REID EXTENDS THANKS; WISHES NEWS CONTINUED SUCCESS

By ROM REID

Especially in view of the friendships which I have so fortunately, but perhaps in many instances undeservedly, acquired during the more than a decade with The News, it is but natural that the adieu on my part be attended by no small measure of regret. But neither separation, time nor circumstance can erase the priceless memory that is mine as result of the pleasant associations both within and outside of the organization of The News during the years . . . relationships which have helped the labors, though arduous they sometimes have seemed to be, to be joyous ones and appear not altogether in vain.

Whatever successes that have accrued have been chiefly the product of the loyalty and interest of the readers, the indispensable aid and encouragement of the advertisers and other patrons, all other assistance, however small.

For this I am profoundly grateful, as I know Mr. Walter A Ward undeniably is. On my leave taking my wish for him and his associates is naught but continued success, and my hope is that all who have evinced interest in The News will see fit to continue the cooperation they have so generously extended in the past.

West Asheville News June 18, 1943

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1941

IN HONOLULU

ERNEST H. REVIS, JR.

Mr. Revis is stationed in Honolulu war zone on the USS Northampton. A seaman first class, he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Revis of 33 Madeline avenue, West Asheville.

Bruce Emory
Research

HE'S IN NAVY

THOMAS J. REVIS, JR.

Mr. Revis, son of Thomas J. Revis of 346 Haywood road, who has been in the navy for three months, is at home for a furlough. He expects to return to his station at Key West, Fla., Monday. The 17-year-old apprentice seaman attended Hall Fletcher high school and enlisted in the navy at the Macon, Ga., recruiting station.

Asheville Times April 1942

B. V. S. FORM 11

NORTH CAROLINA STATE BOARD OF HEALTH
BUREAU OF VITAL STATISTICS

168

CERTIFICATE OF DEATH

THIS COPY TO REGISTER OF DEEDS ON FIFTH OF MONTH MARGIN RESERVED FOR BINDING

WRITE PLAINLY, WITH UNFADING INK—THIS IS A PERMANENT RECORD.
Every item of information should be carefully supplied. The correct age is especially important.
Please write the causes of death clearly and legibly.

PHYSICIANS:

Registration Dist. No. 11-25 Certificate No. 165

1. PLACE OF DEATH:
(a) County Buncombe
(b) Township ..... (If in town limits, leave blank)
(c) City or town Asheville (If outside city or town limits, write RURAL)
(d) Street, hospital or institution Mission
(e) Length of stay in hospital or institution ..... (Yrs., mos., or days)
In this community ..... (Yrs., mos., or days)

2. HOME (USUAL RESIDENCE) OF DECEASED:
(a) State N.C., (b) County Buncombe
(c) City or town Asheville
(d) Street or R.F.D. 87 Oakwood
(e) Is place of residence in corporate limits? yes
(f) If foreign born, how long in U.S.A.? ..... year

3(a) FULL NAME Mary Osie Reynolds
3(b) If veteran, name war
3(c) Social Security No.
4. Sex Female
5. Color or Race White
6(a) Single, married, widowed, or divorced.
6(b) Name of husband or wife O. H. Reynolds
(c) Age of husband or wife if alive unknown years.
7. Birth date of deceased unknown (month, day and year)
8. AGE: Years about 38 | Months | Days | If less than one day ..... hrs. ..... mins.
9. Birthplace Waynesboro Ga. (City, town, or county) (State or foreign country)
10. Usual occupation nurse
11. Industry or business
FATHER 12. Name Morgan Gordon
13. Birthplace Ga.
MOTHER 14. Maiden Name Mamie Fulcher
15. Birthplace Ga.
16(a) Informant's Signature Frank Rackley
(b) Address Waynesboro, Ga.
17(a) Removal (Burial, cremation, or removal) (b) Date thereof 3-18-46 (Month, day, year)
(c) Cemetery Magnolia Cemetery
(d) Location Waynesboro Ga.
18(a) Funeral director Anders & Rice
(b) Address Asheville N.C.
19(a) 3-18 1946 Filed (b) M. M. McFee Registrar

MEDICAL CERTIFICATION

20. Date of death 3-17 1946 at 3:25 P.M.
21. I certify that death occurred on the date above stated; that I attended deceased from never 19..., to ..... 19...
and that I last saw h. never alive on ..... 19...

Immediate cause of death	Duration hemorrhage
Due to Concussion of brain
Due to blow on head
Other conditions (Include pregnancy within 3 months of death)
Major findings: Of operations
Of autopsy

Physician: Underline the cause to which death should be charged statistically.

22. If death was due to external causes, fill in the following:
(a) Accident, suicide, or homicide (specify) homicide
(b) Date of occurrence 3-17-46
(c) Where did injury occur? Asheville (City or town) Bunc. (County) N.C. (State)
(d) Did injury occur about home, on farm, in industrial place, in a public place? Home (Specify type of place)
While at work?
(e) Means of injury blow on head by some blunt instrument
23. Signature P. R. Leery (Coroner) M.D.
Address Asheville Date signed 3-18-46

4-19-46 Husband convicted - pub. 2nd degree murder

ASHEVILLE

1949 Seniority Book.

D.R. Maye 5/2/1919 Yard Engineer

O.H. Reynolds 2/27/1926 Yard Fireman

W.C. Reynolds 10/16/1943 Switchman

Above Southern Railway Seniority Book furnished by Joe Mehaffey
Joe Joyner

JAMES T. RICE (right) of 81 Bear Creek Road and 1962 president of West Asheville Kiwanis Club, received an honorable mention award during the annual Kiwanis International Achievement Report contest recognition recently in Atlantic City. The award was presented by Jack C. Grimmett of the International Awards committee. The West Asheville club was one of five in the nation to be honored in competition among clubs of the 35 to 45-member group. The award cited community service programs and administration.

Good Show

J. T. Rice, a funeral director, bought a piece of land near Weaverville and decided to clear it and run cattle on it.

He rented a tractor and bush hog and arranged to have them delivered the next day at 3:30 p.m.

He forgot that he had a 2 p.m. funeral the same day.

At the end of the funeral, he looked at his watch and saw he didn't have time to go home and change clothes, so he drove to the farm in his black suit, white shirt, and black tie.

The man was there with the equipment and J. T. said, "Show me how to run it." The man explained the operation and J. T. climbed aboard to experiment. He got the hang of it rather quickly, and the other man left.

The weather was a bit too cool for J. T. to remove his coat and roll up his sleeves. So, fully dressed, he bush-hogged away. After about 30 minutes he measured the work he had done, gauged what remained to be done, and decided that if he kept at it he could finish before dark.

Shortly, he saw a pickup truck stop and a man in overalls got out. Two young boys got out, too. They stood against the side of the truck watching him.

Thinking they might have come to see him on business, J. T. drove over to the side of the field and spoke, "Good afternoon, gentlemen"—he's a very polite man.

"Afternoon," the farmer said.

"Anything I can do for you?" J. T. asked.

"Naw," the farmer replied. "I never saw nobody bush-hogging in a suit and tie before and just wanted the boys to see it."

From "Bob Terrell's Old Gold", 1981

113

J.A. HALLER
327-37

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C.
Tuesday, September 4, 1956

Rich, Teacher, Dies At 24

Maurice (Eddie) Rich, 24, popular young educator and former member of the faculty of Newton Elementary School here, died at 8:05 a.m. yesterday in an Asheville hospital following a short illness. He became ill and went to the hospital Thursday.

He was a graduate of Lee H. Edwards High School. In the Spring of 1954 he was graduated with highest honors from Western Carolina College at Cullowhee.

Funeral services will be conducted at 4 p.m. tomorrow in Calvary Baptist Church.

The Rev. J. Lester Lane, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in Green Hills Cemetery.

Pallbearers will be Joe Burgin, Curt Pfalzgraf, Bron Brookshire, Arthur Smith, Edwin Grover and Robert Ward.

Honorary pallbearers will be Dr. Frank Gross, Dr. Walter Johnson, Arnold Penland, William Ledford, Dwaine Oliver, Marvin Berry, Dr. W. E. Bird, president of Western Carolina College, and members of the College faculty.

The body will remain at Groce Funeral Home until it is taken to the church to lie in state from 3 p.m. until 4 p.m.

During his college days Rich was president of Alph Phi Sigma fraternity, president of the Future Teachers of America and was listed in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

He was a Sunday School teacher at Calvary Baptist Church and was active in other church work there.

For one year following his graduation at WCC, Rich taught at Newton School. He then became affiliated with Johns and Co., insurance adjustors of St. Petersburg, Fla. where he was employed as an adjustor. He had been with the latter firm since the spring of 1955.

Rich later resigned his position with the St. Petersburg firm to resume his teaching profession. He was assigned a school in the Florida city and was to have assumed his new duties there today.

Surviving are the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Maurice C. Rich Sr.; one sister, Mrs. Peggy Ramsey; the paternal grandmother, Mrs. C. E. Rich; and the maternal grandparents, Mrs. and Mrs. A. O. Penland all of Asheville.

MAURICE RICH

Claude Rickman Given Commission As Ensign

Claude R. Rickman has been commissioned an ensign in the United States navy after completing his midshipman's training at Northwestern university, Chicago.

RICKMAN

Ensign Rickman, accompanied by his wife, is spending a 10-day leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Rickman of 114 Indiana avenue. He is a graduate of Brevard high school and received his A.B. and B.S. degrees at Marion college, Marion, Ind. He is a member of the West Asheville Wesleyan Methodist church, and before entering the navy in October of last year he was employed in the war training program at Purdue university. Ensign Rickman was employed in the Powell decorating business before the outbreak of war.

Asheville Times May 3, 1943

9-6-95

PHOTO COURTESY OF EARL C

Members of the 1973 West Asheville All-Stars, from left to right, bottom row, Scotty Martin, Danny Crowe, Mike Hembree, John Hooker, Ricky Robinson; middle row, Norman Byrd, Bobby Thomas, Doug Cowan, Mike Cobb, Cal Ripken Jr., Mike Bailey; top row, Ricky Moore, Mark Broome, manager Earl Cobb, coach Rodney Duckett, Ken Johnson.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cal Ripken of the Baltimore Orioles tips his cap to the crowd at the start of the game against the California Angels before breaking Lou Gehrig's record of 2,130 consecutive games on Sept. 6, 1995. Ripken said Monday he intends to retire at the end of the season.

"The reality is that players can't play forever." — Cal Ripken Jr.

Cal calls it quits

Ripken to retire at end of season

By David Ginsburg
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BALTIMORE — Nothing lasts forever — not even Cal Ripken Jr.

Baseball's Iron Man, who broke Lou Gehrig's record of 2,130 consecutive games, will retire after his 21st season with the Baltimore Orioles — the only team he ever played for.

INSIDE
■ Ripken's ties to Asheville
Page E5

"I don't see this as an ending so much. I'm not stopping something. I'm just moving on," the 40-year-old third baseman said Tuesday, which would have been Gehrig's 98th birthday.

Injuries were not a factor, said Ripken, who has been plagued by back problems in recent seasons. Time away from his family was.

"I'm as healthy now as at any time," he said. "The last couple of years I've been noticing that I miss being away from home. I miss my kids' activities and it seems like the passion ... I was getting into other things."

Ripken, a two-time Most Valuable Player, said it was the start of another phase in his career, one that will include more time with 11-year-old Rachel and 7-year-old Ryan.

"The reality is that players can't play forever," said Ripken, who led the West Asheville Little League All-Stars to the state title in 1973.

Ripken played in 2,632 straight games, from May 30, 1982, to Sept. 20, 1998, when he voluntarily ended the streak.

Ripken is also one of seven players in major league history with 3,000 hits (3,107) and 400 home runs (421).

He is a rarity in baseball — a player who has spent his entire career with the same team. Baltimore also happens to be the team he grew up rooting for, and the one his father once managed and coached.

"The Orioles have been my whole life," he said.

An 18-time All Star whose 345 home runs as a shortstop are a major league record, Ripken has been a part-time player this year. He is hitting .210 with four homers and 25 runs batted in.

Ripken recalled hearing some players talk about their regrets.

"I didn't want to be in position at the end of my career and regret not going about it a certain way," Ripken said. "So when I look back, I don't have those regrets. I accomplished what my skills, ability and determination allowed me to."

Ripken's Numbers

■ 2 — Most Valuable Player awards (1983, 1991); Gold Glove awards (1991, 1992).
■ 7 — Members of 3,000-hit, 400-homer club, including Ripken.
■ 11 — Fielding records owned by Ripken.
■ 18 — All-Star appearances, all consecutively. Ripken also is the current leader among AL third basemen in the 2001 All-Star balloting.
■ 345 — Homers hit by Ripken as a shortstop, most in major league history.
■ 2,632 — Games Ripken played in consecutively from 1982 to 1998, a major league record.
■ 3,107 — Career hits.
■ 5,045 — Players put on the disabled list from the time Ripken started his consecutive games streak to the time he first went on the DL in April 1999.
■ 8,243 — Innings Ripken played in consecutively (1982-87), also a major league record.

Asheville Citizen June 20, 2001

Ripken gives locals a claim to fame

By Mike Benzie
STAFF WRITER

HICKORY — Separated across three generations and 51 years, Earl Cobb, Stan Dotson and Kenny "Bubba" Nelson share connections to Cal Ripken Jr. that stem from Little League baseball, where they all developed respect and even awe for the Baltimore Orioles star.

Cobb, a retired 70-year-old former Little League coach and city councilman from Asheville, said he saw a well-disciplined 12-year-old when Ripken led the West Asheville All-Stars to a state Little League championship in the summer of 1973.

Cal Ripken Jr.

"He was fit on becoming a major-league ballplayer," said Cobb.

"No doubt, he had all the tools. He was a very well-behaved kid and always at practice on time."

Ripken lived in Asheville during summers from 1972-1974 while his late father Cal Sr. coached the Asheville Orioles, a Class AA affiliate of the Baltimore Orioles, where the 18-time all-star played his entire career.

He said Monday night he will retire at the end of this season after 20 years as one of the most talented, popular and durable players in the history of major-league baseball.

"Kids wanted to grow up to be like him," said 19-year-old South Atlantic League all-star Kenny "Bubba" Nelson of the Macon Braves.

"When kids threw the ball, they wanted to hold the ball like him."

Nelson started following Ripken and the Orioles when he played baseball around the diamonds in Fort Washington, Md.

By the time Nelson was 2 years old, Ripken, from Aberdeen, Md., had already won Rookie of the Year and Most Valuable Player awards as well as a World Series ring.

"I just loved the guy," said Nelson. "Everything I did was to be like him. I played third base and shortstop. He's a good idol."

Ripken, a future Hall of Famer, is most famous for playing in 2,632 consecutive games, breaking a record once thought untouchable.

Dotson, a 39-year-old Fairview resident, has no trouble remembering his one run-in with Ripken on the diamond.

"My memory is that I got a hit off him," said Dotson, who played third against the then-pitcher in the playoffs. "There is no scorecard or video, so nobody can dispute the fact."

Ripken also set marks for consecutive innings played and for 345 home runs as a shortstop. In a part-time role this season, Ripken was hitting .210 with four home runs and 25 RBIs.

"That is my claim to fame," said Cobb. "Even back then, you could see the potential."

Cobb's group of all-stars missed qualifying for the Little League World Series by one game.

"All his hard work and effort paid off," said Cobb. "He is truly an example for kids to follow."

Contact Benzie at 232-5864 or MBenzie@CITIZEN-TIMES.com

Ripken to retire

Professional baseball's iron man, Cal Ripken, announced Tuesday that he will retire at the end of this season.

Unless the Orioles make the playoffs, Ripken will play the final game of his career on Sept. 30 at Yankee Stadium.

Ripken's records

2,632 consecutive games played
2,216 consecutive games by a shortstop
345 home runs by a shortstop
16 consecutive All-Star game starts
15 years playing in all of a club's games
15 consecutive years playing in all of a club's games
12 years leading league in games by a shortstop
9 years leading league in games played
8 years leading league in double plays by a shortstop

SOURCE: Major League Baseball

AP

Asheville Citizen June 20, 2001

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES

MIKE LOPRESTI
sports commentary

Ripken never took the game for granted

The long ride will end in Yankee Stadium, which could not be more perfect. That is where it ended for Lou Gehrig, too, who set the record no one could ever possibly break.

Of course, someone did. Now it will soon be Cal Ripken's turn to say goodbye.

A career ended not by fatal disease as Gehrig's, but just by the facts of life.

It is time for Ripken. Probably a little past. He took the microphone Tuesday — officially announcing this will be his last season — as a part-time player hitting .210. A third baseman with not quite the same range anymore, not quite the same bat.

Who wants to see Cal Ripken, once indestructible enough to go 2,632 straight games, slowly fall apart?

"The reality is players can't play forever," he said. "I've always known that."

He is 40. Soon to be 41. An age when a man, any man, naturally looks down the road and wonders if there is something else that needs to be done.

Ripken sees his kids growing older. He sees the youth baseball program he wants to develop. He sees the Baltimore Orioles bringing in the new wave, trying to escape third place.

"I paid attention to the things that were pulling at me," he said. "I'm not stopping something. I'm moving on."

The last appearance will be in Yankee Stadium in late September, the afternoon shadows long, the air probably turning chilly.

The Yankees' minds might be on another postseason. Another World Series. But they will stop long enough to cheer. Yes, they will.

Ripken, by the way, got to play in one World Series, 18 years ago. Just one.

He said Tuesday he would have traded a few of those 21 years for another. No questions asked.

"The lesson I learned," he said of winning a championship, "is that it's not easy."

It is time, all right. He will leave on his schedule, his terms. Healthy. With a family that still needs some raising.

And he will leave an Oriole. It is almost always a sad sight, to watch a fading star squeeze out another year or two in a strange uniform, an alien city. It is nearly impossible not to look ... old.

If not for the streak — Gehrig's record was thought invulnerable, and Ripken blew through it by three years — his most amazing feat would be all 21 seasons spent in the same uniform.

This is the Free Agent Age. The Big Ego Age. The Follow-the-Money Age.

Players change teams like they change socks.

He has been out there awhile, since he made his first major league appearance as a pinch-runner — an odd sort of a debut for a man who would steal only 36 bases in 21 years.

By the way, Los Angeles outfielder Shawn Green has the longest active consecutive game streak, at 334.

Only 14 more years to catch Cal Ripken.

Ripken mentioned Tuesday how, as a young player, he would sit in the back of the bus and talk to the aging veterans. He would listen to their bitter words as the end approached. Their would'ves, should'ves, could'ves.

It taught him to never take the game for granted, nor his chance to play it.

He never did. Day, after day, after day.

"I tried to love every minute I was on the field," he said. "I feel lucky. ... I don't have the regrets those players had I asked years ago."

No regrets, no ill feelings. Looking forward to the last precious games. "I also look forward to the end of the season," he said. "And the rest of my life."

Would every athlete, would all of us for that matter, be able to leave that way.

Asheville Citizen June 20

MISS BERYL ROBERTS of Asheville has been chosen to represent the Western District of North Carolina Federated Music Clubs in the audition for the Samuel Goodman Scholarship in voice to be held in Raleigh Saturday. The winner will receive a summer's study at Juilliard School of Music, New York. Miss Roberts, a 17-year-old soprano was chosen for the audition at the Western District Festival held at Mars Hill College. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward G Roberts, 138 Brevard Road, and a Lee H. Edwards High School senior. She studies voice with Mrs. John Kemps of Enka.

Asheville Citizen April 12, 1950

Gallatin Roberts

Gallatin Roberts Bio

Gallatin Roberts, mayor of Asheville during the vibrant 1920s and tireless advocate for West Asheville, rose from simple beginnings to meet a tragic end. Born on a farm 12 miles north of Asheville in the Flat Creek area, he learned early on the value of hard work, walking to and from a one-room schoolhouse two miles away. He worked his way through higher education, attending Weaverville College, Washington College in Telford, Tennessee, and eventually King College in Bristol, Tennessee, all while holding down a variety of jobs.

It was on a trip to Asheville, however, where he found his calling. When some clothes he purchased were stolen, Roberts was introduced to the legal system. After watching and participating in the trial, he decided that he would be a lawyer. He just wasn't sure how he would afford it.

After graduating from King College, he returned to the Asheville area, where he worked a series of teaching jobs, first at Sand Hill School, then Barnardsville, and later at Flat Creek School. When he had saved up enough money, he enrolled in the Wake Forest Law School.

With his law degree in hand he returned home to ply his trade. Only, he had no money to open his own practice. He went back to teaching, returning to Flat Creek, then to Morgan Hill School.

In January 1907, he married Mary Althea Sams. They moved to Asheville, where he purchased a home on Livingston St. He decided it was time to put his formal training to work, so he opened his law office on N. Pack Square. Eventually, Roberts built up his following, aided by two factors: being elected County Attorney of Buncombe County and entering a partnership with W. G. Fortune.

Beginning in 1910, Roberts entered public service. That year he won a seat in the State Legislature. Roberts was progressive for his time. The first bill he introduced was a proposed amendment to the state constitution extending the vote to women. This was eight years before the Eighteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution guaranteed that right nationwide. The measure was soundly defeated then, and also in 1912 and 1914 when he reintroduced the bill. Roberts served three consecutive terms in the legislature before running for mayor of Asheville in 1919.

He defeated the incumbent, Mayor Rankin, by 500 votes. As mayor he presided over many improvements in the city's infrastructure, including construction of a water line from Bee Tree Reservoir, improved city facilities, the construction of Claxton, Newton, Vance, and Lee schools, and the construction of the first permanent fire station in West Asheville. He also fought for the consumer by demanding a reduction in telephone rates.

Roberts had moved to a house on Brevard road and campaigned tirelessly for West Asheville. He attended the West Asheville Presbyterian Church, where he was active regionally and nationally. He also was active in the West Asheville Club, dedicated to the improvement of West Asheville. In his second term as mayor, beginning in 1927, he pledged to develop gardens and a park at Rhododendron Park.

Despite his popularity, he was unable to avoid the effect of the Great Depression. In 1929, the bottom fell out of the stock market and banks and businesses folded all over the country. In 1930, Central Bank & Trust Co. went defunct, taking with it millions of the city's dollars. The city was left owing $1 million in overdue notes and $875,000 in new notes, with no way to pay them. Charges of corruption were leveled at Roberts and C.H. Bartlett, the commissioner of Public Safety. The Asheville Merchants Association and the Buncombe County Medical Society called for their resignations. An Asheville Citizen editorial claimed that Roberts and Bartlett had "betrayed these trusts [of the people] and in so doing have brought Asheville to the verge of irreparable ruin." Roberts at first refused to resign, then seeing that he had no choice, stepped down on December 11, 1930.

By February, he had been indicted along with six other public officials on charges of conspiring to misapply and convert public funds and to use them for the benefit of the Central Bank & Trust Co. On February 25, Roberts took his own life in the lavatory on the 4th floor of the Legal Building downtown. His was a tragic end to a life of tireless effort for his city and his profession. All of Asheville mourned his death.

Subject: Gladdon Roberts

1. Date & place of birth: _____

2. Where did he/she grow up & go to school? _____

_____

3. Photo from childhood or young adult life? _____
(If available)

4. Married ? When ? Where? _____

5. Family? _____

6. Where did he/she live in West Asheville as an adult? _____

7. Anecdotes? _____

_____

8. Photo from adult life? _____
(If available)

9. Contribution? _____

ASHEVILLE MAYOR PROTEST AGAINST TELEPHONE RATES

Calls Commission for Not Letting People Be Heard

LETTER TO GOVERNOR FROM MAYOR ROBERTS

Gen. Tyson to Tell Raleigh People About How the 30th Broke Line

Asheville Citizen Bureau, 402 Merchants' Bank Building.

By JULE B. WARREN.

RALEIGH, Oct. 6.—The governor received a letter from Mayor Gallatin Roberts, of Asheville, protesting in very vigorous terms against the continuation of the war-time telephone rates indefinitely and against the failure of the corporation commission to give the parties in all parts of the state, and Asheville especially, the opportunity to be heard on this question.

Mayor Roberts addressed the letter to the governor because he said the attitude of the corporation commission was such that it seemed useless to make the appeal to this rate making body. Members of the commission, the letter said, were wired when it was published that the hearing of the appeal of the Southern Bell would be heard last Thursday, and asked that Asheville be allowed to present her protests. In order to prepare the case Asheville's mayor asked that the hearing be postponed until the subscribers protest to continuation of war-time rates could be prepared. Mayor Roberts says in the letter to the governor that the commission has not even given the request for a postponement the courtesy of an answer.

Because of what Mayor Roberts terms the seeming indifference of the corporation commission to the interest of the people, he makes the appeal direct to the governor, and asked that he see what can be done to protect the interest of the public from the encroachment of the corporate interests of the state. The governor is conferring with Chairman W. T. Lee, of the commission, who comes from Waynesville, about the matter before answering Mayor Roberts.

Members of the commission, who read the letter in the Asheville papers, say that Mayor Roberts and other people in the state have misunderstood the whole matter of the hearing of the Southern Bell officials about continuation of the war-time rates. The telephone officials merely filed certain data and information about the necessity for a continuation of the war-time rates with the corporation commission. These exhibits and other evidence is how being made up into a report, and this report will be furnished cities of the state with the understanding that they may and probably will desire to enter protests and be heard sometime in the future. The commission declares that no decision or order has been reached concerning the necessity for a continuation of the war-time rates, and none will be made until sometime later when the other side of the case has been presented.

In the meantime, however, the old rates will continue in force, through an understanding with the commission, that the continuance of the rates now, will not prejudice the case for the companies when the time comes for the cities and towns to file their protests and a real hearing is set. The directors of the Raleigh Chamber of Commerce misunderstood the action of the company and of the commission last week, and had a special meeting for consideration of the case, asking the corporation commission for a postponement of decision until a protest could be made. Following the visit of the committee to the commission it was learned this was just what had been done.

General Lawrence D. Tyson, commander of the Old Hickory division, who says, "The 27th did not break the Hindenburg line, because the 30th broke the line first," will come to Raleigh on November 21 for the annual meeting of the North Carolina State Literary and Historical society, to tell this society how the line was broken.

The answer to "Who broke the Hindenburg line?" has already caused some discussion. One reading the metropolitan dailies would come to the conclusi

by the 27th
ary and H
of how histo and his br glory won North Caroli
the story of
is determine facts of Sep into permane able authori story became

Consequen
ed General curate histo events from and present at the annu
21, and the invitation.
the breaking from the mi
as General of one of t division in was one of t all plans fo
will undoub thority. Wh story of tho
come.

General T

ASK FOR and GET
Horlick's
The Original
Malted Milk
For Infants and Invalids
OTHERS are IMITATIONS

CATARRH

Stop catching colds, stop the offensive discharges from nose and throat, quit swallowing the poisonous mucus. Overcome catarrh of the head and deafness or head noises. No need to dose yourself, use soothing, healing medicated vapor. Get DR. BLOSSER'S CATARRH REMEDY at the drug store or send 10 cts. (silver or stamps) for Health Book and free Proof Package to Blosser Co., CA-11, Atlanta, Ga. Many reports of amazing relief after years of suffering after all else failed. Keep and show others this adv't.

Dogwood And Hickory Logs
—We Buy—

DOGWOOD—Two inches and larger at the small end.
HICKORY—Seven inches and larger at the small end.

For prices and specifications, write to

J. Elwood Cox Mfg.

MO
Supreme Marigolc

COMB SAGE TEA IN FADED OR GRAY HAIR

ASK FOR and GET
Horlick's
The Original
Malted Milk
For Infants and Invalids
OTHERS are IMITATIONS

meeting for consideration of the case, asking the corporation commission for a postponement of decision until a protest could be made. Following the visit of the committee to the commission it was learned this was just what had been done.

General Lawrence D. Tyson, commander of the Old Hickory division, who says, "The 27th did not break the Hindenburg line, because the 30th broke the line first," will come to Raleigh on November 21 for the annual meeting of the North Carolina State Literary and Historical society, to tell this society how the line was broken.

The answer to "Who broke the Hindenburg line?" has already caused some discussion. One reading the metropolitan dailies would come to the conclusion that the deed was done by the 27th division alone. The Literary and Historical society, mindful of how history has robbed Pettigrew and his brave Caroliniana of the glory won at Gettysburg, because North Carolina was too late in telling the story of their valor to the world, is determined that it would have the facts of September 29-30, 1918, put into permanent form, by an indisputable authority before any erroneous story became fixed in the public mind.

Consequently, the association invited General Tyson to prepare an accurate historical account of those events from a military point of view and present them to the association at the annual meeting on November 21, and the general has accepted the invitation. His paper will deal with the breaking of the Hindenburg line from the military expert's view, and as General Tyson was in command of one of the brigades of the 30th division in that famous battle, and was one of the leaders in formulating all plans for the battle, his account will undoubtedly be of highest authority. What he says will fix the story of those events for all time to come.

General Tyson is not only a trained West Point soldier, but he is a scholar and orator of great eloquence. His coming to the meeting of the association will be one of the interesting events in its history. Though now living in Tennessee, General Tyson is a native of North Carolina and his mother and sister live in Raleigh.

FOR ITCHING TORTURE
Use Antiseptic Liquid Zemo

There is one remedy that seldom fails to stop itching torture and relieve skin irritation and that makes the skin soft, clear and healthy.

Any druggist can supply you with Zemo, which generally overcomes skin diseases. Eczema, itch, pimples, rashes, blackheads, in most cases give way to Zemo. Frequently, minor blemishes disappear overnight. Itching usually stops instantly. Zemo is a safe, antiseptic liquid, clean, easy to use and dependable. It costs only 35c; an extra large bottle, $1.00. It will not stain, is not greasy or sticky and is positively safe for tender, sensitive skins.

The E. W. Rose Co., Cleveland, O.

MORRIS Supreme Marigold

HEVILLE CITIZEN 16 Pa

HEVILLE, N. C., FRIDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 10, 1919. PRI

MED;
O. P.

of the Dis-red against and Com-hat his ner-small part same, coin-ion of his extravagant officer's wife officer's wife

is wife $1,- mounting to
ng. $100 a upport. He ntirely adeife is com-r father's hat her de-wance arise

tant notions wife ought ncludes his e statement ned all the complaint s willing to

He asks that smissed and
for alimony.
s a son of heville, who of the Uni-and subseuniversity

TER
GIVEN RENCE

bitration
Steel

ON ON COST

Bubbles :-: :-: :-: By Billy Borne

MAYNARD IS HUNDREDS OF MILES AHEAD OF AVIATORS HEADED FOR PACIFIC COAST

DECISION IN THE GOSNELL CASE HAS BEEN RESERVED

Cotton Men Will Spend To-

North Carolina Lad Flew 886 Miles, Starting From Chicago.

SMITH NOW LEADING

STATE DAUGHTERS RE-ELECT OFFICERS FOR ENSUING YEAR

Pass Resolutions Endorsing League of Nations—Busy Day Spent.

2 ASHEVILLE WOMEN

CINCIN
WORL
TAK

Hod El
James

SOX RA
BY

Joe Jack
tion B
Run

CHICAGO
baseball c
1919 will Cincinnati.

Pat Mora
tile territor eighth and Chicago W
10 to 5.

As expert as a sack possible ha
four-run ra pale hosier happened had not en
the visiting funnier for were nine
The He games on banks of Sox to get the big em ciding gam
scended handed off tion which before the Bill James,
side, was
were score
James. It pearance i terrible di with two given the ager Gleas
also a rig remain th invaders and sent

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

ASHEVILLE, N. C., THURSDAY MORNING, OCTOBER 2, 1919.

RACE CLASHES IN ARKANSAS CALL FOR FEDERAL SOLDIERS

Two Whites and Seven Negroes Killed Near Helena

PROPAGANDA CAUSE OF TROUBLE, IS SAID

Blacks Reported on Point of General Uprising—Hundreds Are Armed.

HELENA, Ark., Oct. 1—Clashes today at Blaine, near here, between negroes and posses searching for two men, Clinton Lee and J. K. Tappan, of Helena, and seven negroes are known to be dead at Blaine, near here, as a result of clashes today between a posse searching for the persons who last night from ambush fired upon and killed W. D. Adkins, railroad special agent, according to reports reaching here tonight. A third white man, Ira Proctor, and a number of negroes are known to have been wounded. Troops have been asked for.

LITTLE ROCK, Oct. 1.—Although Secretary of War Baker and General March, chief of staff of the United States army, were said to have authorized the sending of troops to Elaine, Phillips county, scene of today's race riots, soldiers had not left Camp Pike at 11 o'clock tonight. It was reported that Major-General Samuel D. Sturgis, commander of Camp Pike, refused to send the troops without orders from the war department.

Governor Brough said that Secretary Baker told him over the long distance telephone this afternoon that Major-General Sturgis had authority to send the troops if he considered this action advisable. The governor said that he received telegrams from Senators Robinson and Kirby of Arkansas, quoting General March to the same effect.

The situation at Blaine is critical and growing more so, according to a message received here tonight from Joseph Meyers, who is heading the posse. Meyers is quoted as saying he expected another clash at any moment and requested that additional reinforcements be sent.

Tappan, who was a prominent busi- [illegible] hospital today to the wounds he received in this morning's fighting in the streets of Blaine. Proctor, who also was brought here, is not expected to live, according to physicians. The body of Lee, who died from his wounds at Blaine, also was

FALL AMENDMENTS TO PEACE TREATY REACH VOTE TODAY

Democrats Claim Victory, Republicans Are Not Boasting of Strength

SENATOR DISLIKES TREATY COMMISSIONS

Wolcott Asserts League Would Aid the Cause of Ireland

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The first vote on amendments to the German peace treaty will be taken in the senate tomorrow afternoon.

Formal agreement was reached late today by republican and democratic leaders to call up at 2 o'clock the thirty-six amendments proposed by Senator Fall, republican, New Mexico, adoption of which would eliminate the United States from representation on numerous foreign commissions created by the treaty. The agreement provides for discussion under the five-minute rule, and a vote before adjournment tomorrow night.

Democratic leaders declared tonight that all of the amendments would be beaten. Some republicans admitted privately that the vote would not be an accurate test of the line-up of the forces on the question of ratifying the treaty, with its League of Nations covenant. Indeed, some democratic spokesmen have stated that they would inform President Wilson that as matters stand now, the treaty cannot be ratified without reservations.

Fight May End Soon

Action by the senate on the Fall amendments will clear the way for consideration of the pact and hasten its final disposition. The opinion was expressed today by a senator, high in the councils of the majority party, that treaty discussion might end in two weeks, with a vote immediately thereafter.

This view was quite at variance, however, with that expressed by Senator Wolcott, democrat, of Delaware, who in the course of a twenty-thousand word speech declared at the present rate of progress it would require two, if not four months to hear all that may be said concerning the wisdom of ratification. There is no doubt of the growing desire among senators to cut [illegible] the speeches and shift [illegible] debate, to urge fewer words, in view of the admitted belief that neither side now expects to change one vote by weeks of oratory.

Irish Question

Senator Wolcott devoted the greater part of his address to the Irish ques-

MAYOR APPEALS TO THE GOVERNOR FOR SQUARE DEAL

Tells of Action of North Carolina Corporation Commission

THINKS PEOPLE'S RIGHTS IGNORED

Reiterates Declaration That Local Telephone Rates Are Too High

The heretofore unheard-of necessity of a North Carolina mayor appealing to a North Carolina governor to protect his people from grave injustice at the hands of a state body formed to protect the residents of the commonwealth seems to have arisen here. Indications of such a condition are revealed in the letter from Mayor Roberts to Governor Bickett, in which the city's chief executive implores the state's chief executive to take a hand in curbing the alleged arbitrary action of the North Carolina corporation commission.

Mayor Roberts' letter is inspired by the treatment the corporation commission has accorded his requests to be heard in opposition to the granting of war-time rates for peace-time telephone service here. Not only has he been ignored in his appeals for an opportunity to fight the increase but he has been informed that the telephone company's side is being presented as though the city had no voice in the matter.. On the same mail that takes the mayor's letter to the governor, there goes a letter to the corporation commission attacking its procedure and pleading with it to give the municipality its day in court.

Mayor's Letter

The mayor's letter is as follows:

"Asheville, N. C.

"October 1, 1919.

"Honorable T. W. Bickett,
"Governor of North Carolina,
"Raleigh, N. C.

"My Dear Governor:

"As mayor of the city of Asheville I appeal to you as chief executive of the state to do something if you can to aid in protecting the rights of the people against [illegible] corporate interests, and the arbitrary action on the part of the corporation commission of North Carolina. I feel that you are interested in the people of this state, and that you will do whatever you can to aid in protecting them against flagrant injustices.

FANDOM STAR, RU REDS T

"LEFTY" WILLIAMS MAY TRY TO STOP RUSH OF RED LEGS IN SECO

Moran Says It Makes Difference—Reds' Batting Demonstrated

GLEASON CONFIDEN

PITCHERS NAMED.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1.—Accordi to announcements from the hea quarters of both teams tonig Claude Williams, the southpa will pitch for the White Sox morrow and Harry Sallee, lik wise a left-hander, will work Moran's team.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1. — Cla ("Lefty") Williams, rated as one the best left-handers in the Am can league this season, probably be manager "Kid" Gleason's pitch selection to stop the batting drive the Reds in the second game of world's series tomorrow.

While Pat Moran, the leader of Reds, did not care to make any cial announcement concerning mound choice, it was generally cepted that either "Slim" Sallee, "Hod" Eller would oppose the W Sox tomorrow.

"We got away to a flying sta said Manager Moran tonight, "b ing Cicotte, Gleason's best bet, it makes no difference to my what pitcher Gleason starts tom row. They said before the series the Reds couldn't hit. Fourteen tells the story. The same bat will carry them through to victor [illegible] Reds entered the seri [illegible] tory has given them a lot more fidence. Reuther deserved a sh out and the Chicago players will it just as hard to hit our other pit ers. Reuther deserves great cr for the victory. He was cool at times. His batting was a surprise me."

MISSISSIPPI NEGROES HAPPY AND CONTENTED SAY CHICAGO VISITORS

Are Becoming Land-Owners —Schools and Churches Are Good

NEGROES TESTIFY

CHICAGO, Oct. 1.—Exceptional happiness, contentment and prosperity among the negroes of Mississippi is reported by a committee of Chicago white and negro men after an investigation of conditions in that state. The committee was delegated to visit Mississippi by the Chicago Association of Commerce, the federal Bureau of Labor and organized labor to which had been referred a question of aiding the return of southern-born negroes to the south.

A written statement prepared by the committee said:

"The happiness, contentment and prosperity among the colored race in Mississippi is much greater than the committee expected to find. We know no place where greater happiness and prosperity prevail among them."

School facilities were found to be good, churches adequate, housing conditions being improved rapidly and race relations good, according to the report, while the industrious negro is afforded excellent opportunities to become a land owner. No police oppression, imposition or "lawlessness was found. Negro workers in the sawmill districts were reported happy and contented.

Many of the farm laborers were found to be working on the share system. Negroes having no capital, teams or implements are equipped by the land owner, receiving, usually, a half of the crop they produce, while those with teams and implements are given two-thirds. The statement continues:

"We found that the average worker who cultivated what is known as the 'one mule crop' was able, using the year 1918 as a criterion, to produce a sufficient crop to net him, over and above all living expenses, from $500 to $1,500 a year. We found several men who began work under the tenant system and who now own their own plantations and are themselves employers of negro labor and are worth from $10,000 to $175,000. These facts were secured from the negroes themselves and we had the privilege of riding with them and surveying their farms in automobiles they own."

LOCAL "DOKAYS" WILL VISIT MORGANTON

Bagdad temple, No. 213, D. O. K. K., has accepted an invitation to stage a "Dokay" ceremonial at Morganton on October 24 and the entire divan edy, if any, the people here are to have?

MAYOR APPEALS TO THE GOVERNOR FOR SQUARE DEAL

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE)

"Yours very truly,
"GALLATIN ROBERTS,
"Mayor.

Other Letter

The letter to the corporation commissioner is as follows:

"Asheville, N. C.
"October 1, 1919.

"Corporation Commission,
"Raleigh, N. C.

"Gentlemen:

"On yesterday I was advised by telegram from the mayor of Winston-Salem that there was set for hearing before you yesterday the matter of telephone rates in North Carolina, and I promptly wired asking that the matter be postponed until the people of the city of Asheville could be heard in the matter. Just why you have seen fit to ignore not only my request but my telegram, and have not shown me the courtesy of a reply, I do not know. If press reports are correct no one appeared before you in this matter but the telephone companies interested. Their evidence was introduced, arguments heard, and the case closed.

"I submit to you gentlemen that this procedure is unfair, unreasonable and contrary to any part of justice with which I am familiar. My understanding of the law is that when a petition is presented or request made for a hearing upon any subject of which the commission has jurisdiction which affects the rights and interests of the people, these interested are to be advised of the hearing and given an opportunity to present such arguments as they may have. Of course it is possible that the press reports are erroneous and for the purpose of being advised of the true status I respectfully request a communication from the commission giving such information as may be pertinent to the case and for the people who are users of telephones in this city. I demand that they be given an ample opportunity to be heard in such arguments and facts as they desire to place before the commission. I feel sure the commission will not overlook the fact that under the fundamental law of our land every person whose interest is affected is entitled to have his day in court.

"Yours very truly,
"GALLATIN ROBERTS,
"Mayor.

Mayor Roberts yesterday reiterated his declaration that the people of Asheville are unwilling to pay continued high rates for service with which they are dissatisfied. He declares that it is far from what it ought to be and he thinks that Asheville must fight for its rights to save thousands of dollars to its subscribers, collected in "the aggressions of corporate interests." If the commission consents to hear the city, Mayor Roberts will name an attorney to assist Corporation Counsel Pennell in fighting the increase. If he finds that neither his influence as mayor nor that of Mr. Bickett as governor is sufficient to get an opportunity to put the city's case before the commission he will try to think of other steps to take in the matter.

RACE CLASHES IN ARKANSAS CALL FOR FEDERAL SOLDIERS

CAPT. RAINEY WINS IN CONGRESSIONAL CONTEST

League of Nations Was the Principal Issue—Majority Around 800.

GADSDEN, Ala., Oct. 1.—Etowah Seventh district to Captain L. B. county which gave the democratic nomination for congressman from the Seventh district to Captain L. B. Rainey, of Gadsden, has elected him to the office over Chas. B. Kennemar, his republican opponent, according to the unoffical tabulated vote of the county with six precincts missing, made public this morning which gives Rainey 1650 to Kennemar's 550.

Returns were slow coming in from other counties, but claims of both sides concede Cherokee county also to Rainey. The republicans gave him a majority of 150 and the democrats 350. The democrats also claim Marshall county by a majority of 75 and Blount by a majority of 50. St. Clair is conceded to Kennemar by a majority of 100. Cullman by a majority of 300 and Dekalb by 100.

At republican campaign headquarters Etowah county was given to Rainey by a majority of 600 and Cherokee by 150. Kennemar's managers claim majorities for their candidate in other counties as follows, giving him the victory by 75 votes. Blount 100; Dekalb 175, Cullman 350, Marshall 100 and St. Clair 100.

The principal issue involved in the election was the League of Nations, the republican forces hurling down this gauntlet, which was readily picked up by the democrats. The apparent results of the election indicate the sentiment of the district on that subject, and also for the first time puts a congressional district on record for the covenant.

RUETHER, NEW STAR FOR FANDOM, LEADS REDS TO VICTORY

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE)

afterward tied the score, it was still regarded as anybody's game.

Cicotte started the trouble for himself by pegging Rath between the shoulders and he looked a little worried as the Red second baseman, a former Sox castoff, enjoyed his unearned increment on first base. The visiting twirler put one in the groove for Daubert who singled cleanly, sending Rath to third. The latter scored on Groh's sacrifice fly to left, giving the Reds the first run of the series.

Red errors largely accounted for the lone Sox tally, counted in the opening half of the second. Jackson grounded to Groh, who threw wild to first and the runner reached second. Felsch advanced him with a sacrifice and Gandil dropped a fly back of second, and Jackson trotted home with the tying run. Thereafter Chicago threatened only twice, in the fifth and sixth, but Ruether rose to the occasion and the danger passed.

The fourth inning opened with a fly by Roush to Felsch. Duncan singled to right but was forced by Kopf. Neale hit a funny one which eluded two infielders with as many high bounds, sending Kopf to third. Win-

Secretary of War Baker and General March, chief of staff of the United States army, were said to have authorized the sending of troops to Elaine, Phillips county, scene of today's race riots, soldiers had not left Camp Pike at 11 o'clock tonight. It was reported that Major-General Samuel D. Sturgis, commander of Camp Pike, refused to send the troops without orders from the war department.

Governor Brough said that Secretary Baker told him over the long distance telephone this afternoon that Major-General Sturgis had authority to send the troops if he considered this action advisable. The governor said that he received telegrams from Senators Robinson and Kirby of Arkansas, quoting General March to the same effect.

The situation at Blaine is critical and growing more so, according to a message received here tonight from Joseph Meyers, who is heading the posse. Meyers is quoted as saying he expected another clash at any moment and requested that additional reinforcements be sent.

Tappan, who was a prominent business man, died in a Memphis hospital today to the wounds he received in this morning's fighting in the streets of Blaine. Proctor, who also was brought here, is not expected to live, according to physicians. The body of Lee, who died from his wounds at Blaine, also was brought to his home here.

More than a hundred negroes and a white man who is alleged to have in his possession a quantity of questionable literature had been arrested by posses operating in Blaine and vicinity when he left, according to former Sheriff Amos Jarman, who arrived here late today. A number of the prisoners have been brought to Helena and others, according to Jarman, are on the way under heavy guard. The white man is not among those already here, it is said.

Advices here said the trouble had its beginning when the posse was fired upon by a crowd of men, said to have been negroes, at Blaine. The fire was returned and in a few minutes became general in the streets of Blaine, according to reports.

Late today a telephone message as received here from Blaine stating that the posse had taken 175 prisoners and was bringing them to Helena.

Women and children of Blaine and vicinity are being brought to Helena on a special train for safety, it is reported here. The local situation is tense but no trouble has broken out here. Armed men are patrolling the streets.

The trouble began with the discovery last night of an alleged negro plot to rise against the white residents of the southern part of Phillips county, when Deputy Sheriff Pratt, with Adkins and a negro trusty were ambushed opposite a negro church at Hoop Spru, two miles north of Elaine, while on their way to arrest members of the Clem family, who were said to be in-

(CONTINUED ON PAGE TWO.)

KING OF BELGIANS TO LAND THIS MORNING

Albert and Queen Elizabeth Will Tour U. S.—Breaks Monarchs' Record.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Albert I, soldier king of the Belgians, the first reigning monarch of Europe to land in the United States, with Queen Elizabeth and Crown Prince Leopold, will arrive at Rockaway Beach, Long Island, this morning. The transport George Washington, on which they are traveling anchored off Sandy Hook last night. They will remain in the United States twenty-six days and in that time will travel from coast to coast, making their base at Washington. Before they leave the country the king and queen will have been guests of the nation at a dinner in the capitol, given by the senate and house of representatives, and will have addressed a joint session of congress.

beaten. Some republicans admitted privately that the vote would not be an accurate test of the line-up of the forces on the question of ratifying the treaty, with its League of Nations covenant. Indeed, some democratic spokesmen have stated that they would inform President Wilson that as matters stand now, the treaty cannot be ratified without reservations.

Fight May End Soon

Action by the senate on the Fall amendments will clear the way for consideration of the pact and hasten its final disposition. The opinion was expressed today by a senator, high in the councils of the majority party, that treaty discussion might end in two weeks, with a vote immediately thereafter.

This view was quite at variance, however, with that expressed by Senator Wolcott, democrat, of Delaware, who in the course of a twenty-thousand word speech declared at the present rate of progress it would require two, if not four months to hear all that may be said concerning the wisdom of ratification. There is no doubt of the growing desire among senators to cut short the speeches and write into the record, as debate, to urge fewer words, in view of the admitted belief that neither side now expects to change one vote by weeks of oratory.

Irish Question

Senator Wolcott devoted the greater part of his address to the Irish question and declared the League of Nations covenant supplied the method by which the cause of Ireland could be brought before an impartial tribunal for hearing, while rejection of the covenant would deprive her of the long-sought opportunity.

In announcing that he would vote for reservations that would give the league "a chance to live and America a chance to fulfill her mission," Senator McLean said if the senate rejected them he would vote "to return the whole of the medieval volume to its authors and the hope that its revisers will look for peace where peace may be found."

The question of voting tomorrow on the Fall amendments was laid before the senate just before adjournment by Senator Lodge, who asked for

(CONTINUED ON PAGE TWO.)

RAILROAD BUSINESS SHOWS INCREASE, GOVERNMENT PILES UP SMALL SURPLUS

But 4-Cent Raise for Shopmen Will Wipe Out Gains

TON MILEAGE LOW

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Business handled by the railroads in August continued the increase begun with the advent of the harvest season, and the government achieved a surplus of approximately $[illegible] over the guaranteed monthly rental of the properties under federal control.

This was the second month of the year in which an apparent surplus was shown, the July net income having been $1,968,453 greater than the rental, but the expenses of neither month took into account the increase incident to the raise in wages recently given the shopmen and which was retroactive to May 1. Estimates are that the increase will amount to about $4,[illegible] a month.

As the account now stands the government has encountered a deficit of $[illegible] in the operation of the roads for the first eight months of the year, which will be increased to approximately $[illegible] when the back pay for the shopmen for tion commission.

Mayor Roberts' letter is inspired by the treatment the corporation commission has accorded his requests to be heard in opposition to the granting of war-time rates for peace-time telephone service here. Not only has he been ignored in his appeals for an opportunity to fight the increase but he has been informed that the telephone company's side is being presented as though the city had no voice in the matter. On the same mail that takes the mayor's letter to the governor, there goes a letter to the corporation commission attacking its procedure and pleading with it to give the municipality its day in court.

Mayor's Letter

The mayor's letter is as follows:

"Asheville, N. C.

"October 1, 1919.

"Honorable T. W. Bickett,
"Governor of North Carolina,
"Raleigh, N. C.

"My Dear Governor:

"As mayor of the city of Asheville I appeal to you as chief executive of the state to do something if you can to aid in protecting the rights of this people against [illegible] corporate interests, and the arbitrary action on the part of the corporation commission of North Carolina. I feel that you are interested in the people of this state, and that you will do whatever you can to aid in protecting them against flagrant injustices.

"On yesterday I received a telegram from the mayor of Winston-Salem requesting me to wire the corporation commission asking that commission to postpone the hearing in the matter of telephone rates, which hearing was set before the commission the very day that I received the telegram. It was the first intimation or information that I had from any source that this matter was to be held before the commission yesterday. I promptly wired the commission requesting that the hearing be postponed in order that the telephone users in the city of Asheville might have an opportunity to present their facts and arguments. The commission has entirely ignored my telegram and has not even shown me the courtesy to answer the same, and I see from press reports that the hearing was proceeded with, arguments heard, and the case closed and a definite day was set for the rendition of the decision.

"This matter is of vital importance to the people of this community and they are urgently protesting against this unjust and unheard of procedure. Can it be that the peoples' rights are to be determined by a body that will not give the people notice of the fact that their rights are in jeopardy? It seems unreasonable and preposterous, and if there is any way for relief to be had I assure you that I shall not permit the people of Asheville to be compelled to submit to gross injustices of this nature.

"Will you not write me fully your views and suggest to me what rem-

(CONTINUED ON PAGE TWO)

CONFEREES AGREE ON PROHIBITION POLICY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Breaking a three weeks' deadlock, senate and house conferees reached an agreement today on the prohibition enforcement bill. Quick approval of the conferees' report is expected by leaders and the measure may go to the president early next week.

The bill, which establishes one-half of one per cent as the maximum alcoholic content of beverages, was passed by the house July 22 and by the senate September 5. The conference report will be acted on first by the senate, to which it will be reported Friday and then sent to the house.

The bill will be returned from conference without fundamental changes in its plan for strict enforcement both of war-time prohibition now and the

CINCINNATI, Oct. 1. — Cl ("Lefty") Williams, rated as on the best left-handers in the Am can league this season, probably be manager "Kid" Gleason's pitc selection to stop the batting driv the Reds in the second game of world's series tomorrow.

While Pat Moran, the leader of Reds, did not care to make any cial announcement concerning mound choice, it was generally cepted that either "Slim" Sallee
"Hod" Eller would oppose the W Sox tomorrow.

"We got away to a flying st said Manager Moran tonight, "b ing Cicotte, Gleason's best bet, it makes no difference to my what pitcher Gleason starts to row. They said before the series the Reds couldn't hit. Fourteen tells the story. The same ba will carry them through to victor
"Once Reds entered the seri tory has given them a lot more fidence. Reuther deserved a s out and the Chicago players will it just as hard to hit our other pi ers. Reuther deserves great cr for the victory. He was cool at times. His batting was a surpris me."

"We will even up the series ton row," said Manager Gleason of White Sox. "When Cicotte hit R in the first inning he was unner and was not himself thereafter.
could have taken him out then,
I trusted that luck would enable die to regain his control. I int to start Williams tomorrow and h every confidence that there will a different tale to tell.

"Ruether had a world of stuff day and pitched a really remarka game. He should have all the cr for the victory. His batting sta him as a second Babe Ruth.

"Today's defeat has not dishearte my players. I am sure the de will act as an incentive to win morrow. There are nine games be played and one defeat doe mean that the series is lost."

BIG LUMBER DEAL

DEFUNIAK SPRINGS, Fla., O
1.—The W. B. Harbeson Lumber co pany, of this place, and the Hend son Waits company of Caryville, F have purchased the mills, lands logging railroads and all other pr erty of the Bagdad Land and Lu ber company, of Bagdad, Fla.
deal involves a consideration of th million, six hundred thousand. It said the mill at Paxton will cut m of the lumber of the new company

SUGAR INVESTIGATION.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Investi
tion of wholesale and retail prices sugar by the federal trade comm sion was ordered by the house late day through adoption of a resoluti introduced by Representative Tin ham, republican, Massachusetts.

ENGLISH STRIKE SEEMS NEAR TO MEDIATIO

Labor Believed Governme Proposed Destruction Unions.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—(By the Associated Press.)—For the first ti since the railway strike began, the has been a serious attempt at med ation, undertaken today, as foreshad owed last night by the powerful tran port workers' federation. This o ganization, before commencing its voices to a sympathetic strike, d cided to say it was not possible

E. E. GALER ELECTED ROTARY SECRETARY

Meeting Yesterday Largest Dinner Session Ever Held By Local Rotarians—Elton Warner Enrolled

E. E. Galer was elected secretary of the Rotary club at the session held yesterday at noon at the Battery Park hotel. He succeeds N. J. Warner, who resigned at the meeting yesterday.

This afternoon members of the club will motor out to the Farm school, where they will be the guests of John Calfee, president of the Asheville Normal and Collegiate Institute. Mr. Calfee's invitation was accepted at last week's meeting.

Colonel O. F. Snyder, veteran of six wars and who will sail shortly with an American expedition to Poland, delivered an address before the Rotarians yesterday, which was enjoyed by the city's business men very much. Colonel Snyder having had twenty-three years' experience in the United States army, and during that time having traveled extensively is always an interesting talker. The address scheduled by R. R. Williams was postponed.

The meeting yesterday was reported as the largest dinner meeting ever held by the organization. Elton Warner was admitted to membership in the club.

NAVY APPRENTICES WITH THE MARINES

United States navy trained and experienced hospital apprentices were with the marines in every battle from Belleau Woods to the crossing of the Meuse on the morning of November 11, 1918. This medical corps unit served with the marines, under navy surgeons, during the entire time the soldiers of the sea were helping to clear France of the Hun.

This outfit won for itself undying glory and made history for the service it represented. Over thirty per cent of the personnel were decorated for conspicuous bravery. Others wear wound stripes. Several have gone west in the great cause. These are the brave young Americans who selected, for their part in the war, that post where they could assist the wounded, be with the dying and minister to the sick.

There was not a battle where they did not follow the men right to the barrage, and into it when the fighters

MAYOR'S TELEGRAM FINALLY ANSWERED

Sec. Corporation Commission Says Telephone Case Still Open For Protests From Any City

In a telegram from R. O. Self, secretary of the state corporation commission, to Mayor Roberts yesterday, it was stated that the commission had heard the request of the Southern Bell Telephone company, to be allowed to continue the war-time rates, which do not change until January 1, next, but that the commission is still ready to hear any protest from cities of the state. The messages stated that it was an answer to the mayor's telegram of last Tuesday.

Mr. Self explained in his message that when the government took over the wires and arbitrarily raised the rates, it was announced that the war rates would be in effect four months after the wires passed back into private ownership.

In commenting on the message Mayor Roberts stated yesterday that he is at a loss to understand why the state corportaion commission rushed to have a hearing now which would only affect rates four months from now. However, he is greatly relieved that the state commission finally answered his request for an expression, even though the expression is not what he expected.

Mayor Roberts let it be known that the city administration would definitely fight a request to continue the war-time increase and that this city would employ an attorney to assist the corporation counsel to prepare the city's case.

A COMMUNITY FAIR FOR AVERY'S CREEK

People of the Township Enthusiastic About Fair Which Will Be Held Tuesday, October 7

A community fair for Avery's Creek township will be held Tuesday, October 7, according to an announcement by E. D. Weaver, who is now busy selecting judges, and making other

AMBITION PILLS

For Nervous People

The great nerve tonic—the famous Wendell's Ambition Pills that will put vigor, vim and vitality into nervous tired out, all in, despondent people in a few days in many instances.

Anyone can buy a box for only 50 cents, and your druggist is authorized by the maker to refund the purchase price if anyone is dissatisfied with the first box purchased.

Thousands praise them for general debility, nervous prostration, mental depression and unstrung nerves caused by over-indulgence in alcohol, tobacco, or overwork of any kind.

For any affliction of the nervous system Wendell's Ambition Pills are unsurpassed, while for hysteria, trembling and neuralgia they are simply splendid. Fifty cents at your druggist's and dealers everywhere.

Advt.

DR. INGERSOLL BREAKS OLD CHINESE CUSTOM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—The distinction of having broken an ancient Chinese custom probably belongs to Dr. Louise Mason Ingersoll, of Asheville, N. C., who recruited six Chinese women as nurses in an American Red Cross unit serving at the Siberian front. These nurses are believed to have been the first women of China in the forty centuries of its history who volunteered to journey to a foreign country and nurse fighting men of another race. As nurses they are reported to have shown unusual deftness, tirelessness and intelligent activities.

MACE CHARGED WITH LARCENY OF AN AUTO

C. R. Mace was arrested by Sheriff Mitchell and Deputy Lyda Wednesday night, charged with the larceny of an automobile belonging to J. R. Yown, of Greenville. Upon the arrival of an

D

St

cile their do out going to dismissed.

FAT BOY
THE I

The world's tion for local terests were noon on a ga
Lean member
Oates park.
by the Fat te

NEW

Mr. and Mr
Grove park, a bungalow acr
the Asheville occupy it earl

E CITIZEN

CITIZEN WANT ADS BRING RESULTS

, MAY 7, 1919. PRICE FIVE CENTS

ROBERTS, FITZPATRICK, SHERRILL AND WELLS WIN OUT BY LARGE MAJORITIES

RESULTS OF YESTERDAYS ELECTION

Candidates	1st Precinct	2nd Precinct	3rd Precinct	4th Precinct	5th Precinct	6th Precinct	7th Precinct	8th Precinct	9th Precinct	10th Precinct	Totals
Mayor—
Rankin	137	229	174	197	95	69	123	85	47	58	1214
Roberts	118	180	173	194	83	186	208	186	247	158	1733
Com. of Safety—
Ramsey	120	242	185	206	92	60	116	78	67	74	1240
Fitzpatrick	135	167	161	185	83	192	212	194	222	142	1693
Com. of Works—
Sherrill	100	188	164	233	100	183	199	202	180	120	1669
McDowell	154	217	184	153	74	70	129	69	106	92	1248
Police Judge—
Wells	127	265	213	267	114	140	229	177	251	167	1920
Brown	124	140	130	117	62	141	97	95	38	44	988

The Vote Exceeded Expectations of Most Optimistic Supporters of Winners

BELIEVED SCHOOL BONDS CARRIED

New Officers Will Take Their Offices on May 17. Day Was Quiet.

Mayor.

Roberts	1,733
Rankin	1,214
Roberts' majority	519

Commissioner Public Safety.

Fitzpatrick	1,693
Ramsey	1,240
Fitzpatrick's majority	453

Commissioner Public Works.

Sherrill	1,669
McDowell	1,248
Sherrill's majority	421

Police Court Judge.

Wells

DEFICIT OF GOVERNMENT IN OPERATING RAILROADS 3 MONTHS $192,000,000

TWO BILLION DOLLAR MARK PASSED BY NATION IN RACE FOR ITS GOAL BY SATURDAY

ASHEVILLE CITI

ASHEVILLE, N. C., WEDNESDAY MORNING, MAY 7, 1919.

TO HAND OF ALLIES ORLD WAR

WAREHOUSE CASE ARGUED BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Atty.-Gen. Manning Still Contends Act Is Null and Void

MAKE ROOM FOR NEW FARMERS' BUILDING

Two New Cotton Mills and Molasses Concern Are Given Charters

The Asheville Citizen Bureau,
Merchants National Bank Bldg
(By JULE B. WARREN)

RALEIGH, May 6—The cotton warehouse case was argued before

NEXT MAYOR OF ASHEVILLE

GALLATIN ROBERTS

TELEPHONE RATE CASE CONCLUDED; DECISIONS SOON

Court Temporarily Permits

ROBERTS, SHERRILL OUT BY

RESULTS OF YESTE

Candidates	1st Precinct	2nd Precinct	3rd Precinct	4th Precinct	5th Precinct
Mayor—
Rankin	137	229	174	197
Roberts	118	180	173	194
Com. of Safety—
Ramsey	120	242	185	206
Fitzpatrick	135	167	161	185
Com. of Works—
Sherrill	100	188	164	233	1
McDowell	154	217	184	153
Police Judge—
Wells	127	265	213	267	1
Brown	124	140	130	117

DEFICIT OF GOVERNMENT IN OPERATING RAILROADS 3 MONTHS $192,000,000

Rate Reduction in Freight

184 153 74 70 129 69 106 93—1246

213 267 114 110 229 177 251 187—1920
130 117 62 141 97 95 38 44— 988

MENT
ROADS
000,000

Freight show-es

MATE

—Director-ion of re-night dis-

in operat-first three difference
one-fourth compensa-000 for all gement.
r 1918 was loss incureral opera-

ight traffic periods of responsible owing and not yet re-nise of im-

ent deficits,
not contemse in the s to await iness condi-

urred a dein eight American
, the con-
tion, up to bis results of the quest to be an

r. Hines in judgment is ons are too asis for any vel of rates to defer ac-there shall unity to get ibly a more conditions,
very prac-
the situa-
, and keeprmed as to
,000 incur-
in January, figured by
in the day economics, for the rifths of the e bureau of ulated each asis of the in the three ed adminiluded small the so-called der govern-expenses of n and post years.

TWO BILLION DOLLAR MARK PASSED BY NATION IN RACE FOR ITS GOAL BY SATURDAY

Near 150 Million Came From the New York District Alone

ST. LOUIS STILL LEADS

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The two billion dollar mark has been passed by the nation in its race toward the $4,500,000,000 goal, which must be reached by Saturday night. Subscriptions officially reported to the treasury tonight amounted to $2,060,752,000, or 45.79 per cent of the quota sought.

The increase in the total during the last twenty-four hours was $256,000,000 of which $146,000,000 came from the New York district alone. This is a better record than has been made for the last few days, but falls far short of the $622,000,000 average daily subscriptions which must be piled up in the remainder of the week if the loa nis to be subscribed fully.

At the corresponding time of the Fourth Liberty loan campaign bond sales amounted to $2,798,000 or 46.64 per cent of the total.

Tommorrow is navy day throughout the country, and committees everywhere hope to make it a banner day with the slogan "match the navy." Fruits of the day's work will not be reflected for two or three days, however. Special naval demonstrations have been arranged at many sea and lake port cities.

"Experts who have been associated with all loan campaigns are at an absolute loss to explain the slowness of subscriptions," said the treasury's review tonight. "The belief held by many of them at the outset of the loan that its attractive features both as to interest and maturity would cause an early over-subscription has been rapidly dissipated and yet no one seems to be able to assign a cause for this situation. Slowness in buying is easily explained in a few isolated localities where farm work is backward or there has been a shortage of employment in certain industries, but generally speaking no one seems to be able to assign a definite cause for the failure of the country to keep the pace that was expected of it."

The St. Louis district continued to lead in the percentage race tonight, with [illegible] its salesmen hard. Apparently St. Louis has drawn so far away from Chicago and Boston that there is little chance of either of these districts [illegible] Brooklyn, N. Y., and Hartford, Conn., reported today that they had exceeded their quotas.

LOAN HAS TOTALLED OVER 66 MILLION

[illegible] March 6.—Actual

Mayor.

Roberts	1,723
Rankin	1,214
Roberts' majority	519

Commissioner Public Safety.

Fitzpatrick	1,693
Ramsey	1,240
Fitzpatrick's majority	453

Commissioner Public Works.

Sherrill	1,869
McDowell	1,348
Sherrill's majority	421

Police Court Judge.

Wells	1,920
Brown	988
Wells' majority	932

By majorities far exceeding the expectations of their most optimistic supporters Gallatin Roberts was elected mayor in yesterday's election, Captain R. L. Fitzpatrick as commissioner of public safety, and R. J. Sherrill as commissioner of public works. The decisive majority for R. M. Wells for police court judge was, however, not unexpected.

Culminating a campaign of bitterness, almost unprecedented in local politics and featured by a display of intense personal feeling, the election ended with the closing of the polls at 8:21 o'clock with no sign whatever of the landslide concealed in the ten big ballot boxes. In fact, there was an evidently genuine display of confidence by the backers of every candidate, except in the police court judge contest.

It was only when the first precinct to report to the crowded police court room showed an upset of estimates that the final losers drew suspicious inferences, and the return of the next precinct, the third, banished all hopes of the Rankin, Ramsey and McDowell men. They seemed to fade from the room and the elated backers of the winners came to the front, and voiced their joy at winning and their appreciation of the magnitude of their winning. The third was expected to give a big majority for the losers and it emphatically failed to do so.

Popuar interest was ttested all day in unmistakable form.

Despite the frequent and heavy showers the voters turned out in surprising numbers, and at each polling place, except the fifth, there was always a crowd of workers. The total vote cast tells its own tale of the widespread popular interest. Contrary to all precedents, the vote in the election exceed that of the primary, despite the fact that there were only 8 candidates as against 19 entered in the primary. 2775 votes were cast for mayoralty candidates in the primary while the vote yesterday was 2947.

It is impossible to state positively whether the necessary majority of the registered voters cast ballots for the $200,000 school bonds because several precincts failed to report the vote on bonds. There is strong reason for believing that a majority was recorded for the bonds, probably several hundred. To "carry" the bonds it is necessary that a majority vote affirmatively for bonds, regardless of how few vote against the bond issue.

The popular demonstrations at the polls and at the City Hall last night indicated very clearly that the candidates were grouped. There was evident a common support of Roberts and Fitzpatrick, and only to a slight-

(CONTINUED ON PAGE FOUR)

PERSHING WILL BE GUEST

ng that the British were any rate instead of an ef-might have redeemed its German fleet turned out of the mainsprings of the overthrew the imperial while the army under was being pounded to rance.

at's In a Name?

lle is no more. "They"
wood now.
's claim to the only com-
bate on names, by virtue nt logomachy in regard to is Welcome, is put in the ne-time Weaverville's town Asheville debated only the its soldiers' arch. Weaverrgent progressives yester-to the ballot box and re-ntury of history.
ge has been divided in two past weeks. While the ncil discussed the fate of nd parleyed with Italy and r the hope of a league of Weavervilleites, and Elk-have held high discourse erits of euphony and syma new era compared with tions and glories of pioneer Mountain won.
hard day for the estab-
r of things in Weaverville ille.

e Of The People

e Locusts Come Again

izen:
d some time ago an an-
it that the 17-year locusts ke their appearance this ne one has miscalculated.
not appear in our section was young, that is, when I er than I am now, in 1855 with us. In 1872 they were

, and again in 1889. The n 1906.
e due now in that part of which includes Knoxville.
no record of these events,
call them to memory by circumstances. I am not Wait and see.

P. R. YOUNG.

N. C., May 5.

Scissors Route

POLITICAL SABOTAGT.

New York World.)
German envoys were arriv-sailles and the Italian govvas putting in jeopardy the e of peace, Senator Lodge
g telegrams to various inand societies in Boston up-he Italian claim to Fiume ling the position taken by

of the republican leaders are prepared to follow such fanatical leadership.
There must be limits somewhere to this partisan fury.

ROBERTS, FITZPATRICK, SHERRILL AND WELLS WIN OUT BY LARGE MAJORITIES.

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE.)

ly less extent of Sherrill. On the other hand supporters of Rankin and Ramsey, and generally McDowell made a common cause. The vote by precincts reflects this association of names. Robert M. Wells was swept to victory by voters of both sides. The precinct vote for Judge Brown, however, shows that the greater part of his vote came from precincts where the Roberts, Sherrill, Fitzpatrick vote was the largest. Judge Wells carried every precinct except the 6th.

The election marks a complete change in the city government, and it was generally admitted last night by all sides that this was what the voters wanted, and the supporters of those who lost declared this sentiment was the underlying cause of defeat. Among the demonstrators at the City Hall confident predictions were made of a "clean sweep" in appointive officers of the city.

Whether this expectation will be verified by the new commissioners a very brief time will tell since the new officers will take charge May 17. That they will have many applications for every position, corporation counsel, city clerk, tax collector, accountants, water superintendent, officers and members of the police court no one doubts. In fact ante-election rumor has assigned many men to positions, often several men for the same place.

All the candidates yesterday are democrats but this does not mean that the republicans were unrepresented in the election. On the contrary they were a considerable factor. It was generally credited that the influence of several prominent republican leaders was thrown strongly to the winning candidates. It was even asserted by some on the other side that an understanding had been reached some days ago by which in return for this support republicans were to be given a proportion of the appointive places, this, of course, being another tale yet to be verified. On the other hand another element of republicans, largely of the business class, threw their support to the retiring commissioners.

The canvassing board, composed of all the precinct officials, thirty in number, will meet in the City Hall today noon to officially canvass the vote.

A number of bets, some of considerable size, were posted on the election, and it was remarked as a strange fact that the winners were men of less political experience, in most cases, than the losers.

A feature yesterday was the presence at the polls of school girls distributing cards asking voters to vote for the school bonds.

TO TRY FORMER KAISER.

PARIS, May 6.—(By The Associated

ARGUED BEFORE SUPREME COURT

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE)

in capital of $101,000, were incorporated by Gastonia men today, these being among the largest charters issued during the past week. The Dixon Mills, Incorporated, was granted a charter, which authorizes a capital stock of $400,000, $150,000 of which may be issued in preferred stock. Of this amount $71,000 is paid in by A. M. Dixon, R. R. Ray, J. K. Dixon, W. L. Balthus, E. N. Pegram and O. F. Mason.

The other cotton mills incorporated was the Ruby Cotton Mills, with an authorized stock issue of $300,000 and $30,000 paid in by G. R. Spencer, W. H. Adams and J. M. Holland.

Another charter was issued for a molasses manufacturing company for North Carolina, this being one of the few ventures of this kind so far authorized by charter. The main office of the American Molasses company will be in Wilmington, and the authorized stock is $100,000 and $1,000 of this is paid in by George Brauburger, of New York, and F. L. Fuller, jr., and Jones Fuller, of Durham.

Other charters issued follow.

R. A. Grimes company, Hickory, for the conduct of a drug store, $10,000 authorized and $3,000 paid in by J. R. Wooten, C. H. Geitner, G. E. Bisanar, J. J. Willard, R. A. Grimes and F. A. Abernethy.

Cathey Lumber company, Charlotte, authorized capital $100,000 and $25,000 paid in by J. R. Cathey, J. N. Barber and A. K. McLeod and W. S Stewart.

Colerain Electric Light company, Colerain, incorporated by Enders White, L. D. Perry and others for the purpose of supplying a light plant for the town.

Parks Belk and company, Kannapolis, authorized capital $100,000 and $31,000 paid in by W. H. and J. M. Belk, B. F. Matthews, J. G. Parks and C. E. Parks.

Blalock Motor company, Oxford, authorized capital $30,000 and $30,000 paid in by W. N. Thomas, E. B. Howard, J. M. Blalock, J. F. Veazey and W. L. Mitchell.

The Interstate Storage Battery company, Charlotte, authorized capital $10,000 and $1,600 paid in by H. C. Maynelo, H. T. Long and J. D. Antem.

CHINESE PRESENT PROTEST AT PARIS

PARIS, May 6.—The Chinese delegates presented a brief, formal and dignified protest concerning the disposition of Kiao-Chau. The Portuguese delegates expressed satisfaction regarding the treatment accorded Portugal.

The protestations made to the various delegations are not regarded as serious as no definite reservations were made by the protestants.

Italy was represented at the session by Signor Crespi.

The Italian spokesman said he desired to make reservations concerning any provisions in the treaty not acceptable to Italy.

Lu Cheng Hsing, the Chinese for-

In planning t
look the position
ing your experie shoulder the bur
of her bereavem
Give her the Trust Company
we will manage relieve your wid
Wachov
C
Me

HAS prompt LOAN BONDS, world, which we delivering to yo
If you pref installment plan handle your sub
SER
AMERI
Corner
ONLY

Swo
WI

N
We can
Willys-Kn
days.

Daily and Sunday, 1 year in advance.....$10.00
Daily and Sunday, 6 months in advance... 5.00
Daily and Sunday, 3 months in advance... 2.50
Daily and Sunday, 1 month in advance... .90
Daily and Sunday, 1 week in advance..... .20
Single Copy, Sunday ..... .10
Single Copy, Daily ..... .05

The Citizen is glad to publish letters, not too long, on matters of general interest. But such communications must be accompanied by the real name of the writer, even when they are to be published over a nom de plume.

MEMBER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Associated Press is exclusively entitled to the use for publication of all news dispatches in this paper, and also the local news published herein. All rights of re-publication of special dispatches published herein are also reserved.

Former Mayor Roberts

The death of former Mayor Roberts has shocked and stunned the people of this community. That would have been true in any circumstances. It is peculiarly so now. The tragedy of which he was one of the victims has brought to Asheville far more than its share of trouble and sorrow but nothing heretofore quite so appalling and distressing as that which happened yesterday. This community, sadly divided in many ways, will not be divided in deploring this new grief. It will not be divided in the depths of sympathy with which it will think of Mr. Roberts and his family now and remember him hereafter.

The Luxury Tax Probable

News from Raleigh that the sub-committee of the House and Senate Finance Committees has adopted "in principle" the Hinsdale "selected commodity" sales-tax bill and the Brummitt proposal to include intangible value in the franchise tax on corporations is not surprising. It was predicted in these columns months ago that North Carolina would probably come to the luxury tax this year and if the State is to carry the burden of supporting the schools in all counties for six months on a uniform basis it is difficult to see how this can be accomplished otherwise than, in part, through a tax on so-called luxuries.

What revenues North Carolina can expect from such a tax is debatable. The North Carolina Tax Commission has pointed out that if a tax on cigarettes, candies, theater admissions and so on is adopted certain license taxes now imposed in this State will have to be eliminated and has argued that the adoption of the South Carolina system of a sales tax on selected articles in lieu of North Carolina' spresent system of license taxes will probably not have "enough bearing on any of the forms passed out of existence. Then the forest disappeared "and the lands were planted in cotton. They have been steadily impoevrished. Cotton in North Carolina approaches the point of impossibility." That is true and it is also true that "if the forest crop had been cared for it would have yielded year for year, more value than cotton has yielded and the land itself would be better than ever."

Then The News comes to the point. "There are many signs," it says, "that putting North Carolina lands back to pine-growing is more than the ultimate wisdom, that it is the inevitable necessity. If that is so, the sooner the better. When will the end come for cotton-raising in the State—ten years hence, five years, next year? And what then? When will our elder statesmen begin asking this question of our economists?"

These are pertinent questions, for while we do not think that cotton-growing in North Carolina is impossible we do think that it is impossible for a large percentage of those who are now attempting to grow it. There is plenty of land in North Carolina upon which cotton can be produced profitably. There are and always will be farmers in North Carolina who are capable of growing cotton in competition with the rest of the world. But there is much land still planted to cotton the yield from which is so low that its cultivation is unconomical. There are thousands and tens of thousands of farmers in North Carolina who are not now and who probably never will be again in position to cultivate cotton with any assurance whatever of being able to get as much from the crop as it costs them in labor and money to make it.

If there is anything that can be done with the unproductive cotton lands except put them to growing timber we do not know what it is. The laws of North Carolina will have to be changed to make that possible. That was one of the chief arguments in favor of the reclamification amendment to the constitution which was defeated in the general election last fall. But what is to become of the marginal farmers who are being inexorably crowded off the land? It seems to us that many of them face extinction or exile or the lowest form of peasantry unless industry can be expanded in the State to take care of them. Yet, strangely enough, some North Carolinians who seem to have most reason for being concerned about the plight of these people want to make it impossible for industry to expand in North Carolina.

Governor Byrd's Prophecy

Former Governor Harry Flood Byrd told the North Carolina lawmakers at Raleigh that non-residents justifiable, it with personal differences to fises and settle their disp consequences.

THE PACIFYING EFFECT

(Louisville Courie

Out of the simple act of of India, in sending Mahat goat's milk and a basket of ings ago may grow the pea of India. "Jug," by the wa common American sense in the British sense. We over pitcher. The goat's milk a for the "holy man's" breaki
a little rice are about all he

The Mahatma had been the British official whom friend." He had been talki the terms of the London
ment and when he emerged residence at New Delhi, t said: "I'm satisfied, even op ing right-about-face is the g that has come out of India revolution" was inaugurated

The Associated Press tells hatma by Sir Tej Bahadur
Jayakar, Hindu friends, wh delegates, and the Christia correspondent at Allahabad of Bhopal with effecting a toward a peaceful settlemen vate session with Gandhi.
commercial interests are b bear.

It is not beyond the bounc
the conferences between Gan could result in a simultane Government's orders for sup disobedience movement and itself, thus satisfying pride and restoring peace.

THAT WHITE HO

(St. Louis Post-

A dispatch from Washin though former President stopped having his mail se
House 18 months ago, doz come there for him and m
ily. Not only that, but ev mail still arrives "from sor tions of the country address land or Woodrow Wilson."
of it before, but by the sam of unclaimed mail there m on-Avon for the late Willia Caesar's fan letters long ag postal storage space at Rom Athens postmaster does wit to Alexander the Great an golden age.

NEWS OF OTH

From The Citize

10 YEARS AGO

Three thousand, fine ciga from the clouds this afterno district, weather permitting.
ranged by J. B. Porter Co
Hughes Company. The airpl up and is in perfect conditi a cigar is caught by a pers will be just as good as if box at a cigar counter.

RUARY 25, 1931

SUITS

ities, these new OORE'S! Soft
d tan mixtures, rd grey. Every ng trousers, for they're styled in n! Sizes through

THE WEATHER
ASHEVILLE AND VICINITY:
Thursday partly cloudy.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1868 — ASHEVILLE, N. C., THURSDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 26, 1931 — 12 PAGES — 5c DAILY 10c SUNDAY

Popular Patterns
Are Citizen patterns popular? Western North Carolina women ordered 534 during January! See today's offering.

BODY OF ROBERTS TO LIE IN STATE IN CITY HALL

Legislative Advisory Body Approves Plans For City Schools

BOARD OF 5 MEMBERS TO BE SELECTED

Appointive Body Will Have Full Charge Of Operations

BOARD TO ELECT SUPERINTENDENT

School Head Would Have Power To Extend Studies Taught

Approval of a bill designed to vest in the city school board, complete control and management of the buildings and equipment of the city school system was given by the legislative advisory council yesterday afternoon.

The bill which repeals section 10, chapter 205, Private Laws of the general assembly, 1929, would create a board of five members who would be known as the Asheville local tax school district. These five committeemen will be named in the bill for a period of two years starting from the 6th day of April 1931. Their successors shall be chosen by the governing board of the City of Asheville each and every two years thereafter.

Custody of Buildings

Sets Record

Dorothy Hester, above, is the new feminine outside loop record holder of the world. She recently achieved five loops over Glendale, Cal., airport, breaking the former record by two loops.

BANDITS HARVEST

POLICE ARREST MAN WHO DROVE AUTO OF DEATH

Alleged Slayer Is Held In Raleigh; Body Of Woman Is Found

SUSPECT DENIES GUILT AT CAPITAL

Officers Claim Corpse Was Hauled About In Frazer's Car

RALEIGH, Feb. 25. (AP)—Accused of slaying Mrs. Phoebe Stader in Rahway, N. J., driving about the country with her body in his automobile and finally throwing it nude into a woods near Bowling Green, Va., William M. Frazer, 31, was arrested here today.

Stoutly denying he killed the woman, he was in jail here tonight awaiting the arrival of Prosecutor Abe J. David, of New Jersey, who was on his way to question him.

David was expected here tomorrow. Meanwhile, police at David's request refused to permit questioning of Frazer. They were informed a formal charge of murder had been lodged against him.

Two detectives who were advised Frazer was using the alias, H. G. Devin, arrested him when he called at a postoffice general delivery window for mail in that name.

SNAKE IN BATHTUB CAUSES NEGRO TO CLIMB BOOKCASE

CHICAGO, Feb. 25. (AP)—"Go to 3724 Cottage Grove Avenue," the police radio droned. "There's a snake in a house."

The squad car roared forth to battle, the detectives' minds filled with images of boa constrictors and rattlers.

Revolvers in hand, they entered the apartment.

"Where's that snake?"

"Thas him, boss, all curled up in de bathtub," sobbed a negro perched atop a bookcase.

The law advanced. One detective ventured to peer over the side of the tub. Sure enough, something was curled about the side of the tub. Just as he was ready to shoot, another cried:

"It's only the ring around the tub."

"Bad liquor," was the verdict of the police.

YOUNG OFFICIAL TELLS OF PLEAS TO RESCUE BANK

Banker Says He Warned Caldwell Against Col. Luke Lea

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 25. (AP)—The story of two conscience stricken

COUNTY COURT IS UPHELD BY HIGH TRIBUNAL

Decision Handed Down In Raleigh Passes On 1929 Statute

TWO LOWER COURT VIEWS SUSTAINED

Eight Other Rulings Are Rendered; Bond Case Opinion Given

An attack upon the constitutionality of the statute under which the general county court of Buncombe was created in 1929 was lost in the North Carolina supreme court yesterday.

The supreme court announced an opinion in which it affirmed judgment of two lower courts in overruling a demurrer challenging jurisdiction of the court. As a result, possibility that the court will be dissolved, was considered past.

When the suit of H. H. Ellis against Fred A. Perley, et al, for collection of $8,444.62 on notes, was called for trial late in November, counsel for J. D. Eckles, one of the defendants, filed a demurrer in which jurisdiction of the court to try the case was questioned.

Expectantly Awaited

Judge Guy Weaver, in county court overruled the demurrer. It was appealed to superior court, where it

Declares He Was Innocent

Former Mayor Gallatin Roberts, who ended his life with a bullet from a revolver yesterday afternoon, left letters in which he declared that he had done no wrong. He wrote that he knew those who had sought to destroy him and that he forgave them.

Letter To People Urges

CITY TO PAY FINAL HONOR BEFORE BIER ON SATURDAY

Former Mayor Ended His Life Yesterday With Bullet

IN PUBLIC LIFE FOR MANY YEARS

Friends Believe Suicide Was Planned For Several Days

"I have given my life for my city. I did what I thought was right."

Saturday between 10 and 2 o'clock, while his body lies in state in the rotunda of the city hall where he served the city as its chief executive, Asheville will pay tribute to former Mayor Gallatin Roberts, who wrote the above lines a few minutes before he ended his life yesterday afternoon.

Members of the Buncombe county bar association and present city officials last night

PBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA
HURSDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 26, 1931 12 PAGES 5c DAILY 10c SUNDAY

today's offering.

LIE IN STATE IN CITY HALL

roves Plans For City Schools

.THTUB
ERO TO OOKCASE

...P—"Go to Avenue" the
... there's a ared forth to s' minds filled constrictors

they entered

...ll cuhled up
bed a negro case

One detec-
r over the
ure enough.
d about the
it as he was ther cried
; around the

the verdict

FFICIAL
PLEAS BANK

e Warned
inst Col.
ea

Feb. 25 (AP)—
clien-e-stricken ng with their great banking
Company and was told today
od of the in-
by J. D. Carter
e-president of 18,000 a year

executive type.
the committee
tate money in ted his strug-
his boss and
is family and yea: preceding titutions last d other banks

tters

he said, he Caldwell, presi-n, to save the art, was given er-office letters in the bank

ters written by
of the Bank
it to Caldwell,
nberg, another
well and com-
Tennessee, in was quoted as of the danger
June 20, 1929,
before the col-

Les

stand both in ernoon during superiors with institutions to y loose" and practices. He fall to Colonel associated with y in newspaper is and Knox-said he urged
ever his busi-
n Colonel Lea,
nding of the urther seriously
s of those out-
e business by connection with ny, and the
his obligations
other concerns that he wrote nel Lea called
t the office of y to see Rogers
last September warned him the d be there the

Bank

what he had
October
w of what Co.
about the bank
ome subsidiaries

d. Lea came to d us to examine of Guaranty. If be used in some
Bank and Trust
e which needed were transferred Asset—Trust Co.
ment in action

COUNTY COURT IS UPHELD BY HIGH TRIBUNAL

Decision Handed Down In Raleigh Passes On 1929 Statute

TWO LOWER COURT VIEWS SUSTAINED

Eight Other Rulings Are Rendered; Bond Case Opinion Given

An attack upon the constitutionality of the statute under which the general county court of Buncombe was created in 1929 was lost in the North Carolina supreme court yesterday.

The supreme court announced an opinion in which it affirmed judgment of two lower courts in overruling a demurrer challenging jurisdiction of the court. As a result, possibility that the court will be dissolved, was considered past.

When the suit of H. H. Ellis against Fred A. Perley, et al, for collection of $8,444.62 on notes, was called for trial late in November, counsel for J. D. Eckles, one of the defendants, filed a demurrer in which jurisdiction of the court to try the case was questioned.

Expectantly Awaited

Judge Guy Weaver, in county court overruled the demurrer. It was appealed to superior court, where it was again overruled by Judge J. M. Oglesby.

The case was immediately taken to the supreme court with the expressed hope of securing a ruling before adjournment of the General Assembly, in order that if the court was held unconstitutional, the legislature would be in a position to remedy the situation without the two-year delay in prospect if the case was decided too late.

It was argued at the January term and a decision has been awaited expectantly for the past two weeks.

Issue Of Power

Challenge of the court was based upon the question of the constitutionality of a statute vesting county commissioners with authority to crease a court and to delegate its powers.

The principal point of controversy was the delegation of powers. Counsel for the demurring defendant claimed that the genera county court had usurped powers delegated solely to the superior court.

Continuation of general county court, not only in Buncombe but in other counties of the state, was at stake, for if the supreme court had reversed the decisions of the lower courts in this case, abolition of all the general courts on grounds of unconstitutionality was in prospect.

NEW ISSUE SETTLED

RALEIGH, Feb. 25. (AP)—The North Carolina Supreme court today held an appearance bond collectible even though it is not secured and the time limit expired.

An affirmative decision was handed down in the case of the State versus Staley, which originated in Wilkes County. Felix Staley signed a $300 bond for Clyde Staley. No security was put up, both men signed a $300 note.

Clyde Staley was convicted, but passing of sentence was postponed. When the time came for sentence to be passed, Clyde Staley had disappeared. The State won a suit against Felix Staley for the $300 bond.

Staley, claiming the note had expired, appealed.

Justice Clarkson, writing the opinion, said while Staley had violated the bond, he did not release it.

List Of Opinions

The list of opinions was as follows:

C. A. Johnson vs. V. E. Fountain, Edgecombe, new trial.

East Carolina Railway vs. Zeigler Bros., Edgecombe, affirmed.

Lumberton Cotton Gin company vs. Andrew Wise, Johnston, no error.

Goldsboro vs. Supply company, Wayne, plaintiffs appeal modified and affirmed, defendant's appeal affirmed.

Surry county vs. Guy Sparger, Surry, affirmed.

R. A. Adams and wife vs. J. L. Woodie, Wilkes, affirmed.

Ellis vs. Perley, Buncombe, affirmed.

Ella King, Mary Burchett, Dora Burchett and Lee Burchett vs. Southern Railway, Warren, no error.

Biggs vs. Henry, Wilkes, affirmed.

Declares He Was Innocent

Former Mayor Gallatin Roberts, who ended his life with a bullet from a revolver yesterday afternoon, left letters in which he declared that he had done no wrong. He wrote that he knew those who had sought to destroy him and that he forgave them.

Letter To People Urges End Of Strife In City

Former Mayor Declares His "Soul Wounded Unto Death"

"My soul is sensitive and it is wounded unto death," wrote former Mayor Gallatin Roberts in a letter addressed to the "People of Asheville" a short time before his death yesterday. "I know exactly who the men are who were trying to destroy me, but now, I forgive them," he continued.

This letter, with two others, was found on his desk in his Legal building offices a few minutes after his body was discovered in a lavatory on the floor above. Near the letters were two clippings from the Congressional Record of recent date containing prayers delivered by the House chaplain at the opening of the session.

The second letter was addressed to George Pennell, city corporation counsel, whom Mayor Roberts had twice appointed city attorney. The first appointment coming when Mr. Pendell was a young member of the bar. The third letter was to Mrs. Roberts.

Letter To People

The text of the letter to the people of Asheville follows:

To the People of Asheville:

My soul is sensitive, and it has been wounded unto death. I know exactly who the men are who were instrumental in trying to destroy me, but now, I forgive them.

For twenty years, I was in public life, and I never did a dishonest act during all these years and yet, I have been shamefully charged with committing a felony. God knows I did no wrong during my term in office. My hands are clean, and my conscience is clear, and I want to say further that Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Rogers are both clean good men, and have done no wrong.

I have given my life for my city, but I am content. I did what I thought was right. I trust the people of Asheville will cease to wrangle, and all pull together for the common good. Why do you hate each other? Don't you know that life is just like a fleeting shadow, and that you will soon pass to the great beyond? I do not hate a soul on this earth. Won't you people highly resolve to cease your bickering and strife? I want you to do this.

I toiled hard for a larger and better city. I knew that it was imperative. Every act of my life during my term of office was for that which I thought was for the best interest of this community.

I used my best efforts in resisting the effort that was made to foster higher telephone rates upon you people.

When I went into office nearly four

LAST-HOUR FIGHT FOR LIVES OF FIVE NEGROES IS BEGUN

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 25. (AP) Chief Justice Eugene S. Blease of the State Supreme court tonight called a meeting of the entire court to be held tomorrow at 2 p. m., to act on an application for a writ of habeas corpus and a stay of the sentence of five of six negroes condemned to die Friday at Iawn.

The petition was presented to Chief Justice Blease at his home in Newberry by A. L. King, a Columbia attorney representing W. H. Gibbes and Josiah Morse, prominent Columbians. Blease refused to pass on the petition individually, wishing the entire court to pass on it.

CAPONE APPEARS IN CHICAGO COURT WITH BODYGUARD

Gangster Is Debonair As Contempt Hearing Is Launched

CHICAGO, Feb. 25. (AP)—Al Capone, bulky and swarthy, leisurely leaned back in a chair in federal court today and calmly listened to the government's case intended to show he was in contempt for failure to appear before a grand jury in March 1929.

Jacob Grossman, an assistant district attorney, argued Capone's claim of illness was untrue. Witnesses supported his contention regarding Capone's health, testifying the gangster chief made an airplane trip to the Bahamas, a boat trip to Kansas and attended the Jack Sharkey-Young Stribling boxing bout.

Officers On Guard

Capone's trip to court was a spectacle of previous visits to the federal building. Mounted police were in the streets surrounding the building, federal officers stood at

CITY TO PAY FINAL HONOR BEFORE BIER ON SATURDAY

Former Mayor Ended His Life Yesterday With Bullet

IN PUBLIC LIFE FOR MANY YEARS

Friends Believe Suicide Was Planned For Several Days

"I have given my life for my city. I did what I thought was right."

Saturday between 10 and 2 o'clock, while his body lies in state in the rotunda of the city hall where he served the city as its chief executive, Asheville will pay tribute to former Mayor Gallatin Roberts, who wrote the above lines a few minutes before he ended his life yesterday afternoon.

Members of the Buncombe county bar association and present city officials last night announced that a guard of honor selected from the city, police and fire departments will be placed around the bier while friends file past and pay a final tribute to the man who served the city as its mayor for seven years.

Leaving his office on the third floor of the Legal building on Pack Square, yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock Mr. Roberts entered a small lavatory on the fourth floor of the building, placed a .38 calibre revolver, which contained only one cartridge, to his right temple, and sent a bullet crashing through his brain.

Investigation yesterday afternoon revealed that Mr. Roberts, who was 51 years old, had closed up a number of business affairs during the past week and belief was expressed by his friends that the former mayor had planned for several days to take his life. He had apparently been putting his financial and personal affairs in shape for the act.

Died Instantly

Death was probably instantaneous, former county coroner Dr. E. R. Morris said. The body was found about 2:15 o'clock by B. B. Worsham, blind attorney, and an elevator operator. Worsham had heard the report of the gun and started an investigation which led to the finding of the body.

The bullet entered the right temple of the former city official, went through the brain and imbedded itself in the door of the lavatory. Although more than a dozen persons who had been intimate friends of the ex-mayor viewed the body while it was lying in the lavatory it was nearly 20 minutes before identity could be established.

Chief of Police W. R. Messer and several officers arrived on the scene of the shooting shortly after the body was found. The body was slumped over on the floor of the lavatory.

The pistol, used by Mr. Roberts to end his life, was found lying

—(Please Turn To Page Four)—

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Bandits harvest $55,000 in four robberies. —Page 1
Coroner enters race against Big Bill Thompson. —Page 1
Al Capone is arraigned in Chicago on contempt charge. —Page 1
Young official tells of pleas he made to Caldwell. —Page 1
Employes of New York World want in his paper. —Page 1
Safe King's murder trial will be held in May. —Page 3
Eight persons are arrested at unemployment meet. —Page 4 Alleged torch slayer will be given

around the

the verdict

FFICIAL PLEAS BANK

e Warned nst Col.

ea

Feb 25 (AP)— cken-stricken ng with their reat banking
Company and was told today
d of the iny J. D. Carter
e-president of

8,000 a year
xecutive type,
he committee
ate money in ted his strug-
his boss and
is family and ea: preceding stitutions last other banks

tters

he said, he aldwell, presis, to save the rt, was given r-office letters

n the bank ers written by
of the Bank
t to Caldwell,
zberg, another
well and com-
Tennessee, in as quoted as f the danger
June 20, 1929,
efore the col-

Lea

stand both in ernoon during superiors with nstitutions to loose" and practices. He fall to Colonel sociated with in newspaper s and Knox-said he urged ver his busi-
Colonel Lea ding of the ther seriously of those out-business by nnection with y, and the
his obligations
other concerns
ed he wrote
nel Lea called the office of
to see Rogers
last September urged him the be there the

ank
what he had
October ... to
of What Co. ugh the bank
e superintendent

Lea came to us to transfer of Gastonia. N used in some ank and Trust which needed was transferred something. Ma-bury he under-deposited with

LS OF LED TO MURDER

Eight Other Rulings Are Rendered; Bond Case Opinion Given

An attack upon the constitutionality of the statute under which the general county court of Buncombe was created in 1929 was lost in the North Carolina supreme court yesterday.

The supreme court announced an opinion in which it affirmed judgments of two lower courts in overruling a demurrer challenging jurisdiction of the court. As a result, possibility that the court will be dissolved, was considered past.

When the suit of H. H. Ellis against Fred A. Perley, et al, for collection of $8,444.62 on notes, was called for trial late in November, counsel for J. D. Eckles, one of the defendants, filed a demurrer in which jurisdiction of the court to try the case was questioned.

Expectantly Awaited

Judge Guy Weaver, in county court overruled the demurrer. It was appealed to superior court, where it was again overruled by Judge J. M. Ogleby.

The case was immediately taken to the supreme court with the expressed hope of securing a ruling before adjournment of the General Assembly, in order that if the court was held unconstitutional, the legislature would be in a position to remedy the situation without the two-year delay in prospect if the case was decided too late.

It was argued at the January term and a decision has been awaited expectantly for the past two weeks.

Issue Of Power

Challenge of the court was based upon the question of the constitutionality of a statute vesting county commissioners with authority to create a court and to delegate its powers.

The principal point of controversy was the delegation of powers. Counsel for the demurring defendant claimed that the general county court had usurped powers delegated solely to the superior court.

Continuation of general county court, not only in Buncombe but in other counties of the state, was at stake, for if the supreme court had reversed the decisions of the lower courts in this case, abolition of all the general courts on grounds of unconstitutionality was in prospect.

NEW ISSUE SETTLED

RALEIGH, Feb. 25 (AP)—The North Carolina Supreme court today held an appearance bond collectible even though it is not secured and the time limit expired.

An affirmative decision was handed down in the case of the State versus Staley, which originated in Wilkes County. Felix Staley signed a $300 bond for Clyde Staley. No security was put up, both men signed a $300 note.

Clyde Staley was convicted, but passing of sentence was postponed. When the time came for sentence to be passed, Clyde Staley had disappeared. The State won a suit against Felix Staley for the $300 bond.

Staley, claiming the note had expired, appealed.

Justice Clarkson, writing the opinion, said while Staley had violated the bond, he did not relieve it.

List Of Opinions

The list of opinions was as follows:

C. A. Johnson vs. V. E. Fountain, Edgecombe, new trial.

East Carolina Railway vs. Zeigler Bros., Edgecombe, affirmed.

Lummnuus Cotton Gin company vs. Andrew Wise Johnston, no error.

Goldsboro vs. Supply company, Wayne, plaintiffs appeal modified and affirmed, defendant's appeal affirmed.

Surry county vs. Guy Sparger, Surry, affirmed.

R. A. Adams and wife vs. J. A. Woodie, Watauga, affirmed.

Ella vs. Perley Buncombe, affirmed.

Ella King Mary Burchett, Dora Burchett and Lee Burchett vs. Southern Air Line Railway, Warren, no error.

State vs. Sheriff Wilkes, affirmed.

BLOODY SHIRT IS INTRODUCED IN STUDENT'S TRIAL

[illegible]

Former Mayor Gallatin Roberts who ended his life with a bullet from a revolver yesterday afternoon, left letters in which he declared that he had done no wrong. He wrote that he knew those who had sought to destroy him and that he forgave them.

Letter To People Urges End Of Strife In City

LAST-HOUR FIGHT FOR LIVES OF FIVE NEGROES IS BEGUN

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb. 25. (AP) Chief Justice Eugene S. Blease of the State Supreme court tonight called a meeting of the entire court to be held tomorrow at 2 p. m., to act on an application for a writ of habeas corpus and a stay of the sentence of five of six negroes condemned to die Friday at Iaeu.

The petition was presented to Chief Justice Bleare at his home in Newberry by A. L. King, a Columbia attorney representing W. H. Gibbes and Josiah Morse, prominent Columbians. Blease refused to pass on the petition individually, wishing the entire court to pass on it.

CAPONE APPEARS IN CHICAGO COURT WITH BODYGUARD

Gangster Is Debonair As Contempt Hearing Is Launched

CHICAGO, Feb. 25 (AP)—Al Capone, bulky and swarthy, leisurely leaned back in a chair in federal court today and calmly listened to the government's case intended to show he was in contempt for failure to appear before a grand jury in March 1929.

Jacob Grossman, an assistant district attorney, argued Capone's claim of illness was untrue. Witnesses supported his contention regarding Capone's health, testifying the gangster chief made an airplane trip to the Bahamas, a boat trip to Nassau and attended the Jack Sharkey-Young Stribling boxing bout.

Officers On Guard

Capone's trip to court was a duplicate of previous visits to the federal building. Mounted police were in the streets surrounding the building, leaders officers stood at entrance stairways, and, when the prisoner to Judge James H. Wilkerson's courtroom, only a se-

Please Turn To Page Two

Former Mayor Declares His "Soul Wounded Unto Death"

"My soul is sensitive and it is wounded unto death," wrote former Mayor Gallatin Roberts in a letter addressed to the "People of Asheville" a short time before his death yesterday. "I know exactly who the men are who were trying to destroy me, but now, I forgive them," he continued.

This letter, with two others, was found on his desk in his Legal building offices a few minutes after his body was discovered in a lavatory on the floor above. Near the letters were two clippings from the Congressional Record of recent date containing prayers delivered by the House chaplain at the opening of the session.

The second letter was addressed to George Pennell, city corporation counsel, whom Mayor Roberts had twice appointed city attorney. The first appointment coming when Mr. Pennell was a young member of the bar. The third letter was to Mrs. Roberts.

Letter To People

The text of the letter to the people of Asheville follows:

To the People of Asheville:

My soul is sensitive, and it has been wounded unto death. I know exactly who the men are who were instrumental in trying to destroy me, but now, I forgive them.

For twenty years, I was in public life, and I never did a dishonest act during all these years and yet, I have been shamefully charged with committing a felony. God knows I did no wrong during my term in office. My hands are clean and my conscience is clear, and I want to say further that Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Rogers are both clean good men, and have done no wrong.

I have given my life for my city, but I am content. I did what I thought was right. I trust the people of Asheville will cease to wrangle, and all pull together for the common good. Why do you hate each other? Don't you know that life is just like a fleeting shadow, and that you will soon pass to the great beyond? I do not hate a soul on this earth. Won't you people highly resolve to cease your bickering and strife? I want you to do this.

I worked hard for a larger and better city. I knew that it was imperative. Every act of my life during my term of office was for that which I thought was for the best interest of this community.

I used my best efforts in resisting the effort that was made to foster higher telephone rates upon you people.

When I went into office nearly four years ago, I found millions of dollars of the people's money in the Central Bank and I filled with all my soul to

Please Turn To Page Three

Friends Believe Suicide Was Planned For Several Days

"I have given my life for my city. I did what I thought was right."

Saturday between 10 and 2 o'clock, while his body lies in state in the rotunda of the city hall where he served the city as its chief executive, Asheville will pay tribute to former Mayor Gallatin Roberts, who wrote the above lines a few minutes before he ended his life yesterday afternoon.

Members of the Buncombe county bar association and present city officials last night announced that a guard of honor selected from the city police and fire departments will be placed around the bier while friends file past and pay a final tribute to the man who served the city as its mayor for seven years.

Leaving his office on the third floor of the Legal building on Pack Square, yesterday afternoon about 2 o'clock Mr. Roberts entered a small lavatory on the fourth floor of the building, placed a .38 calibre revolver, which contained only one cartridge, to his right temple, and sent a bullet crashing through his brain.

Investigation yesterday afternoon revealed that Mr. Roberts, who was 51 years old, had closed up a number of business affairs during the past week and belief was expressed by his friends that the former mayor had planned for several days to take his life. He had apparently been putting his financial and personal affairs in shape for the act.

Died Instantly

Death was probably instantaneous, former county coroner Dr. E. R. Morris said. The body was found about 2:15 o'clock by B. B. Worsham, blind attorney, and an elevator operator. Worsham had heard the report of the gun and started an investigation which led to the finding of the body.

The bullet entered the right temple of the former city official, went through the brain and imbedded itself in the door of the lavatory. Although more than a dozen persons who had been intimate friends of the ex-mayor viewed the body while it was lying in the lavatory it was nearly 20 minutes before identity could be established.

Chief of Police W. R. Messer and several officers arrived on the scene of the shooting shortly after the body was found. The body was slumped over on the floor of the lavatory.

The pistol, used by Mr. Roberts to end his life, was found lying

—(Please Turn To Page Four)

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Bandits harvest $85,000 in four robberies. —Page 1

Coroner enters race against Big Bill Thompson. —Page 1

Al Capone is arraigned in Chicago on contempt charge. —Page 1

Young official tells of pleas he made to Caldwell. —Page 1

Employes of New York World want to buy paper. —Page 3

Rafe Sing's murder trial will be held in May. —Page 3

Eight persons are arrested at unemployment meet. —Page 4

Alleged torch slayer will be given sanity tests. —Page 8

Democratic leaders unite to fight wet island plans. —Page 8

Professional traders extract their profits Wednesday. —Page 10

House expects to receive bonus bill vote today. —Page 11

Eugene Meyer named governor of Federal Reserve board. —Page 11

STATE

Police arrest driver of strange death car at Raleigh. —Page 1

Road bill gives favorable report by senate committee. —Page 1

James W. Menline dies at his home on Beaver Creek. —Page 3

Aged man found near Morganton with throat slashed. —Page 3

Morganton carpenter dies of wound inflicted with hammer. —Page 8

LOCAL

Buncombe County court is opened for expensive business. —Page 1

[illegible]

[illegible]

Four Trainmen Perish As Train Drops Into Stream

MOBILE, Ala., Feb. 25 (AP). The locomotive and tender of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad's Pensacola limited, bound from New Orleans to Cincinnati, plunged through an open draw-bridge over the Mobile river 12 miles north of here early today, carrying four trainmen to their death.

Engineer [illegible] of a passenger and mail express, [illegible] was killed in the plunge. The fireman was scalded to death by escaping steam. Two other trainmen escaped with the Pullman porter and a negro cook.

Police Sergeant George Thorne told of the accident and described the [illegible] and said he saw the train, [illegible] Mobile and Ohio railroad, [illegible] Mobile, [illegible] the bridge.

Engineer [illegible] of a passenger train [illegible] officials [illegible] Mobile [illegible] Pensacola [illegible] Mobile [illegible] Pensacola [illegible] Mobile [illegible] Pensacola

EN

5c DAILY
10c SUNDAY

FROM RALEIGH

A staff correspondent stationed in Raleigh will provide Asheville Citizen readers daily with General Assembly news of interest to W. N. C.

Tries Movies

NEA Los Angeles Bureau
oberta Lee of Salt Lake City, who "Miss United States" at a recent ld beauty contest in Rio de eiro, is now all set for a career a movie star. Here she is as she eared in Los Angeles to straighten matters relative to a new nager.

DAMS TO TALK ITH GOVERNOR N APPOINTMENT

torney Agrees To Go To Capital For Conference

ne acceptance by John Sneed ms, prominent Asheville attorney, Governor O. Max Gardner's re- it that he assist Solicitor Zeb V. dee in the prosecution of any dinal actions that might develop further investigation of bank ures in Asheville and Buncombe nty, hinges entirely upon the out- of a conference between the at- ay and the chief executive which

SCHOOL SYSTEM OF CITY FACES CLOSING ORDER

Lack Of Funds Brings Crisis In Plans For Operation

ONLY $9,000 IN CASH AVAILABLE

Final Discussion Set For Meeting Of Board Friday

Faced with the alternative of providing operating funds from day by day tax collections or closing the city school system, members of the school board, yesterday afternoon, after a spirited meeting at the city hall, admitted that the outlook for continued operation was apparently hopeless.

The question of shutting down the schools of the city for an indefinite period was discussed at the meeting after the board had been informed that the school fund in the city treasury totaled only $9,000.

Book lists have been distributed to the children who are being promoted and many parents are preparing to buy or have already purchased new books, but this point was not discussed at the meeting yesterday when decision to defer further discussion of the closing order until next Friday was reached. One week from today the payroll of the city schools, amounting to $48,000, will come due. Board members admit that they see no hope of the city schools remaining open. The whole matter rests with the taxpayers and the manner in which taxes are paid during the coming week.

Several members of the board yesterday strongly advocated closing the schools with the end of the first semester which closed yesterday afternoon. Others were hesitant about taking the step and urged that the matter be deferred until Friday.

Report On Revenues

APPOINTMENT

orney Agrees To Go To Capital For Conference

acceptance by John Sneed s, prominent Asheville attorney, overnor O. Max Gardner's re- that he assist Solicitor Zeb V. s in the prosecution of any ial actions that might develop further investigation of bank s in Asheville and Buncombe y, hinges entirely upon the out- of a conference between the at- and the chief executive which ake place next week in Raleigh. Adams wired the governor yes- afternoon that he would go leigh next week for the confer- concerning the appointment, ing the latter's request that he the appointment and assist or Nettles as associate counsel matter of "patriotic service to mbe county and North Caro-

Talk With Solicitor

Adams said yesterday that he confer with Solicitor Nettles ing the proposition. He said he had not yet made up his to accept. Earlier in the day adams notified the Governor e would not be able to accept ppointment, but later he wired preciation of the chief execu- message and announced his ness to take up the matter by al conference.

announcing his decision Mr. yesterday afternoon wired the ng message to Governor Gardrable O. Max Gardner, nor, gh, N. C.

ir. telegram received and I appreciate the expression of onfidence. While I do not feel possess the training or experi- n criminal practice to qualify d for that and other reasons st reluctant to undertake the ment, I cannot disregard the t of public service involved, to you refer. I will therefore re- r my decision to the extent of that I will confer with Mr. early next week and then pre- y views to you in person and rned largely by what you may of me.

"JOHN SNEED ADAMS."

Governor formally notified Mr Thursday of his appointment nal counsel. However, Mr. replied at once that he did l that he should accept the ment, explaining that he had

(Please Turn To Page Two)

EBRATION WILL LAUNCHED BY EGION OFFICIAL

LOTTE, Jan. 28 (AP)—Con C m of Mooresville, State com- of the American Legion, will launch the celebration of Mecklenburg-Pioneers week in Carolina tomorrow night with ress over the local radio sta-

Governmental leaders in paring to buy or have already pur- chased new books, but this point was not discussed at the meeting yesterday when decision to defer further discussion of the closing or- der until next Friday was reached. One week from today the payroll of the city schools, amounting to $48,000, will come due. Board mem- bers admit that they see no hope of the city schools remaining open. The whole matter rests with the tax- payers and the manner in which taxes are paid during the coming week.

Several members of the board yes- terday strongly advocated closing the schools with the end of the first semester which closed yesterday af- ternoon. Others were hesitant about taking the step and urged that the matter be deferred until Friday.

Report On Revenues

The outcome of the meeting next Friday will depend entirely upon the report given the board members by city officials on the condition of the school treasury at that time. The board instructed John Rooks, Jr., to make a report of the tax revenues which are received during the next six days.

Mayor Harry Plummer, chairman of the board, informed board mem- bers that he did not believe taxpay- ers of the city and county had real- ized the acuteness of the situation here. "Hope and confidence are all good," the mayor said, "but we need more than these to keep the city and schools going. Sparks of civic pride of Asheville taxpayers should glow into city patriotism, causing them to pay their current and de- linquent taxes and assessments."

Members of the school board ex- plained that while the necessity of closing the schools would be nothing short of a calamity, there is no other course for them to follow with the condition of the treasury in its present state. Several of the board members agreed that the most logical time to close the schools would be at the end of the past semester, which closed yesterday afternoon.

There are more than 10,300 child- ren in the Asheville system and approximately 350 teachers in ad- dition to some 80 other employes of the system. In addition to salaries of the employes the fuel, gas, elec- tricity, phone, and other services of the city system aggregates more than $5,000 monthly.

Teachers of the Asheville system recently adopted resolutions of con- fidence in the city school authori- ties. They agreed to remain at their posts with only promises of their salaries.

Evans Resigns

Ben H. Evans, member of the board, yesterday tendered his resigna- tion as a board member to Mayor Plummer. Other members of the board voted unanimously to have

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Senate recommits nominations of power commission. —Page 1.

Actress' ex-secretary is found guilty of theft. —Page 1.

Isaac Emerson passes away at home in Baltimore. —Page 1.

M. L. Meacham thinks Wickersham report excellent. —Page 1.

Greater Norris and chief Dam trial for months. —Page 1.

GARDNER FAVORS UNIVERSAL CUT

Expresses Opposition To Any Plan To Apply Only To Teachers

—(Continued From Page One)

salary cuts would eventually confront this General Assembly in many single aspects and in many separate phases. I knew that there was being proposed a bill to cut the salaries of college professors, officials and employes of the State institutions, and no one else. I was advised last summer that a bill was drawn to cut the salaries of all State administrative officers, stenographers, clerks and subordinates—and to apply to no one else. And I knew, too, that a large number of counties had already reduced by 10 per cent the salaries and wages of all or a part of their officials and employes.

Universal Cut

"I did not feel then and I do not feel now that it would be fair or just for any one single group in the public service to be segregated and made to bear the full force of a salary reduction. I felt that in the final analysis the burden of such selective cuts would likely fall upon those least able to offer resistance. It was this diverse thinking of cutting here and cutting there that irresistibly led me to present for the consideration of the General Assembly a universal cut against all employes in the public service.

"If the conditions of our state staggering under the unprecedented load of property tax, make it necessary to cut any salaries—and I feel that it does—I unhesitatingly say that every salary paid from tax money in North Carolina ought to be cut. I am in favor of cutting all or cutting none.

"A universal salary cut will give substantial relief to property taxpayers. I suggested that the salaried people working for the state, representing 50,000 employes, accept $36,000,000 annually as salary for the next two years instead of $40,000,000 now paid and that the $4,000,000 thus saved be directly devoted to the reduction of taxes on property for all the people, including those whose salaries have been cut.

"Knowing the condition of the citizens of the state I do not think that I myself and the other 50,000 employes of North Carolina can consistently take the position that we are going to stand aloof and enjoy compensation and salary fixed in times of prosperity, and not participate to some extent with the more than 3,000,000 fellow citizens who pay our salaries in the hardships and adversities that have overtaken them. With few exceptions,

Today In Asheville

SATURDAY

10:00 a. m.—The City Commissioners will meet in the council chamber at the city hall.

2:30 p. m.—The Women's Citizens League will meet at the county courthouse.

7:30 p. m.—The U. C. T. Council will meet at the Langren hotel.

IMPERIAL THEATER: Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor in "The Man Who Came Back" with Paramount news, comedy and features.

PARAMOUNT THEATER: Edmund Lowe and Dolores Del Rio in "The Bad One," animated sound comic, "Sing You Sinners," comedy and Citizen-Universal news.

PLAZA THEATER: Bert Lytell and Patsy Ruth Miller in "The Last of The Lone Wolf" with news, comedy and short subjects.

PALACE THEATER: Wheeler and Woolsey in "Half Shot at Sunrise" war comedy set in Paris, also short features.

STRAND THEATER: Western pictures, all sound with serial and comedy.

PRNCESS THEATER: "Feet First" with Harold Lloyd also serial chapter "The Indians Are Coming," and comedy.

GIRL STUDENT IS PUT UNDER BOND

Held Following Death Of Raleigh Man In Auto Accident

RALEIGH, Jan. 23. (AP)—Edward F. Pescud, 76, was run over and killed here tonight by an automobile said to have been driven by Miss Lorena Brinson, 20-year-old co-ed at North Carolina State College. Miss Brinson's home is at Kenansville.

Pescud was struck by the girl's automobile as he was crossing a street near the college campus. Miss Brinson told Coroner L. M. Waring that she did not see the aged man until it was too late to avoid hitting him.

Died In Hospital

She said she swerved her car to the left, but despite her efforts the right fender struck him. Pescud died a half hour later at the Rex hospital.

Miss Brinson was placed under a $500 bond pending an inquest here Tuesday.

The girl is a senior at State College and is president of the women's student body.

Pescud ran a bookstore here for years and was well known.

NOMINATIONS RECOMMITTE

Senate Moves To Carr Row With President To Courts

—(Continued From Page On

"this matter is entirely out of t hands of the senate."

"These commissioners," he sa "were duly appointed and confirm by the senate and notice was du sent by the senate to the preside I regard this as a closed inciden one in which the senate has not ing to do and one in which it c have nothing to do. I see no go purpose that can be served by the proceedings."

Norris said the comissioners' di missal of Russell and King "mea more to the American people th any action taken by a subordina official in fifty years."

He estimated the power compani would make claims for $500,000,0 in the kind of "fictitious and di honest" valuations Russell and Ki had been fighting and the Americ people would be called upon to p premiums upon these false valu tions for 50 years.

"I can reach no other conclusion Norris said, "than that Smith w acting in line with what he believ to be the desire of the secretary the interior and the presidnt.

"If the president is not now wi the power trust he will be after 193

Following the vote, Senator Jon Republican, Washington, explain he had voted to recommit the nom nations because he did not think made any difference "whether t nominations are on the calendar, b fore the committee, or in the was basket."

Chairman Couzens of the commi tee to which the names were se said he planned to take no action t them pending the proposed court a tion.

Meanwhile, however, the propos was made the nominations should recalled from the committee and fo mally rejected by the senate in o der to strengthen its case in court.

Senator Borah, Representati Idaho, took the view the senat case would be weak in court unle it actually rejected the nomination

Attorney General Mitchell, in h opinion to the president, took t position the senate's notification the president of the confirmaion the three commissions was "a d liberate expression to the preside of the senate's unqualified conse to the immediate appointment, a that it amounts to a decision by t senate. * * * To place reconsider tion beyond its power if the pres dent should act and make the a pointment before a request of t senate for a return of the pape reaches him."

salary cuts would eventually confront this General Assembly in many single aspects and in many separate phases. I knew that there was being proposed a bill to cut the salaries of college professors, officials and employes of the State institutions, and no one else. I was advised last summer that a bill was drawn to cut the salaries of all State administrative officers, stenographers, clerks and subordinates—and to apply to no one else. And I knew, too, that a large number of counties had already reduced by 10 per cent the salaries and wages of all or a part of their officials and employes.

Universal Cut

"I did not feel then and I do not feel now that it would be fair or just for any one single group in the public service to be segregated and made to bear the full force of a salary reduction. I felt that in the final analysis the burden of such selective cuts would likely fall upon those least able to offer resistance. It was this diverse thinking of cutting here and cutting there that irresistibly led me to present for the consideration of the General Assembly a universal cut against all employes in the public service.

"If the conditions of our state, staggering under the unprecedented load of property tax, make it necessary to cut any salaries—and I feel that it does—I unhesitatingly say that every salary paid from tax money in North Carolina ought to be cut. I am in favor of cutting all or cutting none.

"A universal salary cut will give substantial relief to property taxpayers. I suggested that the salaried people working for the state, representing 50,000 employes, accept $36,000,000 annually as salary for the next two years instead of $40,000,000 now paid and that the $4,000,000 thus saved be directly devoted to the reduction of taxes on property for all the people, including those whose salaries have been cut.

"Knowing the condition of the citizens of the state I do not think that I myself and the other 50,000 employes of North Carolina can consistently take the position that we are going to stand aloof and enjoy compensation and salary fixed in times of prosperity, and not participate to some extent with the more than 3,000,000 fellow citizens who pay our salaries in the hardships and adversities that have overtaken them. With few exceptions, the mass of our people have taken cuts in their earnings from 10 per cent to 50 per cent to 100 per cent and everybody in North Carolina knows this.

General Discussion

"I think the general discussion developed since my message has been wholesome and has tended to clarify the thinking of the public with respect to the subject of salary without discrimination.

"May I say in conclusion, I have advanced the proposal that through a universal salary cut we undertake to put the entire public within reasonable limits into more nearly the same position with respect to facing our present situation, over which neither the salaried employes nor the citizens of the state have any material control. I am conscientiously convinced that unless it is done in a spirit of democracy and absolute fairness it should not be done at all."

THE FIRST SNEEZE

...is your signal to take Lax-ana (double strength) for colds; get quick-bright results. Lax-ana combines best cold medicines with effective laxatives. At all druggists.

Who Came Back" with Paramount news, comedy and features.

PARAMOUNT THEATER: Edmund Lowe and Dolores Del Rio in "The Bad One," animated sound comic, "Sing You Sinners," comedy and Citizen-Universal news.

PLAZA THEATER: Bert Lytell and Patsy Ruth Miller in "The Last of The Lone Wolf" with news, comedy and short subjects.

PALACE THEATER: Wheeler and Woolsey in "Half Shot at Sunrise" war comedy set in Paris, also short features.

STRAND THEATER: Western pictures, all sound with serial and comedy.

PRNCESS THEATER: "Feet First" with Harold Lloyd, also serial chapter "The Indians Are Coming," and comedy.

GIRL STUDENT IS PUT UNDER BOND

Held Following Death Of Raleigh Man In Auto Accident

RALEIGH, Jan. 23. (AP)—Edward F. Pescud, 76, was run over and killed here tonight by an automobile said to have been driven by Miss Lorena Brinson, 20-year-old co-ed at North Carolina State College. Miss Brinson's home is at Kenansville.

Pescud was struck by the girl's automobile as he was crossing a street near the college campus. Miss Brinson told Coroner I. M. Waring that she did not see the aged man until it was too late to avoid hitting him.

Died In Hospital

She said she swerved her car to the left, but despite her efforts the right fender struck him. Pescud died a half hour later at the Rex hospital.

Miss Brinson was placed under a $500 bond pending an inquest here Tuesday.

The girl is a senior at State College and is president of the women's student body.

Pescud ran a bookstore here for years and was well known.

Mrs. Gussie Israel Dies In Biltmore

Funeral services for Mrs. Gussie L. Israel, 74, who died yesterday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. A. Marshall, on West Chapel road, Biltmore, will be held at Fannings Chapel tomorrow at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. Israel is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Marshall, of Biltmore, and Mrs. E. U. Bryson, of Arden; one son M. L. Israel, of Fletcher; one brother, Charles Edward, of West Asheville, and 19 grandchildren.

"this matter is entirely out of hands of the senate."

"These commissioners," he s "were duly appointed and confirm by the senate and notice was d sent by the senate to the preside I regard this as a closed incide one in which the senate has no ing to do and one in which it have nothing to do. I see no g purpose that can be served by th proceedings."

Norris said the comissioners' d missal of Russell and King "me more' to the American people th any action taken by a subordin official in fifty years."

He estimated the power compan would make claims for $500,000, in the kind of "fictitious and d honest" valuations Russell and K had been fighting and the Americ people would be called upon to p premiums upon these false val tions for 50 years.

"I can reach no other conclusio Norris said, "than that Smith acting in line with what he belie to be the desire of the secretary the interior and the presidnt.

"If the president is not now w the power trust he will be after 19

Following the vote, Senator Jon Republican, Washington, explain he had voted to recommit the nom nations because he did not think made any difference "whether nominations are on the calendar, fore the committee, or in the wa basket."

Chairman Couzens of the comm tee to which the names were se said he planned to take no action them pending the proposed court tion.

Meanwhile, however, the propo was made the nominations should recalled from the committee and f mally rejected by the senate in der to strengthen its case in court.

Senator Borah, Representati Idaho, took the view the senat case would be weak in court unl it actually rejected the nominatio

Attorney General Mitchell, in opinion to the president, took t position the senate's notification the president of the confirmaion the three commissions was "a d liberate expression to the preside of the senate's unqualified conse to the immediate appointment, a that it amounts to a decision by t senate. * * * To place reconsider tion beyond its power if the pre dent should act and make the a pointment before a request of t senate for a return of the pap reaches him."

JOHN A. CARTER SOUGHT IN CIT

Legion Officials A Asked To Aid In Search For Man

Relatives of John A. Carter, Wor War veteran who disappeared fro an Asheville hospital last June, a anxious to learn his whereabou fearing that he may have come harm.

For Berts

Urged To ...erships ...tely

... He feels that ...t many more, ...ause they re... ...m the Colum... the local sta... ...e greater part ...ill necessarily ...umbia System ...hey will have ...r sort of en... the place of

...embers of the ...ham's Music ...ers, Beaumont Susquehanna ...n Marche, The ...el, The George Drug Store, Johnson Drug ...e Pharmacy J. ..., Chestnut St. ...buck, Mont... ...s Coal and ...aka Corpora... Hardware, Co., Light, S. H. ...ng and Re... Pharmacy, J. Charmil Hotel, ...'s Restaurant

...DIERS' ...SION TO ...10 DAYS

... Citizen)

... Jan. 23.— ...d this morn... ...ephone con... ...fice of Briga... T. Hines, di... ...airs, that the the proposed ...oldiers' home probably be ...

... assistant to Mr. Smith no unofficial ...s yet made. press state... from locali... ...me, as with...

... stated that ...d be done at the home to ...ng done.

SCHOOLS FACING ORDER TO CLOSE

Lack Of Funds Brings Crisis In Plans For Operation

—(Continued From Page One)

Mr. Evans reconsider his resignation. He informed Mayor Plummer that he would submit a formal resignation in writing next week.

Mr. Evans explained to the board members that he was not leaving the board because of the apparent failure to keep the schools open.

Members of the board are appointed by the general assembly. Mayor Plummer is chairman ex-officio. They do not receive any salary or expenses for their services. Those present at yesterday's meeting were: Mayor Plummer, Mrs. Eugene Gudger, Mrs. W. E. Logan, Ben H. Evans, R. H. McDuffie, Sr., and William Smathers.

Members of the school board yesterday "found" the "missing" $87,000 of the school fund when John B. Hooks, Jr., chief accountant for the city, submitted figures to the board which showed that salaries and operating expenses of the city schools for July and August, 1929, had not been taken into consideration by persons who had alleged the city school fund was short $84,000.

Mr. Hooks explained that the city school system ended its 1929 fiscal year period on June 30, and started upon the next fiscal year on September 5, 1929. Salaries of teachers for July and August, 1929, Mr. Hooks said, used the $84,000.

Members of the school board explained that the city schools system formerly operated its fiscal year between June and June of each year. When the schools were turned over to the county in 1929 the fiscal year was changed to start and end in September.

A request from Mrs. Elizabeth C. Morriss, director of adult night schools, for financial aid to operate the adult night school classes was declined. Mrs. Morriss asked for approximately $450 to defray salaries for the month of January and $100 monthly for her classes. In the interest of economy the school board was forced to decline the request.

It was announced yesterday that the adult school would be discontinued due to the lack of funds.

The request from A. C. Reynolds, superintendent of county schools, that members of the city school board sign pay rolls and requisitions of the city system was met with determined opposition on the part of several members.

It was charged that Mr. Reynolds was attempting to place the city school board in the same class with various school committees of county

PENDER STORES

The Better

TEN STRIKES ECONOMY

FOSTER'S
Sausage No. 2 Can 25c

Select Storage
Eggs Dozen 22c

Van Camp's
Tomato Soup 3 cans 20c

Sweet Crushed
Corn No. 2 Can 10c

Early June
Peas No. 2 Can 10c

Fat ... lb.

Santa ...
Prune ...
Pound
5c

Lin...
3-lbs.

Whole Gra...
RIC...

Libbys Sliced
PINEAPPLE 23c
No. 2 Can
Large Golden Slices

Red Wing Pure Fruit

n the Colum-
he local sta-greater part ll necessarily umbia System
hey will have sort of en-the place of embers of the ham's Music

rs, Beaumont
Susquehanna
Marche, The
, The George
Drug Store,
ohnson Drug
Pharmacy J.
Chestnut St. uck, Mont-
Coal and ka Corpora-
Hardware, Co.,
ight, S. H.
g and Re-
Pharmacy, J.
Charmil Hotel,
's Restaurant

DIERS' ION TO 10 DAYS

Citizen)
Jan. 23.— d this morn-
phone con-ice of Briga-
, Hines, di-irs, that the
the proposed ldiers' home probably be assistant to

Mr. Smith
no unofficial s yet made.
press state-
from localine, as with-stated that d be done at he home to g done.

ALK ERNOR

es To Go For ce

m Page One)

e practice of other matters ion with his up his time.
ince
of Mr. Adams
the follow-

me as special

He informed Mayor Plummer that he would submit a formal resignation in writing next week.

Mr. Evans explained to the board members that he was not leaving the board because of the apparent failure to keep the schools open.

Members of the board are appointed by the general assembly. Mayor Plummer is chairman ex-officio. They do not receive any salary or expenses for their services. Those present at yesterday's meeting were: Mayor Plummer, Mrs. Eugene Gudger, Mrs. W. E. Logan, Ben H. Evans, R. H. McDuffie, Sr., and William Smathers.

Members of the school board yesterday "found" the "missing" $87,000 of the school fund when John B. Hooks, Jr., chief accountant for the city, submitted figures to the board which showed that salaries and operating expenses of the city schools for July and August, 1929, had not been taken into consideration by persons who had alleged the city school fund was short $84,000.

Mr. Hooks explained that the city school system ended its 1929 fiscal year period on June 30, and started upon the next fiscal year on September 5, 1929. Salaries of teachers for July and August, 1929, Mr. Hooks said, used the $84,000.

Members of the school board explained that the city schools system formerly operated its fiscal year between June and June of each year. When the schools were turned over to the county in 1929 the fiscal year was changed to start and end in September.

A request from Mrs. Elizabeth C. Morriss, director of adult night schools, for financial aid to operate the adult night school classes was declined. Mrs. Morriss asked for approximately $450 to defray salaries for the month of January and $100 monthly for her classes. In the interest of economy the school board was forced to decline the request.

It was announced yesterday that the adult school would be discontinued due to the lack of funds.

The request from A. C. Reynolds, superintendent of county schools, that members of the city school board sign pay rolls and requisitions of the city system was met with determined opposition on the part of several members.

It was charged that Mr. Reynolds was attempting to place the city school board in the same class with various school committees of county townships. Ben H. Evans, member of the board, declared "it would take an order of the court to have him sign papers for the county authorities."

Other members of the board objected to this procedure. The request was tabled.

ISAAC EMERSON TAKEN BY DEATH

Headache Cure Magnate Was Born in North Carolina

—(Continued From Page One)

McKim, her first husband, in 1911, the same year her father was

SHEVILLE TIMES

HOME

— UNITED PRESS — CONSOLIDATED PRESS — NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSOCIATION

ASHEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA, TUESDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1930

PRICE FIVE CENTS

TS IS READY TO RESIGN
TEE WORKS ON PROBLEMS

eville Warehouse

estern North Carolina burley which will be aumont streets, by B. B. Saunders. The

AYRES PREDICTS TRADE REVIVAL FOR NEXT YEAR

Noted Business Forecaster Warns That Recovery Will Not Be Rapid.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 9.—(AP)—The bottom of the business depression is at hand, according to all the "old signs and symptoms," and recovery next year should be expected, Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Company and internationally prominent business forecaster, said today.

He made this forecast in his annual address before the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce.

Recovery To Be Slow

He cautioned, however, that it "is already clear that we are not warranted in expecting a rapid recovery.

"The purchasing power of an important part of our population is still seriously restricted by the paying of debts incurred in unsuccessful stock speculation," he said.

Another reason for a delay in business recovery is because "we have not developed any new wave of constructive enterprises such as canals, railroads, war materials, highways and automobiles. These activities have usually come from men of courage who took advantage of the low interest rates to float bond issues for financing expansion and improvements.

New Construction Vital

"Such new construction is the most effective force making for bus-

HOOVER WARNS AGAINST RAISING BUDGET FIGURES

Says Increase In Appropriations Would Necessitate Tax Boost.

'POLITICS' CHARGED

Bill Providing $110,000,000 For Construction Program Reported.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(AP)—The senate today passed the bill authorizing $60,000,000 for relief to drought stricken farmers. The measure was approved without a record vote after Democrats had bitterly assailed the contention of the administration that funds should not be loaned to farmers for purchase of personal foods. Republicans made no effort to cut down the $60,000,000 to the $25,000,000 recommended by President Hoover.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(AP)—President Hoover declared today that efforts were being made to impose greater financial burdens upon the government than its financial position would permit.

Prosperity can not be restored by raids on the public treasury, he warned.

Noting that pending legislation would impose additional burdens of $4,500,000,000 above the sums he asked for in his budget message, he said the budget contained the maximum expenditure that the government could make without increase in taxes. Any tax increase, he continued, would fall on the farmer and worker.

Hurls Charge of "Politics"

Mr. Hoover said that some organizations were playing politics at the expense of "human misery."

"The American people will not be misled by such tactics," he added.

The full text of President Hoover's statement:

"I observe that measures have been already introduced in congress and are having advocacy which if

BILL CARRIES OVER $3,000,000 FOR N. C.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—(AP)—The emergency construction bill reported to the house today carried provisions for expenditure of $1,104,600 on rivers and harbors in North Carolina.

The total is exclusive of an item of $530,000 for construction of a waterway from the Cape Fear river to Winyah Bay, S. C., part of which will be expended in North Carolina.

The largest item for the state in the bill was one of $785,000 for improvements in the Cape Fear river channel at and below Wilmington.

The highway aid allotment for the state was listed at $1,926,775.

Preparing To Step Out Of Office

GALLATIN ROBERTS

Begins Work Liquidating Four Banks

G. N. Henson of the state banking department, Tuesday assumed his new duties as liquidating agent for the suspended Central Bank and Trust company, the Biltmore-Oteen bank, the Bank of Leicester and the Bank of Black Mountain, formerly the Commonwealth Bank and Trust company.

John Mitchell, of Raleigh, chief state bank examiner, will arrive in Asheville this week, probably Wednesday morning, for a conference with Mr. Henson and the local attorneys, Johnson, Smathers and Rollins. Mr. Henson will hold a preliminary conference with Judge Thomas L. Johnson, of this firm, Tuesday.

On Direct Charge

Mr. Henson will have direct charge of the liquidation of the Central Bank, including the Haywood street branch, while assistant liquidating

MERCHANTS AND PHYSICIANS ASK MAYOR TO QUIT

Resolutions Are Passed At Meetings Of Two Bodies In City.

The Asheville Merchants association and the Buncombe County Medical society, as a result of actions taken Monday afternoon and night, have joined with the Civitan club in demanding the resignations of the city commissioners.

Commissioner L. B. Rogers resigned Saturday, and Commissioner C. H. Bartlett Monday night announced his intentions to retire as soon as the legal requirements can be met.

The resolutions of the medical society condemned the city and past county administrations, while the merchants association appointed a

CONFERRING ON SUCCESSORS TO COMMISSIONERS

Dr. John E. Calfee Chosen Head Of Committee Now Studying Situation.

TENSION IS RELIEVED

New Officials Will Serve Until State Assembly Meets Next Month.

Mayor Gallatin Roberts today advised friends and a large committee of representative citizens he would resign as mayor of Asheville as soon as the details were worked out regarding the naming of his successor and the succession to the other two city commissioners who have already submitted their resignations.

The committee of representative citizens is now busy working out the details with Mayor Roberts and the first step—the inauguration of a new board of city commissioners—in the solution of the complicated affairs is expected to be taken. The [illegible] of commissioners, which will probably be [illegible] day or two, will [illegible] state legislature [illegible] worked out.

Mayor Roberts [illegible] board—Commissioner [illegible] and Commissioner C. H. [illegible] had previously [illegible] they were elected in the [illegible] election of 1929. Commissioner [illegible] ers' resignation was accepted [illegible] morning, but the resignations of Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett cannot be passed upon until a successor has been named for Mr. Rogers.

Tension Relieved

Much of the tension that prevailed throughout Asheville since the closing of the Central Bank and Trust company and several other banks three weeks ago, was relieved with the news of Mayor Roberts' decision to resign. Business and financial leaders viewed the situation with optimism, asserting the financial problem created by the bank's failure could be solved with the selection of a competent board of commissioners and the co-operation of the general public. New York and state financial interests have already promised their aid in the draft of a refinancing plan.

Mayor Roberts informed Dr. John E. Calfee, chairman of a special committee which had been selected as a

HARRY PLUMMER IS NAMED MAYOR

Roberts Resigns Post As Chief Executive Of City Thursday

—(Continued From Page One)

shortly after 8 o'clock by a notary public. Mr. Goode had been sworn in by Mayor Roberts shortly before the latter's resignation as the city's chief executive.

The new board. Ex-Mayor Gallatin Roberts, Ben H. Evans, J. E. Gibson, secretary-treasurer of the city, and George Pennell, city corporation counsel, held an informal conference immediately after the new board had been selected.

News of the developments in the city's governmental tangle spread rapidly during the early evening and a score or more of persons were outside Goode's Drug Store to congratulate the new and retiring officials. Neither of the former commissioners, C. H. Bartlett and L. B. Rogers, was present at the informal conference

Address Employes

Later in the evening the new commissioners addressed members of the police and fire departments at the city market building. Mr. Bartlett presided at this meeting. The new mayor was introduced by Mr. Bartlett.

Rising to his feet amid deafening rounds of applause, Mayor Plummer stated that he felt highly honored at being selected as mayor of the city. "The more I dwell upon the duties attached to the office of mayor," Mr. Plummer said, "the more I am impressed by the sense of responsibility that goes with the title as mayor of the city of Asheville.

"I have nothing but praise for the efforts of Commissioner Bartlett during his tenure of office, and I earnestly solicit the cooperation of every member of these two departments during my stay in the city hall."

Goode Speaks

Mr. Goode was introduced and elaborated upon the remarks of Mayor Plummer. "I don't know a fingerprint from a footprint," Goode stated. "This morning I would have wagered good money that I would not have been commissioner of public safety tonight. The office was tendered me in such a way that I couldn't decline. There will be no changes in the personnel of either departments under my control, I will assure you,

"We must exercise the same efficiency in the future that has been shown in the past. My only request is that each and every one of you men do your duty."

Commissioner Parker followed Mr. Goode to the floor and made a brief talk. He also asked for the cooperation of all city employes. Chief of Police William R. Messer, in a brief address, urged the police officers to live up to the confidence which the new officials placed in them. George Pennell, in a brief talk, expressed the highest regard for members of the two departments, and praised in eloquent terms the new officials.

Career of Goode

Mr. Goode has displayed an active interest in all civic affairs of the city for the past several years. He received his early education in the public schools of Marion and later became an employe of the drug store of James Johnson at Raleigh.

In 1915 Mr. Goode came to Asheville and with R. D. Hage opened a drug store on Patton avenue under the firm name of Goode and Hage. Several years later he moved the business to its present location.

He is affiliated with the American Pharmaceutical Association and the National Association of Retail Druggists. On September 25, 1926, he was elected a vice-president of the National Association of Retail Druggists. He also served several terms as a member of the executive board of the druggists body. He is a former president of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association

Active Civic Worker

In 1928 he was elected president of the Asheville Chamber of Commerce and headed the general committee which was in charge of staging the Rhododendron festival in 1928. He also has served as president of the community chest and various other civic and fraternal organizations. He is a 32nd degree Mason and a member of the Asheville Rotary club

On November 9, 1927 he was named as a member of the Buncombe county board of education

Civil Engineer

Mr Parker is a widely known civil engineer and was for many years manager and engineer of the vast holdings of the late E W Grove in Asheville and Western North Carolina. Upon the death of Mr Grove he resumed his private civil engineering practice

He was endorsed by the special committee of representative citizens at the meeting of that body Wednesday.

Mr Plummer former president and manager of the Asheville Electric company, later the Asheville Power and Light Company now operated under the name of the Carolina Power and Light Company is well known to residents of this city

The new commissioners will formally take over their new offices this morning. They will be introduced to employes of the city administrative building today Among the first official acts of the new mayor will be the signing of city checks today

CASEY LOSES IN LATEST EFFORT TO ESCAPE CHAIR

KINSTON, N. C., Dec. 11. (AP)—Herman Casey, 44-year-old truck driver, lost his latest attempt to escape the electric chair here today when Judge Vernon Cowper ruled he was without jurisdiction to grant the new trial asked by attorneys for the convicted slayer.

Casey was tried and sentenced to death in connection with the killing last July 3 of J. C. Causey, Suffolk, Va., lumberman, whose burned body was found in the charred ruins of his automobile near here the following day.

The defene challenged the eligibility of some of the trial jurors and sought to establish that new evidence had been discovered. Attorneys for the defendant announced they would appeal to the Supreme Court from the ruling of Judge Cowper.

AL CAPONE NOT TO BE DEPORTED, OFFICIALS THINK

WASHINGTON D C Dec 11 (AP) Whatever happens to Al Capone at the hands of the law he is not likely to be deported.

Immigration authorities said today it seemed Capone was a citizen of the United States Capone is understood to have been born in Naples but has been naturalized.

SEN. OVERMAN TAKEN BY DEA

Veteran N. C. Legisl Yields To Illness Several Days

—(Continued From Page

and tact of the legislator was su ful and his bill became a law.

Overman figured in another contested legislative battle centered around the leasing c North Carolina Railroad in the state held a majority of The question of leasing the ro vided the party. Overman clung aciously to the policy of leasin spite severe criticism of many papers. He finally won his batti was elected president of the r

Overman was a descenda Major James Smith who fought the American forces in the R tion. In 1878 he married Ma Merrimon, daughter of United Senator A. S. Merrimon. He w many years a member of the b of Trinity College, and of the versity of North Carolina, bo which institutions honored him the LL. D. degree.

DRAFTED LOCAL BILL

One of Senator Overman's la ficial acts before his illness w draft a bill providing that the ury department deed to Ashevi fee simple the building and s the postoffice on Haywood and Patton Avenue. This bill introduced in the house a few ago by Representative George Pritchard, of Asheville. It pr that the building and site are used by the city for municipal poses only, such as a park or ational center

Senator Overman had visit Asheville frequently and was ...ly friendly to this city and tion

C. OF C. MEETIN SET ON TUESD

New Board To Be Nam Within Week; Mee Early In Year

Directors of the Chamber of ...merce yesterday postponed ...s meeting of the year until ...uesday night at the George Va... hotel The meeting was to been held last night at the ...derbilt but a number of the ...ers of the board were out of ...city

Ballots for the election of the board are coming in at the Cha... of Commerce The new board be named within the next week ...e first meeting will be the se... Tuesday in January

Important matters of the Cha... of Commerce including plans next year will be discussed Tuesday evening The reports of various departments for the past will be given and plans for the ...rtising and future policies of organization will be brought up members of the board have urged to attend the meeting

STUDENTS AT HI HEAR DR. STYL

Expert Tells Of Sh And Care Necessary For Healthy Feet

DOLLAR SALE

ENTIRE STOCK OF WINTER COATS

ECTED MAYOR OF ASHEVILL

l By Death In National Capital

SALES REACH TOTAL

And 250
unds Sold day

RICE IS HUNDRED

Burley At Here Is l Up

1 250,000 pounds
o was sold yes-
ond day of the
, the price av-pound. The sterday was $50
total amount of
ck was approxi-

ame in yester-again, but B. B.
the warehouse,
the buyers will
the growers by e prizing rooms
y and night and moving rapidly
the closing of les in the new n Valley street.
ed Up mich slowed up
ay had dwindled 00 growers and n the develop-here. The aucnd buyers were and about 100,- s sold yesterday
Mr. Saunders are holding up ything, getting

re rejecting the brought and r holding for a

To Page Two)

IN SUIT EMPHIS R RESET

nes Action
eivership

Asheville's New Mayor And Commissioners

MAYOR HARRY W. PLUMMER

HARRY L. PARKER

JOHN A. GOODE

The initial meeting of Asheville's new board of city commissioners will be held at the city hall at 9 o'clock this morning. Mayor Harry W. Plummer, elected by his associates at a meeting last night, will preside. Commissioner Harry L. Parker has been placed in charge of public works. Commissioner John A. Goode will have supervision over the department of public safety.

SMALL INCREASE IN PARCELS POST RATES ADVOCATED

Tilson Cites Needs For 5 Per Cent Advance In Charges

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11. (AP)—Citing a parcels post deficit of $15,570,730 last year, Assistant Postmaster General Tilton today urged adoption of the 5 per cent increase in parcels post rates proposed by Postmaster General Brown to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

He issued a statement saying the postoffice department was helpless to deal with the deficit.

Major expenditures of the postal service, he said, are almost entirely beyond control of the postoffice department, the basis of expenditures being fixed by Congress and salaries by law.

Tilton held an Interstate Commerce Commission order of July 10, 1928, granting increased compensation to railroads for transporting mail, responsible for a $8,500,000 per annum increase in cost of handling parcels post.

Add To Loss

He said salary increases and postal reductions by acts of Congress added $13,000,000 to the loss.

Intensive studies in economies, he declared, had shown that "even the

Roberts Reviews Work, Promises Cooperation

Will Await Future For Vindication Of His Acts In Office

Asserting that he is content to await the future for vindication of his service as mayor of Asheville, Gallatin Roberts issued a statement immediately after his resignation as the city's chief executive last night.

"My associates in office, Commissioners Bartlett and Rogers, have seen fit to resign their official respective positions, and I do not desire to remain any longer in the City Hall," said Mr. Roberts. "I have made this decision in the interest of the welfare of the City of Asheville, which I so dearly love, and have subordinated any of my personal wishes to those, in the interest of the city.

Financial Situation

"I desire before leaving office to call the attention of the people of the City to a brief comparison of the financial situation of the City of Asheville as it exists today with that of my former administration.

"I was Mayor of this City from May, 1919, to May 31, 1926. At the expiration of my former term of office the total debt of the City for all purposes was $4,475,700. I was again elected Mayor of the City of Asheville four years later, and when I assumed office at the beginning of my present term the indebtedness of the City was $[illegible]. The present indebtedness of the City of Asheville, including its revenue anticipation notes is $[illegible]. Ample vouch-

WAGES OF 'NECKING' IS PUBLICITY AT MICHIGAN SCHOOL

BIG RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 11. (AP) The wages of being caught "necking" at Ferris Institute here is to be pitiless publicity.

President Wells D. White announced today that the names of all co-eds caught in "petting postures" with boys hereafter will be announced at public assemblies.

"Students," he explained, "are in school primarily to study academic courses and not to experiment with the cosmic urge."

SECURITIES FIRM RECEIVERSHIP TO BE ARGUED TODAY

Suit Will Be Heard In Shelby Before Judge F. Yates Webb

J. A. GOOD IS SELECTE MEMBER O COMMISSIO

Roberts Resigns Post Chief Executive O City Thursday

NEW OFFICIALS T HOLD MEET TOD

Commissioners Addr Policemen, Firemen After Induction

Harry W. Plummer bec mayor of Asheville last ni succeeding Gallatin Rob resigned.

John A. Goode, Ashe druggist and business man, Harry L. Parker, civil engi and former manager of the W. Grove properties in W ern North Carolina, are city's new commissioners. T succeed L. B. Rogers and C Bartlett, whose resigna had been tendered and cepted.

Asheville's new board of com sioners will meet in initial ses at 9 o'clock this morning at the hall.

Rapid Developments

Developments in Asheville's nicipal situation came rapidly yesterday.

Mr. Plummer, who had taken oath of commissioner of public ty yesterday morning, assumed post during the afternoon, and A. Goode, elected by Mayor Plummer and Parker, was sworn Mayor Gallatin Roberts [illegible] [illegible] Mr. Goode [illegible] Mayor [illegible] [illegible] Mr. Goode [illegible] name of Mr. [illegible] and Mr. Parker [illegible] Mr. Goode, Mr. [illegible] congratulated the new [illegible] and extended to the new [illegible] The oath of [illegible] administered to Mr. [illegible] [illegible]

(Please Turn To Page Two)

HARRY L. PARKER

JOHN A. GOODE

...'s new board of city commissioners will be held at the city hall at 9 o'clock ...mmer, elected by his associates at a meeting last night, will preside. Com... placed in charge of public works. Commissioner John A. Goode will have ... public safety.

Roberts Reviews Work, Promises Cooperation

WAGES OF 'NECKING' IS PUBLICITY AT MICHIGAN SCHOOL

BIG RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 11. (AP) The wages of being caught "necking" at Ferris Institute here is to be pitiless publicity.

President Wells D. White announced today that the names of all co-eds caught in "petting postures" with boys hereafter will be announced at public assemblies.

"Students," he explained, "are in school primarily to study academic courses and not to experiment with the cosmic urge."

SECURITIES FIRM RECEIVERSHIP TO BE ARGUED TODAY

Suit Will Be Heard In Shelby Before Judge E. Yates Webb

Hearing of the application of A. E. Kuesterer and company, Wilmington, Del., and stockholders, for the Central Securities company, of Asheville, to be placed in the hands of receivers will be conducted today in Shelby before Judge E. Yates Webb, of the United States District court for the western district of North Carolina.

It has been announced that the Central Securities company will not resist the application. Alfred S. Barnard, Asheville attorney for the stockholders, secured the official papers from the office of J. Y. Jordan, Sr., clerk of federal court, yesterday in preparation for the hearing in Shelby this morning.

The application of A. E. Kuesterer and company in behalf of the plaintiff company and the stockholders was filed in federal court in Wilmington December 8, but the action has already been started here through Mr. Barnard, following the failure of the Central Bank and Trust Company to open on November 26 and the American National November 21.

To Prevent Dissipation

The receivership is requested in the order to "prevent further dissipation and diversion" of the company's property and assets. The suit also asks that the Central Bank and Trust company, as trustee, of which the bill states the officers are the same as the defendant company, be "restrained and enjoined from diverting, misappropriating or interfering with any of the property or funds of the company or any of the trust funds held in the bank as security for loans of the defendant company."

—(Please Turn To Page Four)

Will Await Future For Vindication Of His Acts In Office

Asserting that he is content to await the future for vindication of his service as mayor of Asheville, Gallatin Roberts issued a statement immediately after his resignation as the city's chief executive last night.

"My associates in office, Commissioners Bartlett and Rogers, have seen fit to resign their official respective positions, and I do not desire to remain any longer in the City Hall," said Mr. Roberts. "I have made this decision in the interest of the welfare of the City of Asheville, which I so dearly love, and have subordinated any of my personal wishes to those, in the interest of the city.

Financial Situation

"I desire before leaving office to call the attention of the people of the City to a brief comparison of the financial situation of the City of Asheville as it exists today with that of my former administration.

"I was Mayor of this City from May, 1919, to May 31, 1926. At the expiration of my former term of office the total debt of the City for all purposes was $4,475,700. I was again elected Mayor of the City of Asheville four years later, and when I assumed office at the beginning of my present term the indebtedness of the City was $20,042,000. The present indebtedness of the City of Asheville, including its revenue anticipation notes is $22,256,100. Ample uncollected revenues are available to cover all of these outstanding Revenue Anticipation Notes.

Not Increased Debt

"During our administration we have not increased the debt of the City of Asheville, except to pay for improvements under contract or under the process of construction at the time we assumed office, but on the other hand, we have actually paid off and retired $1,116,200 of the bonded debt of the City.

"We have labored, together for three and a half years—worked hard, saved, and used every possible effort to reduce expenses. We voluntarily reduced our own salaries twenty per cent as fixed by law. We regretted to reduce the salaries of our loyal employes, but it was necessary, and they quickly saw the situation and joined in the necessary program.

"I have sacrificed my life in trying to save for the city more than $2,000,000 of the people's money in the Central Bank. This money was in the bank the day I went in office nearly four years ago. I could have wrecked that bank any day in the last two or three years, but we were always assured that the bank was amply solvent and that conditions would improve, and we would be able to greatly reduce the city's business. We were not able to get bonds with-

—(Please Turn To Page Four)

LONGWORTH SURE HOUSE WILL CUT DROUGHT FUNDS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11. (AP)—Confident that the house will approve a deficiency measure, minus $25,000,000 of the $45,000,000 amount proposed by the senate appropriations committee, Speaker Longworth today [illegible]

NEW OFFICIALS TO HOLD MEET TODAY

Commissioners Address Policemen, Firemen After Induction

Harry W. Plummer became mayor of Asheville last night, succeeding Gallatin Roberts, resigned.

John A. Goode, Asheville druggist and business man, and Harry L. Parker, civil engineer and former manager of the E. W. Grove properties in Western North Carolina, are the city's new commissioners. They succeed L. B. Rogers and C. H. Bartlett, whose resignations had been tendered and accepted.

Asheville's new board of commissioners will hold its initial meeting at 9 o'clock this morning at the city hall.

Rapid Developments

Developments in Asheville's municipal situation came rapidly late yesterday.

Mr. Plummer, who had taken the oath of commissioner of public safety yesterday morning, resigned his post during the afternoon and John A. Goode, elected by Messrs. Plummer and Parker, was sworn in by Mayor Gallatin Roberts as commissioner of public safety. [illegible] upon Mr. Goode's [illegible] Mayor Roberts [illegible] Plummer was [illegible] to Commissioner [illegible] [illegible] Mr. Goode had been sworn in, the name of Mr. Plummer was [illegible] by Mr. Parker and was [illegible] Mr. Goode. Mr. Roberts then congratulated the new commissioner and pledged his fullest cooperation to the new administration.

The oath of mayor was administered to Mr. Plummer last night.

—(Please Turn To Page Eight)

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Casey loses in latest effort to escape chair. —Page 1

Senate votes relief appropriation of $15 million. —Page 1

Small increase in parcel post rates advocated. —Page 1

Woman prosecutor finds city police innocent men. —Page 1

Conferees will renew attempts at final trust. —Page 1

Hearing in suit against [illegible] publisher rests. —Page 1

Martial law invoked in Cuba; Machado may quit. —Page 1

Hoover testimonial draws [illegible] of Harrison. —Page 1

Congress leaders agree World Court cannot be acted on. —Page 2

Boys and girls leave capital today ready for bitter fight. —Page 10

German cancer foetid growing of war talkie. —Page 11

Failure of pivotal stocks to act now lows checks decline. —Page 14

* * *

STATE

Senator Lee Overman claimed by death in Washington. —Page 1

Office of Governor is [illegible] Gardner declares. —Page 1

[illegible] gather at Mars Hill for meeting monday. —Page 1

Sam Morrell brings Frank [illegible] from testifying before committee. —Page 1

Committee hearing in gang trial goes on tomorrow. —Page 11

Cotton growers warned of [illegible] acreage is cut. —Page 11

Dr. Wilbur C. Smith, author and preacher, sale of work. —Page 11

[illegible] of [illegible] Wake Independent in Wake county. —Page 11

[illegible] —Page 11

[illegible] —Page 11

[illegible] —Page 11

DNER
INS SILENT

nd Group Is o Cooperate
ctively

[illegible] (AP)—Asheville county will have to [illegible] than the state commission for aid in [illegible] today executive secretary Fund Commission, [illegible] "within its power [illegible] to co-operate [illegible] way, but in the [illegible] is nothing it [illegible]

al Power

said "There is no which the commis- the aid requested." Asheville and Bun- details appeared be- Fund Commission The need of more most present emer- A loan to cover proposed.

ker tonight had no be on the Sinking s statement, which nking Fund Com- ful consideration n of the Asheville ept from the Sink- that there was no hich it could render

ub Purpose

later stated that the as not "created for and that the full f the State of North and would be pren is fully conscious nd Buncombe coun- within its power is to co-operate in , but in the present thing it can do."

RS OF BURIED
ONE GRAVE

, Dec. 8 (AP)—One mountains, seven ere, today received t members of one s of an explosion stroyed their home Saturday. The road too rough for auto- the dead, a father four children, were al resting place in n.

were Leonard Ar- l worker, the hus- urned to death on house after carrying e children into the a Arnold, 27, the nday in a hospital d the four Arnold a babe in arms. r of the family, y near death in a al while her par- and sisters were

MAGE
SMISSED
TON COURT

, 8 (AP)—Damage

Resigns Post

C. M. BARTLETT

MERCHANTS' BODY AND PHYSICIANS ASK RESIGNATIONS

Two Organizations Take Action To Secure New City Regime

Criticism directed at the Asheville city commissioners since the closing of the Central Bank and Trust Company with $4,683,118 on deposit, took a definite turn yesterday and last night when directors of the Asheville Merchants association and members of the Buncombe County Medical society passed resolutions requesting them to resign.

The actions of the merchants came after a meeting of several hours which started yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The medical society resolutions were adopted at a meeting held in the council chamber of the city hall last night.

Petitions Circulated

During the day yesterday petitions were circulated calling a mass meeting of citizens at the City Auditorium for tonight to consider the affairs of the city but at a meeting of those who had been instrumental in circulating these petitions and of a numerous body of leading citizens it was decided to postpone the proposed mass meeting for the present.

The resolutions adopted by the directors of the merchants' association [illegible] ing that he was leaving the employ of the city which he had served for the past 30 years "without malice and without fear."

"My earnest desire," he said, "is for us citizens of Asheville to get together, collectedly and coolly, and quietly work out a solution to this situation."

Mr. Bartlett's resignation came after a rather hectic day of development which ranged from refusal of the State sinking fund commission to loan money to Asheville and Buncombe county "in the present status" to passage of resolutions by the directors of the Asheville Merchants association and the Buncombe County Medical society demanding resignations of the city officials.

Day's Developments

The principal developments listed for the day were:

1. Commissioner C. Manly Bartlett announced his resignation as a member of the city of Asheville commission.

2. Sinking Fund Commission announced in Raleigh that the request for a loan to Asheville and Buncombe county was refused.

3. Asheville Merchants association directors adopted resolutions asking city commissioners to resign.

4. Stanley H. Wright is named to act temporarily in the office made vacant by the acceptance of Commissioner L. B. Rogers' resignation yesterday morning.

5. G. N. Henson, member of the state banking department placed in charge of liquidating closed banks arrives and names Johnson, Smathers and Rollins as attorneys.

6. Judge Cameron F. MacRae rules that John Mitchell, chief state bank examiner, has right to transact business of closed Central Bank and Trust company.

7. Grand jury investigation of causes leading to bank crash expected to follow charge of Judge Pender A. McElroy in Superior court.

8. Association formed to protect interests of depositors scheduled to open offices in Grove Arcade building today.

9. Mass meeting announced for tonight at city auditorium is indefinitely postponed.

In resigning his post with the city, Commissioner Bartlett issued the following statement:

Bartlett's Statement

"For the past 30 years I have served the city of Asheville, served I believe, to the best of my ability, to which I think my friends, and some of my enemies will readily attest. It is with the view of serving the city

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Senate Democrats fling Hoover's relief program. —Page 1.

Dry leaders vote down proposal of referendum. —Page 1.

Senate accepts Doak for labor secretary post. —Page 1.

Soviets commute death sentences of five plotters. —Page 1.

Hoover relief budget scored by Senate Democrats. —Page 1.

Aged recluse kills two during wild rampage. —Page 1.

Lindsey to be tried in church disorder Friday. —Page 2.

Hoover asks 150 millions for Federal farm board projects. —Page 2.

Troops guard Batavia school after disorders. —Page 2.

Senator Laval trying to organize new French cabinet. —Page 3.

Condemned killer tries to save mother in trial. —Page 3.

Heavy liquidation in rails sends stock list downward. —Page 14.

* * *

IAL AID
MISSION

Can Do In tus, Body
res

NER
'S SILENT

Group Is Cooperate
tively

(AP)—Asheville
ity will have to s than the state
ission for aid in
ial crisis.
nt, issued today
ecutive secretary
nd Commission,
"within its pow-
ng to co-operate
ay, but in the is nothing it

Power
id "there is no
ch the commis-
s aid requested."
heville and Bun-ls appeared be-
and Commission need of more
t present emer-
A loan to cover
roposed.
tonight had no
on the Sinking tatement, which

ng Fund Com-ul consideration of the Asheville from the Sink-at there was no
it could render

Purpose
r stated that the not "created" for d that the full
he State of North
d would be pre-

s fully conscious Buncombe coun-hin its power is o co-operate in ut in the present
ng it can do."

OF BURIED
E GRAVE

ec. 8. (AP)—One ountains, seven today received embers of one of an explosion

...OUCLO STATEMENT AFTER CONFERENCE WITH FRIENDS

Declares Community Should Unite To Solve Problems Created By Recent Developments In Municipal Situation

C. Henry Bartlett, commissioner of public safety of the city of Asheville, announced his resignation last night, declaring that he was leaving the employ of the city which he had served for the past 30 years "without malice and without fear."

"My earnest desire," he said, "is for us citizens of Asheville to get together, collectedly and coolly, and quietly work out a solution to this situation."

Resigns Post

C. H. BARTLETT

Mr. Bartlett's resignation came after a rather hectic day of development which ranged from refusal of the State sinking fund commission to loan money to Asheville and Buncombe county "in the present status" to passage of resolutions by the directors of the Asheville Merchants association and the Buncombe County Medical society demanding resignations of the city officials.

Day's Developments

The principal developments listed for the day were:

1. Commissioner C. Henry Bartlett announced his resignation as a member of the city of Asheville commission.
2. Sinking Fund Commission announced in Raleigh that the request for a loan to Asheville and Buncombe county was refused.
3. Asheville Merchants association directors adopted resolutions asking city commissioners to resign.
4. Stanley H. Wright is named to act temporarily in the office made vacant by the acceptance of Commissioner L. B. Rogers' resignation yesterday morning.
5. G. N. Henson, member of the state banking department placed in charge of liquidating closed banks arrives and names Johnson, Smathers and Rollins as attorneys.
6. Judge Cameron F. MacRae rules that John Mitchell, chief state bank examiner, has right to transact business of closed Central Bank and Trust company.
7. Grand jury investigation of causes leading to bank crash expected to follow charge of Judge Frank A. Malloy in Buncombe county.
8. Association formed to protect interests of depositors scheduled to open offices in Grove Arcade building today.
9. Mass meeting announced for tonight at city auditorium is indefinitely postponed.

In resigning his post with the city, Commissioner Bartlett issued the following statement:

Bartlett's Statement

"For the past 30 years I have served the city of Asheville, served I believe, to the best of my ability, to which I think my friends, and some of my enemies will readily assent. It is with the view of serving the city

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

MERCHANTS' BODY AND PHYSICIANS ASK RESIGNATIONS

Two Organizations Take Action To Secure New City Regime

Criticism directed at the Asheville

SUMMARY OF NEWS

EARCH OF RECORDS

DEPOSITORS OF CLOSED BANKS WILL ORGANIZE

Protective Association To Be Formed In City On Tuesday

WILL COOPERATE IN LIQUIDATION

Organization's Goal Is Protection Of All Depositors

Formation of the Western North Carolina Depositors' Protective Association to protect the interests of all depositors and to co-operate with the state bank examiners in the liquidation of all banks now closed in this section was announced last night by Robert R. Reynolds, J. M. Horner, Jr., and James MacRae, Asheville attorneys, employed by incorporators of the organization to draft a charter and to map a course for its activities.

Headquarters will be opened Tuesday morning at 28 Page Avenue on the ground floor of the Grove Arcade building at which time a charter is expected to be drafted and sent to Raleigh. All affairs and activities will be directed from the headquarters which will be kept open daily and in charge of a manager.

Affairs of the organization are to be managed by the members through trustees in the form of an advisory board which they themselves will select, it was announced. The organization, when incorporated, will form a nucleus about which an association of depositors in all counties in this section where banks have been closed, will be formed.

Only Depositor Members

Membership will be limited to depositors having funds in one or more of the closed banks, including the Central Bank and Trust Company, its Haywood street branch, and the American National Bank, in Asheville, the Commonwealth Bank and Trust Company, of Black Mountain; the Biltmore-Oteen Bank; the Bank of Leicester; the Polk County Bank and Trust Company at Columbus; the Bank of Murphy; the Citizens Bank of Waynesville; the First Bank and Trust Company, the Citizen National Bank, and the American Bank and Trust Company, of Hendersonville; the Citizens Bank of Bryson City; the Clay County Bank at Hayesville; and the First Bank and Trust Company at Tryon in Polk county. The closed banks also include branches of the First Bank and Trust Company of Hendersonville, located at Saluda and Flat Rock.

The incorporators, who are to be announced early this week, are men interested in the welfare of all depositors and the communities surrounding closed banks, and will func-

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

OPPOSITION TO M'NINCH GROWS

MONEY DEPOSITED TO PAY NOTES VANISHED BEFORE OBLIGATIONS BECAME DUE

Newton M. Anderson, Former County Commission Chairman, Says Bank Notified Him Of Inability To Pay

That $875,000 of Buncombe county money, raised by issuance of tax anticipation notes early in October and deposited in the Central Bank and Trust Company for the express purpose of retiring notes of the county due November 12 and 15, the bank having full notice of the purpose for which the money was to be used, was converted by the bank, without the knowledge or consent of the county officials, to other purposes, was revealed last night.

Representatives of The Asheville Citizen yesterday discovered records of the transaction in the books of the county. Newton M. Anderson, chairman of the former county commission and by virtue of that office county commissioner of finance, was interviewed, and he confirmed the facts. They were further confirmed by auditors of the county who said that the records of the Central Bank and Trust Company show that the money had been credited to the special note account on the books of the bank.

Mr. Anderson, seen at his home last night by reporters, explained in detail the transaction by which the county was left owing $1,000,000 in notes already overdue, and $875,000 in new notes for which it has now only a certificate of deposit in the defunct Central Bank and Trust company to show.

On November 4 county commissioners authorized sale of $875,000 tax anticipation notes with which to pay the $1,000,000 in notes falling due November 12 and 15. The county planned to meet from current revenue an additional $125,000 in notes of the same issue.

Admit Getting Funds

The notes were sold through the Central Bank and Trust company. While the bank apparently received money for the notes a week earlier, L. L. Jenkins, Buncombe county treasurer, was not notified by the bank until October 20 that the funds had been placed to the credit of the county. In a letter dated October 20, 1930, J. Charles Bradford, cashier of the Central Bank and Trust company, informed Mr. Jenkins:

"We are enclosing herewith duplicate deposit slip $875,984.27 covering proceeds of Buncombe county notes sold for your account, $875,000 plus interest. This was credited to your account on October 14, 1930, and the mailing of the credit advice was overlooked. Regretting the oversight, and with best wishes . . ."

The writer added by postcript that "account of expenses in handling this issue will be mailed later," and also that copies of the letter were directed to Mr. Anderson and to N. E. Walker, then county auditor.

Mr. Anderson said he was "repeatedly assured" that the money was being held by the bank in readiness to meet the notes when they came due and he was unaware that things were different until two or possible three days before the notes fell due.

Notifies County

A representative of the bank informed the county commissioners at that time that the bank did not have the money to meet the notes [illegible]

BARTHOU SEEKING TO LINE UP NEW FRENCH CABINET

Former Premier Accepts Difficult Task Of Organization

PARIS, Dec. 6. (AP)—Senator Louis Barthou, once premier of France and a dozen times cabinet minister, tonight was trying to conciliate France's many political parties in an effort to form a cabinet to succeed the defeated Tardieu ministry.

M. Barthou accepted the difficult task of forming a government late today after former Premier Raymond Poincare had refused on account of ill health.

Certain political groups held the belief, however, that President Gaston Doumergue might ask M. Poincare to reconsider and take command if Senator Barthou fails to get enough support.

To Report Today

The latter told the President he would consult friends and political leaders during the night and would return to the Elysee Palace tomor-

THE WEATHER
ASHEVILLE AND VICINITY: Partly cloudy Tuesday.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1868 — ASHEVILLE, N. C., TUESDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 9, 1930 — 14 PAGES — 5c PER COPY

WOE FOR JIGGS!
Are you reading "Bringing up Father" every day? Jiggs and Maggie are having their troubles. Keep up with this popular comic.

COMMISSIONER BARTLETT ANNOUNCES RESIGNATION

Receiver For Central Securities Company Is Asked

DISSIPATION OF PROPERTY IS ALLEGED

Charge Directors Have Fraudulently Used Company Assets

ALLEGE CENTRAL BANK BENEFITED

Hearing At Wilmington, Del., Is Scheduled December 20

WILMINGTON, Del., Dec. 8. (AP) — Application for a receiver for the Central Securities Company, of Asheville, N. C., was filed in United States district court today by A. E. Kuesterer and Company, on behalf of the plaintiff company and other bond holders.

The receiver is requested in order to "prevent further dissipation and diversion" of the company's property and assets. The suit also asks that the Central Bank and Trust Company, of Asheville, N. C., as trustee, which the bill says the officers are the same as the defendant company, be restrained and enjoined from diverting, misappropriating or interfering with any of the property or assets of the company or any of the trust funds held in the bank as se-

Speaker

E. J. Coltrane, of Salisbury, will address a P. T. A. mass meeting at David Millard high school tonight.

COLTRANE TALKS TO P. T. A. MASS MEETING TONIGHT

Salisbury Man To Be Heard At Junior High School

A mass meeting of Asheville school patrons and other citizens, at which E. J. Coltrane, of Salisbury, must

HOOVER RELIEF BUDGET SCORED BY DEMOCRATS

Program Not Adequate, Party Leaders In Senate Say

EARLY ACTION ON MEASURES SOUGHT

Walsh Scores Hoover's Program As Merely 'Drop In Bucket'

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8. (AP)—A Democratic uprising in the senate against President Hoover's unemployment program signalized the reporting today by congressional committees of the first of the emergency measures.

Led by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, a half dozen Democrats took the floor to denounce the administration proposals as a "drop in the bucket" and to demand a Democratic program of greater dimensions even at the price of increased income taxes.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, who joined in the pledge of party leaders for cooperation on relief legislation, listened intently. Already he has broken from the Hoover program on drought relief and tomorrow the senate will take up the $60,000,000 drought bill reported today by Chairman McNary, of the agriculture committee. The administration urged $25,000,000 for this.

Walsh compared the Hoover ad-

Hope For The City

(EDITORIAL)

The biggest development yesterday in the grave crisis which confronts the City of Asheville, was the decision of Commissioner of Public Safety Bartlett to resign.

Mr. Bartlett, like Commissioner Rogers, has made the wise decision. We can all appreciate that it was a hard decision for him to make. He has been in the service of the city for a long time. He has made hosts of friends in the course of that service and he quits it now with very little of worldly goods. There can be, and there will be, deep sympathy with him in the circumstances that have brought about his retirement.

In the decision which he has made to resign he has been guided, as he says, by the advice of his true friends, and guided also, we are sure, by his own earnest desire to eliminate himself when he has been convinced that it was in the public interest for him to make way for some other man who can better serve the community in its serious emergency.

It was the same vital consideration which actuated Commissioner Rogers to hand in his resignation on Saturday. We are convinced that Mayor Roberts will come quickly to the same conclusion which his two colleagues have already reached.

With a new City Commission commanding the full confidence of the people and of the financial interests with which the city is compelled to deal immediately if it is to avoid disaster, there will be hope for Asheville.

Soviets Commute Death Sentences Of Plotters

12 KILLED WHEN CARGO SHIP SUNK IN WAR EXPLODES

Prison Terms Of Three Also Lightened By High Council

MOSCOW, Dec. 8. (AP)—Five prominent engineers, who at midnight heard a fateful verdict of four su-

STATE REFUSES FINANCIAL AID OF COMMISSION

Nothing It Can Do In Present Status, Body Declares

GOV. GARDNER REMAINS SILENT

Sinking Fund Group Is Willing To Cooperate Constructively

RALEIGH, Dec. 8. (AP)—Asheville and Buncombe county will have to look to other sources than the state Sinking Fund Commission for aid in their present financial crisis.

A formal statement, issued today by Wright Dixon, executive secretary of the Sinking Fund Commission, said the commission "within its power is ready and willing to co-operate in a constructive way, but in the present status there is nothing it can do."

No Legal Power

The statement said "there is no legal power by which the commission could render the aid requested."

A delegation of Asheville and Buncombe county officials appeared before the Sinking Fund Commission last Thursday. The need of more than $600,000 to meet present emergencies was cited. A loan to cover this amount was proposed.

Governor Gardner tonight had no comment to make on the Sinking Fund Commission's statement, which

PUBLIC SAFETY DIRECTOR ISSUES STATEMENT AFTER CONFERENCE WITH FRIENDS

Declares Community Should Unite To Solve Problems Created By Recent Developments In Municipal Situation

C. Henry Bartlett, commissioner of public safety of the city of Asheville, announced his resignation last night, declaring that he was leaving the employ of the city which he had served for the past 30 years "without malice and without fear."

"My earnest desire," he said, "is for us citizens of Asheville to get together, collectedly and coolly, and quietly work out a solution to this situation."

Resigns Post

Mr. Bartlett's resignation came after a rather hectic day of development which ranged from refusal of the State sinking fund commission to loan money to Asheville and Buncombe county "in the present status" to passage of resolutions by the directors of the Asheville Kiwanis association and the Buncombe County Medical society demanding resignations of the city officials.

Day's Developments

The principal developments today for the day were:

1. Commissioner C. Henry Bartlett announced his resignation as a member of the city of Asheville commission.

2. Sinking Fund Commission was informed in Raleigh that the state aid for Asheville and Buncombe county was refused.

3. Asheville Kiwanis club directors adopted resolutions demanding city commissioners be removed.

4. Stanley R. Walker, president of the local medical society, in the office vacated by the resignation of Commissioner Bartlett.

5. C. H. Bennett, president of the Buncombe County Medical society, in the office vacated by the resignation of Commissioner Rogers.

CITY COMMISSIONER L. B. ROGERS RESIGNS HIS POST

THE WEATHER
ASHEVILLE AND VICINITY: Cloudy and slightly colder Sunday.

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1868 — ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 7, 1930 — 32 PAGES — 5c DAILY 10c SUNDAY

SECTION A — 8 PAGES

MISAPPROPRIATION OF $875,000 OF COUNTY FUNDS BY CENTRAL BANK REVEALED IN SEARCH OF RECORDS

ROBERTS, BARTLETT WILL NOT RESIGN; STATEMENT ISSUED LATE SATURDAY

Mayor And Commissioner Declare They "Despise Impudence And Cowardice Of Demand" Made Upon Them

L. B. Rogers, commissioner of public works for the city of Asheville, yesterday afternoon tendered his resignation to the two remaining members of the board stating that he desired to do "what is best for my community under the feelings which now exist."

At the same time Mayor Gallatin Roberts and C. H. Bartlett, commissioner of public safety, issued a joint statement in which they flatly refused to resign saying "we despise alike the impudence and cowardice of the demand that has been made upon us."

These developments followed the revelation yesterday morning that the commissioners had been warned of the peril in dealing with the Central Bank and Trust company in a special audit report made by George G. Scott and company, auditors of municipal finances here for the past 15 years, which said November 15 "it is possible to be charged that the commissioners have perverted the credit of the city to the gain and advantage of a private institution."

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett, in their statement refusing to resign, said:

"To THE People of Asheville:

"The undersigned Commissioners of the City of Asheville choose this method of response to the demand of a conference of local "bankers, financiers and business men" of undisclosed composition, notification of which comes to us by newspaper publications, that we forthwith resign our several memberships in the governing body of the City of Asheville, to the end, we presume to infer, that the government of said City be forthwith taken over by said conference.

Categorical Refusal

The offices which we hold, with the public trusts which they impose, were bestowed upon us by the votes of the qualified electors of this City duly cast in the last municipal election, and we are competently advised that we have neither the legal duty nor the moral right voluntarily to resign these several trusts to any lesser or other authority than that under which we hold. Therefore, there can be no other answer to the extraordinary demand of this anonymous would-be municipal dictatorship than a categorical refusal.

"We have neither apologies nor regrets for any of our acts as Commissioners of the City of Asheville. Particularly, we have neither apology nor regret for the efforts which we, in full collaboration with the govern-

DICTATORSHIP TO SOLVE BRITAIN'S PROBLEMS URGED

Young Laborites Demand Emergency Changes In Government

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Eighteen prominent young Laborites tonight defied the MacDonald government by issuing a manifesto which calls for a semi-dictatorship to solve the British industrial crisis and also for postponement of the repayment of war debts.

The dictatorship plan of the eighteen, who are led by Sir Oswald Mosley, would set up five dictators instead of one, these men to act as a group to deal with the economic situation.

Interest was aroused by the war

DEVILS BATTLE TAR HEELS TO SCORELESS TIE

Bitterly Fighting Teams Are Unable To Cross Goal Lines

JIMMY DEHART'S DUKE REGIME ENDS

More Than 15,000 Brave Cold Drizzle To See Hectic Struggle

KENAN STADIUM, CHAPEL HILL, Dec. 6. (AP)—Two bitterly fighting football teams struggled vainly for a "break" this afternoon as the University of North Carolina and Duke University brought their 1930 seasons to a close, but a sea of mud and a steady rain stopped every real scoring threat and the game ended 0 to 0.

The game today was the last for a Jimmy DeHart football team at Duke. The Blue Devil mentor will be succeeded next year by Wallace Wade of Alabama.

Seen As Champions

By reason of the tie Duke, undefeated in the State, will be generally recognized as state champions. The Devils beat N. C. State and Davidson and were tied by Wake Forest. Carolina lost to Davidson and beat State and Wake Forest. Wake Forest lost to Carolina and beat Davidson and State.

Duke's only loss of the year was the opening game, won by South Carolina. Today's knotted count and the Wake Forest 13-13 game marred an otherwise clean slate of ten successive games, including victories over Navy, Villanova and Kentucky.

The gridiron was already soaked by a night's drizzle when a steady downpour started one hour before game time, and before the end of the contest almost as much of the field was covered by deep water puddles as showed turf.

15,000 See Game

A crowd somewhere in the neighborhood of 15,000 to 18,000 stood, sat and soaked in the rain and the main color of the contest was lent by the vari-colored slickers, coats, oil cloths, tarpaulins and umbrellas used by the crowd in an effort to keep dry.

Duke, given an edge over the Tar Heels on their previous record, made nine first downs to five for the Heels but the weather and the alert Carolina tacklers kept Bill Murray and Kid Brewer, Duke's star backs, to short gains on nearly every occasion.

Fumbles were more the order of the day than spectacular plays as the

They Must Resign

(EDITORIAL)

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner of Public Safety Bartlett say that they will not resign

They must resign.

They say that they "have neither the legal duty nor the moral right" to resign.

We say that they have the legal right and the moral duty to resign.

They talk about the trusts imposed in them by the people of Asheville who elected them to the offices which they now hold.

We say that they have betrayed these trusts and in so doing have brought Asheville to the verge of irreparable ruin.

They say that the demand for their resignation is anonymous.

This newspaper on its own responsibility and on behalf of the people of this community makes this demand as openly and as publicly as it can be made.

They say that they will do everything within their power to avoid a default in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

We say that there is nobody with money who will now lend money to the city of Asheville as long as the administration of its affairs remains in the hands of men who are now known to have administered those affairs with gross incompetency and in rank violation of both their legal and moral obligations as public officials.

Commissioner Rogers has announced his resignation. He has taken the wise course. He has taken the course which he should have taken as a man who sees the grave dangers to which this city is exposed.

This newspaper in spite of all that has happened has credited Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett with having the interests of the people of Asheville at heart. It has believed that the things which they did were done as the result of tragic blundering and without a due realization on their part of the enormity of their offending.

They stand indicted before the people of Asheville, nevertheless, for having turned over millions of dollars of the public funds to the Central Bank & Trust Company without any proper protection of these funds and without letting the public know what they were doing.

Their transactions were cloaked in secrecy. There was no entry upon the books which might have enlightened the people as to the astounding generosity of the commissioners in taking their money in this wholesale fashion for the benefit of an institution which they knew to be unsound and whose practices they knew, none better, to be corrupt.

If the auditors have stated the facts correctly, they were not only violating all moral principles when they did

DEPOSITORS OF CLOSED BANKS WILL ORGANIZE

Protective Association To Be Formed In City On Tuesday

WILL COOPERATE IN LIQUIDATION

Organization's Goal Is Protection Of All Depositors

Formation of the Western North Carolina Depositors' Protective Association to protect the interests of all depositors and to co-operate with the state bank examiners in the liquidation of all banks now closed in this section was announced last night by Robert R. Reynolds, J. M. Horner, Jr., and James MacRae, Asheville attorneys, employed by incorporators of the organization to draft a charter and to map a course for its activities.

Headquarters will be opened Tuesday morning at 26 Page Avenue on the ground floor of the Grove Arcade building at which time a charter is expected to be drafted and sent to Raleigh. All affairs and activities will be directed from the headquarters which will be kept open daily and in charge of a manager.

Affairs of the organization are to be managed by the members through trustees in the form of an advisory board which they themselves will select, it was announced. The organization, when incorporated, will form a nucleus about which an association of depositors in all counties in this section where banks have been closed, will be formed.

Only Depositor Members

Membership will be limited to depositors having funds in one or more of the closed banks, including the Central Bank and Trust Company, its Haywood street branch, and the American National Bank, in Asheville, the Commonwealth Bank and Trust Company, of Black Mountain; the Biltmore-Oteen Bank; the Bank of Leicester; the Polk County Bank and Trust Company at Columbus; the Bank of Murphy; the Citizens Bank of Waynesville; the First Bank and Trust Company, the Citizen National Bank, and the American Bank and Trust Company, of Hendersonville; the Citizens Bank of Bryson City; the Clay County Bank at Hayesville; and the First Bank and Trust Company at Tryon in Polk county. The closed banks also include branches of the First Bank and Trust Company of Hendersonville, located at Saluda

MONEY DEPOSITED TO PAY NOTES VANISHED BEFORE OBLIGATIONS BECAME DUE

Newton M. Anderson, Former County Commission Chairman, Says Bank Notified Him Of Inability To Pay

That $875,000 of Buncombe county money, raised by issuance of tax anticipation notes early in October and deposited in the Central Bank and Trust Company for the express purpose of retiring notes of the county due November 12 and 15, the bank having full notice of the purpose for which the money was to be used, was converted by the bank, without the knowledge or consent of the county officials, to other purposes, was revealed last night.

Representatives of The Asheville Citizen yesterday discovered records of the transaction in the books of the county. Newton M. Anderson, chairman of the former county commission and by virtue of that office county commissioner of finance, was interviewed, and he confirmed the facts. They were further confirmed by auditors of the county who said that the records of the Central Bank and Trust Company show that the money had been credited to the special note account on the books of the bank.

Mr. Anderson, seen at his home last night, by reporters explained in detail the transaction by which the county was left owing $1,000,000 in notes already overdue, and $875,000 in new notes for which it has now only a certificate of deposit in the defunct Central Bank and Trust company to show.

On November 5 [illegible] notes were sold through the Central Bank and Trust company, [illegible] the bank apparently received money for the notes. [illegible] L. L. Jenkins, Buncombe county treasurer, was not notified by the bank until October 30 that the funds had been placed to the credit of the county. In a letter dated October 30, 1930, J. Charles Bradford, cashier of the Central Bank and Trust company, informed Mr. Jenkins:

"We are enclosing herewith duplicate deposit slip $875,000.57 covering proceeds of Buncombe county notes sold for your account, $875,000 plus interest. This was credited to your account on October 16, 1930, and the mailing of the credit advice was overlooked. Regretting the oversight and with best wishes [illegible]

BARTHOU SEEKING TO LINE UP NEW FRENCH CABINET

Former Premier Accepts Difficult Task Of Organization

PARIS, Dec. 6. (AP)—Senator Louis Barthou, once premier of France and a dozen times cabinet minister, tonight was trying to conciliate France's many political parties in an effort to form a cabinet to suc-

[illegible] morning when Moore, the last defense witness, will take the stand if considered able to testify.

Several seeming contradictions popped out during cross examination of Rector. He said that Willis had not blocked his appointment to a position of state constable without pay, but later identified a letter purported to have been written by him to Governor McLeod charging Willis with such an action.

The ex-officer testified that he merely knew J. Monroe Peake, Jr., of Columbia, and that he was positive he had never had correspondence with him. However, he admitted that a letter written on Rector's official stationery to Peake, bearing Rector's name, had apparently been signed by him. He would not identify the writing as that of his stenographer.

Other testimony hinged about his contacts with Ed Cuffy, negro, who testified that Rector had attempted to hire him to kill Sheriff Willis. Rector said that testimony that he plotted Willis' death was a "fabrication."

Other Contacts

On direct examination he stated that both Toy and Ollie Garrett, others, who testified for the state, had informed him several weeks ago that Sheriff Cliff H. Bramlett of Greenville County and others were trying to get him to "swear lies" during his trial. Several witnesses for Moore were heard during the morning in the defense's attempt to establish an alibi for the former deputy.

Several rebuttal witnesses are expected to be called by the state after Moore's testimony, if it is made then, the case likely will not reach the jury until Tuesday or Wednesday.

Miss Laura T. Wall, 62, Is Called By Death

(Special to Citizen-Times)

MARION, Dec. 6.—After having been bedfast for six months and in failing health for the past five years, Miss Laura T. Wall, 62, died this morning at the home of her brother, Augustus Wall, near the Marion airport.

The funeral services will be conducted in Burke county Monday morning at 11 o'clock by the Rev. F. H. Justice, of Marion. Interment will be in the Oak Hill cemetery.

She leaves five brothers, Augustus, William, Thomas and Oscar Wall, of Marion, and Earl Wall, of Elizabethton, Tenn.; two sisters, Mrs. Anna Clark, of Valdese, and Mrs. E. T. Burgin, of Old Fort.

Beauty Was An Art, Now It Is A Science

MANILA, P. I. (AP)—The invention of a device to measure beauty is claimed by Jose V. Soriano, student in the University of the Philippines.

The machine consists of a circle divided into more than 20 parts and angles in which the beauty of the girl one can be mathematically determined for purposes of comparison.

The girl is viewed from different angles and her score is the total of the grades taken from the various angles.

The highest grade that can be made is 2,000 points and the lowest 450 points.

$1,346,727.72; American National Bank, $235,876.26; Bank of West Asheville, $57,190.74; Biltmore-Oteen Bank, $124,181.07; Farmers and Traders Bank of Weaverville, $43,287.52; Southern State Bank, $41,745.85; National Bank of Commerce, $128,909.45; Swannanoa Bank and Trust Company, $36,174.41, and Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, $193,363.71.

Mr. Anderson explained that he and members of the county commission had been repeatedly warned that to check heavily against banks at which funds were already on deposit when the commission took office would cause failures, and added that the effects of action by the commission which would cause collapse of banks, had been pointed out to its members.

Original Deposits

He showed that when he took office December 3, 1928, the county had on deposit at the various banks $2,340,450, secured by collateral with face value fixed at $1,761,625. He declared that by slow process, the county commission, hoping to avoid causing failure of any bank, had lowered this deposit to $2,207,556.73 until issuance of the tax anticipation notes October 4 was authorized for the expressed purpose of retiring notes given near the beginning of the fiscal year in anticipation of taxes for operating expenses. He declared that if the $875,000 had been applied as the commission intended and directed that the money be used, his commission would have left office with smaller amounts on deposit than were on deposit when the commission began its term of service.

"There was never a time when we could take the money from the bank without causing it to fail," Mr. Anderson declared. "We were advised of the situation by a number of business men and were warned time and again against taking any action which would cause the banks to collapse. We didn't want to break any banks and we hoped all along that we could slowly work out the problem so that banks would be able to continue in business, so that people of the city and county would not suffer any loss, and so that the county would eventually be able to recover all funds on deposit."

He said he and his commission considered carefully effects a bank collapse would have on all parties concerned and decided against any move which would force any financial institution to the wall. He pointed out that deposits totalling in the neighborhood of $1,700,000 had been withdrawn from the Central Bank and Trust company before it closed, and added that "while all people did not benefit from the county commission's forbearance in the matter, there was a considerable number who did."

Criticizes Bank Examiner

Mr. Anderson criticized the state banking department for alleged laxity in handling affairs of the Central Bank and Trust company.

"Something ought to be said in this matter about the state bank examiners in this connection," said Mr. Anderson. "The condition of the bank was examined a number of times in the past two years, as were the conditions of all other banks. They examined the bank's condition last July and again last September. Was it not the place of the state bank examiners to pass upon whether a bank is a safe depository for public or private funds rather than up to city and county commissioners to decide a bank's condition? It certainly is up to the state banking department to determine whether a bank is solvent, and if it is not, to order it closed at the moment such a condition is discovered."

Mr. Anderson said that while he feels, and other members of the former county commission feel that they acted in "best interest of county government and the people," it is with deep regret that he saw "such an end to our administration."

"We worked hard and conscientiously," said Mr. Anderson "and we feel that we accomplished some worthy things during our two years. We economized, we put some phases of county government on a high plane and we have done nothing we are not willing that the public shall know. All our proceedings are on regularly kept records and any act of the commission may be learned from these records. It is, of course, very disheartening to have such a condition of affairs come at the very end of our terms."

He said he was sure the other members of the former county commission, J. W. Grimes, and J. O. McElroy, concur with him in his statement of position regarding handling of county affairs.

Daily Newspapers Of N. C. Get Requests For Data

CHARLOTTE, Dec. 6. (AP)—Added impetus was given today to the growing suspicion in North Carolina that the Nye senatorial campaign funds investigating committee had not completed its work in this State.

A number of daily newspapers in the State today received requests from Senator Gerald P. Nye, committee chairman, to furnish him with detailed sworn statements of the political advertising carried during the primary and election campaign in behalf of F. M. Simmons, J. W. Bailey, and George M. Pritchard.

Seeks Itemized List

Senator Nye asked for an itemized list of all money expended for political advertising, by whom the bills were paid, whether by check or cash, and if the payments were made in advance or after the advertisements had been printed.

The letters to the newspapers followed closely requests made to several co-election board chairmen asking them to file with the committee the number of absentee ballots cast in the election and the total vote in their counties in the primary.

Among the newspapers receiving letters from Senator Nye were The Goldsboro News Argus, The Greensboro Record, The Henderson Dispatch, The Burlington Times, The Salisbury Post, and The Wilson Times.

Mr. Bailey, in the Democratic primary, defeated Senator Simmons for the Senatorial nomination and in the election he won over Mr. Pritchard, the Republican senatorial nominee.

HA! HA!

SALESMAN: These shirts simply laugh at the laundry, sir.

CUSTOMER: I know. I've had some come back with their sides split.—Passing Show.

[illegible] which we are confronted. But constructive measures of this sort reasonably calculated to mitigate the severity of this blow apparently are not within the purview of the contemplated anonymous dictatorship. With this high and mighty conference it appears to be a case of rule or ruin. But we presume to doubt the powers of the conference. Our faith in the good sense and the good feeling of this community does not permit us to believe that the conference can either rule or ruin.

Will Not Resign

"We despise alike the impudence and the cowardice of the demand that has been made upon us.

"We shall not resign.

"We wish to assure the people of Asheville and the creditors of Asheville:

"First: That we will do everything within our power to avoid a default for even a day in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

"Second: That to this end we will reduce current expenses to bare necessities and will issue no bonds or notes except for the purpose of meeting obligations now outstanding.

"Third: That hereafter all deposits of City funds in banks will be secured by callateral having a market value equal to or in excess of the amount deposited, such collateral to consist of securities of the character required by law for deposits of state funds.

"GALLATIN ROBERTS, Mayor
"C. H. BARTLETT,
"Comm. Public Safety."

Rogers Resigns

The statement issued by Commissioner Rogers in announcing his resignation was as follows:

"To the Citizens of Asheville:

"After careful consideration and consultation with my friends, I have placed my resignation as Commissioner of Public Works, to be effective immediately, in the hands of the Mayor and Commissioner of Public Safety. In doing this, I am guided by my desire to do what is best for the community under the feelings which now exist.

"For the three and one-half years that I have served the City as Commissioner of Public Works, I can truthfully say that I have endeavored to my utmost ability to conduct the affairs of my office in an honest, honorable and efficient manner. My record as an official is open to the public.

"I will be glad to render any assistance within my power to my successor.

"L. B. ROGERS."

ASHEVILLE FIRM SUED BY GROCER AT HIGH POINT

HIGH POINT, Dec. 6. (AP)—W. B. Byerly, High Point grocer, today filed suit for $20,000 against Miller Brothers, Asheville directory firm, alleging he was listed as a negro in a local city directory.

Pilot Designs New Winter Flying Help

AKRON, O. Dec. 6. (AP)—An attachment to the airplane engine as an aid to winter flying which it is claimed will start a cold moter in Artic temperatures has been devoleped by H. P. Whittle here.

Whittle, a former marine pilot, said the invention is indirectly the outcome of the expedition of the first pursuit group from Selfridge field into the Artic regions last winter He was unofficially connected with the expedition and studied the effect of low tempature on engines.

In use, the heater is attached underneath the moter. It is 189 inches long and 8 inches in diameter, consisting of a drum within a drum. The inner drum is heated with gasoline and insulated so that there is no fire danger, Whittle said.

The cold air is circulated through the inner drum and goes heatd to any desired tempature to the engine.

CHRISTMAS SPECIALS!

Last Opportunity: By Popular Demand Sale Continues Through Monday!

$4 Clip This Advertisement $4

It Is Worth $4.00 If Presented Not Later Than Monday December 8th.
Bring This Certificate to Our Store With Only 98c and Receive a

New Park Combination Pen-Pencil

morning when Moore, the last defense witness, will take the stand if considered able to testify.

Several seeming contradictions cropped out during cross examination of Rector. He said that Willis had not blocked his appointment to a position of state constable without pay, but later identified a letter purported to have been written by him to Governor McLeod charging Willis with such an action.

The ex-officer testified that he merely knew J. Monroe Peake, Jr., of Columbia, and that he was positive he had never had correspondence with him. However, he admitted that a letter written on Rector's official stationery to Peake, bearing Rector's name, had apparently been signed by him. He would not identify the writing as that of his stenographer.

Former testimony hinged about his contacts with Ed Cuffy, negro, who testified that Rector had attempted to hire him to kill Sheriff Willis. Rector said that testimony that he plotted Willis' death was a "fabrication."

Other Contacts

On direct examination he stated that both Toy and Ollie Garrett, witnesses, who testified for the state, had informed him several weeks ago that Sheriff Cliff E. Bramlett of McDowell County and others were trying to get him to "swear lies" during his trial. Several witnesses for Moore were heard during the morning in the defense's attempt to establish an alibi for the former deputy.

Several rebuttal witnesses are expected to be called by the state after Rector's testimony, if it is made then. The case likely will not reach the jury until Tuesday or Wednesday.

Miss Laura T. Wall, 68, Is Called By Death

(Special to Citizen-Times)

MARION, Dec. 6.—After having been bedfast for six months and in failing health for the past five years, Miss Laura T. Wall, 68, died this morning at the home of her brother, Augustus Wall, near the Marion airport.

The funeral services will be conducted in Burke county Monday morning at 11 o'clock by the Rev. J. K. Justice, of Marion. Interment will be in the Oak Hill cemetery.

She leaves five brothers, Augustus, William, Thomas and Oscar Wall, of Marion, and Earl Wall, of Elizabethton, Tenn.; two sisters, Mrs. Anna Wall, of Valdese, and Mrs. E. T. Burton, of Old Fort.

Beauty Was An Art, Now It Is A Science

MANILA, P. I. (AP)—The invention of a device to measure beauty is claimed by Jose V. Mariano, student in the University of the Philippines.

The machine consists of a circle divided into more than 20 parts and points in which the beauty of the face can be mathematically determined for purposes of comparison.

The girl is viewed from different angles and her score is the total of the grades taken from the various angles.

The highest grade that can be made is 2,000 points and the lowest 400 points.

$1,346,727.72; American National Bank, $235,876.26; Bank of West Asheville, $57,190.74; Biltmore-Oteen Bank, $124,181.07; Farmers and Traders Bank of Weaverville, $43,287.52; Southern State Bank, $41,745.85; National Bank of Commerce, $128,909.45; Swannanoa Bank and Trust Company, $36,174.41, and Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, $193,363.71.

Mr. Anderson explained that he and members of the county commission had been repeatedly warned that to check heavily against banks at which funds were already on deposit when the commission took office would cause failures, and added that the effects of action by the commission which would cause collapse of banks, had been pointed out to its members.

Original Deposits

He showed that when he took office December 2, 1928, the county had on deposit at the various banks $2,940,450, secured by collateral with face value fixed at $1,761,625. He declared that by slow process, the county commission, hoping to avoid causing failure of any bank, had lowered this deposit to $2,207,556.73 until issuance of the tax anticipation notes October 4 was authorized for the expressed purpose of retiring notes given near the beginning of the fiscal year in anticipation of taxes for operating expenses. He declared that if the $375,000 had been applied as the commission intended and directed that the money be used, his commission would have left office with smaller amounts on deposit than were on deposit when the commission began its term of service.

"There was never a time when we could take the money from the bank without causing it to fail," Mr. Anderson declared. "We were advised of the situation by a number of business men and were warned time and again against taking any action which would cause the banks to collapse. We didn't want to break any banks and we hoped all along that we could slowly work out the problem so that banks would be able to continue in business so that people of the city and county would not suffer any loss, and so that the county would eventually be able to recover all funds on deposit."

He said he and his commission considered carefully effects a bank collapse would have on all parties concerned and decided against any move which would force any financial institution to the wall. He pointed out that deposits totalling in the neighborhood of $1,700,000 had been withdrawn from the Central Bank and Trust company before it closed, and added that "while all people did not benefit from the county commission's forbearance in the matter, there was a considerable number who did."

Criticizes Bank Examiner

Mr. Anderson criticized the state banking department for alleged laxity in handling affairs of the Central Bank and Trust company.

"Something ought to be said in this matter about the state bank examiners in this connection," said Mr. Anderson. "The condition of the bank was examined a number of times in the past two years, as were the conditions of all other banks. They examined the bank's condition last July and again last September. Was it not the place of the state bank examiners to pass upon whether a bank is a safe depository for public or private funds rather than up to city and county commissioners to decide a bank's condition? It certainly is up to the state banking department to determine whether a bank is solvent, and if it is not, to order it closed at the moment such a condition is discovered."

Mr. Anderson said that while he feels and other members of the former county commission feel that they acted in "best interest of county government and the people," it is with deep regret that he saw such an end to our administration.

"We worked hard and conscientiously," said Mr. Anderson "and we feel that we accomplished some worthy things during our two years. We economized, we put some phases of county government on a high plane and we have done nothing we are not willing that the public shall know. All our proceedings are on regularly kept records and any act of the commission may be learned from these records. It is of course very disheartening to have such a condition of affairs come at the very end of our terms."

He said he was sure the other members of the former county commission, J. W. Grimes and J. O. McElroy, concur with him in his statement of position regarding handling of county affairs.

HA' HA'

SALESMAN: These shirts simply laugh at the laundry, sir.

CUSTOMER: I know. I've had some come back with their sides split.—Passing Show

Daily Newspapers Of N. C. Get Requests For Data

CHARLOTTE, Dec. 6. (AP)—Added impetus was given today to the growing suspicion in North Carolina that the Nye senatorial campaign funds investigating committee had not completed its work in this State.

A number of daily newspapers in the State today received requests from Senator Gerald P. Nye, committee chairman, to furnish him with detailed sworn statements of the political advertising carried during the primary and election campaign in behalf of F. M. Simmons, J. W. Bailey, and George M. Pritchard.

Banks Promised List

Senator Nye asked for an itemized list of all money expended for political advertising, by whom the bills were paid, whether by check or cash, and if the payments were made in advance or after the advertisements had been printed.

The letters to the newspapers followed closely requests made to several co-election board chairmen asking them to file with the committee the number of absentee ballots cast in the elections and the total vote in their counties in the primary.

Among the newspapers receiving letters from Senator Nye were The Goldsboro News Argus, The Greensboro Record, The Henderson Dispatch, The Burlington Times, The Salisbury Post, and The Wilson Times.

Mr. Bailey in the Democratic primary defeated Senator Simmons for the Democratic nomination and in the election he won over Mr. Pritchard, the Republican senatorial nominee.

CHRISTMAS SPECIALS!

Last Opportunity: By Popular Demand Sale Continues Through Monday!

$4 Clip This Advertisement $4

It Is Worth $4.00 If Presented Not Later Than Monday December 8th.

Bring This Certificate to Our Store With Only 98c and Receive a

New Park Combination Pen-Pencil

which we are confronted. But constructive measures of this sort reasonably calculated to mitigate the severity of this blow apparently are not within the purview of the contemplated anonymous dictatorship. With this high and mighty conference it appears to be a case of rule or ruin. But we presume to doubt the powers of the conference. Our faith in the good sense and the good feeling of this community does not permit us to believe that the conference can either rule or ruin.

Will Not Resign

"We despise alike the impudence and the cowardice of the demand that has been made upon us.

"We shall not resign.

"We wish to assure the people of Asheville and the creditors of Asheville:

"First: That we will do everything within our power to avoid a default for even a day in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

"Second: That to this end we will reduce current expenses to bare necessities and will issue no bonds or notes except for the purpose of meeting obligations now outstanding.

"Third: That hereafter all deposits of City funds in banks will be secured by collateral having a market value equal to or in excess of the amount deposited, such collateral to consist of securities of the character required by law for deposits of state funds.

"GALLATIN HORENTE, Mayor
"C. M. BARTLETT,
"Commissioner Public Safety."

Rogers Resigns

The statement issued by Commissioner Rogers in announcing his resignation was as follows:

"To the Citizens of Asheville:

"After careful consideration and consultation with my friends, I have placed my resignation as Commissioner of Public Works, to be effective immediately, in the hands of the Mayor and Commissioner of Public Safety. In doing this, I am guided by my desire to do what is best for the community under the feelings which now exist.

"For the three and one-half years that I have served the City as Commissioner of Public Works, I can truthfully say that I have endeavored to my utmost ability to conduct the affairs of my office in an honest, honorable and efficient manner. My record as an official is open to the public.

"I will be glad to render any assistance within my power to my successor.

"T. B. ROGERS."

ASHEVILLE FIRM SUED BY GROCER AT HIGH POINT

HIGH POINT, Dec. 6. (AP)—W. B. Beeson, High Point grocer, today filed suit for $20,000 against Miller Brothers, Asheville directory firm, alleging he was listed as a negro in a local city directory.

Pilot Designs New Winter Flying Help

AKRON, O., Dec. 6. (AP)—An attachment to the airplane engine as an aid to winter flying which it is claimed will start a cold motor in Artic temperatures has been developed by H. P. Whittle here.

Whittle, a former marine pilot, said the invention is indirectly the outcome of the expedition of the first pursuit sent up from Selfridge field into the Artic regions last winter. He was unofficially connected with the expedition and studied the effect of low temperature on engines.

In use, the heater is attached underneath the motor. It is 189 inches long and 8 inches in diameter, consisting of a drum within a drum. The inner drum is heated with gasoline and insulated so that there is no fire danger, Whittle said.

The cold air is circulated through the inner drum and goes heated to any desired temperature to the engine.

RECTOR DENIES KNOWING SLAYER

Rector Says He Did Not Engineer Murder Of Officer

GREENVILLE, S. C., Dec. 6. (AP)—Denial that he knew Blair Rooks, confessed negro slayer of Sheriff Sam D. Willis, or that he had approached other persons with offers for killing the Greenville County officer, was made by Carlos A. Rector, former Greenville County sheriff, testifying in his defense on a charge of murder here today.

J. Harmon Moore, former deputy, is also on trial in general sessions court for murder in connection with Willis' slaying June 11, 1927. Rooks is under indictment for murder.

Takes Stand

The former sheriff was on the witness stand for nearly three hours. He was subjected to a gruelling cross examination by C. S. Wyche, who is assisting the state. At the conclusion of his testimony this afternoon, Moore was called to the stand but said his physical condition made him unable to testify.

Recess was taken until Monday morning when Moore, the last defense witness, will take the stand if considered able to testify.

Several seeming contradictions cropped out during cross examination of Rector. He said that Willis had not blocked his appointment to a position of state constable without pay, but later identified a letter purported to have been written by him to Governor McLeod charging Willis with such an action.

The ex-officer testified that he scarcely knew J. Monroe Feake, Jr., of Columbia, and that he was positive he had never had correspondence with him. However, he admitted that a letter written on Rector's official stationery to Feake, bearing Rector's name, had apparently been signed by him. He would not identify the writing as that of his stenographer.

Other testimony hinged about his intimate with Ed Cuffy, negro, who testified that Rector had attempted to hire him to kill Sheriff Willis. Rector said that testimony that he plotted Willis' death was a "fabrication."

Other Contacts

On direct examination he stated that both Tom and Ollie Garrett, brothers, who testified for the state, had informed him several weeks ago that Sheriff Cliff H. Bramlett of Greenville County and others were trying to get him to "swear lies" during his trial. Several witnesses for Moore were heard during the morning in the defense's attempt to establish an alibi for the former deputy.

Several rebuttal witnesses are expected to be called by the state after the testimony, if it is made them, but these likely will not reach the jury until Tuesday or Wednesday.

Miss Laura T. Wall, 61, Is Called By Death

(Special to Citizen-Times)

[illegible], Dec. 6.—After having been invalid for six months and in failing health for the past five years, Miss Laura T. Wall, 61, died this morning at the home of her brother, [illegible] with heart the Marion Methodist church will be held [illegible] at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, [illegible] by the Rev. [illegible] of Marion. Interment will be in the Old Hill cemetery.

Money Deposited To Pay County Notes Vanished

$875,000 Central Bank Deposit Disclosed By Records

—(Continued From Page One)

fort to pay the debt on time. The notes were not accepted, were sent back to us and were burned."

He said the county has not paid the notes although the creditors did not formally declare them in default and agreed to wait until the situation here takes a definite turn.

Mr. Anderson said the usual procedure by the commission for retirement of notes by issuance of new notes, was to sell the notes, and then having the proceeds placed on deposit in a note fund for no other purpose than for retirement of notes due. He said that the bank handling the notes has always been responsible for crediting funds to the note account and for retiring the old notes when they fell due.

On the date that the $875,000 notes were authorized there was to the credit of Buncombe county as general county funds in nine banks a total of $2,207,556 73, distributed as follows:

Central Bank and Trust company, $1,340,727 72. American National Bank, $235 876 26, Bank of West Asheville, $57,190.74, Biltmore-Oteen Bank, $124,181.07, Farmers and Traders Bank of Weaverville, $43,287.52, Southern State Bank, $41,745 85, National Bank of Commerce, $128,909 45 Swannanoa Bank and Trust Company, $36,174.41, and Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, $193,363 71.

Mr. Anderson explained that he and members of the county commission had been repeatedly warned that to check heavily against banks at which funds were already on deposit when the commission took office would cause failures, and added that the effects of action by the commission which would cause collapse of banks, had been pointed out to the members.

Original Deposits

He showed that when he took office December 2, 1926, the county had on deposit as the various banks $2,-940,480, secured by collateral with face value fixed at $1,781,000. He declared that by slow process, the county commission, hoping to avoid causing failure of any bank, had lowered this deposit to $2,207,556.73 until issuance of the tax anticipation notes October 4 was authorized for the approved purpose of retiring notes given near the beginning of the fiscal year in anticipation of taxes for operating expenses. He declared that if the $875,000 had been applied as the commission intended and directed that the money be used, his commission would have left office with smaller amounts on deposit than were on deposit when the commission began its term of service.

"There was never a time when we could take the money from the bank without causing it to fail," Mr. Anderson declared. "We were advised of the situation by a number of business men and were warned time and again against taking any action which would cause the banks to collapse. We didn't want to break any banks and we hoped all along that we could slowly work out the problem so that banks would be able to continue in business, so that people of the city and county would not suffer any loss, and so that the county would eventually be able to recover all funds on deposit."

He said he and his commission considered carefully effects a bank collapse would have on all parties concerned and decided against any move which would force any bank to decide a bank's condition? It certainly is up to the state banking department to determine whether a bank is solvent, and if it is not, to order it closed at the moment such a condition is discovered."

Mr. Anderson said that while he feels, and other members of the former county commission feel that they acted in "best interest of county government and the people," it is with deep regret that he now

J. Winslow Crawford Is Dead In Miami, Fla.

(Special To Citizen-Times)

OLD FORT, Dec. 6.—News of the death of J. Winslow Crawford, 50, formerly of Old Fort, was received here tonight in a message from Miami, Fla. Mr. Crawford was fatally injured in an accident in Miami, details of which have not been obtained here.

Mr. Crawford left here about eight years ago for Miami, where he had been living since. He was known in Old Fort and Asheville.

Surviving are the widow, three sisters, Mrs. J. S. Bradley, of Old Fort, Miss Maude Crawford, of Old Fort, and Mrs. George Lee of Asheville, and one brother, Z. B. Crawford, of Black Mountain.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

CAMPAIGN FUND PROBE CONTINUES

Daily Newspapers Of N. C. Get Requests For Data

CHARLOTTE, Dec. 6. (AP)—Added impetus was given today to the growing suspicion in North Carolina that the Nye senatorial campaign funds investigating committee had not completed its work in this State.

A number of daily newspapers in the State today received requests from Senator Gerald P. Nye, committee chairman, to furnish him with detailed sworn statements of the political advertising carried during the primary and election campaign in behalf of F. M. Simmons, J. W. Bailey, and George M. Pritchard.

Banks Remained List

Senator Nye asked for an itemized list of all money expended for political advertising, by whom the bills were paid, whether by check or cash, and if the payments were made in advance or after the advertisements had been printed.

The letters to the newspapers followed closely requests made to several co-election board chairmen asking them to file with the committee the number of absentee ballots cast in the election and the total vote in their counties in the primary.

Among the newspapers receiving letters from Senator Nye were The Goldsboro News Argus, The Greensboro Record, The Henderson Dispatch, The Burlington Times, The Salisbury Post, and The Wilson Times.

Mr. Bailey, in the Democratic primary, defeated Senator Simmons for the Senatorial nomination and in the election he won over Mr. Pritchard, the Republican senatorial nominee.

MAYOR ROBERTS REFUSES TO QU

Commissioner Bartl Also Declares He Will Not Resign

—(Continued From Page

measure of respect for the mo of the anonymous conference w makes this demand upon us, i could be assured that this co ence, in its composition, is not la representative of the jealous i cots, financial and political, w have been chiefly instruments creating the very situation of w they so loudly complain.

Have No Regret

"No man has dared accuse e of us of a dishonest dollar. A times and places we can look e constituent of ours squarely in face, without shame or regret for official act of ours.

"At all times since the breakin this storm, we have been willing, anxious, to assist in the constitu of a joint liquidation commi that would include the best busi ability and the most impartial spirit of the community, for the for working out of the problems which we are confronted. But structive measures of this sort sonably calculated to mitigate severity of this blow apparently not within the purview of the templated anonymous dictato With this high and mighty co ence it appears to be a case of or ruin. But we presume to d the powers of the conference. faith in the good sense and the feeling of this community does permit us to believe that the co ence can either rule or ruin.

Will Not Resign

"We despise alike the impud and the cowardice of the dem that has been made upon us.

"We shall not resign.

"We wish to assure the peopl Asheville and the creditors of A ville:

"First: That we will do everyt within our power to avoid a def for even a day in the payment of principal or interest of the city

"Second: That to this end we reduce current expenses to necessities and will issue no b of notes except for the purpos meeting obligations now enter ing.

"Third: That hereafter all dep of City funds in banks will be cured by collateral having a ma value equal to or in excess of amount deposited, such collatera consist of securities of the char required by law for deposits state funds.

"GALLATIN ROBERTS, May
"C. H. BARTLETT,
"Comm. Public Safety

Rogers Resigns

The statement issued by Comm sioner Rogers in announcing resignation was as follows:

"To the Citizens of Asheville:

"After careful consideration consultation with my friends, I placed my resignation as Comm sioner of Public Works, to be e tive immediately, in the hands the Mayor and Commissioner Public Safety. In doing this, I guided by my desire to do wha best for the community under feelings which now exist.

"For the three and one-half y that I have served the City as C missioner of Public Works, I truthfully say that I have endea ed to my utmost ability to cond the affairs of my office in honest, honorable and efficient m ner. My record as an official is o

MISAPPROPRIATION OF $375,000 OF SCHOOL
BY CENTRAL BANK REVEALED IN SEARCH OF

ROBERTS, BARTLETT WILL NOT RESIGN; STATEMENT ISSUED LATE SATURDAY

Mayor And Commissioner Declare They "Despise Impudence And Cowardice Of Demand" Made Upon Them

L. B. Rogers, commissioner of public works for the city of Asheville, yesterday afternoon tendered his resignation to the two remaining members of the board stating that he declined to do "what is best for my community under the feelings which now exist."

At the same time Mayor Gallatin Roberts and C. H. Bartlett, commissioner of public safety, issued a joint statement in which they flatly refused to resign saying "we despise alike the impudence and cowardice of the demand that has been made upon us."

These developments followed the revelation yesterday morning that the commissioners had been warned of the peril in dealing with the Central Bank and Trust company in a special audit report made by George G. Scott and company, auditors of municipal finances here for the past 15 years, which said November 15 "it is possible to be charged that the commissioners have perverted the credit of the city to the gain and advantage of a private institution."

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett, in their statement refusing to resign, said:

"To The People of Asheville:

"The undersigned Commissioners of the City of Asheville choose this method of response to the demand of a conference of local "bankers, financiers and business men" of undisclosed composition, notification of which comes to us by newspaper publications, that we forthwith resign our several memberships in the governing body of the City of Asheville, to the end, we presume to infer, that the government of said City be forthwith taken over by said conference.

Categorical Refusal

"The offices which we hold, with the public trusts which they impose, were bestowed upon us by the votes of the qualified electors of this City duly cast in the last municipal election, and we are competently advised that we have neither the legal duty nor the moral right voluntarily to resign these several trusts to any lesser or other authority than that under which we hold. Therefore, there can be no other answer to the extraordinary demand of this anonymous would-be municipal dictatorship than a categorical refusal.

"We have neither apologies nor regrets for any of our acts as Commissioners of the City of Asheville. Particularly, we have neither apology nor regret for the efforts which we, in full collaboration with the government of the County of Buncombe presided over by our distinguished and highly esteemed fellow citizen, Dr. Newton M. Anderson, have put forth from time to time for the last two years to ward off the overwhelming calamity which has overtaken this community. We would have been blind and indifferent indeed had we failed to recognize the devastating injury which inevitably would attend the closing of the Central Bank and Trust Company. A popular bank, having over twenty thousand depositors—a bank which so consistently and generously had supported every public enterprise that promised civic betterment, the Central Bank and Trust Company as a going concern involved the prosperity of this community and the welfare of its citizens to a greater degree than all other such institutions in Asheville or in Western North Carolina. The City and County governments equally realized the immeasurable calamity that would result to those governments and to their several constituencies by the failure of this bank, and for ourselves, individually and collectively, we have made to avert that calamity and of unfeigned regret for the failure of our efforts.

"We sincerely believe that our efforts would not have failed except for the systematic machinations of rival financial interests to undermine public confidence in this so valuable community institution, and we would be able to entertain a larger

—(Please Turn To Page Six)

DICTATORSHIP TO SOLVE BRITAIN'S PROBLEMS URGED

Young Laborites Demand Emergency Changes In Government

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Eighteen prominent young Laborites tonight defied the MacDonald government by issuing a manifesto which calls for a semi-dictatorship to solve the British industrial crisis and also, for postponement of the repayment of war debts.

The dictatorship plan of the eighteen, who are led by Sir Oswald Mosley, would set up five dictators instead of one, these men to act as a group to deal with the economic situation.

Interest was aroused by the war debt postponement suggestion of the manifesto, but this section was brief and did not indicate the means to be employed.

It simply said that all surplus revenue should be used to pay interest on loans for constructive works, for removal of some of the burdens on food and prime necessities of the working class, and the reduction of taxation on workers' incomes.

Funds Needed

"Further funds should be provided for such purposes," read the manifesto, "by some postponement, until reconstruction, of the precipitate attempt to repay the war debt from taxation of this age and generation."

Among the eighteen signers are

—(Please Turn To Page Six)

NEGRO IS KILLED BY DETECTIVE AT WINSTON-SALEM

WINSTON-SALEM, Dec. 6. (AP)—A negro, Sam Epps, was shot to death by Detective J. R. Crutchfield, of the Winston-Salem police department, here tonight.

The shooting occurred in the negro residential section of the city when Crutchfield and two other detectives, R. G. Simpson and R. L. Blackburn, were attempting to arrest Epps and his father-in-law, John Rennert.

The police said Epps and Rennert were armed and that Crutchfield killed Epps when he saw him draw a revolver and attempt to shoot Detective Simpson.

Dr. W. M. Dalton, Forsyth County coroner, announced an inquest would be held tomorrow.

YOUNG HOOVER'S CHILDREN REACH CAPITAL TODAY

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6. (AP)—Three young persons to whom President Hoover is just plain grandfather and the White House is a playground, arrived in Washington tomorrow.

They are Herbert Hoover III, [illegible]

DEVILS BATTLE TAR HEELS TO SCORELESS TIE

Bitterly Fighting Teams Are Unable To Cross Goal Lines

JIMMY DEHART'S DUKE REGIME ENDS

More Than 15,000 Brave Cold Drizzle To See Hectic Struggle

KENAN STADIUM, CHAPEL HILL, Dec. 6. (AP)—Two bitterly fighting football teams struggled vainly for a "break" this afternoon as the University of North Carolina and Duke University brought their 1930 seasons to a close, but a sea of mud and a steady rain stopped every real scoring threat and the game ended 0 to 0.

The game today was the last for a Jimmy DeHart football team at Duke. The Blue Devil mentor wil be succeeded next year by Wallace Wade of Alabama.

Seen As Champions

By reason of the tie Duke, undefeated in the State, will be generally recognized as state champions. The Devils beat N. C. State and Davidson and were tied by Wake Forest. Carolina lost to Davidson and beat State and Wake Forest. Wake Forest lost to Carolina and beat Davidson and State.

Duke's only loss of the year was the opening game, won by South Carolina. Today's knotted count and the Wake Forest 13-13 game marred an otherwise clean slate of ten successive games, including victories over Navy, Villanova and Kentucky.

The gridiron was already soaked by a night's drizzle when a steady downpour started one hour before game time, and before the end of the contest almost as much of the field was covered by deep water puddles as showed turf.

15,000 See Game

A crowd somewhere in the neighborhood of 15,000 to 18,000 stood, sat and soaked in the rain and the main color of the contest was lent by the vari-colored slickers, coats, oil cloths, tarpaulins and umbrellas used by the crowd in an effort to keep dry.

Duke given an edge over the Tar Heels on their previous record, made nine first downs to five for the Heels but the weather and the alert Carolina tacklers kept Bill Murray and Kid Brewer, Duke's star backs, to short gains on nearly every occasion.

Fumbles were more the order of the day than spectacular plays as the 22 men on the field played the roles of mud plodders.

One Real Threat

Duke's only real threat to score

—(Please Turn To Page 2-D

HOOVER'S RELIEF BUDGET SLASHED TO 110 MILLIONS

House Committee Pares Off 40 Millions In Building Plans

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6. (UP) President Hoover's public construction program for unemployment relief was reduced tonight from a $150,000,000 to a $110,000,000 program and plans laid to take it up in the house early next week.

The reduction was made by the house appropriations sub-committee which considered it. The sub-committee will report the measure, which carries funds for public buildings and highway construction, to the full committee Tuesday for action.

Monday the senate will take up the bill for $60,000,000 for feed, seed, fertilizer and food loans to drought-stricken farmers, which compares with the $25,000,000 appropriation

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

Vienna Police Release Levine; Plans New Hop

VIENNA, Dec. 6. (AP)—Charles A. Levine, freed of a suspicion of [illegible] travel, but was unsuccessful. Then he bought a second class railroad ticket to Paris.

They Must Resign

(EDITORIAL)

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner of Public Safety Bartlett say that they will not resign.

They must resign.

They say that they "have neither the legal duty nor the moral right" to resign.

We say that they have the legal right and the moral duty to resign.

They talk about the trusts imposed in them by the people of Asheville who elected them to the offices which they now hold.

We say that they have betrayed these trusts and in so doing have brought Asheville to the verge of irreparable ruin.

They say that the demand for their resignation is anonymous.

This newspaper on its own responsibility and on behalf of the people of this community makes this demand as openly and as publicly as it can be made.

They say that they will do everything within their power to avoid a default in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

We say that there is nobody with money who will now lend money to the city of Asheville as long as the administration of its affairs remains in the hands of men who are now known to have administered those affairs with gross incompetency and in rank violation of both their legal and moral obligations as public officials.

Commissioner Rogers has announced his resignation. He has taken the wise course. He has taken the course which he should have taken as a man who sees the grave dangers to which this city is exposed.

This newspaper in spite of all that has happened has credited Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett with having the interests of the people of Asheville at heart. It has believed that the things which they did were done as the result of tragic blundering and without a due realization on their part of the enormity of their offending.

They stand indicted before the people of Asheville, nevertheless, for having turned over millions of dollars of the public funds to the Central Bank & Trust Company without any proper protection of these funds and without letting the public know what they were doing.

Their transactions were cloaked in secrecy. There was no entry upon the books which might have enlightened the people as to the astounding generosity of the commissioners in taking their money in this wholesale fashion for the benefit of an institution which they knew to be unsound and whose practices they knew, none better, to be corrupt.

If the auditors have stated the facts correctly, they were not only violating all moral principles when they did these things, they also went outside the law to raise much of this money.

These funds have been lost. Against some of them the city holds a mass of alleged securities but these securities are for the most part worth little or nothing.

As a result of their having been lost the credit of the city has been imperiled. As a result of their having been lost the community is already financially on the rocks.

It can be rescued from its distressed condition only if it can secure a government which will command the confidence which Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett as officials have now utterly lost at home and abroad.

When Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett say that they will not resign they are saying that they will refuse to recognize the right of the community to save itself if it can be saved.

If they persist in that attitude they will forfeit all claim to public sympathy. If they persist in that attitude their final blunder in so doing will command the wrath of an outraged people.

Asheville can recover from the blow that has been dealt it if it can be reorganized quickly as a corporation. If the processes of reorganization are delayed the peril will be aggravated and the situation may well become hopeless.

Every business institution in the city will be crippled for years to come if the city defaults on its money obligations. It is certain to default if Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett continue in office.

The catastrophe with which Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett threaten the city will affect not only the city and its business institutions, it will affect the schools, it will affect the homes, it will affect every man, woman and child in Asheville in one way or another.

The public can depend upon it that the decision of these two Commissioners will wreck all chance of Asheville's getting on its feet for years to come, if ever.

The things which must be done to ward off the immediate dangers which are threatening us must be done without delay. They cannot be done by Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett.

When they say that they will not resign they say that they are putting their own pride and vanity and the selfish

DEPOSITORS OF CLOSED BANKS WILL ORGANIZE

Protective Association To Be Formed In City On Tuesday

WILL COOPERATE IN LIQUIDATION

Organization's Goal Is Protection Of All Depositors

Formation of the Western North Carolina Depositors' Protective Association to protect the interests of all depositors and to co-operate with the state bank examiners in the liquidation of all banks now closed in this section was announced last night by Robert R. Reynolds, J. M. Horner, Jr., and James MacRae, Asheville attorneys, employed by incorporators of the organization to draft a charter and to map a course for its activities.

Headquarters will be opened Tuesday morning at 28 Page Avenue on the ground floor of the Grove Arcade building at which time a charter is expected to be drafted and sent to Raleigh. All affairs and activities will be directed from the headquarters which will be kept open daily and in charge of a manager.

Affairs of the organization are to be managed by the members through trustees in the form of an advisory board which they themselves will select, it was announced. The organization, when incorporated, will form a nucleus about which an association of depositors in all counties in this section where banks have been closed, will be formed.

Only Depositor Members

Membership will be limited to depositors having funds in one or more of the closed banks, including the Central Bank and Trust Company, its Haywood street branch, and the American National Bank in Asheville, the Commonwealth Bank and Trust Company, of Black Mountain; the Biltmore-Oteen Bank; the Bank of Leicester; the Polk County Bank and Trust Company at Columbus; the Bank of Murphy; the Citizens Bank of Waynesville; the First Bank and Trust Company, the Citizen National Bank, and the American Bank and Trust Company, of Hendersonville; the Citizens Bank of Bryson City; the Clay County Bank at Hayesville; and the First Bank and Trust Company at Tryon in Polk county. The closed banks also include branches of the First Bank and Trust Company of Hendersonville, located at Saluda and Flat Rock.

The incorporators, who are to be announced early this week, are men interested in the welfare of all depositors and the communities surrounding closed banks, and will func-

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

OPPOSITION TO M'NINCH GROWS IN WASHINGTON

Overman To Oppose Him If Fund Mystery Is Not Explained

By H. E. C. BRYANT
(Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6.—Senator Overman will not vote for the confirmation of Frank R. McNinch for the Federal Power Commission unless the mystery of the funds for the McNinch-Simmons campaign against the Democratic presidential ticket in 1928 is satisfactorily explained. He has been disposed to overlook the fact that McNinch bolted and to consider him a regenerate Democrat, but he is now satisfied that North Carolina people want the nomination sent back to the White House if the nominee still insists on silence on the con-

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

Mellon Opposes Pa[illegible] Of Bonus Cer[illegible]

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6. (AP)—Immediate payment in cash to world war veterans the face value of their [illegible] opposition to [illegible] the following w[illegible] "it seems, the

MONE[illegible] NOTE[illegible] OBLIG[illegible]

Newton [illegible] missi[illegible]

That $[illegible] issuance of [illegible] posited in [illegible] press purpo[illegible] and 15, the [illegible] the money [illegible] the knowled[illegible] poses, was [illegible]

Repre[illegible] covered rec[illegible] Newton M. [illegible] sion and by [illegible] nance, was [illegible] were further [illegible] the records [illegible] the money [illegible] the books of [illegible]

Mr. A[illegible] explained in [illegible] owing $1,0[illegible] new notes [illegible] the defunct [illegible]

BARTH[illegible] TO LIN[illegible] FRENCH[illegible]

Former P[illegible] Difficul[illegible] Org[illegible]

PARIS, Dec. [illegible] Barthou, once [illegible] a dozen times [illegible] night was [illegible] France's many [illegible] an effort to f[illegible] ceed the defe[illegible]

M. Barthou [illegible] task of formi[illegible] today after for [illegible] Poincare had [illegible] ill health.

Certain poli[illegible] belief, however [illegible] ton Doumergu[illegible] care so reconsid[illegible] if Senator [illegible] enough suppor[illegible]

To [illegible]

The latter [illegible] would consult [illegible] leaders during [illegible] return to the [illegible] row morning [illegible] failure.

One of the [illegible] the senator m[illegible] nouncement t[illegible] Radical Socials [illegible] stand and will [illegible] necessary assis[illegible] certain portfol[illegible] Since 1928 they [illegible] part in any [illegible] ment. Herric[illegible] manded the in[illegible] letter of the i[illegible]

—(Please

SCISSOR[illegible] IS FOUN[illegible] HURT [illegible]

WINDSOR, [illegible] sny scissors [illegible] Charlie Long, [illegible] a roadway [illegible] afternoon, fata[illegible] told officers ha[illegible] automobile ru[illegible] form of the vi[illegible] without stoppi[illegible] appears about [illegible] shortly after [illegible]

L. B. Rogers, commissioner of public works for the city of Asheville, yesterday afternoon tendered his resignation to the two remaining members of the board stating that he desired to do "what is best for my community under the feelings which now exist."

At the same time Mayor Gallatin Roberts and C. H. Bartlett, commissioner of public safety, issued a joint statement in which they flatly refused to resign saying "we despise alike the impudence and cowardice of the demand that has been made upon us."

These developments followed the revelation yesterday morning that the commissioners had been warned of the peril in dealing with the Central Bank and Trust company in a special audit report made by George G. Scott and company, auditors of municipal finances here for the past 15 years, which said November 15 "it is possible to be charged that the commissioners have perverted the credit of the city to the gain and advantage of a private institution."

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett, in their statement refusing to resign, said:

To The People of Asheville:

"The undersigned Commissioners of the City of Asheville choose this method of response to the demand of a combination of local "bankers, financiers and business men" of unclosed composition, notification of which comes to us by newspaper publications, that we forthwith resign our several membership in the governing body of the City of Asheville. We shall, we presume to infer, that the government of said City be forthwith taken over by said conferees.

Categorical Refusal

"The offices which we hold, with the public trusts which they impose, were bestowed upon us by the votes of the qualified electors of this City duly cast in the last municipal election, and we are competently advised that we have neither the legal duty nor the moral right voluntarily to resign these several trusts to any lesser or other authority than that under which we hold. Therefore, there can be no other answer to the extraordinary demand of this anonymous would-be municipal dictatorship than a categorical refusal.

"We have neither apologies nor regrets for any of our acts as Commissioners of the City of Asheville, particularly, we have neither apology nor regret for the efforts which we, in full collaboration with the government of the County of Buncombe presided over by our distinguished and highly esteemed fellow citizen, Mr. Newton M. Anderson, have put forth from time to time for the last two years to ward off the overwhelming calamity which has overtaken this community. We would have been blind and indifferent indeed had we failed to recognize the devastating injury which inevitably would attend the closing of the General Bank and Trust Company. A popular bank, having over twenty thousand depositors—a bank which was consistently and generously had supported every public enterprise that promised civic betterment, the Central Bank and Trust Company as a going concern involved the prosperity of this community and the welfare of its citizens to a greater degree than all other such institutions in Asheville or in Western North Carolina. The City and County governments equally, realized the immeasurable calamity that would result to those governments and to their several constituencies by the failure of this bank, and for ourselves, individually and collectively, we have made no secret of our calamity and of unfeithomable regret for the failure of our efforts.

"We sincerely believe that our efforts would not have failed except for the systematic machinations of rival financial interests to undermine public confidence in this so valuable community institution, and we would be able to entertain a larger

—(Please Turn To Page Six)

DICTATORSHIP TO SOLVE BRITAIN'S PROBLEMS URGED

Young Laborites Demand Emergency Changes In Government

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Eighteen prominent young Laborites tonight defied the MacDonald government by issuing a manifesto which calls for a semi-dictatorship to solve the British industrial crisis and also for postponement of the repayment of war debts.

The dictatorship plan of the eighteen, who are led by Sir Oswald Mosley, would set up five dictators instead of one, these men to act as a group to deal with the economic situation.

Interest was aroused by the war debt postponement suggestion of the manifesto, but this section was brief and did not indicate the means to be employed.

It simply said that all surplus revenue should be used to pay interest on loans for constructive works, for removal of some of the burdens on food and prime necessities of the working class, and the reduction of taxation on workers' incomes.

Funds Needed

"Further funds should be provided for such purposes," read the manifesto, "by some postponement, until reconstruction, of the precipitate attempt to repay the war debt from taxation of this age and generation."

Among the eighteen signers are

—(Please Turn To Page Six)

NEGRO IS KILLED BY DETECTIVE AT WINSTON-SALEM

WINSTON-SALEM, Dec. 6. (AP)—A negro, Sam Epps, was shot to death by Detective J. R. Crutchfield, of the Winston-Salem police department, here tonight.

The shooting occurred in the negro residential section of the city when Crutchfield and two other detectives, R. G. Simpson and R. L. Blackburn, were attempting to arrest Epps and his father-in-law, John Rennert.

The police said Epps and Rennert were armed and that Crutchfield killed Epps when he saw him draw a revolver and attempt to shoot Detective Simpson.

Dr. W. N. Dalton, Forsyth County coroner, announced an inquest would be held tomorrow.

DUKE REGIME ENDS

More Than 15,000 Brave Cold Drizzle To See Hectic Struggle

KENAN STADIUM, CHAPEL HILL, Dec. 6. (AP)—Two bitterly fighting football teams struggled vainly for a "break" this afternoon as the University of North Carolina and Duke University brought their 1930 seasons to a close, but a sea of mud and a steady rain stopped every real scoring threat and the game ended 0 to 0.

The game today was the last for a Jimmy DeHart football team at Duke. The Blue Devil mentor will be succeeded next year by Wallace Wade of Alabama.

Seen As Champions

By reason of the tie Duke, undefeated in the State, will be generally recognized as state champions. The Devils beat N. C. State and Davidson and were tied by Wake Forest. Carolina lost to Davidson and beat State and Wake Forest. Wake Forest lost to Carolina and beat Davidson and State.

Duke's only loss of the year was the opening game, won by South Carolina. Today's knotted count and the Wake Forest 13-13 game marred an otherwise clean slate of ten successive games, including victories over Navy, Villanova and Kentucky.

The gridiron was already soaked by a night's drizzle when a steady downpour started one hour before game time, and before the end of the contest almost as much of the field was covered by deep water puddles as showed turf.

15,000 See Game

A crowd somewhere in the neighborhood of 15,000 to 18,000 stood, sat and soaked in the rain and the main color of the contest was lent by the vari-colored slickers, coats, oil cloths, tarpaulins and umbrellas used by the crowd in an effort to keep dry.

Duke, given an edge over the Tar Heels on their previous record, made nine first downs to five for the Heels but the weather and the alert Carolina tacklers kept Bill Murray and Kid Brewer, Duke's star backs, to short gains on nearly every occasion.

Fumbles were more the order of the day than spectacular plays as the 22 men on the field played the roles of mud plodders.

One Real Threat

Duke's only real threat to score

—Please Turn To Page 2-D

HOOVER'S RELIEF BUDGET SLASHED TO 110 MILLIONS

House Committee Pares Off 40 Millions In Building Plans

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6. (UP) President Hoover's public construction program for unemployment relief was reduced tonight from a $150,000,000 to a $110,000,000 program and plans laid to take it up in the house early next week.

The reduction was made by the house appropriations sub-committee which considered it. The sub-committee will report the measure, which carries funds for public buildings and highway construction, to the full committee Tuesday for action.

Monday the senate will take up the bill for $60,000,000 for feed, seed, fertilizer and food loans to drought-stricken farmers, which compares with the $25,000,000 appropriation

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

able ruin.

They say that the demand for their resignation is anonymous.

This newspaper on its own responsibility and on behalf of the people of this community makes this demand as openly and as publicly as it can be made.

They say that they will do everything within their power to avoid a default in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

We say that there is nobody with money who will now lend money to the city of Asheville as long as the administration of its affairs remains in the hands of men who are now known to have administered those affairs with gross incompetency and in rank violation of both their legal and moral obligations as public officials.

Commissioner Rogers has announced his resignation. He has taken the wise course. He has taken the course which he should have taken as a man who sees the grave dangers to which this city is exposed.

This newspaper in spite of all that has happened has credited Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett with having the interests of the people of Asheville at heart. It has believed that the things which they did were done as the result of tragic blundering and without a due realization on their part of the enormity of their offending.

They stand indicted before the people of Asheville, nevertheless, for having turned over millions of dollars of the public funds to the Central Bank & Trust Company without any proper protection of these funds and without letting the public know what they were doing.

Their transactions were cloaked in secrecy. There was no entry upon the books which might have enlightened the people as to the astounding generosity of the commissioners in taking their money in this wholesale fashion for the benefit of an institution which they knew to be unsound and whose practices they knew, none better, to be corrupt.

If the auditors have stated the facts correctly, they were not only violating all moral principles when they did these things, they also went outside the law to raise much of this money.

These funds have been lost. Against some of them the city holds a mass of alleged securities but these securities are for the most part worth little or nothing.

As a result of their having been lost the credit of the city has been imperiled. As a result of their having been lost the community is already financially on the rocks.

It can be rescued from its distressed condition only if it can secure a government which will command the confidence which Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett as officials have now utterly lost at home and abroad.

When Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett say that they will not resign they are saying that they will refuse to recognize the right of the community to save itself if it can be saved.

If they persist in that attitude they will forfeit all claim to public sympathy. If they persist in that attitude their final blunder in so doing will command the wrath of an outraged people.

Asheville can recover from the blow that has been dealt it if it can be reorganized quickly as a corporation. If the processes of reorganization are delayed the peril will be aggravated and the situation may well become hopeless.

Every business institution in the city will be crippled for years to come if the city defaults on its money obligations. It is certain to default if Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett continue in office.

The catastrophe with which Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett threaten the city will affect not only the city and its business institutions, it will affect the schools, it will affect the homes, it will affect every man, woman and child in Asheville in one way or another.

The public can depend upon it that the decision of these two Commissioners will wreck all chance of Asheville's getting on its feet for years to come, if ever.

The things which must be done to ward off the immediate dangers which are threatening us must be done without delay. They cannot be done by Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett.

When they say that they will not resign they say that they are putting their own pride and vanity and the selfish interests of those who have advised them so viciously ahead of the interests of Asheville.

They are saying that the wreck which they have brought upon Asheville they will carry to completion.

No honest citizen, no patriotic citizen, no citizen with a grain of public spirit in his make-up, no citizen who is not utterly depraved or bereft of his reason would insist upon following a course so fraught with grief and disaster to a city he claimed to love.

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett must resign.

They must resign immediately.

Organization's Goal Is Protection Of All Depositors

Formation of the Western North Carolina Depositors' Protective Association to protect the interests of all depositors and to co-operate with the state bank examiners in the liquidation of all banks now closed in this section was announced last night by Robert R. Reynolds, J. M. Horner, Jr., and James MacRae, Asheville attorneys, employed by incorporators of the organization to draft a charter and to map a course for its activities.

Headquarters will be opened Tuesday morning at 28 Page Avenue on the ground floor of the Grove Arcade building at which time a charter is expected to be drafted and sent to Raleigh. All affairs and activities will be directed from the headquarters which will be kept open daily and in charge of a manager.

Affairs of the organization are to be managed by the members through trustees in the form of an advisory board which they themselves will select, it was announced. The organization, when incorporated, will form a nucleus about which an association of depositors in all counties in this section where banks have been closed, will be formed.

Only Depositor Members

Membership will be limited to depositors having funds in one or more of the closed banks, including the Central Bank and Trust Company, its Haywood street branch, and the American National Bank, in Asheville, the Commonwealth Bank and Trust Company, of Black Mountain; the Biltmore-Oteen Bank, the Bank of Leicester; the Polk County Bank and Trust Company at Columbus; the Bank of Murphy; the Citizens Bank of Waynesville, the First Bank and Trust Company, the Citizen National Bank, and the American Bank and Trust Company, of Hendersonville; the Citizens Bank of Bryson City; the Clay County Bank at Hayesville; and the First Bank and Trust Company at Tryon in Polk county. The closed banks also include branches of the First Bank and Trust Company of Hendersonville, located at Saluda and Flat Rock.

The incorporators, who are to be announced early this week are men interested in the welfare of all depositors and the communities surrounding closed banks, and will func-

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

OPPOSITION TO M'NINCH GROWS IN WASHINGTON

Overman To Oppose Him If Fund Mystery Is Not Explained

By N. E. C. BRYANT
(Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6.—Senator Overman will not vote for the confirmation of Frank R. McNinch for the Federal Power Commission unless the mystery of the funds for the McNinch-Simmons campaign against the Democratic presidential ticket in 1928 is satisfactorily explained. He has been disposed to overlook the fact that McNinch bolted and to consider him a regenerate Democrat, but he is now satisfied that North Carolina people want the nomination kept from the White House if the nominee still insists on silence on the con-

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

That $8
issuance of ta
posited in the press purpose and 15, the b
the money wa
the knowledge
poses, was rev
Represen covered recor
Newton M. A
sion and by nance, was i were further c
the records of the money ha
the books of
Mr. And explained in c owing $1,000
new notes for the defunct C

BARTHO TO LINE FRENCH

Former Pr Difficult Orga

PARIS, Dec. 6
Barthou, once p a dozen times
night was tr
France's many an effort to for
ceed the defeat
M. Barthou a task of forming today after form
Poincare had re
ill health.
Certain politi belief, however, ton Doumergue care to reconside
if Senator Bar
enough support.
To Ra
The latter to would consult leaders during t rgturn to the row morning t failure
One of the b
the senator may nouncement thi Radical Socialist stand and will o
necessary assist certain portfoli
Since 1928 they part in any co
ment. Heretofo manded the imp
irter of the int

—(Please

SCISSORS IS FOUN HURT I

WINDSOR, De
ant scissors gri
Charlie Long, of
in a roadway afternoon, fatall told officers he automobile run
form of the vic without stopping appears about shortly after he

YOUNG HOOVER'S CHILDREN REACH CAPITAL TODAY

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6. (AP)—Three young persons to whom President Hoover is just plain grandfather and the White House is grandmother's home will arrive in Washington tomorrow.

They are Herbert Hoover III, Peggy and Joan, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr. They come from Pasadena, Calif., with their mother to celebrate Christmas with President and Mrs. Hoover. Their father is at Asheville, N. C.

They will be the first children to live for any time in the White House to share the 4 decade home of President Wilson's children. Wilson's children made their moment in the White House during his administration.

The third time of the charm—the president has been elevated into a memory for the third.

Vienna Police Release Levine; Plans New Hop

VIENNA, Dec. 6. (AP)—Charles A. Levine, freed of a suspicion of attempting to counterfeit small French coins, will return to the United States shortly to perfect plans for a solo round-the-world air flight to be accomplished in 15 days, he said today.

Charges preferred against him November 17 when he was arrested near Vienna, were quashed today, the public prosecutor holding that there was insufficient of proof that he had attempted to engage in the falsification of money.

The man who achieved note as the first passenger to cross the Atlantic by plane, as pilot of Chamberlin's plane, had been arrested on a charge of passing counterfeit coins, but found himself unable to prove his innocence.

Levine said he had come to Vienna to study the manufacture of French bronze plaques and had bought the plates.

Levine attributed his misfortune to an idea he had in connection with plans for his round-the-world flight. That was he hoped small medals bearing his likeness and a map of the globe to distribute at his various stopping places. Unfortunately, he decided to have them made a dealer in French 2-franc pieces and approached a Viennese engraver for the medals.

Levine said the engraver did not understand him very well, got suspicious and informed the police. Such bronze plaques and had bought the plates.

Levine said he had come to Vienna to study the manufacture of French

HEVILLE CITIZEN
ATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"
HEVILLE, N. C., MONDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 8, 1930 10 PAGES 5c DAILY 10c SUNDAY

TERS ARE SENTENCED T

ding Treasury For Relief Progra

ASHEVILLE'S PERIL

(EDITORIAL)

The Citizen has put before the people of Asheville the perils of the position in which the city has been placed.

It has put these perils before the City Commissioners.

The Citizen has done this as completely as lay in its power, impersonally and with a view to showing the actual conditions as they exist.

It has tried to bring home to the Commissioners that if they persist in their refusal to resign they thereby menace the city with municipal paralysis.

Besides this grave peril there is another which is not less grave. It is that the people will be plunged irretrievably into a state of bitterness the effects of which may be tragic.

Never has any city been in more desperate need of a new leadership which the people as a whole would trust and behind which they could and would unite. Unless we can get such a leadership and get it quickly there is no telling what will happen.

The present condition of affairs is heavy with potential disaster. The possibilities which may come out of such a situation sober and appal every citizen who is capable of thought.

Above all others, Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett should be sobered and appalled by these possibilities.

They must realize that the public is now suffering from a violent attack of nausea, an attack so violent that for the moment it is almost incapacitated for thought or action. They must realize that the public cannot escape its present dangerous mood as long as they remain in office, thus blocking the way to an immediate plan of constructive action.

They should resign and they should resign at once. The time which they have now had for reflection should have brought them irresistibly to this conclusion.

Their friends should make them appreciate the perils to which they are exposing the community, the perils that grow out of the present temper of the people as well as the perils which confront us financially. They should make them see that to resign and clear the way for a new administration of the city's affairs is the only course

CITY BOARD TO CONSIDER NEW MEMBER TODAY

Question Of Successor To L. B. Rogers Will Be Brought Up

WALTER S. M'RARY IS TENDERED POST

Developments Grew Out Of Report Made By Auditing Firm

A successor to Commissioner L. B. Rogers, who resigned his post Saturday afternoon, stating that he desired to do "what is best for my community under the feeling which now exist," will be considered today at the regular meeting of the city board, Mayor Gallatin Roberts said last night.

Mayor Roberts would not say who would be named to succeed the commissioner of public works whose resignation was effective immediately.

Tendered Post

Walter S. McRary, prominent Asheville business man and owner of the McRary Tire company, has been tendered the post made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Rogers, it was learned last night.

Mr. McRary, however, refused to confirm the report that he would be appointed, saying "I would not have the job if it was offered me on a silver plate." He said that he had no desire to have his name brought into the situation but would not

Prosecu

Attorney General Nico
lenko of Russia has tak in bringing to trial in M engineers, accused of counter-revolution. Th pleaded guilty and confe
national court proceeding sentenced to die.

RALPH WEL FATALLY IN

CITY COMMISSIONER L. B. ROGERS

THE WEATHER
ASHEVILLE AND VICINITY: Cloudy and slightly colder Sunday.

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1868 — ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 7, 1930

MISAPPROPRIATION OF $875,000 O
BY CENTRAL BANK REVEALED IN SE

ROBERTS, BARTLETT WILL NOT RESIGN; STATEMENT ISSUED LATE SATURDAY

Mayor And Commissioner Declare They "Despise Impudence And Cowardice Of Demand" Made Upon Them

L. B. Rogers, commissioner of public works for the city of Asheville, yesterday afternoon tendered his resignation to the two remaining members of the board stating that he desired to do "what is best for my community under the feelings which now exist."

At the same time Mayor Gallatin Roberts and C. H. Bartlett, commissioner of public safety, issued a joint statement in which they flatly refused to resign saying "we despise alike the impudence and cowardice of the demand that has been made upon us."

These developments followed the revelation yesterday morning that the commissioners had been warned of the peril in dealing with the Central Bank and Trust company in a special audit report made by George G. Scott and company, auditors of municipal finances here for the past 15 years, which said November 15 "it is possible to be charged that the commissioners have perverted the credit of the city to the gain and advantage of a private institution."

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett, in their statement refusing to resign, said:

"To The People of Asheville:

"The undersigned Commissioners of the City of Asheville choose this method of response to the demand of a conference of local "bankers, financiers and business men" of undisclosed composition, notification of which comes to us by newspaper publications, that we forthwith resign our several memberships in the governing body of the City of Asheville, to the end, we presume to infer, that the government of said City be forthwith taken over by said conference.

Categorical Refusal

The offices which we hold, with the public trusts which they impose, were bestowed upon us by the votes of the qualified electors of this City duly cast in the last municipal election, and we are competently advised that we have neither the legal duty nor the moral right voluntarily to resign these several trusts to any lesser or other authority than that under which we hold. Therefore, there can be no other answer to the extraordinary demand of this anonymous would-be municipal dictatorship than a categorical refusal.

"We have neither apologies nor regrets for any of our acts as Commissioners of the City of Asheville. Particularly, we have neither apology nor regret for the efforts which we, in full collaboration with the government of the County of Buncombe presided over by our distinguished and highly esteemed fellow citizen, Dr. Newton M. Anderson, have put forth from time to time for the last two years to ward off the overwhelming calamity which has overtaken this community. We would have been blind and indifferent indeed had we failed to recognize the devastating injury which inevitably would attend the closing of the Central Bank and Trust Company. A popular bank, having over twenty

DICTATORSHIP TO SOLVE BRITAIN'S PROBLEMS URGED

Young Laborites Demand Emergency Changes In Government

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Eighteen prominent young Laborites tonight defied the MacDonald government by issuing a manifesto which calls for a semi-dictatorship to solve the British industrial crisis and also, for postponement of the repayment of war debts.

The dictatorship plan of the eighteen, who are led by Sir Oswald Mosley, would set up five dictators instead of one, these men to act as a group to deal with the economic situation.

Interest was aroused by the war debt postponement suggestion of the mainfesto, but this section was brief and did not indicate the means to be employed.

It simply said that all surplus revenue should be used to pay interest on loans for constructive works, for removal of some of the burdens on food and prime necessities of the working class, and the reduction of taxation on workers' incomes.

Funds Needed

"Further funds should be provid-

DEVILS BATTLE TAR HEELS TO SCORELESS TIE

Bitterly Fighting Teams Are Unable To Cross Goal Lines

JIMMY DEHART'S DUKE REGIME ENDS

More Than 15,000 Brave Cold Drizzle To See Hectic Struggle

KENAN STADIUM, CHAPEL HILL, Dec. 6. (AP)—Two bitterly fighting football teams struggled vainly for a "break" this afternoon as the University of North Carolina and Duke University brought their 1930 seasons to a close, but a sea of mud and a steady rain stopped every real scoring threat and the game ended 0 to 0.

The game today was the last for a Jimmy DeHart football team at Duke. The Blue Devil mentor wil be succeeded next year by Wallace Wade of Alabama.

Seen As Champions

By reason of the tie Duke, undefeated in the State, will be generally recognized as state champions. The Devils beat N. C. State and Davidson and were tied by Wake Forest. Carolina lost to Davidson and beat State and Wake Forest. Wake Forest lost to Carolina and beat Davidson and State.

Duke's only loss of the year was the opening game, won by South Carolina. Today's knotted count and the Wake Forest 13-13 game marred an otherwise clean slate of ten successive games, including victories over Navy, Villanova and Kentucky.

The gridiron was already soaked by a night's drizzle when a steady downpour started one hour before game time, and before the end of the contest almost as much of the field was covered by deep water puddles as showed turf.

15,000 See Game

A crowd somewhere in the neighborhood of 15,000 to 18,000 stood, sat and soaked in the rain and the main color of the contest was lent by the vari-colored slickers, coats, oil cloths, tarpaulins and umbrellas used by the crowd in an effort to keep dry.

Duke, given an edge over the Tar Heels on their previous record, made nine first downs to five for the Heels but the weather and the alert Carolina tacklers kept Bill Murray and Kid Brewer, Duke's star backs, to short gains on nearly every occasion.

Fumbles were more the order of the day than spectacular plays as the 22 men on the field played the roles of mud plodders.

One Real Threat

Duke's only real threat to score

—Please Turn To Page 2-D

HOOVER'S RELIEF BUDGET SLASHED

They Must Resign

(EDITORIAL)

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner of Public Safety Bartlett say that they will not resign.

They must resign.

They say that they "have neither the legal duty nor the moral right" to resign.

We say that they have the legal right and the moral duty to resign.

They talk about the trusts imposed in them by the people of Asheville who elected them to the offices which they now hold.

We say that they have betrayed these trusts and in so doing have brought Asheville to the verge of irreparable ruin.

They say that the demand for their resignation is anonymous.

This newspaper on its own responsibility and on behalf of the people of this community makes this demand as openly and as publicly as it can be made.

They say that they will do everything within their power to avoid a default in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

We say that there is nobody with money who will now lend money to the city of Asheville as long as the administration of its affairs remains in the hands of men who are now known to have administered those affairs with gross incompetency and in rank violation of both their legal and moral obligations as public officials.

Commissioner Rogers has announced his resignation. He has taken the wise course. He has taken the course which he should have taken as a man who sees the grave dangers to which this city is exposed.

This newspaper in spite of all that has happened has credited Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett with having the interests of the people of Asheville at heart. It has believed that the things which they did were done as the result of tragic blundering and without a due realization on their part of the enormity of their offending.

They stand indicted before the people of Asheville, nevertheless, for having turned over millions of dollars of the public funds to the Central Bank & Trust Company without any proper protection of these funds and without letting the public know what they were doing.

Their transactions were cloaked in secrecy. There was no entry upon the books which might have enlightened the people as to the astounding generosity of the commissioners in taking their money in this wholesale fashion for the benefit of an institution which they knew to be unsound and whose practices they knew, none better, to be corrupt.

If the auditors have stated the facts correctly, they were not only violating all moral principles when they did these things, they also went outside the law to raise much of this money.

These funds have been lost. Against some of them the city holds a mass of alleged securities but these securities are for the most part worth little or nothing.

As a result of their having been lost the credit of the city has been imperiled. As a result of their having been lost the community is already financially on the rocks.

It can be rescued from its distressed condition only if it can secure a government which will command the confidence which Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bart-

DEP CLO WILL

Protect To Be

WILL IN

Organi Prot

Formatio Carolina D ciation to depositors state bank tion of all section wa Robert R. and James neys, empl the organi and to ma ties.

Headqua day morni the ground building a expected t Raleigh. Al be directe which will charge of Affairs be manage trustees in board whic lect, it wa sation, wh a nucleus tion of de this sectio closed, wil

Only Members positors ha of the clo Central Ba Haywood American N the Comm Company, Biltmore-O Leicester; t Trust Com Bank of M of Waynes Trust Com Bank, and Trust Com the Citizen Clay Count the First at Tryon banks also First Bank Hendersonv and Flat

The inco announced interested positors an rounding c —(Pl

OPPO M'NU

TY COMMISSIONER L. B. ROGERS RESIG

'E WEATHER
VILLE AND VICINITY:
y and slightly colder Sun-

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIM

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1868 — ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 7, 1930 — 32 PA

ISAPPROPRIATION OF $875,000 OF COU
Y CENTRAL BANK REVEALED IN SEARCH

ERTS, BARTLETT WILL RESIGN; STATEMENT JED LATE SATURDAY

And Commissioner Declare They espise Impudence And Cowardice Of Demand" Made Upon Them

. Rogers, commissioner of public works for the city ille, yesterday afternoon tendered his resignation to emaining members of the board stating that he de- o "what is best for my community under the feelings w exist."

he same time Mayor Gallatin Roberts and C. H. Bart- nissioner of public safety, issued a joint statement in y flatly refused to resign saying "we despise alike the e and cowardice of the demand that has been made

e developments followed the revelation yesterday hat the commissioners had been warned of the peril with the Central Bank and Trust company in a spe- report made by George G. Scott and company, audi- unicipal finances here for the past 15 years, which ember 15 "it is possible to be charged that the com- have perverted the credit of the city to the gain and of a private institution."

oberts and Commissioner their statement refusing aid:

ople of Asheville:

eraigned Commissioners of Asheville choose this esponse to the demand of s of local "bankers, fi- d business men" of un- mposition, notification of e to us by newspaper pub- hat we forthwith resign memberships in the gov- of the City of Asheville, we presume to infer, that ment of said City be aken over by said confer-tegorical Refusal

es which we hold, with trusts which they impose, red upon us by the votes lified electors of this City n the last municipal elec- e are competently advised ve neither the legal duty oral right voluntarily to e several trusts to any ther authority than that ch we hold. Therefore, e no other answer to the y demand of this anony- d-be municipal dictator- a categorical refusal.

neither apologies nor re- ny of our acts as Com- of the City of Asheville. , we have neither apology for the efforts which we, aboration with the govern- he County of Buncombe ver by our distinguished esteemed fellow citizen, n M. Anderson, have put time to time for the ars to ward off the over- calamity which has over- community. We would bling and indifferent in- we failed to recognize the injury which inevitably ud the closing of the Cen- and Trust Company. A

DICTATORSHIP TO SOLVE BRITAIN'S PROBLEMS URGED

Young Laborites Demand Emergency Changes In Government

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Eighteen prominent young Laborites tonight defied the MacDonald government by issuing a manifesto which calls for a semi-dictatorship to solve the British industrial crisis and also, for postponement of the repayment of war debts.

The dictatorship plan of the eighteen, who are led by Sir Oswald Mosley, would set up five dictators instead of one, these men to act as a group to deal with the economic situation.

Interest was aroused by the war debt postponement suggestion of the manifesto, but this section was brief and did not indicate the means to be employed.

It simply said that all surplus revenue should be used to pay interest on loans for constructive works, for removal of some of the burdens on food and prime necessities of the working class, and the reduction of taxation on workers' incomes.

Funds Needed

"Further funds should be provid-

DEVILS BATTLE TAR HEELS TO SCORELESS TIE

Bitterly Fighting Teams Are Unable To Cross Goal Lines

JIMMY DEHART'S DUKE REGIME ENDS

More Than 15,000 Brave Cold Drizzle To See Hectic Struggle

KENAN STADIUM, CHAPEL HILL, Dec. 6. (AP)—Two bitterly fighting football teams struggled vainly for a "break" this afternoon as the University of North Carolina and Duke University brought their 1930 seasons to a close, but a sea of mud and a steady rain stopped every real scoring threat and the game ended 0 to 0.

The game today was the last for a Jimmy DeHart football team at Duke. The Blue Devil mentor will be succeeded next year by Wallace Wade of Alabama.

Seen As Champions

By reason of the tie Duke, undefeated in the State, will be generally recognized as state champions. The Devils beat N. C. State and Davidson and were tied by Wake Forest. Carolina lost to Davidson and beat State and Wake Forest. Wake Forest lost to Carolina and beat Davidson and State.

Duke's only loss of the year was the opening game, won by South Carolina. Today's knotted count and the Wake Forest 13-13 game marred an otherwise clean slate of ten successive games, including victories over Navy, Villanova and Kentucky.

The gridiron was already soaked by a night's drizzle when a steady downpour started one hour before game time, and before the end of the contest almost as much of the field was covered by deep water puddles as showed turf.

15,000 See Game

A crowd somewhere in the neighborhood of 15,000 to 18,000 stood, sat and soaked in the rain and the main color of the contest was lent by the vari-colored slickers, coats, oil cloths, tarpaulins and umbrellas used by the crowd in an effort to keep dry.

Duke, given an edge over the Tar Heels on their previous record, made nine first downs to five for the Heels but the weather and the alert Carolina tacklers kept Bill Murray and Kid Brewer, Duke's star backs, to short gains on nearly every occasion.

Fumbles were more the order of the day than spectacular plays as the 22 men on the field played the roles of mud plodders.

One Real Threat

Duke's only real threat to score

—Please Turn To Page 2-D

HOOVER'S RELIEF BUDGET SLASHED

They Must Resign

(EDITORIAL)

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner of Public Safety Bartlett say that they will not resign.

They must resign.

They say that they "have neither the legal duty nor the moral right" to resign.

We say that they have the legal right and the moral duty to resign.

They talk about the trusts imposed in them by the people of Asheville who elected them to the offices which they now hold.

We say that they have betrayed these trusts and in so doing have brought Asheville to the verge of irreparable ruin.

They say that the demand for their resignation is anonymous.

This newspaper on its own responsibility and on behalf of the people of this community makes this demand as openly and as publicly as it can be made.

They say that they will do everything within their power to avoid a default in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

We say that there is nobody with money who will now lend money to the city of Asheville as long as the administration of its affairs remains in the hands of men who are now known to have administered those affairs with gross incompetency and in rank violation of both their legal and moral obligations as public officials.

Commissioner Rogers has announced his resignation. He has taken the wise course. He has taken the course which he should have taken as a man who sees the grave dangers to which this city is exposed.

This newspaper in spite of all that has happened has credited Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett with having the interests of the people of Asheville at heart. It has believed that the things which they did were done as the result of tragic blundering and without a due realization on their part of the enormity of their offending.

They stand indicted before the people of Asheville, nevertheless, for having turned over millions of dollars of the public funds to the Central Bank & Trust Company without any proper protection of these funds and without letting the public know what they were doing.

Their transactions were cloaked in secrecy. There was no entry upon the books which might have enlightened the people as to the astounding generosity of the commissioners in taking their money in this wholesale fashion for the benefit of an institution which they knew to be unsound and whose practices they knew, none better, to be corrupt.

If the auditors have stated the facts correctly, they were not only violating all moral principles when they did these things, they also went outside the law to raise much of this money.

These funds have been lost. Against some of them the city holds a mass of alleged securities but these securities are for the most part worth little or nothing.

As a result of their having been lost the credit of the city has been imperiled. As a result of their having been lost the community is already financially on the rocks.

It can be rescued from its distressed condition only if it can secure a government which will command the

DEPOSITORS OF CLOSED BANKS WILL ORGANIZE

Protective Association To Be Formed In City On Tuesday

WILL COOPERATE IN LIQUIDATION

Organization's Goal Is Protection Of All Depositors

Formation of the Western North Carolina Depositors' Protective Association to protect the interests of all depositors and to co-operate with the state bank examiners in the liquidation of all banks now closed in this section was announced last night by Robert R. Reynolds, J. M. Horner, Jr., and James MacRae, Asheville attorneys, employed by incorporators of the organization to draft a charter and to map a course for its activities.

Headquarters will be opened Tuesday morning at 28 Page Avenue on the ground floor of the Grove Arcade building at which time a charter is expected to be drafted and sent to Raleigh. All affairs and activities will be directed from the headquarters which will be kept open daily and in charge of a manager.

Affairs of the organization are to be managed by the members through trustees in the form of an advisory board which they themselves will select, it was announced. The organization, when incorporated, will form a nucleus about which an association of depositors in all counties in this section where banks have been closed, will be formed.

Only Depositor Members

Membership will be limited to depositors having funds in one or more of the closed banks, including the Central Bank and Trust Company, its Haywood street branch, and the American National Bank, in Asheville, the Commonwealth Bank and Trust Company, of Black Mountain; the Biltmore-Oteen Bank; the Bank of Leicester; the Polk County Bank and Trust Company at Columbus; the Bank of Murphy; the Citizens Bank of Waynesville; the First Bank and Trust Company, the Citizen National Bank, and the American Bank and Trust Company, of Hendersonville; the Citizens Bank of Bryson City; the Clay County Bank at Hayesville; and the First Bank and Trust Company at Tryon in Polk county. The closed banks also include branches of the First Bank and Trust Company of Hendersonville, located at Saluda and Flat Rock.

The incorporators, who are to be announced early this week, are men interested in the welfare of all depositors and the communities surrounding closed banks, and will func-

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

OPPOSITION TO M'NINCH GROWS

THEDRAL

Of Companion
Stirs Up
g Church

BISHOP'S
T ATTACK

n Mobbed By tion As He
To Reply

ec. 7. (AP)—A little
, the former Judge
urned Golden Rule
ndemonium of epi-on and violence toilliam T. Manning's
ionable Cathedral
Divine.
one friend at his ong the 3,500 well-ers and heard him-
s author of a book
, insiduous and
iece of propaganda
behalf of lewdness,
ultery and unreratification."
idly calm, brought end with a denunwho stands openee love under cover
anionate marriage.'
back to the congre-
his head in prayer.

to Action

impion of companstrode forward and
ble just below the
he bishop still en-don.
ng!" he cried, his
the thousands who
g to the bishop's have falsely rep-
this is not a house
t a house of God!
or five minutes to ir attack!"
the bishop of the York was drowned
the former child-of Denver. The
with his back to

ang forward, pull-the table. The
the most famous world, buzzed with ly dressed women
ing dress.
ore men and womseats, pushed into shed forward.
ried: "Punch him."
ruck Lindsey over heard. The aisle

e press table at been sitting and leaped, filled with worshippers.
to have forgot-
ch was in prayer;
iop Manning who,

the perils of the position in which the city has been placed.

It has put these perils before the City Commissioners.

The Citizen has done this as completely as lay in its power, impersonally and with a view to showing the actual conditions as they exist.

It has tried to bring home to the Commissioners that if they persist in their refusal to resign they thereby menace the city with municipal paralysis.

Besides this grave peril there is another which is not less grave. It is that the people will be plunged irretrievably into a state of bitterness the effects of which may be tragic.

Never has any city been in more desperate need of a new leadership which the people as a whole would trust and behind which they could and would unite. Unless we can get such a leadership and get it quickly there is no telling what will happen.

The present condition of affairs is heavy with potential disaster. The possibilities which may come out of such a situation sober and appal every citizen who is capable of thought.

Above all others, Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett should be sobered and appalled by these possibilities.

They must realize that the public is now suffering from a violent attack of nausea, an attack so violent that for the moment it is almost incapacitated for thought or action. They must realize that the public cannot escape its present dangerous mood as long as they remain in office, thus blocking the way to an immediate plan of constructive action.

They should resign and they should resign at once. The time which they have now had for reflection should have brought them irresistibly to this conclusion.

Their friends should make them appreciate the perils to which they are exposing the community, the perils that grow out of the present temper of the people as well as the perils which confront us financially. They should make them see that to resign and clear the way for a new administration of the city's affairs is the only course which gives Asheville a chance of escaping from the perils which menace it and for which they assume responsibility as long as they persist in the unwise stand which they have adopted.

With new men at the helm, men who are free of entanglements of any kind, men who will instantly command the confidence of the financial world and whose presence in city hall would give us a chance to make a fresh start at once, the city would take new heart and new hope. Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett have it in their exclusive power to bring this about immediately.

We cannot yet believe that they will close this door of hope in the face of a people as distressed and sorely tried as are the people of Asheville at this moment.

Five Held For Shooting Banker After Kidnaping

Texas Man Is Brutally Treated After Being Held For Ransom

TEXARKANA, Texas, Dec. 7. (P)—

PASSENGER AIR LINE OPENS IN SOUTH WEDNESDAY

CONSIDER NEW MEMBER TODAY

Question Of Successor To L. B. Rogers Will Be Brought Up

WALTER S. M'RARY IS TENDERED POST

Developments Grew Out Of Report Made By Auditing Firm

A successor to Commissioner L. B. Rogers, who resigned his post Saturday afternoon, stating that he desired to do "what is best for my community under the feeling which now exist," will be considered today at the regular meeting of the city board, Mayor Gallatin Roberts said last night.

Mayor Roberts would not say who would be named to succeed the commissioner of public works whose resignation was effective immediately.

Tendered Post

Walter S. McRary, prominent Asheville business man and owner of the McRary Tire company, has been tendered the post made vacant by the resignation of Mr. Rogers, it was learned last night.

Mr. McRary, however, refused to confirm the report that he would be appointed, saying "I would not have the job if it was offered me on a silver plate." He said that he had no desire to have his name brought into the situation but would not deny that he had been tendered the position by city officials. He declined to amplify his statement.

City officials said last night that they had not given the question of selecting a man to become the third member of the board and Mr. Rogers' successor any great amount of attention.

Developments growing out of the involvement of city funds in the defunct Central Bank and Trust Company, recalled Saturday, in addition to the resignation of Mr. Rogers, in statements from Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett that they had no intention of resigning.

Criticism Made

Criticism had been directed at the city commissioners as a result of a special audit report filed with the board by George G. Scott and company, public accountants, citing certain practices in connection with the alleged extension of city credit to aid a private institution.

Mr. Rogers, in quitting his post, made it plain that he was taking the step because he thought it to the best interest of the community in view of the situation which had arisen. He placed his resignation in the hands of Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett Saturday afternoon with the request that it be immediately effective.

Stating that he did not plan to attend the meeting at the city hall when the commissioners will act upon his resignation, Mr. Rogers said fired to do "what is best for my community under the feelings which now exist."

At the same time Mayor Gallatin Roberts and C. H. Bartlett, commissioner of public safety, issued a joint statement in which they flatly refused to resign saying "we despise alike the impudence and cowardice of the demand that has been made upon us."

These developments followed the revelation yesterday morning that the commissioners had been warned of the peril in dealing with the Central Bank and Trust company in a special audit report made by George G. Scott and company, auditors of municipal finances here for the past 15 years, which did November 15 "it is possible to be charged that the commissioners have perverted the credit of the city to the gain and advantage of a private institution."

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett, in their statement refusing to resign, said:

"To The People of Asheville:

"The undersigned Commissioners of the City of Asheville choose this method of response to the demand of a conference of local "bankers, financiers and business men" of undisclosed composition, notification of which comes to us by newspaper publications, that we forthwith resign our several memberships in the governing body of the City of Asheville, to the end, we presume to infer, that the government of said City be forthwith taken over by said conference.

Categorical Refusal

The offices which we hold, with the public trusts which they impose, were bestowed upon us by the votes of the qualified electors of this City duly cast in the last municipal election, and we are competently advised that we have neither the legal duty nor the moral right voluntarily to resign these several trusts to any lesser or other authority than that under which we hold. Therefore, there can be no other answer to the extraordinary demand of this anonymous would-be municipal dictatorship than a categorical refusal.

"We have neither apologies nor regrets for any of our acts as Commissioners of the City of Asheville. Particularly, we have neither apology nor regret for the efforts which we, in full collaboration with the government of the County of Buncombe presided over by our distinguished and highly esteemed fellow citizen, Dr. Newton M. Anderson, have put forth from time to time for the last two years to ward off the overwhelming calamity which has overtaken this community. We would have been blind and indifferent indeed had we failed to recognize the devastating injury which inevitably would attend the closing of the Central Bank and Trust Company. A popular bank, having over twenty thousand depositors—a bank which so consistently and generously had supported every public enterprise that promised civic betterment, the Central Bank and Trust Company as a going concern involved the prosperity of this community and the welfare of its citizens to a greater degree than all other such institutions in Asheville or in Western North Carolina. The City and County governments equally realized the immeasurable calamity that would result to those governments and to their several constituencies by the failure of this bank, and for ourselves, individually and collectively, we have made to avert that calamity and of unfathomable regret for the failure of our efforts.

"We sincerely believe that our efforts would not have failed except for the systematic machinations of rival financial interests to undermine public confidence in this so valuable community institution, and we would be able to entertain a larger

—(Please Turn To Page Six)

DICTATORSHIP TO SOLVE BRITAIN'S PROBLEMS URGED

Young Laborites Demand Emergency Changes In Government

LONDON, Dec. 6. (AP)—Eighteen prominent young Laborites tonight defied the MacDonald government by issuing a manifesto which calls for a semi-dictatorship to solve the British industrial crisis and also for postponement of the repayment of war debts.

The dictatorship plan of the eighteen, who are led by Sir Oswald Mosley, would set up five dictators instead of one, these men to act as a group to deal with the economic situation.

Interest was aroused by the war debt postponement suggestion of the mainfesto, but this section was brief and did not indicate the means to be employed.

It simply said that all surplus revenue should be used to pay interest on loans for constructive works, for removal of some of the burdens on food and prime necessities of the working class, and the reduction of taxation on workers' incomes.

Funds Needed

"Further funds should be provided for such purposes," read the manifesto, "by some postponement, until reconstruction, of the precipitate attempt to repay the war debt from taxation of this age and generation."

Among the eighteen signers are

—(Please Turn To Page Six)

NEGRO IS KILLED BY DETECTIVE AT WINSTON-SALEM

WINSTON-SALEM, Dec. 6. (AP)—A negro, Sam Epps, was shot to death by Detective J. R. Crutchfield, of the Winston-Salem police department, here tonight.

The shooting occurred in the negro residential section of the city when Crutchfield and two other detectives, R. G. Simpson and R. L. Blackburn, were attempting to arrest Epps and his father-in-law, John Rennert.

The police said Epps and Rennert were armed and that Crutchfield killed Epps when he saw him draw a revolver and attempt to shoot Detective Simpson.

Dr. W. N. Dalton, Forsyth County coroner, announced an inquest would be held tomorrow.

Hectic Struggle

KENAN STADIUM, CHAPEL HILL, Dec. 6. (AP)—Two bitterly fighting football teams struggled vainly for a "break" this afternoon as the University of North Carolina and Duke University brought their 1930 seasons to a close, but a sea of mud and a steady rain stopped every real scoring threat and the game ended 0 to 0.

The game today was the last for a Jimmy DeHart football team at Duke. The Blue Devil mentor wil be succeeded next year by Wallace Wade of Alabama.

Seen As Champions

By reason of the tie Duke, undefeated in the State, will be generally recognized as state champions. The Devils beat N. C. State and Davidson and were tied by Wake Forest. Carolina lost to Davidson and beat State and Wake Forest. Wake Forest lost to Carolina and beat Davidson and State.

Duke's only loss of the year was the opening game, won by South Carolina. Today's knotted count and the Wake Forest 13-13 game marred an otherwise clean slate of ten successive games, including victories over Navy, Villanova and Kentucky.

The gridiron was already soaked by a night's drizzle when a steady downpour started one hour before game time, and before the end of the contest almost as much of the field was covered by deep water puddles as showed turf.

15,000 See Game

A crowd somewhere in the neighborhood of 15,000 to 18,000 stood, sat and soaked in the rain and the main color of the contest was lent by the vari-colored slickers, coats, oil cloths, tarpaulins and umbrellas used by the crowd in an effort to keep dry.

Duke, given an edge over the Tar Heels on their previous record, made nine first downs to five for the Heels but the weather and the alert Carolina tacklers kept Bill Murray and Kid Brewer, Duke's star backs, to short gains on nearly every occasion.

Fumbles were more the order of the day than spectacular plays as the 22 men on the field played the roles of mud plodders.

One Real Threat

Duke's only real threat to score

—Please Turn To Page 2-D

HOOVER'S RELIEF BUDGET SLASHED TO 110 MILLIONS

House Committee Pares Off 40 Millions In Building Plans

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6. (UP) President Hoover's public construction program for unemployment relief was reduced tonight from a $150,000,000 to a $110,000,000 program and plans laid to take it up in the house early next week.

The reduction was made by the house appropriations sub-committee which considered it. The sub-committee will report the measure, which carries funds for public buildings and highway construction, to the full committee Tuesday for action.

Monday the senate will take up the bill for $60,000,000 for feed, seed, fertilizer and food loans to drought-stricken farmers, which compares with the $25,000,000 appropriation

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

YOUNG HOOVER'S CHILDREN REACH CAPITAL TODAY

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6. (AP)—Three young persons to whom President Hoover is just plain grandfather and the White House is grandmother's home will arrive in Washington tomorrow.

They are Herbert Hoover III, Peggy and Joan, the children of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, Jr. They come from Palo Alto, Calif., with their mother to accompany Chikaming with President and Mrs. Hoover. Their father is in Asheville, N. C.

They will be the first children to live for any time in the White House in more than a decade. Some of President Wilson's grandchildren made their residence in the White House during his administration.

The twins, three of the seven new children born since Coolidge left, a president's home.

Vienna Police Release Levine; Plans New Hop

VIENNA, Dec. 6. (AP)—Charles A. Levine, freed of a suspicion of attempting to counterfeit small French notes, will return to the United States shortly to perfect plans for a solo round-the-world air flight to be undertaken in 15 days, he said today.

Charges preferred against him November 13 when he was arrested with Dieudonne Costes, famed aviator, were dropped today, the police announced. Levine denied that there was "any trace of proof" that he had attempted to engage in the delicate business of money.

The man who achieved note as the first transatlantic airplane passenger to get out of a plane in the middle of ocean, then to take the controls and the airplane, has visited Berlin on his way to Vienna.

Levine said he had come to Vienna to see the Austrian capital and to visit the Prater, famous amusement park, and to see the Danube.

Levine said he had come to Vienna to see the Austrian capital and to visit the Prater, famous amusement park, and to see the Danube.

Levine said the engineer did not understand him very well, got confused when he saw the French francs and handed the pilot francs.

Levine said the engineer did not understand him very well, got confused when he saw the French francs and handed the pilot francs.

Levine said he had tried to travel, but was unsuccessful. Then he bought a second class railroad ticket to Paris.

"Second class is good enough for me," he said.

Levine attributed his misfortune to an idea he had in connection with plans for his round-the-world flight. That was he have small medals made bearing his likeness and a map of the globe to distribute at his various stopping places. Unfortunately, he decided to have the medals a size equal to French 5-franc pieces and approached a Viennese engraver for the medals.

Levine said the engraver did not understand him very well, got confused when he saw the French francs and handed the pilot francs.

half of the people of this community makes this demand as openly and as publicly as it can be made.

They say that they will do everything within their power to avoid a default in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

We say that there is nobody with money who will now lend money to the city of Asheville as long as the administration of its affairs remains in the hands of men who are now known to have administered those affairs with gross incompetency and in rank violation of both their legal and moral obligations as public officials.

Commissioner Rogers has announced his resignation. He has taken the wise course. He has taken the course which he should have taken as a man who sees the grave dangers to which this city is exposed.

This newspaper in spite of all that has happened has credited Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett with having the interests of the people of Asheville at heart. It has believed that the things which they did were done as the result of tragic blundering and without a due realization on their part of the enormity of their offending.

They stand indicted before the people of Asheville, nevertheless, for having turned over millions of dollars of the public funds to the Central Bank & Trust Company without any proper protection of these funds and without letting the public know what they were doing.

Their transactions were cloaked in secrecy. There was no entry upon the books which might have enlightened the people as to the astounding generosity of the commissioners in taking their money in this wholesale fashion for the benefit of an institution which they knew to be unsound and whose practices they knew, none better, to be corrupt.

If the auditors have stated the facts correctly, they were not only violating all moral principles when they did these things, they also went outside the law to raise much of this money.

These funds have been lost. Against some of them the city holds a mass of alleged securities but these securities are for the most part worth little or nothing.

As a result of their having been lost the credit of the city has been imperiled. As a result of their having been lost the community is already financially on the rocks.

It can be rescued from its distressed condition only if it can secure a government which will command the confidence which Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett as officials have now utterly lost at home and abroad.

When Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett say that they will not resign they are saying that they will refuse to recognize the right of the community to save itself if it can be saved.

If they persist in that attitude they will forfeit all claim to public sympathy. If they persist in that attitude their final blunder in so doing will command the wrath of an outraged people.

Asheville can recover from the blow that has been dealt it if it can be reorganized quickly as a corporation. If the processes of reorganization are delayed the peril will be aggravated and the situation may well become hopeless.

Every business institution in the city will be crippled for years to come if the city defaults on its money obligations. It is certain to default if Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett continue in office.

The catastrophe with which Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett threaten the city will affect not only the city and its business institutions, it will affect the schools, it will affect the homes, it will affect every man, woman and child in Asheville in one way or another.

The public can depend upon it that the decision of these two Commissioners will wreck all chance of Asheville's getting on its feet for years to come, if ever.

The things which must be done to ward off the immediate dangers which are threatening us must be done without delay. They cannot be done by Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett.

When they say that they will not resign they say that they are putting their own pride and vanity and the selfish interests of those who have advised them so viciously ahead of the interests of Asheville.

They are saying that the wreck which they have brought upon Asheville they will carry to completion.

No honest citizen, no patriotic citizen, no citizen with a grain of public spirit in his make-up, no citizen who is not utterly depraved or bereft of his reason would insist upon following a course so fraught with grief and disaster to a city he claimed to love.

Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett must resign.

They must resign immediately.

Formation of the Western North Carolina Depositors' Protective Association to protect the interests of all depositors and to co-operate with the state bank examiners in the liquidation of all banks now closed in this section was announced last night by Robert R. Reynolds, J. M. Horner, Jr., and James MacRae, Asheville attorneys, employed by incorporators of the organization to draft a charter and to map a course for its activities.

Headquarters will be opened Tuesday morning at 28 Page Avenue on the ground floor of the Grove Arcade building at which time a charter is expected to be drafted and sent to Raleigh. All affairs and activities will be directed from the headquarters which will be kept open daily and in charge of a manager.

Affairs of the organization are to be managed by the members through trustees in the form of an advisory board which they themselves will select, it was announced. The organization, when incorporated, will form a nucleus about which an association of depositors in all counties in this section where banks have been closed, will be formed.

Only Depositor Members

Membership will be limited to depositors having funds in one or more of the closed banks, including the Central Bank and Trust Company, its Haywood street branch, and the American National Bank, in Asheville, the Commonwealth Bank and Trust Company, of Black Mountain; the Biltmore-Oteen Bank; the Bank of Leicester; the Polk County Bank and Trust Company at Columbus; the Bank of Murphy; the Citizens Bank of Waynesville; the First Bank and Trust Company, the Citizen National Bank, and the American Bank and Trust Company, of Hendersonville; the Citizens Bank of Bryson City; the Clay County Bank at Hayesville; and the First Bank and Trust Company at Tryon in Polk county. The closed banks also include branches of the First Bank and Trust Company of Hendersonville, located at Saluda and Flat Rock.

The incorporators, who are to be announced early this week, are men interested in the welfare of all depositors and the communities surrounding closed banks, and will func-

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

OPPOSITION TO M'NINCH GROWS IN WASHINGTON

Overman To Oppose Him If Fund Mystery Is Not Explained

By H. E. C. BRYANT
(Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 6.—Senator Overman will not vote for the confirmation of Frank R. McNinch for the Federal Power Commission unless the mystery of the funds for the McNinch-Simmons campaign against the Democratic presidential ticket in 1928 is satisfactorily explained. He has been disposed to overlook the fact that McNinch bolted and to consider him a regenerate Democrat, but he is now satisfied that North Carolina people want the nomination sent back to the White House if the nominee still insists on silence on the con-

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

and 19, the bank having had notice of the intention to use the money for other purposes, was converted by the bank, without the knowledge or consent of the county officials, to other purposes, was revealed last night.

Representatives of The Asheville Citizen yesterday discovered records of the transaction in the books of the county. Newton M. Anderson, chairman of the former county commission and by virtue of that office county commissioner of finance, was interviewed, and he confirmed the facts. They were further confirmed by auditors of the county who said that the records of the Central Bank and Trust Company show that the money had been credited to the special note account on the books of the bank.

Mr. Anderson, seen at his home last night by reporters, explained in detail the transaction by which the county was left owing $1,000,000 in notes already overdue, and $875,000 in new notes for which it has now only a certificate of deposit in the defunct Central Bank and Trust company to show.

On November 4 county commissioners authorized sale of $875,000 worth of notes, with which to pay $1,000,000 in notes falling due November 12 and 18. The county planned to meet from current revenue an additional $125,000 in notes of the same issue.

Admit Getting Funds

The notes were sold through the Central Bank and Trust company. While the bank apparently received money for the notes a week earlier, L. L. Jenkins, Buncombe county treasurer, was not notified by the bank until October 20 that the funds had been placed to the credit of the county. In a letter dated October 20, 1930, J. Charles Bradford, cashier of the Central Bank and Trust company, informed Mr. Jenkins:

"We are enclosing herewith duplicate deposit slip $875,984.27 covering proceeds of Buncombe county notes sold for your account, $875,000 plus interest. This was credited to your account on October 14, 1930, and the mailing of the credit advice was overlooked. Regretting the oversight, and with best wishes . . . ."

The writer added by postcript that "account of expenses in handling this issue will be mailed later," and also that copies of the letter were directed to Mr. Anderson and to H. E. Walter, then county auditor.

Mr. Anderson said he was "repeatedly assured" that the money was being held by the bank in readiness to meet the notes when they came due and he was unaware that things were different until two or possible three days before the notes fell due.

Notifies County

A representattive of the bank informed the county commissioners at that time that the bank did not have the money to meet the notes, Mr. Anderson said.

"Fearing the county's credit would be gravely impaired if the notes were not met," Mr. Anderson said, "the commission set about to issue new notes in the sum of $875,000 and rushed them to New York in an ef-

—(Please Turn To Page Six)

BARTHOU SEEKING TO LINE UP NEW FRENCH CABINET

Former Premier Accepts Difficult Task Of Organization

PARIS, Dec. 6. (AP)—Senator Louis Barthou, once premier of France and a dozen times cabinet minister, tonight was trying to conciliate France's many political parties in an effort to form a cabinet to succeed the defeated Tardieu ministry.

M. Barthou accepted the difficult task of forming a government late today after former Preimer Raymond Poincare had refused on account of ill health.

Certain political groups held the belief, however, that President Gaston Doumergue might ask M. Poincare to reconsider and take command if Senator Barthou fails to get enough support.

To Report Today

The latter told the President he would consult friends and political leaders during the night and would return to the Elysee Palace tomorrow morning to report success or failure.

One of the best indications that the senator may succeed is the announcement this evening that the Radical Socialists have changed their stand and will offer him their almost necessary assistance providing that certain portfolios are given them. Since 1928 they have refused to take part in any concentration government. Heretofore, they have demanded the important post of minister of the interior but it is now

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

SCISSORS GRINDER IS FOUND FATALLY HURT IN ROADWAY

WINDSOR, Dec. 6. (AP)—An itinerant scissors grinder, believed to be Charlie Long, of Norfolk, was found in a roadway near here late this afternoon, fatally injured. One man told officers he saw an unidentified automobile run over the prostrate form of the victim and go its way without stopping. The itinerant, who appears about 70 years old, died shortly after he was found.

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Opposition to McNinch growing in Washington. —Page 1-A Young Hoover's children to reach capital today. —Page 1-A Vienna police release Levine; plans world hop. —Page 1-A Mellon opposes payment of bonus certificates. —Page 1-A Hoover's relief budget slashed to 110 millions. —Page 1-A Dictatorship to solve Britain's problems urged. —Page 1-A Rector denies knowing admitted slayer of Willis. —Page 1-A Barthou seeking to line up new French cabinet. —Page 1-A Bandits hold up Chicago bank; carry off $40,000. —Page 4-B
Havana students burn portrait of president. —Page 6-C
Stocks continue drop without week-end covering. —Page 2-D

STATE

Consolidation of counties recommended. —Page 3-A Greenville, Tenn., 'weed' market to open Tuesday. —Page 3-B

Mellon Opposes Payment Of Bonus Certificates

Money Deposited To Pay County Notes Vanished

$875,000 Central Bank Deposit Disclosed By Records

—(Continued From Page One)

fort to pay the debt on time. The notes were not accepted, were sent back to us and were burned."

He said the county has not paid the notes although the creditors did not formally declare them in default and agreed to wait until the situation here takes a definite turn.

Mr. Anderson said the usual procedure by the commission for retirement of notes by issuance of new notes, was to sell the notes, and then having the proceeds placed on deposit in a note fund for no other purpose than for retirement of notes due. He said that the bank handling the notes has always been responsible for crediting funds to the note account and for retiring the old notes when they fell due.

On the date that the $875,000 notes were authorized there was to the credit of Buncombe county as general county funds in nine banks a total of $2,207,556.73, distributed as follows:

Central Bank and Trust company, $1,346,727.72; American National Bank, $235,876.26; Bank of West Asheville, $57,190.74; Biltmore-Oteen Bank, $124,181.07; Farmers and Traders Bank of Weaverville, $43,287.52; Southern State Bank, $41,745.85; National Bank of Commerce, $128,909.45; Swannanoa Bank and Trust Company, $36,174.41, and Wachovia Bank and Trust Company, $193,363.71.

Mr. Anderson explained that he and members of the county commission had been repeatedly warned that to check heavily against banks at which funds were already on deposit when the commission took office would cause failures, and added that the effects of action by the commission which would cause collapse of banks, had been pointed out to its members.

Original Deposits

He showed that when he took office December 3, 1928, the county had on deposit at the various banks $2,340,450, secured by collateral with face value fixed at $1,761,625. He declared that by slow process, the county commission, hoping to avoid causing failure of any bank, had lowered this deposit to $2,207,556.73 until issuance of the tax anticipation notes October 4 was authorized for the expressed purpose of retiring notes given near the beginning of the fiscal year in anticipation of taxes for operating expenses. He declared that if the $875,000 had been applied as the commission intended and directed that the money be used, his commission would have left office with smaller amounts on deposit than were on deposit when the commission began its term of service.

"There was never a time when we could take the money from the bank without causing it to fail," Mr. Anderson declared. "We were advised of the situation by a number of business men and were warned time and again against taking any action which would cause the banks to collapse. We didn't want to break any banks and we hoped all along that we could slowly work out the problem so that banks would be able to continue in business, so that people of the city and county would not suffer any loss, and so that the county to decide a bank's condition? It certainly is up to the state banking department to determine whether a bank is solvent, and if it is not, to

J. Winslow Crawford Is Dead In Miami, Fla.

(Special To Citizen-Times)

OLD FORT, Dec. 6.—News of the death of J. Winslow Crawford, 50, formerly of Old Fort, was received here tonight in a message from Miami, Fla. Mr. Crawford was fatally injured in an accident in Miami, details of which have not been obtained here.

Mr. Crawford left here about eight years ago for Miami, where he had been living since. He was known in Old Fort and Asheville.

Surviving are the widow, three sisters, Mrs. J. S. Bradley, of Old Fort, Miss Maude Crawford, of Old Fort, and Mrs. George Lee of Asheville, and one brother, Z. B. Crawford, of Black Mountain.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

CAMPAIGN FUND PROBE CONTINUES

Daily Newspapers Of N. C. Get Requests For Data

CHARLOTTE, Dec. 6. (AP)—Added impetus was given today to the growing suspicion in North Carolina that the Nye senatorial campaign funds investigating committee had not completed its work in this State.

A number of daily newspapers in the State today received requests from Senator Gerald P. Nye, committee chairman, to furnish him with detailed sworn statements of the political advertising carried during the primary and election campaign in behalf of F. M. Simmons, J. W. Bailey, and George M. Pritchard.

Seeks Itemized List

Senator Nye asked for an itemized list of all money expended for political advertising, by whom the bills were paid, whether by check or cash, and if the payments were made in advance or after the advertisements had been printed.

The letters to the newspapers followed closely requests made to several co-election board chairmen asking them to file with the committee the number of absentee ballots cast in the election and the total vote in their counties in the primary.

Among the newspapers receiving letters from Senator Nye were The Goldsboro News Argus, The Greensboro Record, The Henderson Dispatch, The Burlington Times, The Salisbury Post, and The Wilson Times.

Mr. Bailey, in the Democratic primary, defeated Senator Simmons for the Senatorial nomination and in the election he won over Mr. Pritchard, the Republican senatorial nominee.

MAYOR ROBERTS REFUSES TO QUIT

Commissioner Bartlett Also Declares He Will Not Resign

—(Continued From Page One)

measure of respect for the motives of the anonymous conference which makes this demand upon us, if we could be assured that this conference, in its composition, is not largely representative of the jealous interests, financial and political, which have been chiefly instrumental in creating the very situation of which they so loudly complain.

Have No Regret

"No man has dared accuse either of us of a dishonest dollar. At all times and places we can look every constituent of ours squarely in the face, without shame or regret for any official act of ours.

"At all times since the breaking of this storm, we have been willing, nay anxious, to assist in the constitution of a joint liquidation commission that would include the best business ability and the most impartial civic spirit of the community, for the better working out of the problems with which we are confronted. But constructive measures of this sort reasonably calculated to mitigate the severity of this blow apparently are not within the purview of the contemplated anonymous dictatorship. With this high and mighty conference it appears to be a case of rule or ruin. But we presume to doubt the powers of the conference. Our faith in the good sense and the good feeling of this community does not permit us to believe that the conference can either rule or ruin.

Will Not Resign

"We despise alike the impudence and the cowardice of the demand that has been made upon us.

"We shall not resign.

"We wish to assure the people of Asheville and the creditors of Asheville:

"First: That we will do everything within our power to avoid a default for even a day in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

"Second: That to this end we will reduce current expenses to bare necessities and will issue no bonds or notes except for the purpose of meeting obligations now outstanding.

"Third: That hereafter all deposits of City funds in banks will be secured by callateral having a market value equal to or in excess of the amount deposited, such collateral to consist of securities of the character required by law for deposits of state funds.

"GALLATIN ROBERTS, Mayor
"C. H. BARTLETT,
"Comm. Public Safety."

Rogers Resigns

The statement issued by Commissioner Rogers in announcing his resignation was as follows:

"To the Citizens of Asheville:

"After careful consideration and consultation with my friends, I have placed my resignation as Commissioner of Public Works, to be effective immediately, in the hands of the Mayor and Commissioner of Public Safety. In doing this, I am guided by my desire to do what is best for the community under the feelings which now exist.

DAVID BELASCO'S BROTHER TO QUIT CARRIER'S DUTIES

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 6. (AP)—Solly Belasco, brother of David Belasco, dramatist and producer, will lay down his mail sack New Year's Eve after more than 40 years of service as a San Francisco mail carrier.

While David achieved fame and fortune in New York, Solly remained in obscurity delivering mail in San Francisco. He declined to retire several years ago.

DICTATORSHIP IN BRITAIN URGED

Young Laborites Demand Emergency Changes In Government

—(Continued From Page One)

the young millionaire Socialist's wife, Lady Cynthia Mosley, and Oliver Baldwin, son of the Conservative chieftain, Stanley Baldwin. All are laborite members of the house of commons except A. J. Cook, the fiery miner leader who was dubbed "Emperor Cook" during the general strike of 1926.

Declaring that Britain's parliamentary machinery is incapable of dealing with the present situation, Sir Oswald and his associates demand an emergency cabinet of not more than five ministers without portfolio, vested with wide powers for a stated period and subject only to the general control of parliament.

By directly challenging the Labor government, Sir Oswald and his associates—most of them young men—have staked their political careers on this, and disciplinary measures may be expected from labor party leaders.

Seeks Premiership

Just turned 34, Sir Oswald is known as "a young man in a hurry," and the destination he is aiming for is considered to be No. 10 Downing street and the premiership.

He jumped into Ramsay MacDonald's ministry only to resign recently because Laborite leaders rejected his proposals to solve unemployment.

Hence the manifesto may be taken as the voice of young England in the Labor movement, and it concludes:

"The country cannot wait. We want action now to meet the national emergency."

Its more important proposals include:

An emergency cabinet of five.

A national planning organization, to develop new industries and to modernize old ones.

An organization to turn out houses and building materials in the same way munitions were turned out during the World War.

Some postponement of the repayment of the war debt.

Licenses or tariffs for the control of imported manufactures.

An import board for foodstuffs, a guaranteed price for farm products, and the protection of consumers against unfair prices.

MAJOR CAIN BADLY INJURED WHEN HIT

J. S. Bradley, of Old Fort, de Crawford, of Old Fort, George Lee of Asheville, and er, Z. B. Crawford, of Black arrangements have not ounced.

PAIGN FUND IE CONTINUES

Newspapers Of C. Get Requests For Data

OTTE, Dec. 6. (AP)—Added was given today to the uspicion in North Carolina Nye senatorial campaign vestigating committee had leted its work in this er of daily newspapers in today received requests ator Gerald P. Nye, com- airman, to furnish him lled sworn statements of al advertising carried dur- rimary and election cam- behalf of F. M. Simmons, ey, and George M. Pritch-

eks Itemized List

Nye asked for an itemized money expended for po- ertising, by whom the bills whether by check or cash, payments were made in r after the advertisements printed.

ers to the newspapers fol- ely requests made to sev- ction board chairmen ask- to file with the committee er of absentee ballots cast otion and the total vote ounties in the primary.

the newspapers receiving m Senator Nye were The News Argus, The Greens- rd, The Henderson Dis- e Burlington Times, The Post, and The Wilson

ey, in the Democratic pri- ated Senator Simmons for orial nomination and in n he won over Mr. Pritch- epublican senatorial nomi-bank's condition? It cer- up to the state banking t to determine whether a lvent, and if it is not, to osed at the moment such is discovered."

erson said that while he other members of the for- y commission feel that in "best interest of coun- nent and the people," it eep regret that he saw nd to our administration." ked hard and conscienti- d Mr. Anderson "and we we accomplished some ngs during our two years. lized, we put some phases government on a high we have done nothing we lling that the public shall our proceedings are on kept records and any act nmission may be learned records. It is, of course, artening to have such a f affairs come at the very terms."

he was sure the other the former county com- W. Grimes, and J. O. Mc- ur with him in his state- osition regarding handling affairs.

HA! HA!

AN: These shirts simply he laundry, sir.

ER: I know. I've had some with their sides split.— w.

have been chiefly instrumental in creating the very situation of which they so loudly complain.

Have No Regret

"No man has dared accuse either of us of a dishonest dollar. At all times and places we can look every constituent of ours squarely in the face, without shame or regret for any official act of ours.

"At all times since the breaking of this storm, we have been willing, nay anxious, to assist in the constitution of a joint liquidation commission that would include the best business ability and the most impartial civic spirit of the community, for the better working out of the problems with which we are confronted. But constructive measures of this sort reasonably calculated to mitigate the severity of this blow apparently are not within the purview of the contemplated anonymous dictatorship. With this high and mighty conference it appears to be a case of rule or ruin. But we presume to doubt the powers of the conference. Our faith in the good sense and the good feeling of this community does not permit us to believe that the conference can either rule or ruin.

Will Not Resign

"We despise alike the impudence and the cowardice of the demand that has been made upon us.

"We shall not resign.

"We wish to assure the people of Asheville and the creditors of Asheville:

"First: That we will do everything within our power to avoid a default for even a day in the payment of the principal or interest of the city debt.

"Second: That to this end we will reduce current expenses to bare necessities and will issue no bonds or notes except for the purpose of meeting obligations now outstanding.

"Third: That hereafter all deposits of City funds in banks will be secured by collateral having a market value equal to or in excess of the amount deposited, such collateral to consist of securities of the character required by law for deposits of state funds.

"GALLATIN ROBERTS, Mayor
"C. H. BARTLETT,
"Comm. Public Safety."

Rogers Resigns

The statement issued by Commissioner Rogers in announcing his resignation was as follows:

"To the Citizens of Asheville:

"After careful consideration and consultation with my friends, I have placed my resignation as Commissioner of Public Works, to be effective immediately, in the hands of the Mayor and Commissioner of Public Safety. In doing this, I am guided by my desire to do what is best for the community under the feelings which now exist.

"For the three and one-half years that I have served the City as Commissioner of Public Works, I can truthfully say that I have endeavored to my utmost ability to conduct the affairs of my office in an honest, honorable and efficient manner. My record as an official is open to the public.

"I will be glad to render any assistance within my power to my successor.

"L. B. ROGERS."

ASHEVILLE FIRM SUED BY GROCER AT HIGH POINT

HIGH POINT, Dec. 6. (AP)—W. B. Byerly, High Point grocer, today filed suit for $20,000 against Miller Brothers, Asheville directory firm, alleging he was listed as a negro in a local city directory.

Pilot Designs New Winter Flying Help

AKRON, O. Dec. 6. (AP)—An attachment to the airplane engine as an aid to winter flying which it is claimed will start a cold motor in Artic temperatures has been developed by H. P. Whittle here.

Whittle, a former marine pilot.

BRITAIN UNGLD

Young Laborites Demand Emergency Changes In Government

—(Continued From Page One)

the young millionaire Socialist's wife, Lady Cynthia Mosley, and Oliver Baldwin, son of the Conservative chieftain, Stanley Baldwin. All are laborite members of the house of commons except A. J. Cook, the fiery miner leader who was dubbed "Emperor Cook" during the general strike of 1926.

Declaring that Britain's parliamentary machinery is incapable of dealing with the present situation, Sir Oswald and his associates demand an emergency cabinet of not more than five ministers without portfolio, vested with wide powers for a stated period and subject only to the general control of parliament.

By directly challenging the Labor government, Sir Oswald and his associates—most of them young men—have staked their political careers on this, and disciplinary measures may be expected from labor party leaders.

Seeks Premiership

Just turned 34, Sir Oswald is known as "a young man in a hurry," and the destination he is aiming for is considered to be No. 10 Downing street and the premiership.

He jumped into Ramsay MacDonald's ministry only to resign recently because Laborite leaders rejected his proposals to solve unemployment.

Hence the manifesto may be taken as the voice of young England in the Labor movement, and it concludes:

"The country cannot wait. We want action now to meet the national emergency."

Its more important proposals include:

An emergency cabinet of five.

A national planning organization, to develop new industries and to modernize old ones.

An organization to turn out houses and building materials in the same way munitions were turned out during the World War.

Some postponement of the repayment of the war debt.

Licenses or tariffs for the control of imported manufactures.

An import board for foodstuffs, a guaranteed price for farm products, and the protection of consumers against unfair prices.

MAJOR CAIN BADLY INJURED WHEN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

CHAPEL HILL, Dec. 6. (AP)—Major William Cain, 83-year-old professor emeritus in the University of North Carolina, was struck by an automobile here tonight and so seriously injured that fears are felt for his recovery.

Major Cain was struck by a car driven by William Parkin, of this town. Parkin stopped his automobile and assisted others in carrying the injured man to his home. Physicians said he had a broken hip, several bad bruises about the head and possibly internal injuries. He had not regained consciousness at 10 o'clock tonight.

Major Cain is an uncle of Archibald Henderson, who succeeded his uncle as professor of mathematics when the former was retired with a Carnegie pension in 1920. He had been head of the department since he joined the University faculty in 1899.

UNIDENTIFIED MAN IS FATALLY HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

BELMONT, Dec. 6. (AP)—An unidentified man, apparently between 60 and 65 years of, was fatally injured near here tonight in an automobile accident.

Winter and Christmas Merchan
Sale Regardless of Worth! The
Here's Your Chance! Take A Slaughtered Prices! A Few It
dreds! Yes! Hundreds of othe

Florshein Sho

DRESSES!
350 Very Newest Canton Crepe, Long Sleeve Dresses. All to go at . . . . . 1/2 Price

SPORT COA
100 Very Newest Fa Winter Sport Coats.
All at 1/2

Bridge Lamps

HOSIERY!
Ladies' Full Fashion Service Weight all Silk Hose, regular $1.50 value 77c

LADIES' ROB
Ladies' Silk Quilted, bination trimmed —values up to $29.
$2.95 to $11

ENTIRE STOCK MILLINER

500 pairs Girls' and Women's best quality crepe sole Oxfords, regular $4.00 value $1.99

Sale Continu Through Wednesday December 24

Men's Topcoa

1,000 pair Children's and Misses' high top Shoes, Oxfords and Pumps, values up to $3.00 . . . . . $1.67

1,000 pairs Men's fords and high top year welt, best qu shoes, regular $4.00 value . $2

Ladies Silk Scarf

1,000 pair Ladies Novelty Pumps and Oxfords, high and Cuban heels, values up to $4.00 . . . . . $1.97

1,000 pairs Girls', M and Women's Ox and Pumps, regular value $1

Zipper Galosh

3,000 pair Ladies' Sport and Dress Oxfords and Pumps. Value up to $4.00 . $2.95

250 pair 14-in. hig Boys' Hiking Boots, lar $4.00 value $2

Men's 2 Pants Su

YEOMAN CLOT

At the Theaters

THE IMPERIAL

His natural aplomb and sparkling witticisms enhanced by a new supply of funny stories and droll repartee, Will Rogers returned to his theatre public in Asheville yesterday as "Lightnin'," the motion picture adaptation of Frank Bacon's famous stage play of the same name, and as usual was cordially welcomed.

The plot, the dual theme of love and romance which affects Mr. and Mrs. Bill Jones (Mr. Rogers and and Louise Dressler) and their daughter, is cleverly interwoven with the story, and the Nevada-California outdoor settings are realistically beautiful, but Will and his piece in the play predominate to a marked degree of excellence. Certainly, the reactionary impression of all audiences whether they be cosmopolitan or metropolitan, will be favorable to this picture which is nothing more than a cross section of the average American family's home life, but after all the best novel, play and screen material. The proper element of pathos and a touch of feudal bitterness have been added, but these merely give Will more opportunities to bring into play his versatility and technique.

"Lightnin'" is not superior to "They Had to See Paris" and "So This Is London," Will's first sound pictures, but it is just as good which fact alone is sufficient recommendation.—G.W.N.

SOVIET PLOTTERS GRANTED LIVES

Prison Terms Of Three Also Lightened By High Council

—(Continued From Page One)

a chance to undo their evil deeds nevertheless.

NAIVE PROPAGANDA

NEW YORK, Dec. 8. (AP)—A belief that Leonid Ramsin, Russian engineer, whose death sentence was commuted after his conviction with seven others on accusations of plotting against the Soviet regime, is innocent of the charges against him was voiced today by H. W. Brooks, consulting engineer, and a friend of Ramsin.

Brooks, who was in Europe with Ramsin while the Russian engineer allegedly negotiated with groups hostile to the Soviet government, declared he saw "never a sign of a plot."

The confession Ramsin made accusing himself of sabotage and of plotting the overthrow of the Soviet government, as well as the other proceedings at the trial of the eight engineers, was termed the "most naive piece of propaganda I ever encountered" by the American engineer. Brooks declared the confession was arranged by the Ogpu, Soviet secret police, as part of a "revolting farce" to strengthen the position of the Stalin dictatorship.

Ramsin, Brooks said, is recognized as an authority on certain phases of heat power engineering. Ramsin is head of the thermo-technical institute of Moscow and is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

CAUGHT IT WOULD
BARGAINS IN OUR NEED SPACE AND WON'T SEE THESE

BARTLETT WILL QUIT POST TODAY

Public Safety Director Issues Statement Urging Unity

—(Continued From Page One)

and my friends to the fullest extent, that I tender my resignation.

"Existing conditions in the city of Asheville which have arisen within the past two weeks have caused the finger of criticism to be directed at the municipal officials and resulted in the resignation Saturday of my colleague, L. B. Rogers.

"Since the resignation of Mr. Rogers I have been besieged by friends—true friends—who have anxiously asked me for my position in this matter. After giving every angle of the present situation very lengthy consideration, I have arrived at the conclusion that the proper course, in view of the present feeling in Asheville, is to offer my resignation as commissioner of public safety of the city of Asheville.

"My resignation will be placed in the hands of the secretary treasurer of the city of Asheville tomorrow morning to be acted on when the city commission board is composed of a quorum.

"My interest—and only interest for the past 31 years—has been in the upbuilding of the city of Asheville, and my aim in the future will be the same. I am leaving my post without malice and without fear and whoever my successor may be I will gladly give him any and all information and assistance which I may possess.

"My earnest desire is for us citizens of Asheville to get together, collectedly and coolly, and quietly work out a solution to this situation.

"I want to take this opportunity to express my genuine appreciation to the citizens of Asheville who have always so willingly supported me in my efforts."

(Signed) C. H. BARTLETT,
Commissioner of Public Safety of Asheville, N. C.

Mr. Bartlett's letter of resignation, like that of Mr. Rogers, was brief. It reads as follows:

"Asheville, N. C., December 9, 1930.

"To The Mayor and Board of Commissioners, The City of Asheville, Asheville, N. C.

"Gentlemen: Please consider this as my resignation as Commissioner of Public Safety of the city of Asheville to take effect as soon as your honorable body can lawfully accept this, my resignation.

"Yours very truly,
"C. H. BARTLETT.
"Commissioner of Public Safety."

Mr. Bartlett entered the service of the city more than 30 years ago. He was a member of the city police force for more than three years serving as patrolman and captain on the force. He left the police department to become deputy city tax collector and upon the death of J. S. Harrison was named city tax collector, a position he held until his election in 1923 as commissioner of public safety.

In 1927 Mr. Bartlett was re-elected to the post.

Day's Happenings

A test case, a supreme court decision in which will determine procedure in a large number of similar actions in connection with liquidation of affairs of closed banks in Buncombe county, was decided yesterday in Buncombe county superior court and was docketed immediately for hearing on appeal in the state supreme court.

Judge Cameron F. MacRae by his decision established the right of John Mitchell, chief state bank examiner, to handle transactions for the defunct Central Bank and Trust company, for which the corporation commission is receiver.

The suit was brought by Mitchell and the Blue Ridge Building and Loan Association against W. E. Shuford. Plaintiffs claimed Shuford refused to accept a deed to property he had bought November 24, after the bank had closed. The sale was by Mitchell in his capacity as agent of the receivers for the bank. Shuterms of Buncombe county superior court will charge the new grand jury as to its rights and duties in making an investigation along these lines.

This succeeding jurist will be Judge P. A. McElroy, of Marshall, who will conduct Buncombe superior court from January through May. He is now engaged in conducting court in an eastern county.

The new grand jury will be drawn late in December, but will not become active until the fourth week in January.

Wright Is Named

The city commissioners yesterday morning placed Stanley H. Wright, city engineer, in temporary charge of the office of commissioner of public works made vacant by the resignation Saturday of Leroy B. Rogers.

The resignation of Mr. Rogers, which was framed in 17 words, was taken up for consideration by Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett. Records of the meeting show the resignation was "accepted with regret."

Mr. Wright was asked by the commissioners to serve assume charge of the department until the selection of a successor to Mr. Rogers.

Mr. Rogers who resigned Saturday in a statement issued at the time Mr. Rogers declared he was resigning because he "felt it was for the best interests of the community with the existing feelings."

Resignation Accepted

His resignation which was accepted by the board follows:

"Honorable Board of Commissioners of the City of Asheville:

"I hereby tender by resignation as commissioner of public works of the city of Asheville, effective immediately.

"Very truly yours
"L. B. ROGERS."

The law firm of Johnson, Smathers and Rollins, of Asheville, has been appointed by the Corporation Commission as attorneys for the liquidating agent of the Central Bank and Trust Company, Biltmore-Oteen Bank, the Bank of Leicester and the Bank of Black Mountain. The appointment was made several days ago, but the attorneys declined to make any statement for publication until after the arrival of Mr. Hensen, who has been named by the Corporation Commission as liquidating agent. Mr. Hensen arrived in the city during the day and established headquarters in the building formerly occupied by the Central Bank and Trust Company.

The law firm of Johnson, Smathers and Rollins is composed of Judge Thomas L. Johnson, who recently resigned as Superior Court Judge to become the senior member of the firm, J. Bat Smathers, Thomas S. Rollins, Jr., and Young M. Smith.

Mr. Smathers practiced law in Haywood County for many years, afterwards coming to Asheville to become a member of the firm of Rollins, Smathers and Rollins. He is well known throughout Western North Caroline. Thomas S. Rollins, Jr., is the only son of Thomas S. Rollins, who died on August 16 of this year. He was born and reared in Asheville and is well known in this section. Young M. Smith is associated with the firm and was reared in Asheville, is a graduate of the Asheville School for Boys and the University of North Carolina.

Native Of Leicester Section

Judge Johnson was born and reared at Leicester, in this county, but located in Lumberton for the practice of law about twenty-three years ago and for several years has been prominently identified with the business and political life of Eastern North Carolina. He was Superior Court Judge and a prominent candidate for Governor of North Carolina at the time he decided to resign from the bench and come to Asheville as the successor of Thomas S. Rollins.

Headquarters of the Western North Carolina Depositors Protective Association, which organization is dedicated to protecting interests of depositors in fifteen closed banks of Western North Carolina, will be opened at 28 Page Avenue, in the Grove Arcade building today. Membership in the association is limited to depositors in the closed institutions. A sliding membership fee scale of from $1 to $50 will be charged. Incorporation document will be sent to Raleigh today. Robert R. Reynolds, J. M. Horner, Jr., and James MacRae are incorporators. They explained the association is not for money making purposes but is intended to serve and protect rights of depositors, especially rights of smaller depositors.

226 ASHEVILLE WORKERS PLACED

TWO GROUPS ASK FOR RESIGNATIONS

Two Organizations Take Action To Secure New City Regime

—(Continued From Page One)

be selected by the directors of the Asheville Merchants' association."

Members of the Merchants' association committee are: Vance Brown, Asheville Mica company; S. P. Burton, S. P. Burton and Son; Francis Bourne, M. V. Moore and company; Wilbur Devendorf, Asheville-Biltmore hotel; William Coleman, real estate; H. A. Dunham, Dunham's Music house; Ottis Green, Ottis Green Hardware company; John M. Geary, John M. Geary company; Dr. W. P. Herbert, physician; Gary E. Hughes, Southern Dairies Inc.; Louis Lipinsky, Bon Marche; L. Lyons Lee, Carolina Coal and Ice company; Harry Matthew, Carpenter and Matthew, jewelers; Gilbert H. Morris, Wachovia Bank and Trust company; Herbert D. Miles, capitalist; Ralph N. Pfaff, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company; Haywood Parker, attorney; Dr. Paul H. Ringer, physician; J. A. Richbourg, Richbourg Motor company; William M. Redwood, National Bank of Commerce; Marcus Sterne, Dentons Department store; the Rev. H. B. Trimble, pastor, Central Methodist church; Kingsland Van Winkle, attorney; C. O. Worley, Central Labor Union; Wallace Wright, insurance.

Members of the Buncombe county Medical society, meeting last night in the council chamber at the city hall, went on record as favoring the immediate retirement of the present governing board of the city.

Signed By Members

The resolutions, which were signed by some 40 members of the society after their adoption, stated that "it is the opinion and belief of the Buncombe county Medical Society that this acute financial crisis which at present overwhelms us can be and is attributable to the administration of the present government body of the city and the recent county government."

The resolutions go to say that "this administration of the city and county affairs has been such as to forfeit the confidence of the people, financial interests, State authorities and banking interests who alone are able to give help in the present crisis."

The document then calls attention to the fact that the State authorities have refused to aid the present administration and points out that a default on the part of either city or county, or both is imminent and would be overwhelmingly disastrous to everyone."

The society then went on record as favoring the immediate retirement of the present city board.

The committee in charge of the resolutions and resolutions meeting was composed of Drs. W. P. Herbert, C. H. Cocke, L. LaBruce Ward, George W. Murphy and Paul H. Ringer.

There were 49 doctors who signed the resolutions as passed. They were as follows: Drs. Murphy, Broun, Herbert, Griffith, Floyd, Cocke, Ringer, Freeman, P. B. Orr, Ward, F. W. Griffith, Stevens, Edwards, Hollyday, Brookshire, Meriwther, Reynolds, Scott, Ogilvie, Fox, Grantham, Pendleton, Parker, Blumberg, Clark, MacRae, Hunter, Schoenheit, Carr, Craddock, Brown, Moore, King, Smith, Battle, Beers, Huffines Colby, Schaffle, Eckel, Stevens, Denchfield, Hensley, Adams, Tennent, McCall, Thompson and Morgan.

Approve Merchants' Action

The medical society also went on record as approving the the efforts of the Asheville Merchants association to remedy the present crisis in the affairs of the city of Asheville and to also approve the selection of the two members of the medical profession mentioned in this work. The plan of

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8. (AP) Official weather bureau records of temperatures and rainfall for the 24 hours ending 8 p. m. in the principal cities growing areas and elsewhere:

Station	Highest Yesterday	Lowest Last Night	Precip.
Alpena	36	22
Asheville	38	32
Atlanta	38	36
Atlantic City	48	40
Birmingham	54	34
Chicago	34	24
Denver	40	22
Detroit	38	34
El Paso	52	40
Galveston	56	44
Jacksonville	64	44
Key West	70	68
Little Rock	60	38
Los Angeles	58	48
Memphis	60	38
Meridian	60	38
Miami	60	42
Mobile	60	42
New Orleans	48	48
Mobile	60	42
New Orleans	48	48
New York	48	42
San Antonio	60	44
San Francisco	60	50
Tampa	68	68
Vicksburg	60	38
Wilmington	56	44

THE FORECAST

Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, extreme Northwest Florida: Fair Tuesday and probably Wednesday, with slowly rising temperature.

Arkansas and Oklahoma: Fair Tuesday, Wednesday generally fair.

Virginia: Fair Tuesday and Wednesday, slightly warmer Tuesday in interior.

North Carolina: Fair Tuesday, slightly warmer in interior; Wednesday fair.

South Carolina, Georgia, Florida: Fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tennessee: Fair Tuesday and Wednesday; not much change in temperature.

Kentucky, West Virginia: Mostly fair Tuesday and Wednesday; slightly warmer Tuesday.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

The disturbance that was over East Georgia Saturday morning has moved northeastward with increased intensity and is now passing off the New England coast with lowest pressure (within ranges of reports) 29.56 inches at Eastport, Maine. No other storm appears on weather chart this morning. High pressure prevails from the Pacific coast to the South Atlantic with the crest of 30.4 inches in Utah. Very little precipitation has occurred during the last 24 hours, light rain being reported in eastern North Carolina, western Pennsylvania, western New York and Maine and snow in northern Michigan. It is slightly warmer in the north Atlantic States and the Rocky Mountain region and colder in the South Atlantic and Gulf States and the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys.

F. R. TAYLOR,
Official in Charge.

LOCAL WEATHER DATA

State of weather at 8 A. M. Cloudy
State of weather at 8 P. M. Cloudy
Relative humidity at 8 A. M.
Relative humidity at noon
Relative humidity at 8 P. M.
Wind direction at 8 A. M.
Wind direction at 8 P. M.
Time of sunrise 7.29 A. M.
Time of sunset 5.15 P. M.

LOCAL TEMPERATURE DATA

8 a. m.	33	3 p. m.
9 a. m.	33	4 p. m.
10 a. m.	35	5 p. m.
11 a. m.	35	6 p. m.
12 noon	35	7 p. m.
1 p. m.	36	8 p. m.
2 p. m.	36

Wet bulb temperature at 8 A. M.
Wet bulb temperature at noon
Wet bulb temperature at 8 P. M.
Highest 36—One year ago
Lowest 22—One year ago
Absolute maximum 71
Absolute minimum 13 in Average temperature for today
Normal

LOCAL MONTHLY PRECIPITATION

Greatest amount 6.31 in Least amount .55 in
For last 24 hours ending at 8 P. M. Tr

the Merchants' association which approved by the medical society the asking of the resignations of city commissioners only and the pointing of 30 citizens as a commission to assist in the working out the financial troubles of the city and county.

Better Than Spanking

The Improved Mrs. Summers Home Treatment Bed Wetting Tablets

Wise mothers have long since learned that spanking does not cure children of Bed Wetting. Mothers know that it is a nervous, not a bad habit, but that it is a condition which must be removed. Frequent causes are Cystitis, irritation or abnormal bladder conditions. If your children are afflicted in this way or any member of your family is so afflicted, you owe it to them to send today for a Free Trial of Summers Home Treatment Bed Wetting Tablets. This medicine has proved a blessing to thousands of families during its years on the market.

Free Trial Coupon

Summers Medical Co., Box 34, South Bend, Ind. Please send without obligations to me FREE TRIAL Mrs. Summers Home Treatment Bed Wetting Tablets together with useful information.

Name .....
St. or R. F. D. .....
City ..... State .....

Heating Equipment That Makes Warm Friends

Tell us the size of the room or house you

t pension warrants issued to his her had been endorsed and witsed by Gant. The clerk issued mpt denial of any wrong-doing. rweeping investigation was launchby both State and county, howr.

In this week's civil action R. C. rter, special auditor for the State sions board, testified over 1,000 rrants for 153 pensioners had been d after their death. Auditors for lford county reported to the comsioners last week they had found shortage of approximately $100,- although their audit was incomte.

government, as well as the other proceedings at the trial of the eight engineers, was termed the "most naive piece of propaganda I ever encountered" by the American engineer. Brooks declared the confession was arranged by the Ogpu, Soviet secret police, as part of a "revolting farce" to strengthen the position of the Stalin dictatorship.

Ramain, Brooks said, is recognized as an authority on certain phases of heat power engineering. Ramain is head of the thermo-technical institute of Moscow and is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

force. He left the police department to become deputy city tax collector and upon the death of J. B. Harrison was named city tax collector, a position he held until his election in 1923 as commissioner of public safety.

In 1927 Mr. Bartlett was re-elected to the post.

Day's Happenings

A test case, a supreme court decision in which will determine procedure in a large number of similar actions in connection with liquidation of affairs of closed banks in Buncombe county, was decided yesterday in Buncombe county superior court and was docketed immediately for hearing on appeal in the state supreme court.

Judge Cameron F. MacRae by his decision established the right of John Mitchell, chief state bank examiner, to handle transactions for the defunct Central Bank and Trust company, for which the corporation commission is receiver.

The suit was brought by Mitchell and the Blue Ridge Building and Loan Association against W. E. Shuford. Plaintiffs claimed Shuford refused to accept a deed to property he had bought November 24, after the bank had closed. The sale was by Mitchell in his capacity as agent of the receivers for the bank. Shuford held that Mitchell was without authority to act for the bank.

Deed From Mitchell

Judge MacRae ruled that Shuford should pay the $450 which he contracted to pay for the property and that Shuford should accept the deed from Mitchell.

It is alleged in the complaint that J. H. Williams and his wife signed a deed of trust in 1925 conveying certain property to the Central Bank and Trust company securing indebtedness to the Blue Ridge Building and Loan Association. When payments became past due, the Blue Ridge company asked the bank to give notice of sale of the rpoperty, which was done and the sale arranged for November 24. Meanwhile, the bank closed, and Mitchell, representing the bank, sold the property to Shuford. The bid was not raised in ten days and the sale was confirmed by the clerk of court. It was then that the question to test authority of Mitchell was raised in a friendly suit.

A grand jury inquiry into affairs of Buncombe county banks which have closed their doors and into dealings by city and county authorities with these banks, has become more than a possibility.

Judge Cameron F. MacRae, presiding over the December term of Buncombe county superior court, made it plain yesterday, however, that there is little probability of such an investigation getting underway until after a new grand jury has been chosen in January, 1931.

Judge McRae is to preside at the criminal term next week when the present grand jury will have its last regular session. He pointed out that the present grand jury has only a short time left in which it could prosecute an investigation which necessarily must be exhaustive. He also said that audits of the banks and of county affairs are not complete and would not be available to the present grand jury in time to permit an adequate investigation.

Grand Jury Investigation

"I have given considerable thought to the matter of recommending that the grand jury investigate these affairs thoroughly," said Judge McRae. "In the beginning, I had planned to make such recommendations when the grand jury meets next week, but after considering the short time left to the present jurors and upon finding that audits and other reports which would be necessary in such an inquiry will not be available in time to permit a proper investigation, I do not think it is the duty of the present grand jury to undertake the investigation.

"I do not feel that the last grand jury of a term of court should undertake such a task, and I do not think it is the duty of the present grand jury to undertake the investigation. I will make the recommendation to the next grand jury that it undertake the investigation."

as Lenoxville, in this county, but located in Lumberton for the practice of law about twenty-three years ago and for several years has been prominently identified with the business and political life of Eastern North Carolina. He was Superior Court Judge and a prominent candidate for Governor of North Carolina at the time he decided to resign from the bench and come to Asheville as the successor of Thomas S. Rollins.

Headquarters of the Western North Carolina Depositors Protective Association, which organization is dedicated to protecting interests of depositors in fifteen closed banks of Western North Carolina, will be opened at 28 Page Avenue, in the Grove Arcade building today. Membership in the association is limited to depositors in the closed institutions. A sliding membership fee scale of from $1 to $50 will be charged. Incorporation document will be sent to Raleigh today. Robert R. Reynolds, J. M. Horner, Jr., and James MacRae are incorporators. They explained the association is not for money making purposes but is intended to serve and protect rights of depositors, especially rights of smaller depositors.

226 ASHEVILLE WORKERS PLACED DURING NOVEMBER

RALEIGH, Dec. 8. (AP)—A total of 867 jobs were found for unemployed during November by the five United States Department of Labor employment bureaus in North Carolina.

Wilmington led with 243 placements with Asheville second with 226. The Charlotte office placed 221; Raleigh 168 and Badin 9.

The placements for the seven offices open in November, 1929, totaled 1,353. The Greensboro and Winston-Salem offices are now closed.

University Alumni To Be Initiated By Phi Beta Kappa

CHAPEL HILL, Dec. 8. (AP)—An initiation ceremony for living alumni of the University of North Carolina who attained high scholastic rank while students here prior to 1893 but who because of the absence of a local chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity, failed to be taken into the society, will be held at 7:15 o'clock tomorrow night at the parish house of the Episcopal Church here, it was announced tonight by Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., secretary of the local chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

resolutions and resolutions meeting was composed of Drs. W. P. Herbert, C. H. Cocke, L. LaBrune Ward, George W. Murphy and Paul H. Ringer.

There were 69 doctors who signed the resolutions as passed. They were as follows: Drs. Murphy, Brown, Herbert, Griffith, Floyd, Cocke, Ringer, Freeman, P. B. Orr, Ward, F. W. Griffith, Stevens, Edwards, Holliday, Brookshire, Merrwther, Reynolds, Scott, Ogilvie, Fox, Grantham, Pendleton, Parker, Blumberg, Clark, MacRae, Hunter, Schoenheit, Carr, Craddock, Brown, Moore, King, Smith, Battle, Beam, Huffines, Colby, Schaffle, Eckel, Stevens, Denchfield, Hensley, Adams, Tennent, McCall, Thompson and Morgan.

Approve Merchants' Action

The medical society also went on record as approving the the efforts of the Asheville Merchants association to remedy the present crisis in the affairs of the city of Asheville and to also approve the selection of the two members of the medical profession mentioned in this work. The plan of

AFTER YOU'VE CAUGHT IT WOULD
H REMARKABLE BARGAINS IN OUR E IF WE DIDN'T NEED SPACE AND GENERATION WON'T SEE THESE

.00 COGSWELL
HAIRS
st Designs and Colors!
7.50
These beautiful chairs make ideal gifts for the home. Large assortment of styles and colors.
SEE WINDOWS!

PC. SUITES!
VALUES!
9.50
THEM!
three-piece overs in newest styles did variety of colly your home now!
AVE HERE!

Entire Stock
LUGGAGE
½ Off!

Tennessee Cedar CHESTS!
$8.95

MANTLE
CLOCKS!
$1.89

ROAD
GE CO.
AIN ST., HENDERSONVILLE

Heating Equip
Makes Warm Fri
Tell us the size of the room or h want to heat and we can furnish th apparatus.
Oak Finish Circulating Parlor Furnace $39
Hot Blast Heaters $22
Florence Oil Heaters $7
Eagle Kitchen Ranges $45
Tell us the size of the room or house to heat and we can furnish the co paratus.
KINCAID
FURNITURE C
21 Broadway "Where Values

27 YE

Blue Ridge
& Loan Ass
18 Government
CAPITAL and S
OVER TH
MILLION DO

FIRST SHOWING IN ASHEVILLE PARAMOUNT
Thurs., Fri., Sat.
a whale of a picture!
WARNER BROS. Present
JOHN BARRYMORE
"MOBY DICK"
NO ADVANCE IN PRICES

666
COLDS and HEADACHES

Judge P. A. McElroy, of Marshall, who will conduct Buncombe superior court from January through May. He is now engaged in conducting court in an eastern county.

The new grand jury will be drawn late in December, but will not become active until the fourth week in January.

Wright Is Named

The city commissioners yesterday morning placed Stanley E. Wright, city engineer, in temporary charge of the office of commissioner of public works made vacant by the resignation Saturday of Leroy B. Rogers.

The resignation of Mr. Rogers, which was framed in 17 words, was taken up for consideration by Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett. Records of the meeting show the resignation was "accepted with regret."

Mr. Wright was asked by the commissioners to serve assume charge of the department until the selection of a successor to Mr. Rogers.

Mr. Rogers who resigned Saturday in a statement issued at the time Mr. Rogers declared he was resigning because he "felt it was for the best interests of the community with the existing feelings."

Resignation Accepted

His resignation which was accepted by the board follows:

"Honorable Board of Commissioners of the City of Asheville:

"I hereby tender by resignation as commissioner of public works of the city of Asheville, effective immediately.

"Very truly yours,

"L. B. ROGERS."

The law firm of Johnson, Smathers and Rollins, of Asheville has been appointed by the Corporation Commission as attorneys for the liquidating agent of the Central Bank and Trust Company, Biltmore-Citizens Bank, the Bank of Leicester and the Bank of Black Mountain. The appointment was made several days ago but the attorneys declined to make any statement for publication until after the arrival of Mr. Hanson, who has been named by the Corporation Commission as liquidating agent. Mr. Hanson arrived in the city during the day and established headquarters in the building formerly occupied by the Central Bank and Trust Company.

The law firm of Johnson, Smathers and Rollins is composed of Judge Thomas L. Johnson, who recently resigned as Superior Court Judge to become the senior member of the firm, J. Bat Smathers, Thomas S. Rollins, Jr., and Young M. Smith.

Mr. Smathers practiced law in Haywood County for many years afterwards coming to Asheville to become a member of the firm of Rollins, Smathers and Rollins. He is well known throughout Western North Carolina. Thomas S. Rollins, Jr., is the only son of Thomas S. Rollins, who died on August 16 of this year. He was born and reared in Asheville and is well known in this section. Young M. Smith is associated with the firm and was reared in Asheville, is a graduate of the Asheville School for Boys and the University of North Carolina.

Native Of Leicester Section

Judge Johnson was born and reared at Leicester, in this county, but located in Lumberton for the practice of law about twenty-three years ago and for several years has been prominently identified with the business and political life of Eastern North Carolina. He was Superior Court Judge and a prominent candidate for Governor of North Carolina at the time he decided to resign from the bench and come to Asheville as the successor of Thomas S. Rollins.

Headquarters of the Western North Carolina Depositors Protective Association, which organization is dedicated to protecting interests of depositors in fifteen closed banks of Western North Carolina, will be opened at 28 Page Avenue, in the Grove Arcade building today. Membership in the association is limited to depositors in the closed institutions. A sliding membership fee scale of from $1 to $50 will be charged. Incorporation document will be sent to Raleigh today. Robert R. Reynolds, J. M. Horner, Jr., and James MacRae are incorporators. They explained the association is not for money making purposes but is intended to serve and protect rights of depositors, especially rights of smaller depositors.

226 ASHEVILLE WORKERS PLACED DURING NOVEMBER

RALEIGH, Dec. 8. (AP)—A total of 867 jobs were found for unemployed during November by the five United States Department of Labor

FOR RESIGNATIONS

Two Organizations Take Action To Secure New City Regime

—(Continued From Page One)

be selected by the directors of the Asheville Merchants' association."

Members of the Merchants' association committee are: Verne Brown, Asheville Mica company; B. P. Burton, S. P. Burton and Son; Francis Bourne, M. V. Moore and company; Wilber Dermodet, Asheville-Biltmore Hotel; William Coleman, real estate; H. A. Dunham, Dunham's Music house; Odie Owen, Odie Owen Hardware company; John M. Geary, John M. Geary company; Dr. W. P. Herbert, physician; Gary E. Hughes, Southern Dairies Inc.; Louis Lipsky, New Mayflower; L. Lyons Lee, Carolina Coal and Ice company; Henry Matthew, Carpenter and Matthew, jewelers; Colburn K. Moore, Wachovia Bank and Trust company; Herbert D. Miller, optician; Ralph N. Pfaff, Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company; Heywood Parker, attorney; Dr. Paul N. Skinner, physician; J. A. Sandlebung, Sandlebung Motor company; William W. Redwood, National Bank of Commerce; Marvin Simons, Dorothea Department store; the Rev. R. B. Vance, Mr. Pisgah; C. Ernest Wadsworth, Kangaroo; Tom Wilson, attorney; C. C. Worley, Central Labor Union; Walton Wright, insurance.

Members of the Buncombe county Medical society meeting last night in the council chamber of the city hall, went on record as favoring the immediate enforcement of the present governing issues of the city.

Signed By Members

The resolutions, which were signed by some 40 members of the society after their adoption, stated that it is the opinion and belief of the Buncombe County Medical Society that the series of resolutions which all personal considerations aside, may be said to constitute the administration of the present governmental body of the city and the county government.

"The resolutions go to say that this action of the city and county affairs has been made so as further the conditions of the people financial interests, State authorities and banking interests who alone are able to give help in the present crisis."

The document then calls attention to the fact that the State authorities have refused to aid the present administrations and points out that a default on the part of either city or county, or both is unfortunate and would be overwhelmingly disastrous to everyone."

The society then went on record as favoring the immediate enforcement of the present city board.

The committee in charge of the resolutions and resolutions governing was composed of Drs. W. P. Herbert, C. H. Cocke, L. LaBruce Ward, George W. Murphy and Paul H. Ringer.

There were 49 doctors who signed the resolutions as passed. They were as follows: Drs. Murphy, Brown, Herbert, Griffith, Floyd, Cocke, Ringer, Freeman, P. B. Orr, Ward, F. W. Griffith, Stevens, Edwards, Holliday, Brookshire, Meriwether, Reynolds, Scott, Ogilvie, Fox, Grantham, Fadiston, Parker, Blumberg, Clark, MacRae, Hunter, Schoenheit, Carr, Craddock, Brown, Moore, King, Smith, Battle, Beers, Huffines, Colby, Schaffle, Eckel, Stevens, Denchfield, Hensley, Adams, Tennent, McCall, Thompson and Morgan.

Approve Merchants' Action

The medical society also went on record as approving the the efforts of the Asheville Merchants association to remedy the present crisis in the affairs of the city of Asheville and to also approve the selection of the two members of the medical profession mentioned in this work. The plan of the Merchants association which was approved by the medical society was the selling of the compositions of the city commissioners only and the polling of 10 citizens as a committee to assist in the working out of the financial problem of the city and county.

Better Than Spanking

The Improved Mrs. Summers Home Treatment Bed Wetting Tablets

When nothing have done since morning that making does not cure children of bed wetting Mothers know that it is not merely a bad habit, but that it is a sure which must be remedied. Frequent causes are Cystitis, irritation or abnormal blood conditions. If your children are afflicted in this way at any moment of the day or night be advised, you can get to them to send today for a free trial of Summers Home Treatment Bed Wetting Tablets. This medicine has proved a blessing to thousands of families during its 50 years on the market.

Free Trial Coupon

Summers Medical Co., Box 14, South Bend, Ind. Please send without obligations to me FREE TRIAL Mrs. Summers Home Treatment Bed Wetting Tablets together with useful information.

Name

St. or R. F. D.

City State

Heating Equipment That Makes Warm Friends

Tell us the size of the room or house you want to heat and we can furnish the correct apparatus.

Oak Finish Circulating Parlor Furnace ..... $39.50 UP

Hot Blast Heaters ..... $22.50 UP

Florence Oil ..... $7.00 UP

FUNDS NEEDED TO FINISH PROJECTS ALREADY PLANNED

Will Not Increase Total Of Treasury Deficit Estimates

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8. (AP)—An appropriation of $700,000,000 to enable the farm loans to carry out mobilization and other projects was requested of congress today by President Roosevelt.

The chief executive said the sum was included in the estimate of expenditures before congress and did not increase the estimated treasury deficit.

Already $400,000,000 of the $800,000,000 has been appropriated. $700,000,000 of this has been used in efforts to stabilize cotton markets. Most of the rest has been either used or earmarked for loans to cooperative marketing associations.

To Question Roosevelt

Chairman Wood of the appropriations committee said the house committee would question Roosevelt about the projects concerned.

It is understood by some that whether the estimate of the national expenditure will be increased or decreased.

However, Wood said he would be in conference with the president before the budget program was submitted to the house.

In his letter President said "in order that the estimates of the budget may be complete I ask additional funds be included in this item."

Agreed With Roosevelt

He did not go into detail as to what he had in mind in the election of Thursday Roosevelt put forward with vigor.

"The foregoing estimate

BEWARE THE COUGH F COLDS THAT HANG

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with twofold action. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and in bilds germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe inflamed membranes and stimulate appetite, while the creosote kills the germs, it checks bland, stimulate the appetite and checks the growth of germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed to give the relief you expect in the treatment of coughs, bronchitis and other bronchial irritations, or money refunded. Creomulsion is a prescription for building up the system as the Money refunded. Creomulsion. Read after taking accordingly. Ask your druggist.

CREOMULSI

FOR THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT H

AS SIMPLE AS A

Wherever the best duced, A&P buyers spot to buy it. A&P of every crop and e

B

A&P cuts o and wasteful trolling the from the tim source until counter.

C

Alth of h offti take extr

Nothing complicated about that, is it at midnight

t of four au-cree that they ntervention in ade joyous to-
of their sen-
prisonment.
emned to 10
by the verdict trial that had re given com-
ars' imprison-
of citizenship
nd their prop-
d. es were saved
leader of the Fedotov, old-o had begged hroughout the hev, first as-colai Charnov-
.
ced
nment was re-to eight were ears old and
l: Sergei Ku-Sitnin.
as decided by committee of t Soviet Red that since fessed and rewer could not desire for re-

the sentenced their crimes
y during the had disarmed ary organiza-
and executor nilitary circles nce with their h as the Torgorganization

Soviet power a mere desire ly in relation criminals who rmless.
to commute
sed on Ram-ikov, Larichev
ars' imprisonisenfranchise-
of property.
years' impris-
tnin and Ku-with confiscaisenfranchise-

ow a judicial in-somewhat in ublic show for d in the old
e of columns.
s and gentleegime paraded every sitting e proletarian zens confessed his a microphone ow broadcast xpanse of the s remodel his ne inside lis-Outside marched ations to de-
the eight men

confessed and took the view no theory be-hat would like

To Page Two

ATING SOUP;
D IN POT

comment to make on the Sinking Fund Commission's statement, which reads as follows:

"The State Sinking Fund Commission, after careful consideration of the application of the Asheville delegation's request from the Sinking Fund, decided that there was no legal power by which it could render the aid requested.

Not for Such Purpose

"Governor Gardner stated that the Sinking Fund was not created for such a purpose and that the full faith and credit of the State of North Carolina must be and would be preserved at all cost.

"The commission is fully conscious of the Asheville and Buncombe county situation and within its power is ready and willing to co-operate in a constructive way, but in the present status there is nothing it can do."

7 MEMBERS OF FAMILY BURIED IN ONE GRAVE

TORRENT, Ky., Dec. 8. (AP)—One large grave in the mountains, seven miles south of here, today received the bodies of six members of one family, all victims of an explosion and fire which destroyed their home near here, early Saturday. The road to the grave was too rough for automobile travel and the dead, a father and mother and four children, were taken to their final resting place in a two-horse wagon.

Those buried were Leonard Arnold, 34, oil field worker, the husband, who was burned to death on returning to the house after carrying the bodies of three children into the yard; Mrs. Cynthia Arnold, 27, the wife, who died Sunday in a hospital at Winchester, and the four Arnold Children, one only a babe in arms.

The sole survivor of the family, Opal Arnold, 7, lay near death in a Winchester hospital while her parents and brothers and sisters were being buried.

$200,000 DAMAGE SUIT DISMISSED IN GASTON COURT

GASTONIA, Dec. 8. (AP)—Damage suit growing out of the fatal shooting of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, of Bessemer City, during the labor disturbances in the summer of 1929 was non-suited by Judge A. C. Quickel in Gaston Superior Court today.

Judge Quickel ordered the non-suit when J. Frank Flowers, representing Mrs. Wiggins' estate, failed to secure a third continuance and was unable to produce witnesses.

The suit directed against The Gastonia Gazette, the Manville-Jenckes Company, the Meyers Mill and more than 20 individuals.

It charged that The Gazette through an editorial incited anti-communist forces to a riotous feeling which resulted in the fatal shooting of Mrs. Wiggins and made like charges against the two mills.

MERCHANTS' BODY AND PHYSICIANS ASK RESIGNATIONS

Two Organizations Take Action To Secure New City Regime

Criticism directed at the Asheville city commissioners since the closing of the Central Bank and Trust Company with $6,653,112 on deposit, took a definite turn yesterday and last night when directors of the Asheville Merchants association and members of the Buncombe County Medical society passed resolutions requesting them to resign.

The actions of the merchants came after a meeting of several hours which started yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The medical society resolutions were adopted at a meeting held in the council chamber of the city hall last night.

Petitions Circulated

During the day yesterday petitions were circulated calling a mass meeting of citizens at the City Auditorium for tonight to consider the affairs of the city but at a meeting of those who had been instrumental in circulating these petitions and of a numerous body of leading citizens it was decided to postpone the proposed mass meeting for the present.

The resolutions adopted by the directors of the merchants' association were:

"Motion made and duly seconded and unanimously carried, that, we, the directors of the Asheville Merchants' association, go on record as requesting the immediate resignation of the city commissioners of Asheville, believing that the future of the city under their administration is in jeopardy

Committee Named

And further, that a committee of representative citizens of the city of Asheville be called at once and organized to consider the present predicament of our city and work out a plan for a temporary government of the city until the legislature meets in January 1931 This committee to

—Please Turn To Page Two)

[illegible] C. M. Pearson, member of the state banking commission, in charge of liquidating [illegible] Asheville and [illegible] Mellon [illegible]

[illegible] Mayor [illegible] Chamber of Commerce [illegible] Commerce [illegible] Chamber of Commerce [illegible] Chamber of Commerce [illegible]

[illegible] Association [illegible] to present interests of depositors [illegible] open airing in Grove Arcade building today.

[illegible] Mass meeting announced for tonight at city auditorium is indefinitely postponed.

In resigning his post with the city, Commissioner Bartlett issued the following statement:

Bartlett's Statement

"For the past 30 years I have served the city of Asheville, served I believe, to the best of my ability, to which I think my friends, and some of my enemies will readily attest. It is with the view of serving the city

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Senate Democrats flay Hoover's relief program. —Page 1.

Dry leaders vote down proposal of referendum. —Page 1.

Senate accepts Doak for labor secretary post. —Page 1.

Soviets commute death sentences of five plotters. —Page 1.

Hoover relief budget scored by Senate Democrats. —Page 1.

Aged recluse kills two during wild rampage. —Page 1.

Lindsey to be tried in church disorder Friday. —Page 2.

Hoover asks 150 millions for Federal farm board projects.—Page 2.

Troops guard Havana school after disorders. —Page 3.

Senator Laval trying to organize new French cabinet. —Page 9.

Condemned killer tries to save mother in trial. —Page 9.

Heavy liquidation in rails sends stock list downward. —Page 10.

• • •

STATE

Mason W. Gant is given 10 years in State's Prison. —Page 1.

Financial aid refused by State to Asheville and Buncombe.—Page 1.

Commissioner Dorsett to hold W. N. C. hearings. —Page 3.

Hickory newspaper gets request for data from Nye committee.—Page 5.

McNinch is preparing report on 1928 campaign expenditures. —Page 5.

Three N. C. banks closed doors yesterday. —Page 6.

Funeral services conducted for Mayor William Cain. —Page 6.

Defense claims Home Mortgage receivership suit was brought by "dupe." —Page 8.

Receiver begins work at Hendersonville bank. —Page 8.

• • •

LOCAL

Coltrane will speak to F. T. A. mass meeting this evening. —Page 1.

Stockholders of hotel body to get dividends. —Page 1.

Commissioner Bartlett announces his resignation. —Page 1.

Merchants and Medical Society group take city board to [illegible] —Page 1.

[illegible] —Page 1.

[illegible] —Page 8.

[illegible] —Page 8.

Dry Leaders Vote Down Proposal Of Referendum

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8. (AP) In a statement [illegible] dry leaders [illegible] short work of it as their previously [illegible] night meeting. The resolution read in part:

"Having [illegible] the eighteenth amendment, there is no occasion for the dry forces to join in any referendum by referendum or other plebiscite [illegible]

"Believing as we do in the eighteenth amendment and the [illegible] son; Frances and company;

ville-Biltmore
n, real estate;
ham's Music
Ottis Green
ohn M. Geary,
ny; Dr. W. P.
ry K. Hughes,
Louis Li-
L. Lyons Lee,
ice company;
iter and Mat-
rt N. Morris,
rust company;
italist; Ralph ell Telephone any; Haywood
aul H. Ringer, abourg, Rich-
; William M.
ank of Com-Dentons De-
v. H. B. Trim-al Methodist n Winkle, at-Central Labor
, insurance,
ncombe counmeeting last hamber at the rd as favoring nent of the d of the city.
mbers

ch were signed of the society
tated that "it elief of the edical Society al crisis which s us, can be the adminis-
t government the recent to say that f the city and en such as to

of the people,
ate authorities who alone are the present

calls attention
State authori-
id the present
dints out that of either city imminent and gly disastrous

ent on record ate retirement
ard.
charge of the tions meeting
W. P. Herbert,
Ward, George
l. Ringer.
rs who signed
ed. They were
y, Broun, Her-
Cooke, Ringer,
rd, F. W. Orif-
ds, Hollyday,
r, Reynolds,
antham, Peh-
g, Clark, Mac-
ll, Carr, Craf-
King, Smith,
Colby, Schat-
nchfield, Rous-oCall, Thomas

r Action also want on the efforts of the association crisis in the lleville and to ne of the two al profession.
t. The plan of

San Francisco .. .. 60 ... ...
Tampa .. .. 64 ... ...
Vicksburg .. .. 64 ... ...
Wilmington .. .. 64 ... ...

THE FORECAST

Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, and extreme Northwest Florida: Fair Tuesday and probably Wednesday, with slowly rising temperature.

Arkansas and Oklahoma: Fair Tuesday; Wednesday generally fair.

Virginia: Fair Tuesday and Wednesday; slightly warmer Tuesday in interior.

North Carolina: Fair Tuesday, slightly warmer in interior; Wednesday fair.

South Carolina, Georgia, Florida: Fair Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tennessee: Fair Tuesday and Wednesday; not much change in temperature.

Kentucky, West Virginia: Mostly fair Tuesday and Wednesday; slightly warmer Tuesday.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

The disturbance that was over Eastern Georgia Saturday morning has moved northeastward with increased intensity and is now passing off the New England coast with lowest pressure (within the range of reports) 30.56 inches at Eastport, Maine. No other store appears on the weather chart this morning. High pressure prevails from the Pacific coast to the South Atlantic with the crest of 30.62 inches in Utah. Very little precipitation has occurred during the last 24 hours, light rain being reported in eastern North Carolina, western Pennsylvania, western New York and Maine and snow in northern Michigan. It is slightly warmer in the north Atlantic States and the Rocky Mountain region and colder in the South Atlantic and Gulf States and the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys.

T. R. TAYLOR,
Official in Charge.

LOCAL WEATHER DATA

State of weather at 8 A. M.	Cloudy
State of weather at 8 P. M.	Cloudy
Relative humidity at 8 A. M.	86%
Relative humidity at noon	68%
Relative humidity at 8 P. M.	80%
Wind direction at 8 A. M.	NW
Wind direction at 8 P. M.	NW
Time of sunrise	7:29 A. M.
Time of sunset	5:15 P. M.

LOCAL TEMPERATURE DATA

8 a. m.	33	3 p. m.	35
9 a. m.	33	4 p. m.	35
10 a. m.	35	5 p. m.	35
11 a. m.	35	6 p. m.	34
12 noon	35	7 p. m.	33
1 p. m.	36	8 p. m.	32
2 p. m.	36

Wet bulb temperature at 8 A. M.	32
Wet bulb temperature at noon	32
Wet bulb temperature at 8 P. M.	29
Highest	36—One year ago 55
Lowest	32—One year ago 36
Absolute maximum	71 in 1922
Absolute minimum	15 in 1927
Average temperature for today	34
Normal	39

LOCAL MONTHLY PRECIPITATION

Greatest amount	6.51 in 1914
Least amount	.55 in 1928
For last 24 hours ending at 8 P. M.	Trace the Merchants' association which was approved by the medical society was the asking of the resignations of the city commissioners only and the appointing of 30 citizens as a commission to assist in the working out of the financial troubles of the city and county.

Better Than Spanking

The Improved Mrs. Summers Home Treatment Bed Wetting Tablets

Wise mothers have long since learned that spanking does not cure children of Bed Wetting. Mothers know that it is not merely a bad habit, but that it is a cause which must be removed. Frequent causes are Cystitis, irritation or abnormal bladder conditions. If your children are afflicted in this way or any member of the family is so afflicted, you owe it to them to send today for a Free Trial of Summers Home Treatment Bed Wetting Tablets. This medicine has proved a blessing to thousands of families during its 36 years on the market.

Free Trial Coupon

Summers Medical Co., Box 34, South Bend, Ind. Please send without obligations to me FREE TRIAL Mrs. Summers Home Treatment Bed Wetting Tablets together with useful information.

Name .....

St. or R. F. D. .....

City ..... State .....

ing Equipment That Warm Friends

Of Treasury Deficit Estimates

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8. (AP) An appropriation of $150,000,000 to enable the farm board to carry out stabilization and other projects was requested of congress today by President Hoover.

The chief executive said the sum was included in the estimate of expenditures before congress and did not increase the estimated treasury deficit.

Already $250,000,000 of the $500,-

However, Wood made it clear that its consideration would not be undertaken before the public works program was disposed of by the house.

In his letter, President Hoover said "in order that important operations of the board, now in prospect, may be carried through promptly, additional funds are required at this time."

Agrees With Roop

He did not go into detail, but said he concurred in the recommendation of Director Roop of the budget bureau who wrote:

"The foregoing estimate of appro-

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

CREOMULSION

FOR THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

priations which c
the bud ted to c recomme
No of concerni
pect.

XXVI

AS SIMPLE AS A

Wherever the best food is produced, A&P buyers are on the spot to buy it. A&P has the pick of every crop and every pack.

B A&P cuts out needless exper and wasteful handling by co trolling the movement of fo from the time it is bought at source until it is sold at the sto counter.

C Although performing of broker, jobber, r ofttimes of manufac

THE WEATHER
ASHEVILLE AND VICINITY: Fair and slowly rising temperature Wednesday.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1868 — ASHEVILLE, N. C., WEDNESDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 10, 1930 — 16 PAGES — IN PART I, IN SECTIONS

WOE FOR JIGGS!
Are you reading "Bringing up Father" every day? Jiggs and Maggie are having their troubles. Keep up with this popular comic!

ROBERTS PONDERS DEMANDS FOR HIS RESIGNATION

Asheville's Tobacco Market Will Open At 9:30 A. M. Today

CROWDS ARE EXPECTED TO WATCH SALE

350,000 Pounds Of Burley On Warehouse Floor Awaiting Buyers

GOOD PRICES FOR 'WEED' EXPECTED

W.N.C. Growers Come To City In Many Trucks With Products

With 350,000 pounds of burley tobacco on the floor for the first sale, the Asheville tobacco market will open at 9:30 o'clock this morning with buyers present from the largest manufacturing concerns and a line of trucks waiting to deliver more tobacco for the second sale.

Asheville's first tobacco sale in more than a quarter of a century will be attended by a considerable crowd, it is believed, since great interest has been manifested in the opening of the mart here.

Motorcycle officers and traffic policeman will be on hand to keep valley street clear and Commissioner of Safety C. H. Bartlett has urged the general public to avoid using Valley street as much as possible for the next two months, or the duration of the season.

B. B. Saunders, manager of the warehouse, returned from the Greeneville, Tenn., opening sales yesterday and was pleased with prospects for good prices here. The Greeneville market opened with an average of $20 per hundred and growers of that section were enthusiastic over the brisk buying at good prices. Mr. Saunders said that the Asheville market should sell more than 3,000,000 pounds by the middle of February.

Manufacturers' Representatives

Among representatives of the large tobacco firms who will be buyers on the local market, beginning this morning, are buyers from the R. J. Reynolds company, the American Tobacco company, Lorillard Brothers, P. Lorillard, Liggett and Myers company, L. S. Jenkins and company, and others. There will be a number of independent buyers for smaller firms.

In addition to Mr. Saunders, the warehouse staff consists of: William Maurer, Jr., C. T. Reaves, W. A. Blanchard, J. P. Buffkin, floor managers; Sap Weeks, Mr. Lynn, Mr. Davis and others. Sheff Ball and Mr. Roberts are auctioneers. One of the prize rooms was ready for operation yesterday afternoon and work is being pushed night and day on two others. Coopers were busy preparing hogs-

Rivals Men

Miss Ruth Nichols (above), Rye, N. Y., society girl flier, yesterday stepped on the heels of Hawks and Lindbergh when she flew halfway across the continent, from Los Angeles to Wichita, in seven hours and one minute.

GIRL FLIER SPANS HALF CONTINENT IN SEVEN HOURS

Miss Nichols Steps On Heels Of Lindbergh And Hawks

WICHITA, Kans., Dec. 9. (AP)—A society girl air enthusiast stepped on the heels of the most noted men speed pilots in the country today.

Miss Ruth Nichols, Rye, N. Y., aviatrix, spanned approximately half the continent in seven hours and one minute in quest of a new West-East Transcontinental flight record and placed her name beside those of Captain Frank Hawks and Charles A. Lindbergh in the annals of speed flying.

Miss Nichols reached here at 4:01 p. m., (CST) on a non-stop hop from Los Angeles, where she took off this morning.

To N. Y. Today

She announced she would leave tomorrow for New York if weather conditions are favorable.

She has a chance of bettering the flying time of Captain Hawks, West-East Transcontinental record-holder. Hawks established a mark of 12 hours, 25 minutes and three seconds from Glendale, Cal., to New York, last August, wresting the record from Lindbergh and his wife, Anne, by more than two hours.

PROCEDURE FOR LIQUIDATION OF BANKS STUDIED

Matters Are Discussed At Length By Agent And Attorney

MANY INQUIRIES BEING RECEIVED

Say Definite Action Is Not Likely Before Several Weeks

Policies to be pursued in handling affairs of the Central Bank and Trust company, the Biltmore-Oteen Bank, the Bank of Leicester and the Bank of Black Mountain, which closed their doors on November 20 and 21, were discussed at length yesterday morning by O. N. Henson and former Judge Thomas L. Johnson.

Mr. Henson, as a member of the state banking department, is liquidating agent, while Judge Johnson is a member of the firm of Johnson, Smathers and Rollins, attorneys for the banking department.

Judge Johnson and Mr. Henson said after the conference that the audit of bank affairs has not progressed far enough yet to make definite statements as to what will be done. The latter said that he has been swamped since his arrival two days ago with inquiries as to what steps he plans to take. The answer to these inquiries is that it will be two weeks, or perhaps longer, before the affairs of the banks can be fully determined. Until such a time, it was stated, no action will be advised by the liquidating agent.

Depositors' Benefits

The principal question at present, it was explained, is how much can be salvaged for benefit of depositors. Papers held in trust for patrons of the banks have occupied much of Mr. Henson's attention. He said he is investigating each case and is taking action as to personal property held by the banks—such properties as are not declared assets of the institutions.

John Mitchell, of Raleigh, chief state bank examiner, is expected to arrive in Asheville this morning for a second conference with Mr. Henson and Judge Johnson. Mr. Henson will have personal charge of the liquidation of the Central Bank and Trust company, while assistant agents will handle affairs of the three smaller closed banking institutions. Assistant liquidation agents for the Bank of Leicester, Bank of Black Mountain and Biltmore-Oteen bank will be selected at a conference between Mr. Henson and the chief bank examiner.

Beginning of liquidation, Mr. Henson said, will follow the completion

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

SIX PRISONERS SAW WAY OUT OF

To Wed Prince

Mary McCormick, Chicago Civic Opera singer, pictured in her hotel room in New York, where she admitted she is going to marry the ex-husband of Pola Negri, Prince Serge Mdivani. She says it won't be until next year.

MOVE TO COMPEL PRELIMINARY FOR OFFICIAL OF BANK

Public Officers Ordered To Appear Friday To Testify

Counsel for prosecution of Clarence Rankin, director and vice president of the defunct Central Bank and Trust company, moved yesterday to compel a preliminary hearing of the case Friday morning.

Mr. Rankin was arrested a few days after the bank closed on a warrant charging him with permitting employes to receive deposits after he knew the bank to be insolvent. The warrant was signed by Mrs. Nannie L. Brown, of Brickton, who alleges that Mr. Rankin persuaded her to deposit $3,806 in the bank several days before the bank closed.

The preliminary hearing is set before Magistrate H. C. Jenkins at 10 o'clock Friday morning. Mr. Rankin has been confined to his bed at his home in Lakeview Park since before the warrant was served, and his condition was described last night as that of "a very sick man."

Witnesses Subpoenaed

Sanford W. Brown, who represents Mrs. Nannie Brown as private prosecution counsel, filed a motion with Magistrate Jenkins to direct Mr. Rankin's physician to appear at the time of the preliminary hearing and make affidavit as to Mr. Rankin's physical condition, in case the defendant is not on hand for the hearing.

Counsel also had subpoenas issued for Newton M. Anderson, former chairman of the Buncombe county commission; Mayor Gallatin Roberts, John Mitchell, state bank examiner, W. M. Russ, in charge of the audit of the Central Bank and Trust com-

CHARGE HOOVER IS ACTING FOR RICH TAXPAYER

Warning About Economy Brings Sharp Reply From Democrats

SENATE PASSES DROUGHT RELIEF

Loans For Food Provided Despite Objection Of Administration

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 9. (AP)—President Hoover lashed out today at the congressional holders from the co-operative emergency relief program in a statement charging "they are playing politics at the expense of human misery."

His statement demanding that relief expenditures be kept within limits of the treasury's funds stirred a Democratic attack in the senate that brought into action not only those who yesterday called for a party program but those who have been friendly to the co-operation pledge.

With the Republican-Democratic co-operation movement wavering Senator LaFollette, Republican, Wisconsin, introduced a resolution to declare the senate for "the relief of human suffering in this emergency over the consideration of the interests of wealthy income taxpayers."

Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, hastened to defend the president and to give assurances that he meant no partisan attack in his declaration, but Democrats were still calling for recognition when the senate adjourned.

Denounces Attack

Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, who has been friendly to the pledge of Democratic leaders for co-operation on an emergency relief program, called Mr. Hoover's declaration "unwarranted, uncalled for and without justification," and asserted "no man ever was more political error upon misery of the people than has the present president of the United States."

Even as Mr. Hoover was reading his warning that "prosperity cannot be restored by raids upon the treasury," the administration "position for a $25,000,000 limit on drought relief was under attack in the senate by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the Democratic leader who had pledged co-operation. The senate promptly passed the bill of Senator McNary, of Oregon, the assistant Republican leader, for $60,000,000 drought relief and did not even consider any cut in this amount.

Maximum Budget

In his statement, the president asserted that the total of relief measures before congress was $4,500,000 more than he had asked and insisted that those he had recommended were "the maximum which can be financed without increase in taxes."

"No matter how devised," he said, "an increase in taxes in the end falls upon the workers and farmers, or alternatively deprives industry of that much ability to give employment and

Convicted Of Slaying Child

Mrs. Pearl O'Loughlin (above), wife of a Denver detective, yesterday was found guilty of slaying her step-daughter, Leona, 13, whose battered body was found in Berkeley Park Lake, Denver, on October 17. Escaping death through a legal loophole, Mrs. O'Loughlin was sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor in the Colorado penitentiary.

S. C. Grand Jury Advises Ouster Of Bank Examiner

JURY HAS NOT YET REACHED VERDICT IN WILLIS TRIAL

GREENVILLE, S. C., Dec. 9. (AP)—At 10:30 tonight a Greenville county jury deliberating charges of murder against Carlos A. Rector, and J. Harmon Moore, accused of plotting the slaying of Sheriff Sam D. Willis on June 11, 1927, had not reported.

The case against Rector, former sheriff and Moore, who was a Rector deputy, was given a jury in general sessions court at 4:21 this afternoon. The body retired immediately to begin deliberation.

Judge E. C. Dennis, presiding, said that he would be available for a verdict if one should be returned tonight until "about midnight."

CONGRESS ENACTS 9 MEASURES FOR

Failure To Act Against Violators Of Bank Laws Charged

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 9. (AP)—A Cherokee County grand jury today asked Governor Richards that he take steps to remove from office State Bank Examiner Albert S. Fant in connection with the failure of the American State Bank at Gaffney.

M. B. Sams, foreman of the grand jury, members and other Cherokee citizens appeared before the governor at a hearing today to press their demands.

Governor Richards urged the grand jury to determine whether Fant had violated any law and if he had to indict him. Should an indictment be secured, the governor said, he will cite the official to show cause why he should not be removed from office.

Action Asked

The Cherokee delegation told the governor that last March the grand jury urged Mr. C. Blackwood, their solicitor of the circuit and now governor-elect, to take action. When Sam R. Watt succeeded Blackwood as solicitor, he was also asked to take action against Fant, the dele-

COMMITTEE CALLS UPON EXECUTIVE IN CITY HALL

Mayor Declares He Will Do What Is Best For Asheville

MANY CONFER WITH HIM ABOUT MATTER

Three Names Suggested For Commissioners At Conferences

Mayor Gallatin Roberts at an early hour this morning had not resigned.

"I have not served notice of my resignation," the mayor said, "but I will do so if I am convinced that it is for the best interests of the city.

"This has always been my attitude. My resignation would be in order, like that of any public-spirited official, after being convinced that my holding office would be detrimental to the welfare of the public.

"Throughout Tuesday I was urged upon by several delegations of citizens. These delegations were evenly divided in their advice—some insisting I should not resign and others advising me to stick to my post."

Commissioner L. B. Rogers [illegible] said his resignation would be in effect Saturday, Monday night C. F. Blanton, [illegible] Mr. Rogers, who has been a member of the city commission for a number of years, [illegible] Mr. Blanton, who is a member of the city commission for the past two years. This is necessary, it was explained, so that the commission may have a quorum to act on the matter of filling the vacancies.

Successor Not Picked

There was no political talk in the corridors of the city hall today. No one was chosen to fill the unexpired terms of the commissioners. Dr. John M. Gillespie, chairman of a committee appointed at a meeting of some 500 business men at the Battery Park hotel Monday night, conferred with Mayor Roberts yesterday. Three citizens of the city were recommended to Mayor Roberts by Dr. Gillespie and members of his committee as successors to the recent posts.

Mayor Roberts is said reported to have declined to give the committee his answer, reserving his decision until after he had conferred with friends.

It is planned to have the new commissioners serve until the next session of the state legislature when

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

arl O'Loughlin (above), wife of a Denver detective, yesterday guilty of slaying her step-daughter, Leona, 10, whose battered ound in Berkeley Park Lake, Denver, on October 17. Escaping igh a legal loophole, Mrs. O'Loughlin was sentenced to life im- at hard labor in the Colorado penitentiary.

, Grand Jury Advises ster Of Bank Examiner

HAS NOT YET HED VERDICT WILLIS TRIAL

VILLE, S. C., Dec. 9. (AP) tonight a Greenville ury deliberating charges r against Carlos A. Rec- J. Harmon Moore, ac- plotting the slaying of am D. Willis on June had not reported.

e against Rector, form- and Moore, who was a puty, was given a jury l sessions court at 4:21 noon. The body retired ly to begin deliber-

E. C. Dennis, presiding, he would be available dict if one should be re- night until "about mid-

RESS ENACTS ASURES FOR F PROGRAM

illions Voted For ling; 60 To Aid ought Victims

GTON, D. C., Dec. 9. (AP)— 0,000 emergency unemploy- struction program and the drought relief measure d by the house and senate y today without opposition attacks in both branches e administration's attitude he works unemployment re- ns now awaits senate ac- the house plans to take ought bill for final passage the drought bill can be the house the agriculture which held close to the ation's proposal and a pro- for the work will

Failure To Act Against Violators Of Bank Laws Charged

COLUMBIA, S. C., Dec. 9. (AP)—A Cherokee County grand jury today asked Governor Richards that he take steps to remove from office State Bank Examiner Albert S. Fant in connection with the failure of the American State Bank at Gaffney.

M. B. Sams, foreman of the grand jury, members and other Cherokee citizens appeared before the governor at a hearing today to press their demands.

Governor Richards urged the grand jury to determine whether Fant had violated any law and if he had to indict him. Should an indictment be secured, the governor said, he will cite the official to show cause why he should not be removed from office.

Action Asked

The Cherokee delegation told the governor that last March the grand jury urged Ibra C. Blackwood, then solicitor of the circuit and now governor-elect, to take action. When Sam R. Watt succeeded Blackwood as solicitor, he was also asked to take action against Fant, the delegation said. Sams charged that Governor-elect Blackwood was dilatory in handling the matter.

Foreman Sams said that the grand jury considered the bank examiner had been negligent in the performance of his duties and wanted him removed on that ground. He indicated that the body felt that Fant had not violated any law directly.

"I am not going to issue indictments until the grand jury names the man and the offense," Solicitor Watt told Governor Richards. The chief executive said he would refer the affair to Attorney-General John M. Daniel for an opinion as to whether or not he had the right to order Fant to show cause why he should not be removed from office.

One purpose of the delegation here was to ask extradition papers for R. S. Lipscomb, former cashier of the Merchants and Planters Bank at Gaffney who is now ill in a hospital at Morganton, N. C. Charges against Lipscomb grew out of building and loan difficulties.

Governor Richards ordered Dr E. L. Borger to go to Morganton to determine if Lipscomb is physically fit to be returned to this State for examination. He indicated his decision on request for extradition

Mayor Declares He Will Do What Is Best For Asheville

MANY CONFER WITH HIM ABOUT MATTER

Three Names Suggested For Commissioners At Conferences

Mayor Gallatin Roberts at an early hour this morning had not resigned.

"I have not served notice of my resignation," the mayor said, "but I will do so if I am convinced that it is for the best interests of the city.

"This has always been my attitude. My resignation would be in order, like that of any public-spirited official, after being convinced that my holding office would be detrimental to the welfare of the public.

"Throughout Tuesday I was visited upon by several delegations at my office. These delegations were evenly divided in their advice—some insisting I should hand in my resignation, others advising me to stick to my post."

Commissioner L. B. Rogers tendered his resignation to the city board Saturday. Monday night C. L. Merrillett, Commissioner of Public Works, drew up his resignation which was presented to J. E. Gibson, city recorder-treasurer, at the board meeting yesterday morning. Mr. Merrillett's resignation will take effect after appointment of a successor to Mr. Rogers. This is necessary, it was explained, to allow a quorum of the city commissioners to receive and pass upon the resignation.

Successor Not Picked

There was no reliable information in official circles as to who would be chosen to fill the unexpired terms of the commissioners. Dr. John E. Calfee, chairman of a committee named at a meeting of some 300 business men at the Battery Park hotel Monday night, conferred with Mayor Roberts yesterday. Three citizens of the city were recommended to Mayor Roberts by Dr. Calfee and members of his committe as successors to the vacant posts.

Mayor Roberts it was reported, declined to give the committee his answer, reserving his decision until after he had conferred with friends.

It is planned to have the new commissioners serve until the next session of the state legislature when

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Five bricklayers lose lives as scaffold falls. —Page 1

Congress enacts two measures for relief program. —Page 1

Jury has not yet reached verdict in Willis trial. —Page 1

Democrats charge Hoover is acting for rich taxpayer. —Page 1

Gotham officials weep over tear gas gunplay. —Page 1

S. C. grand jury advises ouster of bank examiner. —Page 1.

Girl flier spans half continent in seven hours. —Page 1

Justice department to probe price of bread. —Page 1

Woods warns unemployed against leaving homes. —Page 9

League commission finishes groundwork for peace parley. —Page 9

Mrs. Hoover christens merchant marine ship. —Page 11

Methodist morality board rejects dry referendum proposal. —Page 11

Who started World War is debated in senate. —Page 11

Stocks fluctuate uncertainly, closing unchanged. —Page 12

Massachusetts, opened
e presidential state-
nate, the Arkansan,
Hoover's relief rectripped of that there ng left to his ob-
the date of birth."
on called attention
ctivities in flood re-dian food relief and used him of playing though Republican have said these acm as the best fitted for the presidency."
recalled that Mr.
dministrator during nded the appropria-
00 for Russian food
ing the disapproval
ation against loans
drought stricken

ht Relief

McNary both told the $60,000,000 pro-
e drought relief bill
d by the president's
ef commission.
he did not propose
the president if it
for drought relief show that $60,000,- ring politics, then I rison continued.

ar, Democrat, Ten-an apology from oth the senate and out such a rude tement."
nd, Democrat, New president "appears playing politics suffering" and ex-that Mr. Hoover me what the prob-

ide of the capitol.
at criticized the endation for $150.-
works to aid em-house struck $40.-
proposal.
Byrns, of Tennessee,
the administration
"were proven so employment meas-tee hearing that of the appropria-
"threw up his ed to support the
for in the amended

e of the proposals
ing money for inrchlights, submarine

Holiday
ish:

for your family
TE INGREDIENTS
he SAFE with

Saturday.

PLAZA THEATER: "Oh, For a Man" and movietone.

IMPERIAL THEATER: "Lightnin" and vitaphone.

STRAND THEATER: Shows Friday and Saturday.

PALACE THEATER: "Queen High" and vitaphone.

SIX PRISONERS SAW OUT OF JAIL

Three Men, 3 Women Escape Tuesday Night In Jackson County

—(Continued From Page One)

for judgment was continued for two weeks.

Officers, who investigated, said the prisoners apparently had obtained outside help. They had sawed the bars to the windows of the cells. The women were imprisoned on the ground floor, and the men on the second floor.

GIRL FLIER SPANS HALF CONTINENT

Miss Nichols Steps On Heels Of Lindbergh And Hawks

—(Continued From Page One)

was forced to lift her ship to an altitude of 20,000 feet to clear the peaks of the Rocky Mountains when she ran into bad weather.

For two hours while battling the storm, she said she was unable to see the ground and was forced to rely on instruments to keep the craft steady on its course.

Today's flight was one of the most noteworthy distance feats by any woman aviatrix although Miss Nichols herself is no novice at cross-country flying.

On January 4, 1928 she made the first non-stop flight from New York to Miami, Fla. Her time was 12 hours million and five control stations $5,000,000 for ammunition for the Rock Island Arsenal and $600,000 to [illegible] roads in the national forests.

[illegible] for the army, new uniforms for reserve corps officers, $2,000,000 for passenger carrying automobiles and trucks for the army.

The House measure carries no provision for loans for food for farmers, it covers only feed for stock, seed and fertilizer. Representative Aswell of Louisiana, ranking Democrat on the House agriculture committee, plans to renew his efforts to have the group accept the Senate bill.

If he fails there he intends to take the fight to the House floor.

Chairman Snell of the House rules committee said the drought measure would be given legislative right of way if the House agriculture committee comes to an agreement before Thursday.

Leeads Fight

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the minority leader, led the fight for the larger sum and the farmers food provision, in the Senate. He was joined by Senator Glass, Democrat, Virginia, who declared many drought stricken farmers were suffering from hunger.

It was after three and a half hours of heated debate on many subjects before Chairman Wood succeeded in putting the public works measure to a vote.

Unsuccessful efforts were made by Representative Cable, Republican of Ohio, to amend the bill to prevent employment of any aliens who entered this country illegally on any of the projects.

Representative La Guardia, Republican, New York, sought to amend it to limit to seven hours a day the working hours for skilled and unskilled labor on the projects.

With the powerful Republican majority behind him, Wood succeeded in defeating the amendments only after he declared that the measure would be so handicapped by them that its purpose would be defeated.

The bill, among other things, provides that states which cannot match the Federal highway funds will be advanced allotments which will be reimbursible within five years beginning with 1933, from future allotments.

JUDGE RULES GANT MUST BEGIN PRISON SENTENCE AT ONCE

GREENSBORO, Dec. 9. (AP)—Judge W. A. Devin announced here in Superior court today that he could not accede to the request of attorneys for Mason W. Gant for delay in the time of beginning the sentence of 10 years in State's prison which the judge imposed Monday. The sentence began Monday, Judge Devin said. It is expected that the defendant will be transferred from the county jail to state's prison shortly, perhaps tomorrow.

Mr Gant's attorneys had expressed the opinion that postponement of the time of making the sentence effective would enable the former clerk of Guilford Superior court and former secretary of the county pension board to be of material assistance to the auditors in determining the exact status of his accounts. Judge Devin however believes that the same assistance could be rendered by permitting Mr Gant to come to Greensboro from time to time, under parole.

MAYOR PONDERS PLEAS HE QUIT

Mayor Declares He Will Do What Is Best For Asheville

—(Continued From Page One)

legislation will be passed to assist the city in its present situation.

Mayor Confers

During the afternoon yesterday several persons called upon the mayor in his offices in the city hall and held lengthy conferences behind closed doors with the city's chief executive.

The resignations of Mr. Bartlett and Mayor Roberts were asked by committees representing the Buncombe County Medical Society and the Asheville Merchants Association.

Action of these organizations followed a series of events which started with the closing of the Central Bank and Trust Company here on November 20. This bank had more than $4,658,000 of municipal funds on deposit. A confidential report made to the city commissioners by the George W. Scott, Co., auditing firm of Charlotte employed by the city for the past 15 years to audit the city's books, stated, in part, that it was "possible to be charged that the city commissioners had perverted the credit of the city to the gain and advantage of a private institution."

Financial Demands

The auditors also alleged that the city commissioners between August 31 and October 31 of this year increased the city's outstanding debt by approximately $1,164,000 by issuance of revenue anticipation notes, despite the fact that the city's surplus on deposit was near $3,500,000.

City officials turned their attention to the problem of securing more than $71,000 for the retirement on December 15 of a city hall bond maturity. This bond, of $65,000 with interest of more than $6,000, under present plans is to be retired by money derived between now and next Monday from police court costs, water department revenue, and the payment of taxes and assessments.

$61,000 In Banks

Yesterday the city had a balance of approximately $61,000 in various city banks. More than $5,000 of this amount, however, must be used Friday to meet weekly payrolls of city employes. The payment of current expenses including market orders, will further dig into the city's bank account before December 15.

Yesterday morning's session of the board meeting was recessed until late in the afternoon to allow Mayor Roberts and Mr Bartlett to reflect upon the question of naming a successor to Mr Rogers. During the afternoon the meeting was continued until last night. From his home in West Asheville last night Mayor Roberts announced that the meeting had been called off.

The two commissioners will resume deliberations this morning.

ARMORED AUTO FOR GANGSTERS SEIZED BY COPS

DETROIT, Dec. 9. (AP) Investigators for Warren Osborn, 22 man [illegible] said today that a raid [illegible] in which an armored car was seized had disrupted a plan for [illegible] distribution of [illegible] to [illegible] machine gun and rifle fire was [illegible]

TOBACCO PRICES AT GREENEVILLE, TENN. AVERAGES 21 CENTS

GREENEVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 9. (AP) Approximately 500,000 pounds of tobacco was sold at the opening of the Greeneville market today at an estimated average of 21 to 22 cents a pound, F. T. Emerson, president of the Greeneville tobacco board of trade, said tonight.

The average price was from one to two cents lower than the opening day last year.

Prices ranged from five to 27 cents a pound.

Because of opening day rush, Emerson said final figures would not be available until late.

REMOVAL OF BANK EXAMINER ASKED

Failure To Act Against Violators Of Bank Laws Charged

—(Continued From Page One)

make until I am apprised of the facts in the case."

Fant was accused by the grand jury with failing to act after he had warned officers of the bank against "check kiting". In a letter to an officer of the bank, the grand jury reported, Fant had instructed officials to stop the "kiting practice within 30 days." The bank, Mr. Bams said, closed eleven or twelve months later.

Reviewing the case of a bank at Lancaster, in which a grand jury asked the governor to take action against Mr. Fant, Governor Richards explained that both the solicitor and presiding judge at Lancaster had told him that Fant had broken no law but that the entire question was "one of judgment."

Upon the governor's suggestion Solicitor Watt said he would aid the grand jury in its investigation. He said he knew of no grounds on which Fant could be indicted, except possibly malfeasance in office.

MOTHER SHOOTS SON FOR REFUSAL TO DO CHORES

ALBANY, N. Y., Dec. 9 (AP)—An anguished mother told police she shot and killed her 13-year old son today because of his impudence in refusing to do the chores on her lonely farm near here.

Summoned by telephone, neighbors found Mrs William Donohue, kneeling beside Thomas, her oldest child. The boy was dead when authorities arrived.

BANK LIQUID STUDIED CL

Matters Are D At Length By And Attorr

—(Continued From

of the audit. The first the audit has been co be to advertise in local the fact that all creditor ferred and regular, are all claims must be filed day period. After these been legally established to priority, the agent wi difficult task of liqui assets.

May Require Y

It will more than 1 year to liquidate assets but the trend of the will be determined to a gree within two or thre torneys believe. Mr. H that the present headqu Central bank will be time being, but will b as soon as the liquidatin ascertain the amount of necessary to carry on of liquidation.

Chief Liquidating Age also expected to arrive today or tomorrow to State Examiner Mitchell son and Judge Johnson. son said that the first Henson expressed is to the state of the bank fo depositors.

Mr. Henson has been only two days and sa could not make a statem der an opinion on a dealing with approximat 000. The completion of the paramount work in all action depends upon of the auditors, he said

N. C. HIGH SCH DECLAIMERS APPEAR AT

DURHAM, Dec. 9. (AP) annual 90-19 declamatio for high school seniors Carolina will be held at versity on February 21, officers of the honorar fraternity at Duke, whi the contest.

For many years hundre Carolina high school decl contested for an Mattra medal. This year region naries will determine t speakers to come to the and from these the bes compete in the formal the evening which will by a banquet.

Duke officers of the society are Henry L. A Mount Gilead, president Gamble, Birmingham, president; Herman Walker enton, Fla., secretary; Bretholl, Jr., Pores Knob

PENDER'S PIDELIA
ieBetter Chain Stores

APE FRUIT 5c
EEN CABBAGE lb. 5c
COANUTS 3 for 25c
Pecans The Student lb. 43c
ITO BEANS 4 lbs. 25c
PICKLES Qt. Jar 33c

You are co an accou with thi
You wil
egy and cons
every modern
THE NATIONA

HARRY W. PLUMMER

HARRY L. PARKER

Selection of Harry W. Plummer, prominent Asheville citizen, and of Harry L. Parker, for years well known in the city as former manager of the E. W. Grove properties here, as city commissioners replacing L. B. Rogers and C. H. Bartlett, resigned, was announced yesterday. Mr. Parker accepted the post tendered him, and Mr Plummer's decision is expected today.

TO ROBERTS NEXT STEP

Mayor And Bartlett Are Cooperating Fully, Committee Says

NEW OFFICIALS POPULAR IN CITY

Plummer Is Expected To Accept Post Today; Tension Clears

After a series of conferences between Mayor Roberts and a delegation representing a group of business and professional men of Asheville, it was announced last night at a representative gathering of more than 200 citizens at the Battery Park Hotel that Mayor Gallatin Roberts was cooperating fully with the committee in securing for Asheville a new board of City Commissioners.

As a first step in this direction Harry L. Parker, well known civil engineer and former manager of the E. W. Grove properties in Asheville and Western North Carolina, was elected commissioner of public works to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Commissioner L. B. Rogers last Saturday.

As a second step, Harry W. Plummer, long a leading citizen of Asheville, was offered a place on the board of city commissioners which will be created by the resignation of Commissioner C. H. Bartlett which had already been announced.

Mr. Plummer has taken the matter under advisement and it is believed that he will give a favorable answer today.

The understanding, it was reported, is that upon his acceptance Mayor Roberts will resign and the two new commissioners will then fill the remaining vacancy.

Officials Cooperate

Dr. John R. Calfee, who presided at the meeting at the Battery Park Hotel last night and who has been chairman of the citizens' committee interviewing the Mayor, said last night that the committee had found both Mayor Roberts and Commissioner Bartlett ready yesterday to cooperate fully in working out an acceptable solution of the situation which has caused such grave anxiety. It is understood that the committee suggested several names to the Mayor and Commissioner Bartlett, those of Mr. Plummer and Mr. Parker finally being agreed upon.

Mr. Plummer, who has been a resident of Asheville for more than 30 years, has been active in the affairs of the city throughout that period.

—(Please Turn To Page Eight)

First Atlanta-New York Transport Plane Soars

18 Passengers Carried On Initial Trip Over Route Wednesday

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 10. (AP)—Carrying 18 passengers, the first plane of Eastern Air Transport's new Atlanta-to-New York mail and passenger service arrived at the Metropolitan Airport promptly at 7 p. m.

The big condor was sighted at 6:58. It circled over the field and landed exactly on schedule.

NOTABLES ABOARD

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 10. (AP)—A big plane, loaded with mail for New York and with a passenger list of high aviation officials and financiers, soared aloft today to open the Atlanta-New York air mail passenger route.

The scheduled take-off at an early hour was delayed an hour while the passengers were assembled.

At intervals of a few minutes, five other planes left the ground. Ideal flying conditions prevailed along the route through the Carolinas and Virginia to Washington, thence to New York.

Brown On Board

Postmaster-General Walter F. Brown was among the passengers on the first plane to leave Atlanta.

Others in the first plane included Thomas E. Dos, president of Eastern Air Transport, and Mrs. Dos; Frederick O. Coburn, president and chairman of the board of aviation corporation, and Mrs. Coburn; Paul Lindley, New York financier, and Mrs. Lindley, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A Morgan of New York.

The inaugural squadron of planes from the East arrived at Candler Field Atlanta late yesterday. The squadron consisted of nine transport planes.

Welcomed By Mayor

Mayor Ragsdale, of Atlanta, headed the welcoming delegation including civic leaders and a number of State officials. Many national figures in aviation were passengers on the planes.

Last night the visitors enjoyed a picturesque evening in Dixie when more than 200 prominent Atlantians joined with those from the East at a dinner with the Atlanta president's guest as host.

An old-fashioned chicken dinner was served in a setting of cotton and Georgia pines. A negro show sang spirituals during the evening.

The formal program was followed by music and dancing.

PRESIDENT SENDS SENATE PROTOCOL BUT DELAY LOOMS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10 The protocols for American adherence to the world court were sent to the senate today by President Hoover with a message asking consideration as soon as the emergency relief and appropriation legislation has been enacted.

Friend and foe in the senate immediately expressed the view there was little hope for consideration at this session and Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, proposed that it be put aside completely lest it cause an extra session in the spring.

TWO LOST FLIERS ARE FOUND AFTER SEARCH IN WILDS

Pilot Of Plane Is Dead From Cold, Party Of Rescuers Finds

WHITE HORSE, Yukon Territory Dec. 10 (AP)—Two months after they disappeared in a seaplane in the frozen Yukon wilderness, Bob Marten Wrangell Alaska prospector and Emil Ensling German plane mechanic were found alive today but their pilot Captain E. J. A. Burke was dead.

After three other fliers were presumed to have lost their lives in the search, Pilot Everett Wasson flew back here today with Marten and Ensling, with it the sad slogan of disappointment.

They said Burke died from exposure November 20. The plane will be flown back to bring in Burke's body.

Signal Fire Aids

The men were rescued by their signal fire near Salmon Lake where the crews had abandoned their plane in the headwaters of the Liard River.

The rescue, one of the most spectacular in aviation annals, was accomplished through the bravery of Wasson and his plane, the Wasp, of Alaska Airways.

Landed In River

Marten and the rescued men were on in the Liard River without food, killing the dogs that accompanied the Wild Man (the name given Wasson the

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

HOLIDAYS WORRY G. O. P. LEADERS; DISPUTE ARISES

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—Democratic leaders are worrying the Republicans believe is dangerous.

Despite the promotion of Democrats and the desire to expedite legislation to avoid a special session, a filibuster, the speech of congress appears inevitable. The senate probably will begin consideration of relief and appropriation bills.

Representatives Tinkham of Massachusetts, who has supported some measures advocated under with Senator Watson, of Indiana, the minority Republican leader, both are agreement with contention.

Tinkham said the senate was willing to adjourn Christmas eve and return in January if it thought the house would do so.

PAYMENT OF CASH TO WAR VETERANS IS URGED BY FIRM

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—Immediate payment of the adjusted service certificates held by veterans of the World war was urged today by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Businessmen plead for solidarity in relief effort. —Page 1.

Two lost fliers are rescued from wilderness. —Page 1.

Former Greenville, S. C., sheriff guilty, jury decides. —Page 1.

Thirty-seven have died for violating air law. —Page 1.

Insurance Lloyd fails to organize new Florida government. —Page 1.

Hoover market forecasts rather sketchy outlook. —Page 10.

Frank S. Ballinger to prosecute Oxford prison probe. —Page 10.

Harry Gardner charge falls due to poor agent. —Page 10.

SPORTS

Sketches of Southern football teams prepare spring. —Page 1.

Recommendations of amateur athletic leaders in Southern Conference. —Page 1.

[illegible] —Page 1.

[illegible] —Page 1.

[illegible]

Grocers Of Asheville Will Join Corporation

Meeting Of Members To Organize Called At 8 Tonight

Twenty-seven of the leading merchants of the city handling groceries have made application to join the Quality Service stores, Incorporated, of Asheville, and the organization will be completed at a meeting this evening at 8 o'clock at the council chamber of the city hall, it was announced yesterday by J. L. Teague, of Teague's Market, West Asheville.

The object of the organization is to obtain a closer tie-up between retailer and manufacturer and jobber, Mr. Teague said. Henry T. Swan, of Lynchburg, Va., head of the national movement and organization of Quality Service Stores, Inc., will speak this evening, explaining to the local merchants the details of the plan of organization of the independent houses here.

It was explained by Mr. Teague that a brands committee will be appointed and will adopt certain brands of merchandise to be carried and pushed by all stores. Under this plan the manufacturers of the brands will cooperate with the local stores in an advertising campaign. Manufacturers and jobbers will also cooperate by making special prices under the plan, it was explained.

All high class stores carrying groceries will be eligible for membership. The plan is to have the Asheville unit of the organization in operation by January 15. This plan was inaugurated in Lynchburg five years ago and has spread. Recently units have been formed in Knoxville, Winston-Salem, Greenville, S. C., Shelby and other nearby cities. The plan here will include merchants in Hendersonville, Canton, Waynesville, Swannanoa and Black Mountain.

Those who have applied for membership here are as follows:

Pelmet brothers (2 stores), Teague's Meat market, Southern Fish and Grocery Company (2 stores), Economy Cash Store, May's market, Elmer Ingle, Oak Street Grocery, Mrs. A. M. Young, H. B. Croswell, N. C. Redman, and Pine Grove Grocery company, and the following Canton firms: Benjamin H. Harris, Homer firm; Benjamin H. Harris, Homer T. Cagle, T. M. Cogburn, Jasper Wilson, and J. W. Haynes.

Asheville Boy Wins Tennis Tournament

James M. Baley, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Baley, of Asheville, won first place in the upper classmen's tennis championship series played off recently at Chapel Hill where he is attending the University of North Carolina law school, it was learned here yesterday.

Mr. Baley, who attended school in Asheville and at Mars Hill college, is taking the university law course. His father is a deputy marshal in the federal service here.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Biltmore Methodist Church will hold its weekly prayer meeting and Bible study class Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. E. Hall, 252 Hendersonville Road. All members are requested to be present.

SAVE!

In This

SALE

of

Hickey-Freeman

O'COATS

and

SUITS

This event brings to you the finest tailoring the finest fabrics the finest styling in the entire industry at prices unknown at this season of the year. An unusual opportunity that offers the finest clothing in the city at real savings

THE WEATHER
ASHEVILLE AND VICINITY: Thursday increasing cloudiness followed by rain.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1868 | ASHEVILLE, N. C., THURSDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 11, 1930 | 16 PAGES | 6c DAILY 10c SUNDAY

WOE FOR JIGGS!

Are you reading "Bringing up Father" every day? Jiggs and Maggie are having their troubles. Keep up with this popular comic!

PLUMMER AND PARKER ARE CHOSEN COMMISSIONERS

Asheville Market Sells 150,000 Pounds Of Burley First Day

AVERAGE OF 21 CENTS IS PRICE PAID

Total Check Issue Of About $30,000 Was Made Yesterday

PROVISION MADE FOR QUICK SALES

Adequate Crop Handling Arrangements Ready For Farmers

After 37 years of inactivity, Asheville's tobacco market opened yesterday morning stronger than any market in this section of the country, 150,000 pounds of excellent burley bringing an average of 21 cents per pound for a total check issue of approximately $30,000.

H. B. Saunders, manager of the new $70,000 warehouse for the Carolina Tobacco corporation, said last night that the large crowd of several thousand persons at the opening hindered the buyers considerably, but that as the sales proceed the crowd will be diminished to growers and all tobacco will be taken care of as it arrives at the warehouse.

Forty Cent Tobacco

The first tobacco sold yesterday morning at 30 cents per pound. The top price for the day was 40 cents per pound. Mr. Saunders had reports from the Greeneville, Tenn., market last night and these showed that the Asheville market led the day in the burley belt of the southeastern states. A profitable season has been predicted and between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 pounds of tobacco will be sold. The sales will be held every day except Saturday and Sunday.

Work continued all night last night at the warehouse to clear the floor and reset it for today's sale. The remainder of the machinery for the prizing rooms will arrive this morning and will be ready for use by this evening. Mr. Saunders said that the warehouse will be ready to handle all the tobacco that is brought to the city and that a little patience for the first two or three days on the part of the growers is all that is needed.

More than 400,000 pounds of tobacco is in the city at the present time ready for the sales floor. Ad-

World Wires

CHICAGO, Dec. 10. —The aged mother of William Lenhardt, Cleveland youth sentenced to die in the electric chair early Friday, was acquitted late today of a charge attempting to help her son escape by smuggling a weapon to him in his cell. The mother, Mrs. Julian Olovta, had admitted sending a package to the convicted slayer of a restaurant owner, but testified it contained only a bottle of whiskey.

DURHAM, Dec. 10. (AP)—Dr. Calvin B. Hoover, of the Duke University economics department, will address the American Economic Association at Cleveland, Ohio, on December 28, speaking on the present economic situation in Soviet Russia.

DURHAM, Dec. 10. (AP)—One of the world's outstanding scientists, Dr. Robert Andrew Millikan, winner of 1923, Noble prize in physics for isolating and measuring the electron, will lecture at Duke University on December 15. He will appear under the auspices of the Crowell Scientific Society and the Sigma Phi Sigma physics fraternity at Duke.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10 (AP)—Delegates to the rivers and harbors congress today passed a resolution calling "unwarranted" recent attacks by railway executives on waterway programs.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP)—Formation of Columbia Concerts Corporation, a merger of seven concert bureaus throughout the country, to serve programs to radio listeners over its 76 stations, was announced today by the Columbia Broadcasting System. The step was taken, it was said, to "satisfy the insistant demand of the radio audience for the best artists and the finest music."

NEW YORK, Dec. 10 (AP)—From all parts of the United States, members of the national council of the Boy Scouts of America will gather in Memphis, Tenn., on May 4, for the annual meeting, James E. West, chief scout executive announced today.

DOVER, England, Dec. 10 (AP)—The Modesia, a 4,686-ton motor ship owned by the Donaldson line of Glasgow, ran aground under Shakespeare Cliff here tonight in a dense fog.

MACON, Missouri, Dec. 10 (AP)—Albert Layman, 62, of Blackwell, Okla., today was acquitted in Macon County circuit court here of a 41 year-old charge of assault with intent to kill Thomas

ROBINSON ASKS SOLIDARITY IN RELIEF EFFORT

Declares Hoover Lost Temper In Charges Against Senate

DROUGHT LOAN IS STUDIED IN HOUSE

Vote On Unemployment Fund Is Postponed Until Thursday

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec 10 (AP) Climaxing two days of blunt sharp-spoken exchanges between the White House and the senate, there came a new appeal today for inter-party solidarity in facing the problems of the economic depression.

He author was Senator Robinson of Arkansas, one of the original

DAY IN WASHINGTON

President Hoover submitted world court protocol to senate.

Democratic Leader Robinson replied to President Hoover in senate.

Senate debated $110,000,000 public works bill.

House passed bill to provide 44-hour week for 300,000 postal employers.

Senate confirmed Frank Mc Manamy of Washington as interstate commerce commissioner.

Admiral Pratt, chief of naval operations, expressed the opinion that United States would not build up to London treaty maximum by 1936.

signers of the Democratic post-election cooperation pledge. Before voicing it he struck back ruggedly at President Hoover for the latter's statement of yesterday that some members were playing politics "at the expense of human misery."

The president, he said, "lost his temper."

The senate was so deeply engrossed

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

STATE CONSTABLE FOUND GUILTY IN

GRAVE CONCERN IS FELT OVER ILLNESS OF LEE S. OVERMAN

By H. E. C. BRYANT
(Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10 The condition of Senator Lee S. Overman, of North Carolina, who has been ill for two or three days, is causing his friends grave concern. He is confined to his apartment in the Shoreham Hotel, where he and Mrs. Overman have taken quarters for the winter.

Senator Overman became ill in his office. A report that the Senator had a sinking spell and had fallen in a faint reached the Senate today and caused alarm. Physicians are giving him a thorough examination. He has suffered with his eyes for a year or more and has been inconvenienced by pains in his stomach. He is 77 years old.

BANDITS SECURE $45,000 AT BANK IN KANSAS CITY

27 Persons Herded Into Corner As Robbers Loot Big Vault

KANSAS CITY, Dec 10 (AP)—Four unmasked robbers took charge of the Inter-State National Bank for more than an hour today awaiting the opening hour of a time lock on the vault, and then escaped with loot estimated at $45,000. Officers and employes of the bank were held at bay with pistols.

One of the robbers followed Austin Young negro janitor into the bank located on the second floor of the Live Stock Exchange building in the Packing House district. He drew an automatic and ordered Young to proceed with the morning cleaning as though nothing unusual was happening. Three companions of the robber then appeared.

One by one the bank's employes and officers came in to begin the day's work. Each was compelled to step right over here" or "go over in the corner and sit down with the crowd."

27 Assembled

Twenty-seven persons had gathered before the vault could be opened. The bandits revealed they had studied the bank's methods for two or three weeks in planning the holdup.

While the time lock ticked away the minutes some of the women sa-

COURT DECIDES FOR SWAIN IN SULLIVAN CASE

Primary Ballot Dispute Arising Here Is Lost By Attorney

OTHER BUNCOMBE DECISIONS MADE

21 Are Included In List Handed Down From Supreme Court

Action brought by William A Sullivan, Asheville attorney, to compel J. Ed Swain as chairman of the Buncombe county board of elections to place Sullivan's name on primary ballots last summer as a candidate for judge of general county court, was dismissed yesterday by the state supreme court.

The decision in the case was announced along with decisions in a number of other cases, including a number of appeals from Buncombe county and Western North Carolina.

Judge Sullivan's fight attracted considerable attention at election time. He contended that Judge Guy Weaver was appointed to preside over county court for a term of office longer than the terms of county commissioners who gave him the appointment. Judge Sullivan was unable to place his case before the supreme court in time for a ruling before the election.

Other Decisions

Other Buncombe county cases decided were McCue versus Times-News company, affirmed. Supply company versus McCurry, no error; Haas versus Cathey, affirmed. Fisher versus Finance company, affirmed. MacRae versus Burns Detective agency, no errors.

The remainder of the list is as follows: Byrum vs Moule, Pasquotank, affirmed. Lumber Company vs Latham, Beaufort, appeal dismissed. Jennings vs Shannon, Pasquotank, affirmed. State and town of Lincolnton vs Moss, Hartford, reversed. State vs Sterling and Davis, New Hanover, no error. In re: Will of Crabtree, Orange, new trial. State vs rel Beddingfield vs Davis, Guilford, affirmed. Lisaker vs Stallings, Cabarrus, affirmed. State vs Scoggins, Polk, no error. Harris vs Black Mountain Railway, Yancey, no error. Guy vs Gould, Mecklenburg, affirmed. Grove vs Grove, Yadkin, reversed. Manufacturing company vs cotton mills, Wilkes, affirmed. Ray vs chair

Asheville's New Officials

HARRY W. PLUMMER

HARRY L. PARKER

Selection of Harry W. Plummer, prominent Asheville citizen, and of Harry L. Parker, for years well known in the city as former manager of the E. W. Grove properties here, as city commissioners replacing L. B. Rogers and C. H. Bartlett, resigned, was announced yesterday. Mr. Parker accepted the post tendered him, and Mr Plummer's decision is expected today.

First Atlanta-New York Transport Plane Soars

18 Passengers Carried On Initial Trip Over Route Wednesday

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 10. (AP)—Carrying 18 passengers, the first plane of Eastern Air Transport's new Atlanta-to-New York mail and passenger service arrived at the Metropolitan Airport promptly at 7 p. m.

The big condor was sighted at 6:58. It circled over the field and landed exactly on schedule.

NOTABLES ABOARD

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 10. (AP)—A big plane, loaded with mail for New York and with a passenger list of high aviation officials and financiers, soared eleven today to open the Atlanta-New York air mail passenger route.

The scheduled take-off at an early hour was delayed an hour while the passengers were assembled.

At intervals of a few minutes, five other planes left the ground. Ideal flying conditions prevailed along the route through the Carolinas and Virginia to Washington, thence to New York.

Brown On Board

Postmaster-General Walter F. Brown was among the passengers on the first plane to leave Atlanta.

Others in the first plane included Thomas E. Dee, president of Eastern Air Transport, and Mrs. Dee; Frederick O. Ogburn, president and chairman

PRESIDENT SENDS SENATE PROTOCOL BUT DELAY LOOMS

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10 The protocols for American adherence to the world court were sent to the senate today by President Hoover with a message asking reconsideration as soon as the emergency relief and appropriation legislation has been enacted.

Friend and foe in the senate immediately expressed the view there was little hope for consideration at this session and Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, proposed that it be put aside completely lest it cause an extra session in the spring.

TWO LOST FLIERS ARE FOUND AFTER SEARCH IN WILDS

NAMING OF SUCCESSOR TO ROBERTS NEXT STEP

Mayor And Bartlett Are Cooperating Fully, Committee Says

NEW OFFICIALS POPULAR IN CITY

Plummer Is Expected To Accept Post Today; Tension Clears

After a series of conferences between Mayor Roberts and a delegation representing a group of business and professional men of Asheville, it was announced last night at a representative gathering of more than 200 citizens at the Battery Park Hotel that Mayor Gallatin Roberts was cooperating fully with the committee in securing for Asheville a new board of City Commissioners.

As a first step in this direction Harry L. Parker, well known civil engineer and former manager of the E. W. Grove properties in Asheville and Western North Carolina, was elected commissioner of public works to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Commissioner L. B. Rogers last Saturday.

As a second step Harry W. Plummer, long a leading citizen of Asheville, was offered a place on the board of city commissioners which will be created by the resignation of Commissioner C. H. Bartlett, which had already been announced.

Mr. Plummer has taken the matter under advisement and it is believed that he will give a favorable answer today.

h Rush

y is shown at one entrance posed of 150,000 pounds at ment of B. B. Saunders.
aff Photo by Michael.

By Ripley

2 COMMISSIONERS FOR CITY NAMED

Mayor And Bartlett Are Cooperating Fully, Committee Says

—(Continued From Page One)

He was long in charge of the Asheville Electric Company, now the Carolina Power and Light Company, and has taken a leading part in various civic organizations, back to the days of the old Board of Trade. He knows the whole background of the community, is a man of fine business experience and ability, and enjoys a splendid reputation for his courage and integrity and judgment. Business and professional leaders were of the opinion last night that his appointment on the board of city commissioners would give general satisfaction.

Warmly Approved

Announcement yesterday of the election of Mr. Parker as one of the commissioners was warmly approved. He is highly esteemed for his professional and business ability and through his service on the city planning commission and otherwise has made a record that caused his selection to be acclaimed as an eminently fit one.

During the period that Mr. Parker was engineer and executive in charge of the E. W. Grove interests in this city and section he supervised investments involving the expenditure of several million dollars, some of these developments having included the erection of the Battery Park Hotel, the Bon Marche and the Grove Arcade. He was in general charge of the whole Battery Park hill and Page avenue developments which Mr. Grove sponsored and of many of the other Grove projects.

Since his connection with the Grove estate terminated Mr. Parker has maintained offices as a civil engineer in the Electrical building on Patton avenue. Some years ago he served for a time as assistant city engineer.

Pledge Support

At the meeting at the Battery Park Hotel last night resolutions were adopted pledging full support to Mr. Parker, to Mr. Plummer and to the other commissioner whom they are expected to elect following the resignation of Mayor Roberts.

Mr. Parker's election occurred shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday and immediately afterwards the oath of office was administered to him by Mayor Roberts and he assumed his new duties.

The feeling of tension which has been great during the past several days was greatly relieved yesterday

RADIO Programs for Tod

WWNC PROGRAM

8:00 CBS Tony's Scrap Book
8:15 CBS Brad and Al
8:30 CBS Morning Devotions
8:45 CBS Morning Minstrels
9:00 CBS Something for Everyone
9:30 CBC The Christmas Shopper
10:00 CBS Ida Bailey Allen
10:30 CBS Busy Fingers
10:45 CBC Bon Marche Talk
10:50 CCB Studio Program
11:00 CBS Food Fundamentals
11:15 CBS Five Arts
11:30 CBS The Sewing Circle
12:00 CBS Paul Tremaine and His Orch
12:30 CBC Informational Period
1:00 CBS Musical Aviators
1:30 CBS Harold Stern and Orchestra
2:00 CBS Columbia Artists' Recital
2:30 CBS American School of the Air
3:00 CBS Columbia Salon Orchestra
3:30 CBS Ann Leaf at the Organ
4:00 CBS Asbury Park Casino Orchestra
4:30 CBS Crockett Mountaineers
5:00 CBS WSPD Commodores
5:30 CBS Bert Lown and His Orchestra
6:00 CBS Columbia Educational Features
6:15 CBC Informational Period
6:30 CBS Ozzie Nelson and His Orchestra
6:45 CBS Tony's Scrap Book
7:00 CBC Dutch Program
7:30 CBC The Golden Hour of Music-Snowdrift Program
7:45 CBC News Acting
8:00 CBS Poet's Gold
8:30 CBC Informational Period. Weather Forecast. Rod Information. News Casting.
8:45 CBC Uncle Willard
9:00 CBC "Jolly Roger & Their Crew"—Sail the Sea of Melody with their Fair Captive Soloist Claire Leever
9:30 CBC Wenoca Melodies
9:45 BCC The Ad-libbers
10:30 CBS Welcoming WDRC
11:30 CBS Ted Weems and His Orchestra

THURSDAY
(By The Associated Press)

Programs in Eastern Standard Time. P M. unless otherwise indicated.

454.3—WEAF New York—660 (NBC Chain)

6:00—Dinner Music.
7:30—Sketch.
7:30—Hymns.
8:00—Rudy Valee's Orch.
8:00—The Birthday Party.
9:30—Melody Moments. Tenor.
10:00—R. A. Rolfe Orch.
11:00—Florence Richardson's Orch
11:30—Ellington's Band.
12:00—Jack Albin's Orch

394.5—WJZ New (NBC Cha

6:00—Raising Junior.
6:15—Van Steeden Orch
6:45—Topics in Brief.
7:00—Amos 'n' Andy.
7:15—The Jesters.
7:30—Phil Cook.
7:45—Lampe's Orch.
8:00—Aunt Lulu.
8:15—Landt Trio.
8:30—First Nighter.
9:00—Two Dance Melodi
10:00—Orch. Melodies.
10:00—Slumber Hour.
12:00—Heidt's Orch.

Central And Southern Stations

428.5—WLW

6:15—Hotel Orch.
6:30—Dog Talk.
6:45—Same as WJZ.
7:45—Sponsored Prog.
8:00—Dream Shop.
8:30—World Tour.
9:00—Band Prog.
9:30—Same as WJZ.
10:00—The Hall.
10:30—Feature Progs.
11:00—Variety (2½ hrs).

405.2—WSI

7:00—Sponsored Progs.
7:45—Same as WJZ.
8:00—WEAF (1½ hrs).
9:30—WEAF Progs.
11:00—WJZ Progs.
11:15—Theater Prog.
11:30—Balladist.
12:00—Same as WJZ.
1:00a—Organ Recital.

365.6—WHAS

7:00—Same as WEAF.
7:30—Muted Violins.
7:45—Same as WJZ.
8:00—Same as WEAF.
9:00—Chronicles.
9:30—Same as WJZ.
10:30—Same as WEAF.
11:00—Same as WJZ.
11:15—News. Orch.

461.3—WSM

7:00—Pianist; News.
7:30—Hotel Orch.
7:45—Same as WJZ.
8:00—WEAF (1½ hrs).
9:30—Same as WJZ.
10:00—To Be Announced.
11:00—WJZ Program.
11:15—Dot and Marylene.
11:30—Jack & Bill.

S. A. CARTER WILL BE BURIED TODAY

Funeral Service For Aged Resident Set For 11 O'clock

Funeral services for Solomon Andrew Carter, 77, well known resident of Buncombe county who died yesterday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. A. Swain, on Farwood avenue will be held at Asbury Memorial chapel this morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. J. G. Huggins, Jr., pastor, will officiate and will be assisted by the Rev. J. S. Williams,

ASHEVILLE B WILL PAY DIVIDEND

Directors of the N of Commerce and merce Union Trust a meeting yesterd their usual semi-an of 3 per cent.

The dividend is p ary 1, 1931.

TOWN HAS NO CI

NORTH BEND, Ore its population of 4,00 has no cemetery. Surro the cemetery of M miles away.

...ed of 1,000,000 pounds at ...ed of E. B. Saunders. ...t Finds by Michael.

...y Ripley

GEORGE SUTTON
OF TOLEDO, OHIO.
...NDLESS BILLIARDIST
...GH RUN OF 3000!

Announcement yesterday of the election of Mr. Parker as one of the commissioners was warmly approved. He is highly esteemed for his professional and business ability and through his service on the city planning commission and otherwise has made a record that earned his selection to be entitled to an enthusiastic 100 vote.

During the period that Mr. Parker was engineer and executive in charge of the E. W. Grove interests in this city and section, he supervised improvements involving the expenditure of several million dollars, some of these developments being Sunland the erection of the Battery Park Hotel, the Rex Theatre and the Grove Arcade. He was in general charge of the whole Battery Park hill and Park avenue developments which Mr. Grove sponsored and of many of the other Grove projects.

Since his connection with the Grove estate terminated Mr. Parker has maintained offices as a civil engineer in the Electrical building on Patton avenue. Some years ago he served for a time as assistant city engineer.

Pledge Support

At the meeting at the Battery Park Hotel last night resolutions were adopted pledging full support to Mr. Parker, to Mr. Plummer and to the other commissioner whom they are expected to elect following the resignation of Mayor Roberts.

Mr. Parker's election occurred shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday and immediately afterwards the oath of office was administered to him by Mayor Roberts and he assumed his new duties.

The feeling of tension which has been great during the past several days was greatly relieved yesterday afternoon and last night by the election of Mr. Parker and the reports that Mr. Plummer had been offered a place on the board. There was general confidence that while he had asked for time to consider the matter he would not decline the service that was asked of him.

The committee of citizens which has been working on the situation for several days adjourned indefinitely following the meeting at the Battery Park hotel last night. Dr Calfee, the chairman, was authorized to name a committee of five to call the group together again in their discretion.

At the meeting last night Dr. Calfee appealed to all present to leave the two new commissioners, Mr. Parker and Mr. Plummer, assuming the latter's acceptance, alone to make their own selection of a third commissioner, without suggestions or advice from any source except when and as they themselves sought such suggestions.

S. A. CARTER WILL BE BURIED TODAY

Funeral Service For Aged Resident Set For 11 O'clock

Funeral services for Solomon Andrew Carter, 77, well known resident of Buncombe county who died yesterday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. W. A. Swain, on Farwood avenue will be held at Asbury Memorial chapel this morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. J. G. Huggins, Jr., pastor, will officiate and will be assisted by the Rev. J. S. Williams, chaplain of the Good Samaritan Mission.

Mr. Carter was born in the Ivy section of Madison county, in 1834 he moved to the Beaverdam section and engaged in dairying and farming. He had been ill for several weeks.

Surviving are his daughter, Mrs. Swain, and two sisters, Mrs. J. E. Smathers and Mrs. Catherine Brigmon, also several grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Active pall bearers will be Willie Lee Baird, R. C. Stevens, Frank Roberson, Jeff Ford, Claude L. Felmet, and Ed Carter. Honorary pall bearers will be J. Ed Swain, John Neely, G. M. Foster, Wiley Brown, Robert M. Wells, and Charles C. Brown. Burial will be in the Asbury Memorial cemetery.

Women who have had a university training marry, on an average at the age of 30, a London authority has found.

ASHEVILLE B... WILL PAY ... DIVIDEND

Directors of the N... of Commerce and ... merce Union Trust ... a meeting yesterd... their usual semi-ann... of 3 per cent.

The dividend is p... ary 1, 1931.

TOWN HAS NO CE...

NORTH BEND, Ore. ... its population of 4,00... has no cemetery. Burial... the cemetery of M... miles away.

KILLS E... ITCH G...

Within a few minute... ing Dr. David's Sanati... talizing itching stops ... tured nerves are norma... Sanative Wash is a h... tive liquid that destro... scopic germs which bu... skin and cause so muc... danger of blood poiso... time your skin is burni... itch, apply Dr. David's ... It is supplied by all ... guarantee that it wil... case of itch within thi... your money will be refu...

PHILCO RADI...
AUCTION

THE WEATHER
ASHEVILLE AND VICINITY: Increasing cloudiness with light rain Friday.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ESTABLISHED 1868 | ASHEVILLE, N. C., FRIDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 12, 1930 | 18 PAGES | 8c DAILY 15c SUNDAY

WOE FOR JIGGS!
Are you reading "Bringing up Father" every day? Jiggs and Maggie are having their troubles. Keep up with this popular comic!

HARRY W. PLUMMER ELECTED MAYOR OF ASHEVILLE

Senator Lee S. Overman Claimed By Death In National Capital

END COMES SOON AFTER MID-NIGHT

Veteran N. C. Legislator Yields To Illness Of Several Days

SERVED HIS STATE LONG IN CAPITAL

Stomach Disorder Cause Of Death; Conscious During Evening

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 12. (AP)—Senator Lee Slater Overman of North Carolina, died here early this morning.

The 76-year-old veteran of congress passed away soon after midnight, succumbing to a brief illness which climaxed late yesterday with a stomach hemorrhage. It left him weak and spent and blood transfusions were unavailing to save him.

He rallied for a time and was conscious during the night, talking to Dr. Sterling Ruffin, his physician, and members of his family, until about 11:30. Then he lapsed into unconsciousness and an hour later ceased.

With him was Mrs. Overman, his daughter, Mrs. E. N. Snow of Washington, and Mr. Snow. Two more daughters, who live at his home in Salisbury, N. C., were on their way to the capital.

Outside his room at the end was Senator Simmons, the colleague from North Carolina, who had served but two years in the senate when Overman came in 1900.

Senator Overman will be buried at his home in Salisbury, but no arrangements had been made early today.

Friend Of Wilson

When Woodrow Wilson was burdened with some of the greatest problems ever to confront a president of the United States, one of the men he called into his councils was Lee Slater Overman, veteran senator from

Called By Death At Capital

SENATOR LEE S. OVERMAN

Martial Law Invoked In Cuba; Machado May Quit

Constitutional Rights Suspended 60 Days After Disorders

HAVANA, Dec. 11. (AP)—Amid new disorders by students and with rumors buzzing through the city that he soon would resign, President Machado today suspended constitutional guarantees throughout the

MOTORIST PLOWS INTO CHILDREN; TWO ARE KILLED

CHICAGO, Dec. 11. (AP)—A maddened mob which included parents of the victims threatened lynching for an autoist whose

TOBACCO SALES IN CITY REACH $47,250 TOTAL

Between 200, And 250 Thousand Pounds Sold Yesterday

HIGHEST PRICE IS $50 PER HUNDRED

Handling Of Burley At Warehouse Here Is Speeded Up

Between 200,000 and 250,000 pounds of fine burley tobacco was sold yesterday during the second day of the new Asheville market, the price averaging 21 cents per pound. The highest price paid yesterday was $50 per hundred and the total amount of money issued by check was approximately $47,250.

Enough tobacco came in yesterday to fill the floor again, but E. B. Saunders, manager of the warehouse, said last night that the buyers will be caught up with the growers by tomorrow. The three priming rooms are now operating day and night and the tobacco began moving rapidly last night following the closing of the second days' sales in the new $70,000 warehouse on Valley street.

Sales Speeded Up

The large crowd which slowed up buying on opening day had dwindled yesterday to about 500 growers and persons interested in the development of the market here. The auctioneers, checkers and buyers were able to move faster and about 100,000 pounds more was sold yesterday than on Wednesday. Mr. Saunders said that the prices are holding up well and are, if anything, getting better as a whole.

A few farmers were rejecting the prices their tobacco brought and were re-grading it or holding for a

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

HEARING IN SUIT AGAINST MEMPHIS PUBLISHER RESET

Asheville's New Mayor And Commissioners

MAYOR HARRY W. PLUMMER

HARRY L. PARKER

JOHN A. GOODE

The initial meeting of Asheville's new board of city commissioners will be held at the city hall at 9 o'clock this morning. Mayor Harry W. Plummer, elected by his associates at a meeting last night, will preside. Commissioner Harry L. Parker has been placed in charge of public works. Commissioner John A. Goode will have supervision over the department of public safety.

SMALL INCREASE IN PARCELS POST RATES ADVOCATED

Tilson Cites Needs For 5 Per Cent Advance In Charges

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 11. (AP)—Citing a parcels post deficit of $15,570,750 last year, Assistant Postmaster General Tilton today urged adoption of the 5 per cent increase in parcels post rates proposed by Postmaster General Brown to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

He issued a statement saying the postoffice department was helpless to deal with the deficit.

Major expenditures of the postal service, he said, are almost entirely beyond control of the postoffice department, the basis of expenditures being fixed by Congress and salaries by law.

Tilton held an Interstate Commerce Commission order of July 10, 1928, granting increased compensation to railroads for transporting mail, responsible for a $8,500,000 per annum increase in cost of handling parcels post.

WAGES OF 'NECKING' IS PUBLICITY AT MICHIGAN SCHOOL

BIG RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 11. (AP) The wages of being caught "necking" at Ferris Institute here is to be pitiless publicity.

President Wells D. White announced today that the names of all co-eds caught in "petting postures" with boys hereafter will be announced at public assemblies.

"Students," he explained, "are in school primarily to study academic courses and not to experiment with the cosmic urge."

SECURITIES FIRM RECEIVERSHIP TO BE ARGUED TODAY

Roberts Reviews Work, Promises Cooperation

Will Await Future For Vindication Of His Acts In Office

Asserting that he is content to await the future for vindication of his service as mayor of Asheville, Gallatin Roberts issued a statement immediately after his resignation as the city's chief executive last night.

"My associates in office, Commissioners Bartlett and Rogers, have seemed to resign their official respective positions, and I do not desire to remain any longer in the City Hall," said Mr. Roberts. "I have made this decision in the interest of the welfare of the City of Asheville, which I so dearly love, and have subordinated any of my personal wishes to those in the interest of the city.

Financial Situation

"I desire before leaving office to call the attention of the people of the City to a brief comparison of the financial situation of the City of Asheville as it exists today with that of my former administration.

"I was Mayor of this City from May, 1919, to May 31, 1926. At the expiration of my former term of office the total debt of the City for all purposes was $4,478,700. I was again elected Mayor of the City of Asheville four years later, and when I sur-

J. A. GOODE IS SELECTED MEMBER OF COMMISSION

Roberts Resigns Post As Chief Executive Of City Thursday

NEW OFFICIALS TO HOLD MEET TODAY

Commissioners Address Policemen, Firemen After Induction

Harry W. Plummer became mayor of Asheville last night, succeeding Gallatin Roberts, resigned.

John A. Goode, Asheville druggist and business man, and Harry L. Parker, civil engineer and former manager of the W. W. Grove properties in Western North Carolina, were elected city's new commissioners to succeed L. B. Rogers and C. M. Bartlett, whose resignations had been tendered and accepted.

Asheville's new board of commissioners will hold its first meeting at 9 o'clock this morning at the city hall.

Brief Resume

Developments in Asheville's municipal situation came rapidly yesterday.

Mr. Plummer, who had served as chairman of the board of aldermen, was elected mayor yesterday morning to succeed Mr. Roberts, who had resigned his post during the afternoon. Mr. Goode, who was appointed to succeed Mr. Parker, who had been appointed by Mayor Gallatin Roberts to the board of public safety, was elected by the board of aldermen to succeed Mr. Plummer, who had been appointed mayor. Mr. Goode was also appointed by the board of aldermen to succeed Mr. Plummer as chairman of the board of aldermen.

Mr. Parker was appointed to succeed Mr. Goode, who had been appointed to succeed Mr. Plummer as chairman of the board of aldermen.

Mr. Goode, Mr. Parker and Mr. Plummer were congratulated the new commissioners and pledged their cooperation to the new administration.

WHO'S WHO AND WHY IN ASHEVILLE

MAYOR GALLATIN ROBERTS is often spoken of as truly representative of this section, and indeed Mayor Roberts has been identified with Buncombe county almost all his life. Born on a farm in Flat Creek township of Buncombe county in 1878, Mr. Roberts was educated in the public schools until he was seventeen when he attended Weaver college for a year.

In the year 1897 the Buncombe county boy went to Marshall where he worked in the store conducted by J. J. Redmon. After working for a year he entered Washington college, a small institution in Tennessee, where he remained for a year, working to pay his tuition and expenses. In 1899 he entered King college at Bristol and worked his way for two years by chopping wood and making fires for board and tuition. While at King Mr. Roberts distinguished himself by his ability as a ball player, being leading pitcher, and on one occasion struck out 21 men. He was a member of the debating team also and took part in the oratorical contests at the school commencement.

Mr. Roberts returned to Buncombe county in 1901 and taught school at the Sand Hill school. The following year he taught at Barnardsville, and was elected, after a year of teaching at Barnardsville, principal of the Flat Creek high school. During those years the young man was reading law at night, and in January, 1904, he entered the Law department of Wake Forest college, and the following August was admitted to the bar.

Being without funds to establish himself in the practice of law, Mr Roberts again taught school one

MAYOR GALLATIN ROBERTS
—Higgaso Photo

Rankin after a bitter fight. He served four years. While mayor he was three times elected president of the state Municipal association, and elected twice to the presidency of the state Forestry association.

After his retirement as mayor, Mr Roberts formed a partnership for the practice of law with Don C. Young. In 1914 Mr. Roberts was appointed

---

...TEMENT

...Imperial, ...ts For Week

...E

...and soberly and discount-
...e advance publicity, Ashe-
...ainment during the next

...Miller players the legiti-
...will try to reproduce flesh,
...ion that bears the ambi-
...n minutes after midnight
...f the audible screen will

...ether Ralston's first and
...e first half of the week
...lo the second half. Both
... average. The Strand is
...a Greta Garbo picture
...ay Evening Post's story,

...days at the Paramount,
...ng" and Jack Holt's first
...Palace is celebrating its
...lmadge, Noah Beery and
...rifter." Desmond's "Roof
...estic with vaudeville and

...ever they are, will play
...with a midnight showing
...s sheets, it appears that
...e audible screen a good

...is his plantation to buy
...the stage to marry him
...pany of more than 200
...cing, talking and wise-

...David Perry, Sue Carol,

DEPUTI... BY HU... IN TA...

Appointment of depu...
serve under him as tax ...
Buncombe county was ...
day by Fred A. Hull, wh... fice Monday morning ...
Solon Hyder, collector ... four years.

Mr. Hull's appointees ...
H. Foster, as chief of ...
Joe E Sevier, Jr., office ...
John Oldham and C. L. ... utles on collections out ...
fice J. C. Hunter, wh... employed in the office ...
Hyder as a bookkeeper ...
tained. In deputy c...
present county commissi...
force one deputy under ...
ployed by Mr. Hyder. ... have four deputies and ...

Mr Hyder had five de... bookkeeper. The deputi...
who will go out of office ...
clude, Mrs. Hyder; L. W ...
L. Spurling, R. F. Le...
Weir.

N A Collins, delinqu... lector for 1927 will conti...

Biltmore ... Lost ...

Biltmore—founded ...
a score of years ago b...
George W. Vanderbilt-

[illegible] and soberly and discount- [illegible] advance publicity. Ashe- [illegible] entertainment during the next

[illegible] Virginia Miller players the legiti- [illegible] Plaza will try to reproduce flesh, [illegible] production that bears the ambi- [illegible] at ten minutes after midnight [illegible] revue of the audible screen will [illegible] of Life." Esther Ralston's [illegible] will play the first half of the week [illegible] Dolores Costello the second half. Both [illegible] above the average. The Strand is [illegible] which includes a Greta Garbo picture [illegible] of the Saturday Evening Post's story, [illegible] day.

[illegible] again the first two days at the Paramount, [illegible] in his first "talking" and Jack Holt's first [illegible] four days. The Palace is celebrating its [illegible] with Norma Talmadge, Noah Beery and [illegible] "The Drifter." Desmond's "Roof [illegible] to play at the Majestic with vaudeville and

• • • •

[illegible] of "Follies" [illegible] Plaza Theater

[illegible] Follies of 1929, whatever they are, will play [illegible] at the Plaza, starting with a midnight showing [illegible] morning. From the press sheets, it appears that [illegible] attempt to bring to the audible screen a good [illegible] a plantation owner who sells his plantation to buy [illegible] so she will leave the stage to marry him [illegible]. A musical comedy company of more than 200 [illegible] the general singing, dancing, talking and wise- [illegible] of every revue.

[illegible] Lane, Frank Richardson, David Perry, Sue Carol, [illegible] Sharon Lynn, John Breeden and that negro [illegible]. New music and new dances are promised.

• • • •

[illegible] Esther [illegible] Imperial

[illegible] barometer for the week reads fair and warmer. [illegible] last week.

[illegible] officer, Richard Dix, the pretty misunderstood [illegible] older officer, Esther Ralston, and India and the [illegible] combined in what promises to be an outstanding [illegible] of the week, "The Wheel of Life." The talky is [illegible] Richard Dix's second. It is the story of a tri- [illegible] solves.

[illegible] the second half of the week in the "Madonna [illegible] of an exclusive boarding school, Dolores Cos- [illegible] her mother to be owner of a night club of [illegible] this drama of the much exploited "under- [illegible] and then goes to the altar.

[illegible] promising.

• • • •

[illegible] variety of pictures will be shown by the [illegible] exotic Greta Garbo will appear in [illegible] live in Java with an irate American [illegible] prince. The Cosmopolitan magazine [illegible] Hyne, will be reproduced on the [illegible] gold rush of '49 with Renee Adoree [illegible] of mystery, Anna Q. Nilsson, [illegible] into a Florida rum running [illegible] William Haines, Joan Crawford [illegible] Saturday Evening Post [illegible] to college, "The Duke [illegible] Bennett, who made the [illegible] screen. It is a comedy [illegible] will play Saturday in

---

MAYOR GALLATIN ROBERTS is often spoken of as truly representative of this section, and indeed Mayor Roberts has been identified with Buncombe county almost all his life. Born on a farm in Flat Creek township of Buncombe county in 1878 Mr. Roberts was educated in the public schools until he was seventeen when he attended Weaver college for a year.

In the year 1897 the Buncombe county boy went to Marshall where he worked in the store conducted by J. J. Redmon. After working for a year he entered Washington college, a small institution in Tennessee, where he remained for a year, working to pay his tuition and expenses. In 1899 he entered King college at Bristol and worked his way for two years by chopping wood and making fires for board and tuition. While at King Mr. Roberts distinguished himself by his ability as a ball player, being leading pitcher, and on one occasion struck out 21 men. He was a member of the debating team also and took part in the oratorical contests at the school commencement.

Mr. Roberts returned to Buncombe county in 1901 and taught school at the Sand Hill school. The following year he taught at Barnardsville, and was elected, after a year of teaching at Barnardsville, principal of the Flat Creek high school. During those years the young man was reading law at night, and in January, 1904, he entered the Law department of Wake Forest college, and the following August was admitted to the bar.

Being without funds to establish himself in the practice of law, Mr. Roberts again taught school one year at the Flat Creek school and two years at the Morgan Hill high school, before opening a law office in Asheville in April, 1907. For a short time he was the partner of Samuel Radford, but the partnership soon terminated and Mr. Roberts practiced alone for a year before he was elected county attorney to succeed Charles A. Webb. In 1910 Mr. Roberts formed a partnership with W. C. Fortune that lasted until 1919.

In 1910 Mr. Roberts was elected to the state legislature where he served during 1911. He was made chairman of the committee on congressional re-apportionment by W. C. Dowd of Charlotte, speaker. Mr. Roberts was re-elected to the legislature in 1912 and served as chairman of the committee of counties, cities and towns. In 1914 he was re-elected again and served as chairman of the committee on appropriations. At the 1914 session of the legislature Mr. Roberts introduced a bill to give women the right to vote, but the bill was defeated. He was re-elected in 1916 and was a candidate for the speakership but was defeated by the Hon. Walter Murphy.

In 1919 Mr. Roberts was elected Mayor of Asheville, defeating J. E. Rankin after a bitter fight. He served four years. While mayor he was three times elected president of the state Municipal association, and elected twice to the presidency of the state Forestry association.

MAYOR GALLATIN ROBERTS
—Higgaso Photo

After his retirement as mayor, Mr. Roberts formed a partnership for the practice of law with Don C. Young. In 1914 Mr. Roberts was appointed chairman of the Board of Elections for Buncombe county and managed the primary and general campaigns. He has twice been a member of the Buncombe county Democratic Executive committee. In May, 1927, Mr. Roberts was again elected mayor, defeating E. B. Atkinson.

An active church worker, Mr. Roberts is a ruling elder of the West Asheville Presbyterian church, where he taught the Men's Bible class for many years. He was commissioner from the Synod of Appalachia at El Dorado, Ark., and voted for Dr. R. P. Campbell of Asheville as Moderator.

Mr. Roberts is a thirty-second degree Mason and has been an honorary member of the Kiwanis club for ten years. He is active in the West Asheville club, a community project devoted to the improvement of West Asheville, where Mr. Roberts makes his home at 134 Brevard road. During the World War Mr. Roberts was a four-minute speaker and canvassed this section in the interest of the Liberty Loans.

He was married to Miss Mary Althea Sams, daughter of J. H. Sams of Flat Creek, in 1907. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts have two children. Edward Gallatin Roberts, a son, is now in Alberquerque, New Mexico, recovering from a lung infection superinduced from injuries received while playing football on the Asheville high school team. The other child is a daughter, Margaret Evelyn Roberts, three years old.

They include vocalists, Horace Seeley, Sidney Gayle, George A. Hartrick, Paul Craig, with Mrs. Sidney Gayle at the piano.

Judges of stunts will be Mayor Roberts, Mr. Rogers, city commmissioner.

[illegible] IN TAXATION OFFICE

Appointment of deputies who will serve under him as tax collector of Buncombe county was made Saturday by Fred A. Hull, who will take office Monday morning succeeding Solon Hyder, collector for the past four years.

Mr. Hull's appointees includes W. H. Foster as chief office deputy; Joe E. Sevier, Jr., office deputy; and John Oldham and C. L. Baldwin deputies on collections outside the office. J. C. Hunter, who has been employed in the office under Mr. Hyder as a bookkeeper will be retained. In deputy collectors, the present county commissioners, cut the force one deputy under that employed by Mr. Hyder. Mr. Hull will have four deputies and a bookkeeper.

Mr. Hyder had five deputies and a bookkeeper. The deputies under him who will go out of office Monday include, Mrs. Hyder; L. W. Roberts, R. L. Spurling, R. F. Lee and H. M. Weir.

N. A. Collins, delinquent tax collector for 1927 will continue in office until his work is completed. He has a contract with the county to collect delinquent taxes through 1927. The delinquent work for 1928 is expected to be turned over to Mr. Sevier later when collections start in earnest.

Mr. Hull, elected last fall, is a Republican. He has lived in Asheville since 1883. Under the law the tax collector takes office at the beginning of the fiscal year July 1 following his election.

Mr. Hyder said Saturday he will make settlement with the county Monday and the same day all appointees of Mr. Hull will be approved by the board of county commissioners.

Mr. Hyder has made a fine record in office, records disclosed Saturday. His force has cut down the insolvent or delinquent personalty taxes due the county to $17,000, including corporation excess. This was originally $100,000. Sales certificates on real property sold for taxes amount to about $400,000, which is much less than last year, according to Mr. Hyder.

Biltmore's Identity Is Lost In Progress March

Biltmore—founded more than a score of years ago by the late George W. Vanderbilt—will lose its identity as a postoffice and incorporated town Sunday.

As a result of its annexation by the City of Asheville, the Town of Biltmore will surrender its charter to Asheville and the postoffice will be officially designated in the future as a station of the Asheville postoffice.

Biltmore Village—as it was known for many years—was established by Mr. Vanderbilt at the time the New Yorker was building the famous Vanderbilt mansion.

For many years, Biltmore was one of the show places of western North Carolina, but progress, in recent years, has done much to destroy its original beauty. The pebble-dash English type of homes and buildings have given way to dwellings of brick, stucco and stone. Even the famous Plaza has witnessed numerous changes, including the erection of modern type brick office and business buildings.

TODAY

(Continued from Page 4)

leoni.

Turbine and other engines may use mercury instead of water for steam power, according to scientists, which saving in coal, increase in energy.

It takes about 500 more degrees of heat to boil mercury than water. But once boiling, mercury, which weighs 13½ times as much as water, is much more efficient.

It is very expensive, but can be used over and over. Mercury vapor is poisonous; steam from mercury does not wet steel.

The Hartford Electric Light Company renders a service to industry, experimenting, successfully, with this idea.

Uncle Sam, who doesn't gamble gets a nice rake-off from the earnings of all street speculators.

The end of the fiscal year, June 30, Secretary Mellon says, will show a government surplus of close to $200,000,000.

More than half of this surplus is income tax on stock exchange profits.

Some years ago the late Cleveland H. Dodge, deeply religious, thought Princeton needed a statue of "A Christian Student." He ordered it, paid for it, and it was set up on a pedestal.

Some students evidently thought it was a good Christian, but a poor statue. Now it has been destroyed by a stick of dynamite, the early Christian, life size and his old-fashioned tight football breeches, blown to fragments.

Not Columbus, or the ancient Scandinavian in his little boat, was [illegible] Member of Circuit [illegible] peals who will participate [illegible] mer session opening in [illegible] Monday. Judge Parker was [illegible] finest Republican petitioner [illegible] his appointment to the [illegible] was the party's nominee for [illegible] at one time.

---

thousands of years.

In Florida, mastodon bones, ancient stone scrapers and [illegible] shaped arrow heads, found [illegible] them, show that human beings [illegible] preciated the Florida climate [illegible] lived in Florida at least 25,000 [illegible] ago.

Young women trying to get [illegible] or keep thin by not eating [illegible] please observe that Marietta [illegible] ner, moving picture actress, is [illegible] in Vienna. She was killed by [illegible] treme dieting."

You teach your system not [illegible] absorb food and it may never [illegible] again how to do it.

REACH AGREEMENT ON [illegible] LINE FOR NEW HOUS[illegible]

An agreement between the City [illegible] Asheville and Charles Book was [illegible] for record at the register of [illegible] office Saturday afternoon, in [illegible] the city authorized the [illegible] owner to erect a building beyond [illegible] building line established in 19[illegible] Cumberland avenue and 19[illegible] Cherry street. Mr. Book [illegible] demolish any portion of the [illegible] beyond the building line [illegible] days notice from the board [illegible] commissioners.

PARAMO[illegible] THEA[illegible]
MONDAY

VER'S FINAL QUEST DENIED

s Of Three Greens- People To Be Buried Apart

(Special To The Citizen)
NSBORO N July 3.—
al scene in Greensboro in on with the gruesome triple of yesterday morning, oc-onight when the body of da Hilliard was shipped to N J. where her father,
Wood, lives Interment will
there ody of her husband, Ray-Hilliard, who Mrs Hilliard long with Vivian Walker,
ter by a former marriage.
n yesterday at the home of er R O Hilliard, near and funeral services were e this afternoon The body ven-year-old girl was taken ernoon to Draper by her Vayne Walker, Mrs Hilliard's sband Interment will be Draper tomorrow In one notes left by Mrs Hilliard e the request that all three e buried together. The the three at widely separat-s has called this request of o tragic relief
nother strange angle to the developed today when the the seven-year-old Vivian revealed that the mother
Draper on Saturday and the little girl from the
of her father. It is now cershe brought the child with reensboro with the intention g her.

S OF SMITH CE DISCIPLINE

Launched To Place y Machinery In Loyal Hands

(Continued From Page One)

of it or any group of its hip," he said.

Warns Of Danger

who declined to vote the ic ticket will find them-ing into the party which as been the enemy and of our people, whose nomi-tly before he was named as ndard bearer saw fit to issue requiring that whites and his department should oc-same desks.

Republican party remains under existing conditions ent length of time the estion which will agitate the

West Asheville Citizens Will Honor Mayor Today

Maor Fourth Of July Celebration To Be Held At Rhododendron

The citizes of West Asheville will honor Mayor Gallatin Roberts and the City and County commissioners today with one of the major Fourth of July celebrations at Rhododendron Park

The event will be an old fashioned picnic spread on the Ryerson tract of land in Rhododendron Park just inside the city limits of West Asheville on the Brevard Road The celebration will begin at 11 o'clock and will continue until 2 o'clock There will be no speeches, the feature of the event being the picnic spread and a musical program and a track meet

The parade to the park will begin at 10 30 o'clock from the various residential sections of West Asheville and everybody has been asked to contribute a basket of food toward the success of the picnic All churches civic organizations and practically every citizen of West Asheville have been busy for several days preparing for the event and several thousand persons are expected to attend

Mrs Wells Chairman

Mrs Horace Wells is general chairman of the celebration This will be the first public celebration on the Ryerson tract of land, which is owned by the City and has been declared a park for the purpose of propagating mountain flowers and shrubs. Rhododendron Park is one of the beauty spots of this section of the country and is potentially one of the attractions of the South of this nature since Mayor Roberts has signified his intention of developing the land as a mountain garden and park.

The park is just inside the city limits of West Asheville on the Brevard Road The Weather Bureau here last night predicted that the weather will be generally fair today and that all Fourth of July celebrations will be uninterrupted by rain. All city officials and their friends and families have been invited to attend the picnic as guests of West Asheville and all persons interested in the development of this land as a park have been asked to participate in the celebration

Clubs Plan Program

The West Asheville Club, the West Asheville Community Club and the Junior Optimist Club of Hall Fletcher High School have arranged the program, which will be given during and following the picnic lunch. The committee in charge of arrangements for the picnic is as follows: Mrs. Horace Wells, Mrs. H. B. Posey, Mrs. George Osborne, and John Jones. The Junior Optimists will have a 20-piece band at the picnic. A track meet will be staged, which will be open to boys from all parts of the City.

Mrs. Wells has been assisted in the preparations for the picnic by the following committee members: Mrs W S McRary, Mrs George Os-

Guest Today

Mayor Gallatin Roberts will be honor guest today at Rhododendron Park, when the citizens of West Asheville celebrate with an old-fashioned picnic The celebration will be held on the Ryerson tract of land in West Asheville on the Brevard Road, and several thousand persons are expected to participate

NOMINEE VISITED COUNTY IN 1902

Officials To Urge Senator Robinson To Spend Vacation Here

Formal invitations will be sent Senator Joe Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic nominee for vice president, this week inviting him and Mrs. Robinson to spend their summer vacation in Asheville at Grove Park Inn.

A committee, composed of Frank Carter, Thomas A. Jones, Sr., Samuel J. Fisher, Charles N. Malone, J. Ed Swain, James G. Stikeleather, James E. Carraway, and John H. Cathey, has been appointed to communicate with the Arkansas senator.

Invitations will also be sent by Mayor Gallatin Roberts, officials of the Chamber of Commerce, Congressman Zebulon Weaver, and other officials.

Senator Robinson spent the summer of 1902 at Weaverville, shortly after he had been nominated to Congress for his first term.

At that time Charles A. Webb

TWO ARE SHOT IN ESCAPE ATTEMPT

Red Jewell, Sent To Prison From Buncombe County, Is Hit

RALEIH, N C., July 3. (AP)—Details of an attempted semi-wholesale escape from Caledonia Prison Farm last week which ended when guards brought down two fleeing prisoners with buckshot became known today. The men are in the prison hospital at Caledonia.

D W Hall, sent up in January, 1928 from Moore County to serve three years for housebreaking and larceny, is at the point of death as the result of gaping wounds in his side which was punctured by a load of buckshot He will probably die, Dr I H Norman, warden of the Prison said

Red Jewell, whose home is in Ohio, but who was sent to prison from Buncombe County in January, 1928, to serve 9 to 10 years for larceny of an automobile, was the second man shot. Jewell's wounds, Dr. Norman said, were not as serious as Hall's.

"Hall confessed that four other prisoners were planning to escape after Hall and Jewell had paved the way by throwing the guards into confusion," said Dr. Norman. "These prisoners, however, denied that they had planned any such thing. The attempted escape and shooting of the prisoners were not reported until today because of the absence of George Ross Pou, Prison superintendent from the city," Dr. Norman said.

Mrs. Joe Savage To Be Buried Thursday

Funeral services for Mrs. Joe Savage, who died suddenly at her home in Skyland Tuesday morning will be held Thursday morning at 11 o'clock from the home of her brother E. W. Israel.

The deceased is survived by three sisters, Mrs. George Chandler, 308 Patton avenue; Mrs. Henry Hudson, 110 1-2 Haywood street; and Mrs. J. P. Penland, Avery's Creek; and two brothers, E. W. Israel of 93 Dorchester avenue, West Asheville and Meyer Israel, of Rosman, N. C.

Rev. M. Teague Hipps To Speak At Canton

(Special To The Citizen)

CANTON, N. C., June 3.—The Rev. M. Teague Hipps, formerly of Canton, will preach here next Sunday. Mr. Hipps, who is now assistant pastor of the Central Methodist Church Asheville, has many friends here. He will conduct the morning service at the Canton Methodist church in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. A. C. Gibbs, who left Wednesday with Mayor and Mrs. D. J. Kerr, of Canton, for a trip to Europe.

FINAL DENIED

ree Greens- e To Be Apart

(Special To The Citizen)
July 3.—
Greensboro in some triple ning. oc-the body of
as shipped to her father.
ment will husband. Ray-

Mrs. Hilliard
Walker.
marriage.
home of near services were
The body was taken
Hooper by her
Mrs. Hilliard's
will be morrow. In one
by Mrs. Hilliard
that all three together. The widely separatthis request of ef ge angle to the today when the year-old Vivian
at the mother
Saturday and girl from the
It is now cert the child with
th the intention

MITH CIPLINE

d To Place inery In ands

rom Page One)

y group of its d.

Danger

ed to vote the ill find theme party which e enemy and
le, whose nomi-
was named as
saw fit to issue

West Asheville Citizens Will Honor Mayor Today

Maor Fourth Of July Celebration To Be Held At Rhododendron

The citizes of West Asheville will honor Mayor Gallatin Roberts and the City and County Commissioners today with one of the major Fourth of July celebrations at Rhododendron Park.

The event will be an old fashioned picnic spread at noon on the Ryerson tract of land in Rhododendron Park inside the city limits of West Asheville on the Brevard Road. The celebration will begin at 11 o'clock and will continue until 2 o'clock. There will be no speeches, the feature of the event being the picnic spread and a social program and a track meet.

The parade of the park will begin at 10 30 o'clock from various residential sections of West Asheville and each family has been asked to contribute a basket of food toward the success of the picnic. All churches, organizations and practically every citizen of West Asheville have been busy for several days preparing for the event and several thousand persons are expected to attend.

Mrs Wells Chairman

Mrs Horace Wells is general chairman of the celebration. This will be the first public celebration on the Ryerson tract of land, which is owned by the City and has been declared a park for the purpose of propagating mountain flowers and shrubs. Rhododendron Park is one of the beauty spots of this section of the country and is potentially one of the attractions of the South of this nature since Mayor Roberts has signified his intention of developing the land as a mountain garden and park.

The park is just inside the city limits of West Asheville on the Brevard Road. The Weather Bureau here last night predicted that the weather will be generally fair today and that all Fourth of July celebrations will be uninterrupted by rain. All city officials and their friends and families have been invited to attend the picnic as guests of West Asheville and all persons interested in the development of this land as a park have been asked to participate in the celebration.

Clubs Plan Program

The West Asheville Club, the West Asheville Community Club and the Junior Optimist Club of Hall Fletcher High School have arranged the program, which will be given during and following the picnic lunch. The committee in charge of arrangements for the picnic is as follows: Mrs. Horace Wells, Mrs. H. B. Posey, Mrs. George Osborne, and John Jones. The Junior Optimists

Guest Today

Mayor Gallatin Roberts will be honor guest today at Rhododendron Park when the citizens of West Asheville celebrate with an old-fashioned picnic. The celebration will be held on the Ryerson tract of land in West Asheville on the Brevard Road, and several thousand persons are expected to participate.

NOMINEE VISITED COUNTY IN 1902

Officials To Urge Senator Robinson To Spend Vacation Here

Formal invitations will be sent Senator Joe Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic nominee for vice president, this week inviting him and Mrs. Robinson to spend their summer vacation in Asheville at Grove Park Inn.

A committee, composed of Frank Carter, Thomas A. Jones, Sr., Samuel J. Fisher, Charles N. Malone, J. Ed Swain, James G. Stikeleather, James E. Carraway, and John H. Cathey, has been appointed to communicate with the Arkansas senator.

Invitations will also be sent by Mayor Gallatin Roberts, officials of the Chamber of Commerce, Con-

TWO ARE SHOT IN ESCAPE ATTEMPT

Red Jewell, Sent To Prison From Buncombe County, Is Hit

RALEIH, N. C., July 3. (AP)—Details of an attempted semi-wholesale escape from Caledonia Prison Farm last week which ended when guards brought down two fleeing prisoners with buckshot became known today. The men are in the prison hospital at Caledonia.

D. W Hall, sent up in January, 1928 from Moore County to serve three years for housebreaking and larceny, is at the point of death as the result of gaping wounds in his side which was punctured by a load of buckshot. He will probably die, Dr. I. H. Norman, warden of the Prison said.

Red Jewell, whose home is in Ohio, but who was sent to prison from Buncombe County in January, 1928, to serve 9 to 10 years for larceny of an automobile, was the second man shot. Jewell's wounds, Dr. Norman said, were not as serious as Hall's.

"Hall confessed that four other prisoners were planning to escape after Hall and Jewell had paved the way by throwing the guards into confusion," said Dr. Norman. "These prisoners, however, denied that they had planned any such thing. The attempted escape and shooting of the prisoners were not reported until today because of the absence of George Ross Pou, Prison superintendent from the city," Dr. Norman said.

Mrs. Joe Savage To Be Buried Thursday

Funeral services for Mrs. Joe Savage, who died suddenly at her home in Skyland Tuesday morning will be held Thursday morning at 11 o'clock from the home of her brother E. W. Israel.

The deceased is survived by three sisters, Mrs. George Chandler, 308 Patton avenue; Mrs. Henry Hudson, 110 1-2 Haywood street; and Mrs. J. P. Penland, Avery's Creek; and two brothers, E. W. Israel of 93 Dorchester avenue, West Asheville and Meyer Israel, of Rosman, N. C.

Rev. M. Teague Hipps To Speak At Canton

(Special To The Citizen)

CANTON, N. C., June 3.—The Rev. M. Teague Hipps, formerly of Canton, will preach here next Sunday. Mr. Hipps, who is now assistant pastor of the Central Methodist Church Asheville, has many friends here

LAYER'S FINAL REQUEST DENIED

dies Of Three Greensboro People To Be Buried Apart

(Special To The Citizen)
REENSBORO N July 3.—
final scene in Greensboro in nection with the gruesome triple ng of yesterday morning, oc-ed tonight when the body of Zelda Hilliard was shipped to iden, N J, where her father, mas Wood, lives Interment will made there he body of her husband, Ray-d Hilliard, who Mrs Hilliard
ed along with Vivian Walker, aughter by a former marriage, taken yesterday to the home of father R O Hilliard, near ne, and funeral services were there this afternoon The body he seven-year-old girl was taken afternoon to Draper by her er, Wayne Walker, Mrs Hilliard's husband. Interment will be e in Draper tomorrow In one he notes left by Mrs. Hilliard made the request that all three es be buried together. The al of the three at widely separat-points has called this request of into tragic relief et another strange angle to the was developed today when the er of the seven-year-old Vivian ker revealed that the mother e to Draper on Saturday and red the little girl from the ody of her father. It is now cer-that she brought the child with to Greensboro with the intention illing her.

IES OF SMITH FACE DISCIPLINE

in Launched To Place 'arty Machinery In Loyal Hands

—(Continued From Page One)

ıber of it or any group of its ıbership," he said.

Warns Of Danger

'hose who declined to vote the ocratic ticket will find them-s going into the party which ys has been the enemy and essor of our people, whose nomi-shortly before he was named as standard bearer saw fit to issue order requiring that whites and ks in his department should oc-the same desks.
f the Republican party remains power under existing conditions ufficient length of time the t question which will agitate the is of the people, at least of the h, in the coming year will be ther our Jim Crow laws shall be

West Asheville Citizens Will Honor Mayor Today

Maor Fourth Of July Celebration To Be Held At Rhododendron

The citizes of West Asheville will honor Mayor Gallatin Roberts and the City and County Commissioners today with one of the major Fourth of July celebrations at Rhododendron Park

The event will be an old-fashioned picnic spread on the Ryerson tract of land in Rhododendron Park just inside the city limits of West Asheville on the Brevard Road The celebration will begin at 11 o'clock and will continue until 2 o'clock There will be no speeches, the feature of the event being the picnic spread and a special program and a track meet

The parade to the park will begin at 10 30 o'clock from the various residential sections of West Asheville and each family has been asked to contribute a basket of food toward the success of the picnic All churches civic organizations and practically every citizen of West Asheville have been busy for several days preparing for the event and several thousand persons are expected to attend

Mrs. Wells Chairman

Mrs. Horace Wells is general chairman of the celebration This will be the first public celebration on the Ryerson tract of land, which is owned by the City and has been declared a park for the purpose of propagating mountain flowers and shrubs. Rhododendron Park is one of the beauty spots of this section of the country and is potentially one of the attractions of the South of this nature since Mayor Roberts has signified his intention of developing the land as a mountain garden and park.

The park is just inside the city limits of West Asheville on the Brevard Road The Weather Bureau here last night predicted that the weather will be generally fair today and that all Fourth of July celebrations will be uninterrupted by rain. All city officials and their friends and families have been invited to attend the picnic as guests of West Asheville and all persons interested in the development of this land as a park have been asked to participate in the celebration.

Clubs Plan Program

The West Asheville Club, the West Asheville Community Club and the Junior Optimist Club of Hall Fletcher High School have arranged the program, which will be given during and following the picnic lunch. The committee in charge of arrangements for the picnic is as follows: Mrs. Horace Wells, Mrs. H. B. Posey, Mrs. George Osborne, and John Jones. The Junior Optimists will have a 20-piece band at the picnic. A track meet will be staged, which will be open to boys from all parts of the City.

Mrs. Wells has been assisted in the preparations for the picnic by the following committee members: Mrs. W. S. McRary, Mrs. George Osborne, Mrs. Lon Barrett, Mrs. Hugh Sowers, Mrs. Frank VanValkenberg, Dan C. Young, M. W. Hamrick, W. Mr. Robinson speaks in his behalf

Guest Today

Mayor Gallatin Roberts will be honor guest today at Rhododendron Park, when the citizens of West Asheville celebrate with an old-fashioned picnic The celebration will be held on the Ryerson tract of land in West Asheville on the Brevard Road, and several thousand persons are expected to participate.

NOMINEE VISITED COUNTY IN 1902

Officials To Urge Senator Robinson To Spend Vacation Here

Formal invitations will be sent Senator Joe Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic nominee for vice president, this week inviting him and Mrs. Robinson to spend their summer vacation in Asheville at Grove Park Inn.

A committee, composed of Frank Carter, Thomas A. Jones, Sr., Samuel J. Fisher, Charles N. Malone, J. Ed Swain, James G. Stikeleather, James E. Carraway, and John H. Cathey, has been appointed to communicate with the Arkansas senator.

Invitations will also be sent by Mayor Gallatin Roberts, officials of the Chamber of Commerce, Congressman Zebulon Weaver, and other officials.

Senator Robinson spent the summer of 1902 at Weaverville, shortly after he had been nominated to Congress for his first term.

At that time, Charles A. Webb, co-publisher of The Citizen, was a candidate for the State Senate, and

TWO ARE SHOT IN ESCAPE ATTEMPT

Red Jewell, Sent To Prison From Buncombe County, Is Hit

RALEIH, N. C., July 3. (AP)—Details of an attempted semi-wholesale escape from Caledonia Prison Farm last week which ended when guards brought down two fleeing prisoners with buckshot became known today. The men are in the prison hospital at Caledonia.

D. W Hall, sent up in January, 1928 from Moore County to serve three years for housebreaking and larceny, is at the point of death as the result of gaping wounds in his side which was punctured by a load of buckshot He will probably die, Dr J H Norman, warden of the Prison said

Red Jewell, whose home is in Ohio, but who was sent to prison from Buncombe County in January, 1928, to serve 9 to 10 years for larceny of an automobile, was the second man shot. Jewell's wounds, Dr. Norman said, were not as serious as Hall's.

"Hall confessed that four other prisoners were planning to escape after Hall and Jewell had paved the way by throwing the guards into confusion," said Dr. Norman. "These prisoners, however, denied that they had planned any such thing. The attempted escape and shooting of the prisoners were not reported until today because of the absence of George Ross Pou, Prison superintendent from the city," Dr. Norman said.

Mrs. Joe Savage To Be Buried Thursday

Funeral services for Mrs. Joe Savage, who died suddenly at her home in Skyland Tuesday morning will be held Thursday morning at 11 o'clock from the home of her brother E. W. Israel.

The deceased is survived by three sisters, Mrs. George Chandler, 308 Patton avenue; Mrs. Henry Hudson, 110 1-2 Haywood street; and Mrs. J. P. Penland, Avery's Creek; and two brothers, E. W. Israel of 93 Dorchester avenue, West Asheville and Meyer Israel, of Rosman, N. C.

Rev. M. Teague Hipps To Speak At Canton

(Special To The Citizen)
CANTON, N. C., June 3.—The Rev. M. Teague Hipps, formerly of Canton, will preach here next Sunday. Mr. Hipps, who is now assistant pastor of the Central Methodist Church Asheville, has many friends here. He will conduct the morning service at the Canton Methodist church in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. A. C. Gibbs, who left Wednesday with Mayor and Mrs. D. J. Kerr, of Canton, for a trip to Europe.

R'S FINAL IEST DENIED

Of Three Greens- People To Be ried Apart

d To The Citizen)
ORO N [illegible] 3 — [illegible] in [illegible] triple [illegible] ng occ- [illegible] body of [illegible] pped to [illegible] father [illegible] ment will [illegible] Rav- [illegible] Hilliard [illegible] Walker [illegible] marriage [illegible] home of [illegible] near [illegible] were [illegible] the body [illegible] was taken [illegible] by her [illegible] Hilliard's [illegible] will be [illegible] In one [illegible] Mrs. Hilliard [illegible] all three [illegible] The [illegible] separat- [illegible] request of [illegible] single to the [illegible] when the [illegible] Vivian [illegible] the mother [illegible] Saturday and [illegible] from the [illegible] It is now cer- [illegible] the child with [illegible] the intention [illegible]

IF SMITH DISCIPLINE

unched To Place Machinery In yal Hands

ntinued From Page One

[illegible] or any group of its [illegible] he said

rns Of Danger

[illegible] declined to vote the [illegible] ticket will find them- [illegible] into the party which [illegible] been the enemy and [illegible] our people, whose nomi- [illegible] before he was named as [illegible] bearer saw fit to issue [illegible] during that whites and [illegible] department should oc- [illegible] the desks.

[illegible] publican party remains [illegible] der existing conditions [illegible] length of time the [illegible]

West Asheville Citizens Will Honor Mayor Today

Maor Fourth Of July Celebration To Be Held At Rhododendron

The [illegible] West Asheville [illegible] honor Mayor [illegible] Roberts and the City and [illegible] commissioners today [illegible] Fourth of July [illegible] Park

The event [illegible] picnic [illegible] the Ever- son tract [illegible] Rhododen- dron Park [illegible] of West As[illegible] Brevard Road. The [illegible] at 11 o'clock [illegible] 2 o'clock [illegible] speeches the [illegible] being the picnic [illegible] program and [illegible]

At [illegible] is resident [illegible] West Ashe- ville [illegible] asked to [illegible] the [illegible] All churches [illegible] and practically [illegible] West Asheville [illegible] for several days [illegible] the event and several [illegible] persons are expected [illegible]

Mrs. Wells Chairman

Mrs. Horace Wells is general chair- man of the [illegible] This will be the first [illegible] celebration on the Ryerson [illegible] and which is owned by the [illegible] has been de- clared a park [illegible] the purpose of propagating [illegible] flowers and shrubs. Rhododendron Park is one of the beauty spots of this section of the country and is potentially one of the attractions of the South of this nature since Mayor Roberts has signified his intention of developing the land as a mountain garden and park.

The park is just inside the city limits of West Asheville on the Bre- vard Road. The Weather Bureau here last night predicted that the weather will be generally fair today and that all Fourth of July celebra- tions will be uninterrupted by rain. All city officials and their friends and families have been invited to attend the picnic as guests of West Asheville and all persons interested in the development of this land as a park have been asked to participate in the celebration.

Clubs Plan Program

The West Asheville Club, the West Asheville Community Club and the Junior Optimist Club of Hall Fletcher High School have arranged the program, which will be given during and following the picnic lunch. The committee in charge of arrangements for the picnic is as fol- lows: Mrs. Horace Wells, Mrs. H. B. Posey, Mrs. George Osborne, and John Jones. The Junior Optimists will have a 20-piece band at the pic- nic. A track meet will be staged, which will be open to boys from all parts of the City.

Mrs. Wells has been assisted in the preparations for the picnic by the following committee members: [illegible]

Guest Today

Mayor Gallatin Roberts will be honor guest today at Rhododendron Park when the citizens of West Asheville celebrate with an old- fashioned picnic. The celebration will be held on the Ryerson tract of land in West Asheville on the Bre- vard Road and several thousand persons are expected to participate.

NOMINEE VISITED COUNTY IN 1902

Officials To Urge Sena- tor Robinson To Spend Vacation Here

Formal invitations will be sent Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic nominee for vice presi- dent this week inviting him and Mrs. Robinson to spend their sum- mer vacation in Asheville at Grove Park Inn.

A committee composed of Frank Carter, Thomas A. Jones, Sr., Samuel J. Fisher, Charles N. Malone, J. Ed Swain, James G. Stikeleather, James E. Carraway and John H. Cathey, has been appointed to communicate with the Arkansas senator.

Invitations will also be sent by Mayor Gallatin Roberts, officials of the Chamber of Commerce, Con- gressman Zebulon Weaver, and other officials.

Senator Robinson spent the sum- mer of 1902 at Weaverville, shortly after he had been nominated to Congress for his first term.

TWO ARE SHOT IN ESCAPE ATTEMPT

Red Jewell, Sent To Pris- on From Buncombe County, Is Hit

RALEIH, N. C., July 3. (AP)—De- tails of an attempted semi-whole- sale escape from Caledonia Prison Farm last week which ended when guards brought down two fleeing prisoners with buckshot became known today. The men are in the prison hospital at Caledonia.

D. W. Hall, sent up in January, 1928 from Moore County to serve three years for housebreaking and larceny, is at the point of death as the result of gaping wounds in his side which was punctured by a load of buckshot. He will probably die, Dr. J. H. Norman, warden of the Prison, said.

Red Jewell, whose home is in Ohio, but who was sent to prison from Buncombe County in January, 1928, to serve 9 to 10 years for larceny of an automobile, was the second man shot. Jewell's wounds, Dr. Norman said, were not as serious as Hall's.

Hall confessed that four other prisoners were planning to escape after Hall and Jewell had paved the way by throwing the guards into confusion, said Dr. Norman. "These prisoners, however, denied that they had planned any such thing. The attempted escape and shooting of the prisoners were not reported until today because of the absence of George Ross Pou, Prison superin- tendent from the city," Dr. Nor- man said.

Mrs. Joe Savage To Be Buried Thursday

Funeral services for Mrs. Joe Sav- age who died suddenly at her home in Skyland Tuesday morning will be held Thursday morning at 11 o'clock from the home of her broth- er, E. W. Israel.

The deceased is survived by three sisters, Mrs. George Chandler, 308 Patton avenue, Mrs. Henry Hudson, 110 1-2 Haywood street; and Mrs. J. P. Penland, Avery's Creek; and two brothers, E. W. Israel of 93 Dorchester avenue, West Asheville and Meyer Israel, of Rosman, N. C.

Rev. M. Teague Hipps To Speak At Canton

(Special To The Citizen)

CANTON, N. C., June 3.—The Rev. M. Teague Hipps, formerly of Can- ton, will preach here next Sunday. Mr. Hipps, who is now assistant pas- tor of the Central Methodist Church Asheville, has many friends here. He will conduct the morning serv- ice at the Canton Methodist church in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. A. C. Gibbs, who left Wednes- day with Mayor and Mrs. D. J. Kerr, of Canton, for a trip to

T DENIED

hree Greens-ole To Be Apart

The Citizen)
N C July 3.— n Greensboro in he gruesome triple ay morning, oc-
hen the body of rd was shipped to chete her father,
es Interment will

r husband, Ray-ho Mrs Hilliard
th Vivian Walker, former marriage.
at the home of H said, near ra, services were ersin The body
ld was taken
Draper by her
ker Mrs Hilliard's
ement will be omorrow In one
by Mrs Hilliard
est that all three together. The
at widely separated this request of elief

ance angle to the n today when the n-year-old Vivian
that the mother
on Saturday and
girl from the
her It is now cerght the child with
with the intention

SMITH
SCIPLINE

ied To Place
chinery In Hands

From Page One)

any group of its said

Danger

lined to vote the will find them-
the party which the enemy and ople, whose nomi-
he was named as er saw fit to issue that whites and rtment should oc-
ks.

an party remains xisting conditions
h of time the ch will agitate the le, at least of the
ning year will be Crow laws shall be or not prohibition
between races

Maor Fourth Of July Celebration To Be Held At Rhododendron

The citizes of West Asheville will honor Mayor Gallatin Roberts and the City and County commissioners today with one of the major Fourth of July celebrations at Rhododendron Park

The event will be an old-fashioned picnic spread at noon on the Ryerson tract of land now Rhododendron Park inside the city limits of West Asheville on the Brevard Road. The celebration will begin at 11 o'clock and will continue until 2 o'clock There will be no speeches, the feature of the event being the picnic spread and a musical program and a track meet

The parade to the park will begin at 10 30 o'clock from the various residential sections of West Asheville and each family has been asked to contribute a basket of food toward the success of the picnic All churches civic organizations and practically every citizen of West Asheville have been busy for several days preparing for the event and several thousand persons are expected to attend

Mrs Wells Chairman

Mrs Horace Wells is general chairman of the celebration This will be the first public celebration on the Ryerson tract of land which is owned by the City and has been declared a park for the purpose of propagating mountain flowers and shrubs. Rhododendron Park is one of the beauty spots of this section of the country and is potentially one of the attractions of the South of this nature since Mayor Roberts has signified his intention of developing the land as a mountain garden and park

The park is just inside the city limits of West Asheville on the Brevard Road The Weather Bureau here last night predicted that the weather will be generally fair today and that all Fourth of July celebrations will be uninterrupted by rain All city officials and their friends and families have been invited to attend the picnic as guests of West Asheville and all persons interested in the development of this land as a park have been asked to participate in the celebration

Clubs Plan Program

The West Asheville Club, the West Asheville Community Club and the Junior Optimist Club of Hall Fletcher High School have arranged the program, which will be given during and following the picnic lunch The committee in charge of arrangements for the picnic is as follows Mrs. Horace Wells, Mrs. H B Posey, Mrs. George Osborne, and John Jones. The Junior Optimists will have a 20-piece band at the picnic A track meet will be staged, which will be open to boys from all parts of the City

Mrs. Wells has been assisted in the preparations for the picnic by the following committee members: Mrs. W. S. McRary, Mrs. George Osborne, Mrs. Lon Barrett, Mrs. Hugh Sowers, Mrs. Frank VanValkenberg, Don C. Young, M. W. Hamrick, W. S. Johnson, Dave Jarrett, Hugh Sowers, J. R. Teague, Horace Wells

Guest Today

Mayor Gallatin Roberts will be honor guest today at Rhododendron Park when the citizens of West Asheville celebrate with an old-fashioned picnic The celebration will be held on the Ryerson tract of land in West Asheville on the Brevard Road, and several thousand persons are expected to participate

NOMINEE VISITED COUNTY IN 1902

Officials To Urge Senator Robinson To Spend Vacation Here

Formal invitations will be sent Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas, Democratic nominee for vice president, this week inviting him and Mrs Robinson to spend their summer vacation in Asheville at Grove Park Inn

A committee composed of Frank Carter, Thomas A. Jones, Sr., Samuel J Fisher Charles N Malone, J. Ed Swain, James G Stikeleather, James E Carraway, and John H. Cathey, has been appointed to communicate with the Arkansas senator.

Invitations will also be sent by Mayor Gallatin Roberts, officials of the Chamber of Commerce, Congressman Zebulon Weaver, and other officials

Senator Robinson spent the summer of 1902 at Weaverville, shortly after he had been nominated to Congress for his first term.

At that time, Charles A. Webb, co-publisher of The Citizen, was a candidate for the State Senate, and Mr. Robinson spoke in his behalf at a political rally held in the old court house

ESCAPE ATTEMPT

Red Jewell, Sent To Prison From Buncombe County, Is Hit

RALEIH, N. C., July 3. (AP)—Details of an attempted semi-wholesale escape from Caledonia Prison Farm last week which ended when guards brought down two fleeing prisoners with buckshot became known today. The men are in the prison hospital at Caledonia.

D. W. Hall, sent up in January, 1928 from Moore County to serve three years for housebreaking and larceny, is at the point of death as the result of gaping wounds in his side which was punctured by a load of buckshot. He will probably die, Dr. J H Norman, warden of the Prison said

Red Jewell, whose home is in Ohio, but who was sent to prison from Buncombe County in January, 1928, to serve 9 to 10 years for larceny of an automobile, was the second man shot. Jewell's wounds, Dr. Norman said, were not as serious as Hall's.

"Hall confessed that four other prisoners were planning to escape after Hall and Jewell had paved the way by throwing the guards into confusion," said Dr. Norman. "These prisoners, however, denied that they had planned any such thing. The attempted escape and shooting of the prisoners were not reported until today because of the absence of George Ross Pou, Prison superintendent from the city," Dr. Norman said.

July 4 1928

Mrs. Joe Savage To Be Buried Thursday

Funeral services for Mrs. Joe Savage, who died suddenly at her home in Skyland Tuesday morning will be held Thursday morning at 11 o'clock from the home of her brother E. W. Israel.

The deceased is survived by three sisters, Mrs. George Chandler, 308 Patton avenue; Mrs. Henry Hudson, 110 1-2 Haywood street; and Mrs. J. P. Penland, Avery's Creek; and two brothers, E. W. Israel of 93 Dorchester avenue, West Asheville and Meyer Israel, of Rosman, N. C.

Rev. M. Teague Hipps To Speak At Canton

(Special To The Citizen)

CANTON, N. C., June 3.—The Rev. M. Teague Hipps, formerly of Canton, will preach here next Sunday. Mr. Hipps, who is now assistant pastor of the Central Methodist Church Asheville, has many friends here. He will conduct the morning service at the Canton Methodist church in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. A. C. Gibbs, who left Wednesday with Mayor and Mrs. D. J. Kerr, of Canton, for a trip to Europe.

To Place
nery In nds

om Page One)

group of its l.
anger
d to vote the ll find them-party which e enemy and e, whose nomi-
was named as aw fit to issue
at whites and ent should oc-

party remains ing conditions of time the will agitate the
at least of the year will be
v laws shall be not prohibition
between races
a word, I want rats of Texas
it is entirely ll be no color s your public and your child the public ly those where are entitled by

'CALL WHAT N STAND

93 Merrimon
tizen yesterday
at the trial of combe Superior
lth Graydon in
, at the time with holding
ue Drug Store,
ty that he was
e's Cafe, oppo-
el at the time
ged to have been and convicted lay 6, 1925. The n Pardon Com-

ges of Raleigh,
Howard Barr,
nce in the Ten-
hat it was he.
o held up and tore. Graydon
now Barr.

From Vet's Meet

of Oteen, re-
n Denver, Col., e national con-
led American War. Mr. Clark of the State d that plans
re constructive coming year.

LAY
louse Minstrel"
rsday night at lored Y. M. C
by the colored

All city officials and their friends and families have been invited to attend the picnic as guests of West Asheville and all persons interested in the development of this land as a park have been asked to participate in the celebration.

Clubs Plan Program

The West Asheville Club, the West Asheville Community Club and the Junior Optimist Club of Hall Fletcher High School have arranged the program, which will be given during and following the picnic lunch. The committee in charge of arrangements for the picnic is as follows: Mrs. Horace Wells, Mrs. H. B. Posey, Mrs. George Osborne, and John Jones. The Junior Optimists will have a 20-piece band at the picnic. A track meet will be staged, which will be open to boys from all parts of the City.

Mrs. Wells has been assisted in the preparations for the picnic by the following committee members: Mrs. W. S. McRary, Mrs. George Osborne, Mrs. Lon Barrett, Mrs. Hugh Sowers, Mrs. Frank VanValkenberg, Don C. Young, M. W. Hamrick, W. S. Johnson, Dave Jarrett, Hugh Sowers, J. R. Teague, Horace Wells, the Rev. P. N. Gresham, the Rev. Mr. Black, the Rev. J. B. Grice, the Rev. Robert Self, Carlisle Miller, C. A. Choate, J. O. Barrett, John Jones, H. B. Posey, and others.

A number of Fourth of July celebrations have been planned in Asheville and vicinity. Practically everyone in Asheville will visit the parks, golf links, lake resorts, picnics or ball game today, indications showed yesterday.

Two Ball Games

There will be two baseball games between Asheville and Knoxville, one at 10:45 o'clock this morning and another at 4 o'clock this afternoon. A fireworks display will be given at Recreation Park this evening and the Biltmore Forest Country Club will hold its fifth anniversary celebration tonight. A number of golfing, camping, picnicking and motoring parties have been planned for today, but practically all Asheville residents will celebrate in one way or another in the City or vicinity.

A record breaking crowd is expected at Recreation Park this afternoon and night and McCormick Field officials and concessions have prepared to care for two large baseball crowds. Bathing suits, golf sticks, baseball bats, automobiles and stomachs will bear the brunt of the day's celebration.

A rainbow lasting all day long was seen in Siberia, it being caused by reflection of the sun on fine particles of snow in the air.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

Passenger Train Schedules

Effffective Jan. 6th, 1928
Eastern Time

ARRIVE FROM

35	Salisbury and Charlotte	3 40 A M.
3	Macon, Atlanta and points South	6 30 A.M.
15	New York, Washington-

Vacation Here

Formal invitations will be sent Senator Joe Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic nominee for vice president, this week inviting him and Mrs. Robinson to spend their summer vacation in Asheville at Grove Park Inn.

A committee, composed of Frank Carter, Thomas A. Jones, Sr., Samuel J. Fisher, Charles N. Malone, J. Ed Swain, James G. Stikeleather, James E. Carraway, and John H. Cathey, has been appointed to communicate with the Arkansas senator.

Invitations will also be sent by Mayor Gallatin Roberts, officials of the Chamber of Commerce, Congressman Zebulon Weaver, and other officials.

Senator Robinson spent the summer of 1902 at Weaverville, shortly after he had been nominated to Congress for his first term.

At that time, Charles A. Webb, co-publisher of The Citizen, was a candidate for the State Senate, and Mr. Robinson spoke in his behalf at a political rally held in the old court house.

Senator Robinson holds the unique record of being a Congressman, Governor and United States Senator within a space of 14 days. He was a member of the lower house when elected Governor. When the Arkansas representative in the Senate died suddenly, Mr. Robinson resigned as Governor to accept the vacancy when chosen by the State Legislature.

sisters, Mrs. George Chandler, 308 Patton avenue; Mrs. Henry Hudson, 110 1-2 Haywood street; and Mrs. J. P. Penland, Avery's Creek; and two brothers, E. W. Israel of 93 Dorchester avenue, West Asheville and Meyer Israel, of Rosman, N. C.

Rev. M. Teague Hipps To Speak At Canton

(Special To The Citizen)

CANTON, N. C., June 3.—The Rev. M. Teague Hipps, formerly of Canton, will preach here next Sunday. Mr. Hipps, who is now assistant pastor of the Central Methodist Church Asheville, has many friends here. He will conduct the morning service at the Canton Methodist church in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. A. C. Gibbs, who left Wednesday with Mayor and Mrs. D. J. Kerr, of Canton, for a trip to Europe.

for Headache
CRYSTAL
Headache Powder

BON MARCHE
ASHEVILLE'S QUALITY DEPARTMENT STORE

Fortunate we who have seen events that match in magnitude the signing of the Declaration of Independence. We can understand and honor those long departed heroes as they deserve. It is with the deepest reverence that we acclaim them today!

ILLE CITIZEN

NG OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

RSDAY MORNING, JULY 5, 1928 — 16 PAGES — 5c Daily 10c Sunday

Paid Circulation, June, 1928
Daily Average 19,504
Sunday Average 20,109

Mayor Roberts Gets The Cake

An old-fashioned pound cake, tipping the scales at 50 pounds, was presented to Mayor Gallatin Roberts yesterday by the Woody Brothers Bakery of West Asheville for the people of the city. The cake was presented at the picnic which was held in honor of the Mayor on the Ryerson tract of land, now known as Rhododendron Park. In the picture grouped around the cake from left to right, are: Way Woody, Mrs. H. A. Wells, Mayor Roberts, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Oma Brown and Cole Woody.

SMITH SPEAKS TO HUGE CROWD ON CITIZENSHIP

Duty Of Casting Ballot Stressed By Nominee In New York

DEFENDS TAMMANY HALL IN ADDRESS

Ignores Politics While Discussing Deeds Of Native Land

NEW YORK, July 4. (AP)—With on the briefest reference to his presidential candidacy, Governor Alfre E. Smith today delivered two patr otic addresses in his home town, t first public speeches he has mad since his nomination.

In the first speech, at Tammar Hall, he replied to "a great deal caustic criticism" of Tammany. the second, at New York's City Ha tonight, he addressed several thou sand new voters.

Kleig lights played about the nom nee as he described the duties an privileges of citizenship to tho who will cast their first votes at th November election.

Indifferent Voters

"It is a surprising thing to know he said, "how many people in th State and in this country are indifferent to their citizenship an to the welfare of their commonwealth, or union of commonwealth that they will not take the troub to vote.

"The man who goes to a picnic o election day and uses that day as week-end for entertainment canno be said to have very much interes in his citizenship, because, after al all officers, large and small, com up from the people."

Citizenship in this country, h said, proves again the old saying tha "you never get anything for noth ing," for with the privileges of citi zenship go certain duties and obli gations, the greatest of which h described as the duty of casting th ballot.

Other of its obligations, he said are to study the doctrines of th great national parties, their plat

RALEIGH EDITOR WAS NOT INVITED SAYS DR. CANNON

No Prominent Politician Has Bid To Asheville Meet

Local Observance Of 4th Is Record Breaking Affair

Mayor Is Guest At Picnic; Ball Games, Links Well Patronized

The "Glorious Fourth" in Asheville was a record-breaking success. Mayor Gallatin Roberts' picnic at Rhododendron Park, given by the citizens of West Asheville in his honor, attracted more than 500 par-

REPUBLICAN CLUB WORKS FOR SMITH FOR WHITE HOUSE

ALBANY, N. Y., July 4. (AP)—A "Smith Republican" club has opened headquarters in this city

ILLE CITIZEN

NG OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

RSDAY MORNING, JULY 5, 1928 — 16 PAGES — 5c Daily 10c Sunday

Paid Circulation, June, 1928
Daily Average 19,504
Sunday Average 20,109

Mayor Roberts Gets The Cake

An old-fashioned pound cake, tipping the scales at 50 pounds, was presented to Mayor Gallatin Roberts yesterday by the Woody Brothers Bakery of West Asheville for the people of the city. The cake was presented at the picnic which was held in honor of the Mayor on the Ryerson tract of land, now known as Rhododendron Park. In the picture grouped around the cake, from left to right, are: Way Woody, Mrs. H. A. Wells, Mayor Roberts, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Oma Brown and Cole Woody.

SMITH SPEAKS TO HUGE CROWD ON CITIZENSHIP

Duty Of Casting Ballot Stressed By Nominee In New York

DEFENDS TAMMANY HALL IN ADDRESS

Ignores Politics While Discussing Deeds Of Native Land

NEW YORK, July 4. (AP)—With on the briefest reference to his presidential candidacy, Governor Alfre E. Smith today delivered two patr otic addresses in his home town, t first public speeches he has mad since his nomination.

In the first speech, at Tammar Hall, he replied to "a great deal caustic criticism" of Tammany. the second, at New York's City Ha tonight, he addressed several thou sand new voters.

Kleig lights played about the nom nee as he described the duties an privileges of citizenship to tho who will cast their first votes at th November election.

Indifferent Voters

"It is a surprising thing to know he said, "how many people in th State and in this country are indifferent to their citizenship an to the welfare of their commonwealth, or union of commonwealth that they will not take the troubl to vote.

"The man who goes to a picnic o election day and uses that day as week-end for entertainment canno be said to have very much interes in his citizenship, because, after al all officers, large and small, com up from the people."

Citizenship in this country, h said, proves again the old saying tha "you never get anything for noth ing," for with the privileges of citi zenship go certain duties and obli gations, the greatest of which h described as the duty of casting th ballot.

Other of its obligations, he said are to study the doctrines of th great national parties, their plat

RALEIGH EDITOR WAS NOT INVITED SAYS DR. CANNON

No Prominent Politician Has Bid To Asheville Meet

Local Observance Of 4th Is Record Breaking Affair

Mayor Is Guest At Picnic; Ball Games, Links Well Patronized

The "Glorious Fourth" in Asheville was a record-breaking success. Mayor Gallatin Roberts' picnic at Rhododendron Park, given by the citizens of West Asheville in his honor, attracted more than 500 par-

REPUBLICAN CLUB WORKS FOR SMITH FOR WHITE HOUSE

ALBANY, N. Y., July 4. (AP)—A "Smith Republican" club has opened headquarters in this city

LLE CITIZEN OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"
AY MORNING, JULY 5, 1928 16 PAGES 5c Daily 10c Sunday

Paid Circulation, June, 192
Daily Average 19,50
Sunday Average 20,10

Mayor Roberts Gets The Cake

An old-fashioned pound cake, tipping the scales at 50 pounds, was presented to Mayor Gallatin Roberts yesrday by the Woody Brothers Bakery of West Asheville for the people of the city. The cake was presented at e picnic which was held in honor of the Mayor on the Ryerson tract of land, now known as Rhododendron ark. In the picture grouped around the cake, from left to right, are: Way Woody, Mrs. H. A. Wells, Mayor Robts, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Oma Brown and Cole Woody.

SMITH SPE TO HUGE CRO ON CITIZENS

Duty Of Casting F Stressed By Nomi In New York

DEFENDS TAMMA HALL IN ADDR

Ignores Politics W Discussing Deeds Native Land

NEW YORK, July 4. (AP)—Wi the briefest reference to his dential candidacy, Governor E. Smith today delivered two otic addresses in his home to first public speeches he ha since his nomination.

In the first speech, at Ta Hall, he replied to "a great caustic criticism" of Tamma the second, at New York's Ci tonight, he addressed several sand new voters.

Kleig lights played about th nee as he described the dut privileges of citizenship to who will cast their first votes November election.

Indifferent Voters

"It is a surprising thing to he said, "how many people State and in this country indifferent to their citizensh to the welfare of their co wealth, or union of commonw that they will not take the to vote.

"The man who goes to a pi election day and uses that da week-end for entertainment be said to have very much in his citizenship, because, a all officers, large and small, up from the people."

Citizenship in this countr said, proves again the old sayi "you never get anything for ing," for with the privileges zenship go certain duties and gations, the greatest of whi described as the duty of casti

RALEIGH EDITOR WAS NOT INVITED SAYS DR. CANNON

No Prominent Politician

Local Observance Of 4th Is Record Breaking Affair

REPUBLICAN CLUB WORKS FOR SMITH FOR WHITE HOUSE

Mayor Is Guest At Picnic; Ball Games, Links Well Patronized

The "Glorious Fourth" in Asheville was a record-breaking success.

LE CITIZEN
WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"
MORNING, JULY 5, 1928 16 PAGES 5c Daily 10c Sunday

Paid Circulation, Jun
Daily Average - - - - 19,
Sunday Average - - - - 20,

Mayor Roberts Gets The Cake

n old-fashioned pound cake, tipping the scales at 50 pounds, was presented to Mayor Gallatin Roberts yes- by the Woody Brothers Bakery of West Asheville for the people of the city. The cake was presented at icnic which was held in honor of the Mayor on the Ryerson tract of land, now known as Rhododendron In the picture grouped around the cake, from left to right, are: Way Woody, Mrs. H. A. Wells, Mayor Rob- Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Oma Brown and Cole Woody.

LEIGH EDITOR S NOT INVITED S DR. CANNON

Local Observance Of 4th Is Record Breaking Affair

REPUBLICAN CLUB WORKS FOR SMITH

Mayor Is Guest At Picnic; Ball Games, Links Well Patronized

SMITH S TO HUGE ON CITIZE

Duty Of Casti Stressed By N In New Y

DEFENDS TA HALL IN A

Ignores Politi Discussing D Native L

NEW YORK, July 4. (the briefest reference dential candidacy, Go E. Smith today delive otic addresses in his h first public speeches since his nomination.

In the first speech, Hall, he replied to "a caustic criticism" of the second, at New Yo tonight, he addressed sand new voters.

Kleig lights played a nee as he described t privileges of citizensh who will cast their fir November election.

Indifferent

"It is a surprising th he said, "how many State and in this co indifferent to their c to the welfare of t wealth, or union of co that they will not ta to vote.

"The man who goes election day and uses week-end for entertai be said to have very in his citizenship, bec all officers, large and up from the people."

Citizenship in this said, proves again the c "you never get anyth

An old-fashioned pound cake, tipping the scales at 50 pounds, was presented to Mayor Gallatin Roberts yesterday by the Woody Brothers Bakery of West Asheville for the people of the city. The cake was presented at the picnic which was held in honor of the Mayor on the Ryerson tract of land, now known as Rhododendron Park. In the picture grouped around the cake, from left to right, are: Way Woody, Mrs. H. A. Wells, Mayor Roberts, Mrs. Roberts, Mrs. Oma Brown and Cole Woody.

RALEIGH EDITOR WAS NOT INVITED SAYS DR. CANNON

No Prominent Politician Has Bid To Asheville Meet

Denying that he had at any time attempted to persuade former Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels to attend the proposed Dry conference in Asheville Bishop James Cannon Jr. yesterday gave The Citizen a statement explaining exactly what he says happened in this matter

Bishop Cannon was passing through Asheville with Mrs Cannon by automobile on his way to Lake Junaluska where he was to attend a board meeting

Bishop James Cannon said Bishop Cannon's statement [illegible] Raleigh [illegible] Times [illegible] the office of [illegible] News [illegible] Associated Press [illegible] Josephus [illegible] met [illegible] please [illegible] Associated Press [illegible]

Asked For A Copy

[illegible]

[illegible] Mr [illegible] conference [illegible] Mr Daniels [illegible] office [illegible] Mr Daniels [illegible] illness [illegible] Bishop [illegible] Mr Daniels [illegible] conferences

[illegible]

Local Observance Of 4th Is Record Breaking Affair

REPUBLICAN CLUB WORKS FOR SMITH FOR WHITE HOUSE

ALBANY, N Y, July 4 (AP)—A "Smith Republican" club has opened headquarters in this city in the office of William A Humphrey a Republican and a close friend of Governor Smith

Mr Humphrey announced the purpose of the organization as the winning of independent or Republican votes for the governor

"I cannot tell whether we shall try nation wide campaigning," he said "but no campaigning will be made in conjunction with Democratic committees We are not interested in the party we are interested in the man"

KELLOGG TREATY TO ABOLISH WAR PRAISED IN TALK

New Idea Expressed In Pact, Says L. Gordon Opening Junaluska

[illegible]

Mayor Is Guest At Picnic; Ball Games, Links Well Patronized

The "Glorious Fourth" in Asheville was a record-breaking success. Mayor Gallatin Roberts' picnic at Rhododendron Park, given by the citizens of West Asheville in his honor, attracted more than 500 participants, the two baseball games were played before approximately 8,000 persons; and E. C. Greene, park commissioner, said last night that there has never been such a crowd at Recreation Park.

The picnic at Rhododendron Park in West Asheville began at 11 o'clock and continued until 2 o'clock. The picnic luncheon was held at 1 o'clock with Mayor Roberts and the city and county commissioners as guests of honor At the luncheon, Oscar Barrett introduced Hugh Sowers, president of the Men's Club of West Asheville, who in turn presented Mayor Roberts with a 50-pound cake, made by the Woody Brothers bakery and presented with the compliments of the company for the people of the city

Praises Civic Spirit

In accepting the cake, Mayor Roberts complimented the citizens of West Asheville on their community spirit and said that, not because he is a resident of that community, but that he believed that West Asheville has the best spirit of co-operation of any section of the city or county Mayor Roberts has been interested for some time in the development of the tract of land known as the Rhododendron Park yesterday officially promised that the land will be cleared within the next few weeks and as rapidly as possible in the future developed as a mountain garden and park

Mayor Roberts said that the main dwelling on the property will be repaired and a caretaker will be employed to remain on the land and supervise the work of clearing away the tract West Asheville represents a community of 18,000 citizens, Mayor Roberts estimated, and he said that he felt that this park will be the personal pride of that section of the city and that within a few years it will be one of the show places of North Carolina

The Cake Is Large

The large pound cake presented Mayor Roberts was baked by the Woody Brothers bakery of West Asheville [illegible] weighed 50 pounds and [illegible] was [illegible] Mrs H A Wells [illegible] museum of the [illegible] and she was assisted by [illegible] from the [illegible] committee in charge was Way Woody [illegible] George Greene [illegible]

[illegible]

November election.

Indifferent Voters

"It is a surprising thing to know," he said, "how many people in this State and in this country are so indifferent to their citizenship and to the welfare of their commonwealth, or union of commonwealths, that they will not take the trouble to vote.

"The man who goes to a picnic on election day and uses that day as a week-end for entertainment cannot be said to have very much interest in his citizenship, because, after all, all officers, large and small, come up from the people."

Citizenship in this country, he said, proves again the old saying that "you never get anything for nothing," for with the privileges of citizenship go certain duties and obligations, the greatest of which he described as the duty of casting the ballot.

Other of its obligations, he said, are to study the doctrines of the great national parties, their platforms and their promises.

Hardman Absent

L. G. Hardman, Governor of Georgia, who had been invited to speak at the Tammany Hall meeting, declined in a letter read at the meeting because of the pressure of State business.

The Democratic candidate for the presidency was the principal speaker at the annual Tammany celebration as he was later, in the evening, at a gathering of new voters at the City Hall.

"Can anything live in this country 139 years that is not all right?" he asked in detailing the virtues of Tammany. He then read a public announcement of today's meeting in which "all citizens and lovers of Americanism" were invited to unite in the celebration. This invitation, he said, was in strictest conformity with what the Declaration of Independence has to say about the equality of man.

Wealth Unimportant

"We do not care," he said, "whether he is rich or whether he is poor, whether he walks up to Tammany Hall or whether he comes up to it in an automobile. We care not what his station in life may be, we care nothing about his religious belief."

At this point the audience which jammed the old hall that was once used for a national convention broke into prolonged applause and the Governor mopped his flushed face.

"We only want to know one thing," he continued, "and that is that he is a lover of America and in sympathy with the aims and

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

TODAY'S FORECAST,

South Carolina and Georgia:—Generally fair except scattered thundershowers in North portion Thursday Friday local thundershowers gentle to moderate South and Southwest winds.

Florida —Mostly fair Thursday and Friday except local thundershowers Friday afternoon, gentle East and Southeast winds Extreme Northwest Florida, Alabama and Mississippi—Generally fair Thursday and Friday, except scattered thundershowers Friday afternoon, gentle South and Southwest winds.

Kentucky—Local thundershowers Thursday Friday mostly fair, not much change in temperature.

Tennessee—Fair Thursday except local thundershowers in East and North portion Thursday afternoon; Friday local thundershowers.

July 5 1928

New Boulevard Law Has Brought Arrest For 73

[illegible]

TS DR. CANNON

Prominent Politician Has Bid To Asheville Meet

aying that he had at any time npted to persuade former Secre- of the Navy Josephus Daniels to d the proposed Dry conference sheville, Bishop James Cannon, yesterday gave The Citizen a ment explaining exactly what ys happened in this matter.

hop Cannon was passing through ville with Mrs. Cannon, by auto- le, on his way to Lake Juna- , where he was to attend a l meeting.

shop James Cannon," said p Cannon's statement, "reached gh at 5:30 o'clock Tuesday after- and went to the office of The and Observer to give a state- to the Associated Press man has his headquarters there. Hon hus Daniels was in the office p Cannon showed him the state- and asked him to please get Associated Press man.

Asked For A Copy

r. Daniels called the Associated man and asked that he might a separate copy for The News Observer, or rather he turned to Associated Press man and asked to give him a copy for The and Observer. Mr. Daniels has been asked at any time to at- the Asheville conference but he and Senator Glass were told ouston that they would not be to attend the conference, that s not the intention of the pro- s of the conference to request persons prominent in political o attend it.

r. Daniels and myself then con- l about my wife's illness—I was ing her to Lake Junaluska—- also about the meaning and the cations of Governor Smith's tele-

Bishop Cannon never at any has asked Mr. Daniels—not to rged him—to take any part in Asheville conference."

Associated Press, Tuesday in a dispatch from Raleigh. "Bishop Cannon was here today

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

RL IS DROWNED, NOTHER KILLED FOURTH MISHAPS

UISVILLE, Ky., July 4 (AP)— girl was drowned, another was in an auto accident and 14 persons were hurt in automo- accidents over the July 4 holi- here.

ilie Williams, 16, was drowned small lake when she waded be- her depth.

rine Patterson, 8, negro was Tuesday night when the auto ich she and three grown per- were riding overturned.

Appear ed By Klan

WORKS FOR SMITH FOR WHITE HOUSE

ALBANY, N. Y., July 4. (AP)—A "Smith Republican" club has opened headquarters in this city in the office of William A. Humphrey, a Republican and a close friend of Governor Smith.

Mr. Humphrey announced the purpose of the organization as the winning of independent or Republican votes for the governor.

"I cannot tell whether we shall try nation wide campaigning," he said, "but no campaigning will be made in conjunction with Democratic committees. We are not interested in the party: we are interested in the man."

KELLOGG TREATY TO ABOLISH WAR PRAISED IN TALK

New Idea Expressed In Pact, Says L. Gordon Opening Junaluska

(Special To The Citizen)

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N. C., July 4. The summer assembly of the Southern Methodist church was formally opened today with the first conference of the season and an address tonight by Dr. Linley V Gordon, of New York city, extension secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches.

Earlier in the day there was a general patriotic observance of Independence Day with an address by Rev Dr Ashley Chappell, of the Central Methodist church of Asheville being the chief feature during the afternoon. The general program of the day closed tonight with the first conference address by Dr. Gordon, and a general fireworks display for the amusement of the large crowd of visitors attending.

Bishop James Cannon of Richmond and Washington introduced Dr Gordon who addressed the conference of the Board of Temperance and Society Service of the Methodist church, the particular theme of which tonight was international relations. Dr Gordon spoke on the subject World Peace.

Bishop Cannon in his introductory remarks spoke about the changing attitude of nations towards war being brought about by religious organizations and told of some of the things he observed in this particular during his many visits to Europe in recent years.

Dr. Gordon in his talk gave high

—(Please Turn To Page Three)

nic; Ball Games, Links Well Patronized

The "Glorious Fourth" in Asheville was a record-breaking success. Mayor Gallatin Roberts' picnic at Rhododendron Park, given by the citizens of West Asheville in his honor, attracted more than 500 participants; the two baseball games were played before approximately 8,000 persons; and E. C. Greene, park commissioner, said last night that there has never been such a crowd at Recreation Park.

The picnic at Rhododendron Park in West Asheville began at 11 o'clock and continued until 2 o'clock. The picnic luncheon was held at 1 o'clock with Mayor Roberts and the city and county commissioners as guests of honor. At the luncheon, Oscar Barrett introduced Hugh Sowers, president of the Men's Club of West Asheville, who in turn presented Mayor Roberts with a 50-pound cake, made by the Woody Brothers bakery and presented with the compliments of the company for the people of the city.

Praises Civic Spirit

In accepting the cake, Mayor Roberts complimented the citizens of West Asheville on their community spirit and said that, not because he is a resident of that community, but that he believed that West Asheville has the best spirit of co-operation of any section of the city or county. Mayor Roberts has been interested for some time in the development of the tract of land known as the Rhododendron Park yesterday officially promised that the land will be cleared within the next few weeks, and as rapidly as possible in the future developed as a mountain garden and park.

Mayor Roberts said that the main dwelling on the property will be repaired and a caretaker will be employed to remain on the land and supervise the work of clearing away the tract. West Asheville represents community of 18,000 citizens, Mayor Roberts estimated, and he said that he felt that this park will be the personal pride of that section of the city and that within a few years it will be one of the show places of Western North Carolina.

Mrs. Wells In Charge

The large pound cake presented Mayor Roberts was baked by the Woody Brothers bakery of West Asheville. The huge cake weighed 50 pounds and on the top layer was an outline of the park. Mrs. H. A. Wells was general chairman of the picnic arrangements and she was assisted by representatives from the churches and club organiaztions of West Asheville. The committee in charge was as follows: Mrs. Wells, Mrs. H. B. Posey, Mrs. George Osborne and John Jones.

There were approximately 8,000 happy baseball fans at the two games in McCormick Field yesterday morn-

—(Please Turn To Page Three)

Citizenship in this coun said, proves again the old say "you never get anything fo ing," for with the privileges nenship go certain duties an gations, the greatest of wh described as the duty of cast ballot.

Other of its obligations, are to study the doctrines great national parties, the forms and their promises.

Bardman Absent

L. G. Hardman, Gover Georgia, who had been inv speak at the Tammany Hall declined in a letter read at the ling because of the pressure business.

The Democratic candidate presidency was the principal at the annual Tammany cele as he was later, in the even a gathering of new voters at Hall.

"Can anything live in this try 139 years that is not all he asked in detailing the vir Tammany. He then read a pul nouncement of today's meet which "all citizens and lo Americanism" were invited to in the celebration. This inv he said, was in strictest con with what the Declaration of pendence has to say about the ity of man.

Wealth Unimportant

"We do not care," he said, "w he is rich or whether he i whether he walks up to Ta Hall or whether he comes up in an automobile. We care no his station in life may be, w nothing about his religious

At this point the audience jammed the old hall that wa used for a national convention into prolonged applause and Governor mopped his flushed

"We only want to know thing," he continued, "and is that he is a lover of Americ in sympathy with the aim

—(Please Turn To Page

TODAY'S FORECA

South Carolina and Geor Generally fair except sca thundershowers in North p Thursday; Friday local thu showers; gentle to moderate and Southwest winds.

Florida:—Mostly fair Thursd Friday except local thunderst Friday afternoon; gentle East Southeast winds.

Extreme Northwest Florida, bama and Mississippi:—Ger fair Thursday and Friday, scattered thundershowers Fr aftrenoon; gentle South and S west winds.

Kentucky:—Local thundersh Thursday; Friday mostly fair; much change in temperature.

Tennessee:—Fair Thursday local thundershowers in East North portion Thursday after Friday local thundershowers.

New Boulevard Law Has Brought Arrest For 7

Twenty-six persons were registered at police headquarters last night, charged with violating the city's new boulevard law, which requires all

271 Haywood street; C. K. D Arlington street; B. Pearlman, F avenue; D. D. Cuthreal, Inland H. H. Mitchell, George Mears,

More than 200 men, women and children attended the auction sale in Roberts yesterday at noon at Rhododendron. Each [illegible] of any kind to be held in the new park area which was formerly [illegible]

[illegible] auction, prior to the opening of Pisgah [illegible] The prices were low [illegible] at the Kennon [illegible]

[illegible] type of crowds attracted [illegible] large number of light [illegible] at the exhibitions at the Kennon [illegible] Hippodrome last night. There [illegible] 20 rounds of boxing and the day ended pleasant. The [illegible] days of Roberts [illegible] the [illegible] the police lights and [illegible] Park [illegible] were the [illegible] attractions in Asheville yesterday. All banks and business houses closed and thousands of [illegible] at the various [illegible] were free the day.

[illegible] of the golf contests were held as a whole the day was a complete success, rain ending the last [illegible] that after all festivities were for the afternoon. There were [illegible] many private parties, picnics, scenic points and resorts [illegible] Asheville yesterday and [illegible] the dances at the hotels in [illegible] and all of the resorts in [illegible] were well attended.

[illegible] Sheriff's and Police departments reported that the damage and [illegible] caused by accidents were [illegible] relatively few. Practically all [illegible] were out in the country [illegible] day and downtown from noon [illegible] late afternoon, there were but [illegible] persons on the street.

[illegible]es And Votes Are

KELLOGG TREATY PRAISED IN TALK

New Idea Expressed In Pact, Says L. Gordon Opening Junaluska

Continued From Page [illegible]

[illegible] proposed by Secretary of State Kellogg to the Council for the [illegible] of abolishing war. The bulletin [illegible] stated that the treaty [illegible] entirely new [illegible] new foundation for the [illegible] of international peace. The [illegible] the world, he said, have been talking about outlawing war for the Kellogg treaty. Books of [illegible] was organized [illegible] education, organized labor, [illegible] organized press, and all [illegible] interested in building a better world should keep at the opportunity provided in the Kellogg anti-war treaty to abolish war by [illegible]

BO[illegible]
ASHEV[illegible]

Luggage for Need Is Most Mode

ore than 500 men, women and children attended the old-fashioned [illegible] in Roberts yesterday at noon at Rhododendron Park. Wood [illegible] f any kind to be held in the new park area, which was formerly [illegible] The picnic was held from [illegible] on the Kennon tract of land.

e type of crowds attracted

e number of fight fans at- the exhibition at the Kenil- Hippodrome last night. There 0 rounds of boxing and the spirit prevailed. The prime yor Roberts, the two main the price fights and Recre- Park features were the pic- tractions in Asheville yester- all banks and business houses closed and thousands of em- t the various houses were free day.

f the golf courses were filled a whole the day was a com- uccess, rain cooling the heat at after all festivities were r the afternoon. There were many private picnic parties ous scenic points and resorts sheville yesterday and last the dances at the hotels in le and at all of the resorts in tion were well attended.

Sheriff's and Police depart- reported that the damage and caused by accidents were atively few. Practically all biles were out in the country y and downtown, from noon te afternoon, there were but rsons on the street.

KELLOGG TREATY PRAISED IN TALK

New Idea Expressed In Pact, Says L. Gordon Opening Junaluska

—Continued From Page One

pause to the world-federal [illegible] proposed by Secretary of State Kellogg to the nations for the purpose of abolishing war. The speaker declared that the twenty nations in entirely new code and outlook a new constitution for the government of universal peace. The statesmen of the world, he said, have been talking about outlawing war but the Kellogg treaty talks of abolishing all war. Organized religion, organized education, organized labor, the organized press, and all institutions interested in building a better world should leap at the opportunity provided in the Kellogg world-federal

BO
ASHE

Luggage fo
Need L
Most Mod

ains!
u?

'GLORIOUS 4TH' IS OBSERVED HERE

Mayor Is Guest At Picnic; Ball Games, Links Well Patronized

—(Continued From Page One)

ing and afternoon, with the exception of the Knoxville visitors. The Asheville Tourists won from the Knoxville Smokies 2 to 0 in the forenoon game and 10 to 2 in the afternoon, retaining a three-game lead in the league. The afternoon game attracted about 1,500 more fans than the morning game, due to luncheon and picnic engagements and others engaged in a bit of work during the morning hours.

Pool Is Popular

The crowds began to arrive early at Recreation Park and all yesterday afternoon and last night there was a long line of bathers waiting their turn in the pool. E. C. Greene, park commissioner, said last night that there has never been such a crowd at Recreation Park as there was yesterday afternoon and night. Early last evening the Black Mountain Highway was crowded with automobiles en route to the park and at the park all of the amusement features were packed.

At 9.30 o'clock last night one of the best fireworks displays ever presented in Western North Carolina was given at the park. The display was sent up from the roadway across Lake Craig and was watched by several thousand persons. In addition to the fireworks display, there was dancing, swimming, skating, boating and moving pictures at the park. All of the concessions were doing a large business and the various features of the park were filled to overflowing. Mr. Greene said that he is gratified at the popularity of the park and the fine type of crowds attracted there.

A large number of fight fans attended the exhibition at the Kenilworth Hippodrome last night. There were 26 rounds of boxing and the holiday spirit prevailed. The picnic for Mayor Roberts, the two ball games, the prize fights and Recreation Park features were the principal attractions in Asheville yesterday. All banks and business houses were closed and thousands of employes at the various houses were free for the day.

All of the golf courses were filled and as a whole the day was a complete success, rain cooling the heat somewhat after all festivities were over for the afternoon. There were a great many private picnic parties at various scenic points and resorts near Asheville yesterday and last night the dances at the hotels in Asheville and at all of the resorts in this section were well attended.

The Sheriff's and Police departments reported that the damage and injuries caused by accidents were comparatively few. Practically all automobiles were out in the country yesterday and downtown, from noon until late afternoon, there were but few persons on the street.

New Beauty, For Your Skin!

Part Of The Crowd A

More than 500 men, women and children attended the old-fashione Gallatin Roberts yesterday at noon at Rhododendron Park, West Ash tion of any kind to be held in the new park area, which was formerly k

Roses And Votes Are Mrs. McNary's Hobbies

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Roses and

KELLOGG TREATY PRAISED IN TAL

New Idea Expressed Pact, Says L. Gordo Opening Junaluska

—(Continued From Page O

praise to the multi-lateral tr proposed by Secretary of State logg to the nations for the pur of abolishing war. The speaker clared that the treaty sounds entirely new note and carries new vocabulary for the achieven of universal peace. The statesmen the world, he said have been t ing about minimizing war but Kellogg treaty talks of abolishing war. Organized religion, organi education, organized labor, the ganized press, and all institut interested in building a better w should leap at the opportunity vided in the Kellogg multi-lat treaty to abolish war, he empha ed.

Dr. Gordon outlined the var movements in the United St against war and declared that

More than 500 men, women and children attended the old-fashioned picnic luncheon, given by the citizens of West Asheville in honor of Mayor Martin Roberts yesterday at noon at Rhododendron Park, West Asheville. The picnic was held from 11 until 2 o'clock and was the first celebration of any kind to be held in the new park area, which was formerly known as the Ryerson tract of land.

fine type of crowds attracted large number of fight fans atd the exhibition at the Kenil-Hippodrome last night. There 26 rounds of boxing and the ay spirit prevailed. The picnic

Mayor Roberts, the two ball s, the prize fights and Recre-Park features were the prin-attractions in Asheville yester-
All banks and business houses closed and thousands of ems at the various houses were free he day.

of the golf courses were filled as a whole the day was a com-success, rain cooling the heat what after all festivities were for the afternoon. There were at many private picnic parties
rious scenic points and resorts
Asheville yesterday and last the dances at the hotels in ille and at all of the resorts in section were well attended.

e Sheriff's and Police departs reported that the damage and les caused by accidents were aratively few. Practically all nobiles were out in the country day and downtown, from noon late afternoon, there were but persons on the street.

es And Votes Are
rs. McNary's Hobbies

SHINGTON, (AP)—Roses and are the two principal hobbies

KELLOGG TREATY PRAISED IN TALK

New Idea Expressed In Pact, Says L. Gordon Opening Junaluska

—(Continued From Page [illegible])

praise to the multi-lateral [illegible] proposed by Secretary of State Kellogg to the nations for the purpose of abolishing war. The speaker declared that the treaty sounds an entirely new note and carries a new vocabulary for the achievement of universal peace. The statesmen of the world, he said have been talking about minimizing war but the Kellogg treaty talks of abolishing all war. Organized religion, organized education, organized labor, the organized press, and all institutions interested in building a better world should leap at the opportunity provided in the Kellogg multi-lateral treaty to abolish war, he emphasized.

Dr. Gordon outlined the various movements in the United States against war and declared that a new international conception of a [illegible] ceramic industries. Days lost by strikes totaled 2,442,694 compared with 891,606 in 1926. Almost as many days were lost by lockouts. Men and women working in [illegible] Japan have increased in number in the past years from 28 [illegible] to 1,611,000.

BON ASHEVI

Luggage for Need Is Most Mode

GOLDEN KEY TO THE CITY

Mayor John H. Cathey will present this key to Gallatin Roberts mayor-elect, as the latter takes office Tuesday morning. After the new mayor receives the key to the city and the oath of office from the retiring mayor he will in turn administer the oath to L. B. Rogers and C. H. Bartlett, as commissioner of public works and commissioner of public safety, respectively.

OIL CONFERENCE PROVES FUTILE

Movement To Restrict Production May Not Go Through

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP)—The movement to voluntarily restrict the production of crude oil is finding increasing obstacles.

A meeting of oil men and government officials today, called in the hope of formulating a definite restriction plan, produced no apparent result except to disclose that the oil producers are themselves divided on the subject while the government is reserving judgment. Another meeting is to convene in New York Wednesday.

Already three large producers, including the Gulf Oil Company, a Mellon corporation, have washed their hands of the project for a ment, but no opinion has been announced.

Of the five oil men who had been delegated to meet with Secretary Work today, one was G. S. Davison, of the Gulf Company which is one of the heaviest producers in the rich Seminole field of Oklahoma. At a recent meeting in New York Mr. Davison was said to have accepted membership on the committee, but he sent word today he could not serve. His reasons were not publicly announced but it was indicated that he had given notice that his company did not care to proceed with a restriction program. Another prominent southwest producer, Barnsdale and Company also participated in the first New York conference and afterward indicated its unwillingness to have a part in the program, while a third outstanding figure in the oil world, Henry L. Doherty, has kept outside the venture from the start.

Members on the oil committee present besides Mr. Teagle were Amos N. Beaty, of the Texas Company; R. W. Stewart, of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, and Henry Dawes, of the Pure Oil Company.

ALUMNI TO HOLD MONTREAT FETE

Grads Will Help School Celebrate The 10th Commencement

A special celebration by alumni and former students of the Montreat normal school will be held in connection with the annual commencement exercises which begin this Friday evening with the class play.

The school has completed the tenth year of its existence and the alumni, feeling that the fact is worthy of celebration, have asked all of those who have been connected with the school at any time to join them in the celebration.

Next Monday evening the formal celebration will be staged with a banquet and an alumni meet-

Local News

THE SUNDAY CITIZEN

Automobiles

ESTABLISHED 1868 — ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY MORNING, JULY 1, 1928 — Section B

WEST ASHEVILLE TO HONOR MAYOR

PUBLIC PAINTS LAWYERS BLACK; IS IT RIGHT?

Silas H. Strawn, President American Bar Discusses Point

SAYS ATTORNEYS NATURAL LEADERS

Some Good, Some Bad, Some Crooked, Some Straight

By RODNEY CROWTHER

Is the legal profession as bad as it is painted by the wags and wits of the land?

Is it as bad as some well-meaning social diagnosticians find it when they lay the increase of crime at its door?

Does the lawyer obstruct, rather than aid, the attainment of justice, as some orators, essayists, preachers, teachers, and parlor Bolshevists claim?

Do men enter the legal profession solely to prey and to make money, and do they, once in the profession use their brains solely to help delightful rogues to make money?

Does the lawyer of the country promote disrespect for law by creating one law for the rich man and another law for the poor man?

Technicalities

Does he really pander to the criminal element in the community and enable high-handed crooks and criminals to prey upon honest men solely because there is good money in it?

Does the lawyer hedge the law about by technicality, after technicality, whereas after whereas, and hereinbefores and hereafters to such length that only men with large wallets can afford to try for their rights in courts of law, and the poor, by virtue of their poverty, are excluded from seeking justice?

Undoubtedly the court of public opinion holds some of these beliefs about the lawyer. Undoubtedly many people actually believe that the lawyer is even worse than that.

There are upward of 30,000 lawyers in the American Bar Association. Can these men possibly fit into the picture just painted.

Probably no lawyer is better qualified to answer than the Hon. Silas H Strawn of Chicago, President of the American Bar Association who addressed the North Carolina Bar Association Friday evening.

Hear what he has to say on the subject

"Yes, there is some evidence to support the indictment

"There are lawyers who impede and obstruct justice

"There are lawyers whose sole purpose and intent in practicing law is to make money

"There are lawyers with no ideals and no sense of public duty.

"There are lawyers who knowingly defend criminals whose acts are beyond justification or condonation

"There are lawyers who thwart justice by resort to subterfuge evasion, and legalistic trickery

"There are lawyers who aid rich men to evade just laws and who make it difficult for poor men to maintain their rights"

How many lawyers are like that is naturally the next question to ask? Do they constitute anything like a majority of the legal profession

Not Even Minority

They do not constitute Mr Strawn answered, "even a substantial minority. They are, in fact an exceedingly small percentage of all the lawyers engaged in practice Nevertheless their acts and their attitude are such as to cast odium upon a profession which it has been and always should be one of noble purpose and high accomplishment for public weal

Mr Strawn says he regards it as highly regrettable that an insignificant minority of men in the profession should be able to cast a cloud over the whole profession The overwhelming majority of high minded, conscientious lawyer, who labor all their days for the improvement of the courts and for the promotion of justice, for continual progress the course of human affairs, are often observed by the unworthy conduct of just one unworthy member One bad apple will often spoil the sale of a whole barrel of apples.

"We have lawyers who regard their certificates of admission to the bar Mr Strawn declared, "as a license to loot, rather than a license to aid in the administration of justice

"On the other hand for every lawyer of this kind we have dozens of clients who seek attorneys not for the purpose of obtaining justice but to evade it."

"Ahoy" Cried Th' Cap'n "Avast, Belay, B'Gosh, We're Back Home Ag'in"

"Dash Me Toplights, Shiver Me Timbers And Scuttle The Blarsted Gallion, But Home Looks Good After A Voyage To Furrin' Ports"

(By the Captain of the Crew)

"My dear," said the Old Skipper to his young wife, as they sat around their humble board discussing a dish of succulent hog jowls and turnip greens, new potatoes, young onions, buttermilk and corn pone, "I was given a queer assignment this afternoon by the City Editor."

"What was it," exclaimed the beautiful young Creole, in some measure of excitement. Hitherto she had accustomed her ears to the skipper giving assignments, not receiving them.

"He asked me to write him a story of my recent journey through Tennessee."

"Of course you consented. You have been planning that visit all the years we have been married, and now that you have taken it, why shouldn't you write an account of it. If you don't comply with that simple request I'll give the City Editor your letters" and let him publish them. They tell their own story. You wrote like a boy taking his first trip away from home. Did anything escape your eyes or ears"

No Place Like Home

Be it known to all men that the Skipper recently decided to take a week off and visit the scenes of his birth, his boyhood, his youth and his rise to manhood. He started out with high hopes, palpitating heart and though he did not see all that he had set out to see, he saw just enough to make him say when he got back home, "I'll never leave my family again. There truly is no place like your own vine and fig tree"

A friend of the Skipper's youth, who lived in the Capital City of Tennessee, when he came into his inheritance took a trip to Europe, and on his return wrote a book whose title ran "From Nashville to Nashville." The Skipper set out from Asheville and when he got back he found himself in Asheville That in itself was memorable.

The first day was occupied with a busy trip to Johnson City. If you want your money's worth of travel, take this trip, through Madison county for more than two hours, where you see more wilds than untamed Africa holds It offers to the traveler vistas of scenery that delight the eye; and you are more than apt to pick up as traveling companions most interesting people.

Way over in the land of no-where an old, wizened man with one arm not functioning flagged the bus and put on board a girl about 14 years of age. "Her pappy's rel sick over in Tennessee and is carryin' on a heap about her, so we are sending for to him," he said as he bargained for the fare. While his old wife gave the child some directions about how to behave on a bus and not to lower her buncles, the old man shoved in the door an old weather beaten traveling bag which seemed to be heavy laden. The bus driver had a queer look in his eye as he picked it up, but said nothing. When the child's destination was reached the Skipper squired her out and set her bag down. It did feel very heavy to contain only a child's clothing. Perhaps it also had some dress goods hidside its life

Johnson City, which the Skipper had not seen since 1895, then a mere village, was a revelation, so grown into a real city, with important manufacturing plants, an imposing looking new hotel called the John Sevier, a business district that will do credit to any city in Tennessee, beautiful homes, fine churches all the rips manual of the modern progressive South Tennessee from the Virginia line to the Mississippi

—(Please Turn To Page Twen

BARBEE PICKS 12 TAR HEELS AS GREATEST

Answers Challenge Of Dr. Archibald Henderson On Question

PUTS TWO INDIAN NAMES ON LIST

Agrees On Gaston And Macon But Takes Issue With 10 Others

12 Greatest Tarheels

1. Sequoya.
2. Junaluska.
3. Sir Walter Raleigh.
4. Robert Henry.
5. John Sevier.
6. Col. Richard Henderson.
7. Nathaniel Macon.
8. William Gaston.
9. Washington Duke.
10. Walter Hines Page
11. Joseph P. Caldwell
12. Bishop John C. Kilgo.

By DAVID RANKIN BARBEE

Dr. Archibald Henderson, who is conceivably the most versatile and probably the ablest living Tarheel, in a personal letter has challenged me to put up a list of twelve greatest North Carolinians in connection with his list of twelve greatest. Just why he should challenge a Tennesseean to such a test is beyond me, unless it be that I took rather light exception to his list

It will be remembered that in his list were those three eminent Tennesseans, Andrew Jackson, James Knox Polk and Andrew Johnson who happened to have been born in North Carolina and of whose relation to this State North Carolina has taken scant notice.

In his list also were O. Henry and James B. Duke, both claimed by New York and both of whom from their young manhood days lived and eventually died in that city. O. Henry has a commercial monument at his native state, a hostelry, and James B. Duke created his own monument before he died, Duke University. In referring to these things it is not my purpose to draw attention to the way Tennessee has appropriated the memory of her great sons, for I remember that blind Homer living had no home but dead was claimed by seven cities of Greece

Sequoya

In making up my list of twelve greatest Tar Heels it will be noted that I also were closely to my territory than does Dr. Henderson Here it is Sequoya or George Guess, a noted Cherokee chieftain, born in 1760 at the Cherokee village of Tuskegee near what is now Fort Loudon, Tennessee Uneducated but quick witted, a man of versatile genius, he reduced the Cherokee tongue to an alphabet and in a few years after that amazing achievement in 1809, thousands of Cherokees were reading and writing their native language. Sequoya's memory has been perpetuated by the United States government in naming the giant redwoods of California for him. He is also the subject of two notable biographies and descending the scale from the sublime to the lowly a summer camp has been named after him, with the name misspelled

Junaluska, chief of Cherokee chieftains is my next choice It seems to me that not since of Tar Heels that could successfully defy old Hickory was a remarkable people and as the Cherokees under the leadership of Junaluska did this and as they were here long before North Carolina was their mightest man surely has his place in any list of twelve greatest Tar Heels Grim old warrior that he was Junaluska was not without a sense of humor. He joked as did Old Hickory, with an unfulfilled vengeance in his heart. He went down to the grave sorrowful because he had not murdered Jackson when he had a chance at Talladega, where he helped Jackson whip the Creek. North Carolina has named a mountain peak for Junaluska and the Southern Methodist a summer assembly Probably he is more grateful to North Carolina for his memorial

Junaluska

What Tar Heel was greater than the founder of this state Its founder, for whom its state capital is named and also a township in that important city. It seems to me that Sir Walter Raleigh should head a list of greatest Tar Heels. Jackson, Polk, Johnson, Henderson, Junaluska, Sequoya, Barbee, Raleigh, Macon, Gaston, Duke, Page, Caldwell, Kilgo, Barbee

Everyone is Pleased

—With—

Jack King's American Beauties

A Show That's Worth Your While Offering Today

A Pair Of Peddlers

A Novel Laughing Comedy, with Singing, Dancing and Feature Vaudeville Specialties.

EXTRA

Miss Stang

A Violinist of Merit.

They All Say She is a Wonder

Fatty

The Home-Breaker

Matinee 3:30

Night 7:45-9:15

MAJESTIC

PARK MOVEMENT NOT DEAD, SAYS ROBERTS

INSISTS ISSUE IS STILL A LIVE ONE.

Predicts Interesting Developments Within the Next Year—Platform Pledge Regarded as Binding.

The prospects for the development of a park here which will be a credit to the city when it is many times the size of Asheville at present are not so dark as some of those who attended Thursday night's meeting of the Board or Trade were led to believe such was the declaration of Mayor Roberts to a Citizen reporter yesterday. The mayor spoke at the meeting called to consider the park question and during the course of his remarks, he said that the finances of the municipality are such at this time as to preclude the possibility of the early development of a park. He made it plain yesterday that he does not regard the park project as dead, however.

"With the city facing the necessity of spending within the immediate future half a million dollars for a water line which is absolutely essential to the comfort of its people and with the need of large expenditures for school purposes pressing upon us, I do not believe that the time is here for the purchase of park lands," the mayor said. "As commissioner of finance, I must keep the city within a reasonable expenditure. I had these matters in mind when I said at Thursday evening's gathering that we cannot buy a park site at this time.

"But I want it distinctly understood that my remarks were not intended to throw cold water on the park proposition. On the contrary, I am as much in favor of this development as I have ever been. And I have no hesitancy in saying that it is my firm belief that the next year will witness the ability of the commissioners to announce a definite program in the acquisition of property which will serve the municipality's park needs for years to come. I prefer just now not to say what I have in mind but I assure you that it is a practical proposition and that I have no intention of letting the movement for a park die. On the contrary, I want to see it kept very much alive. Asheville is a good deal nearer the realization of its dreams of a splendid park here than some of its citizens believe."

Mayor Roberts recalled that one of the planks of his platform in last spring's election pledged his support to the movement for the pevelopment of a park. He said yesterday that he regards that pledge as binding now as it was when he was seeking votes on it and he declared that he is not forgetful of his promise to provide suitable parks for Asheville's citizenship. The project he has in mind he said, must be somewhat delayed by reason of financial conditions. The commissioners have just adopted the

ROTARIANS INSPECT THE FARM SCHOOL

VISITED ALL DEPARTMENTS AND HAD SUPPER.

Eighty Students, Fourteen Teachers There This Year—School Owns 540 Acres of Farming Lands.

Inspecting the Asheville Farm school, on invitation of John E. Calfee, president of the Normal and Collegiate institute, members of the Asheville Rotary club, yesterday and last night, visited every section and department of the school, heard talks and lectures on the work by the students themselves, enjoyed a bountiful supper prepared and served by the 80 boys who are this year attending the school. The trip was interesting, entertaining and instructive and thoroughly enjoyed by the club members.

Beginning in the chapel the Rotarians inspected that room, the banking department, machine and shop department where chairs and other furniture, and wheelbarrows, all of which are used in the school are made; corn club department, pig club and canning department. An opossum supper was served, the boys doing the cooking and serving and served vegetables grown on the farm of the school.

The school is in charge of Superintendent Marsh, employs 14 teachers, and owns 540 acres of land. The boys are taught the latest methods of farming, shop work, and many other things useful to young farmers. This year the school has only 80 students, the limit that can be taken, and many others have been turned away owing to lack of room. Interesting talks were made by Mr. Calfee, explaining the aims of the school and by Supt. Marsh. J. F. Barrett answered on part of the club members.

George E. Lee of the Rotary club offered two $5 prizes for the best kept records by the corn and pig club boys. In the corn club department the boy student in charge explained how ground is prepared, seed corn selected and planted and the pig club boy exhibited a thoroughbred and scrub hog, ages the same and same feed and showed the difference in the animals, the throughbred being twice as large. In the canning department 6,000 gallons of canned vegetables and fruits were shown, all grown on the place and all to be used there.

Coming Attractions

AT THE MAJESTIC.

For the new bill starting at the Majestic today Jack King's American Beauties company will present the screamingly funny farce comedy, entitled "Three Twins," a bill never before seen in Asheville at popular prices. This play in its original form was one of the big successes of the larger cities and will be equally successful in tabloid form as played by Jack King's American Beauties.

During the action of the play vaudeville specialties will be offered

A Pair Of Peddlers

A Novel Laughing Comedy, with Singing, Dancing and Feature Vaudeville Specialties.

EXTRA

Miss Stang

A Violinist of Merit.

They All Say She is a Wonder

Fatty

The Home-Breaker

Matinee 3:30

Night 7:45-9:15

MAJESTIC

PRINCESS

—TODAY—

—See—

BESSIE LOVE

—In—

the municipality are such at this time as to preclude the possibility of the early development of a park. He made it plain yesterday that he does not regard the park project as dead, however.

"With the city facing the necessity of spending within the immediate future half a million dollars for a water line which is absolutely essential to the comfort of its people and with the need of large expenditures for school purposes pressing upon us, I do not believe that the time is here for the purchase of park lands," the mayor said. "As commissioner of finance, I must keep the city within a reasonable expenditure. I had these matters in mind when I said at Thursday evening's gathering that we cannot buy a park site at this time.

"But I want it distinctly understood that my remarks were not intended to throw cold water on the park proposition. On the contrary, I am as much in favor of this development as I have ever been. And I have no hesitancy in saying that it is my firm belief that the next year will witness the ability of the commissioners to announce a definite program in the acquisition of property which will serve the municipality's park needs for years to come. I prefer just now not to say what I have in mind but I assure you that it is a practical proposition and that I have no intention of letting the movement for a park die. On the contrary, I want to see it kept very much alive. Asheville is a good deal nearer the realization of its dreams of a splendid park here than some of its citizens believe."

Mayor Roberts recalled that one of the planks of his platform in last spring's election pledged his support to the movement for the development of a park. He said yesterday that he regards that pledge as binding now as it was when he was seeking votes on it and he declared that he is not forgetful of his promise to provide suitable parks for Asheville's citizenship. The project he has in mind he said, must be somewhat delayed by reason of financial conditions. The commissioners have just adopted the largest budget in the history of Asheville. They are convinced that the provision of water facilities adequate for present needs and the development and equipment of a creditable school system which will be ample to relieve the congestion are more important right now than the park. But they are not going to withhold support from the park project, the mayor insists.

The city's chief executive said that when he went to the meeting held Thursday night, he had no intention of speaking. When called upon to state the city's attitude, he said he sought to do so in such a manner as to convey to his hearers his hearty belief in the park project but at the same time he wanted them to realize the impossibility of taking immediate action. Since the meeting, he has gained the impression that many people construed his remarks to mean that the municipality does not intend to provide a park. It was with a view to correcting this construction that the mayor discussed the matter with a reporter.

SEMI-FINALS TODAY IN GOLF TOURNAMENT

Reeves-Hobart and McDonald-Chapman Matches Are On Today in Woman's Tourney.

The semi-finals in the annual shop department where chairs and other furniture, and wheelbarrows, all of which are used in the school are made; corn club department, pig club and canning department. An opossum supper was served, the boys doing the cooking and serving and served vegetables grown on the farm of the school.

The school is in charge of Superintendent March, employs 14 teachers, and owns 640 acres of land. The boys are taught the latest methods of farming, shop work, and many other things useful to young farmers. This year the school has only 80 students, the limit that can be taken, and many others have been turned away owing to lack of room. Interesting talks were made by Mr. Calfee, explaining the aims of the school and by Supt. Marsh. J. F. Barrett answered on part of the club members.

George E. Lee of the Rotary club offered two $5 prizes for the best kept records by the corn and pig club boys. In the corn club department the boy student in charge explained how ground is prepared, seed corn selected and planted and the pig club boy exhibited a thoroughbred and scrub hog, ages the same and same feed and showed the difference in the animals, the throughbred being twice as large. In the canning department 6,000 gallons of canned vegetables and fruits were shown, all grown on the place and all to be used there.

Coming Attractions

AT THE MAJESTIC.

For the new bill starting at the Majestic today Jack King's American Beauties company will present the screamingly funny farce comedy, entitled "Three Twins," a bill never before seen in Asheville at popular prices. This play in its original form was one of the big successes of the larger cities and will be equally successful in tabloid form as played by Jack King's American Beauties.

During the action of the play vaudeville specialties will be offered

State latter prove man.
Murphy
terestin states it all v receive ter.

That will st know t phy's d come a thoritie the lo handle.
Paker had re commis educati of app his new

by the will inc
Klark
Klark whom week, number already chorus will ha an enti
tinue t
tion.
played should seen at

Miss can vic tire ch
day.
skill in conside musicia will not ing her

For Arbuckl
comedy, featurin
be show

GALA

The Lo

YOU WI

LETTER URGES END OF STRIFE

Former Mayor Declares His "Soul Wounded Unto Death"

—(Continued From Page One)

protect it, and did protect it for nearly four years.

What would you have done? Would you have closed the bank and lost it or would you have made an honest effort to save it?

Farewell and adieu,
(Signed) GALLATIN ROBERTS.

Letter To Pennell

"Dear Geo:

"Please attend to these little matters for me. Get $157.41 out of the Wachovia Bank and give to the clerk with this report, and file this other paper in the Central Bank

"Take my body to Clayton's Place and do what you can to help Mrs Roberts, Edward and Margaret I know you will

"Give my love to Fred, Burgin Mrs. Morris, Mrs Thompson, Roy, Clyde, Jessie, Lentz Virginia, Plato C. J., Harry, Zeb, E. C., Cloyd, and all our friends. Howard and Choate

"My soul is wounded unto death.

Your ... end

"GALLATIN ROBERTS"

Persons referred to in the letter: Mr. Pennell are Fred L. Sale, Asheville attorney, Burgin Pennell attorney and brother of George Pennell Mrs. Guy Morris, former secretary to the late Mayor and now secretary to Mayor Harry W Plummer Roy Young collector of delinquent city taxes and assessments, Clyde Morgan clerk in the tax department of the city Jessie Morgan, deputy tax collector for the city, DeVere C. Lentz, special counsel for the city, Virginia Gaither, stenographer at the city hall, Plato Ebbs, former state senator, C. J. Ebbs, wholesale grocerman here, Harry Nettles, former Buncombe county rep-

MEN

Business men of the keener type guard against poor health, not necessarily because of the sake of appearance, but competition forces them to keep well.

Chiropractor Limbaugh

WOMEN

Thoughtful women too are continually turning to CHIROPRACTIC for NATURAL health, rather than to patented pills for ARTIFICIAL appearance.

Ask us any Health question. DR. H. A. LIMBAUGH, DR. CLAUDINE LIMBAUGH, Offices 301 Wachovia Bank Bldg., Phone 5614.

The Laugh Sensation of the Year!

You'll scream as you watch him manhandled by the love-hungry ladies! It's the funniest picture ever made!

With

BUSTER KEATON

Yesterday In Washington

THURSDAY

10:00 a. m.—The city commissioners will meet in the council chamber at the city hall.

1:00 p. m.—The Rotary Club will meet at the Battery Park hotel.

6:15 p. m.—The Optimist Club will meet at the S. and W. Cafeteria.

7.00 p m.—The West Asheville Club will meet at Hall Feltcher high school in West Asheville.

7:30 p. m—The Pisgah Rebekah Lodge will meet at the West Asheville Odd Fellows hall on Hanover street.

7.30 p. m—The Swannanoa Rebekah Lodge 56 will meet at the Odd Fellows building

7.30 p m—The Ionic Council No. 9, R and S. M., will meet at the Masonic Temple

7:30 p. m—The members of Mount Hermon Lodge 118 A F and A M will meet at the Masonic Temple.

7.30 p. m—The French Broad Council, Junior Order of United American Mechanics will meet at 1 Biltmore avenue

7.30 p m—The John A N holt Jr. Lodge 650 A F and A M will meet at the Masonic Temple

8.00 p m. The Knights of Maccabees will meet in the Knights of Pythias hall in the Paragon building

8.00 p m. The Railway Carmen will meet in the Railroads Union Depot street

IMPERIAL THEATER Joan Crawford, Lester Vaneck and C. C. Edwards in "Dance, Fools Dance" also comedy and news

PLAZA THEATER Buster Keaton, Sallie Eilers and Reginald Denny in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" also news and comedy

PARAMOUNT THEATER "Call of the Flesh" with Ramon Novarro and Dorothy Jordan Current Universal news and Vitaphone Varieties

PALACE THEATER "Sonny" with Marilyn Miller also short features

PRINCESS THEATER "Outward Bound," Sutton Vane's sensational play on the screen Last times today

ROAD MEASURE IS GIVEN APPROVAL

Senate Roads Committee Adopts Three Major Amendments

—(Continued From Page One)

tion on the new highway commission by two members to the minority party was stricken out, an amendment to make it mandatory that the road tax be reflected in the gross tax levies of the counties and to allow refunds of gasoline taxes paid on fuel used by airplanes.

A number of other minor amendments were made.

The amended bill is expected to be reported to the Senate tomorrow morning.

DAUGHTER BORN

Mr. and Mrs. Gaither C. Briggs, of Norfolk, Va., and formerly of Asheville, announce the birth of a daughter, Miriam Jean, February 21.

CAPONE APPEARS IN CHICAGO COURT

Gangster Is Debonair As Contempt Hearing Is Launched

—(Continued From Page One)

lect audience gained admission, government employees, newspaper reporters, attorneys and city officers. All were scrutinized and some were searched for pistols

Moving picture and newspaper photographers dogged the steps of the Capone entourage to the court room, from it at noon to a municipal court where he answered a vagrancy charge, and back to the contempt proceedings

Smiling, affable, apparently at ease the "scarfaced one" told reporters "I'm just a goat" when asked about yesterday's primary election "Foolish" he called the charge that he gave $150,000 to Mayor Thompson's campaign

Dressed In Blue

His ample bulk 265 pounds, he said was encased in a soft blue suit His tie was modest blue and his shirt white A white handkerchief hung from the breast pocket Gray spats topped highly shined black shoes

Occasionally during the tedious court proceedings, the gangster's partly bald head turned and his black eyes swept the court room, but generally he followed the routine If there were bodyguards, and police officers said a dozen or so accompanied him they were far back in the court room Al was at the counsel table He chewed gum resolutely and rocked his chair slowly back and forward From the left hand on the table sparkled a diamond Across his expansive girth stretched a watch chain

Another Charge

After the federal proceedings Capone will appear in municipal court to answer Judge John H Lyle's vagrancy warrant. He made bond of $80,000 today during the noon recess

Of Florida, Capone said

"I'm not going back It's warm enough here Anyway this is my home Besides—" Just the trifle of a reflection—"business conditions are pretty bad"

The contempt proceedings grew out of a grand jury subpoena in March, 1929 The jury was investigating incomes. A continuance was granted by Judge Wilkerson when a doctor's affidavit, showing Al was ill, was presented

PENSION ROLLS IN NORTH CAROLINA WILL BE CHECKED

RALEIGH, Feb. 25. (AP)—The House pension committee this afternoon instructed Auditor Baxter Durham to draw a bill providing for a check of Confederate pension rolls with vital statistics, showing deaths of veterans.

Drawing the bill, Mr. Durham will confer with Representative McEachern of Hoke, and Senator Pritchett of Bertie, chairman of the joint House and Senate committees.

The action was taken as a result of the Gant case in Greensboro, where the clerk of court was convicted of cashing pension checks made to dead veterans.

Rutherfordton Kiwanis Sponsor Radio Program

T A

(By T
Senator I
in connecti Senate c for governo
Dry orga
1932 preside
Comprom to limit oil
Senator
over agreem
Senator S
ment to Vo facturers o under proh Represent resolution
gation of p

THI

WASHINGT
Official weat peratures an ending 8 00 p showing are

Station

Asheville
Atlanta
Atlantic City
Birmingham
Charlotte
Chicago
Denver
El Paso
Detroit
Galveston
Jacksonville
Key West
Little Rock
Los Angeles
Memphis
Meridian
Miami
Mobile
New Orleans
New York
San Antonio
San Francisc
Tampa
Vicksburg
Wilmington

WE
The disturb er Mississipp moved eastw lowest baron nah Another north Pacific sure 29 84 in continues re
England Stat
Plateau distu from Canada
ported in U
Gulf States,
sas. Tennessa
in the South
the Ohio a
and the nort
No freezing
the South th

North Car
gia. Florida day and Frid
perature
West Virg
partly cloud
in west port
Kentucky
day. Friday
ly rising tem

LOC
State of wea
State of weat
Relative hum
Relative hur
Relative hum
Wind directi
Wind directi
Time of Sun
Time of Sun

LOCAL
8 a. m.
9 a m.
10 a. m.
11 a. m.
12 noon
1 p. m.
2 p. m.
Wet bulb ten
Wet bulb te
Wet bulb ten Highest
Lowest
Absolute Ma
Absolute Min
Average temp

LOCAL M
Normal
Greatest am
Least amoun
For last 24

Bryson

t Other Papers Say

NSAS CHALLENGES NEVADA

(Wilmington Star)

tment of a law that permits din-residents after a 90-day stay with-rs, Arkansas makes a bid for the has made Reno famous.

o essential difference between the
and the new law of Arkansas.

be hardly fair to inquire into the
of such laws. It is noteworthy that es its face, perhaps its conscience.
e 90-day clause is for non-residents.
the old standards still exist for to the Razorback state, whose s are beset with difficulties.

tly, then, a business matter purely People will have divorces, and will spot that offers the fewest difficuls hotels will profit. So will Ar-
rs. Arkansas court fees will soar.
is a rather profitable business.

rkansas divorce law is not the law
es. It is not, for example, the law olina. Hence the effect is that Ars North Carolinians to evade their e equally logical for a state to seize other phase of our national life. It all homicides committed by or on justifiable. It could invite all these l differences to journey to its conttle their dispute without fear of

YING EFFECT OF GOAT'S MILK

(Louisville Courier-Journal)

e simple act of Lord Irwin, Viceroy sending Mahatma Gandhi a jug of and a basket of grapes a few morn-y grow the peace and independence ug," by the way, is not used in its erican sense in the dispatch, but in sense. We over here would call it a goat's milk and the grapes were y man's" breakfast Fruit, milk and are about all he eats.

tma had been in conference with official whom he calls, "my dear had been talking over, unofficially, of the London Round Table agree-hen he emerged from the vice regal
New Delhi, the little brown man atisfied, even optimistic." The seem-out-face is the greatest piece of news ne out of India since the "bloodless was inaugurated.

ated Press tells of visits to the Ma-
Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and M. R.
idu friends, who were Round Table nd the Christian Science Monitor's it at Allahabad credits the Nawab with effecting a distinct advance aceful settlement, after a long pilwith Gandhi. In the meantime interests are bringing pressure to beyond the bounds of possibility that ces between Gandhi and the Viceroy in a simultaneous cessation of the s orders for suppression of the civil movement and of the movement satisfying pride, preserving honor,

g peace.

HAT WHITE HOUSE MAIL

(St. Louis Post-Dispatch)

h from Washington says that almer President Coolidge officially ing his mail sent to the White months ago, dozens of letters still for him and members of his famly that, but every now and then rrives "from some far-removed sec-country addressed to Grover Cleveodrow Wilson." We hadn't thought
, but by the same token what stacks
d mail there must be at Stratford-r the late William Shakespeare Esq.
letters long ago must have taxed ge space at Rome. Wonder what the master does with mail with advice r the Great and Pericles of the

S OF OTHER DAYS

From The Citizen's Files

10 YEARS AGO TODAY.

CITY WILL OFFER FINAL TRIBUTES

Former Mayor Ended His Life Yesterday With Bullet

—(Continued From Page One)

about 6 feet from the body. No papers were found in the coat pockets. A leather pocketbook, which had been given the mayor by negro janitors of the city hall upon his retirement from office, was underneath his body. It contained several cards.

Mr. Roberts left three letters, addressed to his widow, George Pennell and "to the People of Asheville." Letters to Mr. Pennell and the people of Asheville are carried elsewhere in this issue of the Citizen. The letters were found in Mr. Roberts' office by K. H. Lee.

Contents of the letter addressed to Mr. Pennell indicated that Mr. Roberts had taken care of his personal and law affairs Tuesday. He appeared before Miss May Jones, notary public in the Legal building, shortly after noon Tuesday and was sworn to several affidavits which are left for Mr. Pennell. One of the affairs of the late mayor was an accounting of the estate of Sally M. Bishop. He was executor of the estate. The letter instructed Mr. Pennell to see that all his affairs of a business and personal nature were administered. Several proofs of claims for deposits of his clients which are in closed Asheville banks were also sworn to by Mr. Roberts.

Miss Jones last night said that she noticed nothing unusual about the actions of the ex-mayor Tuesday in asking that she verify the papers and signatures.

Don C. Young, his law partner last night said that he was talking to Mr. Roberts about 2:10 or 2:15 o'clock yesterday afternoon that he did not seem depressed or otherwise discouraged. Mr. Young said that he left his office about 2:20 o'clock yesterday afternoon to go to the courthouse and that he went into Mr. Roberts' office but found that the former city official had gone. He did not think this unusual and assumed that the former mayor had stepped out on business. Several other persons, Mr. Young said, were in the office during the early afternoon talking to Mr. Roberts.

About 1:30 o'clock Mr. Roberts asked Miss Annie L. Merrell, stenographer, to give him three envelopes. He said that he wanted to address three letters and that he would do so in long hand. The stenographer was not in the office when he left.

One of the proofs of claim showed that Mr. Roberts had $117.74 on deposit at the Central Bank and Trust company when that institution failed to open for business on November 20.

Attached to the proof of claims was a small piece of white paper with the following notation "George, file these for me. G. R." A claim also revealed that Mr. Roberts had $13.55 in a savings account at the Haywood street branch of the Central bank.

The body of Mr. Roberts was moved to the Clayton-Hyer undertaking home in West Asheville. Officers had called the funeral coach of another establishment but Clayton and Hyer were called in when the letter addressed to Mr. Pennell was opened.

News Spreads Rapidly

News of the shooting spread rapidly throughout the business section of the city and police found it difficult to clear a passway through the throngs which had gathered in front of and along the stairways of the Legal building.

Mr. Roberts is survived by his widow, a son, Edward Roberts of Albuquerque, New Mexico; a daughter, Margaret Evelyn Roberts, 9; and a brother, J. R. Roberts of Mills mayor of Asheville defeating J. E. Rankin after a bitter fight. He served four years. While mayor he was three times elected president of the state Municipal association, and elected twice to the presidency of the state Forestry association.

Headed Board

After his retirement as mayor, Mr. Roberts formed a partnership for the practice of law with Don C. Young. In 1914 Mr. Roberts was appointed chairman of the board of elections for Buncombe county and managed the primary and general campaigns

THE QUESTION BOX

Where was General Custer buried?

Originally General Custer was buried where he fell, at the Battle of Big Horn. A year later, however, at the order of General Sheridan, his body was transported and buried with due ceremony at West Point.

Davy Crockett

Who said "Be sure you are right, then go ahead"?

Davey Crockett, in the War of 1812.

Crystal Palace

Is there a palace made of glass?

The Crystal Palace, made of glass, was erected in Hyde Park London, for the World's Fair held in 1851. It was designed by Sir Joseph Paxton and was built of glass and iron, with floors of wood. Its length was 1,608 feet, and its area 21 acres. Every department of art and science was represented, and it was viewed by more than 6,000,000 persons. Its materials were removed in 1854, and the structure rebuilt at Sydenham, eight miles from London. There the park and grounds cover nearly 200 acres and a permanent fair is held. In 1853 a similar but smaller "crystal palace" was erected between Fortieth and Forty-second streets on Sixth avenue, New York City. It was used for exhibitions and grand concerts, but was destroyed by fire in 1858.

Franklin

Is it true that Benjamin Franklin never attended school?

Benjamin Franklin attended school for two years between the ages of eight and ten.

First Piano

When was the first piano made in the United States?

The first pianoforte was made in 1775 by John Behrent in Philadelphia.

Panic

When was the first financial panic in the United States?

In 1791, following the boom in business after the close of the Revolutionary war, and because of over-speculation in the securities of the new government and in the stock of the newly organized banks, the first small panic of the United States occurred. The first great financial crisis was precipitated by the War of 1812 and after the capture of the capital by the British on August 24, 1814.

Washington Monument

How many stones are in the Washington monument?

The number of stones in the Washington monument has been estimated at 23,000.

CORRECTION

In a recent issue of the Question Box, Virginia was given as the state from which the greatest number of presidents has come. This holds true, but the Question Box omitted the name of Woodrow Wilson from the list. He was born at Staunton, Va. This gives Virginia eight presidents. Ohio is next in line having given seven presidents to the nation.

BOARD OF FIVE TO BE SELECTED

Appointive Body Will Have Full Charge Of Operations

—(Continued From Page One)

able, and otherwise care for the property and employ and fix the compensation of all the employees that are necessary for the proper maintenance, repair and care of said school buildings and school property.

Section Five

If at any time said Board believes that it is for the best interest and welfare of the schools of said district that additional property shall be acquired for the proper conduction of any of the existing schools in said district or that property shall be purchased or otherwise acquired for the erection of new school buildings, then a resolution to that effect may be adopted by said Board and certified to the County Board of Education. Upon the receipt of said resolution the County Board of Education shall proceed to comply therewith in the way and manner now provided by law.

Section Six

That said Asheville School Board shall elect a competent, skilled and expert Superintendent of the Schools of said district for a period not exceeding four years, and said Superintendent of Schools during his or her term of office shall devote his or her time and attention exclusively to the management and control of the schools located in said district. Said Superintendent shall have the immediate and direct control over all the teachers and other employees of said school system and shall be directly responsible for the efficiency and good management of said schools, and shall meet with the School Board at its regular meetings and make a report, oral or written, as required by said Board, of the work and conduct of said schools together with any recommendations that he or she may have in regard to the conduction and management thereof; that said Superintendent of schools shall be subject to removal from office by said Board for inefficiency or other cause satisfactory to said Board, and such action shall not be subject to appeal.

Section Seven

Said School Board shall, from time to time, as it is necessary elect teachers and employes for the proper conduct of said schools, said teachers so elected to be recommended by the Superintendent of Schools and from a list of such recommendations the said board shall select the necessary number of teachers and employes. In making said recommendations the Superintendent of Schools shall consider primarily the ability, education, character and efficiency of the persons so recommended and such qualifications shall guide the superintendent's actions in making said recommendations. If, however, the said board is unable or refuse to elect from said list of recommendations it shall request the superintendent, and it shall be his or her duty to furnish other names. Said board shall fix the compensation of all teachers and other employes so elected and shall provide by resolution the requirements necessary for the teacher to have to teach in said schools and shall fix the term of their employment in the discretion of the board. Any teacher or other employe may be removed for inefficiency or other cause satisfactory to said board at any regular meeting thereof and from the action of said board there shall be no appeal.

Section Eight

Said School Board shall each year prepare, and transmit to the Board

o er the meetings of said majority of the members
Board shall constitute a qu the chairman or any two may call a meeting. The m said Board shall serve wit
pensation.

Section Twelve

The Asheville School Boa
Superintendent thereof vested with full power and to change or extend the s be taught in the schools of tax district; supervise an for the training of teacher schools; assign the teache different schools and provi individual work and chan move any grade or class school building in said di another.

Section Thirteen

Funds for the support
tenance of the six month term in the Asheville District shall be apportion located in the same way a that said funds for said apportioned and allocated other local tax districts a by law.

Section Fourteen

If any section of this A part thereof be hereafter d valid by the Courts of th such decree shall not be co rendering this entire Act shall affect only the spe article or section involved cree

Section Fifteen

All laws or clauses of la flict with this Act are pealed.

Section Sixteen

This Act shall be in full effect from and after its r

GRIFFINS PIC CITY FOR

Residents Of Pa Delighted With Section

The road to home whic
Paris, France, for Mr. a
H. Griffin, crossed the meandered about through before coming to an en ville, but now they are over the prospect of liv
Land of the Sky before this year.

Mrs. Griffin, whose hus attorney with offices in rived in Asheville Febru
was shown several beau in Biltmore Forest and by Booth and Company, tors. After inspecting them, Mrs. Griffin decid chase the Roney Hilliar on Kimberly avenue four arriving here. She has Paris where she and Mr.
busily engaged in plans
Asheville some time this

Booth and Company
tion with the Nichols R
pany last week sold the of business property in ville. Mr. Booth said y has received more inqu prospective purchasers fo
the past 30 days than during any like period years. He feels that the market in this section ness which assuredly is ward trend.

BODY OF VETI LONG MISSI FOUND IN VI

PETERSBURG, Va., Feb body found near here w today by Mrs. William Gr ler, of Reidsville, N. C., a husband, a World War

Louis Post-Dispatch)
from Washington says that ul-er President Coolidge officially g his mail sent to the White nths ago, dozens of letters still r him and members of his famthat, but every now and then ives "from some far-removed sec-ountry addressed to Grover Clevelrow Wilson." We hadn't thought ut by the same token what stacks mail there must be at Stratfordthe late William Shakespeare Esq.
letters long ago must have taxed space at Rome. Wonder what the aster does with mail with advice
the Great and Pericles of the

OF OTHER DAYS

om The Citizen's Files

0 YEARS AGO TODAY

sand fine cigars will be dropped ids this afternoon, in the business her permitting. The feat was ar-
B. Porter Company and Charles any. The airplane has been tuned perfect condition for the flight. If ught by a person on the street it as good as if secured from a new ir counter.

• • • •

atterson left yesterday for a short ville. Mrs. C. V. Hampton of Canton d friends in the city. Miss Martha short while this week in Spartanilley Johnson is the guest of her
B. Canipe, at her home in Union
Ir. W. E. Roberts of Canton was in first of the week. Little Helen dley entertained a number of small rday in celebration of her fifth

• • • •

on has adopted an ordinance lawful for any boy under 18 years
r be upon the streets after 9 o'clock ccompanied by one or both of his his guardian, unless he shall have sion a statement addressed to the e, signed by one of his parents or saying, in substance, that he has be out.

• • • •

h News and Observer makes note hat Miss Exum Clement represen-Buncombe and the only woman he General Assembly, was not ner age, but "put it down in black Was that to be wondered at? Would fct that a woman, with enough at two men, candidates for the ould balk at telling her age?—Mor--Herald.

• • • •

20 YEARS AGO TODAY

ng of Miss Eleanor Tennent and D Dickinson occurred yesterday at esbyterian Church, with Dr R F ficiating. Miss Linda Schartie had musical program which added much nnity and beauty of the occasion.
Tennent a sister of the bride was ttendant. Following the ceremony as served the bridal party at the bride's mother Mrs Annie Tennent

• • • •

lon Curtis entertained with a bridge day in honor of Mrs Earl Valentine ss Jessie Hattemer. Mrs Valentine ed with a bouquet of mauve sweet nstead of the usual prize a pot of nths was cut for by the winner.
Mrs Curtis new home on Chestnut onveniently arranged for entertaining ost attractive with its spring like of hyacinths and daffodils

• • • •

sity for a curfew law has been nstrated during the last few months valence of crime among boys of the ent outbreak which had to be gone investigated by the school children Memorial Building has roused the r people and has brought home to striking force the need of some con-ness.

• • • •

Page, who for some time past has the Imperial Hotel at the corner of and Lexington Avenue, has given e for that hotel and will at an early open its doors. Mr. L. Reynolds is to remain it and make quite a improvements.

to open for business on November 20.

Attached to the proof of claims was a small piece of white paper with the following notation "George, file these for me, G. R." A claim also revealed that Mr. Roberts had $13.55 in a savings account at the Haywood street branch of the Central bank.

The body of Mr. Roberts was moved to the Clayton-Hyer undertaking home in West Asheville. Officers had called the funeral coach of another establishment but Clayton and Hyer were called in when the letter addressed to Mr. Pennell was opened.

News Spreads Rapidly

News of the shooting spread rapidly throughout the business section of the city and police found it difficult to clear a passway through the throngs which had gathered in front of and along the stairways of the Legal building.

Mr. Roberts is survived by his widow, a son, Edward Roberts of Albuquerque, New Mexico; a daughter, Margaret Evelyn Roberts, 9; and a brother, J. B. Roberts of Mills River.

Funeral services will be held either Saturday or Sunday depending the arrival of the son. He left New Mexico last night at 8:15 o'clock and if proper train connections can be made should arrive here Saturday afternoon.

Was Leader

Mayor Roberts was one of the leaders of the fight for "Greater Asheville" in the 1929 general assembly. During the time the legislature was in session, he spent much of his time in Raleigh, exerting his influence to have the limits of the city extended. In recognition of this service, he was nominated in December of 1929 to receive The Times 1929 civic award. The nomination was made by John A. Goode, then president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Roberts was born on a farm in Flat Creek township in Buncombe county in 1878 and was educated in the public schools until he was 17 when he entered Weaver college.

In the year 1897, then a country boy, he went to Marshall where he worked in the store conducted by J. J. Redmon. After working for a year he entered Washington college, a small institution in Tennessee, where he remained for a year, working to pay his tuition and expenses. In 1899 he entered King college at Bristol and worked his way for two years by chopping wood and making fires for board and tuition. While at King Mr. Roberts distinguished himself as a ball player being the leading pitcher. He was a member of the debating team also and took part in the oratorical contests at the school commencement.

Taught School

Mr. Roberts returned to Buncombe county in 1901 and taught school at the Sand Hill school. The following year he taught at Barnardsville, and was elected after a year of teaching at Barnardsville principal of the Flat Creek high school. During those years the young man was reading law at night and in January 1904, he entered the law department of Wake Forest college and the following August was admitted to the bar.

Being without funds to establish himself in the practice of law Mr. Roberts again taught school one year at the Flat Creek school and two years at the Morgan Hill high school, before opening a law office in Asheville in April 1907. For a short time he was the partner of Samuel Radford but the partnership soon terminated and Mr. Roberts practiced alone for a year before he was elected county attorney to succeed Charles A. Webb. In 1910 Mr. Roberts formed a partnership with W. C. Fortune that lasted until 1922.

In 1910 Mr. Roberts was elected to the state legislature where he served during 1911. He was made chairman of the committee on congressional re-apportionment by W. C. Reed of Cherokee, speaker. Mr. Roberts was re-elected to the legislature in 1913 and served as chairman of the committee of counties, cities and towns. In 1916 he was re-elected again and served as chairman of the committee on appropriations. In the 1915 session of the legislature Mr. Roberts introduced a bill to give women the right to vote, but the bill was defeated. He was a member of the committee on revision of the laws of 1919 and was a member of the committee on revision of the laws of 1923 appointed by the Rev. Walter Murphy.

In 1925 Mr. Roberts was elected mayor of Asheville defeating J. E. Rankin after a bitter fight. He served four years. While mayor he was three times elected president of the state Municipal association, and elected twice to the presidency of the state Forestry association.

Headed Board

After his retirement as mayor, Mr. Roberts formed a partnership for the practice of law with Don C. Young. In 1914 Mr. Roberts was appointed chairman of the board of elections for Buncombe county and managed the primary and general campaigns. He was twice a member of the Buncombe county Democratic executive committee. In May, 1927, Mr. Roberts was again elected mayor, defeating E. B. Atkinson.

An active church worker, Mr. Roberts was an elder of the West Asheville Presbyterian church, where he taught the Men's Bible class for many years. He was commissioner from the synod of Appalachia at El Dorado, Ark., and voted for Dr. R. F. Campbell of Asheville as moderator.

In 1926, Mayor Roberts was sponsor of the drive for funds for the William Jennings Bryan Memorial for this district. He had been a life long friend of Bryan's.

Fraternal Honors

Mr. Roberts was a thirty-second degree Mason and was an honorary member of the Kiwanis club for ten years. He was active in the West Asheville club, a community project devoted to the improvement of West Asheville, where Mr. Roberts made his home at 134 Brevard road. During the World War Mr. Roberts was a four-minute speaker and canvassed this section in the interest of the Liberty Loans.

In a recent issue of the Question Box, Virginia was given as the state from which the greatest number of presidents has come. This holds true, but the Question Box omitted the name of Woodrow Wilson from the list. He was born at Staunton, Va. This gives Virginia eight presidents. Ohio is next in line having given seven presidents to the nation.

MAYOR STAYS IN JOBLESS HOME TO STUDY METHODS

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25. (AP)—Mayor Harry A. Mackey, disguised as one of the unemployed, has eaten and slept in the shelter for homeless men conducted by the city committee for unemployment relief, he revealed today.

The executive spent whole nights at the institution in order, he said, to get first hand information concerning the manner in which it is being conducted and, he intimated, to see that the jobless men were being treated satisfactorily.

UNLUCKY BOAT IS GOING TO AUCTION BLOCK AFTER TRIP

BALTIMORE, Feb. 25. (AP)—With the log of her maiden voyage chronicling a near mutiny the stabbing of her captain and the locking of her mate in irons, the steamer Hopatcong today faced the auction block.

Edgar T. Bell, attorney who was named receiver for the ship when she reached Baltimore after a stormy passage with her original crew gone, announced the intention of placing the ship under the hammer.

WATERFRONT FIRE IN RHODE ISLAND PROVES EXPENSIVE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 25. (AP)—The combined waterfront fire in the city's business and left thousands homeless Tuesday night, in spite of heroic efforts of firemen and fireboats, was estimated by the chamber of commerce at the conservative figure of $10,000,000. The fire was extinguished at 6:30 A. M. today. Twenty-five hundred persons were left homeless, the chamber of commerce estimated. Two hundred and fifty families were left homeless in the Federal Hill section, the chamber of commerce said. Nine hundred persons were left jobless, the chamber of commerce said.

Schools shall consider primarily the ability, education, character and efficiency of the persons so recommended and such qualifications shall guide the superintendent's actions in making said recommendations. If, however, the said board is unable or refuse to elect from said list of recommendations it shall request the superintendent, and it shall be his or her duty to furnish other names. Said board shall fix the compensation of all teachers and other employes so elected and shall provide by resolution the requirements necessary for the teacher to have to teach in said schools and shall fix the term of their employment in the discretion of the board. Any teacher or other employe may be removed for ineffeciency or other cause satisfactory to said board at any regular meeting thereof and from the action of said board there shall be no appeal.

Section Eight

Said School Board shall each year prepare, and transmit to the Board of Financial Control if established by law or otherwise to the board, of county commissioners, a budget requirement for the next fiscal year for the operation and maintenance of the schools of said district showing the allocation of the different funds as now required by the school laws of North Carolina. The superintendent of schools elected by said board shall be Ex Officio Secretary thereof and shall keep the minutes, records financial and otherwise and correspondence of said board and as such prepare a tentative budget as above required subject to the approval and adoption by the board.

Section Nine

Persons attending schools in said district shall be bona fide residents thereof and said school board shall be the exclusive judge of the residence of any person applying for entrance into said schools. However, the School Board may admit non-residents into its schools under such terms and conditions as it may adopt by resolution.

Section Ten

Funds for the support and maintenance of the schools in said local tax school district shall be levied and collected as provided by law for the levy and collection of school funds in other local tax districts. When said funds are so levied and collected by the proper collecting officer of the county said funds shall be turned over to the treasurer of the city of Asheville or other depository agent designated by the governing body of the city of Asheville by written resolution and said funds shall be held and kept separate from all other funds belonging to said city and shall be applied under such rules and regulations as the Asheville School Board shall prescribe exclusively to the support and maintenance of the public schools in said district. The said treasurer or other school depository shall hold said funds and pay them by voucher duly executed in the way and manner provided by law for the execution of vouchers of the city of Asheville such vouchers, however, to be issued only upon warrant or order of the school Board. Said warrants or orders of said board shall be held by said disbursing officer as his valid authority for the payment of school funds.

Section Eleven

The term of said School Board named in section three thereof shall begin on the first Monday in April, 1931, and shall extend for a period of two years from and after said date, or until their successors are elected and qualified. The governing body of the city of Asheville shall on or before the first Monday in April 1933 appoint or elect the successors to said Board, one or more of whom shall be a woman, and all of said Board shall be residents of said district and shall be persons known to be in favor of education and interested in the welfare of the schools and shall be appointed or elected with the sole object in view of maintaining the efficiency of the schools of said district and without any partisan prejudice or bias. In case of any vacancy on said Board the same shall be filled by an election by the governing body of the city of Asheville. As soon as practicable after the first Monday in April 1931 and each thereafter said Board shall meet and organize and said Board shall meet and hold a session, one day each month.

busily engaged in plans to Asheville some time this ye Booth and Company in tion with the Nichols Real pany last week sold the We of business property in We ville. Mr. Booth said yest has received more inquiri prospective purchasers for the past 30 days than he during any like period years. He feels that the re market in this section is o ness which assuredly is on ward trend.

BODY OF VETE
LONG MISSING
FOUND IN VIR

PETERSBURG, Va., Feb.
body found near here was today by Mrs. William Grov ler, of Reidsville, N. C., as th husband, a World War vete mysteriously disappeared 1 ago.

Spangler, who suffered f shock, left his home in September a year ago for Va., on a business trip. He wife, she said, he feared from "enemies" in the Ho
cinity.

SEAMAN IS HE
AS FUGITIVE F TENNESSEE

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.
stein Hanson, 35, a seaman rested today as a fugitive tice at the request of Wa
Corkle of the state penite
Nashville, Tenn.

Hanson, known also as R
noldson and Hanson Hoffm tives said, was alleged to lated parole by which he leased from the Nashvill after serving part of a sen burglary four years ago. He to be keeping an appointm
a girl when seized.

RAIDING PARTI
VISIT BROKER
HOUSES IN GO

NEW YORK, Feb. 25.
brokerage houses were visi their books and records sei by an assistant attorney g charge of the bureau of Fifty employes were q about complaints of illegal tions. It was announced th manent raiding party h formed to meet renewed of so-called "bucket shops
ing from increasing activit stock market in the last m

Patriotic Program To Be Given

A patriotic "Washington
Lee" program will be given of the Edward Buncombe c Daughters of the American tion by students of the Workshop in the assembly
Grove Park school this afte
4 o'clock.

The program will consist poems and a one-act play be furnished by the Asheve school band with Director H charge.

Others and members
Daughters of the Revolution guests of honor on this oc

Roy Moody Slight
Hurt In Auto

Roy Moody, 13, of the section, was slightly injur last night in an automob
dent on Haywood road.
Jack Hogan, driver of white, figured in the acci arrested by police on a reckless driving charge.
the accident was not
and was discharged from Park hospital after repo injury.

perfect condition for the wagon ... ught by a person on the street it as good as if secured from a new ir counter.

• • • •

atterson left yesterday for a short ills. Mrs. C. V. Hampton of Canton d friends in the city. Miss Martha short while this week in Spartan- uiley Johnson is the guest of her B. Canipe, at her home in Union Mr. W. E. Roberts of Canton was in first of the week. Little Helen dley entertained a number of small rday in celebration of her fifth on has adopted an ordinance lawful for any boy under 18 years r be upon the streets after 9 o'clock ccompanied by one or both of his his guardian, unless he shall have sion a statement addressed to the e, signed by one of his parents or saying, in substance, that he has be put.

• • • •

• • • •

h News and Observer makes note hat Miss Exum Clement represen- Buncombe and the only woman he General Assembly, was not her age, but "put it down in black Was that to be wondered at? Would bet that a woman with enough at two men candidates for the ould balk at telling her age?—Mor- -Herald.

• • • •

20 YEARS AGO TODAY

ng of Miss Eleanor Tennent and D. Dickinson occurred yesterday at esbyterian Church, with Dr. R. F. ficiating. Miss Linda Schartle had musical program which added much nity and beauty of the occasion. Tennent, a sister of the bride, was ttendant. Following the ceremony, as served the bridal party at the bride's mother, Mrs. Annie Tennent.

• • • •

ion Curtis entertained with a bridge lay in honor of Mrs. Basil Valentine, ss Jessie Hattemer. Mrs. Valentine ed with a bouquet of mauve sweet nstead of the usual prize, a pot of inths was cut for by the winner . Mrs. Curtis' new home on Chestnut nveniently arranged for entertaining ost attractive with its spring-like of hyacinths and daffodils.

• • • •

ssity for a curfew law has been lustrated during the last few months valence of crime among boys of this test outbreak, which had for its goal contributed by the school children Memorial Building has roused the ur people and has brought home to striking force the need of some cor- ncy.

• • • •

. Page, who for some time past has the Imperial Hotel at the corner of et and Lexington Avenue, has given e for that hotel and will at an early it over to its owner, Mr. I. Blomberg. ds to remodel it and make quite a improvements.

made should arrive here tomorrow afternoon.

Was Leader

Mayor Roberts was one of the leaders of the fight for "Greater Asheville" in the 1929 general assembly. During the time the legislature was in session, he spent much of his time in Raleigh, exerting his influence to have the limits of the city extended. In recognition of this service, he was nominated in December of 1929 to receive The Times 1929 civic award. The nomination was made by John A. Goode, then president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Roberts was born on a farm in Flat Creek township in Buncombe county in 1878 and was educated in the public schools until he was 17 when he entered Weaver college.

In the year 1897, then a country boy, he went to Marshall where he worked in the store conducted by J. J. Redmon. After working for a year he entered Washington college, a small institution in Tennessee, where he remained for a year, working to pay his tuition and expenses. In 1899 he entered King college at Bristol and worked his way for two years by chopping wood and making fires for board and tuition. While at King Mr. Roberts distinguished himself as a ball player, being the leading pitcher. He was a member of the debating team also and took part in the oratorical contests at the school commencement.

Taught School

Mr. Roberts returned to Buncombe county in 1901 and taught school at the Sand Hill school. The following year he taught at Barnardsville, and was elected, after a year of teaching at Barnardsville, principal of the Flat Creek high school. During those years the young man was reading law at night, and in January, 1904, he entered the law department of Wake Forest college and the following August was admitted to the bar.

Being without funds to establish himself in the practice of law, Mr. Roberts again taught school one year at the Flat Creek school and two years at the Morgan Hill high school, before opening a law office in Asheville in April, 1907. For a short time he was the partner of Samuel Radford, but the partnership soon terminated and Mr. Roberts practiced alone for a year before he was elected county attorney to succeed Charles A. Webb. In 1910 Mr. Roberts formed a partnership with W. G. Fortune that lasted until 1919.

In 1910 Mr. Roberts was elected to the state legislature where he served during 1911. He was made chairman of the committee on congressional re-apportionment by W. C. Dowd of Charlotte, speaker. Mr. Roberts was re-elected to the legislature in 1912 and served as chairman of the committee of counties, cities and towns. In 1914 he was re-elected again and served as chairman of the committee on appropriations. At the 1914 session of the legislature Mr. Roberts introduced a bill to give women the right to vote, but the bill was defeated. He was re-elected in 1916 and was a candidate for the speakership but was defeated by the Hon. Walter Murphy.

In 1918 Mr. Roberts was elected

erts was an elder of the West Asheville Presbyterian church, where he taught the Men's Bible class for many years. He was commissioner from the synod of Appalachia at El Dorado, Ark., and voted for Dr. R. F. Campbell of Asheville as moderator.

In 1926 Mayor Roberts was sponsor of the drive for funds for the William Jennings Bryan Memorial for this district. He had been a life long friend of Bryan's.

Fraternal Honors

Mr. Roberts was a thirty-second degree Mason and was an honorary member of the Kiwanis club for ten years. He was active in the West Asheville club, a community project devoted to the improvement of West Asheville, where Mr. Roberts made his home at 134 Brevard road. During the World War Mr. Roberts was a four-minute speaker and canvassed this section in the interest of the Liberty Loans.

MAYOR STAYS IN JOBLESS HOME TO STUDY METHODS

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 25. (AP)—Mayor Harry A. Mackey, disguised as one of the unemployed, has eaten and slept in the shelter for homeless men conducted by the city committee for unemployment relief, he revealed today.

The executive spent whole nights at the institution in order, he said, to get first hand information concerning the manner in which it is being conducted and, he intimated, to see that the jobless men were being treated satisfactorily.

UNLUCKY BOAT IS GOING TO AUCTION BLOCK AFTER TRIP

BALTIMORE, Feb. 25. (AP)—With the log of her maiden voyage chronicling a near mutiny, the stabbing of her captain and the locking of her mate in irons, the steamer Hopatcong today faced the auction block.

Edgar T. Bell, attorney, who was named received for the ship when she reached Baltimore after a stormy passage with her original deck crew gone, announced the intention of placing the ship under the hammer.

WATERFRONT FIRE IN RHODE ISLAND PROVES EXPENSIVE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Feb. 25. (AP)—The costliest waterfront fire in the city's history had left Rhode Island's State Pier No. 1 in ruins tonight. Damage to the structure and freight unloaded by the steamer Patria of the Fabre Line was estimated at $750,000. It was believed the fire started near the boiler room. When firemen arrived the entire structure, 600 feet long, was ablaze.

the allocation of the different funds as now required by the school laws of North Carolina. The superintendent of schools elected by said board shall be Ex Officio Secretary thereof and shall keep the minutes, records financial and otherwise and correspondence of said board and as such prepare a tentative budget as above required subject to the approval and adoption by the board.

Section Nine

Persons attending schools in said district shall be bona fide residents thereof and said school board shall be the exclusive judge of the residence of any person applying for entrance into said schools. However, the School Board may admit non-residents into its schools under such terms and conditions as it may adopt by resolution.

Section Ten

Funds for the support and maintenance of the schools in said local tax school district shall be levied and collected as provided by law for the levy and collection of school funds in other local tax districts. When said funds are so levied and collected by the proper collecting officer of the county said funds shall be turned over to the treasurer of the city of Asheville or other depository agent designated by the governing body of the city of Asheville by written resolution and said funds shall be held and kept separate from all other funds belonging to said city and shall be applied under such rules and regulations as the Asheville School Board shall prescribe exclusively to the support and maintenance of the public schools in said district. The said treasurer or other school depository shall hold said funds and pay them by voucher duly executed in the way and manner provided by law for the execution of vouchers of the city of Asheville, such vouchers, however, to be issued only upon warrant or order of the school Board. Said warrants or orders of said board shall be held by said disbursing officer as his valid authority for the payment of school funds.

Section Eleven

The term of said School Board named in section three thereof shall begin on the first Monday in April, 1931, and shall extend for a period of two years from and after said date, or until their successors are elected and qualified. The governing body of the city of Asheville shall on or before the first Monday in April 1933 appoint or elect the successors to said Board, one or more of whom shall be a woman, and all of said Board shall be residents of said district and shall be persons known to be in favor of education and interested in the welfare of the schools and shall be appointed or elected with the sole object in view of maintaining the efficiency of the schools of said district and without any partisan prejudice or bias. In case of any vacancy on said Board the same shall be filled by an election by the governing body of the city of Asheville. As soon as practicable after the first Monday of April, 1931 and each biennial year thereafter said Board shall meet and elect a Chairman, who shall preside wife, she said, he feared from "enemies" in the H cinity.

SEAMAN IS HE AS FUGITIVE TENNESSEE

NEW YORK, Feb. 25. stein Hanson, 35, a seama rested today as a fugitive tice at the request of W Corkle of the state penit Nashville, Tenn.

Hanson, known also as noldson and Hanson Hoffm tives said, was alleged to lated parole by which h leased from the Nashvil After serving part of a se burglary four years ago. H to be keeping an appoint a girl when seized.

RAIDING PART VISIT BROKE HOUSES IN GO

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 brokerage houses were vi their books and records se by an assistant attorney charge of the bureau of Fifty employes were about complaints of illeg tions. It was announced t manent raiding party formed to meet renewed of so-called "bucket shop ing from increasing activ stock market in the last r

Patriotic Program To Be Given

A patriotic "Washington Lee" program will be giver of the Edward Buncombe Daughters of the America tion by students of the Workshop in the assembly Grove Park school this af 4 o'clock.

The program will consist poems and a one-act play. be furnished by the Ashe school band with Director charge.

Officers and members Daughters of the Revoluti guests of honor on this oc

Roy Moody Slight Hurt In Auto

Roy Moody, 13, of the section, was slightly inju last night in an automo dent on Haywood road.

James Hagan, driver of which figured in the acci arrested by police on a reckless driving charge. the accident were not lea lad was discharged from Park hospital after rece pensary treatment.

ote On Road Bill Today

In Capital
day Night

LD POST FOR OZEN YEARS

licans Fail To Meet Behind
sed Doors

ON, D. C., Feb 26 (AP) publican caucus tonight Nicholas Longworth, of aker of the next sess-or Speaker Longworth is leon, of Connecticut, led as Republican floor already has served six

y Are Absent

o opposition to his re- the caucus which was osed doors with a num- licans absent.

be determined until ganizes next session worth or a Democratic ssibly Representative as, will be named. The vill have 218 seats, the and Farmer-Laborites xt congress.

ore of independent Re- ed to attend the cau- because they did not de- ound by conclusions

ld Not Attend

ould be learned, there blicans who did not at- g Sparks, Hoch, Hope, ambertson of Kansas; and Christgau of Min- ardia of New York, and ider, Cooper, Kading of Wisconsin.

ive-elect Boland of elected as the nomi- major parties, likewise nd. This was interpreted ters he would list him- mocrat in House organi- er absentee was Repre- tley of New Jersey, who t disatisfaction with fecting his state. Sev- tatives were absent be- ss.

ERSONS DIE HURRICANE
S OVER FIJI

World Wires

LEVELAND, Feb. 26. (AP)—A first degree murder indictment returned late today against sburgh Hymie" Martin, Pitts- gh racketeer, in connection with mysterious slaying February 3. William E. Potter, former cleve- land councilman.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 26. (AP)—Relief must have to be given drought sufferers for two more months in at least a score of Ken- tucky counties. J. H. Heckman, state supervisor of Red Cross drought relief, said today.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb 26 (AP) Decisively rejecting all amend- ments, the house today passed and sent to the senate the Brigham bill to levy a tax of 10 cents a pound against all yellow oleomar- garine.

MOBILE, Ala., Feb 26 (AP) The body of J. Nick Vaughan, bag- gagemaster on the Louisville and Nashville railroad's Pan-American Limited that plunged through an open drawbridge across the Mobile river near here early Wednesday, with the loss of four lives, was recovered by divers today.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26. (AP) President Hoover today held a 30-minute conference with three dry leaders. They were Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, of the Anti-Saloon league; the Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, member of the executive committee of the World League Against Alco- hol, and the Rev. John Barton, a leader of the prohibition movement in the Southern Baptist church.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 26. (AP) The $40,000,000 banking house of Caldwell and company and the equally large Bancokentucky com- pany joined resources in the dark days before their doom and went down together, the legislative in- vestigators were informed today by J. Dewitt Carter, high official of the Caldwell organization.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26. (AP) President Hoover today signed a bill making it possible for the judge and the district attorney of thinly populated districts to dis- pense with calling a grand jury together unless they felt one was needed.

ROME, Feb. 26. (AP)—British and Italian experts spent six hours today shuffling paper warships from category to category in their search for a settlement satisfactory to Italy of Franco-Italian naval differences.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26. (AP) The senate tonight adopted a resolution condemning any at- tempt by the state department to approve or disapprove the flotation of foreign securities in this coun- try.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26. (AP) The naval construction pro- gram laid aside, big navy advo- cates succeeded today in obtain- ing by a vote of 205 to 68 house approval of a bill to authorize $30,000,000 to modernize three bat- tleships.

ROBERTS RITES TO BE HELD AT CHURCH SUNDAY

Hour Of Funeral Is Set For Three O'clock In Afternoon

BURIAL TO BE IN WEST ASHEVILLE

Service Will Be Held In Church Where He Served As Elder

Funeral services for former Mayor Edward Gallatin Roberts, 51, will be held from the West Asheville Presby- terian church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Rev. W. F. Creson, pastor of the church of which the deceased was an elder and former teacher of the Men's Bible class, will officiate and will be assisted by Dr. A. L. Buckner of Clio, S. C., uncle of the deceased, and the Rev. W. G. Ham- ilton, pastor of the New Calvary Ne- gro Presbyterian church of Asheville.

Active pallbearers, selected by Mr. Roberts some time before his death, will be: Dr. L. E. Davis, neighbor of Mr. Roberts for many years; Harry L. Nettles, former Buncombe county legislator; Chief of Police W. H. Messer; George Pennell, city corpora- tion counsel; A. C. Choate, former superintendent of the city water de- partment; and Howard Ballard, city smoke inspector.

Honorary Pallbearers

Honorary pallbearers will be Mayor Harry W. Plummer, Attorney Gen- eral Dennis G. Brummitt, W. M. Smathers, Senator Josiah William Bailey, Dr. Thurman D. Kitchin, president of Wake Forest college; W. B. Plemmons, Douglas Eller, Don C. Young, W. G. Fortune, E. C. Greene, Dan W. Hill, John A. Goode, Clyde S. Reed, Plato D. Ebbs, Thomas Bell, John Russell, T. C. Miller, John Mc- Elroy, Hardy Chambers, of Weaver- ville, Dr. Dan E. Sevier, Dr. J. G. Woodward, Newton M. Anderson, Dr. Charles S. Norburn, John C. Caddell, and Marion Weaver.

Mrs. Roberts yesterday declined to allow the body of her husband to lie in state in the foyer of the city hall. A representative of the family said that the widow of the ex-mayor did not give any reasons for her re- fusal to allow friends of the deceased to view his body in the city hall.

The Buncombe County Bar Asso- ciation Wednesday night were spon- soring the plan to have the body lie in state. Guards from the bar as- sociation, police and fire depart- ments were to be posted about the casket of the former official.

Various organizations, civic, fra- ternal, and political, yesterday ex- pressed willingness to participate in the final tribute Sunday to the late mayor. Members of the Democratic Executive Committee were expected to draft suitable resolutions on the death of Mr. Roberts.

The condition of Mrs. Roberts last night was reported to be somewhat

To Church With Gran

As a tribute to the memory of George Washington, P and Mrs. Hoover, accompanied by their granddaughter, Peggy services at Christ church, Alexandria, Va., sitting in the pe the first president. Photo shows President Hoover and his after the services

President Warns Bo
Will Set Bad Prec

SCRIPPS-HOWARD SYNDICATE BUYS NEW YORK WORLD

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. (Friday). (AP)—The New York World news- papers were sold to the Scripps- Howard Syndicate early this morning for approximately $5,- 000,000.

The contract was signed by the three Pulitzer brothers, publish- ers of The Morning World, The Evening World, and The Sunday World, and by Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of Scripps- Howard. The purchase goes into effect with the first edition of The Evening World today.

COURT DECISION SENDS 6 NEGROES

Needy Vetera
To Be In Min
Tells Con

WASHINGTON, D. President Hoover to veterans loan bill.

In a message to the the legislation "u standpoint of the vete and unwise from th all the people."

Overwhelmingly ap house and senate, th crease the amount borrow on his bonus 22 1-2 to 50 per ce value. Its congressio stood ready to make a override the veto.

The President said impose a potential $1,700,000,000, if all for loans, less some ready loaned. He repea administrator Mines' es dollars would be requ later the bill.

Must Borrow

"There not being treasury to meet su he declared, "the go borrow this sum thro the reserve fund sho

are absent
opposition to his ree caucus which was
d doors with a num-
ans absent.
e determined until nizes next session
rth or a Democratic bly Representative will be named. The
have 218 seats, the
nd Farmer-Laborites
congress.
of independent Re-
to attend the cau-
use they did not dend by conclusions

Not Attend

ld be learned, there cans who did not at-
Sparks, Hoch, Hope,
nbertson of Kansas;
d Christgau of Minlia of New York, and
r, Cooper, Kading
Wisconsin.
-elect Boland of lected as the nomi-
ajor parties, likewise
This was interpreted
s he would list him-rat in House organi-absentee was Repre-
y of New Jersey, who dissatisfaction with ting his state. Sevives were absent be-

RSONS DIE HURRICANE
S OVER FIJI

Storms Also
uthern Italy
Drown 20

eb. 27. (Friday) (AP)— nd thirty persons were
in the worst hurri-
ienced in the Fiji Is-the victims were Fiji-ndians. One European
l.
devastated the dis-
oka, Ba and Lautoka, communication until ndred died in Signa-
Ba and 50 in Lau-
re expected to die of cold before help are Ba-Lautoka Railway

the tracks, killing one luring many.
struck by three sheets aneously, was cut to lning 500 gallons of rled 60 feet. A house

top of another.
s Hurricane
f wind from leaden
morning developed inurricane at 3:30 p. m.
3 a. m. the next
h torrential rain

other buildings were scene of terrible deso-

was done in a narrow from Suva. The rug-
made inaccessible for

NIC STORMS
ly, Feb. 26. (AP)—Cy-which have battered

Turn To Page Four

ANS WILL RIAL NEXT

dry leaders. They were Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, of the Anti-Saloon league, the Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, member of the executive committee of the World League Against Alcohol, and the Rev. John Barton, a leader of the prohibition movement in the Southern Baptist church.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 26. (AP) The $40,000,000 banking house of Caldwell and company and the equally large Bancokentucky company joined resources in the dark days before their doom and went down together, the legislative investigators were informed today by J. Dewitt Carter, high official of the Caldwell organization.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26. (AP) President Hoover today signed a bill making it possible for the judge and the district attorney of thinly populated districts to dispense with calling a grand jury together unless they felt one was needed.

ROME, Feb. 26. (AP)—British and Italian experts spent six hours today shuffling paper warships from category to category in their search for a settlement satisfactory to Italy of Franco-Italian naval differences.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26. (AP) The senate tonight adopted a resolution condemning any attempt by the state department to approve or disapprove the flotation of foreign securities in this country.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 26. (AP) The naval construction program laid aside, big navy advocates succeeded today in obtaining by a vote of 205 to 68 house approval of a bill to authorize $30,000,000 to modernize three battleships.

PASADENA, Cal., Feb. 26 (AP)—Albert Einstein rounded out his visit to California today with his last public appearance here by again expressing faith in the youth of today. He leaves tomorrow for Berlin.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb 26 (AP) After adding greatly to the appropriations approved by the house, the senate tonight passed the second deficiency bill carrying more than $100,000,000 to meet emergency needs of a multitude of federal activities for the current fiscal year.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26 (AP)—A vigorous defense of the government's program for inland waterways development, together with charges that it represented "futile and unfair competition of government subsidized transportation with carriers by rail," were heard tonight by the New York group of the National Security Owners association.

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 26 (AP)—E. E. Morgan, young business executive, stuck to his story today that the fatal wounding of George Rice, 24-year-old attorney in the fashionable Morgan apartment Wednesday night, was accidental. Beyond a brief statement to this effect, Morgan would make no further comment from his cell in city jail. He is charged with murder.

lton, pastor of the New Calvary Negro Presbyterian church of Asheville.

Active pallbearers, selected by Mr. Roberts some time before his death, will be: Dr. L. E. Davis, neighbor of Mr. Roberts for many years; Harry L. Nettles, former Buncombe county legislator; Chief of Police W. H. Messer, George Pennell, city corporation counsel; A. C. Choate, former superintendent of the city water department; and Howard Ballard, city smoke inspector.

Honorary Pallbearers

Honorary pallbearers will be: Mayor Harry W. Plummer, Attorney General Dennis G. Brummitt, W. M. Smathers, Senator Josiah William Bailey, Dr. Thurman D. Kitchin, president of Wake Forest college; W. B. Plemmons, Douglas Eller, Don C. Young, W. G. Fortune, E. C. Greene, Dan W. Hill, John A. Goode, Clyde S. Reed, Plato D. Ebbs, Thomas Bell, John Russell, T. C. Miller, John McElroy, Hardy Chambers, of Weaverville, Dr. Dan E. Sevier, Dr. J. G. Woodward, Newton M. Anderson, Dr. Charles S. Norburn, John C. Caddell, and Marion Weaver.

Mrs. Roberts yesterday declined to allow the body of her husband to lie in state in the foyer of the city hall. A representative of the family said that the widow of the ex-mayor did not give any reasons for her refusal to allow friends of the deceased to view his body in the city hall.

The Buncombe County Bar Association Wednesday night were sponsoring the plan to have the body lie in state. Guards from the bar association, police and fire departments were to be posted about the casket of the former official.

Various organizations civic, fraternal, and political yesterday expressed willingness to participate in the final tribute Sunday to the late mayor. Members of the Democratic Executive Committee were expected to draft suitable resolutions on the death of Mr. Roberts.

The condition of Mrs. Roberts last night was reported to be somewhat improved. She withstood the shock of her husband's death well Wednesday afternoon but Wednesday night was placed under the care of her physician. Her son, Edward Roberts, who lives in Albuquerque, N. M., left that city Wednesday night and should arrive here Saturday at noon if proper train connections are made.

The body of Mr. Roberts will be laid at rest in Green Hill cemetery in West Asheville by the side of his mother and young daughter, who died several months ago. The Buncombe County Bar Association will attend the funeral [illegible]. Delegations from [illegible]

Please Turn To Page Four

NOTED BUILDER OF RAILROADS DIES FROM INFLUENZA

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 26 (AP) [illegible] Barnum, E. E. [illegible] builder died here at 6:45 p. m. [illegible]

Death came as the result of an attack of influenza [illegible] by complications [illegible] he was 74 years old.

[illegible] en route to [illegible] state [illegible] derwent a major operation [illegible] been dangerously ill [illegible] last ten days his condition had improved [illegible] had expressed [illegible] recovery.

As a tribute to the memory of George Washington, Pres[illegible] and Mrs. Hoover, accompanied by their granddaughter, Peggy A[illegible] services at Christ church, Alexandria, Va., sitting in the pew [illegible] the first president. Photo shows President Hoover and his litt[illegible] after the services.

President Warns Bon[illegible]
Will Set Bad Prece[illegible]

SCRIPPS-HOWARD SYNDICATE BUYS NEW YORK WORLD

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. (Friday). (AP)—The New York World newspapers were sold to the Scripps-Howard Syndicate early this morning for approximately $5,000,000.

The contract was signed by the three Pulitzer brothers, publishers of The Morning World, The Evening World, and The Sunday World, and by Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of Scripps-Howard. The purchase goes into effect with the first edition of The Evening World today.

COURT DECISION SENDS 6 NEGROES TO CHAIR TODAY

Palmetto State Jurists Decide Slayers Had Fair Hearings

[illegible]

Needy Veteran[illegible]
To Be In Mino[illegible]
—Tells Cong[illegible]

WASHINGTON, D. C., [illegible] President Hoover today [illegible] veterans loan bill.

In a message to the ho[illegible] the legislation "unwi[illegible] standpoint of the veterans [illegible] and unwise from the s[illegible] all the people."

Overwhelmingly appr[illegible] house and senate, the b[illegible] crease the amount a v[illegible] borrow on his bonus cert[illegible] 22 1-2 to 50 per cent [illegible] value. Its congressional [illegible] stood ready to make a pro[illegible] override the veto.

The President said th[illegible] imposes a potential cos[illegible] $1,709,000,000, if all ve[illegible] for loans, less some $3[illegible] ready loaned. He repeated [illegible] ministrator Hines' estim[illegible] dollars would be require[illegible] after the bill.

Must Borrow S[illegible]

"There not being a p[illegible] treasury to meet such [illegible] he declared, "the gover[illegible] borrow this sum through [illegible] the reserve fund securi[illegible] with further issues or w[illegible] impose further taxation.

The sole appeal made [illegible] opening of the bonus act [illegible] that funds from the nati[illegible] should be provided to [illegible] distress as the result of [illegible] and business depression.

There are veterans [illegible] and in need today in o[illegible] many others of our pe[illegible] the other, are be[illegible] the same necessities of [illegible] devised committees in t[illegible] the country affected by t[illegible] depression.

The governments and [illegible] are giving prefer[illegible] [illegible] employment [illegible] and should be made [illegible] our people.

Inquiry indicates the [illegible] being given throughout [illegible] also indicates th[illegible] of veterans in need [illegible]

[illegible] Hardship

The president also [illegible] allow veterans to borro[illegible] 50 per cent would work [illegible] the area and depend[illegible] [illegible] will have the [illegible] of their certificate and [illegible] of adequate insur[illegible]

The need of our pe[illegible] [illegible] decrease in the numbe[illegible] unemployment for the [illegible] the veterans are [illegible] [illegible] Congress [illegible] [illegible] requirements [illegible] he said.

Dropping the [illegible] [illegible] of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] opposition to the sud course which was

d door with a thun-
the silence.

determined that have been session to be a Democratic by Representative
will be named. The
have 218 seats, the d Farmer-Labor lea congress
of independent Re-
to attend the caucu
he story did not ded by conditions

for action
be learned, there who did not at-
Borah, Nye, Hope,
Norris of Kansas,
Gillette of Minne-
of New York, and
Cooper, Keating
Wisconsin.
Belief of ed as the sound-by parties. Therefore
This was interpreted
he would not stand to Rome organi-
Senator Hamilton Fish of New Jersey, who conversation with Hay the state Sec-
were about be-

ISONS DIE
URRICANE
OVER FIJI

Storms Also ithern Italy
Drown 20

6 27. (Friday) (AP)
d thirty persons were
in the worst hurripened in the Fiji Is-he victims were Fijidians One European

devastated the dis-
ka, Ba and Lautoka.
communication until dred died in Signa-
Ba and 50 in Lau-
e expected to die of old before help ar-

Ba-Lautoka Railway
he tracks, killing one ring many.
truck by three sheets neously, was cut to

ing 500 gallons of led 60 feet. A house
op of another.
Hurricane
wind from leaden
morning developed inrricane at 3:30 p. m.
3 a. m. the next
torrential rain

ther buildings were ene of terrible deso-

was done in a narrow
from Suva. The rug-
made inaccessible for

NIC STORMS
y, Feb. 26. (AP)—Cy-which have battered

Turn To Page Four)

ANS WILL PLAY NEXT

M. Cherrington, of the Anti-Saloon league, the Rev. E. C. Dinwiddie, member of the executive committee of the World League against Alcohol, and the Rev. John Random, a leader of the prohibition movement in the Southern Baptist church.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 26. (AP) The $6,000,000 banking house of Caldwell and company and the equally large Beneficentcity company joined requiems in the dark days before their doors and went down together, the legislative investigators were informed today by J. Lewis Carter, high official of the Caldwell organization.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb 26 (AP) President Hoover today signed a bill making it possible for the judge and the district attorney of densely populated districts to dispense with calling a grand jury together unless they feel one was needed.

ROME, Feb. 26. (AP)—British and Italian experts spent six hours today shifting paper warships from category to category in their search for a settlement satisfactory to Italy of Franco-Italian naval differences.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Feb 26 (AP) The senate tonight adopted a resolution condemning any attempt by the state department to approve or disapprove the flotation of foreign securities in this country.

WASHINGTON, D. C. Feb 26 (AP) The naval construction program laid aside, big navy advocates succeeded today in obtaining by a vote of 205 to 68 house approval of a bill to authorize $30,000,000 to modernize three battleships.

PASADENA, Cal., Feb 26 (AP) Albert Einstein rounded out his visit to California today with his last public appearance here by again expressing faith in the youth of today. He leaves tomorrow for Berlin.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb 26 (AP) After adding greatly to the appropriations approved by the house, the senate tonight passed the second deficiency bill carrying more than $100,000,000 to meet emergency needs of a multitude of federal activities for the current fiscal year.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26. (AP)—A vigorous defense of the government's program for inland waterways development, together with charges that it represented "futile and unfair competition of government subsidized transportation with carriers by rail," were heard tonight by the New York group of the National Security Owners' association.

JACKSON, Miss., Feb. 26. (AP)—E. E. Morgan, young business executive, stuck to his story today that the fatal wounding of George Rice, 24-year-old attorney in the fashionable Morgan apartment Wednesday night, was accidental. Beyond a brief statement to this effect, Morgan would make no further comment from his cell in city jail. He is charged with murder.

gue Presbyterian church of Asheville.

Active pallbearers, selected by Mr. Roberts some time before his death, will be: Dr. L. E. Davis, neighbor of Mr. Roberts for many years; Harry L. Merrill, former Buncombe county legislator; Chief of Police W. H. Messer, George Pennell, city corporation counsel; A. C. Choate, former superintendent of the city water department; and Howard Ballard, city smoke inspector.

Honorary Pallbearers

Honorary pallbearers will be: Mayor Harry W. Plummer, Attorney General Dennis G. Brummitt, W. M. Stratton, Senator Josiah William Bailey, Dr. Thurman D. Kitchin, president of Wake Forest college; W. S. Plemmons, Douglas Eller, Don C. Young, W. O. Fortune, E. C. Greene, Dan W. Hill, John A. Goode, Clyde S. Reed, Plato D. Ebbs, Thomas Bell, John Russell, T. C. Miller, John McElroy, Hardy Chambers, of Weaverville, Dr. Dan E. Sevier, Dr. J. G. Woodward, Newton M. Anderson, Dr. Charles S. Norburn, John C. Caddell, and Marion Weaver.

Mrs. Roberts yesterday declined to allow the body of her husband to lie in state in the foyer of the city hall. A representative of the family said that the widow of the ex-mayor did not give any reasons for her refusal to allow friends of the deceased to view his body in the city hall.

The Buncombe County Bar Association Wednesday night were sponsoring the plan to have the body lie in state. Guards from the bar association, police and fire departments were to be posted about the casket of the former official.

Various organizations, civic, fraternal, and political, yesterday expressed willingness to participate in the final tribute Sunday to the late mayor. Members of the Democratic Executive Committee were expected to draft suitable resolutions on the death of Mr. Roberts.

The condition of Mrs. Roberts last night was reported to be somewhat improved. She withstood the shock of her husband's death well Wednesday afternoon but Wednesday night was placed under the care of her physician. Her son, Edward Roberts, who lives in Albuquerque, N. M., left that city Wednesday night and should arrive here Saturday at noon if proper train connections are made.

The body of Mr. Roberts will be laid at rest in Green Hill cemetery in West Asheville by the side of his mother and young daughter who died several months ago. The Buncombe County Bar association will attend the funeral service in a body. Delegations from the fire and police

—(Please Turn To Page Four)

NOTED BUILDER OF RAILROADS DIES FROM INFLUENZA

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb 26 (AP)—Samuel Hill, well known railroad builder, died here at 6:45 p. m.

Death came as the result of an attack of intestinal influenza followed by complications, physicians said. He was 74 years old.

Hill fell ill here February 9 while en route to Salem, Ore, to address the state legislature. Last week he underwent a major operation and had been dangerously ill since then. The last few days his condition had been improving and hospital attendants had expressed some hope for his recovery.

WWNC Is Joined In New Columbia Chain Hookup

The formation of a new unit of the Columbia Broadcasting System in the south to be ... the Dixie network stations are WWNC, Asheville; WGST, Atlanta; WBRC, Birmingham; WBT, Charlotte; WDOD, Chattanooga; KLRA, Little Rock;

As a tribute to the memory of George Washington, Pres and Mrs. Hoover, accompanied by their granddaughter, Peggy A services at Christ church, Alexandria, Va., sitting in the pew the first president. Photo shows President Hoover and his litt after the services.

President Warns Bon
Will Set Bad Prece

SCRIPPS-HOWARD SYNDICATE BUYS NEW YORK WORLD

NEW YORK, Feb. 27. (Friday). (AP)—The New York World newspapers were sold to the Scripps-Howard Syndicate early this morning for approximately $5,000,000.

The contract was signed by the three Pulitzer brothers, publishers of The Morning World, The Evening World, and The Sunday World, and by Roy W. Howard, chairman of the board of Scripps-Howard. The purchase goes into effect with the first edition of The Evening World today.

COURT DECISION SENDS 6 NEGROES TO CHAIR TODAY

Palmetto State Jurists Decide Slayers Had Fair Hearings

COLUMBIA, S. C., Feb 26 (AP)—The last legal avenue of escape from the electric chair for five condemned negroes was closed late today when the State Supreme Court refused to intervene.

As a result, the five together with a sixth negro who is under sentence to die for a different crime, are to be executed before sunrise tomorrow.

The decision was rendered after a two and a half hour hearing before the court, which had been called in special session to hear arguments that the negroes had not been given a fair trial.

Unanimous Decision

The justices, however were unanimous in refusing to grant the requested habeas corpus order.

The time set for the first execution is 5 a. m., and one by one the negroes will be marched from the death cells to the adjoining chamber where the grim electric chair awaits to receive its victims.

They are under sentence to die for two murders. The five negroes, Robert "Greasy" Eldredge, John Ackwright, James "Snow" Hickman, George Bird and Ernest "Tsed" Thomas, are confessed slayers of B. W. Hendrix, Lexington county merchant.

The other, Tillman Poozer, is also a confessed murderer. He killed C. D. Mills, Cayce night watchman, to steal his money.

Both crimes were committed in

—(Please Turn To Page Four)

Needy Veteran
To Be In Mino
—Tells Cong

WASHINGTON, D. C., President Hoover today veterans loan bill.

In a message to the ho the legislation "unwi standpoint of the veterai and unwise from the a all the people."

Overwhelmingly appr House and senate, the b crease the amount a v borrow on his bonus cert 22 1-2 to 50 per cent value. Its congressional stood ready to make a pro override the veto.

The President said th imposes a potential ca $1,700,000,000, if all ve for loans, less some $3 ready loaned. He repeated ministrator Hines' estim dollars would be require later the bill.

Must Borrow S

"There not being a p treasury to meet such he declared, "the gover borrow this sum throug the reserve fund securi with further issues or w impose further taxation.

"The sole appeal made opening of the bonus act that funds from the nati should be provided to distress as the result of and business depression.

"There are veterans and in need today in c many others of our pe like the others, are bel the basic necessities of devoted committees in t the country affected by t or drought.

"The governments and ployers are giving prefer erans in employment. T is and should be a matte to our people.

"Inquiry indicates the is being given throughout and it also indicates th ber of veterans in need lief is a minor percen whole."

Sees Hardshi

The president also a allow veterans to borro 50 per cent would work on the wives and depend erans who will have use of their certificate and prived of necessary insur

"The need of our peo a decrease in the burden unemployment, yet the clude the veterans) are b forced toward higher ta lessened employment by this," he said.

Terming the legislati importance itself, the P "of much graver import whole tendency to open treasury to a thousan many admirable in itsel but in which the pro or do not care to see the beginnings many of them consume more and more ings and the labor of ou

"In aggregate they to lens beyond the ability ... ry normally to pay and ... e importance, each of

ORUM

y ages, if ever, before another comes who can fill to the full- the place so grievously made nt by the spiritual coronation of non A. Miller. Asheville—now of imes—can ill afford the bereave- t caused by his going.

HUR TALMAGE ABERNETHY.

itherford College, Feb. 24.

HE DUALITY OF MIND AND SPIRIT

or of The Citizen:

nd is the connecting link be- n the physical and the spiritual d, and without mind there could r be a new creature of the spirit re. The continuity of life predi- the life infusion by way of the l. Therefore it becomes evident man without mental facilities d be incapable of comprehend- or attaining the spiritual realm being. A non-existing spiritual d would preclude a physical ex- ce and the priority of the spir- in quality and in the scheme hings as well as in time is the edent cause. Therefore the hy- ecated plan as to the spiritual vident, and the truth of biogen- is proven to the exclusion of other deduction when it comes e definition as to the first great e. In the spiritual realm we must ge between the finite and the lite, and say, when and where view it just as we would the dity of space and time, and owledge our limitations only by physical inceptions.

hen we consider this subject the standpoint of the Bible re carried on the wings of faith ur acceptation of the beginnings ings, and we must accept or re- according to the evident incli- ons as to these truths. No one the moment would reject the statements of the Bible. In the nning was God's continuity es- shed, He who had no beginning, simply "Is." There ends our , where the finite is limited by infinite.

at the all pervading truth is all mind is one mind (hence ition), and the infusion of the tual is from the diffusion of spiritual mind, or the universal d, and lying back of this is that t First Cause, which must of sity precede any and all effects, fact coming within the limita- of the objective mind is of suf- nt proof to indicate clearly that t becomes effect on both the tual and physical plain.

ere is no static relations, all is mic ever moving, straining, con- ing, energizing, change and de- indicative of precedent based on law of continuity, as the supreme Therefore the relativity of the ical or mortal is only limited in scope of inception, and can only overcome by the relations of the ctive to the universality of gs.

e theory of spontaneous genera- must of necessity have a certain tation, and is only true to a n point, that is to the first Great se, beyond which there is no be- . The physical concept thereby ts the law of continuity: beyond point there is no point. This is n where the finite is limited by human perspicuity.

e being under our physical limi- ons, and the only way from un- these is through the ascendency the physical into the spiritual.

ROBERTS RITES SET FOR SUNDAY

Hour Of Funeral Is Set For Three O'clock In Afternoon

—(Continued From Page One)

departments and representatives of the municipal government will also attend the rites.

Telegrams

Throughout the day yesterday hundreds of North Carolina friends of the late mayor wired their sympathy to Mrs. Roberts and members of the family. A score or more of telephone calls were received at the Roberts home, 134 Brevard road, last night. One of the telegrams came from Dennis G. Brummitt, attorney general of North Carolina, who had served in the state legislature with Mr. Roberts.

Senator Josiah William Bailey sent the following wire from Washington: "Warmest sympathy from Mrs. Bailey and myself to you and family. Your husband was one of my dearest friends and a noble citizen, a patriotic and high-minded North Carolinian. His death is an irreparable loss to us all."

Mr. Roberts was a close friend of the North Carolina senator. During the Bailey senatorial campaign the deceased was a member of his campaign committee.

The city commissioners yesterday passed resolutions of sympathy on the untimely death of the former city chief executive. The resolutions were introduced by Mayor Harry W. Plummer. They follow.

"Whereas, the board of commissioners had heard with profound regret of the death of the Honorable Gallatin Roberts, for more than seven years Mayor-Commisisoner of public accounts and finances of the City of Asheville.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the board of commisisoners of the City of Asheville:

"That the meeting of the board of commissioners of this date be adjourned in honor of his memory."

Convey Sympathy

George Pennel, city corporation counsel and intimate friend of the late mayor, was instructed by Mayor Plummer to convey to members of Mr. Roberts' family the deepest sympathy of the board.

"No one could ever question Gallatin Roberts' love for his city," Mayor Plummer said during the meeting of the commissioners yesterday morning. "I hope the people of Asheville will take to heart the wish and appeal expressed in his final message."

The body of Mr. Roberts will be taken to his home tonight. More than 50 negro citizens of the city called at the Clayton-Hyer undertaking home last night to view the body of Mr. Roberts. The late mayor had displayed a keen interest in negro welfare work of the city. On numerous occasions he was called upon to open negro conventions and church conferences here.

All city employes at the municipal building will attend the services Sunday in a body. Details of the

LOVE'S PRISO

By Barbara Webb

Coyyright by Public Ledger

SYNOPSIS

BETH SHANNON, after falling headlong in love with her employer, PHILIP DANE, knew that she had lost any chance of winning his love when his engagement to

CAROLINE GIBBONS, a society girl, was announced. Beth would have liked to give up her job, but she had borrowed money to send her invalid mother South and did not dare to do so. Along with

ARNOLD STONE, an older man in the office, and NED and FRANCES HAVENS, Beth has gone to a night club to celebrate Frances' winning a prize for a clothes budget. While Beth is dancing with Ned she sees Phil and Caroline come in.

AN UNEXPCETED MEETING

Installment 29

The more Beth thought about it the angrier she got at Arnold. She knew that often in the past he had spoken of her to Phil; knew, too that he had arranged for Phil to be present at the production of "Love Is All Right," and suspected him of having arranged various things to impress Phil with herself as a person. For him to have planned this meeting, once Phil's engagement was announced, was unwarranted interference. When the dance was over she went back to the table and seized an opportunity of speaking to Arnold alone, drawing him aside from the others and talking in a low tone.

"Did you see who just came in?" she asked accusingly.

"No." His astonishment was sincere as he followed the direction of her glance. "Oh, Beth, truly I didn't have any idea they would be here! But since they are, why not accept it as an entirely natural happening? This place is quite new, recently opened, and it's quite customary for people like Phil and Caroline to inspect these new places when they open. Truly, Beth, I did not know they were going to come here."

"All right then," she said ungraciously, "but now that they are here, I'd like to leave right away."

"Running off?" he asked.

"Call it what you like," she said impatiently, "I want to go."

"But you have other people to consider, Beth. Frances and Ned are having a good time—there's a revue at midnight which is rather good—Phil and Caroline may not even see us."

A Traitor

"They see us now." Beth answered, bowing her head in answer to Phil's gesture of greeting, while Arnold waved his hand, "but I guess you're right, they may not attempt to talk with us—they're turning away."

Troubled in self-conscious, she resumed her seat at the table while Arnold went over to say good evening to Caroline.

"Same little girl friend, Arnold?" Caroline asked with a bare flicker of a glance in Beth's direction. "That's what they're called now, now, isn' it? I take it that in the office I'm known as Phil's girl friend."

"And a very proper title, too," Arnold said easily. "How are you, Phil? This is quite a slick little place, isn't it?"

"I hate 'em all," Phil grumbled. "Caroline dragged me here—the Vannings and the Duranda are coming in soon and we're all supposed to have a hot time tonight."

"Phil wants to dance with his little stenographer," Caroline put in. "I told him if he did he couldn't dance with me—I think it's the limit the way there isn't a place any more where you can go without running into everybody from bootblacks to bootleggers."

"I'm giving the party tonight," Arnold told her.

"Sorry," Caroline was not abashed a whit. "Sorry not for what I said, Arnold, but because to me you're a traitor to your class in encouraging people like that girl to think they're the equals of others who are well born and well bred."

Arnold made a stiff little bow. "I'm quite rebuked," he said. And he made his way back to Beth and Ned and Frances.

"Whew," Phil gave a half-whistle when he was gone; "you were pretty rough on Arnold, old thing."

"I meant to be. I feel sure he's done a lot for that little gold digger and why she doesn't marry him I can't see. I imagine she could."

"Maybe she doesn't love him."

Victory

Caroline tossed her head. "What difference does that make to a girl like that? I simply think she wants to play around without any respon-

Gums That Bleed —Mean Pyorrhea

If your gums bleed easily; if they are sore and red, instead of hard and pink—pyorrhea threatens you! Doctors know that pyorrhea causes heart trouble, rheumatism, anemia, neuritis and nervous troubles.

Creosene is a new home treatment that quickly banishes the danger of pyorrhea. Contains many germ-destroying ingredients that give you a healthy mouth quickly. Bleeding gums and soreness frequently stop in 1 day. Teeth tighten up, pus stops oozing and you are free of all your mouth troubles within 3 weeks, or your money back.

Don't take chances with dangerous pyorrhea, which undermines your health. Get full size bottle Creosene today at any drug store.—Advt.

New MILLINERY
ONE PRICE
The Model $1.77
18 Patton Ave.

Feen-a-mint

cated plan as to the spiritual ident, and the truth of biogeny is proven to the exclusion of other deduction when it comes e definition as to the first great . In the spiritual realm we must e between the finite and the te, and say, when and where view it just as we would the ity of space and time, and wledge our limitations only by physical inceptions.

en we consider this subject
the standpoint of the Bible
e carried on the wings of faith
r acceptation of the beginnings ings, and we must accept or re-according to the evident inclinns as to these truths. No one the moment would reject the statements of the Bible. In the ning was God's continuity eshed, He who had no beginning, simply "Is." There ends our where the finite is limited by nfinite.

at the all pervading truth is all mind is one mind (hence tion), and the infusion of the ual is from the diffusion of piritual mind, or the universal
, and lying back of this is that First Cause, which must of sity precede any and all effects, fact coming within the limitaof the objective mind is of suft proof to indicate clearly that becomes effect on both the ual and physical plain.

ere is no static relations, all is mic ever moving, straining, conng, energizing, change and dendicative of precedent based on aw of continuity, as the supreme Therefore the relativity of the cal or mortal is only limited in scope of inception, and can only vercome by the relations of the tive to the universality of gs.

e theory of spontaneous generamust of necessity have a certain ation, and is only true to a point, that is to the first Great s, beyond which there is no be-
. The physical concept thereby s the law of continuity; beyond point there is no point. This is where the finite is limited by human perspicuity.

being under our physical limi-ns, and the only way from un-hese is through the ascendency he physical into the spiritual.
we become new (spiritual) ures, and by this process is the bility of our attainment in the oming of our physical limita-
. It is then we shall know even e are known. Not as a human as a spirit. Thereby we enter the universality or conceptions, become subject to and in line
the continuity of law. This is e we become the architects of building by choice of the mal of which it is constructed. And is placed in the proper posiby the chief builder, who is st, the active agent of the Great Cause—effect. Thereby the ical has soared onward and up-ascending and descending acing to our receptativity or retivity by which we are establish-our free moral agency as given allowed.

erefore the terrestrial influences merged in the celestial environs thereby become freed from the lly life. There the intuitive re-h discloses the most marvelous astounding facts.

STARLING F. ROBERTS.

ville, N. C.
25, 1931.

ANGE BARRELS CARRYING NEEDY

Lessening Of Call

Mr. Roberts.

Senator Josiah William Bailey sent the following wire from Washington: "Warmest sympathy from Mrs. Bailey and myself to you and family. Your husband was one of my dearest friends and a noble citizen, a patriotic and high-minded North Carolinian. His death is an irreparable loss to us all."

Mr. Roberts was a close friend of the North Carolina senator. During the Bailey senatorial campaign the deceased was a member of his campaign committee.

The city commissioners yesterday passed resolutions of sympathy on the untimely death of the former city chief executive. The resolutions were introduced by Mayor Harry W. Plummer. They follow.

"Whereas, the board of commissioners had heard with profound regret of the death of the Honorable Gallatin Roberts, for more than seven years Mayor-Commisisoner of public accounts and finances of the City of Asheville.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the board of commisisoners of the City of Asheville:

"That the meeting of the board of commissioners of this date be adjourned in honor of his memory."

Convey Sympathy

George Pennel, city corporation counsel and intimate friend of the late mayor, was instructed by Mayor Plummer to convey to members of Mr. Roberts' family the deepest sympathy of the board.

"No one could ever question Gallatin Roberts' love for his city," Mayor Plummer said during the meeting of the commissioners yesterday morning. "I hope the people of Asheville will take to heart the wish and appeal expressed in his final message."

The body of Mr. Roberts will be taken to his home tonight. More than 50 negro citizens of the city called at the Clayton-Hyer undertaking home last night to view the body of Mr. Roberts. The late mayor had displayed a keen interest in negro welfare work of the city. On numerous occasions he was called upon to open negro conventions and church conferences here.

All city employes at the municipal building will attend the services Sunday in a body. Details of the interment of Mr. Roberts at the cemetery will be in charge of Charles Edmonds, assistant superintendent of the cemetery, who occupied the same seat with the deceased more than 40 years ago at a little school house in the Flat Creek township.

Mr. Roberts is survived by his widow, one son, Edward Roberts; a daughter, Margaret; and a brother, J. H. Roberts, of the Mills River section.

THE QUESTION BOX

What is the origin of the names of the days?

The days were named after Saxon gods: Sun, Moon, Tuisco, Woden, Thor, Friga and Seater.

GUILLOTIN

How did the guillotin gets its name?

The guillotin was named after its inventor, Dr. Guillotin, who introduced it during the French Revolution and later died by it.

BIBLE

What language was used in the original books of the Bible?

The Old Testament was written in Hebrew; the New Testament in Greek.

Installment 29

The more Beth thought about it the angrier she got at Arnold. She knew that often in the past he had spoken of her to Phil; knew, too, that he had arranged for Phil to be present at the production of "Love Is All Right," and suspected him of having arranged various things to impress Phil with herself as a person. For him to have planned this meeting, once Phil's engagement was announced, was unwarranted interference. When the dance was over she went back to the table and seized an opportunity of speaking to Arnold alone, drawing him aside.

"But you have other people to consider, Beth. Frances and Ned are having a good time—there's a revue at midnight which is rather good—Phil and Caroline may not even see us."

A Traitor

"They see us now," Beth answered, bowing her head in answer to Phil's gesture of greeting, while Arnold waved his hand, "but I guess you're right, they may not attempt to talk with us—they're turning away."

Troubled in self-conscious, she resumed her seat at the table while Arnold went over to say good evening to Caroline.

"Same little girl friend, Arnold?" Caroline asked with a bare flicker of a glance in Beth's direction. "That's what they're called now, now, isn' it? I take it that in the office I'm known as Phil's girl friend."

"And a very proper title, too," Arnold said easily. "How are you, Phil? This is quite a slick little place, isn't it?"

"I hate 'em all," Phil grumbled. "Caroline dragged me here—the Vannings and the Duranda are coming in soon and we're all supposed to have a hot time tonight."

"Phil wants to dance with his little stenographer," Caroline put in. "I told him, if he did he couldn't dance with me—I think it's the limit the way there isn't a place any more where you can go without running into everybody from bootblacks to bootleggers."

"I'm giving the party tonight," Arnold told her

"Sorry." Caroline was not abashed a whit. "Sorry not for what I said, Arnold, but because to me you're a traitor to your class in encouraging people like that girl to think they're the equals of others who are well born and well bred."

Arnold made a stiff little bow. "I'm quite rebuked," he said. And he made his way back to Beth and Ned and Frances.

"Whew," Phil gave a half-whistle when he was gone. "you were pretty rough on Arnold, old thing."

"I meant to be. I feel sure he's done a lot for that little gold digger and why she doesn't marry him I can't see. I imagine she could."

Maybe she doesn't love him."

Victory

Caroline tossed her head. "What difference does that make to a girl like that? I simply think she wants to play around without any responsibility as long as she can. Then when she can't stall any longer she'll snap him up.

Just the same, particularly if Arnold is going to marry her some day, I think I ought to go over and speak to them at least."

Caroline's eyes glinted dangerously. "I mean it, Phil. If you go over and speak to that girl, who is, after

Gums That Bleed —Mean Pyorrhea

If your gums bleed easily; if they are sore and red, instead of hard and pink—pyorrhea threatens you! Doctors know that pyorrhea causes heart trouble, rheumatism, anemia, neuritis and nervous troubles.

Creosene is a new home treatment that quickly banishes the danger of pyorrhea. Contains many germ-destroying ingredients that give you a healthy mouth quickly. Bleeding gums and soreness frequently stop in 1 day. Teeth tighten up, pus stops oozing and you are free of all your mouth troubles within 3 weeks, or your money back.

Don't take chances with dangerous pyorrhea, which undermines your health. Get full size bottle Creosene today at any drug store.—Advt.

New MILLINERY
ONE PRICE
The Model $1.77
18 Patton Ave.

Feen-a-mint

FOR CONSTIPATION
effective in smaller doses
SAFE SCIENTIFIC

TODAY & SATU
2 MORE BIG
Thousands of Pairs
Grade Nationally A MEN'S SHOES
EXTRA PAIR ONE DOLLAR!

rida to face a s ago.
Chicago - sentence passed icago.
d won its first reputed master that thrives on vice, gambling,

appear, belated-
d jury in 1929
Judge Wilkerntention was to nd suppress the vernment's evi-n records of an Bahama Islands,

his physician's was "confined

ddenness of the ng leader paused ig, rose to his
by a battalion
ired his way out

t Quit court to over-commented.
s of brown—the,
days of court—
corridor and he quad car to the
h his bodyguard.
rty under $5,000
mitment to jail days from next his attorneys to 80,000 property
liberty pending warrant issued Lyle in recogni-lace at the top
y" roster.
whose name has

To Page Two)

ES ARE UTED IN
O PRISON

, Feb. 27. (AP)—
D. Mills, aged man and B. W. n, county mer-
d by the State
at dawn today.
of them mem-
at had made a ns in the State,

as put to death
axe-murder of Cantrell (alias
James Hickman,
George Bird and
lled as the con-endrix, who was pted hold-up of

ed today for, 1930 net earnings of $419,957, equal to $1.32 a share on the common stock, compared with $1,049,986, or $3.27 a common share, in 1929.

BODY OF ROBERTS TO BE VIEWED BY FRIENDS AT HOME

Funeral Service Will Be Conducted At Church Sunday Afternoon

Friends of the late Edward Gallatin Roberts, former mayor of the city of Asheville for seven years, will be given an opportunity today to view the body of the late city chief executive. He will lie in state today at his former home, 134 Brevard road, West Asheville.

His son, Edward Roberts, who left Albuquerque, N. M., Wednesday evening upon receiving word that his father had committed suicide by shooting himself, will arrive in Asheville this morning on the Carolina Special of the Southern railway.

Funeral services for the late mayor will be held from the West Asheville Presbyterian church tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. Interment will be in Green Hill cemetery in West Asheville.

The Rev. W. F. Creson, pastor of the West Asheville Presbyterian

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

SMITHFIELD, Feb. 27. (AP)—Lieutenant R. F. Vance, Army aviator of Langley Field, Va., joined the "caterpillar club" this afternoon when he was forced to desert his blazing plane 2,500 feet above the center of Smithfield and parachute to the ground.

Lieutenant Vance was enroute from Montgomery, Ala., to Langley when a leaking gasoline line caused his ship to catch fire.

Dropping in his 'chute, the officer landed in telegraph wires in the heart of Smithfield. His ship fell on the emergency landing field nearby, where he was preparing to land when the flames became so intense he had to leave his ship.

The two-seated biplane was a total loss.

Lieutenant Vance suffered slight burns on the face and hands and was treated at the Johnston County hospital.

The jump was Lieutenant Vance's first in an emergency. He had been flying three years and his home is at Fredericksburg Va.

AMERICAN HEARD AT INQUEST OVER ACCIDENT VICTIM

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt, Feb. 27. (AP) B. O. Higdon of Hazelhurst, Miss., American purser aboard the Dollar liner President Hayes, testified today at the inquest in the death of Colin Campbell, a widely known British resident, who was killed Thursday by Higdon's revolver during a playful demonstration of firearms.

An Arab sentry before whom Higdon was said to be demonstrating a manual of arms when the accident occurred was another witness. The inquest was continued until tomorrow.

Campbell, who was managing partner in a local shipping firm, established the accidental nature of the shooting before he died.

Financial Giant, Broke, Held For Embezzlement

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Feb. 27. (AP)—James B. Brown, a country boy who became one of the city's financial giants only to crash into bankruptcy, was indicted in two courts here today, accused of embezzling and misapplication of more than $2,000,000 in bank funds.

The indictments, by a Federal and a State grand jury, were returned soon after the National Bank of Kentucky, one of the Brown's institutions, had been sold to the First National Bank, Louisville.

Brown is president of the National Bank of Kentucky and former president of the Bancokentucky Company a holding organization.

The State indictment charges Brown and two associates, W. T. Zurschniede, secretary and treasurer of the Bankockentucky Company and Charles F. Jones, cashier of the National Bank of Kentucky, with embezzling $2,000,000 of Bancokentucky funds in a transaction with Wakefield and Company brokers.

The Federal instrument accused Brown and Jones of misapplying $46,777.50 of the National Bank of Kentucky's funds through a purchase of Van Camp Packing Company common stock with Wakefield and Company as brokers.

sion.

More new bills were introduced today than on any one day thus far, the two houses received almost four score new proposals.

The first attempt during the session to change the State-wide prohibition law came with introduction of a bill to allow sale of medicinal liquor and another measure introduced would create a state port and terminals in Brunswick county at a cost not to exceed $1,500,000.

A committee substitute act to set up machinery for operation of the State supported six months school term was set as a special order for Monday night.

"Joker Bill"

Senator McLean, of Polk, introduced a "joker bill" in the Senate when he

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

SUMMARY OF NEWS

GENERAL

Al Capone draws six months sentence for contempt. —Page 1.

Veterans loan bill becomes law despite Hoover's veto. —Page 1.

Financial giant, broke, is held for embezzlement. —Page 1.

Frazer taken back to New Jersey to stand trial. —Page 1.

Three communists face deportation at Boston. —Page 5.

N. Y. police following winding trail in murder. —Page 6.

Big Bill Thompson accuses Hoover of broken promises. —Page 8.

Stock market experiences very fine regular session. —Page 10.

* * * *

STATE

Senate approves Conner road measure, 42 to 5. —Page 1.

Prof. Stillwell is author of new W. N. C. history. —Page 3.

Dowell lodges protests against proposed sales tax. —Page 7.

State college trustees discuss consolidation plan. —Page 7.

New plan calls for 28 state senate districts. —Page 7.

N. C. to share in allotments for public buildings —Page 8.

Bill for state to print school books is introduced. —Page 8.

Mrs. Margaret Davis Truitt, 83, of Swain county, dies —Page 8.

* * * *

LOCAL

Senate approves bill to donate postoffice site to city —Page 1.

Bill to permit board to cut school expenses approved. —Page 1.

Friends may view body of Colonel Roberts at home today. —Page 1.

Thomas J. Markins will address Women Citizens League. —Page 11.

Baptist Sunday School associations will meet Sunday. —Page 12.

Asheville gets new cleaning and pressing plant. —Page [illegible]

Good roads men from [illegible] inner 25-E Asheville [illegible]

Carpenter is victim [illegible] accident at bridge.

2-28-31

ASHEVILLE, N. C., SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1931

...y Dix's Letter Box

...band and Wife Who Are Making a ...e on $30 a Week—Cry-Baby Husband. ...h With a Fatal Fascination for Girls

May one who enjoys your column a great deal dis... the importance of the financial side of marriage? ... both college bred. Before our marriage over a year ago we were each making about $40 a week in a large city. On our marriage we moved to a smaller place, I went to housekeeping and he took a job with a good future, but that pays only $30 a week. We have never regretted this for a moment. We are even expecting a baby, to be paid for I must admit, from money saved before our marriage and not spent on a radio or a car or any of the other luxuries that most people think they need. Of course, we have to look at every nickel, as though we never expected to have another one, but we have each other, and we are convinced that if you have enough money for the bare necessities of life and have in addition, youth, health and love you are rich beyond the wildest dreams of avarice.

What it comes down to is this: Would you rather have real cream in your lonely coffee or share skimmed milk with the one you love best? This decision should not be difficult to any one with a modicum of backbone. Of course, I do not advise this for the very young. They have not yet had sufficient good times to realize that while fun is all right, it offers no permanent satisfaction.

...r 25 I am convinced that it is possible to be happy ...ost parts of the United States, not the large cities. ... week. Life is a gamble anyway, so why not gamble ... best worth while? So we say, if you are sure it is ...st the lure of modern advertising—go ahead.

POOR BUT HAPPY.

...is one of the most heartening letters that I ...l, because it shows that there are still left in the ...le who have the ability to love greatly and to ...nd who can find such happiness in each other's ... can dispense with outside amusement.

...any such nowadays, when we have mostly got so ... that luxuries have become necessities and when ... willing to die for each other, but are not willing ...le than that to which they have been accustomed, ...er.

...months ago there was published in this column ...oung man who wrote me that he and his wife ... other, but they were going to part and get a ...n his salary alone they could not keep an auto... that in his community no married woman could ...at if his wife was single she could go back to ...so they were going to break up their home and ... was going back to her family to live and he to ...oney thus saved he was going to buy a nice little ...o be happy again and be able to show his ex-wife

...t young people are like this latter couple and not ... and her husband that I stress the importance of ... financial side of marriage before they enter into it. ...ere is not much love that is strong enough to stand ...d hourly sacrifices of tastes and habits. It is when ... and wives begin to feel the pinch of poverty, when ...ut cars and radios and good clothes and amusements, ...nabby and has to pass up the beauty shop and the ...nd has to push the perambulator instead of playing ... to the discard and they decide that marriage is not

... though married, though poor, takes more love ...ess and it takes more character than they have. ...ey are so dependent on material things is that ...ources within themselves. They are like babies ...amused with glittering toys.

... so enters into whether it is safe for a couple to ... and that is the woman's ability to manage and ...estic work. That is a matter of nature and of ...annot turn a woman into a good cook and penny ...ny acquaintances is a brilliant and intelligent woman

BODY OF ROBERTS WILL BE AT HOME

Funeral Service Will Be Conducted At Church Sunday Afternoon.

—(Continued From Page One)

church; the Rev. John Arch MacMillan, prominent Baptist leader of North Carolina and editor of "Charity and Children;" Dr. A. L. Buckner, of Clio, S. C., and uncle of the deceased; and the Rev. W. G. Hamrick of the New Calvary negro church here, will officiate at the funeral.

Bar Will Meet

Executives of the city tax and purchasing departments held wake over the body of their former leader last night. Members of the Buncombe County Bar association will be at the home tonight.

Active pallbearers will be:

Dr. L. E. Davis, neighbor of Mayor Roberts for many years; Harry L. Nettles, prominent dairyman and former member of the North Carolina general assembly; W. R. Messer, chief of police; George Pennell, city corporation counsel; A. C. Choate, who served as water superintendent under Mayor Roberts for more than three years; and Howard Ballard, city building engineer.

Mayor Roberts selected his own active pallbearers, it was learned today. He wrote their names on a slip of paper, which was attached to his will.

These six men had been intimate friends for many years.

Honorary pallbearers will be: Mayor Harry W. Plummer, Senator Josiah W. Bailey of Raleigh, Attorney-General Dennis G. Brummitt of Raleigh, William M. Smathers, Dr. Thurman Kitchin, president of Wake Forest college; W. B. Plemmons, Douglas Eller, Don C. Young, W. G. Fortune, E. C. Greene, Dan W. Hill, John A. Goode, Clyde S. Reed, Plato D. Ebbs, Thomas Bell, John Russell, T. C. Miller, John McElroy, Mary Chambers of Weaverville, Dr. Dan E. Sevier, Dr. J. G. Woodward, Newton M. Anderson, Dr. Charles S. Norburn, John C. Caddell of Wake Forest, and Marion Weaver.

Representatives of the Roberts family last night said that negro residents of the city who desired to view the body of the former mayor would be received at the home today.

Active and honorary pallbearers have been asked to meet at the Clayton-Hyer funeral home in West Asheville Sunday afternoon promptly at 2:30 o'clock. They will go to the Roberts home in a body.

The request was made yesterday by members of a West Asheville church to have the funeral services held in this church because of the larger accomodations for those who desire to attend the funeral. This request was declined as the former mayor had expressed a desire to have the services held in the Presbyterian church of which he was an elder and teacher of the Men's Bible class for many years.

Yesterday In Washington

(By The Associated Press)

Senate enacted veterans loan bill over Hoover's veto.

President Hoover ordered veterans bureau to give priority to needy veterans in administering loans.

Senate called on Secretary Hyde to explain why $20,000,000 drought relief fund had not been made available.

Agriculture department laid plans for using half of $20,000,000 fund as reserve to assist formation and extension of agricultural credit corporations.

Secretary Wilbur urged legislation to penalize the sale of government papers or information.

Labor department ordered deportation of Tony Volpe, known as a bodyguard of Al Capone.

Mayor Thompson of Chicago criticised President Hoover before House committee.

Congressional action completed on naval appropriation bill.

House committee tabled measures to increase House membership.

President Hoover referred Muscle Shoals and Wagner employment bills to government departments for recommendations.

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 28.—Official weather bureau records of temperatures and rainfall for the 24 hours ending 8:00 p. m. in the principal cotton-growing areas and elsewhere.

Station	Highest Y't'day	Lowest Last Night	Prec.
Alpena	32	14	...
Asheville	52	28	...
Atlanta	56	44	...
Atlantic City	48	30	...
Birmingham	62	44	...
Charlotte	55	37	...
Chicago	52	34	...
Denver	46	34	...
Detroit	46	34	...
El Paso	56	38	...
Galveston	58	56	1.14
Jacksonville	64	48	...
Key West	74	54	...
Little Rock	60	44	...
Los Angeles	66	56	...
Memphis	60	46	...
Meridian	60	40	...
Miami	72	54	...
Mobile	60	46	.02
New Orleans	60	52	.36
New York	46	34	...
San Antonio	58	50	.06
San Francisco	62	52	...
Tampa	68	48	...
Vicksburg	62	48	.01
Wilmington	58	38	...

WEATHER CONDITIONS

The northeastern disturbance still shows some force on the New England coast with lowest pressure (within the range of reports) 29.54 inches at Eastport. There are two cyclonic centers in the west: one in Colorado with lowest barometer 29.76 inches at Denver and the other over South Dakota where the minimum pressure is 29.74 inches. High pressure prevails from the Great Lakes to Florida and over California. This pressure distribution has been attended by rains in southern Texas, Utah, the Pacific States and South Dakota and it is snowing in Maine and Minnesota. It is warmer in the Mississippi Valley, the west Gulf States and the Plateau region and slightly colder in the upper Lake region and the northern Rocky Mountain region.

T. R. TAYLOR,
Official in charge.

THE FORECAST

North Carolina—Rain Saturday and probably Sunday; warmer Saturday; colder in west portion Sunday.

West Virginia—Cloudy with rain Saturday afternoon or night; Sunday snow and colder.

Kentucky—Rain Saturday; Sunday

FIGHT FOR L... OF GIRL BI...

Blood For Tran... Sought To ... Maggie Thor...

Doctors and nurses at ... hospital will make a last ... against the disease which ... the life of six-year-ol... Thorpe.

The little orphan girl, w... when made known two ... drew a hundred volunteer... their blood for transfusion ... dying.

Half a dozen people res... terday to an appeal from ... Harrison for blood to ma... another transfusion. Bloo... volunteers will be "typed" ... ing, and if the proper typ... the transfusion will be ... at once.

But there still loomed ... that the proper type co... found from the ranks of ... unteers and there remain... others. Little Maggie Thor... from hemorrhage. A pin... may save her life."

Parents Dead

When her parents died ... culosis, Maggie, bright ... sweet of disposition, wa... the Buncombe County Chil... to live. But she became ... a month ago was removed ... pital. Two weeks ago her ... announced that blood ... would be necessary to sa... and appealed for volunte... a hundred Boy Scouts a... Asheville firemen respon... tests were made before ... type was discovered in th... Harrison L. Frazier, Jr., ... street, a Boy Scout.

The transfusion was ef... doctors and hospital atte... joiced, for Maggie reacted ... to the treatment and ap... turing to health.

A turn for the worse ... eral days ago. The change ... at first, but rapidly bec... marked and physicians d... other transfusion is the ... of saving the little girl's li...

Half a dozen were so to... terday by the appeal for ... they volunteered. But th... assurance that one among ... have the proper type of b... need is for more volunte... the present list is exhau...

Little Maggie Thorpe ... blood. She is dying.

Pioneer Suffragi... Observes B...

WYNCOTE, Pa.,—In th... old house where she has ... 1857, Miss Annie Hesco... suffragist, abolitionist an... recently celebrated her 8...

"I hope this will be my ... day," she said. "My eyes ... good any more and I ca...

,000 Paid To Veterans Of Nation A

MEN
MPT NCE

urnished ayment
nts

AM OF FILES

r From nes To on

eb. 28. (UP)
Var lined up ace, seeking ifficulties ince the ers Field

y attire
re need.
s in 54
ans bu-to take which h value
ificates.
timated egrating for all
e day.
000 will der the n suc-
terans rrowed

u offi-ample l loan days s will y.
s for-$20,- diate re as round ine of here

ANS ithers vet-ns ex cted
ate low:
rans $20,- ina, 1,000
te; G
,000; Flo
$6,000.0 rans, $
000 veter
50,000
issippi,
00; Lo
$35,000, erans, $

He Is Target

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 28. (AP) Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, was declared by the senate campaign funds committee today to be "chargeable with a willful violation" of the corrupt practices act in failing to report personal expenditures in opposing Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, last fall.

BOND PAYMENT IS MADE AND CRISIS FOR CITY PASSES

Bankers Supply $32,000 To Prevent Default On Indebtedness

The city will not default in its bond payment due in New York City tomorrow.

Through an arrangement with Asheville bankers, city commissioners yesterday secured the $32,000 necessary to discharge a $85,893.75 bond obligation due. The $32,000 was borrowed from Asheville banks with the stipulation that the city would repay this amount within the next sixty days. The banks were given interest bearing bond coupons for collateral.

The funds were sent to New York yesterday afternoon. At a special meeting of the city commissioners shortly after noon, proper resolutions authorizing borrowing of funds from Asheville banks were passed. The entire board attended the meeting

CITY TO OFFER FINAL TRIBUTE IN RITES TODAY

Roberts Funeral To Be Held At Church In West Asheville

GUARDS OF HONOR TO ATTEND RITES

Masonic Groups And Bar Association Will Aid In Service

Citizens of the city this afternoon at 3 o'clock will pay a last tribute to former Mayor Edward Gallatin Roberts who for more than seven years served Asheville as its chief executive.

Accompanied by guards of honors from the Masonic lodge, the Buncombe County Bar Association, and the city police and fire departments, the body of the former mayor will leave the residence, 134 Brevard road, this afternoon at 2:45 o'clock for the West Asheville Methodist church where final rites will be held.

The police and fire department guards of honor will march in military formation on each side of the funeral coach bearing the body of ex-mayor Roberts.

Service At Church.

Service at the church will be in charge of the Rev. W. F. Creson, pastor of the West Asheville Presbyterian church of which the deceased was a member and elder for many years; the Rev. Paul N. Gresham, former pastor of the West Asheville Presbyterian church, and now pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Savannah, Georgia; the Rev. Arch MacMillan, of Thomasville, editor of Charity and Children; the Rev. G. T. Bond, pastor of the West Asheville Methodist church; Dr. A. L. Buckner of Clio, S. C., uncle of the deceased; and the Rev. W. G. Hamilton, pastor of the West Calvary church here.

Active pallbearers will be: Dr. L. E. Davis, Harry L. Nettles, W. R. Messer, George Pennell, A. C. Choate and Howard Ballard.

Honorary pallbearers will be: Mayor Harry W. Plummer, Senator Josiah W. Bailey of Raleigh, Attorney-General Dennis G. Brummit of Raleigh, William M. Smathers, Dr. Thurman Kitchin, president of Wake Forest college; W. B. Plemmons, Douglas

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

TAX COLLECTION DECREASE SHOWN

Democrats Prepare Bitter Struggle O Prohibition At Par

ITALY AND FRANCE AGREE UPON NAVAL ARMAMENT CUTS

ROME, Feb 28. (UP)—An agreement for limitation of the naval armaments of Italy and France—sought unsuccessfully at the London naval conference of 1930 was achieved today as the result of prolonged international negotiations for removal of the most serious immediate obstacle to world disarmament.

Premier Benito Mussolini agreed in principle, to proposals presented by Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson of Great Britain for settlement of the questions left outstanding at the London conference.

SUCCESS IS SEEN FOR GIVE-A-JOB CAMPAIGN IN CITY

Total Of 708 Placed At Work Through Drive For Jobs

The February "Give-a-Job" campaign, which closed last night, provided jobs for 708 unemployed men and women and 114 of the jobs are permanent ones, the "Gives-Job" club records reveal. These figures, together with the fact that the Asheville office of the federal-state employment bureau broke all previous records in job placements during the month, not only for Asheville but for all North Carolina cities, show that the campaign has been an outstanding success in every particular.

P. L. Gaston, manager of the employment bureau here, announced last night that the "Give-a-Job" campaign enabled his office to break all previous records in the state for the week and month ending Saturday. Last week this office placed 200 unemployed men and women in jobs—a new state record. During February, the shortest and ordinarily one of the dullest months of the year in Asheville, the employment office placed 584 persons in jobs—new local and state record.

Statistics Inadequate

These statistics from the employment office and the "Gives" club do not represent, of course, the grand total of all jobs provided in Asheville during the month of February. Many jobs were created including a number of permanent ones by business concerns and individuals who made no report through the employment office or the "Gives"

Smith And Robins Expected At Ca For March 5 M

WASHINGTON, D. C., Fe Democrats girded for a tes hibition today as word pass capitol that the March 5 n the Democratic national would be confronted with for a declaration of polic tional issues.

Despite the warnings party leaders in congress, tion continued that Chair kob intended to sanction cussion of issues and was to back a resolution decl state control of liquor as o national prohibition.

Both Alfred E. Smith an Robinson, of Arkansas, th ratic standard bearers, in election, will be present at t cratic gathering.

Count on Robinso

Robinson is counted upo congressional wing of the lead the fight against the tive attempt to commit the committee to an anti-pr stand.

Congressional leaders, both wets and drys, are almo in their stand that the natio mittee is without authority mit the party on issues an would be a mistake to such controversial propo prohibition so far in advan national campaign and a when the party is runnin even keel.

Until today the Democrat gress believed their protes any such move would be but it was conceded tonight that a free discussion was pect.

Friends of Smith attach litical significance to his a He was urged to come, ho gether with Robinson, as head of the party.

Plan Clearing Deb

One of the principal ob session is to devise means ing the party out of debt incurred in the last has been really injure

Whether prohibition would be present was unc was understood that both Davis, presidential nominee and James M. Cox, the bearer in 1920 had been Several members of congre to the meeting with the their national committeeme

Raskob was expected to c early in the week for pr conferences with the D e going back to her family to live and he to y thus saved he was going to buy a nice little e happy again and be able to show his ex-wife

3-1-31

---

young people are like this latter couple and not nd her husband that I stress the importance of ancial side of marriage before they enter into it.
is not much love that is strong enough to stand hourly sacrifices of tastes and habits. It is when d wives begin to feel the pinch of poverty, when cars and radios and good clothes and amusements, by and has to pass up the beauty shop and the has to push the perambulator instead of playing the discard and they decide that marriage is not

---

ough married, though poor, takes more love and it takes more character than they have.
are so dependent on material things is that ces within themselves. They are like babies ised with glittering toys.

---

enters into whether it is safe for a couple to and that is the woman's ability to manage and tic work. That is a matter of nature and of not turn a woman into a good cook and penny acquaintances is a brilliant and intelligent woman husband and who works herself to a frazzle trying n an income that should be ample they are always harrassed by debts.

---

ons to all rules, and without doubt when a man
h other enough to be all-in-all to each other and be happy with very little money, but ge, most young couples will find it safest to they have some adequate defense against the

DOROTHY DIX.

• • • • • • • • • •

am married to a mother's boy. Whenever we nother and tells her his troubles. She listens to ns to mine. He used to leave me for weeks at a home, and I love him so much I forgive him.
ne to do in order to make him change?

MRS. R.L.

---

home when you quarrel, the obvious remedy it the quarrels. Suppose you try that for to make a family fight, you know, and if nk he will think he has won the battle and over his triumph.

---

n quarreling with a person who won't quarrel and re right," and lets it go at that instead of hand-o instead of disputing with him, agree with your he starts something and it will leave him flat,

, childish creature he must be, to be always ther, a tattle tale complaining of his wife! I uld tell him to stay with mother and let her

---

had a grain of sense she wouldn't sympathize him. She would tell him that if he had a bit of wouldn't tell even his mother about his wife's ning away from the responsibilities of marriage p to meet them with courage and dignity instead ke a little boy.

DOROTHY DIX.

• • • • • • • • • •

am a young man of 20. Very attractive, and my that girls continually pester me on the telephone nting to know when I'll be seeing them. I have the sun to stop them, but still they insist on telephone calls have made a great deal of trouble
I am going steady with. How can I keep these

R. A. W.

---

ble to have that fatal fascination for women.
cere sympathy, but you know one has to pay a sheik.

---

can suggest in which you can protect yourself o answer the telephone. Nothing discourages a up like hearing his mother's voice saying that ons or Johnny is stoking the furnace, or Johnny wish to be disturbed.

---

ll your sweetie that she will have to culti-d attitude and not get green-eyed over such telephone call, because really no one girl nopolize a young man who is so irresistible ou are.

DOROTHY DIX.

(Copyright by Public Ledger)

ES
ISURE

the office of tax collector in Polk county.

SB 237—McKee of Jackson, to make county accountant clerk to the board of ommissioners in Jackson and provide for his pay.

House:

HB 589—Henry, of Transylvania, to contract the limits of Brevard.

Weaverville, Dr. Dan E. Sevier, Dr. J. G. Woodward, Newton M. Anderson, Dr. Charles E. Norburn, John C. Caddell of Wake Forest, and Marion Weaver.

Representatives of the Roberts family last night said that negro residents of the city who desired to view the body of the former mayor would be received at the home today.

Active and honorary pallbearers have been asked to meet at the Clayton-Hyer funeral home in West Asheville Sunday afternoon promptly at 2:30 o'clock. They will go to the Roberts home in a body.

The request was made yesterday by members of a West Asheville church to have the funeral services held in this church because of the larger accomodations for those who desire to attend the funeral. This request was declined as the former mayor had expressed a desire to have the services held in the Presbyterian church of which he was an elder and teacher of the Men's Bible class for many years.

Members of the rural police department, under the command of Captain Robert Monteath, will be in charge of handling the traffic at the cemetery. Escorts from the Asheville police and fire departments, the city government, and the Buncombe County Bar association, will accompany the funeral cortege.

Resolutions Adopted

The following resolutions were adopted by the Asheville street car men on the passing of Mr. Roberts:

"Be it resolved by the Street Car Men of the City of Asheville that we sincerely regret the untimely death of Mayor Gallatin Roberts, a splendid, upright, conscientious, honest, Christian gentleman, who was a real and true friend to the working people of Asheville; that we have always trusted and looked upon him as a friend with abiding faith and explicit confidence. His integrity and absolute honesty was above the slightest suspicion, and it is our hope that the people of Asheville will heed his dying message and will put away the petty political bickerings and desires for self-aggrandizement for the salvation of our City; that we extend to the bereaved widow our most sincere sympathy with the hope that she will always remember that we love her husband as a friend in life and after death."

The West Asheville club adopted resolutions on the death of the former mayor. They follow:

"Whereas, we have learned with sincere and extreme regret of the untimely passing of our beloved fellow member and neighborly townsman, the Honorable Gallatin Roberts.

"And Whereas, it is our desire to express our great sorrow individually and as a club, now, therefore be it resolved:

"That we hereby individually and as members of the West Asheville club, express our great sorrow at the passing of our fellow member, former Mayor Roberts, and extend to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy in this trying hour

"Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon our minutes, a copy furnished the family, and also copies to the press."

Mr. Roberts is survived by his widow, a daughter, Margaret Roberts and a son, Edward Roberts One brother, Gwyn Roberts of Flat Creek also survives.

GANG CHIEF GETS JAIL SENTENCE

—(Continued From Page One)

been mentioned in connection with nearly every major crime in Chicago

New Orleans	60	52	.20
New York	46	34	..
San Antonio	58	50	.06
San Francisco	62	52	..
Tampa	68	48	..
Vicksburg	62	48	.01
Wilmington	58	38	..

WEATHER CONDITIONS

The northeastern disturbance still shows some force on the New England coast with lowest pressure (within the range of reports) 29.54 inches at Eastport. There are two cyclonic centers in the west: one in Colorado with lowest barometer 29.76 inches at Denver and the other over South Dakota where the minimum pressure is 29.74 inches. High pressure prevails from the Great Lakes to Florida and over California. This pressure distribution has been attended by rains in southern Texas, Utah, the Pacific States and South Dakota and it is snowing in Maine and Minnesota. It is warmer in the Mississippi Valley, the west Gulf States and the Plateau region and slightly colder in the upper Lake region and the northern Rocky Mountain region.

T. R. TAYLOR,
Official in charge.

THE FORECAST

North Carolina—Rain Saturday and probably Sunday; warmer Saturday; colder in west portion Sunday.

West Virginia—Cloudy with rain Saturday afternoon or night; Sunday snow and colder.

Kentucky—Rain Saturday; Sunday cloudy, rain or snow in east portion, colder Sunday and in west portion Saturday.

Tennessee—Rain Saturday, Sunday generally fair; colder Sunday.

Virginia—Increasing cloudiness followed by rain Saturday afternoon or night; Sunday rain, somewhat warmer Saturday, colder Sunday.

South Carolina—Rain Saturday; Sunday generally fair; colder in northwest portion Sunday.

Georgia—Rain Saturday; Sunday generally fair, colder in north portion Sunday.

Florida—Rain Saturday; Sunday cloudy, probably rain in south portion.

LOCAL WEATHER DATA

State of weather at 8 a. m.	Partly cloudy
State of weather at 8 p. m.	Cloudy
Relative humidity at 8 a. m.	90%
Relative humidity at noon	90%
Relative humidity at 8 p. m.	85%
Wind direction at 8 a. m.	South
Wind direction at 8 p. m.	SE
Time of Sunrise	7:03 A.M.
Time of Sunset	6:23 P.M.

LOCAL TEMPERATURE DATA

8 a. m.	31	3 p. m.	53
9 a. m.	36	4 p. m.	52
10 a. m.	42	5 p. m.	51
11 a. m.	45	6 p. m.	49
12 noon	48	7 p. m.	47
1 p. m.	50	8 p. m.	46
2 p. m.	50

Wet bulb temperature at 8 a m	39
Wet bulb temperature at noon	39
Wet bulb temperature at 8 p m	33
Highest	53—One year ago 56
Lowest	27—One year ago 38
Absolute Maximum	72 in 1917
Absolute Minimum	11 in 1920
Average temperature today 40	normal 41

LOCAL MONTHLY PRECIPITATION

Normal	3.18 inches
Greatest amount	7.62 in 1903
Least amount	0.67 in 1930
For last 24 hours ending 8 p m	none

WHISTLE CATCHES FISH

BOMBAY —Sportsmen who are going into the wilds of India for fine fishing are learning a new way to catch fish from natives. These tribesmen have a peculiar whistle which they utter on approaching a stream. This shrill noise attracts a certain species of mountain fish. The native, still whistling, places his hand in the water, and the fish swim into it.

A turn for the worse
eral days ago. The change at first, but rapidly becam marked and physicians dec other transfusion is the o of saving the little girl's life

Half a dozen were so touc terday by the appeal for bl they volunteered. But the assurance that one among t have the proper type of blo need is for more volunteers, the present list is exhauste

Little Maggie Thorpe m blood. She is dying.

Pioneer Suffragist Observes Bir

WYNCOTE, Pa.,—In the old house where she has liv 1857. Miss Annie Heacock, suffragist, abolitionist and recently celebrated her 93d

"I hope this will be my la day," she said. "My eyes ar good any more and I can't touch with things."

And "keeping in touc things" was Miss Heacock's

She was secretary of group of suffragists who Mercantile Hall, Philadelphia
Back in the days preceding War and during the cha taught Negro children in So lina.

Sniffle Gone No

Behind at school — bad-tem home—and not getting much f play hours! More often than n the case with a child that is bot
a stopped-up nose and a stuffy

Now you can give your bo instant relief from this kind of and give it easily, any time or a
You put the new Vicks Nose an Drops in each nostril, tell him back his head and sniff. Note how he breathes better—how much happier he feels.

Vicks Nose and Throat D
gently and effectively. They con tain ingredients used for years
VapoRub, together with a costly nal agent newly developed for pose and not found in any other selling for such a low price. If y —or anyone else in your family fering from a head-cold, you begin using Vicks Drops today, use Vicks VapoRub for its lastin action. Both treatments can be for very little at your drug sto will bring real relief.

A Charming Gift To Yo

A COTY LIPSTICK with each box of COTY FACE POWDER

Both For 79

S WILL SHOALS

Problem As ing Huge Issue

From Page One)

st the principles

n the debate, the any communica- Shoals legislation tion of disposing the advantage of concerned. It lon been trans- tical symbol and political issue.

nator Norris' bill for denunciation with the power ears also to be t of views upon n and distribu- vernment manu- ties.

Issue

ts adaptation to e of the Tennes- mers generally is an endeavor to itical issue

sals on this po- se which has been als to side track the federal regu- power in cooperataking office I as a measure of to the 75,000,000 al million inves- les in all walks of wn the 35,000,000 untry.

asity has been itha and the time one per cent of terest of one per of the United proportion of the m to the whole r expenditure of d million dollars easury to expand has been a bi- jor purposes of onal defense, into by the govern- rpose of which is and distribution manufacture of

Policy

ill I have to con- esirable to adopt policies from to their owner- whether the respect to the nerally workable; proposed in this aper fertilizer for r the project is defense; whether is bill are in st of the people y, and in general monplace, unro- test the merits is propostion as

e an engineering s business merits

Yesterday In Washington

(By The Associated Press)

Officials estimated veterans loan applications passed, through governmental machinery at the rate of 1,000 an hour.

President Hoover announced he was having Muscle Shoals bill examined from engineering standpoint before deciding whether to sign it.

Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, introduced a resolution to provide $100,000,000 to be spent by President Hoover for unemployment relief.

House and senate conferees failed to agree on constitutional amendment abolishing old congress sessions after elections.

Republican Leader Watson announced in senate there would be no extra session.

Representative Crowther, Republican, of New York, introduced resolution to send congressional committee to Russia to investigate conditions.

Virginia and Oklahoma Democratic congressional delegations protested to their national committeemen against national committee issuing any declaration of policy after March 5 meeting.

Senate campaign committee reported that Robert H. Lucas, executive director of Republican national committee, had violated the corrupt practices act in not reporting his Nebraska expenditures within the legal time and Lucas retorted that he had filed within specified limits.

SUCCESS SEEN IN DRIVE FOR WORK

Total Of 708 Placed At Work Through Drive For Jobs

—(Continued From Page One)

detail elsewhere in the Citizen-Times today.

Last night's additions to the membership list of the "Give-a-Job" club follow:

New Members

Mrs. Frank Mademford, Morningside, gave a permanent job to a general house worker.

Mrs. Roy Phillips, 15 D'Arcy Lane, gave a permanent job to a general house worker.

Mrs. Curtis, 6 Clairmont avenue, gave a temporary job to a general house worker.

Mrs. McCanless, 49 North street, gave a day's work.

Mrs. Hall, 73 Merrimon avenue, gave a day's work.

Miss Bertha Proffitt, 49 Broad street, gave a day's work.

W. K. Dalton gave a day's work to a painter.

Mrs. George Wright, Beaver Lake, gave a day's work to a house man.

Mrs. Osteen, 26 Monroe Place, gave a day's work.

Mrs. Harriett Raylor gave a permanent job to a general house worker.

Mrs. Bonham, 68 Grove street, gave two days' work.

CITY WILL OFFER ROBERTS TRIBUTE

Roberts Funeral To Be Held At Church In West Asheville

—(Continued From Page One)

Etter, Don C. Young, W. G. Fortune, E. C. Greene, Dan W. Hill, John A. Goode, Clyde S. Reed, Plato D. Ebbs, Thomas Bell, John Russell T. C. Millican, John McElroy, Hardy Chambers of Weaverville, Dr. Dan E. Sevier, Dr. [illegible] Woodward, Newton M. Anderson, Dr. Chas. S. Norburn, John C. Calder of Wake Forest, and Marion Walker.

Members of all West Asheville churches will occupy seats on the rostrum of the church. Special seats will be reserved in the church for members of the Masonic lodge.

Mr. Roberts will be buried in Greenlawn cemetery. Members of the Buncombe county rural police department under the command of Captain Robert Monteath will be in charge of traffic at the cemetery. The funeral cortege will be preceded from the home to the ceremony by a squad of motorcycle police officers of the Asheville police department.

Active and honorary pallbearers have been asked to meet at the Clayton-Hicks funeral home this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The Buncombe County Bar association will gather at the Calvary church at 2:30 o'clock. All Masons will meet at 2:30 o'clock in the Sunday school department of the West Asheville Methodist church.

Program Given.

The following program will be carried out at the church service:

Hymn, "Blest be the Tie That Binds."

Prayer, by Dr. John Arch MacMillan.

Scripture, by the Rev. G. T. Bond.

Eulogy, the Rev. Paul N. Gresham.

Services at the grave will be in charge of the Masonic lodge, of which Mr. Roberts was a member.

The combined choirs of the West Asheville Presbyterian and Methodist churches will be in charge of the music.

More than 5,000 persons visited the Roberts home yesterday and last night to view the body of the former city official. Included in this number was about 300 negro citizens of the city.

Mr. Roberts is survived by his widow, one son, Edward Roberts; a daughter, Margaret Roberts; and one brother, Gwyn Roberts of the Flat Creek section.

A section of the church balcony has been reserved for negroes, members of the Roberts family said last night.

NIX ON THE LIBERTY

YOSEMITE NATIONAL PARK, Cal. —Regular free feeding is a lot better than having to get out and hunt your own food, judging by the actions of the cow elks here. The herd was liberated this winter, but instead of enjoying their liberty, the elk bugled lustily outside the paddock until they were locked up

THE WEATHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Official weather bureau records of temperatures and rainfall for the 24 hours ending 8:00 p. m. in the principal cotton-growing areas and elsewhere.

Station	Highest Yt'day	Lowest Last Night	Prec.
Alpena	38	30	.06
Asheville	42	38	.35
Atlanta	50	44	...
Atlantic City	44	30	...
Birmingham	58	48	.10
Charlotte	51	41	.34
Chicago	44	44	...
Denver	30	24	.62
Detroit	56	30	...
El Paso	54	42	...
Galveston	62	54	.01
Jacksonville	66	58	.05
Key West	80	68	...
Little Rock	56	48	.24
Los Angeles	74	52	...
Memphis	50	50	.48
Meridian	62	48	.42
Miami	76	68	...
Mobile	74	52	.54
New Orleans	70	54	...
New York	56	38	...
San Antonio	70	48	...
San Francisco	70	50	...
Tampa	70	62	.32
Vicksburg	58	50	.44
Wilmington	60	44	.22

WEATHER CONDITIONS

A disturbance of moderate in centered over southern Alabama with lowest barometer 29.80 inches at Mobile. Another disturbance with minimum pressure 29.70 inches is central in New Mexico. The northeastern storm is passing out to sea and is almost beyond the range of reports. Pressure is high from the Pacific coast to the middle Atlantic. Rains are reported in the South Atlantic and Gulf States, Tennessee, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Maine, Utah and Washington and snow has occurred in Colorado and Michigan. It is warmer in the South Atlantic and east Gulf States, the Lake region and the Ohio and lower Mississippi Valleys and slightly colder in the northern Plains States. No freezing temperatures are reported in the South this morning except in Virginia.

T. R. TAYLOR,
Official in Charge.

THE FORECAST

North Carolina—Cloudy, possibly light rain in mountains Sunday; Monday partly cloudy and colder.

Virginia—Cloudy, probably preceded by rain Sunday, Monday partly cloudy and colder.

South Carolina—Cloudy slightly colder in southwest portion, possibly light rain in mountains Sunday; Monday cloudy and colder.

Georgia—Cloudy, colder in south portion, possibly rain in mountains Sunday; Monday cloudy and colder in extreme south portion.

Florida—Partly cloudy, [illegible] in extreme north portion [illegible] day cloudy, probably rain.

Kentucky—Cloudy and [illegible] by rain in east portion S[illegible] partly cloudy, colder in [illegible] portion.

Tennessee—Cloudy, prec[illegible] Sunday, colder at night; [illegible] cloudy, colder in east por[illegible]

LOCAL WEATHER

State of weather at 8 a. [illegible]
State of weather at 8 p. [illegible]
Relative humidity at 8 a. [illegible]
Relative humidity at noo[illegible]
Relative humidity at 8 p. [illegible]
Wind direction at 8 a. m. [illegible]
Wind direction at 8 p. m. [illegible]
Time of Sunrise [illegible]
Time of Sunset [illegible]

LOCAL MONTHLY PREC[illegible]

Normal [illegible]
Greatest amount [illegible]
Least amount [illegible]
For last 24 hours ending [illegible]

FREE D[illegible]
GUARANT[illegible]
DENTIST[illegible]
PERFE[illegible]
Others Charge $[illegible]
Others Charge $[illegible]
Others Charge 3[illegible]
Others Charge $[illegible]
15 years successful
Fillings $1.00
D[illegible]
BETTER
PACK SQ. OVE[illegible]

27 YE[illegible]
OF S[illegible]
OP[illegible]
An[illegible]

Court Battle

NT IS UTAL
SAULT

March 1. ior student t a Sunday cell at poy, accused
th a ham-
Haverhill

Noble, 17, police said person who
Mrs. Clara
Wednesday
r into ins, at the ospital, has ness.
will be arof assault and break-the night.
s the boy's $16, police confession.
ted he was ts as treaslass book
$10 to pay

BANKS
RESS, VEALS

Whose Closed
ing

March 1. (AP) is springing the chaos of ll be strong-the weaker minated and being built of the com-

ved, banking rating with generally are an formerly.
the failures,
"comebacks"
ging to take r ones.

ss features that are absent,
he hard hit heir banking ress in their
d footing.
failures foltly for a few ollapse of its ared, is set-rn.

ent figures banks that day of No-pened, either
heir finances,
with other

LAST TRIBUTES TO MEMORY OF ROBERTS PAID

Thousands Line Streets As Cortege Passes To M. E. Church

SEVEN MINISTERS CONDUCT SERVICE

Body Of Former Mayor Is Interred In Green Hill Cemetery

Friends of Edward Gallatin Roberts, who for seven years was mayor of Asheville, paid final tributes yesterday at funeral services in the West Asheville Methodist church.

Five thousand people lined the route of the funeral cortege from the former mayor's home on Brevard road to the church.

Escorts from police and fire departments conducted the procession from the home to the church and from the church to Green Hill cemetery where the body was interred beside those of the former mayor's mother and a daughter to whom he had been deeply attached.

Members of the Masonic lodge of the Buncombe county bar association and representatives of the municipal government attended the services in groups.

Seven ministers among them the pastor of a colored church, to which former Mayor Roberts had shown consideration, officiated. They were The Rev. G. T. Bond, pastor of the West Asheville Methodist church, the Rev. J. B. Grice, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church, the Rev. Paul N. Gresham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Savannah, Ga., the Rev. W. F. Creson, pastor of the West Asheville Presbyterian church, the Rev. John Arch MacMillan, editor of Charity and Children, Dr. A. L. Buckner, of Clio, S. C., and the Rev. W. G. Hamilton, pastor of the New Calvary negro church.

Eulogies Delivered

Eulogies to the former mayor were delivered by several of the officiating ministers including the Rev. Hamilton who characterized the deceased as a friend to both white and negro races. The combined choirs of the West Asheville Methodist and Presbyterian churches were in charge of the music.

Active pallbearers were: Dr. L. E. Davis, Harry L. Nettles, W. R. Messer, George Pennell, A. C. Choate and Howard Ballard.

Honorary pallbearers were: Mayor Harry W. Plummer, Senator Josiah W. Bailey of Raleigh, Attorney-General Dennis G. Brummitt, of Raleigh, William M. Smathers, Dr. Thurman Kitchin, president of Wake Forest college, W. B. Plemmons, Douglas Eller, Don C. Young, W. O. Fortune, E. C. Greene, Dan W. Hill, John A. Goode, Clyde S. Reed, Plato D. Ross,

Legislators Will Hear Al Smith

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York will speak today in Raleigh to the North Carolina general assembly on governmental problems. Every seat in the theater at which he will speak has been taken and hundreds of applicants have been unable to obtain accommodations.

Huge Audience Gathers To Hear Smith's Address

SCIENTISTS BEGIN DIGGING IN DESERT FOR TRACES OF ARK

PHILADELPHIA, March [illegible] (AP)—Announcement was made tonight that an archaeological expedition of the University of Pennsylvania museum has begun excavations at Paria in Mesopotamia, the site of the ancient Babylonian city of Shurupak, where archaeologists believe Noah's ark was built. The site at Paria is in a desert about 100 miles from Ur of the Chaldees.

1,300 Available Seats Quickly Taken, With More Demanded

RALEIGH, March 1. (AP)—From every part of North Carolina persons were preparing in Raleigh tonight to hear former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, when he speaks to the General assembly tomorrow.

The speaking committee in charge of arranging arrangements of the State Dinner where the two Democratic presidential candidates will talk at a private campaign affair, the city was swamped with requests for tickets.

Only 1,300 tickets were available at $10 and were disposed of by the committee Friday night but still requests poured in.

Each of the 120 members of the legislature received two personal tickets and top of [illegible] State officers, Democratic committeemen and prominent in the political life of North Carolina.

OFFICIALS PROBE BATTLE BETWEEN

NAVY UNI
WITH ARM
NEW LEAD IS SELECT

Chief Justice Of Supreme Court Quickly Name

CIVIL STRUGGLE MAY BE AVO

Conference Held Cerro Quits End Cabinet Set-u

LIMA, Peru, March
The Peruvian navy, fo
the lead of revolting ar risons in the North and late today forced the tion of Provisional P
Luis M. Sanchez Cerro
new government was s
a few hours.

The new junta is he Ricardo Leoncio Elias justice of the supreme c provisional president.
members are Captain dro C. Vinces, comma
chief of the navy, and Manuel Ruiz Bravo,
the army general staff.

Immediately the three noists moved to open
tions with Southern Peru, Arequipa and Northern
in the vicinity of Piura, and what has been verging
war for more than a week.

Ultimatum Issued

Today's events followed ation in morning papers of matum by the navy, which on the president to resign stated that ships lying element Pomps to attack
ern and Southern Peru with up if he signed Vinces, one of the ago June.

This afternoon the government decided to memorandum from all tions to attend a
the government palace at announcement. The meeting any operations had been awaiting the outcome of yesterday. The meeting Manager Marion Sullivan, administrator, was among those.

Cerro Quits

Senor Cerro
resignation of himself cabinet, then called to which

tion and representatives of the municipal government attended the services in groups.

Seven ministers, among them the pastor of a colored church, to which former Mayor Roberts had shown consideration, officiated. They were: The Rev. G. T. Bond, pastor of the West Asheville Methodist church; the Rev. J. B. Grice, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church; the Rev. Paul N. Gresham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Savannah, Ga.; the Rev. W. P. Creson, pastor of the West Asheville Presbyterian church; the Rev. John Arch MacMillan, editor of Charity and Children; Dr. A. L. Buckner, of Clio, S. C.; and the Rev. W. G. Hamilton, pastor of the New Calvary negro church.

Eulogies Delivered

Eulogies to the former mayor were delivered by several of the officiating ministers including the Rev. Hamilton who characterized the deceased as a friend to both white and negro races. The combined choirs of the West Asheville Methodist and Presbyterian churches were in charge of the music.

Active pallbearers were: Dr. L. E. Davis, Harry L. Nettles, W. R. Messer, George Pennell, A. C. Choate and Howard Ballard.

Honorary pallbearers were Mayor Harry W. Plummer, Senator Josiah W. Bailey of Raleigh, Attorney-General Dennis G. Brummit, of Raleigh, William M. Smathers, Dr. Thurman Kitchin, president of Wake Forest college; W. B. Plemmons, Douglas Eller, Don C. Young, W. G. Fortune, E. C. Greene, Dan W. Hill, John A. Goode, Clyde S. Reed, Plato D. Ebbs, Thomas Bell, John Russell, T. C. Miller, John McElroy, Hardy Chambers, of Weaverville, Dr. Dan E. Sevier, Dr. J. G. Woodward, Newton M. Anderson, Dr. Chas. S. Norburn, John C. Caddell of Wake Forest, and Marion Weaver.

Former Mayor Roberts, whose life ended in tragedy Wednesday, rose largely by his own efforts from a farm boy to a respected position at the bar and to the city's highest administrative office. He was born in 1878 in the Flat Creek section of Buncombe county and was educated in the public schools until he was 17 years old, when he matriculated at Weaver College.

After working in a country grocery store for more than a year he entered Washington college, a small educational institution in Tennessee, where he remained for a year, working to pay his tuition and expenses. In 1899 he entered King college at Bristol, Va., and worked his way for two years. While at this school Mr.

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

EFFORTS TO OUST PROHIBITION IN PORTO RICO BEGIN

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, March 1. (AP)—An effort to do away with prohibition in Porto Rico was started today by the agriculture association which said its enforcement here was a "joke."

The association has presented a resolution to the Porto Rican legislature asking a memorial to congress seeking repeal of the Eighteenth amendment or its application and enforcement in this island.

The island voted dry in 1917. It was claimed, through a misunderstanding and the farmers were represented as wanting an opportunity to correct what they term a costly error by being granted a new referendum and recantment of local regulatory laws.

Former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York will speak today in Raleigh to the North Carolina general assembly on governmental problems. Every seat in the theater at which he will speak has been taken, and hundreds of applicants have been unable to obtain accommodations.

Huge Audience Gathers To Hear Smith's Address

SCIENTISTS BEGIN DIGGING IN DESERT FOR TRACES OF ARK

PHILADELPHIA, March 1. (AP)—Announcement was made tonight that an archaeological expedition of the University of Pennsylvania museum has begun excavations at Fara in Mesopotamia; the site of the ancient Sumerian city of Shurrupak, where archaeologists believe Noah's ark was built. The site at Fara is in a desert about 100 miles from Ur of the Chaldees.

OFFICIALS PROBE BATTLE BETWEEN CADETS AND COPS

Citadel Students Fight Policemen, Firemen At Charleston

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 1. (AP)—An investigation will be held tomorrow into the fight between cadets of The Citadel the College of Charleston, city police and firemen last night following a basketball game between the two colleges for the City College championship.

Colonel O. J. Bond superintendent of The Citadel said tonight that until he gets the facts he will have no statement to make.

John J. Thomas chairman of the board of visitors of The Citadel said today being Sunday he made no effort to investigate the trouble.

Fight Described

Police said the main fight occurred between them and Citadel cadets when they attempted to break up a free-for-all battle following the basketball contest. Charleston College authorities had nothing to say about the affair.

Many students suffered bruises but none was seriously injured. Two firemen were released from a hospital after receiving emergency treatment. The firemen were called out to disperse the crowd with water when students began showering stones and sticks in the general melee.

A second alarm, calling out all the fighting apparatus in the city was necessary to quell the fight.

Charleston College won the game 30 to 26.

NINE ARRESTS IN BOMB ATTEMPT MADE IN HAVANA

HAVANA, March 1. (AP)—Police have

1,300 Available Seats Quickly Taken, With More Demanded

RALEIGH, March 1. (AP)—From every part of North Carolina persons were gathering in Raleigh tonight to hear former Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, when he speaks to the General Assembly tomorrow.

The legislative committee in charge of seating arrangements at the State Theatre where the 1928 Democratic presidential candidate will talk at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, has literally been flooded with requests for tickets.

Only 1,300 tickets were available and all had been disposed of by the committee Friday night but still requests poured in.

Each of the 169 members of the legislature received one personal ticket and five to be given to friends. Other tickets went to State officials, newspapermen and men prominent in the political life of North Carolina.

Block Roped Off

To care for the thousands expected to try and see the famous New Yorker, an entire city block in front of the theatre will be roped off tomorrow morning. In the middle of the block a portable radio will broadcast the speech being given in the theatre.

Station WPTF here will broadcast the Smith address and at 7:45 p. m. the station will broadcast a talk by Governor O. Max Gardner on his plans to consolidate the University of North Carolina, North Carolina College for Women and North Carolina State College into one State educational institution.

Smith will arrive here at 9:30 tomorrow morning. He will be guest of Governor Gardner at a luncheon to which the legislative "Al Smith" committee, Lieutenant Governor R. T. Fountain and Speaker Smith of the House have been invited.

Smith will leave Raleigh early tomorrow night.

LEAVES MARYLAND

CENTREVILLE, Md., March 1. (AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, Democratic presidential candidate in 1928 who with Mrs. Smith spent the week-end here at the home of John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, left this afternoon by automobile for Raleigh, N. C., where tomorrow he is scheduled to address a joint session of the State legislature.

Mr. Smith also has been invited to speak to the Georgia legislature before he returns to Washington and New York. The Georgia assembly's final adjournment is expected in a few days.

The week-end at the Raskob estate here came on the eve of the meeting of the party's national committee in Washington, set for next Thursday, the day after the adjournment of congress.

Visited Florida

Governor Smith came here last Friday from Florida. The trip to Wilmington, who made in Mr. Raskob's private railroad car. At the Delaware city he was met by Miss Betty Raskob and driven to Hickory Hill, the chairman's home.

During the time he was here no interviews were granted and no photographs of either Mr. Smith or Mr. Raskob were denied.

provisional president. [illegible] members are Captain A[illegible] dro G. Vinces, command[illegible] chief of the navy, and C[illegible] Manuel Ruiz Bravo, ch[illegible] the army general staff.

Immediately the three Ju[illegible] ficials moved to open co[illegible] tions with Southern Rebel [illegible] Arequipa and Northern Re[illegible] in the vicinity of Piura, [illegible] and what has been verging o[illegible] war for more than a week.

Ultimatum Issued

Today's events followed the [illegible] cation in morning papers of [illegible] matum by the navy, which [illegible] on the president to resign [illegible] clared that ships [illegible] ernment troops to attack the [illegible] ern and Southern Rebels [illegible] held up. It was signed by C[illegible] Vinces, one of the members [illegible] new Junta.

This afternoon the Sanches [illegible] government decided to invite [illegible] resentatives from all sections [illegible] tional life to attend a meeti[illegible] the government palace at 5 p. m. [illegible] announcement was made that [illegible] tary operations had been sus[illegible] pending the outcome of this [illegible] ference. The presiding officer [illegible] Monsignor Mariano Holquin, [illegible] administrator and Bishop of [illegible] quipa.

Cerro Quits

Sanches Cerro announced [illegible] resignation of himself and [illegible] cabinet, then retired to the [illegible] hotel. The conferees remained in [illegible] sion until the new government [illegible] been established.

Crowds gathered in front of [illegible] hostelry and cheered the [illegible] president.

Before it was known that [illegible] chez Cerro had resigned [illegible] gathered in front of the Colle[illegible] fectura building, acclaiming the [illegible] visional president and requ[illegible] arms to fight the revolution. [illegible] Tension relaxed somewhat [illegible] after the resignation.

SUMMARY OF NEW[illegible]

GENERAL

Hoover's veto of Muscle Shoals is predicted. —Page

Aged Wisconsin congressman [illegible] in Washington. —Page

Majority of closed Southern [illegible] are being reopened. —Page

Peruvian president resigns as [illegible] spreads. —Page

Officials probe battle [illegible] cadets and policemen. —Page

General decrease in crime [illegible] nation. —Page

Three women members of [illegible] prepare to quit. —Page

Irene Bordoni sings for [illegible] radio concert. —Page

Liquor valued at $100,000 [illegible] raid on home. —Page

Albatross fear big blood [illegible] spring up. —Page

Two French fliers set new [illegible] air record. —Page

Uruguay inaugurates new [illegible] executive Sunday. —Page

Approach of spring is [illegible] stimulating business. —Page

New formula is offered for [illegible] can business. —Page

Democratic dry leaders [illegible] fight not move. —Page

Kansas dailies majority of [illegible] are for repeal. —Page

Social Union directors [illegible] permanent employes. —Page

Naval policy at Rome [illegible] agreement. —Page

* * *

STATE

Gardner road plan will be [illegible] of some battle. —Page

Huge audience will hear [illegible] speech in Raleigh. —Page

[illegible] ie Veteran Of [illegible] swers Last Call

Decrease Reported

ENT NEED FOR D FOR HUNGRY TILL FELT HERE

the number of persons in g to be fed mounting al- ally, the Salvation Army es hard pushed to find nt food for distribution the hungry and unemibutions in the orange which have been placed s in the city for collection stuffs, showed a large in- Saturday after a week of atively meagre donations, reported, and officials ex- appreciation for the re- interest.

hundred families are being ly from this source of These figures exclude the at the community wood Salvation Army officials ere is urgent need for arcel of food placed in the They said there is now a e of sugar, coffee and to- for distribution, and that s always acceptable.

INIA FEARS G BLOOD FEUD

sination Of King's lend May Bring On Reprisals

A, March 1. (AP)—The possi- f a blood feud to avenge the Major Topollaj, who was re recently in protecting g of Albania from two as- was seen today in dispatches lgrade.

fficer will be buried early c in either his native moun- osed village of Mati or in here he and his wife lived.

is reports from Albania in- hat relatives might be called at the grave to swear a ainst the assassins of Topol- was the devoted adjutant to . Zog is undergoing treat- re for an ailment of the nd stomach.

Lasting Feuds

tas still are prevalent in Al- it the custom is mostly con- the inhabitants of the n fastnesses and is chiefly to by members of the ortho- n and Moslems. Even Chris- however, have not entirely ed the custom and there are stances of feuds not ending tire families have been ex- ed. An example was the case Bey, brother of Zog's di-

LAST TRIBUTE IS PAID TO ROBERTS

Thousands Line Streets As Cortege Passes To M. E. Church

—(Continued From Page One)

Roberts starred as a baseball pitcher. He was a member of the debating team and also took part in the oratorical contests at commencement.

Returns To County

Mr. Roberts returned to Buncombe county in 1901 and taught school at the Sand Hill school. The following year he taught at Barnardsville, and was elected, after a year of teaching at Barnardsville, principal of the Flat Creek high school. During this period Mr. Roberts was reading and studying law at night and in January 1904 he entered the law school of Wake Forest college and the following August was admitted to the bar.

Being without funds with which to establish himself in his law practice, Mr. Roberts again taught school for one year at the Flat Creek school and two years at the Morgan Hill school, before opening a law office in Asheville in April, 1907. For a short time he was the partner of Samuel Radford, but the partnership soon terminated and Mr. Roberts practiced alone for a year before he was made county attorney to succeed Charles A. Webb.

In 1910 Mr. Roberts formed a partnership with W. G. Fortune which lasted for nine years. In 1910 he was elected to the state legislature where he served during 1911. He was made chairman of the committee on congressional re-appointment by W. C. Dowd of Charlotte, speaker. He was re-elected to the legislature in 1912 and served as chairman of the committee for counties, cities, and towns. In 1914 he was re-elected again and served as chairman of the committee on appropriations. At the 1914 session of the legislature Mr. Roberts introduced a bill to give women the right to vote, but the bill was defeated. He was re-elected in 1916 and was a candidate for the speakership but was defeated by the Hon. Walter Murphy.

Elected Mayor

In 1919 Mr. Roberts was elected mayor of Asheville defeating the late J. E. Rankin. He served four years. While mayor he was three times elected president of the state municipal association, and elected twice to the presidency of the state forestry association.

After his retirement as mayor, Mr. Roberts formed a law partnership with Don C. Young. In 1914 he was appointed chairman of the county board of elections for Buncombe county. He was twice a member of the Buncombe County Democratic Executive Committee. In May, 1927, Mr. Roberts was again elected mayor of the City of Asheville defeating E. B. Atkinson.

An active church worker, Mr. Roberts was an elder and member of the West Asheville Presbyterian church.

GIRL IS WOUNDED NEAR OLD FORT BY ACCIDENTAL SHOT

OLD FORT, March 1.—Annie Patterson, 15, was seriously wounded this afternoon at the home of a brother-in-law, three miles east of Old Fort when a shotgun was accidentally discharged.

Investigators were told that the shotgun fell from its hooks on the wall and was discharged. The load tore through the girl's left leg, inflicting a serious wound. It was believed the girl will recover unless complications set in.

VETO OF SHOALS BILL PREDICTED

Leaders Abandon Hope Of Enacting Any Other Important Laws

—(Continued From Page One)

'an engineering project,' the engineer will know whether to sign or veto the bill.

"It reminds me of the New England country justice who at the close of a law suit said he would take it under advisement for three days at which time he would render judgment for the plaintiff."

To Renew Effort

Senator Herbert, Republican, Rhode Island, will renew his effort in the senate tomorrow to obtain action on the Vestal copyright bill. It already has been approved by the House, but with stiff senate opposition manifest little chance for enactment is seen.

A last-minute effort for an immigration ban will be attempted tomorrow in the House. If the measure proposing to reduce by 90 per cent present immigration quotas gets through the House, friends of the legislation will make a drive for it in the senate.

Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas has put the senate on notice he will attempt to get action on his bill restricting foreign oil imports, but no change for enactment of that legislation is seen in the closing wrangle.

Leaders will devote every effort to obtaining passage of the deficiency appropriation bill. With adoption of this, their worries for the short session will be ended.

TWO QUESTIONED IN DEATH PUZZLE

T. P. JOHNSON IS LAID TO REST

Honors Of Masonry Are Accorded Respected Asheville Man

Funeral service for T. P. Johnson, 64, a resident of Asheville for a quarter of a century, were held from the Noland-Brown chapel yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Rev. H. B. Trimble, of Central Methodist church, officiated. Burial was in Riverside cemetery.

For many years Mr. Johnson conducted the T. P. Johnson Sheet metal works here. He died suddenly Saturday at his home, 46 Forest Road, Kenilworth, from a heart attack.

He is survived by his widow and one sister, Mrs. Davis Trexler, of Hendersonville Road.

He was a member of the Mount Herman lodge No. 118, A. F. and A. M., the Oasis Shrine temple; the Scottish Rite, and was a 32 degree Mason. Masonic honors were accorded the dead man.

Pallbearers were: O'Connor Wilson, A. L. McLean, William Coleman, W. H. Arthur, Charles M. Williams and John C. Vance.

INSECT WIRELESS FOUND BY SAVANT

George M. Dyott Says Tiny Plants Are Very Useful

NEW YORK. (AP)—The antennae of ants and beetles actually are tiny "wireless masts" through which messages are sent "over short wave lengths," says Commander George M. Dyott, the explorer.

Dyott gained world-wide attention two years ago by his expedition into the Brazilian jungles in search of the missing English explorer, Colonel Fawcett.

He brought back some evidence of Fawcett's murder, and now is planning another expedition by airplanes, which in five hours will travel as far as he went in five months.

Dyott heard from savages of "Indians" farther in the interior who pave their roads and build stone houses—another tale pointing to the possible reality of the lost continent Atlantis, supposed by some to have bridged the Atlantic between Africa and South America.

His airplane expedition will search for the source of the stone house Indian rumor, and gather all sorts of scientific data in a country where it is said white men never have penetrated.

Insects are the worst enemies the white man meets in these Brazilian jungles, Dyott says.

THI

Virginia: ly colder M South Cloudy and sional rain moderate n to northwe

Florida: colder Mon erally fair shifting wi fresh—north

Kentucky Tuesday fai perature.

Tennessee Monday, po in extreme morning; rising temp

West Vir slightly col tion Mond slowly risin

THRE TO

Mrs. L To B Re

WASHING Three of th the House Congress a They are Republican, Senate and Hamilton Peden Oldf who is retir erine Langl defeated fo crat.

The rema House cont next sessio

Mrs. Lan she gathere turn to K stood she re-election.

Mrs. M back on h Senate, the said: "I d "Nothing into the daughter a "She did

Mrs. Ol homesick. "I am er "My succe I will be helm.

"My dist fields for a I am cons tude we ov "Because to cast my on each, will remain in Washin for her returning

Funera Is

y from this source of These figures exclude the
at the community wood Salvation Army officials re is urgent need for rcel of food placed in the
They said there is now a of sugar, coffee and to-for distribution, and that always acceptable.

NIA FEARS G BLOOD FEUD

ination Of King's end May Bring On Reprisals

, March 1. (AP)—The possi-
a blood feud to avenge the Major Topollaj, who was re recently in protecting of Albania from two as-as seen today in dispatches grade.
ficer will be buried early in either his native moun-osed village of Mati or in ere he and his wife lived.
s reports from Albania in-at relatives might be called at the grave to swear a inst the assassins of Topolwas the devoted adjutant to . Zog is undergoing treat-re for an ailment of the d stomach.

Lasting Feuds

tas still are prevalent in Alt the custom is mostly con-the inhabitants of the fastnesses and is chiefly to by members of the ortho-and Moslems. Even Chriswever, have not entirely d the custom and there are itances of feuds not ending dre families have been ex-
d. An example was the case
Bey, brother of Zog's diife, who swore to avenge his ubsequent death by poison,
1, and was slain at Prague
by followers of Zog.
og, according to Higmet Del-s set himself the task of ng these feuds but his suc-
not been complete.

D PLAN WILL I INTO COURTS

atrick Announces Will Carry Fight o U. S. Tribunal

(Continued From Page One)

more work than in any pre-x-day period of the session.
ouse and Senate both passed inor road bill, but Senate must be considered by the
The Senate passed the local ent finance act and the 7 to 4, approved it on second
The Senate passed the cen-chasing agency measure. The pproved a bill rewriting the laws relating to tax sales on reading.
al of 188 bills were disposed he two houses during the ncluding many that were by both houses. There were s passed and seven killed.

and the following August was admitted to the bar.

Being without funds with which to establish himself in his law practice, Mr. Roberts again taught school for one year at the Flat Creek school and two years at the Morgan Hill school, before opening a law office in Asheville in April, 1907. For a short time he was the partner of Samuel Radford, but the partnership soon terminated and Mr. Roberts practiced alone for a year before he was made county attorney to succeed Charles A. Webb.

In 1910 Mr. Roberts formed a partnership with W. G. Fortune which lasted for nine years. In 1910 he was elected to the state legislature where he served during 1911. He was made chairman of the committee on congressional re-appointment by W. C. Dowd of Charlotte, speaker. He was re-elected to the legislature in 1912 and served as chairman of the committee for counties, cities, and towns. In 1914 he was re-elected again and served as chairman of the committee on appropriations. At the 1914 session of the legislature Mr. Roberts introduced a bill to give women the right to vote, but the bill was defeated. He was re-elected in 1916 and was a candidate for the speakership but was defeated by the Hon. Walter Murphy.

Elected Mayor

In 1919 Mr. Roberts was elected mayor of Asheville defeating the late J. E. Rankin. He served four years. While mayor he was three times elected president of the state municipal association, and elected twice to the presidency of the state forestry association.

After his retirement as mayor, Mr. Roberts formed a law partnership with Don C. Young. In 1914 he was appointed chairman of the county board of elections for Buncombe county. He was twice a member of the Buncombe County Democratic Executive Committee. In May, 1927, Mr. Roberts was again elected mayor of the City of Asheville defeating E. B. Atkinson.

An active church worker, Mr. Roberts was an elder and member of the West Asheville Presbyterian church, where he taught the Men's Bible class for many years. He was commissioner from the synod of Appalachia at El Dorado, Ark, and voted for Dr. R. F. Campbell of Asheville as moderator. In 1926 Mr. Roberts was sponsor of the drive for funds for the William Jennings Bryan Memorial for this district. He had been a life-long friend of Mr. Bryan.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason and was an honorary member of the Kiwanis Club for 10 years. He was active in the affairs of the West Asheville Club, and community project devoted to the improvement of West Asheville, where Mr. Roberts made his home. During the World War, Mr. Roberts was a four-minute speaker and canvassed this section in the interest of the Liberty Loans.

Mr. Roberts was one of the leaders in the "Greater Asheville" movement in 1929.

Mr. Roberts is survived by his widow, one son, Edward Roberts; a daughter, Margaret Roberts, and one brother, Gwyn Roberts of the Flat Creek section.

VIRGINIA YOUTH IS INJURED WHEN HIS PLANE FALLS

EMPORIA, Va., March 1. (AP)—Edward Parker, 22, received head injuries and a broken leg when the small "parasol" monoplane he was piloting crashed near Temple airport here this afternoon. Spectators said that a wing seemed to crumple as the craft was being brought out of a power dive and it slipped to

Leaders Abandon Hope Of Enacting Any Other Important Laws

(Continued From Page One)

'an engineering project,' the engineer will know whether to sign or veto the bill.

"It reminds me of the New England country justice who at the close of a law suit said he would take it under advisement for three days at which time he would render judgment for the plaintiff."

To Renew Effort

Senator Herbert, Republican, Rhode Island, will renew his effort in the senate tomorrow to obtain action on the Vestal copyright bill. It already has been approved by the House, but with stiff senate opposition manifest little chance for enactment is seen.

A last-minute effort for an immigration ban will be attempted tomorrow in the House. If the measure proposing to reduce by 90 per cent present immigration quotas gets through the House, friends of the legislation will make a drive for it in the senate.

Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas has put the senate on notice he will attempt to get action on his bill restricting foreign oil imports, but no change for enactment of that legislation is seen in the closing wrangle.

Leaders will devote every effort to obtaining passage of the deficiency appropriation bill. With adoption of this, their worries for the short session will be ended.

TWO QUESTIONED IN DEATH PUZZLE

Policeman And Former Husband Of Victim Are Quizzed

NEW YORK, March 1 (AP)—Two men accused by Vivian Gordon strangled vice investigation witness of having conspired to "frame" her arrest eight years ago, were questioned by police today.

They were Patrolman Andrew J McLaughlin who made the arrest and the woman's former husband John Bischoff, Audubon, N J, industrial manager of the District of Columbia penal institute at Washington

McLaughlin was taken to headquarters immediately upon his arrival from Bermuda on the Liner California Dapper, seemingly carefree, McLaughlin said, "Why I didn't even remember the arrest of the woman He emerged smiling from his conference with police Commissioner Edward P Mulrooney and members of the district attorney's staff and said he would return to regular duty

Former Mate Quizzed

Bischoff was understood to have been questioned about his knowledge of the woman's past

"I'll tell plenty" he promised

Miss Gordon was slain after she had written a letter to city vice investigators promising "to tell what she knew of alleged 'framing' of women by policemen

DENTIST PASSES AT PINEHURST OF MALADY OF BRAIN

Herman lodge No. 116, A. F. and A. M., the Oasis Shrine temple; the Scottish Rite, and was a 32 degree Mason. Masonic honors were accorded the dead man.

Pallbearers were: O'Connor Wilson, A. L. McLean, William Coleman, W. H. Arthur, Charles M. Williams and John C. Vance.

INSECT WIRELESS FOUND BY SAVANT

George M. Dyott Says Tiny Plants Are Very Useful

NEW YORK. (AP)—The antennae of ants and beetles actually are tiny "wireless masts" through which messages are sent "over short wave lengths," says Commander George M. Dyott, the explorer.

Dyott gained world-wide attention two years ago by his expedition into the Brazilian jungles in search of the missing English explorer, Colonel Fawcett.

He brought back some evidence of Fawcett's murder, and now is planning another expedition by airplanes, which in five hours will travel as far as he went in five months.

Dyott heard from savages of "Indians" farther in the interior who pave their roads and build stone houses—another tale pointing to the possible reality of the lost continent Atlantis, supposed by some to have bridged the Atlantic between Africa and South America.

His airplane expedition will search for the source of the stone house Indian rumor, and gather all sorts of scientific data in a country where it is said white men never have penetrated.

Insects are the worst enemies the white man meets in these Brazilian jungles, Dyott says.

Can Communicate

Observations of insects and animals as well lead him to believe that they can communicate with one another by some form of mental "radio."

"I believe if human beings were only aware of the powers at their disposal, they would be able to communicate the way animals do," he says

"Once I watched an ant in its attempt to carry home a leaf many times its size It tugged and shoved until it realized its efforts were futile, then stood stock still, wiggling its antennae

"In a moment its SOS was answered by a half-dozen ants, rushing to its aid from as many directions.

"The first ant again wiggled its antennae evidently radioing orders. Without confusion, the first aiders stationed themselves around the rim of the leaf picked it up and bore it off in triumph.

"More than once, too, I have watched elephants moving toward each other from opposite directions," Dyott went on. "They could not possibly have seen each other nor me through the dense jungle growth. One of them could not have scented me, for the wind was in the wrong direction.

"Yet suddenly both elephants halted, hesitated, and then the one which could neither have seen nor scented me suddenly about-faced and hammered off. The other elephant had got wind of me and had warned his friend by 'wireless'."

Yale Will Forecast Scholastic Averages

Mrs. L To B Re

WASHING
Three of th
the House
Congress a
They are Republican,
Senate and Hamilton
Peden Oldf
who is retir erine Langl defeated fo
crat.
The rema
House cont
next session

Mrs. Lan
she gathere turn to K stood she re-election.
Mrs. Mo
back on h
Senate, the said: "I do
"Nothing into the daughter a
"She did n

Mrs. Old
homesick.
"I am cr
"My succes
I will be helm.
"My dist fields for a
I am conse
tude we ow
"Because
to cast my on each, d will remain in Washing for her oc returning h

Funera Is C

Last rite of the Un
pital at Ot near the conducted the Grassy
The Re chaplain a assisted by the Metho survived by one brothe
Pallbeare
Shackleford
nie Bartlet Stroup.

Bio/Roberts, Gallatin

Ash. Cit. 9/29/1912

HON. GALLATIN ROBERTS,
Member of the Legislature From Buncombe County.

9/29/1912

GALLATIN ROBERTS

That the voters of Buncombe county believe in retaining officials who have given good and satisfactory service was plainly shown by the renomination of Gallatin Roberts, Esq., for the legislature at the last democratic primaries. Mr. Roberts is one of the leading younger members of the Asheville Bar and is a member of the firm of Fortune and Roberts whose offices are located in the Library building on Pack square. Although he has built up a lucrative practice he has always found time to take a deep interest and active part in political affairs, and, in 1910, won the democratic nomination for the legislature on the ticket. He was again nominated at the last primaries which is equivalent to a reelection. Mr. Roberts is a native of Flat Creek township in this county, but has practiced law here a number of years and won for himself an enviable reputation as a lawyer. He is a fluent and ready debater and a conscientious student of public affairs, especially of those that most intimately concern the interests of his constituents, without regard to party affiliations.

GALLATIN ROBERTS MAKES FORMAL ENTRY

Gallatin Roberts, candidate for representative No. 1 from Buncombe county in the general assembly, is the first democratic candidate to make formal entry into the political arena in this county. Mr. Roberts appeared at the office of Chairman D. S. Elias, of the Buncombe county election committee, yesterday, signed up his formal notice of entry and paid the customary fee.

Mr. Roberts has served this county at Raleigh in the last two general assemblies and was prominently mentioned for speaker of the house at the last session of the legislature. During the illness of Emmett Wooten, the speaker, who was injured in an automobile accident, from which he subsequently died, Mr. Roberts served as speaker and aroused much favorable comment by his methods in handling the lower house.

Mr. Roberts, if elected, expects to be a candidate for speaker of the house at the next session of the legislature, and it is declared that he has splendid chances of attaining that honor.

Asheville Citizen April 12, 1916

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Roberts, Gallatin 5/7/1919

Wednesday, May 7, 1919.

The Election

The municipal suffrage event is over. As good citizens of a democracy we shall all turn to those civic tasks which were laid aside to determine who should be the directors of our city enterprise for the next four years. The animosities which sprung up in the course of the electoral contest will now be forgotten and Asheville will give its undivided energies to the building of a city.

Mayor Roberts, Commissioner of Public Safety Fitzpatrick, Commissioner of Public Works Sherrill, Police Justice Wells, have before them large opportunities to serve their community; we are confident that they will give to the city the conscientious attention that has marked their activities in other lines; we are confident they will have the support of the patriotic people of the city.

An election cannot please everybody except as an abstract proposition in self-government. But minorities have long since learned to accept the verdict of the polls and return to the every day life undisgruntled and ready to prove their good faith by taking off their coats to labor for the common weal.

NEXT MAYOR OF ASHEVILLE

GALLATIN ROBERTS

PACK MEMORIAL PUBLIC LIBRARY
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

MAYOR WANTS USE OF WOOD PERMITTED

Wires Coal Committee at Atlanta. No Answer From Message at Late Hour Last Night.

Mayor Roberts yesterday protested to the Regional Coal committee for the south, at Atlanta, asking that the use of wood, which is now prohibited in Asheville, for heating purposes in stores and places of business, before and after 9 a. m. and 4 p. m., be permitted. At a late hour last night no answer had been received by the city's chief executive.

His telegram to the committee follows:

"In placing wood on the list of fuels from which heat cannot be used before 9 o'clock a. m. and after 4 o'clock p. m., is, in my opinion, unnecessary and unreasonable, and should be immediately lifted. It is working a great hardship upon the people here."

The committee in Atlanta has issued the following statement, which has not been given publicity here:

"Public and private utilities are depended upon by the committee to give to the mayor or other chief officer of communities served by them, full information concerning the character of power generated by their own plants or purchased directly or indirectly from other plants.

"It is recognized that this modification will make enforcement of the general program of conservation difficult and for that reason the committee asks the loyal co-operation of consumers who may be affected by the modification and of the public generally."

Asheville will be compelled to continue a strict observance of the ruling of the committee until such a time as the French Broad river is of sufficient height to permit the plant of the North Carolina Electrical Power company, which furnishes power to the Asheville Power and Light company, can operate its plant entirely with water, and not partly with coal.

By using coal part of the time to operate the steam auxiliary plant, the local company is placed in the same class as though every hour of the operation was with coal, the committee in Atlanta ruled.

Asheville December 7, 1919

MAYOR ROBERTS PRESIDENT OF THE N.C. FORESTRY ASSOCIATION

Miss Julia Thorns of Asheboro Vice-President and State Forester J. S. Holmes Secretary-Treasurer—Executive Committee to Decide Next Meeting Place of Body

At the closing meeting of the North Carolina Forestry association yesterday, Mayor Gallatin Roberts, of Asheville, was elected president of the association for the ensuing year. Miss Julia A. Thorns, of Asheboro, was elected vice president and State Forester J. S. Holmes was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

The address of Assistant Forester E. E. Carter of the United States Forest Service on "The Need for a National Forest Policy," was the feature of the day's meeting. Mr. Carter presented facts recently gathered by the Forest Service in connection with the report made on the Capper Resolution. Col. F. S. Lambeth, of Thomasville, spoke on "Homegrown Timber for Our Industries" and pointed out the necessity for perpetuating the forests of the state if the wood-using industries are to continue. Prof. Thorndyke Saville made an exceedingly clearcut presentation of the effect of forests upon water supply and told of plans for a survey of the water power resources of the state. "Forestry and Municipal Water Supplies" was the subject of a talk by D. Hidon Ramsey, formerly of Asheville.

The afternoon meeting was marked by an address by former governor Locke Craig on "Mt. Mitchell, the People's Property." Gov. Craig spoke in his usual excellent manner on the history of Mount Mitchell and the establishment of the state park. He made a plea for adequate funds to care for and guard the park.

Gen. Julian S. Carr, of Durham, one of the leading public-spirited men of the state, who has been a faithful attendant at the association meetings, made one of the most interesting and eloquent addresses yet heard by the delegates. He spoke on the preservation of the Mt. Mitchell park as a public park. He has shown his great interest in this matter by making a liberal appropriation toward seeing the end he mentioned accomplished.

The Women Help.

Miss Julia Thorns, of Asheboro, told the meeting what the Federated Women's clubs are doing in the way of conservation. She cited a number of roads of remembrance that have been established and described the state park of Florida, which is under the care of the Federation. Miss Thorns stated that the Federated Women's clubs do not favor the creation of a national park in the Appalachian region since experience has shown that the establishment of national forests is preferable and that the Forest Service is better equipped to handle areas that may be set aside than any other government agency.

Resolutions strongly urging the establishment of an effective state forest fire protection system and more liberal federal contribution for this purpose, were adopted, as was also one calling on congress to make new and liberal appropriations for the continuation of federal purchases of land in the Appalachian region for inclusion in national forest. Other resolutions adopted urged the establishment of a forest experiment station in North Carolina by the federal government, and invited the close cooperation of all lumbermen and railroads in putting forestry on a practicable basis in the state.

Resolutions adopted follow:

Federal and State Fire Protection.

Whereas, it is obvious that the supply of virgin timber in the state of North Carolina and in the eastern nited States is being rapidly exhausted, and

Whereas, it is equally obvious that the people of this state and of the United States must fill their future needs for lumber for home building and for their industries by growing the timber on lands not needed for other uses, and

Whereas, the prevalence of forest vres as the greatest obstacle to the growing of timber and is therefore a menace to the people of this state and to the people of the nited States, and

Whereas, the present efforts of the state of North Carolina to prevent and suppress forest fires, despite the efficient work of the State Geological and Economic Survey, are not meeting this menace, and Therefore, Be It Resolved: That the North Carolina Forestry association urges on the people of the state the enactment of legislation for the establishment of an adequate forest fire protection force in this state, and further, that it urges on congress the appropriation of funds sufficient to furnish reasonable cooperation with the several states for the same purpose.

Acquisition of Forest Lands.

Whereas, the acquisition by the federal government of non-agricultural lands in North Carolina for inclusion within national forests has proved a benefit to the people of the state as a demonstration in timber growing and in other ways; and

Whereas, the congress has adjourned without making an appropriation for the continuation of these purchases in North Carolina and in other eastern states;

Therefore, Be It Resolved: That the North Carolina Forestry association respectfully recommends to the congress that the former appropriation of two million dollars a year for such purposes be renewed; and

Be It Further Resolved: That copies of this resolution be sent to all members of congress from this state.

Whereas, the establishment of forestry experiment stations and the studies conducted at such stations are of [illegible]

Be It Resolved: That the North Carolina Forestry association extend its hearty approval of and cooperation in the efforts to secure the establishment of a forestry experiment station in North Carolina; and

Be It Further Resolved: That this association urges the establishment of such a station with an appropriation of adequate funds for its operation.

State Parks and Forests.

Whereas, the state and municipal parks and forests are of permanent benefit to the people of our state for recreation, for protection and the production of timber; and

Whereas, Mt. Mitchell state park has been purchased by the state for the benefit of all the people; and

Whereas, the state legislature has so far provided no funds for the protection, administration and improvement of this park,

Be It Resolved: That this association hereby memoralize the next general assembly to provide adequately for the support of Mt. Mitchell state park; and

Resolved, Further: That we hereby recommend that North Carolina adopt a far-seeing policy of acquisition of forested areas for the benefit of the people of the state.

Lumbermen.

Whereas, it is realized that an adequate forestry program cannot be carried through without the cooperation of the lumbermen and other users of timber, and

Whereas, we realize that the practical men in the woods have difficulties which [illegible]

Therefore Be It Resolved: That this association invites close conference with individuals and associations engaged in our timber industries with the object of arriving at some definite forest policies which we can work for side by side.

Railroads.

Resolved, that the association appreciates the cooperation of the railroads in the protection of forests and is realized that the cooperation of the railways with the North Carolina Geological and Economic Survey can be made very effective in preventing forest fires.

Appreciation.

Resolved, that we hereby express our high appreciation to the Asheville Board of Trade for the use of its rooms and the many other courtesies which it has extended to us all.

Resolved, further, that the thanks of this association be extended to the city newspapers and to the management of the Battery Park and Langren Hotels.

Col. Pratt.

Col. Joseph Hyde Pratt, director of the North Carolina Geological and Economic Survey, told the members yesterday of his observations in the French and Belgian forests while in command of the 105th Engineers, and outlined a number of lessons which American can learn from the experience of those countries.

A realization of the value of timber has been forced upon France and Belgium by a long continued scarcity, Col. Pratt said. The people have learned to [illegible] used, but the small branches and twigs are made into faggots for firewood. All that remains after a tree is cut are the leaves that have been broken off. All of the forests receive careful attention and are intersected by broad fire lines which aid in the control of fires that are started.

There is no waste land in France, according to Col. Pratt. Any area, no matter how small, that is unfit for agricultural crops or pasture, is growing trees because the wood is needed. Even the roadsides are lined with trees and when one is cut every bit of it is used. When the timber is ready for cutting, it is harvested in such a way that the land is sure to grow a new crop. This is done either by leaving seed trees or by planting.

In the Landes region, France has converted what was once a fever-ridden swamp into a healthy district by planting trees, and has at the same time established an important naval stores industry, Col. Pratt reported. North Carolina, by neglecting to care for the splendid long-leaf pine forests which occurred naturally in the eastern part of the state, has lost its prestige as a producer of naval stores. Great areas once covered with magnificent pine forests are now desolate wastes, Col. Pratt stated, when they might have been kept producing timber in perpetuity.

What has happened in the eastern part of the state is bound to take place in the hardwood forests unless measures looking to thei rprotection are speedily taken. The long-leaf pine, contrary to general belief, will reproduce itself if seed trees are left and if it is protected from fire and jogs. The hardwood forests likewire need protection from fire and should be cut so that ample provision is made for reseeding the cut-over land. Long-leaf pine has almost been exterminated in eastern North Carolina, and the yellow poplar is in danger unless more conservative methods of lumbering are adopted.

E. E. Carter.

Basing his statements on studies made by the forest service for the report on the so-called Capper resolution, Assistant Forester E. E. Carter, of the United States Forest Service, told the association that the price of building material in North Carolina, or anywhere else in the country nowadays is governed by the cost of shipping it all the way across the continent, plus several profits. This is besause the principal lumber regions of the east no longer produce enough lumber to supply the demand.

We have got to have lumber in order to supply material for homes and to make possible the logical development of our industries. With the supply of mature or virgin timber gone, the price of lumber in the future must include the cost of growing as well as of harvesting and manufacturing timber. Private owners of timberland have failed to make the porper provision for a future supply. The public interest demands that compulsory legislation be enacted which will make that provision. Such legislation has got to come and come soon if we are to escape conditions like those which prevail in Europe where wood is a luxury whose use has got to be carefully watched.

The first step in timber production is fire protection, Mr. Carter stated. Without fire protection the forests of North Carolina, and the rest of the country will inevitably disappear. Given fire protection and a reasonable amount of care, they will, in most cases, restock themselves and produce timber which will be ample for future needs.

Many of the states have realized the necessity for fire protection and have made provision for protective systems. Under the provisions of the wood law the forest service is cooperating with these states and is contributing to the cost. The amount provided by North Carolina is only about $3,000 or $4,000, and is pitifully inadequate to meet the need, Mr. Carter stated. Because of the small state appropriation the amount contributed by the government is only about $2,000.

The big need in North Carolina, according to Mr. Carter, is for an adequate appropriation and legislation which will enable the state forester to install an effective fire protective system. With this a start can be made which will repay many fold the money that it costs. Until this is done, the forests of the state will continue to lose ground before the combined attack of lumbering and forest fires.

There is plenty of land in the state chiefly valuable for growing timber to meet the future needs of the state for wood and to retain its export business, it was stated, but until that land is kept productive, North Carolina will pay the price of timber depletion just as New Yorn or Michigan is doing now. With 18,000,000 acres of forest land, North Carolina has no need to worry if it keeps that land growing timber.

Mr. Carter spoke briefly of the effort to secure a forest experiment station at Asheville and said that it was an encouraging sign of the interest in timber growing. The project should not be allowed to drop and it is to be hopeo that eventually such a station can be established. He announced also that copies of the report on the Capper resolution are not available as congress has not yet had it printed.

Asheville Citizen June 11, 1920

GALLATIN ROBERTS IS PRES. OF STATE BODY

ASHEVILLE'S MAYOR HONORED BY OTHERS OF STATE

Association to Ask Legislature to Take Act to People to Be Passed on Mayor Gallatin Roberts, of this city, was elected president of the North Carolina Municipal association, which was organized in Raleigh yesterday, according to dispatches received by The Citizen last night. A conference of mayors and finance officers was called to meet in Raleigh Tuesday and Mayor Roberts and City Auditor F. L. Conder left here Monday afternoon to attend the sessions.

The association it is understood, will take up with the legislature, at the special session which will be held in July, the proposal to amend the state re-valuation act, so as to permit cities levying in excess of ten per cent license limitation in the act, upon submitting the proposal to the people.

The mayors and finance officers found that a number of the cities would had it hard sledding next year if they were not permitted to collect more than ten per cent increase on the revenues of the previous year.

The other officers of the newly organized association were not given in the dispatches, but it is presumed that they were elected and that committees to look after the various details of the work of the association were also named by the convention. Many of the chief executives of the state have felt for sometime that there should be an organization of this nature, and the call for such a meeting was responded to with much interest by the mayors of the state.

Asheville Citizen June 24, 1920

ESTABLISHED 1868 ASHEVILLE, N. C., TUESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 13, 1921. PRICE FIVE CENTS.

EFFORT LAUNCHED TO RECALL CITY COMMISSIONERS

Mayor Roberts Is Glad To Stand On His Record For Any Investigation

Petitions, It Is Said, Will Be Circulated Today for Signature of Those Wishing Recall and New Election --Promoters of Recall Say 1,031 Signers Needed to Make It Effective.

Charging that Mayor Gallatin Roberts and Commissioners R. L. Fitzpatrick and R. J. Sherrill were guilty of "gross incompetency and mismanagement of business transactions and financial affairs of the city of Asheville, extravagant in the expenditure of public funds and enacting discriminative and class legislation," following a meeting last night of a score of business men it was announced that beginning today petitions will be circulated requesting the recall of the entire board.

The meeting was held in the offices of Attorneys Howell and Reynolds in the Strand Theatre building and all present are said to have been unanimously in favor of circulating the petitions and to call a mass meeting Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the county court house to consider further plans for "ousting" the members of the board.

It was stated that today, handbills will be printed and distributed urging all citizens to be in attendance at the mass meeting, where the "present state of affairs of the city government will be gone over from beginning to end," and immediate steps be taken to remove the commissioners."

When a Citizen reporter called upon Mayor Gallatin Roberts last night, the head of the city government expressed himself as being greatly surprised and said with emphasis that he was willing to stand by his record since he took the oath of the office. As the decision of those attending the meeting became known at a late hour, the mayor had retired and was awakened for a statement.

The tentative petition drawn up hastily after the meeting, states as grounds for such recall that "extravagance in the expenditure of public funds and tax receipts had resulted in an increase of 25 per cent in the taxes over 1920; that by-laws and ordinances governing the citizens of Asheville had been discriminative and class legislation; that the board had refused to co-operate, causing continuous wrangling and 'school-boy' disputes at the expense of the city's best interests." An election is demanded to fill the offices of mayor and commissioners of finances and public accounts, commissioner of public works and commissioner of public safety, as prescribed in the charter of the city.

Mayor Roberts Talks.

At his home last night, Mayor Roberts said that his life had been an open book to all the people of the city. "Every dollar that has come into my hands as financial officer has been carefully and judicially handled," he said. "Every one in the city, who desires, may come and see for himself. Any attempt of any one to despoil the people's money has been denounced and instantly discharged from the service of the city.

"I am absolutely willing for my record to be investigated. Upon my record, I will stand."

"After more than two year's of financial stringency, I am glad to say that Asheville is in better shape than many cities of this state. Our accounting system is considered the best in the state, by expert auditors. I invite every man in the city who is interested to come and examine the records. Mayor Roberts said he was willing to stand on his record of more than two years of my best energy and activity."

Mayor Roberts laid special stress on the assertion that he was willing to have his record investigated from the beginning of his administration up to the present time. Since assuming his duties, Mr. Roberts has been twice elected head of the North Carolina Municipal association, an organization composed of the mayors of nearly 60 municipalities of North Carolina. On many occasions he has been invited to speak on municipal finances, and was very active in urging Governor Morrison to call the special session of the legislature on December 5, next to consider the municipal finance act, declared invalid because of a reported inconsistency in the recording of the proceedings in the clerk's journal.

Fitzpatrick Talks.

Commissioner Fitzpatrick, when questioned following the meeting, if he had been apprised of the movement which had been started for a recall and a new election, he declared that he had not. He said that he had heard a few days before that some such steps were about to be taken, and wanted to know if the city judge was not also involved in the effort to have a recall started in the city.

"I have been serving the city for about 18 years, one way and another," the commissioner remarked; when the avorments as set forth in the petition were read to him, "and it's a funny thing they would not have had time by then to find out I was incompetent to serve, before they elected me the last time. Part of that time I served as alderman."

Referring to the allegation of a lack of co-operation, Commissioner Fitzpatrick declared that he knew of no such conditions and that things, so far as he knew, were going very smoothly. He further said that he was at a loss to know why extravagance should be charged, because he felt there had been none in the conduct of the city's affairs.

As to class legislation in the matter of by-laws, and ordinances for the city, Commissioner Fitzpatrick declared that he had no idea what the people, drawing up the petition, could have been referring to.

According to the statement made by those in attendance at the meeting last night, thirty-five per cent of the voters must be secured in order, to call the election, which, according to their computations, will be 1,031 qualified voters. It was stated that a total of 2,947 voters had gone to the polls in the last election and since that time a large number of women had registered. A general discussion took place at the gathering and a number of ordinances passed by the board were discussed.

Mayor Roberts could not be reached by telephone last night and no statement could be secured from him. George Pennell, city corporation counsel, said when called over the phone that he had no statement to make.

Petitions were circulated last year asking for the recall of Commissioner Fitzpatrick, but nothing materialized.

It was alleged by members at the meeting last night that the launching of a campaign for the recall of the commissioners had been smouldering for several weeks, and that a number of them had received reports that petitions were already being circulated, but upon investigation they failed to learn anything further.

Following is a copy of the petition that will be circulated:

Copy of Petition

To the Secretary-Treasurer of the City of Asheville:

We, the undersigned citizens, residents, qualified voters and electors of the City of Asheville, North Carolina, hereby petition, request and demand the recall of Mayor, Commissioner of Public Accounts and Finances, Gallatin Roberts; Commissioner of Public Works, R. J. Sherrill, and of Commissioner of Public Safety, R. L. Fitzpatrick, and after satisfying yourself that the requisite number of qualified voters have petitioned, requested and demanded their recall, that you then present this petition to the Mayor and Commissioners that they may order an election as prescribed by law.

And as grounds for such recall, we prefer the following charges, to-wit:

First—Gross incompetency and mismanagement of the business transactions and financial affairs of the City of Asheville.

Second—Gross extravagance in the expenditure of the public funds and tax receipts of the City of Asheville, resulting in a twenty-five per cent increase in taxes over 1920.

Third—Discriminative and class legislation in the passage an enactment of by-laws and ordinances governing the citizens and inhabitants of the City of Asheville as a municipal corporation.

Fourth—Their inability and refusal to co-operate in the management of the City's affairs resulting in a lack of harmony, continuous wrangling and schoolboy disputes all at the expense of the City's best interests and to the disgrace of our municipality.

And we demand an election of successors to fill the offices of Mayor, Commissioner of Public Accounts and Finances; of Commissioner of Public Works, and Commissioner of Public Safety, all as prescribed by the Charter of the City of Asheville, Chapter 49, Private Laws of 1915.

Respectfully submitted.

Name: Residence:

Asheville Citizen September 13, 1921

MAYOR ROBERTS SAYS 1922 BEAMS WITH BOUYANT HOPES

The past should not be forgotten, its pathway is strewn with blasted hopes and keen disappointments. The future beams with buoyant hope. All hail the New Year.

The above is perhaps the keynote of the New Year's message of Mayor Gallatin Roberts to the people of Asheville. His message follows:

"Another year is here already. Another year is gone forever. Its books are closed; its record made, and even if the balance be on the wrong side of the ledger, it need not be carried over to the new book for 1922.

"Of course lost opportunities are lost forever, but the new year will bring new ones, and they may be improved. 1921 is gone; another milepost has been reached on life's journey, and it is well for each one of us to pause and look back over the rough places and also the smooth places over which we have traveled. At times during the year 1921 there were clouds, doubts and uncertainty—fragrant flowers, open graves and absent faces, and heart-rending grief. Some are still looking upward; others are looking onward to lengthening shadows, and the coming twilight. Time is moving swiftly on. The past is only a memory. The past should not be forgotten; its pathway is strewn with blasted hopes and keen disappointments.

"The year 1921, whcih ended when the clock struck twelve last night, deserves a bright page in the annals of the passing years. Many things occurred in its passing weeks and months to strengthen hope and brighten the lives of men and women.

"Turning aside from that which is passed and gone forever, All Hail the New Year. The future actually beams with buoyart hope, and we predict great things for the year 1922. There are reasons to believe that it will bring many good things for all the people.

"It is the fervent hope and prayer of every one that the New Year will bring peace and prosperity to our nation and to all the world."

Signed GALLATIN ROBERTS,
Mayor of Asheville.

Asheville Citizen January1, 1922

Roberts Hopes Plans Will Mature For Athletic Field Postoffice, Library In 1923

In a special New Year's message to the public, Mayor Gallatin Roberts asserts he has great hope for 1923 and believes next year will bring an athletic field, a new posto ce and a new library building for Asheville. The message:

"The New Year 1923 is almost here. 1922 is rapidly drawing to a close, and it deserves a bright page in the annals of the passing years. Many things occurred in the days, weeks and months to revive and strengthen hope.

"In saying good-bye to 1922, it is done affectionately, for it brought many good things to the people of Asheville. Our people were wonderfully blessed during the entire year, and our City's growth and development was really phenominal.

"Time moves rapidly on; it has been called the 'cradle of hope.' It is crowded full with memories; some excite pleasure; others that undoubtedly bring sadness. In many instances its pathway was strewn with blasted hopes and keen disappointments.

"But let us turn from that which is past and gone forever to the New Year 1923. Its outlook beams with hope, and great things in every line of human endeavor are anticipated and expected of the New Year which begins with tomorrow. There is good reason for believing that it will bring many good things to the people of Asheville and the entire country.

"We believe that the great building activity begun in 1922 will continue during the year 1923. Asheville needs a new postoffice; a new library and an athletic field. These things can be secured at an early date we believe. These things along with the completion of our great school program, and an additional paving program will place Asheville in an enviable position."

GALLATIN ROBERTS,
Mayor.

December 29, 1922.

Asheville Citizen December 31, 1922

May 1927

TO THE VOTERS of ASHEVILLE

I am a candidate for Mayor and I am asking your support. I realize that you have the right to know the principles for which I stand, and I have no hesitancy in revealing them to you with my promise to exert every effort to see the following, among other things, carried out, if I am elected:

1. The primary and election will be held on a nonpartisan basis as provided by our charter creating a commission form of government. I want every man in Asheville to know that, if I am elected, he shall receive a square deal from me, regardless of the political party to which he belongs, whether he be rich or poor, high or low, for equal justice will be given all.

2. Having been a teacher in the public schools for seven years, and realizing as only a school teacher does, the supreme need of efficiency in the public schools, the school children of Asheville will be nearer to my heart than anything else. I stand for the immediate completion of the new High School building as rapidly as possible, and the upkeep and maintenance of the other school buildings of the city. I believe that the school teachers should receive adequate compensation for the important work in which they are engaged.

3. Having served on the Finance Committee in charge of the state-wide revenue bills while a member of the State Legislature, and having assisted in the drafting and passing of such bills, the need for a progressive administration of the finances of the City has received my attention for years. I believe in a progressive administration of the finances of the City, but believe in using the utmost economy in placing every dollar of the people's money where it will be of the most advantage.

4. I am deeply concerned as a citizen of Asheville in better fire protection, a permanent fire station in West Asheville; in making the City of Asheville as sanitary in every respect as possible; in efficient street maintenance; in the construction of new streets and sidewalks in every section of the city; in furnishing water to every family of the City at the very lowest rate possible; in the construction of a modern public rest or comfort station; band concerts; in establishing and maintaining parks, playgrounds, and other needful recreation or amusement places and I believe in improving the grounds of every public school in a manner befitting the dignity of Asheville, so that they will afford comfort and pleasure to our school children.

5. I believe in the development of Asheville in every manner possible. I believe in a municipal plan of growth, always with an eye to the future, and to do this a concerted effort should be made by the administration in the development of our City and its people, by promoting municipal effort in projects of construction and building that will produce immediate employment for our splendid workmen, mechanics and returned soldiers.

I believe in all the above principles and pledge my every effort in their support should you see fit to place me in the office which I seek, and I want every one to know that if elected, I will treat every man, woman and child in the fairest and most just manner, regardless of Politics, for we all pay taxes and we are all entitled to consideration regardless of party affiliations or wealth.

Your Friend,

GALLATIN ROBERTS

MAYOR ROBERTS GREETS SPEED DEMON

Harry Hartz, internationally known racing driver is shown above shaking hands with Mayor Gallatin Roberts, on the occasion of the celebration yesterday by the Kibler Motor Company, of its formal open-i[illegible] Behind the mayor and Hartz is the Studebaker "Commander" that won the stock car race recently at Charlotte.

Asheville Times September 22, 1927

West Asheville Anxious To Aid Community Chest

Mayor Roberts Gives The First Check In Section, Mrs. Gaskins Says

"You can say for West Asheville that it will do its full duty for the Community Chest this year," Mrs. S. Whit Gaskins, general of the West Asheville division of the community chest campaign, declared last night.

"It is the first time our part of the city has been organized for a thing of this kind, but in no part of Asheville will you find more civic pride or a desire to do helpful things.

"Our campaign was officially opened by Gallatin Roberts, our mayor, when he gave me his person check as our first contribution to the chest. We have 60 workers who are going out Tuesday to work intensively to cover as much our our territory as possible. This is no small undertaking because West Asheville covers a lot of territory and for 60 persons to cover it adequately in one day is a difficult task. But we are going to do our very best.

"On Sunday we have arranged for three minute speeches at several of our churches. Don C. Young will speak at the Calvary Baptist church at the morning service, and Harry Logan at the church. Mrs. Horace C. Wells will speak at the Presbyterian church and I will speak at the West Asheville Methodist church.

"If anyone has any doubt about the civic pride of West Asheville they should have been at the meeting called Friday night at the Hall Fletcher high school. This meeting was addressed by Frank S. Smith, chairman of the organization committee of the community chest and he sold the community chest idea as well as any one could have done and 50 of our leading citizens signed up right then and there to work for the cause. Among these workers are Rev. J. B. Grice and Dr. Wilbur McMann. These workers in West Asheville have 1,200 cards and we will use the majority of them."

Mayor Opens Chest Campaign

The above picture shows the Honorable Gallatin Roberts, mayor of Asheville, handing his personal subscription to Mrs. S. Whit Gaskins, general of the West Asheville Division of the Community Chest army. As Mayor Roberts is a resident of West Asheville he was asked by Mrs. Gaskins to officially open the campaign on that side of the river.

Asheville Times October 23, 1927

Ash. Times 3/18/28

ROMANTIC STORY OF ASHEVILLE GROWTH SHOWN IN HISTORY WRITTEN BY MAYOR ROBERTS

Ash. Times 3/18/28

By GALLATIN ROBERTS
Mayor of Asheville.

Asheville was founded by John Burton in the year 1794. It was called Morristown for a while. John Burton was in fact a City Planner. He laid out a part of the grant which he secured from the state into forty-two (42) lots of one-half acre each, established streets thirty-three feet wide, and sold many of these lots for $2.50 each. (On the 2nd day of June, 1922, one of Asheville's streets was named for John Burton, and is known as Burton street.) This new town was sometimes called Buncombe Courthouse. In the year 1797 it was incorporated, and called Asheville, named for Samuel Ashe, an eminent jurist.

Original City Charter.

"An act established a town at the court house in the county of Buncombe.

"Whereas, it is represented to this General Assembly that the establishing a town at the court house in Buncombe County would be of great utility and accord with the desire of the inhabitants of said county, and there being a number of lots already laid off at the said court house, and Zebulon Baird, Esq., the proprietor of lands adjoining the same, having signified his consent to lay off as much more land as will amount to sixty-three acres, including said lots for the purpose aforesaid.

"1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same, that the aforesaid sixty-three acres of land be and the same is hereby constituted and established, a town by the name of Asheville, and that John Jarrett, Samuel Chunn, William Welch, George Swain and Zebulon Baird, Esq., be and they are hereby appointed commissioners for the purpose of carrying into effect the plan of said town and disposing of the lots in such a manner as they or a majority of them shall think advisable: Provided, nevertheless, that nothing in this act shall be construed so as to prevent Zebulon Baird from having the power and right of executing titles of such lots as are yet not disposed of.

Majority of Quorum.

"2. And be it further enacted that, in all matters and things relative to said town a majority of the commissioners shall constitute a quorum, and in case of death, refusal to act, incapacity or removal of any of them, the remaining commissioners shall fill up such vacancies; and that their first meeting shall be held on the fourth Saturday in January, next, when they shall proceed to appoint a treasurer, who shall be of their own body, and when chosen shall be considered as chairman, and into whose hands all monies collected for the use of said town shall be paid; and he shall give bond with sufficient security, payable to the remaining commissioners for the due application and accounting for all monies by him received; and it shall be considered his duty to cause all the laws, rules and regulations made for the order and government of the said town to be carried into effect.

"3. And be it further enacted that the said commissioners or a majority of them shall have full power and authority to make such by laws and regulations as they may think necessary for the good government of said town and shall have and possess the same powers and authorities usually given to like commissioners, and such rules and regulations as they may make shall be carried into effect by such penalties as they may deem necessary.

"4. And be it further enacted that the commissioners aforesaid shall be empowered to lay a tax annually not exceeding the demands necessary for said town, either on the poll or the value of town property, or both if necessary, which tax shall be levied and collected in such manner as the said commissioners may direct."

Growth Slow At First.

For the next fifty years the growth of Asheville was exceedingly slow, and but little is known of the activities of the little municipality. From the time Asheville was incorporated up and until the year 1849, the town was governed by Commissioners elected from time to time, probably at irregular intervals.

Today we have no official minutes of the various town administrations of our city until the year 1849. On July 24, 1849, James M. Smith, James N. Patton, N. W. Woodfin, Wm. D. Rankin, and M. Patton were elected Commissioners.

As far as we have any records to show, this board made the first effort to adopt rules and regulations to govern its deliberations and its official actions.

Isaac B. Sawyer was the first mayor of Asheville. He was the father of the late James P. Sawyer.

Andrew Erwin was Asheville's first postmaster. He came to Asheville from Wilkes county. In 1814 he removed to the state of Georgia.

In 1806 George Swain, who lived at the head of Beaverdam Creek, was postmaster. His second son, David L. Swain, became judge, governor, and president of the State University. Samuel Chunn was chairman of the Buncombe county court. From him Chunn's Cove took its name.

The first court house erected in Asheville was built of logs and stood at the head of Patton avenue, not far from where the Vance monument now stands.

Extend Limits.

The Legislature in 1849 passed an act extending the corporate limits of Asheville. At this time there were not more than twenty-five residences and five brick buildings in Asheville. The old Presbyterian church was on the site of the present one on Church street, the Methodist church property extended from Patton avenue and Church street to the Aston property, the old Episcopal church on the site of the present Trinity church, and the jail stood on the east margin of what is now Pack square.

In 1850 the white population of Asheville did not exceed three hundred, with probably one hundred seventy-five negro slaves.

In 1851, the Legislature incorporated the Asheville and Greenville Plank Road company. This plank road was between Asheville and Greenville, S. C., and contributed much toward Asheville's growth. At the close of the War Between the States the plank road was in very bad [illegible]lon, and in the year 1866 the [illegible] of the Plank Road company [illegible] repealed.

[illegible] building of this turnpi[illegible]ville became a hec th re-

About this time, Goodson M. Roberts had a large store where the United Cigar Store now stands, and just back of this store was a farmers' camping ground. There were no other building down to Church street, except one small baker's shop.

An interesting event in those never-to-be-forgotten days was the arrival of the stage coach. The driver's bugle could be heard for miles. The arrival of the stage created as much interest in those days as the arrival of a passenger train does in a small town now.

Pasture 50 Years Ago.

Judge James Henry lived just back of the present Bon Marche building, and had his stable on top of Battery Park hill. That wonderful hill was a pasture fifty years ago. Many friends of nature and beauty were grieved to see the steam shovel biting into this old beauty spot known far and wide as "Battery Park." "You may break, you may shatter the vase if you will, but the scent of the roses will cling to it still."

In 1877, the Asheville library association asked for financial aid from the town and the request was respectfully refused for the reason that it had no authority to use public funds for such purposes. In 1879 the Asheville Public Library was started in a small way, and has grown to such an extent that now it is recognized as the leading library in North Carolina.

On the 28th day of February, 1879, a great mass meeting was held in the Buncombe county court house, and this meeting demanded that the city officials issue $5,000 in bonds for the purpose of macadamizing Main street.

Today we look with interest upon the early efforts of our forefathers to build a city.

On the 18th day of July, 1890 plans for the city hall and Market house building were considered, and a special committee was appointed to go into the details of the construction of this new building. This building was soon afterwards constructed, and on August 26, 1892, the first meeting of the mayor and board of aldermen was held in the City building at 5 o'clock p. m. This building was torn down in 1926.

Discussing Water.

In the year 1881, the first active steps were taken to secure a water supply for Asheville, and today we are still discussing the water situation.

In the year 1881, the first railroad train reached Asheville, and came over the Blue Ridge mountains.

In the year 1882, under the administration of Col. V. S. Lusk, a fire department was organized. That is just a few days back as we count time.

At a meeting of the town commissioners, May 11th, 1883, Dr. J. H. Watkins was appointed to superintend the lighting of the street lamps "and the town marshal was authorized to procure a suitable place for empounding cattle that may be taken up for violation of ordinances."

On the 30th day of August, 1883, a jury was placed upon Chestnut street for the purpose of widening same, and the jury awarded each property owner as damages, and the was duly approved by the board.

In 1883 the town of Asheville expanded and made the city of Asheville. The circle boundry was discarded, additional territory being annexed at the northeast and west. At the same time a strip of territory in the shape of a half moon, lying east of Beaucatcher mountain was dropped from the corporate limits.

In 1884 the Asheville Mission hospital was opened in a five-room house by a few noble women, who conceived the idea of such an institution.

Buy Jail Property.

On the 4th day of February, 1884, the City of Asheville purchased from Buncombe county the jail property, where the old Market house formerly stood for the sum of $5,000.

The year of 1885 was really an epoch in Asheville's history. The building of the Battery Park hotel was an outstanding event, and was a great boom to Asheville, and in September, 1886, the city authorities passed an ordinance authorizing Asheville Street Railway company to use the streets of Asheville for street railway servicce.

In 1886, the City of Asheville secured its water supply from the old pumping station on the Swannanoa river near where the present Asheville Recreation park is located. In the year 1902 the present North Fork sixteen-inch main was built, and in 1920-21 the Bee Tree line was built. Both lines bringing a large supply of water into the city.

In 1887 the Asheville Female College was built. This institution meant much to Asheville in it's day. It was located on Oak street, where the David Millard high school now stands, and it was in 1887 that artificial gas was first used in Asheville.

The Asheville Normal and Associated schools was established forty years ago, Oct. 5, 1887. The Normal department was added to this school in 1892, and during this time has graduated 1,270 teachers. During the past twelve years the course of study has been extended four years. This has built the Normal and Associated schools up to a standard four years teacher's college, and now holds this rating as a standard teacher's college.

It is interesting to recall the early history of the schools in Asheville. In January, 1888, 600 white children started to school in an old building on Montford avenue, known as the Asheville Military Academy, and 150 negro children in an old wooden building on Catholic Hill. In the year 1888 Orange street was built at a cost of about $10,000. In the year 1892 a new building was provided at Montford avenue, and Bailey street (now Asheland avenue), was added to the list of schools.

Cleveland Visits City.

On the 21st day of October, 1886, Grover Cleveland, then president of the United States, and Mrs. Cleveland, visited Asheville and were enthusiastically received.

In the year 1888 the Southern Bell Telephone company was granted permission to operate and maintain a general telephone business in Ashe-sort and people came to Asheville from all parts of the South.

It is interesting to know that on the 28th day of March, 1855, Zebulon B. Vance was elected town commissioner of Asheville, and served for one year. On the 4th day of February, 1861, R. B. Vance was elected town commissioner of Asheville. Later in life these two brothers became famous. Zebulon B. Vance was elected congressman, governor, and United States Senator, and R. B. Vance served in congress many years with distinction.

An inspection of the Minute Books of the City of Asheville fails to show anything of particular interest from 1861 until several years after the Civil War.

Courthouse Burns.

In the month of March, 1865, the courthouse was burned. It stood near where Vance's monument now stands. At this time the court room was full of prisoners. The fire was first discovered in the top of the building by the guards. The fire had burned the cords of the weight-clock, and the weights which were very heavy dropped through three floors. This fire caused great excitement, and Otto Hildebrand dashed through the town on horseback crying, "The Yankees are here, and old Ashtown is burning up." This was before the day of water works in Asheville. The public well was near where the Jackson building now stands, and during the progress of the fire the prisoners were taken out of the building, and hurried in the street under guard. The building was burned to the ground. Many of the records of the court house were saved by H. S. Walton, Silas Stroup, and John Wilson, and other citizens. Buckets were taken from the Confederate government commissary, located where the Plaza theater now stands, and a bucket brigade attempted to carry water from the old well, above mentioned, to save the court house and other buildings on old South Main street.

The board which was elected in January, 1869, fixed the tax rate as follows:

Each $100 worth of personal property, 16 cents.

Each $100 worth of real property, 20 cents.

Growth Is More Rapid.

This board also authorized its secretary to "correspond with parties where India rubber or leather buckets could be procured to be used for carrying water in case of fire." They taxed all stores where silver and gold canes were sold twenty-five cents each respectively. During this administration the board meetings were held in the private office of the Mayor, Thomas D. Johnston, and he was allowed twenty-five dollars per year for use of same. This is mentioned only for the purpose of showing conditions then and now.

We forget, or do not realize, how fast Asheville has grown during the last half century. The outstanding achievement of the board of commissioners elected in 1871, was the building of a calaboose for the sum of $200, and increasing the tax rate from 16 cents to 30 cents upon personal property.

ville. This system has grown tremendously, and today this company operates more than 12,000 telephones in Asheville.

An inspection of the minute books of the city reveals that on the 6th of December, 1889, a page was dedicated to the memory of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate States of America. We are glad that this was done. The world is now learning to appreciate the worth of this great man of unimpeachable character, and one of the great men of history.

On the 17th day of October, 1890, a building permit was issued for the First Baptist church, corner of Spruce and College streets. This church building was just recently torn down and a fine new structure erected on the corner of Oak and Woodfin streets.

In 1891 the post office was built.

Lay Cornerstone.

On December 22, 1896, the cornerstone for Vance monument was laid with the North Carolina Grand Lodge of Masons officiating.

In 1905 the corporate limits of Asheville were again extended, making the city's area 5.60 square miles, or the same as the city's present area lying on the east side of the French Broad river.

The Langren hotel was built in 1912 and Grove Park Inn in 1913.

In the year 1915 the commission form of government was adopted, and in 1917 West Asheville was included in the corporate limits. West Asheville at that time was incorporated, so the move in 1917 was a merger of two incorporated cities, rather than a boundry expansion.

Since 1917 six new schools have been built, and another high school is under construction, and today the school department is valued at $5,028,325.55.

In the last few years the Recreation Park, the McCormick Athletic Field, the Municipal Golf course, and the Athletic stadium were built.

Since 1920, four modern fire stations have been constructed and a full paid fire department added.

Asheville has shown a wonderful growth during the last decade. The real and personal property in Asheville is assessed at $104,205,000.

Today Asheville is one of the most outstanding communities in the state of North Carolina, and as the years come and go, our city will still continue to grow and develop.

Asheville Public Library

Mayor Roberts Greets Mrs. Dull

The head of Asheville's city government is shown here with Mrs. S. R. Dull, after he formally introduced this noted Southern home economics expert to her audience at the formal opening of The Asheville Citizen's cooking school at the Plaza theater Monday morning.

Asheville Citizen Fall 1928

MAYOR PRAISES COOPERATION OF CIVIC LEADERS

Mayor Gallatin Roberts, in a public statement last night, took occasion to commend the public-spirited citizens who contributed their time and money to securing the Enka rayon plant for this section.

"It was the finest spirit of cooperation that I have ever witnessed," the mayor declared. "With such spirit, nothing can stand in the way of Asheville's growth.

"I am naturally pleased that the officials of the American Enka Corporation selected Asheville for their first plant in the United States. I believe that it will attract other industries, especially auxiliary units. It will be only a few years before this section will be one of the largest industrial centers of the southeast.

"The city commissioners appreciate the public spirited citizens who gave their assistance to this project, and I hope that some way can be suggested to pay them honor."

Asheville Citizen September 23, 1928

Mayor's Proclamation

MAYOR ROBERTS Wednesday issued the following proclamation:

"To the people of Asheville and its trade territory:

"The seventh semi-annual Bargain Carnival which opens Thursday under auspices of the Asheville Merchants' Association has become an event of more than usual interest to the buying public of Western North Carolina. It furnishes an occasion for thousands of purchasers within 75 miles of Asheville to familiarize themselves with the splendid facilities offered by our merchants. Goods embracing a wide field of usefulness are displayed and may be secured at genuine reductions. The Buyers Carnival marks the dividing line between summer and autumn business and women may benefit by the early showings of winter fashions. If part of your Christmas shopping is done at this time, you can breathe easier in December. As a stimulator of autumn business in this section, the Buyers Carnival is unrivaled. It has become an institution of equal importance to both merchant and purchaser.

"As the success of the Buyers Carnival depends upon the cooperation of the public, I urge that citizens of Asheville and surrounding cities arrange to visit our stores and investigate the offerings made by our merchants. Bear in mind the dates—September 27, 28 and 29.

GALLATIN ROBERTS,
Mayor.

Asheville Citizen September 27, 1928

THE ASHEVILLE TIMES

DRIVE AGAINST FIRES STARTS; DUCKETT ACTIVE

Chief Keeps Firemen Busy Putting Up Fire Prevention Posters.

Fire Prevention week, observed throughout the country each year, as part of a vigorous campaign to stem fire losses, began Monday in Asheville. Firemen were busy during the morning, putting posters in shop windows and on street cars. Literature, dealing with the subject of fire prevention was distributed in the schools.

The main feature of the first day's program is an address to be broadcast from Station WWNC by Mayor Gallatin Roberts at 8:05 o'clock Monday night. The mayor's speech will be followed by a musical program in which the Central Methodist church quartet will take part.

Each night there will be a radio program, including an address and music.

The campaign will be waged chiefly in the schools, the civic clubs and in the industrial plants around Asheville. Each of the civic clubs has arranged a "fire prevention" program for its regular luncheon, and school principals have agreed to hold some sort of program in each school.

Booklets, dealing with the questions of school fires, were mailed Monday by the fire department to all members of the Parent-Teacher associations in Asheville.

Fire Chief Duckett, who is in charge of the week, announced he hoped to have seven days without a single fire in the city.

Asheville Times October 8, 1928

Mayor Buys First Cross

Mayor Gallatin Roberts has been enrolled as the first member of the Buncombe County Chapter of the American Red Cross which will hold its annual Roll Call campaign next Sunday afternoon from 1 to 4 o'clock. Mrs. J. D. Earle, head of the women's corps for the drive is pinning the Red Cross Emblem on the Mayor's lapel.

Asheville Citizen November 5, 1928

November 9, 1928?

Mayor Purchases First Gridiron Ticket

This photo shows Mayor Gallatin Roberts purchasing the first ticket from J. Dale Threat, of the Weaver College American Legion eleven football game to be played at Asheville's memorial stadium Nov. 12 in the annual Armistice Day game. The American Legion squad is captained by Jack McDowall all-Southern back in 1927 from N. C. State, who will be ably assisted by a brilliant caste of former football material.

Asheville Citizen November 7, 1928

FRIDAY MORNING NOVEMBER 9, 1928

Mayor Roberts Issues Armistice Proclamation

Memorial Service Will Be Held At The Imperial Theater Sunday

Mayor Gallatin Roberts yesterday issued a proclamation calling upon the people of Asheville to join in the celebration of Armistice Day.

A memorial service will be held at the Imperial theater Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, while a general holiday will be observed Monday by the city schools, banks and business.

Mayor Roberts proclamation follows:

"November the Eleventh, ten years ago, "the War drums throbbed no longer, and the battle flags were furled" along the battle fronts in Europe, and millions of people all over the world cried and shouted for joy that the terrible conflict was over.

"Who will ever forget Armistice Day here ten years ago? It was a bleak day in Asheville. There was a cold, sharp, cutting north wind blowing, but that did not dampen the spirit of our people. The War was over, and the Buncombe County boys were coming home, and thousands of our men and women gave vent to their pent-up feelings while others who had sons "over there" who would never return almost collapsed with grief

"Shall we forget those never to be forgotten days? The answer comes back from our people in thunder tones no. Not only is this true but our great State and the Congress of the United States each passed laws designating November 11th a holiday for all the people of this State and nation

"Really and truly the shadow of the great war still hangs over the world Life will never be the same to thousands of our people as it was before that devasting war

"This year Armistice Day falls upon Sunday and a memorial service will be held at the Imperial Theater at four o'clock in memory of all those who fell in that great conflict and all those who rendered service in those trying days. It is fitting that Monday, November 12th should be observed as a holiday for all the children in the city schools, and all the inhabitants of Asheville, and I hereby request that all business as far as possible be suspended on the tenth anniversary of the end of the World war, and that the day be observed in a manner befitting what it commemorates.

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself hath said
"This is my own, my native land."

GALLATIN ROBERTS"
Mayor."

Asheville Citizen November 9, 1928

ANNEXATION FORCES WIN OVERWHELMING VICTORY

City Leaders Vision Dawn Of New Day In Asheville

Mayor Roberts, Happy, Thanks Voters For Work

Sees New Era Opening Up For City As Result Of Extension

When informed as to the outcome of the city extension election, last night, Mayor Gallatin Roberts issued a statement thanking the citizenry of the city and county precincts for their action displayed in the election returns and pledged his best interests to the greater city.

His statement follows:

"The people of this whole community have again demonstrated their abiding faith in Asheville's future. It is the beginning of a new era, and I predict a steady substantial growth in the coming years. New blood and new citizens will mean much to the larger city .

"Many of our finest and most useful citizens were living beyond the city limits, and had lost personal touch with the city they love, but now we shall have the benefit of their personal interests and co-operation in matters pertaining to the larger city.

MAYOR ROBERTS

"The people's action today will be broadcast to the world and it will mean much not only to Asheville but to all of Western North Carolina. I am glad that our citizenship let the world know that our city is not standing still, but is looking to the future.

Welcomes New Citizens Of Asheville With Statement

"Capital is turning toward the South as never before, and we are in the direct path for a wonderful development with all of our people standing together and working for one common good we may expect industry after industry to come this way, and too, we should not lose sight of the fact that our city is destined to become the capital of a resort region unrivalled in any part of the country.

"I desire to again pledge my all to the best interests of the people of Greater Asheville."

Asheville Citizen May 1, 1929

Mayor Is First Customer

Little Mary Eleanor Smith, granddaughter of Mrs. Whitefoord G. Smith, president of the Buncombe county chapter, American War Mothers, sold Mayor Roberts the first carnation opening the sale conducted by the War Mothers chapter. Proceeds from the sale of the flowers will be used in relief work among disabled veterans. —Staff Photo by Michael

Asheville Citizen May 12, 1929

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SATURDAY, MAY 25, 1929

Mayor Opens Poppy Sale

Mayor Gallatin Roberts has purchased the first poppy of the Poppy Day sale for the benefit of the work of the American Legion auxiliary which begins this morning in Asheville. Mrs. L. B. Dorian, of the auxiliary, made the sale. Practically every one in Asheville today will be asked to follow the example which has been set by the Mayor in helping along the work for the boys at Oteen hospital.

HEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1929

To Open Store

Mayor Gallatin Roberts, of Asheville, will unlock the local store of Millers, Inc., Saturday morning, when it opens for business.

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 1929

Buys First Forget-Me-Not

Mayor Gallatin Roberts is here shown buying the first "Forget-Me-Not" of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War's annual drive which is being made throughout the city today. Mrs. E. G. Thompson, one of the volunteer workers who is assisting with the sale of these little flowers for the benefit of the Disabled veterans, is pinning the flower on the mayor. Scores of women are assisting today in the "Forget-Me-Not" campaign.

Asheville Citizen September 21, 1929

The Times' Official Christmas Newsboys—1929

From 1926 to 1956, a special Christmas edition of The Asheville Times was sold on the streets by leading business and professional men of the town. Proceeds benefited newsboys and later provided lunches for needy school children. The 1929 Christmas sales force is shown in this picture made in front of The Times' former offices on Pack Square. The photo is from Irving Fogartie's collection. Pictured are, front row, from left, Clarence Pinkerton, Dan Adams, James H. Hensley Jr., Talmadge DeBruhl, John Lee Hyatt, Judge Carl B. Hyatt, Jack Barrett, Roy Moody, Everett Sprouse, Jack Weaver, Richard Howell, Grover Rector, Carl Gossett, P. J. McCormick, J. E. Gibson. Second row, Ben Evans, Ned Wheeler, Fred L. Weede, Joe Sevier, D. L. Jackson, Irving F. Fogartie, Tom Bird, James J. Bailey, A. L. Duckett, Mayor Gallatin Roberts, Holmes Sawyer, J. W. Grimes, C. H. Bartlett, L. B. Rogers, J. O. McElroy, Joe Seay, E. M. Bearden, Harry W. Love and Dr. H. B. Trimble. Third row, Paul Winchester, Howard Frady, Dan W. Hill, Joe Little, R. A. Funk, J. D. Earle, Myrtis Trimble and Seth Perkinson.

THE SUNDAY CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY, MARCH 30, 1930

Flowers Sent Mayor Roberts

Mayor William Kunze, of Minneapolis, Minn., yesterday wired through Middlemount Gardens a basket of flowers and greetings to Mayor Roberts upon the opening there of the national flower show of the Florists Telegraph Delivery association. Woodrow Mills, Postal Telegraph delivery boy, is shown making the final lap in the flower delivery service. Thanks were wired Mayor Kunze by Western Union. Middlemount Gardens will enter contests this week at the meeting.

SUNDAY, MARCH 30, 1930

Minneapolis Mayor Sends Flower Token To Roberts

Middlemount Will Enter Contests Of National Florists

Upon the opening yesterday in Minneapolis, Minn., of the national Florists' Telegraph Delivery association convention, Mayor Gallatin Roberts received through Middlemount Gardens, a member of the association, a large basket of flowers from Mayor William Kunze, of Minneapolis. Woodrow Mills, Postal Telegraph delivery boy, delivered the flowers to Mayor Roberts from Middlemount's shop and Mayor Robert's telegram of thanks was returned by Western Union messenger service and wires.

This is the annual meeting of the great association of 5,000 florists who are members of the delivery association. During the convention this week several hundred large gas balloons will be released with the names of florist members on tags attached. Finders of these tags and coupons will be entitled to send a basket of flowers to any person or institution in the city where the florist is located. Last year a Middlemount card was recovered in Mississippi and the order of flowers sent to the finder's mother, who happened to live in Asheville.

The Middlemount Gardens will enter balloons in this unique race of the flowers. Another phase of the convention in which Middlemount will figure will be the window picture contest. Middlemount Gardens will enter pictures of their window arrangements. Last year the Asheville florist shop was awarded honorable mention in the picture contests.

The following message was sent by Mayor Kunze yesterday to Mayor Roberts with the large basket of flowers: "Greetings: Upon this occasion, the opening of the 11th national flower show in our city, allow me to express the good will of the people of Minneapolis to the People of your city by saying it with flowers. This flower token was made possible through a world wide organization of 5,000 bonded members of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery association. Sincerely, William F. Kunze, Mayor of Minneapolis, Minn."

A large amount of publicity is given cities in which florist members of the delivery association have shops. Middlemount Gardens always wins recognition at the national flower shows and conventions of members. The Haywood Street shop is called "the most unique flower shop in the world" and it attracts a great many visitors in Asheville.

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN ASHEVILLE N. C. WEDNESDAY, APRIL 16, 1930

ANALYST READS MAYOR ROBERTS

Harriette Gunn Roberson Reads Character Of Asheville Mayor

"An unusual combination of markings characterize the face of Mayor Gallatin Roberts," according to Harriette Gunn Roberson, noted personality analyst, who is conducting a series of free lectures each evening at the Battery Park hotel.

Mrs. Roberson said that the markings of the mayor are phophetic of the statesman, not the politician. Mrs. Roberson has spent several years studying various types of faces as related to character. She has had the honor of analyzing two presidents of the United States.

Mrs. Roberson's interpretation of Mayor Roberts' character is as follows: "His honor is the deep thinking, hard working type of executive, who will fight for a cause that he thinks is just and right. He is a practical idealist indicated by his extremely high top head.

"The bulge in the middle of the forehead shows the creative imagination of the builder.

"The development over the eyes shows that he is a keen observer of men and events.

"His eyes show that he is as keen as a briar and has a ready use of words.

"His conquering nose shows that he is a born leader. The lower part of his nose shows unusual business ability and self-control.

"The breadth of face indicates frankness and out-spokenness.

"His upper lip shows ability to deal with people satisfactorily.

"The chin shows firmness, self-control, lover of the beautiful and a tendency to keep his own council.

"He is courageous, self-reliant, generous to a fault in giving of himself.

"His key-note is achieving along conservative, practical lines.

Asheville Citizen April 16, 1930

MAYOR ASKS THAT ALL CITIZENS BE IN CENSUS LISTS

Mayor Gallatin Roberts last night issued the following statement, urging that every person living within the city limits of Greater Asheville make sure that his or her name is listed in the present government census:

"It is my most ardent wish that every person living in Asheville be counted in the census now being taken. Those who have charge of this important work are just as anxious to list every single soul, and may we put forth every possible effort ourselves toward the complete success of this census.

"It will be 10 years before another census is taken, and Asheville wants its true population known to all the world. In spite of everything we may do, some of our citizens will not be counted, but it is my wish that we exert ourselves and take enough interest in the city's standing to reduce this number to a minimum. Signed: Gallatin Roberts, Mayor."

Asheville Citizen April 21, 1930

GALLATIN ROBERTS SHOOTS HIMSELF TO DEATH WITH PISTOL IN WASHROOM OF LEGAL BUILDING

Pack Memorial Public Library
Asheville, N. C.

B. B. Worsham, Blind Attorney, Hears Shot And Upon Investigation Body of Roberts Is Discovered

Ash. Times Sept 5/31

DEATH INSTANTANEOUS FROM REVOLVER SHOT INTO BRAIN

Tragedy Comes As Great Shock to City; Former Municipal Executive Was Facing Trial in Bank Cases

Former Mayor Gallatin Roberts committed suicide at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon, using a .38 calibre pistol to send a bullet crashing through his brain.

He used the lavatory on the fourth floor of the Legal building for the deed. He had recently re-opened his law offices on the third floor of the building.

B. B. Worsham, blind attorney who maintains offices about ten feet from the lavatory, heard the pistol shot while engaged in some task in his room.

A few seconds after the shot, Mr. Worsham said he heard a noise that sounded like a falling body.

He felt his way into the hallway and remained there about three minutes. He called the attention of a janitor to the noise and suggested that an investigation be made.

The body was found slumped over in one corner of the lavatory, which was hardly large enough to accommodate the large body of the former Asheville mayor.

The body was removed to the Clayton and Hyer funeral home, in West Asheville, about 3 o'clock.

The former mayor was indicted last week with six other public officials on charges of conspiring to misapply and convert public funds and to use them for the benefit of the Central Bank and Trust company.

It was above the offices of the defunct bank that Mayor Roberts ended his life.

Mayor Roberts left a letter addressed to "The People of Asheville," which is published elsewhere in this edition.

The bullet entered at the right temple, ploughed through the brain and came out about one and one-half inches above the left ear. It ended its journey in the door leading into the lavatory.

Removed Bullet

The officers removed the bullet, using pocket knives. The bullet was imbedded about one-half inch in the door.

Judging from the position of the body and the location of the bullet in the door, it was apparent that Mayor Roberts stood up, facing northeast, and placed the gun against his right temple. Coroner Carroll expressed the opinion death was instantaneous.

Three letters were left, one to Mrs. Roberts, one to George Pennell, attorney and one to "The People of

The news of the tragedy spread rapidly and hundreds of people crowded about the entrance to the Legal building and jammed the hallways on the fourth floor.

Chief W. R. Messer, Chief of Detectives Fred Jones, Lieut. Frank Hagan and other members of the police department took charge until the arrival of Coroner Carroll. Upon the arrival of the coroner, the hallway was cleared to permit the removal of the body to the funeral home.

On account of the smallness of the lavatory, it was necessary for several men to pick up the body and bring it to the hallway where it was placed on a stretcher.

After an examination, Coroner Carroll said that an inquest would not be necessary as it was obviously a case of suicide.

The letter to Mr. Pennell asked that the body be sent to Clayton and Hyer funeral home.

It was 15 or 20 minutes before the body was identified as that of Mayor Roberts. The bullet, that crashed through the brain, distorted the face, and made identification difficult. The shadows of the semi-darkened room also added to the general confusion.

J. Frazier Glenn, Jr., and Lamar Galloway, who maintained law offices in the Legal building, were among the first to reach him. At first, they were unable to identify the body, although they were intimately acquainted with the former mayor.

Mayor Roberts, with six other public officials and eleven Buncombe county bank officials were indicted by the Buncombe county grand jury last Saturday morning on charges of conspiring to pervert the credit of the city and county, to misapply public funds, and to use public funds for the benefit of a private corporation, the Central Bank and Trust company. He was free under $10,000 bond.

Friends of the former mayor said that he had seemed in good spirits when they talked with him yesterday. While apparently undisturbed by the grand jury indictments, he felt keenly the criticism which had been directed against his administration.

Looked for Acquittal

He expressed confidence, both in a public statement to the press last Saturday and in conversation with friends Sunday and Monday, he would be acquitted when he faced trial in Buncombe county superior court.

Mayor Roberts' son, Edward in Albuquerque, New Mexico, was notified by Mr. Pennell this afternoon that his father had committed suicide.

Was Star Athlete

Ed, as he was known among a large circle of friends here, was a star athlete at the Asheville high school for several years, and went to New Mexico following a physical breakdown. He had recently married.

The daughter, Margaret, lived with Mr. and Mrs. Roberts in West Asheville.

Following the failure of the Central Bank and Trust company on Nov. 20, with more than $4,000,000 of city funds on deposit, a movement was started in the city to oust the city board of commissioners. The movement was taken up by vas c c groups until, during the ond and third weeks of December, he mayor and the two commissioners resigned one by one, their places eing filled as they resigned.

e new board included: Mayor y Plummer, Harry L. Parker, missioner of public works, and A. Goode, commissioner of pub- afety. Later, Mr. Goode's office taken by Andrew Gennett and later by E. E. McDowell.

Issued Statement

hen the indictments were re- ed last week, Mayor Roberts tained in emphatic terms that was innocent. At the time he : "If trying with all my soul to approximately $3,250,000 of the ple's money in the Central Bank Trust company is a conspiracy, I am guilty."

This money was in the bank the I went into office, nearly four s ago.

If honestly trying in every way h the best ability and judgment d gave me to save every dollar sible for the people, is a cause for demnation, then let me be con- ned.

I am guilty of no crime. I have e no wrong. My hands are clean. ook the whole world squarely in face and defy any person any- re to prove that a single cent of rupt money or any other thing r dishonestly touched my hands. hall demand an immediate trial."

Leader In Fight

Mayor Roberts was one of the ders of the fight for "Greater heville' in the 1929 general assem- . During the time the legislature s in session, he spent much of his ne in Raleigh, exerting his influ- ce to have the limits of the city ended. In recognition of this serv- he was nominated in December of 9 to receive The Times 1929 civic ard. The nomination was made by hn A. Goode, then president of the amber of Commerce.

Mr. Roberts was born on a farm Flat Creek township in Buncombe unty in 1878 and was educated in e public schools until he was 17 hen he entered Weaver college.

In the year 1897, then a country y, he went to Marshall where he orked in the store conducted by J. Redmon. After working for a year e entered Washington college, a nall institution in Tennessee, where remained for a year, working to y his tuition and expenses. In 99 he entered King college at Bris- l and worked his way for two years chopping wood and making fires r board and tuition. While at ing Mr. Roberts distinguished him- elf as a ball player, being the lead- ng pitcher. He was a member of he debating team also and took art in the oratorical contests at he school commencement.

Was School Teacher

Mr. Roberts returned to Buncombe ounty in 1901 and taught school at he Sand Hill school. The following ear he taught at Barnardsville, and was elected, after a year of teaching Barnardsville, principal of the Flat eek high school. During those ars the young man was reading law night, and in January, 1904, he ntered the law department of Wake orest college and the following ugust was admitted to the bar.

Being without funds to establish imself in the practice of law, Mr. oberts again taught school one year at the Flat Creek school and two years at the Morgan Hill high school, before opening a law office in Asheville in April, 1907. For a short time he was the partner of Samuel Radford, but the partnership soon terminated and Mr. Roberts practiced alone for a year before he was elected county attorney to succeed Charles A. Webb. In 1910 Mr. Roberts formed a partnership with W. G. Fortune that lasted until 1919.

In 1910 Mr. Roberts was elected to the state legislature where he served during 1911. He was made chairman of the committee on congressional re-apportionment by W. C. Dowd of Charlotte, speaker. Mr. Roberts was re-elected to the legislature in 1912 and served as chairman of the committee of counties, cities and towns. In 1914 he was re-elected again and served as chairman of the committee on appropriations. At the 1914 session of the legislature Mr. Roberts introduced a bill to give women the right to vote, but the bill was defeated. He was re-elected in 1916 and was a candidate for the speakership but was defeated by the Hon. Walter Murphy.

(Continued on Page 2)

(Continued from Page 1)

In 1919 Mr. Roberts was elected mayor of Asheville defeating J. E. Rankin after a bitter fight. He served four years. While mayor he was three times elected president of the state Municipal association, and elected twice to the presidency of the state Forestry association.

Named Head of Board

After his retirement as mayor, Mr. Roberts formed a partnership for the practice of law with Don C. Young. In 1914 Mr. Roberts was appointed chairman of the board of elections for Buncombe county and managed the primary and general campaigns. He was twice a member of the Buncombe county Democratic executive committee. In May, 1927, Mr. Roberts was again elected mayor, defeating E. B. Atkinson.

An active church worker, Mr. Roberts was an elder of the West Asheville Presbyterian church, where he taught the Men's Bible class for many years. He was commissioner from the synod of Appalachia at El Dorado, Ark., and voted for Dr. R. F. Campbell of Asheville as moderator.

In 1926, Mayor Roberts was sponsor of the drive for funds for the William Jennings Bryan Memorial for this district. He had been a life long friend of Bryan's.

High in Masonry

Mr. Roberts was a thirty-second degree Mason and was an honorary member of the Kiwanis club for ten years. He was active in the West Asheville club, a community project devoted to the improvement of West Asheville, where Mr. Roberts made his home at 134 Brevard road. During the World War Mr. Roberts was a four-minute speaker and canvassed this section in the interest of the Liberty Loans.

He was married to Miss Mary Althea Sams, daughter of J. H. Sams of Flat Creek, in 1907. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts had two children, Edward Gallatin Roberts, a son, is now in Albuquerque, New Mexico. The other child is a daughter, Margaret Evelyn Roberts, nine years old.

able Gallatin Roberts, for more than seven years Mayor-Commissioner of public accounts and finances of the City of Asheville.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the board of commissioners of the City of Asheville:

"That the meeting of the board of commissioners of this date be adjourned in honor of his memory."

N. C.. Asheville - Biography - Roberts, Gallatin
2/23/1931 Tim

Urges Peace In Death Message

GALLATIN ROBERTS
Former Mayor of Asheville who took his own life this afternoon in the Legal Building.

Explains Suicide In Letter; Pleads For Peace In Asheville

2/23/31 Cit-Times

NORTH CAROLINA ROOMS
Pack Memorial Public Library

Pack Memorial Public Library
Asheville, N. C.

SHAKEN BY WORRY ROBERTS ENDS LIFE

Former Mayor Leaves Notes Protesting That He Did No Wrong

Asheville Advocate 2/27/31

Shaken by worry and despondent over an indictment that had been returned against him by the county grand jury last Saturday, Gallatin Roberts, twice mayor of Asheville, ended his life by suicide early Tuesday afternoon.

The former mayor left notes addressed to the People of Asheville, to Mrs. Roberts, and to George Pennell, corporation counsel and close friend.

In the former he revealed the extent of mental depression he had experienced over the indictment, proclaiming that he had been guilty of no dishonest act and that his efforts had been to save the millions of dollars of city deposits that were in the Central Bank & Trust Company.

Apparently he had been preparing for the tragedy by setting his business affairs in order, and by penning the notes which were found on the desk of his office.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon or on Sunday, depending upon the time of arrival of his son from Albuquerque, New Mexico. The latter is expected to reach the city Saturday morning. Services will be from the West Asheville Presbyterian church, with burial in Green Hill cemetery. He will be buried beside his mother, who died a few years ago.

Upon request of Mrs. Roberts, the body will not lie in state in the city hall as had been requested. Members of the Masonic order, bar association, city employes, and various civic organizations are expected to attend the services.

The lifeless body was found in toilet on the fourth floor of the

(Continued on Page Eight)

Shaken By Worry Roberts Ends Life

Asheville Citizen 2/27/31

(Continued from Page 1)

Legal building, Wednesday afternoon about 2:15 o'clock. He had walked from his own offices on the third floor of the building, entered the toilet and fired a bullet into his right temple. The missel, from a .38 calibre revolver, passed through the head and imbedded itself in the door.

The shot was heard by B. B. Worsham, blind attorney, whose office adjoined the toilet. Mr. Worsham heard the sound of a falling body, and went into the hall, summoning help. Some 20 minutes elapsed before the body was identified as that of the former mayor. Identification was delayed because of the semi-darkness of the small room, and the distorted features of the deceased.

Body Identified

Chief of Police W. R. Messer and Dr. E. R. Morris viewed the body, slumped to the floor and against the wall. The physician expressed the opinion that death had been almost instantaneous. There had been but one cartridge in the pistol.

The letters were found on the former mayor's desk by K. H. Lee, and were turned over to the coroner and George Pennell, who had copies of the public letter typed and given to the press.

Mr. Roberts had talked with Miss May Jones, with Miss Annie L. Merrill, and with his partner, Don C. Young, a short time before the suicide. Miss Jones took acknowledgement of some legal papers. Miss Merrill supplied him with envelopes that were used for the final notes. Mr. Young said he did not appear depressed when he last saw him shortly after 2 p. m.

Following directions contained in one of the notes, the body was taken in charge by the Clayton-Hyer Undertaking firm of West Asheville.

News of the tragedy spread rapidly in the city and was the sole topic of conversation among groups about the streets of the business section.

Was 51 Years Old

The former mayor was 51 years of age. He is survived by his widow; a son, Edward Roberts, who was in Albuquerque, N. M, and a daughter, Margaret Evelyn Roberts, age 9. A brother, J. B. Roberts, lives in Mills River.

He was born in Flat Creek township, this county, in 1879. He attended the public schools and Weaver college. After working for a time in Marshall he went to Washington college in Tennessee and in 1899 entered King college, where he paid his expenses by working his way. He was a member of the debating team and of the baseball team of the college.

In 1901 he returned to Buncombe county, teaching school at Sand Hill. Later he taught at Barnardsville and was made principal of the Flat Creek school. In 1904 he entered Wake Forest college and in August was admitted to the practice of law. After again teaching school he began the practice of law in the city in 1907. He served as county attorney and practiced law with W. G. Fortune until 1919. In 1910 he was elected state representative and was re-elected in 1912 and in 1914.

Elected Mayor

In 1919 he was elected mayor, defeating the late J. E. Rankin. He served a term of four years, and was re-elected in 1927. Following collapse of the Central Bank & Trust Company with $4,600,000 of city funds on deposit, the mayor and other commissioners resigned their offices, being succeeded by a commission now composed of Harry W. Plummer, mayor; Harry Parker, commissioner of public works, and E. E. McDowell, commissioner of safety.

He was active in politics, having served as chairman of the county board of elections. He was teacher of the Men's Bible class of the West Asheville Presbyterian church. He was a 32nd degree Mason, an honorary member of the Kiwanis club, and a member of the West Asheville club. He was a speaker for Liberty Loan bond sale during the World War.

The city commissioners Thursday adjourned out of respect to the memory of Mr. Roberts, and adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, the board of commissioners had heard with profound regret of the death of the Hon-

"Wounded Unto Death," Roberts Says in Letter to People. Forgives Those Instrumental "In Trying to Destroy Me."

Former Mayor Roberts left three letters behind, one addressed to his wife, another to his friend George Pennell and the third addressed "To the People of Asheville."

In his letter to the people of the community Mr. Roberts pleaded with them to cease wrangling and making false accusations. He urged them to make peace among themselves and get to work re-building the city.

The letters were in Mr Roberts' handwriting on the backs of blanks for city delinquent tax collections. The letters were found in the former mayor's office by Kenneth Lee.

The text of Mr. Roberts' letter addressed "To the People of Asheville" follows:

To the People of Asheville:

My soul is sensitive, and it has been wounded unto death. I know exactly who the men are who were instrumental in trying to destroy me, but now, I forgive them.

For twenty years, I was in public life, and I never did a dishonest act during all these years and yet, I have been shamefully charged with committing a felony. God knows I did no wrong during my term in office. My hands are clean and my conscience is clear, and I want to say further that Mr. Bartlett and Mr. Rogers are both clean good men, and have done no wrong.

I have given my life for my city, but I am content. I did what I thought was right. I trust the people of Asheville will cease to wrangle, and all pull together for the common good. Why do you hate each other? Don't you know that life is just like a fleeting shadow, and that you will soon pass to the great beyond? I do not hate a soul on this earth. Won't you people highly resolve to cease your bickering and strife? I want you to do this.

I worked hard for a larger and better City. I knew that it was imperative. Every act of my life during my term of office was for that which I thought was for the best interest of this community.

I used my best efforts in resisting the effort that was made to foster higher telephone rates upon you people.

When I went into office nearly four years ago I found millions of dollars of the people's money in the Central Bank, and I tried with all my soul to protect it, and did protect it for nearly four years.

What would you have done? Would you have closed the bank and lost it, or would you have made an honest effort to save it?

Farewell and adieu,
(Signed) GALLATIN ROBERTS.

SHAKEN B
ROBERTS

Former Mayo Protesting
No

Asheville

Shaken by w ent over an in been returned a county grand ju
Gallatin Robert
Asheville, ende
cide early Tue
The former m dressed to the
to Mrs. Robert Pennell, corpor close friend.
In the forme extent of mental experienced ove proclaiming th
guilty of no dish his efforts had millions of dolla
that were in th
Trust Company.
Apparently he ing for the trag
business affairs peaning the n
found on the de
Funeral servi
Saturday aftern depending upon of his son from Mexico. The lat reach the city
Services will b
Asheville Pres
with burial in tery. He will be mother, who di
ago.
Upon request
the body will not city hall as ha
Members of the association, city
rious civic orga
pected to attend
The lifeless b a toilet on the f

(Continued o

"DEDICATED TO THE UPBUILDING OF WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA"

ASHEVILLE, N. C., FRIDAY MORNING, FEBRUARY 27, 1931

ROBERTS RITES TO BE HELD AT CHURCH SUNDAY

Hour Of Funeral Is Set For Three O'clock In Afternoon

BURIAL TO BE IN WEST ASHEVILLE

Service Will Be Held In Church Where He Served As Elder

Funeral services for former Mayor Edward Gallatin Roberts, 51, will be held from the West Asheville Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The Rev. W. F. Creson, pastor of the church of which the deceased was an elder and former teacher of the Men's Bible class, will officiate and will be assisted by Dr. A. L. Buckner of Clio, S. C., uncle of the deceased, and the Rev. W. G. Hamilton, pastor of the New Calvary Negro Presbyterian church of Asheville.

Active pallbearers selected by Mr. Roberts some time before his death, will be: Dr. L. E. Davis, neighbor of Mr. Roberts for many years; Harry L. Nettles, former Buncombe county legislator; Chief of Police W. H. Messer, George Pennell, city corporation counsel; A. C. Choate, former superintendent of the city water department; and Howard Ballard, city smoke inspector.

Honorary Pallbearers

Honorary pallbearers will be: Mayor Harry W. Plummer, Attorney General Dennis G. Brummitt, W. M. Smathers, Senator Josiah William Bailey, Dr. Thurman D. Kitchin, president of Wake Forest college; W. B. Plemmons, Douglas Eller, Don C. Young, W. G. Fortune, E. C. Greene, Dan W. Hill, John A. Goode, Clyde S. Reed, Plato D. Ebbs, Thomas Bell, John Russell, T. C. Miller, John McElroy, Hardy Chambers, of Weaverville, Dr. Dan E. Bevier, Dr. J. G. Woodward, Newton M. Anderson, Dr. Charles S. Norburn, John C. Caddell, and Marion Weaver.

Mrs. Roberts yesterday declined to allow the body of her husband to lie in state in the foyer of the city hall. A representative of the family said that the widow of the ex-mayor did not give any reasons for her refusal to allow friends of the deceased to view his body in the city hall.

The Buncombe County Bar Association Wednesday night were sponsoring the plan to have the body lie in state. Guards from the bar association, police and fire departments were to be posted about the casket of the former official.

Various organizations, civic, fraternal, and political, yesterday expressed willingness to participate in the final tribute Sunday to the late mayor. Members of the Democratic Executive Committee were expected to draft suitable resolutions on the death of Mr. Roberts.

The condition of Mrs. Roberts last night was reported to be somewhat improved. She withstood the shock of her husband's death well Wednesday afternoon but Wednesday night was placed under the care of her physician. Her son, Edward Roberts, who lives in Albuquerque, N. M., left that city Wednesday night and should arrive here Saturday at noon if proper train connections are made.

The body of Mr. Roberts will be laid at rest in Green Hill cemetery in West Asheville by the side of his mother and young daughter who died several months ago. The Buncombe County Bar association will attend the funeral service in a body. Delegations from the fire and police

(Please Turn To Page Four)

ROBERTS RITES SET FOR SUNDAY

Hour Of Funeral Is Set For Three O'clock In Afternoon

—(Continued From Page One)

departments and representatives of the municipal government will also attend the rites.

Telegrams

Throughout the day yesterday hundreds of North Carolina friends of the late mayor wired their sympathy to Mrs. Roberts and members of the family. A score or more of telephone calls were received at the Roberts home, 134 Brevard road, last night. One of the telegrams came from Dennis G. Brummitt, attorney general of North Carolina, who had served in the state legislature with Mr. Roberts.

Senator Josiah William Bailey sent the following wire from Washington: "Warmest sympathy from Mrs. Bailey and myself to you and family. Your husband was one of my dearest friends and a noble citizen, a patriotic and high-minded North Carolinian. His death is an irreparable loss to us all."

Mr. Roberts was a close friend of the North Carolina senator. During the Bailey senatorial campaign the deceased was a member of his campaign committee.

The city commissioners yesterday passed resolutions of sympathy on the untimely death of the former city chief executive. The resolutions were introduced by Mayor Harry W. Plummer. They follow.

"Whereas, the board of commissioners had heard with profound regret of the death of the Honorable Gallatin Roberts, for more than seven years Mayor-Commissioner of public accounts and finances of the City of Asheville.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved by the board of commisisoners of the City of Asheville:

"That the meeting of the board of commissioners of this date be adjourned in honor of his memory."

Convey Sympathy

George Pennel, city corporation counsel and intimate friend of the late mayor, was instructed by Mayor Plummer to convey to members of Mr. Roberts' family the deepest sympathy of the board.

"No one could ever question Gallatin Roberts' love for his city," Mayor Plummer said during the meeting of the commissioners yesterday morning. "I hope the people of Asheville will take to heart the wish and appeal expressed in his final message."

The body of Mr. Roberts will be taken to his home tonight. More than 50 negro citizens of the city called at the Clayton-Hyer undertaking home last night to view the body of Mr. Roberts. The late mayor had displayed a keen interest in negro welfare work of the city. On numerous occasions he was called upon to open negro conventions and church conferences here.

All city employes at the municipal building will attend the services Sunday in a body. Details of the interment of Mr. Roberts at the cemetery will be in charge of Charles Edmonds, assistant superintendent of the cemetery, who occupied the same seat with the deceased more than 40 years ago at a little school house in the Flat Creek township.

Mr. Roberts is survived by his widow, one son, Edward Roberts; a daughter, Margaret; and a brother, J. H. Roberts, of the Mills River section.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., MONDAY MORNING, MARCH 2, 1931

LAST TRIBUTES TO MEMORY OF ROBERTS PAID

Thousands Line Streets As Cortege Passes To M. E. Church

SEVEN MINISTERS CONDUCT SERVICE

Body Of Former Mayor Is Interred In Green Hill Cemetery

Friends of Edward Gallatin Roberts, who for seven years was mayor of Asheville, paid final tributes yesterday at funeral services in the West Asheville Methodist church.

Five thousand people lined the route of the funeral cortege from the former mayor's home on Brevard road to the church.

Escorts from police and fire departments conducted the procession from the home to the church and from the church to Green Hill cemetery where the body was interred beside those of the former mayor's mother and a daughter to whom he had been deeply attached.

Members of the Masonic lodge, of the Buncombe county bar association and representatives of the municipal government attended the services in groups.

Seven ministers, among them the pastor of a colored church, to which former Mayor Roberts had shown consideration, officiated. They were: The Rev. G. T. Bond, pastor of the West Asheville Methodist church; the Rev. J. B. Grice, pastor of the Calvary Baptist church; the Rev. Paul N. Gresham, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Savannah, Ga.; the Rev. W. F. Creson, pastor of the West Asheville Presbyterian church; the Rev. John Arch MacMillan, editor of Charity and Children; Dr. A. L. Buckner, of Clio, S. C.; and the Rev. W. G. Hamilton, pastor of the New Calvary negro church.

Eulogies Delivered

Eulogies to the former mayor were delivered by several of the officiating ministers including the Rev. Hamilton who characterized the deceased as a friend to both white and negro races. The combined choirs of the West Asheville Methodist and Presbyterian churches were in charge of the music.

Active pallbearers were: Dr. L. B. Davis, Harry L. Nettles, W. R. Messer, George Pennell, A. C. Choate and Howard Ballard.

Honorary pallbearers were Mayor Harry W. Plummer, Senator Josiah W. Bailey of Raleigh, Attorney-General Dennis G. Brummit, of Raleigh, William M. Smathers, Dr. Thurman Kitchin, president of Wake Forest college; W. B. Plemmons, Douglas Eller, Don C. Young, W. G. Fortune, E. C. Greene, Dan W. Hill, John A. Goode, Clyde S. Reed, Plato D. Ebbs, Thomas Bell, John Russell, T. C. Miller, John McElroy, Hardy Chambers, of Weaverville; Dr. Dan E. Sayler, Dr. J. G. Woodward, Newton M. Anderson, Dr. Chas. S. Norburn, John C. Caldell of Wake Forest, and Marion Weaver.

Former Mayor Roberts, whose life ended in tragedy Wednesday, rose largely by his own efforts from a farm boy to a respected position at the bar and to the city's highest administrative office. He was born in 1878 in the Flat Creek section of Buncombe county and was educated in the public schools until he was 17 years old, when he matriculated at Weaver College.

After working in a country grocery store for more than a year he entered Washington college, a small educational institution in Tennessee, where he remained for a year, working to pay his tuition and expenses. In 1899 he entered King college at Bristol, Va., and worked his way for two years. While at this school Mr.

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., MONDAY, MARCH 2, 1931

LAST TRIBUTE IS PAID TO ROBERTS

Thousands Line Streets As Cortege Passes To M. E. Church

(Continued From Page One)

Roberts starred as a baseball pitcher. He was a member of the debating team and also took part in the oratorical contests at commencement.

Returns To County

Mr. Roberts returned to Buncombe county in 1901 and taught school at the Sand Hill school. The following year he taught at Barnardsville and was elected, after a year of teaching at Barnardsville, principal of the Flat Creek high school. During this period Mr. Roberts was reading and studying law at night and in January 1904 he entered the law school of Wake Forest college and the following August was admitted to the bar.

Being without funds with which to establish himself in his law practice, Mr. Roberts again taught school for one year at the Flat Creek school and two years at the Morgan Hill school, before opening a law office in Asheville in April, 1907. For a short time he was the partner of Samuel Radford, but the partnership soon terminated and Mr. Roberts practiced alone for a year before he was made county attorney to succeed Charles A. Webb.

In 1910 Mr. Roberts formed a partnership with W. G. Fortune which lasted for nine years. In 1910 he was elected to the state legislature where he served during 1911. He was made chairman of the committee on congressional re-appointment by W. C. Dowd of Charlotte, speaker. He was re-elected to the legislature in 1912 and served as chairman of the committee for counties, cities, and towns. In 1914 he was re-elected again and served as chairman of the committee on appropriations. At the 1914 session of the legislature Mr. Roberts introduced a bill to give women the right to vote, but the bill was defeated. He was re-elected in 1916 and was a candidate for the speakership but was defeated by the Hon. Walter Murphy.

Elected Mayor

In 1919 Mr. Roberts was elected mayor of Asheville defeating the late J. E. Rankin. He served four years. While mayor he was three times elected president of the state municipal association, and elected twice to the presidency of the state forestry association.

After his retirement as mayor, Mr. Roberts formed a law partnership with Don C. Young. In 1914 he was appointed chairman of the county board of elections for Buncombe county. He was twice a member of the Buncombe County Democratic Executive Committee. In May, 1927, Mr. Roberts was again elected mayor of the City of Asheville defeating E. B. Atkinson.

An active church worker, Mr. Roberts was an elder and member of the West Asheville Presbyterian church, where he taught the Men's Bible class for many years. He was commissioner from the synod of Appalachia at El Dorado, Ark, and voted for Dr. R. F. Campbell of Asheville as moderator. In 1926 Mr. Roberts was sponsor of the drive for funds for the William Jennings Bryan Memorial for this district. He had been a life-long friend of Mr. Bryan.

He was a thirty-second degree Mason and was an honorary member of the Kiwanis Club for 10 years. He was active in the affairs of the West Asheville Club, and community project devoted to the improvement of West Asheville, where Mr. Roberts made his home. During the World War, Mr. Roberts was a four-minute speaker and canvassed this section in the interest of the Liberty Loans.

Mr. Roberts was one of the leaders in the "Greater Asheville" movement in 1929.

Mr. Roberts is survived by his widow, one son, Edward Roberts; a daughter, Margaret Roberts, and one brother, Cr[illegible] Roberts of the Flat Creek section.

City Pays Tribute To Great Leader

The tribute paid Honorable Former Mayor Gallatin Roberts last Sunday afternoon was one without a parallel in the history of Western North Carolina. Ten thousand and more citizens of this entire section turned out, not because of curiosity, but to pay their respect to a great civic leader—their friend for a number of years.

While the funeral and burial services were in progress, the air was filled with comment respecting and complimenting Former Mayor Roberts on his work here. People realized the sincerity and the experssion of a great love for his city that he exhibited in a letter left to the "People of Asheville," in which he pleaded with them to quit wrangling.

His burial rites were the most impressive, without a doubt, that Asheville persons have witnessed here. His floral offerings numbered 417, each an expression of sympathy and earnest appreciation for Former Mayor Roberts' efforts.

Former Mayor Roberts did the greatest thing a man could do—he died for his city. He died that others might realize their mistake, settle down and make a better city. Asheville appreciates this and expressed its appreciation in the final tribute paid.

With leaders of Former Mayor Roberts' calibre, a city can be built truly great.

MENTION

The Wijolo

WHEN

MAKING PURCHASES

FROM

OUR ADVERTISERS

For Cuts That Print

CITIZEN ENGRAVING COMPANY
ASHEVILLE, N.C.

Citizen-Times Bldg.
Phone 876

Ed's Father's (Gallatin Edward Roberts) Life Story. He wrote it himself.

Bio: Roberts, Gallatin Edward

The days of my early childhood are so vivid in my mind that I have determined to wr out some of these things that are still interesting to me, and may possibly ma be of some interest to my children a my friends.

The dear old place where I was born, an where I lived with my sainted mother an two brothers, is often before my eyes. I love it with an absorbing love.

This farm was situated 12 miles north the city of Asheville and 2½ miles west from the Flat Creek Baptist Church, in Buncombe County North Carolina. It was an isolated place, bu I loved it, and was sure it was the center of the world.

To reach this place, it was necessar to leave the Burnsville Highway a few mi north of the town of Weaverville, and tra about three miles west over almost impassa roads. The farm lay on both sides of a little valley walled in by towering hills.

My mother, before her marriage to J. R. Roberts, was Mary Elizabeth Buckner the oldest daughter of Col. Robert Buckner, who lived near Alexander, North Carolina. Mother was only 17 years of age at the time her marriage to my father - a strong robust, intelligent girl. My father was only 20 years old. He brought his young bride to this isolated farm to live, built a four room frame house on the side of the hill, over-looking a beautiful little valley.

In this little four room house I was born on the 26th day of October, 1878.

My father had inherited this farm from his father, James Riley Roberts, who owned a large boundary of land in Flat Creek township. My grandfathers, Col. Robert Buckner and James Riley Roberts were both men of sterling worth - out-standing men in their day and generation. My grandfather Roberts was a most devout and intensely religious, and grandfather Buckner was a man of strong character and was respected by all the citizenship of the county.

My father was a young man of splendid intellectual ability, and the people generally expected him to make "his mark" in the world. He started out in life in a very promising way, and had a host of friends, and the future looked bright for him. He was made Deputy Tax Collector for Buncombe County, and many people predicted he would become very prominent.

My oldest brother, Wightman Durand Roberts was born in August 1872, and another brother Gwin Whitlaw Roberts in August, 1874.

My father was a man who had a roving disposition. At one time he decided he wanted to become a minister of the gospe and entered school in order to prepare himself for that work. He had gone away to school, leaving my mother and the two oldest boys on the farm above mentioned. This was before I was born.

My mother made no complaint - ready a all times to make any sacrifice to be a real help-mate. He soon saw that he had started on a wild goose-chase and quietly dropped out of school, telling mother he could not leave her all alone on the farm, with two small children. This was commendable.

A few months later my father decided to sell washing-machines, and was sent to Tennessee, by the company, for which he was working. For many months he wrote home to mother, regularly - all this time saying he would soon return but months and years passed and he never returned. Mother was a brave woma and stuck to her post in the little four room house on the side of the hill.

Three months after my father left hom to go to Tennessee I was born. Mother was still expecting him to return, and he was writing endearing letters to her.

Mother was a heroic soul. I look back now, and honor her memory. The in the little four room house, on the side of the hill, she patiently waited for m father to return, and he never came. She worked and wrought and suffered for her children. God bless her pure sweet sou

I have no recollection, of anything specific prior to the day I was five years of ag
On that day, October 26, 1883, at the breakfast table, mother said: "This is Gallatin birthday, and we must kill a chicken for dinner." That morning is just as vivid to me now as anything that has ever happen in my life. The chicken was killed, an mother prepared a good dinner, and how delicious it was to a little boy who h played all morning, out in the pure cour air. Our house was more than a mile away from our nearest neighbor. I wo not forget the good people who liver near us when I was a boy.

Grandmother Roberts lived about a mi over the hill to the north. Everybody ca her "Aunt Rachel". I can see her now coming over the hill and down to the hous
She always carried a cane. We children were glad to have grandmother come. She was a great reader, and would bring u copies of the Christian Herald to read. She would go back to her home late in the afternoon, and often I would go pa of the way with her.

Another one of our neighbors, I wou not forget, Mr. William R. Edmonds and his good wife. They lived upon a hill, about a mile away, to the east. Mr. and Mrs. Edmonds were always ready to lend a helpin hand to my mother, and her three smal children. I well remember one cold winte day, when I was a very small boy, our supp of fire-wood was exhausted, and this information was conveyed to Mr. Edmona in some way. Snow was upon the grou and it was cold and dreary. We were huddled around a little fire in the firepla A few hours more and night would fa upon our little house. I shall never forg mothers' wistful look, but along about f o'clock this good man, Mr. Wm. R. Edmo and his big son, Wesley, came into the yard and cheerfully v.o.k. enquired how we wer getting along. They soon saw the situatio and secured the axe(ax), and went up above the house, cut down a tree, and carried enough wood on their shoulders make us comfortable. I have not forgotten the kindness of those good n Mr. Edmonds lived to be an old m and I was privileged to attend his funera and was asked to say a word to the people assembled there. At his funera as I stood before the casket, which held the remains of my old friend I cou not resist the desire to relate tha that act of kindness above mentioned.

Another one of our neighbors living to the south, just about a mile away, was Rev. Joseph Eller, a methodist minister, and his sons: L. F. Eller, Albert Eller, and a daughter Miss Kate Eller. This family would always go to church in a two-horse wagon drawn by two mules. My two brothers and I would pass by the Eller home on our way to Sunday School and church, and many times one of the Eller boys would lift me up and place me in the wagon with them. My brothers would walk on through the fields to the church (Clark's Chapel) and the wagon would move slowly acro the creek, up the steep hill and along the ridge to the church. That was a great thing in the life of a little bare-footed boy. We had no wagon on our farm, and a "big wagon drawn by two big mules was as m a curiosity to me as an air-plain is to-day to the average country boy.

Another thing in my life that i impossible for me to forget. It always stands out, but seems so fa back and so far away - away bac in the haze of the past, on anothe page, I referred to my father's going away to Tennessee, and neve returning. Mother often told us that he would return some day, and we children had no other idea but that he would surely come back. We often talked about the time when he would come.

One beautiful spring afternoon my brother Gwin, and I left the house and wandered up the hill from the house, on through the woods to the top of the highest hill in the neighborhood. We sat down upon the top of a rail fence, which crossed the top of the hill. The sun was shining in all its glory - not a cloud could be seen anywhere. The mountains seemed to be our great outstanding circle of blue, in the distance, it was beautiful. We sat there - two little bare-footed boys. The only garments upon our bodies were a shirt and a pair of short trousers. Mother had told us that Tennessee was beyond the mountains in the west. We sat there upon the fence looking at the blue encircling mountains, and wondered what it looked like on the other side, also, wondering why our father did not come home. That afternoon will never, never pass out of memory. We sat there looking, thinking and talking until the sun began to sink in the west. Then we slowly got down from the fence and walked back through the woods and down the hill to the house and mother.

Beautiful

Later in life, I was to go across those blue Western Mountains on my way to Washington College, Tennessee. Will write about my school days here after.

Mother and her three small boys continued to live in the little four-room house on the side of the hill. A part of the farm was rented to an old negro man named Henry Parker. He had a large family and they cultivated tobacco and payed mother one hundred dollars annually, as rent for the place. The $100.00, a small garden, a cow and a few chickens was our only means of sustenance, for the ~~for the~~ entire year. Mother was a frugal woman, and we lived fairly comfortable.

As before stated, our house was a mile or more away from our nearest neighbor. Many times a whole week would pass and we would not see any of our neighbors.

Occasionally, Grandfather Buckner would come and spend the night with us, and oh! how glad we would be to see him! He was the best horse-master in all that part of Buncombe County. We boys would jump with glee when Aunt Lula or Aunt Jennie Buckner would come. They would tell us stories they had read. We would sit enraptured, into the night, listening to a story.

I shall never forget a story that Au Jennie Buckner told me, many years ago She had read a book of fiction, entitled "Saint Elmo". She told me the story of that book in her even voice. Later in life I, too, read the book. She had tola it to me in a remarkably correct way Things like that had a great influenc upon my life. At a very early date became a prolific reader.

My mother had taught me to read and write before I ever attended school.

School Days

Well, I do remember the first da I attended school. I was seven years of age. We lived two miles away fro the little log school. It was known as the "Garison School House" - a one roo building, a rock fire-place in one end split logs, with back rests, for sea our little legs dangling in the air, a opening cut through the logs on th right side of the room, facing from th rock fire place in the east end of th room, served as a window. This scho house was located upon a hill far from water. The spring was severa hundred yards away, down in the valle Two boys would be sent, by the teacher, to carry water. Nothing would plea a boy more than to be asked by the teacher to take the big wooden bucket and go after water. We all drank out of the same tin dipper. The water bucket and the tin dipper could always be found in the corner of the building, jus to the right of the big rock fire place

The first school day of my life was a revelation to me. It was in September. I accompanied my two brothe Wightman and Gwin. We were there long before time for school to open
The boys and girls were playing in the open space west of the little log building, sitting in the edge of the woods. I stood there, a timid little country boy, almost afraid to move, wishing that I was back home with mother. Pretty soon, a cousin of ours, Mary Garrison, now Mrs. Pitt Black, came around and patted me upon the back, and made me feel that she loved me. It did me so much good.

Soon some of the boys shouted,
"Yonder comes the teacher". I looked quickly and sure enough, I could see a young man approaching, still some distance away. I had never seen a school teacher before, and I was really anxious and afraid. His name was Marion Fox. His home was near Jupiter. He walked about two or three miles to and from school every day. He was kind to me. I soon felt less afraid of the teacher and all the strange boys and girls. A few days later, I was badly scared, when some of the larger girls tried to kiss me, during the "dinner hour." I felt that I would be ruined if a girl should kiss me. I was fleet on foot, quick as a cat, and escaped into the woods with my heart throbbing like an engine. I still recall the names of some of the larger boys and girls and most of them were very nearly grown, Cos Eller, John Eller, Jim Garrison, Robert Garrison, Fulton Edmonds, Hester Edmonds, who a few years later married Robert (Bob) Garrison, James Harris, Horace Roberts, Talmage Roberts, and many others whose names I do not recall.

We used the old Blue Back spelling book. Some of the older pupils were using Davies Arithmetic and they made a great noise scraping upon their slates. The school was "out" in three months. The last day of school was a great time in the life of a country boy and girl.

We, also, had Sunday School in this same little log school house, and I carried my same spelling book to Sunday School. The Sunday School teacher would have the boys spell line after line in the old speller.

These things I have been relating seem primitive now, but we are only about forty years away from them, r here in Buncombe County.

Our free public schools would begin in the early days of September, and las only three months. Then for nine month the boys and girls would be at their homes. Few of them would remember wh they had learned during the few wee at school.

Many of the teachers, in those days were not well prepared to teach. Th second school I attended was taught by John Kilpatrick in the same little lo School He was a good man, and tried hard to get the students interested in the studies. He belonged to the old school, and soon passed out of the picture, a many years afterwards, I am informed died in the state of South Carolina

When I was twelve years old the litt old log school house was abandoned, a a one-room frame building was built down in the valley near where Mr. Josep ller now lives and then I was instructed several different teachers I recall now: T Weaver, now Mrs. Ed Blackstock, Jack Hartse

Mr. Henry, Professor Henley, Zebulon Weav and Miss Kate P. Henry. I never knew what became of Mr. Hartsill. Professor Henle settled at some place in Idaho. He was one of the best teachers I ever sat un Mr. Henry is still a mail carrier in Asheville, N.C. Zebulon Weaver is a promin lawyer of the Asheville bar, and has represented the 10th North Carolina Distric 12 years in Congress. Miss Kate Henry was fine teacher, and is teaching here in her native county.

I was always more interested in history, geography and mathematics than an other subjects, and made good grades in these.

I was a leader among the boys during my free school days. We wo arm ourselves with wooden guns an swords and the boys always elected a general. The boys would divide inu two groups. A large branch ran by th school house, and one group wou cross the branch, and then the two armies would maneuver, try to flank movements and cross and re-cross th "river," as we called it. It was great fun and we enjoyed it immensely. Many o the boys who "warred" with me are now dead, others are strong, sobe men and good citizens.

The last public school I attended was taught by Miss Kate Henry. In the spring of 1895 I entered what was then called Weaverville College, at Weaverville, N.C.
I walked from my home in Flat Creek to Weaverville and back home in the afternoon. In all - it was 7 miles. I have always doubted whether I really accomplished anything, during my days at that institution. I would get up at day-light, eat my breakfast, walk to school, often through mud, snow and rain, try to study and attend classes, and then walk home by dark, eat my supper and then study. It was too much for any boy to try to do. Often I was so tired I could not hold my eyes open after supper and would tumble into bed with my lessons untouched. It was too much for human endurance.
I made many acquaintances and friends. I was a member of the Delphian Literary Society. One of my best friends while at this school, Weaverville College, was Lester Weaver. He was as fine a young man as ever lived. He died while a very young man. His brother, Winton Weaver, also a fine character, died young.
Then there were: Ed Reeves, Proxie Carter, Rome Chambers, Ogburn Chambers, Frank Garrison, Charlie Garrison, Phoenicia Brittain, L.W. Roberts, L.L. Roberts, W.B. Roberts Miss Annie Lee Reagan, now Mrs. J. Scroop Styles Roy Reagan, Marvin Stacy, W.P. Stacy, now Chief Justice of North Carolina Court, Wade Redmon Morgan Redmon and Neal Redmon of Marshall N. C. I would like to name many others bu space forbids.

The experience received from the literary societies has been of great value to me through the years.

I would not forget to mention, at last, some of the teachers, then members of the faculty, at Weaverville College. Profes M. A. Yost was the president. Professor J. A Reagan, Professor Rhein, Mrs. McDowell. These were all competent teachers. They did splendid work without, almost, any equipment. Mr. Yost taught Latin and Greek, Mr. Reagan taught Mathematics and Mrs. McDowell English. It was a poor little institution, but it filled a great place in Western North Carolina. It was a light upon hill and today that light still shines bri

I believe that the little colleges of the United States, have wielded a greater influence upon the minds and hearts of the people than the larger schools and colleges. It's impossible to estimate and calcula the worth of a small Christian College men and young women are being trained for the battles of life.

The Spring semester of 1897 was my last at Weaverville College. Commencement came in June and I participated in the annual declamation contest.

That afternoon, I walked back to my home, at the little farm, thinking seriously of the future. I had already decided to study law, but the future was dark.

I had already made up my mind not to try walking from home to Weaverville College anymore. I could not make it go. I lost too much time upon the road, and exertion was too great.

I stated above that I had decided to study law. This is the way it came about. One day, in 1895, I came to Asheville with my uncle, Marion L. Buckner, to purchase a few things I needed. We drove to Asheville behind two horses in a wagon. I went down to the old Racket Store, on what is now called Biltmore Avenue, purchased some clothing from a Mr. Stoner, went back to the old tobacco warehouse, where we had left the wagon and the horses, and left the clothes done up in two bundles. We went for the horses, hitched them to the wagon and were just ready to start, when I discovered that my clothes had disappeared. I was crushed, for I had spent the last cent of money I had, for them. I hurriedly went back to the Racket Store and told Mr. Stoner what had happened. He was very sympathetic, and promised t do what he could to aid in detecting t thief. I returned home that night in a sad plight. I was a dejected boy. I ha no clothes fit to wear away from hon and no money to buy any more.

It was in the summer time, an the next morning I went to the field hoe corn. I was feeling like a ma without a country. About 3:0'clock tha afternoon, Deputy Sheriff Charlie Williams rode up and enquired for m Mother told him that I was in the field at work. He came and told m that the man who had taken m clothes had been arrested, and that I was summonsed to court, as a witness the next day in Asheville. I went over to Alexander and took the train for the trip to Asheville. The man was trie before Frank Carter, a Justice of Peace. He was bound over to Superior Court. M Carter, afterwards, became a prominent atto of the Asheville bar, and later a Judge o Superior Court of the State of North Carolin

I had to attend the court more th a week before the case was reached Robert McCall was the prosecuting attorne

The defendant, a large man, physically, was represented by D.M. Luther and Robert M. We I was a witness for the state. The man wa convicted and sentenced to a term upon z roads of Buncombe County. The sheriff gave me 7 clothes and I was a happy boy.

I had been in court for more tha a week, then and there, I had made u my mind that I could do what th men were doing. Just exactly nine year later I was admitted to the bar - but will write about that later.

In the summer of 1897, I was employe by Mr. J.J. Redmon, to work in his Stor at Marshall, N.C. I had never had any experience in that kind of work.

I had not applied for the position but had played base-ball down there sev times, and all the Marshall fans were friendly to me. Also, I had been in school with the Redmon boys at Weaver College.

I went home and told my mother that I was offered a position in Marsh She did not discourage me in the matter, but I could see that it cut like a knife. Her youngest son was going away from home, and it cause grief to a mothers' heart.

Just a few years before her older son Wightman, had gone away to

~~to~~ Kentucky, to attend college. He went Central University at Richmond, Kentucky. a was through an uncle, Rev. A. G. Buck that he went to Kentucky. He went th ostensibly, to study for the ministry, b at that time he left home, I doubted th he would ever become a minister of the gospel. I did not feel that he wou make the grade, and he did not. i was a most generous man, but had al sorts of visions, and dreamed dreams. i was in school but one year, then tried many lines of business, life ins fire insurance, etc. For many years he published a Trade Journal in Charleston, W Virginia and Cincinnatti, Ohio. He was marr three times. He died in Ironton, Ohio 1926, leaving a widow and one small son
Ruskin. He died penniless. I went to Ironton to his funeral, and paid of his funeral expenses etc. I have wanted to move his body to Asheville, yet may, some day, if I can get consent of his wife. I wrote her about it some months ago, but di not receive an answer to my letter.
I went to Marshall and went i work in Mr. Redmons store. I felt very awkward behind the counter. It to me several days to learn where an how to find things for the customer who came into the store. I went to work at 7:0'clock in the morning, and closed the store at 11:0'clock in the evening. It was long hours, but I did not mind it. I lived in a room upstairs over the store.

After a few weeks I was asked to get up at 6:0'clock, A.M., and open the bar-room and dispense whiskey to the early comers. I was shocked at the above request made by my employer. I told him I would open the bar-room and keep it open until his brother Jobe Redmon, could come in from across the river.

It would be impossible for me to describe, in words, my sense of shame when I first took the key out of my pocket and turned the key, in the lock of the door, of the bar-room. The evening before, Mr. Redmon had shown me the corn liquor, the rye liquor, the gin and the beer. I threw back my shoulders and walked behind the counter, and said: "I can do it". In a few minutes someone entered the door and asked for a "short" of corn liquor. I soon dispersed it, took his money and placed it in the money drawer. About 8:0'clock Mr. Redmon would come in and I would go to breakfast and then back to the store and work until late at night.

Opening the bar-room, selling liquor an goods, and shipping chickens to Savannah, & continued for many months. Mr. Redmon was a good man and trusted me implicitly. I had charge of his store, bar-room, warehouse, stables and everything else, belongin to the Redmon Brothers I from Saturday morning until Monday morning - and felt my responsibility very keenly.

I attended church almost every Sunda Occasionally, I accompanied Miss Mary Gudge to church. I became very much in love with her

I was working for a good firm, bu had not given up the idea of son day becoming a lawyer. I had saved a little bit of money and one day Dr Canter of Washington College, Tennessee ca to Marshall to speak in the church there I went to hear him and got acquain with him. I told him I had bu a small amount of money. He tol me to come on over and we wou get along nicely. I was pleased at th thought of getting back into schoo

The next day, I told Mr. Redmo I was going back to school in Septem but would like to work up to the very day I should have to leav He was perfectly willing for me to work up to the last moment.

Washington College

I told all my friends at Marshal good-bye, and left on the afternoon train fo Washington College, Tennessee. Otto Reese, Morg Ramsey and Lee Ramsey were on the trai going to this same school. We changed trains at Morristown, Tennessee, and boara the train going to Bristol, Tennessee. Washington College station was a sidin called Telford. It was night when we reached Telford. We were soon driven the college. Washington College was an old institution, founded by Rev. Samuel Doak, in the 17th Century. It was a poor little scho supported, ~~largely~~, by gifts from wealthy people.

It was at Washington College that I m Will M. Peterson. He is now a prominen lawyer in Pendelton, Oregon. He was a very bright man. We became attracted toward e other almost immediately. We have kept u with each other, by mail, since then.

It was there too, that I met E. Ze Ray, one of our Asheville attorneys to-day. Mr. Ray, Zeph's father, lived a few hundred yards from the college. Powe Sanders, another Washington College produci I remember well. He is now an attorney in the West, I believe, in Colorado. H sister, Miss Myrtle Sanders, and I were sweet-hearts for several years after I le there. We just gradually discontinued our correspondence. Another young lady I was fond of was Miss Ida West. She graduated the year I was there. She was a very talented young lady. I wonder if they are still living - how I would like to see them again.

I participated in the annual debates. David King was my colleague on the affirmative side of the question, and we won the discussion.

I, also, was one of the speakers at commencement. I remember some of the faculty members congratulated me after the contest was over. No medals of any kind were given. I was at Washington College only one year, but I profited, very much, by that year's work.

Professor Charles Armentrout was one of the finest men I ever knew. I would like, so much, to see him again, if he is still living. One Sunday, after church services, he invited me to take lunch at his home with him and his family. I shall never forget that day in Professor Armentrout's home. After lunch we sat in his sitting-room and he talked to me as though I had been a mature man. Just why I was invited there I never knew. But it did me good. The other boys were not invited. They asked me questions about my visit. For several years I correspond by letter, with Professor Armentrout, but hav failed to keep in touch with him.

June came, and the school year was ov and I had no money to get back hom op. I regretted to leave. I had lear to love Washington College and all my frie there. I returned to Marshall and acc a position with Nelson Brothers. I walk to the store during the summer. members of the firm: Wiley Nelson, Je Nelson and John Nelson were jolly good fellows - full of life and ready for a big laugh. I spent long hours in the stor Several years later Wiley ~~Wilson~~ Nelson serve a term in Legislature, from Madison County, and became a very devout man. He died suddenly, soon after he returned home from his session of the legislature. Jeff, a great friend of mine is now Grand Assistant Lecturer the Masonic Lodge. John lives in Californi and is doing well.

When August came, I was still work in the store. I could see no way to return to school, and was more o less despondent. I could not see a ray of light. I had not, for one moment, given up my plan to

~~to~~ study law. I was prepared to begin to take up the law course yet.

One day about 11:0'clock I received a telegram from my uncle, Rev. A. G. Buckner, my mothers' oldest brother. He was a Presbyterian minister. He had been pastor of a church in Cynthiana, Kentucky for many years. He had just been elected president of King College, in Bristol, Tennessee. The wire stated that he would pass through Marshall that afternoon and for me to meet him at the station. I met the train and my uncle told me that he was now president of King College and he wanted me to enter school there in September. I told him I would only have a few dollars at my command. He said: "You come on, we will manage that matter". I immediately informed my employers, Nelson Brothers, that I would return to school in September.

Early in September 1898, I reached Bristol in the evening, after dark. I was met at the station by my uncle. We went up to the college. My room-mate in the dormitory was Dickinson, of Virginia. I had $80.00 and turned it over to my uncle the next morning.

Young Dickinson was a young man of fin character, and we became fast friends.

I was ill prepared for college work but managed to pass my subjects wit fair marks.

The faculty was composed of splendi men: Dr. Wallace, Professor Martin Professor Lake and Professor Calhoun left an impression upon my mind.

King College was a very small institution in those days, but turned out some of the strongest men in the nation.

Dr. James L. Vance, one of the leading men in the Southern Presbyterian Church, w educated at King College. His brother, Dr Joseph Vance, is one of the most outstana men in the Northern Presbyterian Church, was also, educated at King College.

Many other prominent and useful me were students of this little college.

I recall, now, some of these bo in King College, when I entered there. Jam Delaney, Trigg Thomas, Hugh Copenhaven, Pau McChesney, _____ Carmack, Guy Duff, Paul Delaney, Clarence King, Howard Cockrane Charlie Pratt, Samuel Wood, Robert Cowan, and Georg Sells. Each of the above men have made good in this world. James Delaney is preside of a college in the state of Texas. Trigg Thomas is a very prominent and successful evangelist in the Southern Presbyterian Churc

Hugh Copenhaver is a most substantial business man in Bristol, and has been honored by the people with public office. Paul McChesney is a useful minister of the gospel, in South Carolina. Carmack became a College professor, and died a few years ago. Clarence King was elected mayor of Bristol, Tennessee a few years ago. Charlie Pratt is now a professor in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Louisville, Kentucky. George Sells is a prominent lawyer in Johnson City, Tennessee.

I was a member of one of the Literary Societies, and took an active part in all the debates and general society work.

During my first year at King College, I was one of the debaters at the annual public debate. James Delaney and I defended the affirmative side of the question, and won the decision. The question was: "Should trusts and Combines be destroyed by Direct Legislation?"

After the debate was over, my uncle, Dr. Buckner, President of the college, said to me, "You covered yourself with glory." His commendation pleased me and ~~encouraged~~ me greatly. After the debate was over, there was a reception, and I met Miss Grace ~~Black~~ I had noticed her a short distance in front of the speakers platform, during the debate.

vivacious as a new piece of money. Afte I met her I did not care to meet any other young lady. We were together during the entire evening, and I liked her very much. I called to see her many times before school closed in June

After school closed, in June, I return to my home in North Carolina. I worke on the farm during the summer. I cut wheat and did other things that nee to be done.

In September of 1899, I returned to King College and spent another year there. I, again, was one of the annual debaters and again was successful. The year passe swiftly. I was chosen one of the orators for the commencement exercises and had prepared myself for the occasion. All of a sudden I was rendered unable to take part in the contest.

21 Strike-Outs

It happened this way: I was pitching for the King College base-ball team, the record showed that I was a good pitcher. I was in the act of throwing the ball to the batter, when my arm was broken in two places. I dropped to the ground in almost a trance. They carried me from the field to a physicians' office, down town, where my arm was set. I then walked back up the hill to the college - never to throw another ball. I suffered, severely for several days, a was unable to take any part in the commencement exercises.

The school closed, and I stayed all alone in the dormitory. It was very lonely - the building was all dark, and I sat there in the stillness of the night, and planned for the future.

I did not have a single cent of money, and things did not seem promising, but yet I was determined to become a lawyer. I tried to find some kind of work in Bristol, but failed.

One evening just before leaving Bristol I called upon Miss Grace Slack, and spent a pleasant evening with her. I was exceedingly fond of her. Within a few months she married, and went to Chicago to live. She was a fine woman.

My uncle, Dr. Buckner, gave me the money to buy my ticket back home. My arm was in a sling, and I carried my suit-case in my left hand to the station, and left Bristol forever. It was a gloomy trip - back to my little home on the side of the hill. I left Bristol early in the morning seated in a day coach and left the train at Alexander. I was three or four miles from home and noone was there to meet me. I looked around and saw noone I had ever known. I had been away several years, and everything seemed changed and un-inviting. I was crest-fallen, but hung my coat over my shoulder, picked up my suit-case and started across the hills toward home. It was the middle of June, and a very hot afternoon. I actually suffered from the heat.

As I traveled from the station, tougrd my home, I felt that the future had no place for me, I was dejected, sad and gloomy. My mind and thoughts were back at King College, and I wanted to return to see the boys and the people I had grown to love, but that was not to be. I traveled over the hills toward home, stopping, occassionally, on the top of a hill to rest and sit under a tree and gaze ~~fare and~~ wide toward the encircling mountains. I had done this many times, with my brothers, years ago.

At last, I climbed the last hill before reaching home, and stood on the top, and looked — there - more than a mile away, stood the little house on the side of the hill. It was getting late and I could see smoke coming out of the kitchen chimney - they were preparing the evening meal. I had been living in a city for several years, and it all seemed so strange, but I hastened on, and soon came near the house. Just as I approached the yard Mother came out of the kitchen door. She was not expecting me ~~and~~ She uttered a low exclamation — she had noticed my arm in a sling. I told her not to be alarmed that I was all right. She put her dear arms, gently, around me and I kissed her. We went along by the kitchen to what we always called the upper porch.

I was at home again in the little house on the side of the hill.

I was not able to do any kind of work for a few weeks, but I spent the time reading and doing little things around the house. I learned to write, fairly well, with my left hand while my right arm was in a sling. I remember writing Miss Grace Slack a long letter with my left hand, and she said in a letter to me that I did splendidly. She was a very tactful young lady, and I appreciated her fine sense of encouragement. She was married some time during that year. I saw an announcement of her wedding in the paper. I felt a keen pang of regret when Miss Slack passed out of my life

A School Teacher

The summer was passing swiftly — my arm was about well and strong again, and I was becoming restless and exceedingly anxious.

I had enjoyed the weeks at home with mother and Gwin, but I could not resign myself to settle there on the farm. To stay there and work on the farm was not to my liking. I had been "Ewell's Essentials", a compilation of Blackstone, and was longing to enter the Wake Forest law school, but I did not have a cent of money. I could not see how to get the funds to take care of my expenses in the law school, but not for a moment did I get discouraged.

One day, late in the summer, I received a letter from Professor S. F. Venable, the Superintendent of the Buncombe County Public Schools, asking me if I would accept a position as principal of the Sand Hill School. He stated that I would have to teach Latin, Algebra, General History and kindred subjects. I did not feel capable of teaching Latin, but I felt, but I felt reasonably sure of myself in the other subjects.

The next day I went to Asheville, and met Professor Venable, in his office on Church street. Miss Kate Henry had recommended me to him, as I then learned. While I was there Mr. J. D. Murphy, attorney for the school board, came in, and Professor Venable introduced me to him. A few years later Mr. Murphy was made Judge of the Superior Court.

In those days, (1901), all teachers in the public schools of the state were required to stand a written examination, before being allowed to teach. I had never taught school, and was not sure that I could, successfully, stand an examination. I told professor Venable just how I felt, but he said for me to report at the Sand Hill School the next Monday morning for duty. He said he would notify me, within a few weeks, when to come to Asheville for the examination.

I went back home, got a few of my things together, and left for my new field of action.

I had a pleasant place to stay in the home of Mrs. Henry, the mother of Miss Kate Henry.

My assistant teacher was Miss Lucy Zelmet, a very capable young woman. Professor Venable had taught at Sand Hill for many years, himself. I found a fine body of students in the school. They were better qualified than

I had imagined they would be. I plunged into the work, and

The citizenship of this community, where I was teaching, was of the very highest and I made many, and those friendships have lasted to this very moment.

My stay at the home of Mrs. Henry was pleasant at all times. She was a well educated woman, and I had many interesting conversations with her. Her daughter, Miss Kate, and her son, Wade, did everything possible to make me feel at home. Miss Kate, also, was teaching at another school in that community. We had many things in common. My salary was $40.00 per month, but $40.00 at that time, meant as much to me, then, as $150.00 would now. The purchasing power of a dollar was so much greater than now.

My school closed and I returned home to work on the farm. I attended a teachers' institute in Asheville for two weeks. In the fall, I was employed to teach at Barnardsville. Miss Ella Carter was my assistant. I lived in the home of Mr. James H. Maney, one of the finest men I ever knew. His good wife treated me just like her own son. Mr. Maney had been a soldier in the Confederate Army, and we had many interesting talks. He was a man of hard common sense, and I called him "The Philosopher!" I never new a man with a higher sense of honor.

I would not forget his good wife and the other members of his family. They were kind and cordial to me, and I will always be grateful to them.

Mrs. Maney would only let me pay her $5.00 per month for board and room. She always had a table filled with the very best of food.

The next year I was persuaded to accept the principalship of the new Flat Creek Graded School at Stocksville, N. C. At this school I had two assistants, Miss Cora Stockton, of Asheville and Miss _____ Buckner of Jupiter.

It was while teaching at this school that I met my future wife, Miss Mary Althea Sams. She was the second daughter of Mr. J. H. Sams, who lived near the school where I was teaching.

Mr. Sams had been a member of the County Board of Education for Buncombe County, for more than 30 years. He was a man of the highest character and practical common sense. When a young man, he had been a teacher. I could always depend upon him in everything that was meant for the good of the school and the community. His stabilizing influence was felt in all this county.

After the close of this school I was determined to leave at once for Wake Forest College, to enter the law school. I had saved a few hundred dollars. My school closed just before Christmas and I left immediately after the first of the New Year for Wake Forest.

I had been reading law for more than a year, but it is hard to get hold of any subject without a preceptor.

I met John B. Anderson in Asheville and asked him what he was going to do. He, too, had been teaching school. He told me that he was leaving that night for Chapel Hill to enter law school. When he learned I was going to Wake Forest, he decided to go with me. I had been in touch with Dr. N.Y. Gulley the dean of the law school. We left Asheville late one winter afternoon and traveled all night, in a day coach, reaching Raleigh in the early morning, in time for breakfast. My eyes did not close during the night. I was thinking of my chance to make good in the law school. We reached Wake Forest sometime in the afternoon. I never left the school until the following August, when I went to Raleigh to stand the examination before the Supreme Court.

Anderson and I roomed together and slept in the same bed. We studied hard, and felt reasonably sure of passing safely through the test.

Professor Gulley accompanied his class of 14 pupils, down to Raleigh. He gave us a thrilling lecture the next morning, just before we entered the Supreme Court room. The examination was held in the House of Representatives.

I spent about four and a half hours in writing my answers to the sixty-six questions. That night I left Raleigh for home.

I met Professor J. J. Reagan, the Supt. of Buncombe County Schools, on the street, as I passed through Asheville, on my way back home. He asked me if I would, again, take charge of the Flat Creek Graded school. I had spent all the money I had while at the law school, and was glad to go right to work. I did not know whether I had passed the examination, before the court or not. I went to work in the school the next Monday morning, hammering away at the old job of trying to interest young men and women in Algebra, Latin, History and Mathematics. Miss Hannah Weaver on _____ _____ were my assistants. They were both faithful teachers.

I was staying with Mr. and Mrs. Miner Clinton just a few hundred yards from the school. They were great friends to me. Mrs. Clinton was my father's cousin. I shall always remember this family.

About a week later my law license was received through the mail. At last, I was licensed by the Supreme Court of North Carolina, to practice law. It was just nine years since I had attended Criminal Court in Asheville, where I had made up my mind to study law.

The following Saturday I took my precious license and went to Asheville, sought out Honorable Locke Craig and requested him to present me to the court, in order that I might be sworn in as an officer of the court.

Judge Michael Justice was holding court. Mr. Craig administered the oath to me, and Judge Justice left the bench, stepped down to where I was standing. He took me by the hand and spoke kind words of encouragement to me. He was a wonderfully tactful man.

was a gentleman of the old school of North Carolina lawyers. Several years later, Judge Justice died while holding court in Asheville.

I went back to my school and for two years longer I stayed in the school room. The next year, I taught at Morgan Hill. This was an eight months term.

On the 19th day of January, 1907, I was married to Miss Mary Althea Sams. I took my young bride to the home of Mr. Marion Stockton, where I was boarding. My school closed the first of March, and now, I was going to open a law office in Asheville, and see what I could do in my chosen field of action. I was eager for the opportunity to get into action.

Lawyer

On the 1st day of April, 1907, We came to Asheville, purchased a small amount of furniture and moved into a little house I had purchased on Livingston Street. I opened my law office in Fountain Building, on North Pack Square. Mr. Samuel Radford and I formed a partnership under the name of Radford and Roberts. This firm did not last but a few weeks. Mr. Radford went back to the school room. He too, had been a teacher.

We lived very simply in our little house on Livingston Street. Mr. John Cathey lived in a cottage just in the rear of my house. He was, then, working in a hardware store. We often walked home together, in the evening. Later he was elected Clerk of the Superior Court, and Mayor of the City of Asheville, and is now practicing law.

My office rent was $7.50 per month. I had purchased a second-hand roller-top desk for $10.00, and my library consisted of the "Revisal of 1905", and a few text books. I did not have a single copy of any of the North Carolina Supreme Court Reports.

I had always signed my name as "E. G. Roberts", but I decided to drop the E. and make my name more distinctive. I, therefore, had printed in bold letters on my office door: "Gallatin Roberts, Attorney at Law". I was ready for business, but clients came exceedingly slow.

The first case I had was before Judge Boyd in the United States District Court for the Western District of North Carolina. My client was charged with misappropriating Post Office funds. He was a Post-Master at a little country post office. We were two days trying the case. My client was convicted. I made 1 defense I possibly could for my client, but the facts were too strong against him. He was sent to Atlanta for a year and a day.

Occasionally, a client would darken my door, and I would try small cases before Justices of Peace, and in the Police Court. I was adding a few books to my small collection from time to time.

Honorable Mark J. Reed was chairman of the board of County Commisioners of Buncombe County. I had been very active in his behalf in the primary, in the summer after I came to Asheville. He became my warm friend. Mr. Reed was defeated in the primary by Honorable Eugene Rankin. The primary was held in May and the general election the following November.

Just after the primary, I was elected County Attorney of Buncombe County, by Mr. Reed's board. I served until the new board was inducted into office on the 1st Monday in December.

Being elected County Attorney, gave me a great boost, and business began to increase. The first year after I opened an office, I made approximately $315.00

At the end of the first year Mr. W. G. Fortune and I formed a partnership, which lasted ten years. Never did two men get along any more satisfactorily. Mr. Fortune was a perfect gentleman. After a time we began to make money.

When Mr. Rankin's board of County Commisioners came into office, my name was not even considered. Mr. Charles A. Webb was re-elected. He had been County Attorney for many years and did not need the money. Later I defeated Mr. Rankin for Mayor of Asheville.

Stranger than Fiction

We had our law offices on the first floor of what was then called the Reed Building, on South Pack Square. Donnahoe and Bledsoe, real estate men, were just across the hall. We were good friends then and those friendships have continued.

One day a most unusual thing happened in my eventful life. Mr. Fortune and I were both in the office. A man came into the office and said: "I want to see Mr. Roberts". I took him into the consultation room, gave him a chair, and sat down on the other side of a long table. After a few words, in a general way, I asked him the nature of his business. I had observed that he was looking me over meticulously. In a few moments he blurted out: "I am your father!"

I had never seen him. He had left my mother three months before I was born. I sat still, looking across the table at my father. When did ever another man, in North Carolina have such an experience? Yes, I sat still looking at him. My mind was running back to the days when my dear mother had told us that father would soon return. Also, to the times I had sat on the fence, on top of the hill, looking toward the blue hills in the West, wondering why he did not come.

All of this occurred within a few moments, and I finally said: "You have returned after almost 40 years, you have married your second wife, since you left my mother with two small children, and now you come back here to bring a flood of sad memories to her and her sons! We looked and expected you for many years, but now its too late! You shall not ever communicate with her in any way. I shall have nothing to do with you. I do not wish you any harm, but please do not annoy me any further. We have suffered enough by your conduct.

He passed out, but in a few days, I was standing at the window of my law office, looking out and saw him coming across the street. I met him at the door and told him I would not see him any further. He turned and went from my view forever. He had sons and daughters, another woman, and to them he must go. He left Asheville, and I have not seen or heard of him any more.

Public Life

In the spring of 1910, I announced myself a candidate, in the Democratic Primary, for the Legislature.

I had not ever dreamed of such a thing until some of the leading citizens came to me, one afternoon, and asked me to make the race. They pointed out to me that I had taught school in different parts of the county, was very well known and could win the nomination. I was interested and talked it over with my law partner, Mr. Fortune. He was a Republican, but advised me to run, if I desired to do so.

Buncombe County, under law, was entitled to two members in the Lower House of Representative. Judge Speare Reynolds, Robert R. Williams, _____ Jarrett, and I were all in the field to fill the two places. Judge Reynolds was pitted against me in the primary. I won the nomination, and Mr. Williams was my running mate. The primary was in May.

In September and October we canvassed the entire county, speaking at almost every school-house in the county. I became acquainted with all the leading Democrats in every precinct, and made many friends.

The Republicans nominated Guy Weaver and Charles L. Sykes to contest with Mr. Williams and myself. They too, canvassed the county.

Guy Weaver and I were born upon adjoining farms, and were neighbor boys.

The election came in November and the entire Democratic County ticket was elected by a handsome majority. My majority was more than 700.

Just after the election Mr. Fortune and I were employed to defend a man for murder — J. B. Allison. He had shot a man by the name of Mc. Gee, and killed him.

Mark W. Brown was the prosecuting attorney for the state, at that time, and the firm of Jones and Williams was employed by the private prosecution, to assist the solicitor.

It was a hard case to defend. Allison and Mc. Gee had had trouble over a woman, and bad blood had been engendered between the two men. I was the third man Allison had killed.

The state proved in this trial, that Allison had gone into the livery stable where Mc. Gee worked, shot him down, picked up a sledge hammer, and knocked him in the head.

We tried to prove that Mc. Gee had threatened to kill Allison on sight, and that Allison had only killed the deceased, to save his own life. The savagery of Allison's attack could not be over-come, malice was too evident. The trial lasted three days. I made the first argument to the jury, and spoke more than an hour. Mark Brown made the concluding argument to the jury.

Allison was convicted of murder in the first degree, and sentenced to be electrocuted at the State Prison, in Raleigh, in February, 1911.

This trial was a wonderful experience for me. It was in this trial that I found myself. After this trial I had confidence in myself as never before.

In the early part of January, 1911, Mr. Williams and I left for Raleigh, to be present at the opening of the Legislature. There was a spirited contest over the Speakership of the House, and we supported Representative W. L. Bond, of Charlotte. He won with hands down.

It's very fortunate for a new man, entering the legislature to be selected the winner for Speaker of the house. I was fortunate in this respect. Speaker Bond, in making up his committee assignments, made me Chairman of the Congressional Reapportionment Committee. One day, after a few weeks had elapsed, Speaker Bond called me to the Chair to preside over the House, while he was called away for the day. I managed to get by in very good order.

In February, 1911, I shocked some of the old line Democrats, almost out of their boots, by introducing a bill, in the nature of a Constitutional Amendment, to the State Constitution, which could, if ratified by the voters of the State, give the ballot to women.

To those old hide-bound, machine men, I had committed an awful offense. Such a thing as that was absurd and ridiculous. Of course, my bill died a hard death.

At that time Asheville's City Charter provided for a board of Aldermen, and a mayor. An act had been passed at a prior session of the legislature, creating a "Police Commission" for the city. The mayor and board of aldermen had nothing to do with the police force.

The first bill I introduced, in the Assembly was one to repeal the Police Commission act. My bill raised an uproar in Asheville Mr. J. C. Martin, the senator from Buncombe County, was very much worried. The bill passed the house and finally, Mr. Martin let it go through the Senate.

The people seemed to approve our _____ in the assembly, at the session of 1911, and we were both re-elected in the fall of 1912, by increased majorities.

Senator Martin did not stand for re-electio. Zebulon Weaver was Buncombe County's new State Senator.

Again, I was on the winning side in the Speakership fight. George H. Conner was made Speaker, and he named me chairman of the important committee on counties, cities and towns.

At this session of the Legislature, I again worked for the right to give the ballot to women. Again, the Legislature turned a deaf ear toward this meritorious cause.

I was re-elected in 1915. This time, Harry P. Nettles was my colleague. We both supported E. M. Wooten for Speaker, and Speaker Wooten made me Chairman of the powerful Appropriation Committee. I was named on a committee to go to Louisburg to escort Governor-Elect Bicket to the Capitol.

During the session Speaker Wooten was killed in an automobile accident, and T. C. Bowie was elected speaker for the balance of the term. Again, my bill for equal suffrage.

In 1916, I was elected a member of the General Assembly for the fourth consecutive time, and I was a candidate for speaker, but was defeated by former speaker Walter Murphy of Salisbury. My equal suffrage views did not suit senator F.M. Simmons, A. D. Watts and the Simmons state machine.

I again, introduced my suffrage bill By this time sentiment was growing for the measure, but the same old crowd was able to defeat it again.

It was at this session that I introduced a bill to give Asheville municipal equal suffrage, but this bill was only defeated by a small majority.

The old machine was so afraid of the suffrage question that they were not willing to let the women vote, even in a municipality. The member of the old Simmons machine were far more afraid of the woman vote than the Hollander is of a growing leak in a dyke that holds back the waves of the north sea.

After the World War was over, and President Woodrow Wilson had made a plea for all the states that had not ratified the 18th Amendment, to fall into line at the earliest possible moment, the same old crowd assembled the extra session, and still stubbornly refused to ratify the ammendment. North Carolina lost the golden opportunity to go down in history as the state that gave the ballot to the women of America.

Within a few weeks after the extra session of North Carolina Legislature adjourned, the Legislature of Tennessee ratified the 18th Amendment and the women of the United States were given the ballot.

It was within this same year before Tennessee had ratified the 18th Amendment that the Democrats of Buncombe County took a step unparalleled in the history of the United States. Miss L. Exum Clement was nominated for the Legislature of North Carolina two months before the 18th Amendment was ratified. If Tennessee had failed to take this forward step this young lady would not have been eligible to sit in the assembly.

Miss Clement was triumphantly elected. She was the first woman ever elected to public office in the South, and she acquitted herself with credit.

Miss Clement married a Mr. Stafford just after the Legislature adjourned. She died several years later.

Mayor of Asheville

In the spring of 1919, I announced myself a candidate for mayor of Asheville. Mayor E. E. Rankin had been in office for eight years. He had already announced that he would stand for re-election. H. J. Olive had entered the race too. The contest was under way, and was getting to be interesting.

I had not thought of offering myself for this office - until one afternoon several men of both political parties came into my office, and asked me to get into the fight. I took time to consider this matter. After a few days I learned that the time was ripe for a third man to enter the race and I "cast my hat into the ring".

The next morning I went over to see Mr. Burgin Pennell, and asked him if he would manage my campaign. He readily agreed, and the fight was on. Mr. George Pennell also plunged into the fight for me. It was a very spirited fight. Mr. Rankin led me by only a few votes and Mr. Olive polled a large vote too. Mr. Olive dropped out of the picture and at the general election I defeated Mr. Rankin by more than 500 votes.

R. J. Sherrell and R. L. Fitzpatrick were elected commissioners, and on the 23rd day of May 1919, I was sworn in as Mayor of Asheville.

I named Mr. George Pennell City Attorney and Mr. Grover C. Hunter Secretary-Treasurer.

During my term as Mayor a number of important improvements were made in the city. A new 16 inch water line was laid fro the Bee Tree Water-shed into the city, a modern comfort station made under ground on Pack Square, two new fire stations were constructe one on Bartlett Street, and one in West Asheville A large amount of new equipment for al the fire stations was purchased, a new incinerator built, a number of streets paved and water extension in all parts of the city.

All the city schools were crowded, an some relief was imperative. We called a special election in the city, asking the people to vote $550,000.00 for new school buildings. It was voted almost unamiously The bonds were sold at a good figure, a out of the proceeds Stevens-Lee, Claxton Newton and Vance schools were constructed.

Soon after I came into office, there becam a vacancy for the office of City Superintende of schools. We elected Professor W.L. Brooker to this position. He was an experienced school man, and he made an exhaustive report as to the needs of Asheville's schoo system. A new salary schedule was worked out and adopted.

The elementary school teachers were only making about $65.00 per month, and the situation was deplorable. Under the new schedule the salaries were more than doubled. The schools took on new life.

My salary was only $4000.00 per year. At the end of my term, I did not stand for re-election. I preferred to return to my law practice.

Mr. Sherrill and Mr. Fitzpatrick were both defeated in the primary of May, 1923.

John H. Cathey was my successor. He defeated Robert N. Wells, after a bitter fight. Frank T. Conder and C. H. Bartlett were the new commissioners.

During my term as mayor I was three times elected President of the North Carolina Municipal Association. These meetings were held in Raleigh, N. C. During this period I was also twice elected President of the North Carolina Forestry Association. We held the Forestry meetings in Wilmington and Pinehurst. For these meetings I prepared two rather exhaustive addresses. The State of North Carolina owes much to the fine work of the association.

I left the mayor's office in May 1923, and immediately re-opened my law office in the old Library Building on Pack Square.

I had been out of touch with the practice for four years, but very soon clients began to come to me again.

A few months later Don C. Young and I formed a partnership and took a suite of offices in the Legal Building. Our business grew rapidly, and very soon we kept busy all the time.

My business was constantly growing and I was content.

Mayor Again

In the spring of 1927, a petition signed by more than 3,000 voters was presented to me, asking that I make the run again for Mayor of Asheville.

At first, I refused to consider it seriously, but after talking with many good citizens, I entered the race. Mr. E. B. Atkinson was my opponent in the primary. I was again nominated by a flattering majority.

Immediately after the primary, I left to attend the General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, in El Dorado, Arkansas. I had been elected a Commissioner to the Assembly by the Presbytery, several weeks before.

I left Asheville on the 8th day of May 1927. The assembly did not convene until May 18th, and I went to Bristol, Tenn. I wanted to see King College again. I had not been back at the old college in more than 25 years. Presid Tilden Scherer drove down to the hotel and took me out to the college. I wa twice at the Chapel hour, and talked t the boys for a little while. They gave a royal reception.

Late in the afternoon, I left for Chicago, stopping in Cincinnatti. I stopped at the La Salle Hotel and spent two days there with friends. I visited my cousin, Mrs. Lula Eckstorm, an enjoyed one whole evening, seeing Chicag
Chicago is a wonderful city.

I left on Sunday evening for Memphis, Tennessee, arriving in this interest city at 8 45 P.M. After seeing Memphis fr two days, I left for Little Rock, Arkans
The run from Memphis over to Litt Rock was interesting. It was during the time of the flood in the Mississippi. F many miles the train passed through th floods, and at times I doubted if we would be able to get through the water.

Little Rock is a beautiful city. I was there for two days, also. I then departed for El Dorado, Arkansas, where t
General Assembly was to meet.

I shall never forget this great religious gathering.

The Assembly met in the First Presbyterian Church, with more than 500 ministers and lay delegates in attendance.

The retiring Moderator delivered a wonderful sermon. I shall not forget his subject: "We are laborers with God".

At this afternoon session our own beloved Dr. R. F. Campbell, was elected Moderator, by a large majority. He took the chair and acquitted himself with much credit.

I was compelled to leave before the assembly was over, in order to reach Asheville in time to be again sworn in as mayor of Asheville.

Susan Reinhardt

COLUMNIST

Ralph Roberts booked solid in Alexander

Some people consider Ralph Roberts one of Asheville's best-kept secrets. They don't know a whole lot about him, only that from his farm in Alexander he seems to be doing interesting things.

The former NASA engineer is a writer and publisher who is involved in helping other authors and authors-to-be see their name in print through WorldComm and Alexander Books, his publishing and distributing company founded four years ago on a piece of land next to his farmhouse.

To his credit, he's written more than 60 books, published by the big names in New York such as Random House and MacMillan. Most are about computers, including the nation's first book on computer viruses.

He's such a computer genius that in November 1988, NBC chartered a Lear jet to Asheville when the Internet shut down after a bout with a type of computer virus. The NBC news team sought Roberts' expertise on the subject, and that evening he was featured during the NBC Nightly News.

Sometimes, Roberts lets his humorous, more creative side show. He wrote a movie that starred Shelley Winters and is a leading authority on autographs.

His latest works, co-authored by wife, Pat Roberts, are a series of cookbooks, including "The Recovering Vegetarian Cookbook: 12 Easy Steps to Eating Meat Again," and "Cooking With Pepsi: Uh Huh!"

Roberts began his life in the Alexander community and graduated from Erwin High School. A smart kid who was more into gadgets and knowledge than socializing, he attended North Carolina State University and got a degree in electrical engineering. As a NASA engineer in the '70s, he worked with computers that predicted the orbits of satellites.

During that time, he also built his first personal computer from a kit. It was the computer, he said, that changed his world. It was the computer, he said, that turned him into a writer.

His first article on the subject, "Down With Typewriters," was published in a national magazine in 1979, and thus began a writing career that, in addition to his books, includes more than 5,000 published articles and short stories.

Not long ago, he left the big-game, "little money" New York scene and decided to set up his own companies.

It is his goal to publish and distribute best-sellers – either his own – or someone else's. People like Bob Terrell, George and Helen Sanders, Dr. Andrea Gravatt and Ben Brouke have seen print through Roberts, as well as authors from all over the country.

Ben Brouke, a play on words because hard times came often, is the pen name for a Mars Hill man who grew up in Virginia and settled in Madison County, spending the years in between up north.

"I went up north for 40 years and all the time was considered a hillbilly," he said. "I moved back here and was considered a yankee. I call myself a 'yankabilly.' "

Since returning to his own turf three years ago, Ben wrote "Hill Tauk," stories of what it was like growing up in Virginia in the '30s and '40s, living on a 100-acre farm which, along with the hidden stills, sustained a family.

"Hill Tauk" is a collection of southern craziness, stories about shoot-outs and moonshine, whippings, and stolen chickens.

Ralph Roberts said the book will be out soon.

Susan Reinhardt's column about people appears Tuesday, Thursday and Sunday. Call (704) 252-5611, Ext. 420.

xt. 2020
2-5611, ext. 411.

The history of area Vietnam War veterans emerges

Visiting Our Past

When Vietnam War veterans go to the VA Medical Center in Oteen for checkups, they wear their caps, letting others there know where they'd served. Some vets wear their caps in general public. Nearly two generations have passed since this region's soldiers returned from Vietnam to a populace that in some measure condemned them.

Rob Neufeld

"They seemed to blame us instead of the politicians," said Ralph Roberts, order of battle specialist within the 1st Air Cavalry.

Yet, the climate has changed, and soldiers are being recognized for their fortitude, regardless of politics. On Sunday, the West Asheville Library opens an exhibit of photographs taken by Vietnam War veterans and collected by Martin Tucker of Winston-Salem.

"It might have been that the veterans weren't ready to talk until now," said Peter Caulfield, Vietnam veteran and UNC Asheville professor, "or it might be that they've been ready for a long time, but no one has asked."

Though veterans have to deal with lingering negative effects — including Agent Orange — many soldiers undergo positive changes.

"In combat," said Roberts, who had searched enemies' bunkers for information in the Quan Loi area, "you discover that you can function in any situation. You know it and it makes you stronger." Roberts owns and operates Alexander Books in Alexander and has written "The Veterans Guide to Benefits." He also was the editor, in the 1980s, of N.C. Veterans News, a monthly.

The May 1987 issue contained two contrasting features. One was an article — about veterans' heated protests about the low quality of care at the VA Hospital at the time. The other feature was an ad. A photo of a World War II homecoming is captioned, "There are those who have waited 12 years for a handshake, let alone a hug and a kiss." The ad was for a North Carolina Homecoming Salute for Vietnam Veterans.

Carl Mumpower, vice mayor of Asheville, is a Vietnam War veteran and a doctor of psychology. Roberts published his book, "Vietnam: Coming All the Way Home," which provided recognition of and healing advice for post-traumatic stress. "The Vietnam War was the embodiment of dishonesty," Mumpower wrote. "So we created our own individual truth. ... There were 5 million wars in Vietnam, not one."

One of the roles that Vietnam War vets are playing in the region today is a keen recognition of the needs of returning Iraq war veterans, many of whom are disabled.

"What is being done for them is terribly inadequate," Caulfield says. "Here are people who have given everything but their lives and the government isn't doing enough to take care of them. ... If we are serious about patriotism, there ought to be sacrifices from the wider public to recognize the sacrifices of the soldiers."

Special exhibit

The exhibit, "A Thousand Words: Photographs by Vietnam Veterans," opens with a reception at West Asheville Library, 942 Haywood St., 2 to 4 p.m., Sunday. It runs through Sept. 30. It was first organized by Sawtooth Center for Visual Art in Winston-Salem and has been funded by the N.C. Humanities Council. Friends of West Asheville Library and the Asheville-Buncombe Library System Trust Fund has funded its installation in West Asheville. Karen Loughmiller of West Asheville Branch Library and Peter Caulfield of UNC Asheville are exploring with Martin Tucker the possibility of doing a similar project in Western North Carolina. For more information, call 251-4990.

SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

Sgt. Ralph Roberts of Alexander crosses the Bin Hoa base in Vietnam in April, 1969—shortly after the end of Tet offensive attacks.

RAMSEY

MRS. PIERCE

MISS MOORE

MISS ROBINSON

MISS LANCE

MRS. BENNES

TEACHERS AT THE TOP — Asheville units of two teacher groups elected officers at meetings yesterday afternoon. Miss Margaret Moore of Lee Edwards High School was elected president of the city unit of the North Carolina Education Association. Other officers are Woodrow Ramsey, principal of Queen Carson Elementary School, named vice president, and Mrs. D. H. Pierce of Claxton Elementary School, secretary-treasurer. The Asheville Classroom Teachers Association named Mrs. Anna Bennes of Vance Elementary School, president; Miss Mary June Lance of Grace Elementary School, vice president, and Miss Betty Robinson of Hall Fletcher Junior High School, treasurer. Miss Frances Farlinger of Aycock Elementary School, secretary, was not present for the picture.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1934

Had Winning Dolls In Show Here

Two of the prize winners in the West Asheville doll show staged yesterday are shown here with their large dolls displayed at the show in the Biedsoe building under auspices of Mrs Robert Russell's class of intermediate girls of West Asheville Methodist church. At left is little Margaret Robinson whose doll took the prize as the prettiest in the show and at right is Alberta Evans who won two prizes

Dolls Are Displayed In Contest

Approximately 200 dolls representing between 60 and 70 entries were shown in the West Asheville doll show in the Biedsoe building yesterday under auspices of Mrs. Robert Russell's intermediate girls class of West Asheville Methodist church. Adults as well as children had dolls in the contest

Prize winners for the various classifications were announced as follows: Miss Helen Devendorf, best collection of dolls by a child, Frances Mitchell, best miniature furniture; Margaret Ensley best baby doll; Eleanor May best dressed doll; Margaret Robinson prettiest doll, Betty Russell, best story about a doll; Alberta Evans, ugliest doll, Miss Helen Devendorf, most original; Miss Irene Logan, of Child Garden school, best collection of dolls by an adult; Mrs. J A Marshall best dressed boy doll; Mary Marshall Mitchell cutest doll; Alberta Evans best individual furniture for a doll which was an antique handmade corded bed; Miss Helen Devendorf, smallest doll, Jean Russell best furniture, Betty Russell, smallest carriage; Jaqueline Freeman, most human doll; Mrs. H. O. DeLoach oldest doll which was 75 years old, Roberta Wade doll with prettiest hair, Mrs W. A. Blair, most unique doll, and Geraldine Robinson, largest Judges also commended the entry of Mrs. Arta Blanchard which was received too late to compete but was on display.

Judges for the doll show were Mrs. E. O Lewis, Mrs. C E. Roberts and Mrs. Preston Thomas. Miss Beatrice Netherton was general chairman of the show.

M. L. Lamby was winner of the homespun donated by Fred L. Seely which was given away during the show.

Asheville Citizen September 9, 1934

THE ASHEVILLE CITIZEN.
February 17, 1929

Two Years Old

Helen Louise Robinson, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Robinson, of Haywood Road, West Asheville, is celebrating her second birthday anniversary today. Mrs. Robinson was formerly Miss Ruby Graham.

SUSAN REINHARDT
columnist

Eliada Homes orphan designed our N.C. quarter

Stewart Humphrey called with excitement in his voice. He's usually low-key, a typical CEO with good intentions and a reserved nature.

Humphrey is head of Eliada Homes, Inc., a former orphanage in Leicester that remains a place where children and families come to heal.

One of the children from the past, Mary Ellen Robinson, is an art teacher living in Asheboro who has sketched her way into history.

Robinson's rendition of the famous Wright brother's Kitty Hawk flight was selected to be the image on the North Carolina commemorative quarter.

Humphrey was delighted that the face on the quarters in our pockets is the artwork of this Eliada alumnus, who was just 3 years old in 1957 when she came to the campus with her older brothers.

Robinson had entered the contest after seeing an ad in the paper seeking designs. That was in June 1999. She heard nothing more. Then in March when the coins were unveiled she told her husband, "This airplane looks exactly like mine."

"I'd see it and think, 'this could be it'," she said. "It was a long time before I got a quarter of my own." The only acknowledgement she got was a letter from the N.C. Commemorative quarter committee saying they'd received her drawings.

It wasn't until she had an offer from the Independent Coin Grading Co. to become part of the Signature State Quarter series, that she realized she was truly the winner. The company sent her 5,000 authentication slips to sign. Later, she received a generous check.

She called Humphrey and told him she was planning a contribution to Eliada from her next ICG check. She is also working on pen and ink drawings for the home's annual calendar.

Eliada, she said, holds a bittersweet place in her memory. She recalls the deep snowfalls, the green pastures, the cold lake. She also remembers the heartache and the feeling no one would love her. She couldn't understand the family problems that removed her from a mother's keep. She cried every night, until one special staff member, a Mrs. Longstreet, took the frightened child into her arms and offered the comfort that would sustain her in years to come.

After she left Eliada at age 10 to live in a foster home, she grew determined to make it in this world. She worked three jobs to put herself through college. She also got married, is rearing three teen-agers, and has the real home she's always longed for.

"It still seems strange," she said, "that people from all over the U.S. are holding my artwork in their pockets."

Asheville Citizen 2000

SATURDAY, JANUARY 21, 2006

Rodriguez to help lead Baptists

Church 'planter' brings Hispanic perspective

By Andre A. Rodriguez
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — The Rev. Samuel D. Rodriguez, a pastor of New Life Community Church, recently began service on the board of directors of the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina.

Rodriguez was elected to the board during the convention's annual meeting in November and will help manage the state's largest church group over the next three years.

Rev. Samuel Rodriguez

"I think this is a great opportunity to participate in some way in the progress of the Baptist churches in North Carolina," he said.

Rodriguez is a former president of the Honduras Baptist Convention and of the Baptist seminary in Honduras.

"I'm trying to be a blessing for our people and to do something different," he said.

Rodriguez came to Asheville from Honduras about three years ago. In that time, he has worked as a church "planter," beginning two missions — Communidad Familiar on Haywood Road and a mission at Pleasant Hill Baptist Church in Weaverville.

"Samuel really has a world vision and a kingdom vision for seeing the hope of Christ spread through the Hispanic community," said the Rev. Steve Harris, pastor of New Life Community Church.

According to Larry Phillips, a Hispanic consultant to the convention's congregational services group, there are about 125 Hispanic congregations related to the Baptist State Convention. The convention is not only seeing a growing number of Hispanic Baptists, but also a growing number of Baptist congregations of other ethnicities.

"So we're attempting to have the convention reflect the contingency of people we're working with," he said. "It's not only an emphasis to name Hispanics but also an emphasis to elect other folks from other ethnic groups."

The Baptist State Convention of North Carolina has just more than 4,000 affiliated congregations with more than 1.2 million members across the state. There are 115 board members. Each of the 10 regions in the state is eligible for a member on the board of directors. Additional membership is based on one board member for each 10,000 church members in the region.

Virginia Rodriguez

Virginia Rodriguez lives in West Asheville. She is a teacher, a lecturer, a counselor and a social worker: her time is divided among several community-based organizations and projects. On Fridays she participates in the West Asheville Library's story-telling time for preschoolers, where stories are read in both Spanish and English. "It's like telling stories to my grandchildren," she says. She teaches English as a Second Language (ESL) through Asheville's Literacy Council; she also teaches Spanish. Over the years, Virginia has become involved with New Age practices and beliefs, including the study of numerology.

She has lived in Asheville for eight months.

Originally I was born in Cuba, but I came to this country when I was a teenager. See, there were critical times in Cuba at that time. Because Castro, as you know, took power. We felt that everybody was with him at the beginning, but we felt that he betrayed the Revolution. So our family, even though was not actively involved in working against the government, their feelings were like that, and we were very affected. We were just middle-class people, professionals. But right away, affecting our belief systems, persecuted in our religion—that was Catholic. And actually, you could not speak. You could not speak your mind. I explain that to people, like that I could not stand in a corner—I go to Malaprops [a bookstore in downtown Asheville], and I see a group of teenagers with signs and speaking their mind. And then they tell me they traveled to Cuba, like Cuba is wonderful, and they like the Revolution—but over there, people have not the right to speak their minds. They go to jail for just giving their opinion about something.

I have two friends that were eighteen, and they were just on the radio saying whatever they felt was wrong with the government, and they got [arrested]; they came out old people, at forty. That's because Amnesty International helped to get them out of jail. So I knew my country was suffering, people in jail, whoever did not agree with the Communist regime. I know even now the suffering. There's no food. And the division in the family: I saw a cousin of mine. His son was a baby and then the government took it. You know, they take it because they go to school. And [now] the boy has a position in the government. The father thinks one way and he thinks another way.

So my parents were afraid for me that I could be, you know, indoctrinated and changed. They wanted me to be raised a certain way, that has to do with belief in God. And freedom. So they sent me to Miami, where I have some relatives. I did not have to pick tomatoes like some of my friends; you have to do that because you have nobody.

I was very young. And when you're young, it's very easy. Because everything's exciting. Yes, you know your country's suffering, and your family—well, you're young. And then right away, you know, you're integrated to the culture. And when I came, I already spoke English; I studied in my country English. Cause I had family here, and I was planning when I graduated from college, I would come here. So transition was easy for me. But, for example, for my father it was not. He died at 63. And he was healthy. We all thought that was because at 63, all his life, he thought he was going to retire, and then he has to start all over again and work in a factory. So a lot of people in my family suffered. But for me to adapt here was easy. Because I was young. And I got involved into getting married and having kids and all that. And then my kids are from here, so also that helps, you know, because they have Cuban roots but they—they think like Americans in many ways. They have friends. They live their life here. They're not going back to Cuba, anycase. I'm not going back to Cuba. Maybe I go to help, if any change comes. But my family's here.

My personal opinion is that whenever there is a situation like the one in Cuba, hate and resentment is not going to solve it.

My personal opinion is that whenever there is a situation like the one in Cuba, hate and resentment is not going to solve it. I always say that if all the Cubans in Miami will go to Robbie Stadium, the big stadium there, and they do a forgiveness process for Castro, next day he's gonna fall. Because it's hate that support [him]. That's my personal opinion. But most Cubans—after all, nobody in my family got killed in jail. So I don't come from big hurts. So it's perhaps easy for me to say that and to forgive, but for so many people that their family were killed, they die traveling in little boat trying to escape—then I understand that if I speak this, they will get angry with me. They will tell me, "You're not a real Cuban." Because they have a lot of hurt, and they think that they have the right to hate and to resent. In my opinion, since I got involved with many esoteric, metaphysical knowledge, I believe that evil is fed by hate. And evil is disintegrated when you send it off and when you send forgiveness. It doesn't mean that you don't take certain actions, but it's the attitude with what you take that action. Cause if you come from a space of hate, you are equal to the other person. And the other person will be more powerful than you. Because they are masters in evil things; in destruction.

As I say, it's very easy for me, since I left very early. I did not suffer hunger ever, like some of my family did. I did not suffer persecution, except at the beginning. So it's easy for me to say forgive and forget. And on the other hand, I consider myself a citizen from the world. Cuba is my country, and I'm proud of being a Cuban. But I say that I was born in Cuba like if you say I was born in Seattle—any town. The country is the planet earth. If I come here, I feel at home here. Because I'm part of planet earth. I don't see division in that, in being from different nationalities. It's like being from a hometown.

Virginia has been married twice; now she is single. Her five children, all from her first marriage, live in Miami.

I traveled, first to New York, and then moved to the Dominican Republic when I was married with my first husband. He was a manager, so they sent him to different places. I got involved with New Age or metaphysics or New Era, how they call it, and started being a counselor. I began doing seminars, workshops, what you could call self-awareness or transformational seminars. And then did a lot of inner-child counseling. Mostly was trying to help people understand—or support people, I don't like to call it "help"—support people to help themselves. And I'm also a numerologist; I do lots of different consultations.

Numerology is the science of numbers; each number has a meaning that is universal. Like, one is the beginning. That's something that everybody grasps that meaning—although each number has many meanings. And according to the date of your birth, and the name that you were given at birth, which each letter has a sequel to a number—then you can draw a chart, and find deep meaning about your purpose in life, why you're here, your career, your relationships. And that's one of the counsels that I do that I help people with: not only understanding their life, but also can plan ahead according to certain gifts that they have there, that sometimes they're not aware of. But mostly is to recognize who you are, and use better what you got already. And accept some of the things as a blessing, not a curse. My number is 11. And 11 is inspiration, and committed to help humanity. That's what I do, and help my family, too.

As soon as my kids got older I got more involved into [New Age]. And then keep on traveling, till now. I guess I got a taste—I was forced to leave my country when I never thought I would have to leave. So I guess after I was forced to do that, was so traumatic that now I like living in different places and going and doing different things. But also because of my call. I know number 11 is being of service and inspiration to people. I will live different places. I will travel. I will do my mission in many different places.

At the invitation of friends, Virginia moved to Columbia, South America, "and I started doing my own seminars. I was very inspired by nature and the mountains there, so I started seminars called Natural Looks, which means going back to nature, to Mother Nature. And we spend two days in total communication with nature, more or less like the Indians do here; more or less into that kind of approach to life and to nature. And then I did another one, second level, it was on just taking the energy of the sea."

Columbia is beautiful. It's like here—it's exactly like here. Cali, which is the third [largest] city of Columbia, is like Asheville. It's a small town, but it have a college, so it's small but you get a lot of things. And the mountains are like twenty minutes [away]. They're the big mountains there, the Andes. That's where we went to do these seminars. And people are very, very friendly—well, I got a lot of friends there.

I went back to Miami, spent five years there. But it was difficult after leaving such a peaceful little town in the mountains. Miami was too much of a hectic, stressful place for me. So after five years, I decided to come here. And one of my reasons—first, to do some soul-searching. Cause I am at a time in my life that is called the "wise woman" or the "crone"; I'm in my mature years. I need to stay away from everything and just go inside myself and gather a lot of things for myself, so later I can give back again. But I need to first strengthen myself. Of course, I took more time than I thought (Laughs)—most like eight months. Most of that time I was doing that, just gathering my life experiences, and understanding it and getting that power as an elder woman, in order for later be able to give to others. Not that I finish or I learn everything I need to learn. And one of my goals is, yes, to do seminars in the mountains here, too. I have a project to do a seminar in the mountains, probably in September, in a place called The Garden. I already went there: it's a gorgeous place, with a creek, and it's like the stones talk to you. All nature talks to you.

In the meantime of all this, one of my daughters got divorced, got into a crisis, and was declared manic-depressive. And the whole family—it was very difficult times. She came here, stayed with me for a while, but then went back to Miami again. And I got involved with NAMI, National Alliance for the Mentally Ill. I was so grateful for what they did to me that I offered help, and they designated me to be a delegate for Western North Carolina for the Latino convention they're going to have in Miami. Because they haven't been able to reach the Latin people. And can you imagine, just being uprooted from their place—that's a lot of depression, anxiety, many things—and they don't get the benefits of NAMI. So I've been working in that.

That's another project that really touched my heart, because I know what it is to have somebody in the family that's mentally ill, how much stigma is about it. And that's not only support for the family, but also for the people that suffer the illness, they also get support groups there. Like my daughter now went into the program there, and she's recuperating and pretty soon she'll be able to have her own two children with her; they can lead normal lives. But if they don't get that support, the whole family can be absorbed by the problem and affected everybody in the family.

There's so much stigma that people don't even want to recognize when they're depressed, or if somebody in the family depressed—"She's just sad." And nobody really recognize how serious sometimes the situation is. So imagine all that we can prevent—a lot of abuse to children, a lot of suffering for the mothers—by doing these groups and addressing the mental illness as something as normal as being diabetic; there is no difference. But socially and culturally we have made a division that sickness is of the physical.

I'm also got involved with—what's the name—Helpmate, which is domestic violence. Because I'm very interested in working, as translator or coordinator, with women that have been abused. Seeing as I was abused in my first marriage, so I believe that women need a lot of support in their marriage. Some of them get killed—many get killed every year. So I've also been involved with that. And I also make a lot of friends. I'm planning to have—I just moved here, so pretty soon I'll have like a, how do you call, a housewarming party. And they're all waiting for me to cook Cuban food, like black beans and rice, and fried plantains. (Laughs) And all that.

Usually when I go to a new country, I establish myself faster. Here, I decided to take it easy, cause I was in a different stage in my life: I have decided to live different. Because it is what is right for me. So it was not like when I was in my 30s and my 40s, I push and push—no. That's not for me now. I will do the work that I came to do, but in a different way.

When I came here, I got involved back to my original career. My original career was a teacher. So they offered me a job at A-B Tech, and I'm teaching Spanish at A-B Tech, and it has been a beautiful experience. Because these are adults, and I not only share with them just the language, but the culture: I teach them poems. I tell them stories about my life, too. And every time we finish we do have a project that have to do with the community. This group I've got waiting is going to do like a little sketch, with costumes, for the kids at West Asheville Library, and speak—make a little story in Spanish.

Then I got involved with the Literacy Council. I teach ESL at First Baptist Church; I teach there, and there's going to be another class that's going to open at Arden. They provide childcare, they provide transportation. Because, for example, the men go to work. And in their work they are forced to learn the language. But the women stay at home with the kids and no transportation, so years could pass and they are living here and they don't know the language. So the Literacy Council provides that. And it's also a place for women to get together and to know each other, and to connect. Like the story-telling, too: the mothers take their kids there, and for mothers to realize that they are reading to their kids, they're gonna improve. When they go to kindergarten, they're going to be better students; they will learn to read and write faster, earlier. And not only that, cause it's not about just producing smarter kids, it's about the love connection with the mother and children when they read, or father and children; fathers go, too. And it's also a way to connect both communities, because the English-speaking population goes with the Latin-speaking.

I think some people would have the attitude: You're in America, you need to speak English. Definitely, yes. You need that communication skill if you really want to improve here. But [people] also don't see the opportunity they have to be bilingual. Opportunity to learn another language. Instead of just concentrating or having a fear that they're going to lose some identity if they learn a new language. In Europe people speak three languages, and they keep their identity! They don't feel that that's going to mean that they're going to lose their identity or be absorbed by another culture. They're going to enrich themselves.

It's my desire to get more involved with [Latin Americans in Asheville]. That's why I moved to this area of West Asheville, because a lot of them are in this area. I feel that they're so courageous—so courageous, you know, that they come here with nothing, not even communication. They can't speak the language, and they establish themselves here. Because most of them are not migrant: they want to stay and establish themselves here. In fact, right now at A-B Tech, many of my [English-speaking] students are realtors. Because these people start buying homes. And they feel they need to learn the language to sell them a home.

A man told me, "You people have put the rent high, because you're all coming here!" Well, when you grow, that's part of growth. And after all, you know, an egg used to cost five cents, and now it costs more. (Laughs) Things change, you know. And if it change for the better, well, let it change.

At Malaprops I talked to the lady that organize the events there, and we're going to start a poetry night in Spanish. And we're very excited about doing this, cause most of my students are going there. Hopefully, maybe one of them will recite a poem. You can do your own; we invite people to do their own poems. I'm sure—there are 20,000 Spanish-speaking people in Buncombe County—that some of them are secret poets and some of them will read their poems. Or you can read from any author that you like. Like, for example, Neruda: Pablo Neruda, which has been translated and there's movies about it, so it's well-known. So we're hoping by doing this, this night, that it will be a link between the Latin people and the American people, Spanish- and the English-speaking people. And through poetry, through that beauty of poetry, that they connect to each other, and they appreciate each other more, and integrate to the community more, both sides.

I love poetry. And so it's something that I enjoy, for myself. But at the same time I can see the cultural influence—in case, let's say somebody have some discrimination against Latin people. When they can see that, you know, these people have feelings, these people create poetry and the beauty of life, they're going to see them in a different light. And poetry can come, maybe from your mechanic or clean-the-toilet, but they have that inspiration.

Poetry's a part of life. You are all the time doing poetry in your life, whether you realize it or not.

Poetry—poetry's a part of life. You are all the time doing poetry in your life, whether you realize it or not. And to me, life without poetry's so boring. You don't have to be a poet and write; it's just this approach to life as a poet, you know. That you see poetry in common things in life. Maybe sometimes you sit down and write about it; sometimes you just feel it. And enjoy it. And that's real, too. Not everybody wants to write it down, some people have to sink it in and be happy about it, enjoy it, you know. And we—Latin people—are very romantic. It's a romance language. And so, everybody love poetry; everybody's attracted to that. Everybody also sings songs that are poetry, too. It's part of our culture, to believe in love—in all kind of loves.

Virginia is a grandmother, now in her "mature years." "I have no age," she laughs. "I believe that the moment you say an age, you start aging. I am not ashamed of my age: I am in my mature years and I am very proud of it. But I believe that the world have a concept that is not right about age. So I'm not going to align myself with those numbers."

I also belong here to a group called the Crones. "Crones" used to be "old hag" and all that and make fun of it, but for the Indians, when a woman reaches that time, which is menopause, that the child-bearing years are over, she goes away from the tribe—this is the old tradition—and stay for whatever length of time she thinks she needs, to gather herself and her spirits. And then when she's ready, she comes back to the tribe, and she is considered a wise woman. And she helps, she even sits at the counsel and she helps—with everything. Contributes to the younger women, to the kids, to the elderly men. She is the source of wisdom. In this society, it's the other way around: they think that's the end of a woman's contribution. The end of her youth, the end of her sexuality, the end of everything for her. But that is not true; [it's] another station and higher station where she can really be of service. There's no ties anymore with the—I mean, no direct [ties]. As a mother, I believe that I'm always connected with my kids. Spiritually and with my heart. But she is free to do work for the community. And she have all the wisdom of all those years of experience that she can contribute. But in this society they do not recognize that. These women, that's part of what we do: support ourselves, encourage ourselves, to create that in society. That ideally even positions will be open for these women instead of being relegated to retirement—be actively involved in the healing of the planet. I'm talking about the big picture.

So I'm very happy with my age and that I am at this time in my life; I'm very happy with that. And I see that there's no such thing as retirement, that the day I die, I will be involved. Maybe not regular work, what they call quote-unquote work. But it will be a higher ground work. And that is available to every woman. They don't have to have a college degree, they just have to have all those years. (Laughs) Of living. And value it and appreciate it.

Do you think you'll stay in Asheville a while?

Well, I never know when it's my time to go to a new place, you know. But I know it's my destiny to move. But yeah, for a while, yeah; I think I'll stay. Beause I've made beautiful friends, and I see and opportunity here to do good work. And that for me, since that's part of my mission in life, whenever I found that, then I stay until my work is done. ◘

Speak

An Oral History Magazine for Western North Carolina • Issue 1

Earl Roberts • 6

"I reckon old farmers never quit until they have to. They just keep a-going."

Elisha Webber • 12

"Then I joined the Legion—American Legion—and we've been trying to help the veterans, whatever the thing that we see that they need."

Calvin Mullikin • 16

"All your country songs, good songs, are sad. But they're beer songs; they're barroom songs. And usually they make the best songs."

Lucy Taylor • 24

"Growing up, by granny's, I worked like everything. We didn't stop, like childrens do now, and play all the time: we had to work in the cornfield."

Joe King • 28

"I've been over here cutting hair—what, 37 years, 38 years. And I'm about to wear out."

Mary Mims • 32

"I loved teaching, cause I was shaping the minds and molding young people for the future. And I derived a great deal of joy from that."

Virginia Rodriguez • 34

"Cuba is my country, and I'm proud of being a Cuban. But I say that I was born in Cuba like if you say I was born in Seattle—any town. The country is the planet earth."

From the Editors • 2 • Identifications • 39

Bibliography • 40

Speak Magazine • Issue 1, Fall 2001 • $4.25 • STAFF: Burgin Mathews, Editor; Colleen Cook, Photographer; Doug Kelley, Layout Editor. Issue 1 of Speak Magazine was printed in September 2001 by The Printing Connection in Hickory, North Carolina. Body text is set in 11-point Adobe Jenson, title text is set in Delphin, and the masthead is set in Franklin Gothic No. 2 Roman. © 2001 Colleen Cook, Burgin Mathews, and Doug Kelley. Please send all correspondence to speakmagazine@aol.com or 5 5th Avenue NE, Hickory, NC 28601.

MEMORIAL PUBLIC

THE REV. JOHN F. ROUECHE

Jim 1-25-46

JOHN ROUECHE IS NEW PASTOR OF JOAN OF ARC

Native Of Salisburg Succeeds The Rev. John Manley In W. Asheville.

The Rev. John F. Roueche, native of Salisbury and a brother of Sister Xavier, head of the St. Joseph's hospital, is new pastor of St. Joan of Arc Catholic church, effective February 2.

He succeeds the Rev. John P. Manley, who has been assigned special work by the bishop of the Catholic diocese of North Carolina. Father Manley will have headquarters in Pinehurst.

Father Roueche is now on terminal leave after having served as army chaplain for five years in the European and Pacific theaters of operation.

He received his education in Belmont Abby and at St. Mary's seminary in Baltimore. Before entering the service he was pastor of a Catholic church in Burlington.

The Rev. Stephen W. Aylward is assistant pastor at St. Joan of Arc church.

Asheville Times January 25, 1946

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN - TIMES
SPORTS FINANCIAL CLASSIFIED
Sunday, March 26, 1950 SECTION

SPRING SPORTS ARE IN FULL SWING at Lee H. Edwards High School, as shown by the above pictures. Right now it's track and baseball with Coaches Stewart Farmer and Cap Isbill attempting to build winners in both sports. At top left Emmett Dietz prepares to take one of Bill Allen's fast ones, unless Frank Plemmons gets a piece of it. Top center, Fred Ruby demonstrates the proper method of tagging a sliding runner at third. Emmett Dietz is the victim. Top right, Harold Plemmons gets set for a fast throw to first from his shortstop position. In the bottom picture at left Red Suddreth and Don Gassaway demonstrate the start of the 100-yard dash. Backfield men on the gridiron team, they hope to increase their speed in track. In the center pictures, Marvin Folger shows beautiful form clearing the bar in the pole vault, and takes what appears to be an eavesdropper peak down on the group of thinclads being instructed in the art of a proper start by Coach Stewart Farmer. Red Suddreth is doing the demonstrating. At lower right, Assistant Track Coach Walter Shufford instructs Ralph Beaver in throwing the discus while in the background other track hopefuls absorb the lessons. The Maroon trackmen open their schedule on March 31, while the baseball team swings into action on April 4. (Photos by Staff Photographer Bill Warren.)

Maroon Track, Baseball Teams Settle Down To Business

Fred Ruby 184 Beaver St.

10-21-02

All the qualifications for sheriff found in Mike Ruby

Mike Ruby is more than qualified to be the next Sheriff of Buncombe County. Mike has more than 20 years of law enforcement experience.

He was a division commander under three sheriffs. Mike has been to numerous law enforcement schools. He is a graduate of N.C. Justice Academy Executive Development Program.

He received an Advanced Service Award from the N.C. Justice Academy. Mike is a man of good character and is involved in community affairs.

He is very knowledgeable about the affairs of Buncombe County and the sheriff's department.

If elected, Mike wants to have more patrol officers in our neighborhoods, protecting us and being involved with our communities.

He will watch our tax dollars; he promises to let the public be aware of the arrests, etc., that are made in the sheriff's department. People will be employed because they are qualified regardless or race religion, politics or gender.

These are just a few of the reasons why I think that Mike is qualified to be our sheriff.

Mary Ruth Duyck,
Asheville

Asheville Citizen October 21, 2002

THE NEWS PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

* * *

By FRED SEVERANCE

WALTER RUBY

An old time personality in a brand new and up-to-the-minute store is Walter Ruby, manager of the Grocerteria, 607 Haywood road, West Asheville.

Walt is one of those fellows whose grandpa must have run an old fashion general store back early in the century. You older people may remember the typical general store around 1900, before autos and radios had come on the market. On one side of such a store run by Sam Jones, we'll say were bolts of gingham and calico with harness and bridles just beyond. On the other side were family groceries not packaged and canned as they are today. At one end were barrels of sugar and crackers. From one of the barrels you would likely hear a faint mewing and presently a black cat would appear slightly [illegible] where, jump up on the barrel and join her family inside. Of course there were people who frequented the store just to pass the time of day, and discuss the finer points of politics, religion and village affairs, while in a corner the women would gnaw the meat off some spicy rumor. A news reporter could hang around Jones' store and get all the news for his sheet without going to a phone Walt Ruby has all the genial personality of the old-time store owner plus modern business ability

Now to get down to biography. Walt Ruby was born in Nelson County, Kentucky, March 2, 1899, the son of James L. Ruby. Walt reflected "The Average man today is better off on a farm than he is cooped up in some city. He can have plenty of hams, chickens and beef. I sure do wish I was back there now." That was horse sense - which is all too rare in these days of horseless carriages.

(Continued back page)

Walt attended grammar school in Chaplain, Ky., a few miles away from his home. He left the family farm of about 350 acres in 1923, and eventually gravitated to Asheville. A sister of his had lived here, and he was acquainted with Charlie and Courtney Neal. Walt started working in Asheville with the J. B. Ingle Grocery Company and was with them seven and one-half years. Then he went with Jax-Pax for twelve years, spending nine years at No. 9 store and another three years at No. 1 store. He has had 23 years of grocery experience in Asheville. He has the knack of making customers feel at home. "I enjoy waiting on the public," he gave as the secret of his business success. Perhaps the height of Walt's success was his matrimonial plunge. They say that a "satisfied customer is a life-long customer." Well, Myrtle Case was well taken care of at the meat counter. She always was given tender cuts and it was not long before the grocer from Kentucky and the satisfied customer were engaged and a little later Walt found himself in double harness. Mrs. Ruby is the daughter of W. P. Case, who was with the George Vanderbilt estate for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruby have four glittering rubies in their family, three sons and a daughter. The children are Walter, Jr., 19 years; James W., 17 years; Fred B., 15 years; and Mary Ruth Ruby, 12 years. The family reside - or, as Walt would say, "live" - at 184 Deaver St., West Asheville. They are members of Calvary Baptist Church.

At the end of the interview, a woman customer entered the store and saw the luscious ruby colored raspberries in the window. She said, "Is this your store?" The manager made some witty retort and her reaction was "Well, I guess I've got to change my trading place." He got a nice juicy order.

West Asheville News July 11, 1947

N.C. — Vegetable Gardening

Gardening By Moon Signs

A. CITIZEN JUL 10 1974

By JAY HENSLEY
Citizen Staff Writer

If you planted a garden this spring as a hedge against the bite on your pocketbook at the vegetable market, you'll be bushels ahead at harvest time if you kept an eye on the moon signs.

That, at least, is the firm conviction of a man who has coaxed as many as half a dozen gardens in the Asheville area to bountiful productivity every year for about as long as he has lived here.

Walt Ruby Sr. has cut down his far-ranging gardening activities considerably this year.

"Just got that potato patch there, and that little garden by the house. Then the big potato patch out there at Dix Creek. And the corn patch. Got cornfield beans and stuff out there," he said.

But there was a time when Ruby would turn just about any vacant lot within a square mile of his home in West Asheville into a garden, taking his planting cue from the phase of the moon and turning his back on chemical fertilizers.

"Used to have six gardens, all around my house there. I raised all of my neighbors' gardens. Nobody charged me a penny rent," he said.

And by the same token, Ruby said he has never sold a single turnip from his countless gardens over the years.

"If they wanted a mess of something, or to put up something in the freezer, it was there for them. And it still is. There was never a penny of anything sold out of all them gardens," he said.

Ruby's health is failing, following a heart attack, but he is still an enthusiastic gardner. Many of the tools he uses, such as lightweight hand plows, he fashioned himself.

He grew up on a farm, and he just can't shake the urge to dig in the ground and make things grow when the "signs are right" for planting and cultivating.

Ruby has some definite ideas about other aspects of gardening, but the moon's phase is a guide he just won't ignore.

"They's a art to all of it, but you got to go by the moon if you are going to grow anything," he said.

The dark of the moon is the time to plant potatoes, he says, and he isn't suggesting that you go out on a black night and put your tuber sets in the ground by the light of a lantern.

"No sir. That's the moon's phase you're talking about, and if you follow that sign the hills will be so full the ground will crack open from 'em," he said.

"Now you want light moon to plant beans, because they grow up," Ruby said.

He has a bean patch that looks more like a sunflower garden, but the bird feed is there for a more immediate function. The beans are climbing on the tall stalks.

Ruby's beans are also free of bugs and other garden pests.

"First, after the moon sign is right, beans should be planted in rows running north and south — never east and west. This way, the beans get sun only at noon. The shade keeps the bugs off," he claims.

"After the bean plants come up, I transplant the sunflowers three feet apart in the bean rows. Beans and sunflowers grow up together," he said.

Ruby follows the same procedure with his cornfield beans — rows running north and south with the corn shading the beans except from the noonday sun.

He has an acre of corn planted in the garden at the home of one of his many nieces, and along with the corn he's raising beans.

"Old timey cornfield beans. That corn," he said, raising a hand above his head, "is this high already."

Ruby makes no claims for a reputation as an organic gardner, but his practices parallel that philosophy to an amazing degree.

The way he tells it, you'd think he invented the "soilless" method of growing some root crops. For Irish potatoes, he uses straw, and holds it in place against the wind with brush and about an inch of dirt.

"When you take that straw off, you got Irish potatoes that look like they been washed. An' you don't have to do any cultivatin'," he said.

If vegetables are planted late, they should be covered lightly, Ruby said. He said he gets lettuce "up" in three days.

The ground should be worked thoroughly for onions, then covered with peat moss, he said. Stick the onion sets into the prepared ground and cover them six inches with straw, he advises.

"The only thing you have to do is pull the weeds — and you can watch the onions grow," he said.

Ruby also had some advice about irrigation, but on that score he takes no advice from the moon watchers, who recommend watering only in certain phases of the moon.

"Don't ever water anything in the morning or when the sun is out. Wait until sundown, or half your water will be lost to the plants," he said.

"You often see fog in the early mornings. As soon as the sun comes up, the fog evaporates — fast. The same thing happens to the water you put on your plants," he said.

Walt Ruby Sr. . . . inspects a row of beets

Asheville Citizen-Times, July 10, 1974

WALTER 'WALT' RUBY JR.

Walter "Walt" Ruby Jr., 69, of 28 Rex Drive, died Wednesday, Dec. 25, 1996, at his residence.

A lifelong resident of Buncombe County, he was a son of the late Myrtle Case Ruby and Walt Ruby Sr. He was also preceded in death by his wife, Marion Johnson Ruby who died in 1993 and a brother, James W. "Bill" Ruby from Wilson. He retired in 1983 from the Asheville Fire Department with 29 years service. He was a Navy veteran of World War II, a member of VFW Post #891 and had served two terms on the Asheville Civil Service Board. He was a member of Calvary Baptist Church.

Survivors include four daughters, Linda Edwards of Swannanoa, Colleen Greene and Cherie Martin of Gastonia, Susan Sexton of Asheville; three sons, Michael Ruby of Black Mountain, Dan Ruby of Knoxville, Tenn., Charles Blankenship of Greenville, S.C.; sister, Mary Ruth Duyck of Asheville; brother, Fred B. Ruby of Ormond Beach, Fla.; 12 grandchildren; four great-grandchildren.

Services will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in the chapel of Groce Funeral Home with the Rev. Buddy Corbin officiating. Burial will be in Ashelawn Gardens of Memory. Pallbearers will be Lloyd Burnette, Eddie Case, Bobby Case, Fred Duyck, Alan Ruby and Clark Ruby. Honorary pallbearers will be members of the Asheville Fire Department.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Friday at the funeral home.

Memorials may be made to Mountain Area Hospice, P.O. Box 16, Asheville, N.C., 28802.

TIMES, ASHEVILLE N. C. SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 8, 1936

Guild Officials Inspect Garments For Needy

Viewing some of hte garments collected by the West Asheville section for the annual ingathering of the Biltmore-Asheville branch of the Needlework Guild of America Thursday are Mrs. Robert Russell, president of the West Asheville section; Mrs. Charles S. Bryant, vice-president of the Biltmore-Asheville branch, who is general chairman for the ingathering, and Mrs Burnham S. Colburn, president of the branch. The garments collected by the West Asheville section were on display at the home of Mrs. Russell, 30 Majestic avenue, yesterday. These, together with garments collected by other section presidents, will be brought to the George Vanderbilt hotel for the branch ingathering Thursday. The general display for the Biltmore-Asheville branch will be held Friday at the Vanderbilt.

THE NEWS PERSONALITY OF THE WEEK

MRS. ROBERT RUSSELL

About 29 years ago a young "school marm" took charge of a "little red school house" over in Haywood county and during her two years there started one of the first if not the first Parent-Teacher organizations in North Carolina. The teacher was Mrs. Robert Phillips Russell of 30 Majestic avenue, West Asheville.

That was, of course, before the North Carolina P.T.A. as an organization came into official being, but Mrs. Russell had heard about the good works of the movement else where and immediately began trying out the plan in her school. But the effort rapidly passed out of the experimental stage and was soon rewarded with concrete results. The parents quickly developed a greater school conscientiousness, and as result money was raised to do several needed things, including painting the building, covering the roof and acquiring additional desks. Moreover, the school became more than a place for instruction in the three R's; it expanded into a popular community center.

The "little red school house", as it was in reality called, was situated near Turnpike, and some years ago was torn down. Would that it had been preserved, for it is entirely possible that it was there that the P.T.A. in North Carolina actually if not officially had its birth.

Mrs. Russell was born in Canton, the daughter of the late Benson P. and Julia Reno Phillips. After receiving here elementary schooling at Canton, Mrs. Russell pursued her high school studies at Brevard Institute, following which she entered Weaver college. Then she did special work at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and at the Greensboro College for Women before returning to her native county to become a pedagogue. In taking up teaching she followed in the footsteps of her mother.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell moved from Canton to Asheville eighteen year ago. On December 19, 1940, they celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. Mr. Russell has been in the life insurance business for the past 31 years.

Mrs. Russell's interest in school and education increased with the years. She has held numerous offices in the Vance P.T.A., including the presidency; and was president of the Hall Fletcher P.T.A. for three years, longer than anyone else has held the office. She jokingly says that "they revised the By-Laws to get her out." One cannot hold the office now more than two years.

(Continued on back page)

She also held offices in the Lee Edwards P.T.A.

Mrs. Russell, who is one of the most school-minded women in Western North Carolina, was organizer and first president of the Buncombe P. T. A. council, and at one time was a member of the state board of the organizations, being chairman of the State Founder's day committee.

From 1936 to '39 she was a member and vice-chairman of the Asheville city school board.

More than once Mrs. Russell has gone to Raleigh in behalf of school legislation, especially in interest of the kindergartens being permitted to become a part of the public school system. She is now the North Carolina secretary of the National Kindergarten association and has been for the past six years, during which time she traveled all over the state, from Murphy to Manteo.

In 1930-40 Mrs. Russell was director for the real property survey here which led to the creation of the local housing authority. The city already would have had slum-clearance projects had it not been for the war.

Mrs. Russell is also a member of the U. D. C. and the Eastern Star, being especially active in the latter organization until she had to give up part of her outside activities when family duties began to increase.

Incidentally, Mrs. Russell was invited to enter her collection of hammered copper at the New York World's Fair, but her being out of the city so much and pressing duties prevented her complying.

Her hammered copper work, of course, is over for the duration.

Mrs. Russell has done a lot of hand painting, and a number of her portraits hang on the walls of her home.

Flowers, too, have been a hobby with Mrs. Russell, who was one of the originators of the West Asheville annual flower show which was inaugurated eleven years ago.

But a day-by-day hobby with Mrs. Russell is the keeping of a diary, which she has kept current for at least the past ten years. It is sort of a family memoranda which the children delight in reading when they return home and by which they can tell what has been going on while they have been away. Mr. Russell, too, finds the diary of value.

Mrs. Russell takes much interest in the family farm where the summer home is made. The children recalled that last summer the mother got as much pleasure in fixing up the place as would a bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell frequently go galloping off on horseback. He vows she is as good a horseman as he ever was. There is little wonder, for she was raised in a saddle, so to speak. She started riding when she had to be lifted into the leather-covered seat, and in later years when teaching school, she rode a fine saddle horse or in a buggy in going to and from home.

Mrs. Russell once taught Sunday school at the West Asheville Methodist church, instructing a class of 'teen-age girls at the same time Phil had charge of a group of 'teen-age boys. About six years ago her class sponsored a hobby show in West Asheville which proved quite a success.

The family is now affiliated with the Central Methodist church.

A versatile woman, Mrs. Russell is, indeed, a busy and interesting personality.

When asked how she managed to do so much, she wouldn't agree that she accomplishes a great deal, but did admit that she budgeted her time—every minute.

As a means of chasing the blues away, her advice to war mothers is to keep chin up and stay busy. She does.

West Asheville News
February 5, 1943

9-30-76

And 85 Different Sandwiches, Too

Don Russell, owner and operator of the Friendly Grocery on Haywood Road, proudly displays a "custom built" sandwich. Assistant sandwich-builder Pam Holcombe looks on. (Staff Photo by Bill Sanders)

Everything From Eggs To Watches

Here and there throughout the city, sometimes hard to find, are little businesses still thriving in the tradition of country pleasures.

Many of those pleasures are to be found at the Friendly Grocery, 503 Haywood Road in West Asheville.

A quiet little store offering everything from watches to diapers to fresh country eggs sold in paper bags, the Friendly Grocery now boasts a relatively new business in "custom-built" sandwiches.

Don Russell, who bought the grocery in 1949 and has bustled up and down its aisles six days a week for the past 27 years, says the sandwich business was "something of an accident."

"When they started tearing down the block of buildings next door to build the Shell station about six years ago, the workers would come in looking for something to eat at lunchtime," Russell says.

"One day, one of them looked at the sandwich I was eating, which I had brought from home, and said, 'how much is that?' So, I sold him mine, made another for myself and that's how all this began."

"All this" includes a bill of fare with 85 different varieties of sandwiches, most of which are big enough for two hungry people.

"These aren't ordinary sandwiches," Russell points out.

The assortment of possible ingredients is amazing — ranging from the well-known reuben to double-deck banana, pineapple and cheese sandwiches laced with lettuce.

Other choices, which are advertised on cardboard signs behind the sandwich counter, include eight varieties of "king of the roads," which appear to be half a foot thick, and a two-foot-long "family submarine," which allegedly feeds five but would probably do for 10.

Russell attributes part of the success of his small business to "that touch of friendliness missing in the big supermarkets of the day."

"We like to do a little bit extra for our customers," he says. "There's just not enough of that human element left in business anymore."

Russell says he has customers who call in orders from Mars Hill, Hendersonville, Black Mountain, "and, of course, all through the city — bankers, construction workers, neighbors, all kinds of people."

The small business, run by Russell, his wife, Marian and his mother, Mrs. Annie Green, who contributes her homemade kosher pickles and pickled beans, provides "at least one meal a day" for Russell.

"I like people," he says. "And people like my sandwiches. We'll probably be here for awhile."

He's Sandwich Engineer

When customers make their way to the back of the Friendly Grocery to order a sandwich, Don Russell overwhelms them with 150 possibilities. The array of sandwiches offered by the neighborhood grocery at the corner of Haywood Road and Burton Street in West Asheville is so unexpected, customers usually stammer out some uninspired combination like ham and cheese on rye.

Russell stands ready to make German specialties like knockwurst and winekraut with melted cheese on a roll, pineapple, banana and cheese on bran 'n honey bread, every imaginable variation of the submarine sandwich and his own specialty, the King of the Road sandwich, a towering "Dagwood" which weighs in at a pound and a half.

On the wall behind the deli case are big color portraits of sandwiches. They were made by Russell, artfully arranged on blue velvet draperies like the crown jewels, accessorized with pickles and potato chips and professionally photographed. Cheryl Tiegs has not had more glamorous treatment than Russell's subs and sandwiches.

After some years with A & P stores, Russell bought the corner grocery in 1949. He has operated it 33 years, doing a big business in cigarettes and sandwiches, selling a full line of groceries and even some sundries.

Highland Happenings By Nancy Brower

"The grocery business is getting difficult for the small businessman," Russell said. "He is having to come up with something else to help him stay in business."

For Russell, that "something else" was sandwiches. He was in the habit of making himself a deluxe sandwich of cold cuts for lunch each day. When the block of businesses across Burton Street from the store was being torn down some years ago, men from the demolition crew wandered into the grocery in search of something to eat.

"I had made myself a sandwich for lunch," Russell recalled, "and it was there on the counter. One of the workers asked, 'Where can I get a sandwich like that?' I sold him mine and, of course, it grew from there. The sandwich business has helped me stay here. The neighborhood grocery has been pretty hard hit."

The sandwich Russell had concocted for himself was a little bit of

—Turn To Page Five

Staff Photo By June Glenn Jr.

DON RUSSELL holds King of the Road

He's Sandwich Engineer

From Page One

everything in the meat case that day, laced with fresh onion rings, lettuce and tomato. It became his King of the Road, now standardized as ham, cheese, corned beef, lettuce, tomato, onion and mayonnaise on a five-inch bun, topped with a wedge of Kosher dill pickle.

Equally popular are his submarine sandwiches, including a family-sized deluxe sub that weighs five pounds, sells for $12.99 and serves five or six persons. When Russell makes a BLT (bacon, lettuce and tomato) sandwich, his version of this longtime favorite is "the largest one you ever saw."

Subs and Such

"Subs, heroes, hoagies, po boys, they are all basically the same sandwich," Russell said. He prefers to call his subs. He has concocted his own oil and vinegar sauce to sprinkle them with, which, he said, includes 15 ingredients.

Russell, assisted by his niece, Cindy Russell, assembles the 150 sandwiches from a deli case filled with great loaves of cheese, yards of sausages and wursts, cold cuts of every persuasion and tubs of giant pickles. He can, from this palette, make anything but a meatball sandwich, an item he refuses to add to his menu. "I never saw a meatball sandwich," he maintains, "and I've never tried to make one.".

Otherwise, he aims to please. He will make a small sandwich for a kid, lavishing on the peanut butter and jelly. He once carefully followed an order for a ham and cheese that called for leaving off the ham.

He figures he sells about 100 sandwiches a day on a busy day. The busiest days are just ahead, he said. "Spring is good eating weather. It's not too hot and it's not too cold. You can get out and get the exercise that makes you hungry. It's just an appetizing time of year."

Wife Helps, Too

With wife Marian to mind the cash register at the front of the store, Don Russell can concentrate on sandwiches. He's outgoing, wears a butcher's apron and looks the part of the proprietor of the Friendly Grocery. He has even rigged up a place for people to lean as they munch away on the man-sized sandwiches. It is only a fancied-up plank of wood, but supplements the only other eating place in the grocery, the top of a chest-type freezer.

Most sandwiches are made "to go" and Russell provides a cone-shaped paper envelope to catch the overflow from his piled-high creations.

"Many of our sandwiches were designed here and all of them are custom-built here," Russell boasts, adding with a wink, "You need a degree in engineering to make some of these sandwiches."

Russell said a grocery store and a sandwich business go together like ham and cheese. "If somebody orders a sandwich with something I don't have, I just go to the grocery shelves and get it."

Instead of letting winter shut them in, they hiked

Nancy Marlowe
Times Horizon Editor

Don Russell and his Ormond Avenue neighbor and friend, John Wilson, decided that "instead of wearing out the rocking chair and the TV set" this winter, they'd get out and get some exercise.

The retirees hiked the 16.3-mile Shut-In Trail to Mount Pisgah, logging 36 miles over eight days in the dead of January. They had a wonderful time.

The men divided the trail into eight sections and walked one each day, sometimes in snow, sometimes in freezing rain, but mostly on those bright, sunny days that have been abundant this winter.

The trail was so well-maintained, the walk so pleasant, the views so spectacular, the men were suprised that on most days they had it all to themselves.

Russell and Wilson decided more people should know about this trail, how accessible it is and how well it suits those who don't want to hike too far.

Russell, who owned and operated the Friendly Grocery on Haywood Road for years until he retired at the end of '84, describes the trail:

"The Shut-In Trail begins near the French Broad River at the entrance of the Blue Ridge Parkway, off Highway 191, just across Bent Creek.

"It winds up through the Pisgah National Forest, weaving back and forth across the parkway. It ends at the parking lot just short of the Mount Pisgah tower. You can stand in the parking lot and see the pinnacle and tower a mile and a half away."

The neighbors parked their cars at overlooks along the parkway, hiked the four miles designated for the day and then doubled back to the car. Thus they walked eight to nine miles each day, an exercise that took inches off both their waistlines.

They took along snacks (but none of those big sandwiches for which Russell was famous in his grocer days), binoculars and cameras.

In winter when the leaves are down the Shut-in Trail, so named because it is arched by trees and shrubs, affords spectacular views.

"The trail varies in width from two feet to six feet," Russell said. "Some of it must be the old original Vanderbilt wagon road, because it was constructed by George W. Vanderbilt in the 1890s to travel from Biltmore House to his Buck Springs hunting lodge at the summit of Mount Pisgah.

"Most of the trail is easily accessible and the incline is gradual; however, there are some difficult places, especially the last three miles to the Mount Pisgah parking lot. That's a toughie."

The hikers found the four original foundation blocks for a watch tower. The date 1933 was etched in some of the squares. "This is a good place to stop," Russell said. "The concrete pillars make good substitutes for tables and chairs where one can have lunch and rest for a spell."

Only disappointment for the men was the lack of animals. They startled three pheasants at close range. "It s a beautiful bird," they said.

Russell and Wilson say they want to hike the trail in September because they found "two old-timey chestnut trees" and "the trail is nearly covered in spots with blueberry bushes."

Rusell summed up the adventure with, "Instead of letting winter shut us in, we decided to experiment with the Shut-In Trail."

Don Russell, left, and John Wilson

Russell Is Promoted To Sergeant Rank

Everett R. Russell, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Russell of 15 Longview road, West Asheville, has been promoted to the rank of sergeant in the army air corps.

RUSSELL

Now stationed at the basic flying school in Greenwood, Miss., Sgt. Russell enlisted in the air corps in October, 1942. He is a graduate of Lee Edwards high school and before entering the service was employed as a flagman with the Southern Railway company.

His wife, the former Miss Dorothy Cole, is living near the base where Sgt. Russell is stationed. Mrs. Russell is also a graduate of Lee Edwards high school and was employed at Moore General hospital prior to moving to Mississippi to join her husband.

Asheville Times July 9, 1943

West Asheville People

S

Captain Edmund Sams, Part 1

August 31, 2011 By Bruce Whitaker

The 1903 court house replaced the 1876 court house but it was moved. The new building faced College Street, near the present court house, and was on four acres donated by G.W. Pack. The 1903 court house remained until 1928 when the present County Court House was constructed and the 1903 Court House was torn down. Just above and to the left of the pediment on the building front, the top of the new City Building designed by Douglas Ellington may be seen.

Captain Edmund William Sams was born in 1750 in what was then Lundenberg County, VA. The section his parents lived in became Halifax County in 1752, Pittsylvania County in 1767 and Henry County in 1777. Sams' parent's home remained at the same site but changed counties four times in 27 years. Edmund Sams was the son of William Sams Sr. (1717–1779) and his wife Mary. Edmund Sams was believed to be the grandson of James Sams Sr. (c.1689 –1726) and Kathryn Allyn. Edmund Sams' father's farm was located on Saville Creek, a tributary of the Smith River. William Sams' farm was located approximately ten miles northwest of Martinsville, VA.

Edmund Sams married Anne "Nancy" Young in the early 1770s. Anne "Nancy" Young was born November 13, 1752 in Maryland. She was the daughter of John Young and Martha Stuart. The descendants of William Gudger (1752–1833) who married Martha "Patsy" Young (1750–1837), a sister to Sams' wife Anne "Nancy" Young, have greatly embellished the story of the Youngs and William Gudger himself. They claimed John Young was so rich that he considered George Washington just a poor low-class neighbor. John Young may have lived in the Georgetown section of what is now Washington, D.C. but there is no evidence of any great wealth. None of the Young children give any indication of having or inheriting any great wealth. They may have been modestly better off than most of their neighbors in Buncombe County. This appears to have been acquired after moving to Buncombe County and most of it appears to have come through the hard work of the people they married.

Edmund and Nancy Sams moved to Wythe County, VA in the mid 1770s. They moved to the Watauga settlements in what is now Washington County, TN by late 1778. This area was part of the state of North Carolina until 1796. Edmund Sams joined the North Carolina state militia soon after moving to the Watauga settlements and fought against the Cherokee who were allies of the British. Sams rose to the rank of captain while engaged in war against the Cherokee. The Cherokee had waged a very bloody and effective war against the American frontier settlers. This caused the Americans to devote a large force of militia against the Cherokee instead of using them against the British.

William Gudger applied for a Revolutionary War Pension in October of 1832. Gudger said he belonged to the Surry County, NC Militia under Colonel Robert Love during the Revolution. After Gudger's term of service expired under Colonel Love, he returned home. He later reenlisted and served under Captain Edmund Sams for two years in the war against the Cherokee. He stated that he had a certificate signed by Captain Edmund Sams in regard to his discharge from his two year tour under Sams. Captain Edmund Sams and Col. Robert Love both appeared on behalf of William Gudger and signed statements that Gudger had served under them in the Revolutionary War.

Foster Alexander Sondley (1857-1931) son of Harriet Alexander Ray Sondley and grandson of uncle James Mitchell Alexander and Aunt Nancy Foster.

Captain Edmund Sams moved his family to what is now Buncombe County in the late 1780s. Foster Alexander Sondley (1857–1931), the great great-grandson of Sams, wrote that Edmund Sams was one of the first persons to move from the Watauga settlement in what is now Tennessee to what is now Buncombe County. When Buncombe County was formed from Burke and Rutherford Counties in 1792, Captain Edmund Sams was chosen as the first Coroner of Buncombe County. Sams also serviced as a Justice of the Peace and Constable in Buncombe County during the 1790s.

Buncombe County was subject to occasional raids from the Cherokee for a number of years after it was settled. The Cherokee would raid the area fairly often to test Buncombe County's will to respond. If the county did not send out a party to seek revenge for their raids, the Cherokee would consider this a sign of weakness and increase the number of raids on the area. Captain Edmund Sams was usually the man placed in charge of hunting down and punishing the raiders. Once Captain Sams and a friend of his were searching through the forest for some Cherokee raiders. Sams and his friend were going up a hill when Sams heard a gun go off. He turned around to see his friend had been shot and was dying. Captain Sams asked the man, "Where is he? Did you see him?" The man said, "Why Edmund, it was your gun." Sams own gun had accidently fired as they were climbing the hill and it killed his best friend. Captain Edmund Sams grieved over the accident the rest of his life.

Foster Alexander Sondley later in life.

Captain Edmund Sams, Part 2

September 29, 2011 By Bruce Whitaker

Captain Edmund Sams settled on North Hominy Creek when he first moved to what is now Buncombe County. He lived near his brother-in-law John Webb (1765–1825). John Webb had married Stacy Young (1748–1844) a sister to Sams wife, Ann "Nancy" Young. Sams only lived on North Hominy Creek a short time. Foster A. Sondley stated that Edmund Sams supervised the construction of North Hominy Baptist Church while living in the area now called Candler. Edmund and Nancy Sams then moved on the west side of the French Broad River across from Asheville. Their house was just south of the Smokey Park Bridge. Sams operated a ferry across the French Broad River where the current Smith Bridge is located. Later, Edmund Sams sold the ferry to John Jarrett and moved several miles up the French Broad River to a farm that later became known as the Gaston Place.

James Mitchell Alexander (1793–1858)

Captain Sams was leading a group of men that were pursuing a Cherokee raiding party west from Asheville. He caught up with them in what is now north Haywood County. A short battle took place that resulted in the death of one of Sams' men named Vincent Fine. It was winter and cold. Crystal Creek was frozen over. Sams broke the ice and placed Fines body under the ice to preserve it until he returned. Captain Sams and his men then trailed the Indians to what is now Jackson County; where they were able to kill several of the Cherokee. On their way back Sams recovered Fine's body from under the ice and brought it back home. This caused Crystal Creeks name to be changed to Fines Creek. A group of Cherokee, led by a renegade white man named Bates, were raiding area farms of cattle and other goods. Some say this took place during the Revolutionary War, others say it was after Sams moved to Buncombe County — I don't know which was true. Captain Edmund Sams led a party that consisted of himself and eight men in pursuit of Bates and his Indian bandits. They traced the raiders to Indian Creek by late afternoon. Sams and his men went four miles up Indian Creek. It was night by then and they spotted the Indians' camp fire. The men crept up on their camp which consisted of Bates and eight Cherokee. Sams pointed out a specific Indian for each of his men to shoot at and saved Bates for himself. When Sams gave the signal everyone fired their gun. All eight Indians fell over dead. Sams told his brother-in-law, William Young, "And my little son, my bullet pierced old Bates jacket." My little son was a favorite expression of Sams that he used to address both the old and the young.

Edmund Sams was brought up on charges by the church for patting for some young boys to dance. Sams said "Yes I did. I will show you how I did it." He then began to pat his knee for the jury of the church. The jury dismissed the charges against the old man.

Sams had a great-granddaughter that was a particular favorite of his. She spent a great deal of time with him. Edmund Sams was very fond of music, especially military music. When listening to a specially inspired tune he would tell his little great-granddaughter: "I tell you, my little daughter, it just puts me on top of Buncombe !" Church music was seldom very good in the early days. There were no choir directors and everyone sang on their own — which was usually not very good. Once a singing teacher came through the area and organized a church choir. Sams and his great-granddaughter attended church the first Sunday the singing teacher led the choir. The old man was astonished. He said to his little great-granddaughter in a loud voice: "Well upon my soul, my little daughter, that was a merry little jig!"

Nancy Foster Alexander (1797–1862), grand daughter of Captain Edmund Sams.

When Edmund Sams and his wife Anne "Nancy" Young Sams got too old to live by themselves, they moved to live on the farm of their daughter, Ora Sams Foster (1778–1857). Ora's husband Captain Thomas Foster was a well to do man for that period of time. He owned almost all of what is now Biltmore, as well as other lands all over the area. Capt.Thomas "Tommy" Foster had built a small house on his farm for his wife's parents to live. Edmund Sams was in his nineties and his mind had gotten a little bad. He became fond of petting the animals on Thomas Foster's farm. He came to feed and water them so much that it was dangerous to the animals' health.

Capt. Foster told the old man that he was going to kill the farm animals if he did not stop feeding them so much; especially the cow that was Sams' favorite. Edmund Sams started going out to the barn very early in the morning to feed the animals before his son-in-law had gotten out of bed. One morning Thomas Foster got up earlier than usual and went to the barn. He found Sams giving the cow an especially large breakfast. Foster heard the old man tell the cow: "Hurry up, old lady. Tommy is coming."

Captain Edmund Sams died at the Foster farm in July 1845. His wife Anne "Nancy" Young Sams died in November 1845. Both were buried in Newton Academy Cemetery.

On Spending Spare Time

There's Fun in Working, Playing About Your Home

Article No. 2

Asheville Times June 3, 1942

S. E. Sanders of 168 Brucemont circle, West Asheville, shown making some adjustments to his gas-powered model plane, is typical of many persons who during these gas-less and tire-less days are intelligently applying themselves during spare time, utilizing hours formerly spent for the most part burning up gasoline and wearing out tires on Sunday afternoons, and at other times. Mr. Sanders, recognized by the government as an expert airplane model maker, is shown at his workbench. This illustrates one of the many suggestions on how to spend the week-end without a car

By BRIGHT W. PADGITT

OUT on thousands of "home fronts" this and many more week-ends to come, the gas and tire saving programs may be turned into real fun and gain by prospecting along a number of lines of "How to Spend Week-ends Without A Car."

Your gardens, lawns and other beautification plans, as well as mendings about the home, were touched on in the first of this series of stories about simple things that take up time and return pleasure and profit. Carrying a point further than this, the "handy man about the house" can accomplish a lot while the family car sits quietly in the garage.

Games And Arts

Other members of the family, too, are considered here. This time, it is suggested that a systematic inspection of household equipment be supplemented by games, manual arts in the basement, garage or attic, model building, rifle and pistol shooting under expert guidance, collecting things, amateur competition in athletics and better cooperation with and patronage of professional sports.

This same garage in which reposes the beloved family car—now on vacation—might make an excellent workshop. The lure of the workbench is almost universal along the entire road of life. Young and old spend many a profitable and pleasant hour in manual arts, and all you need is a work bench, a wood vise, a hammer, a hand saw, a plane, a screw driver, a few punches, and other odds and-ends of tools, most of which can be obtained at the stores for from 10 to 50 cents each.

Now that civilian defense is a paramount issue in every community, the work bench and shop at home an easily form an important figure in your contributions to the cause. A portion of your time might be spent to good advantage by building facilities which would contribute to the comfort and safety of your family in time of peril. For example, you could build an air raid protection table of stout timbers under which they would be protected from flying bomb splinters, or emergency bunks for long vigils, or a set of wooden toys to amuse the children until the danger is past. This thought, however disturbing, is in line with nation-wide preparedness.

Also, with all the emphasis on conservation, you can help yourself and your country by inspecting your household appliances—the vacuum sweeper, the electric iron, the toaster, all electric outlets, cords and lighting equipment to see they do not represent fire hazards, your lawnmower, wheelbarrow and garden tools. These will have to last you for the duration.

If you are not so mechanically minded, maybe you'd like to resume or take up an absorbing hobby. The old standbys like stamps, coins and autographs of prominent persons are amusing and instructive, and they can also be made profitable. Newer fads, such as collecting match covers and bottle tops, can be less expensive.

In the finer and more delicate arts, crafts and use of hands comes model building and magic. The latter has gained great headway in some quarters. You can get pamphlets and books on amateur magic (sleight-of-hand) and soon, if you have much aptness, you will be able to stage a show of your own. There are several good amateur magicians in Asheville and vicinity and in years past they have held special meetings in magic and staged a number of shows. All children and most all grownups are entertained by magic. Most folks know a trick or two, but it is surprising how many you can learn just by clipping out the occasional ones that appear in a number of current picture magazines on the newsstands.

Course In Shooting

Rifle and pistol shooting is very much in line with world thought and action today and in Asheville a new course of instruction is beginning. The Asheville Rifle and Pistol club is sponsoring courses for

—Citizen Photo

STEPHEN SAPP, 11-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Sapp of 86 Blue Ridge Avenue, Thursday won the Asheville Optimist Club's annual oratorical contest. He received a plaque from Harold W. Haden, chairman of the contest committee, and an opportunity to participate in the state finals to be held in connection with the May 23-24 Optimist State Convention in Durham. The state winner will compete in the national finals to be held in Dallas during the June convention of Optimist International. Local runners-up were Gilbert Elliott, 11, of Vance School and Tom Stevens, 16, student at Lee H. Edwards High School. They received trophies. Judges were Mrs. Lucia Ward, S. Barry Morris and Harold Brownlee. The oratorical contest was held during the club's regular weekly meeting in George Vanderbilt Hotel. Violin selections were presented by Bobby Matthews, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert S. Matthews of 85 Belmont Ave. The Optimist Club will sponsor "Bike Safety Week" April 21 through 26.

Stephen Sapp Wins Oratorical Contest

Stephen Sapp, 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Sapp of 86 Blue Ridge Ave., won an opportunity yesterday to compete in the annual oratorical contest at the Optimist Club's State Convention in Durham.

As winner of the Asheville Optimist Club's annual contest, he may participate in the state finals to be held May 23 and 24. The state winner will compete in the national finals to be held in Dallas, Tex., during the June convention of Optimist International. Stephen received a plaque from the Asheville club yesterday which designates him as the local winner.

Cpl. William Sawyer To End Furlough

Cpl. William L. Sawyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Sawyer of 181 Logan avenue, will leave tomorrow for the Greenville, S. C., municipal airport where he is stationed with the army air forces.

SAWYER

Sawyer has been in the service since August, 1942 and has attended airplane and engine mechanic's schools at Gulfport, Miss., and Detroit, Mich.

His wife, the former Miss Pansy Freeman of Asheville, will return to Greenville with him.

Asheville Times July 10, 1943

SCHOENFELD LOST TO FRANK GOTCH

Gotch Threw the New Orleans Wrestler Three Times in Less Than Thirty-Five Minutes.

GOTCH WILL ARRIVE HERE TONIGHT FOR OLSEN MATCH

Olsen Refereed the Bout Saturday Night and Says Schoenfeld Went on the Mat in a Tremble.

Charles Olsen, who wrestles Frank Gotch at the Auditorium Wednesday night, returned from New Orleans this morning where he refereed a match between Gotch and Otto Schoenfeld Saturday night. The contest between Schoenfeld and Gotch was a complete victory for Gotch. The Buffalo lad threw Schoenfeld three straight falls in less than 35 minutes and didn't use the toe-lock. Olsen said that while Gotch was a superior wrestler to Schoenfeld that the latter was by no means at his best and that Schoenfeld actually went on the mat in a tremble. Olsen said this morning that he was in the pink of condition and never felt better in his life. Gotch, said Olsen, intended leaving New Orleans a few hours [illegible] did and he will probably arrive in Asheville this afternoon or tomorrow morning. He is coming via Chattanooga and Knoxville. In a two-column write-up of the Gotch-Schoenfeld match the New Orleans Times-Democrat says:

Frank Gotch, champion catch-as-catch-can wrestler of America, not only made good his promise to throw Otto P. Schoenfeld of New Orleans three times within an hour of actual wrestling last night at the Greenwall Theater, but also gave one of the cleverest exhibitions of this sport which has ever been seen in this city. It took him exactly thirty-four minutes and fifty-eight seconds to secure the three falls.

Prof. Schoenfeld in no way disappointed his friends, however, for he did some clever work defending himself against a man who outclassed him physically, and who combined with this superiority of brute strength scientific wrestling of the highest order. The consensus of opinion among those who know wrestling and who saw the match, was that "Schoeny" was up against it, although the local man declared after the bout that he would like to get at Gotch three months from now in a straight match. Gotch is undoubtedly the premier in America's wrestling world, and those who saw both the Jenkins-Schoenfeld match several years ago and the match last night, declared that America's present champion is undoubtedly worthy in every respect of the title which he now holds.

Everybody expected to see Gotch use almost exclusively his celebrated toe-hold, for it was by means of this hold that he secured the championship in his last match with Tom Jenkins. In this expectation, however, they were disappointed, for it was only occasionally that the big man would lean over and secure a vice-like grip around the ball of one of Schoenfeld's feet, and even then he never worked it to an advantage.

In all probability this was largely due to the fact that the toe-hold is even more cruel in its nature than the hammer-lock, and Gotch, no doubt, did not care to employ it unless forced to do so in order to secure the requisite three falls within an hour. There was never any doubt, however, after the men got together that Gotch would make good.

Instead of the toe-hold, the champion combined the half-Nelson with a crotch hold, and used these with wonderful effect, his big, ponderous body being brought into great advantage in turning his opponent.

Gotch said he would leave [illegible] night for Asheville, where he goes to wrestle with Olsen Wednesday night. Later he will go to Birmingham to wrestle, and from there will jump to Salt Lake City, later returning on his way to the Pacific coast.

Gotch was asked about the proposed match between him and George Hackenschmidt, better known as the "Lion of Russia," who is now wrestling in England. Gotch said he would probably go abroad, but that he would not cross the water until arrangements had been made for a match. "I would like," he said, "to wrestle Hackenschmidt in this country. America would be a better place than England for a match, I think, and I hope he will come to this country."

Asheville Gazette-News July 9, 1906

SULPHUR SPRINGS PROPERTY IS SOLD

Asheville Electric Company Agrees to Dispose of Property to O. B. Schoenfeld.

386 ACRES IN THE TRACT AND PRICE FIXEE $30,500.

Purchase by New Orleans Athlete May Mean Establishment of a Training School Here.

A handsome realty deal was concluded here today when local representatives of the Asheville Electric company agreed to sell to Prof. Otto B. Schoenfeld of New Orleans, 388 acres of land in the Sulphur Springs section of Buncombe county, five miles from this city, for a consideration of 30,500. The deal has been in process of consummation for the past several days and was handled through the real estate agency of J. M. Campbell. Prof. Schoenfeld this morning made a flat offer of $30,500 and the local representatives agreed to accept this and recommend to other officials of the Asheville Electric company that the Sulphur Springs holdings of the company be transferred to the New Orleans gentleman. It is understood that the recommendation of the local representatives will be adopted and the papers transferring the property signed and recorded within a few days.

The sale of the Sulphur Springs property, where several years ago was located the Sulphur Springs hotel that was burned will mean much for the West Asheville section. The boundary adjoins the Asheville School property and is one of the most delightful places in all this section. It contains springs of sulphur water and many admirable building sites. It is understood that Prof. Schoenfeld, who is director and owner of a large athletic club in New Orleans where annually thousands of boys and young men are given physical training, will utilize the property for physical training work and that a physical culture school will be established there. Many improvements will be made. Prof. Schoenfeld first came to Asheville more than a year ago. He came to referee the first wrestling match held in Asheville, the contest between Big Tom Frisbee of Madison county and Prof. Ono, the Jap. Prof. Schoenfeld was most favorably impressed with this city and section and declared then that he might purchase property in or near Asheville. The New Orleans athlete has been in the city for the past two weeks and is more pleased with the region than ever before.

Asheville Gazette-News August 24, 1906

PLANS ARE ANNOUNCED BY PROF. SCHOENFELD

Will Closed up His Affairs in New Orleans, Coming Here in the Autumn.

Prof. Otto Schoenfeld of New Orleans, who recently purchased the 155 acre tract of land in West Asheville on which is located the sulphur springs of Buncombe county and for which he paid $30,500, returned to New Orleans Wednesday night, where he will close up his business affairs and make ready to come to Asheville permanently to locate.

Prof. Schoenfeld told a Gazette-News man before leaving that he would shortly begin to beautify the ground of his new purchase and that he expected to remove to this section early in the fall. He will erect buildings at the spring and establish a physical training school, where it is expected hundreds of young men from New Orleans will come to spend the summer for recreation and physical training. It is expected that Prof. Schoenfeld will have charge of the physical training work at the Asheville School, situated near the property just purchased by the New Orleans gentleman.

Prof. Schoenfeld trains men physically from a scientific standpoint and has been very successful in his work. He has been director of the Young Men's Gymnastic club of New Orleans for the past seven years and also coach at the Jefferson college, an institution located from New Orleans. The Young Men's Gymnastic club has a membership of more than 1,500 and represents considerable wealth. Prof. Schoenfeld is a fine athlete and teaches all the games including [illegible]

Asheville Gazette-News August 31, 1906

PLANS ARE ANNOUNCED BY PROF. SCHOENFELD

Will Close Up His Affairs in New Orleans; Coming Here in the Autumn

Prof. Otto Schoenfeld of New Orleans, who recently purchased the 288 acre tract of land in West Asheville on which is located the sulphur springs of Buncombe County, and for which he paid $30,500, returned to New Orleans Wednesday night, where he will close up his business affairs and make ready to come to Asheville permanently.

Prof. Schoenfeld told a Gazette-News man before leaving that he would shortly begin to beautify the ground of his new purchase and that he expected to remove to this section early in the fall. He will erect buildings at the sulphur springs and establish a physical training school, where it is expected hundreds of young men from New Orleans will come to spend the summer for recreation and physical training. It is expected that Prof. Schoenfeld will have charge of the physical training work at the Asheville School, situated near the property just purchased by the New Orleans gentleman.

Prof. Schoenfeld trains men physically from a scientific standpoint and has been very successful in his work. He has been director of the Young men's Gymnastic Club of new Or-leans for the past seven years and also coach at the Jefferson College, an institution 50 miles from New Orleans. The Young Men's Gymnastic Club has a member-ship of more than 1,500 and represents considerable wealth. Prof. Schoenfeld is a fine athlete and teaches all the games including fencing, boxing, wrestling, and field sports. He said that he would, upon his return here, improve the sulphur springs on his property and that the water would be free to all who cared to use it.

Asheville Gazette-News August 31, 1906

NOW READY TO BE SOLD!

The Celebrated 60 Acre Tract 4 1-2 Miles West of Asheville Known as Sulphur Springs

This tract adjoins the Asheville School property and is reached by an excellent Macadamized road or via Southern railway.

It would make an ideal site for a hotel. It is 2500 feet above the seal level, is densely wooded and within two miles North and South mountains rise to a height of 4000 feet. On the East can be seen Mt. Mitchell, 6700 feet in altitude, while on the West can be seen the Balsam range with Mt. Pisgah 5700 feet in altitude. The scenery in all directions is extremely beautiful.

The climate is ideal, never too warm at mid-day, while the nights are always cool.

Sulphur Springs, also Chalybeate Springs, each with a national reputation for great medicinal and curative qualities, flow on this property.

Adjoining Sulphur Springs is a tract of over 200 acres known as Sulphur Springs Farm. This property has substantially the same description as Sulphur Springs. It is now for sale as a whole or will be sold in 100 acre tracts. The terms are easy. For full particulars, address

O. B. SCHOENFELD,

1122 MAISON BLANCHE BUILDING, NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Asheville Gazette-News April 25, 1910

Asheville, N. C., May 4, 1912

Messrs. Anderson & Mitchell,

Asheville School,

Asheville, N. C.

Gentlemen:

I have decided to close up the road which leads up to your property, and therefore notify you to make arrangements for your people to use the other road.

I would not like to do this, however, I am compelled to do so, as signs, etc., does not prevent the people from passing over my property. They do not seem to mind any signs, and being that the property has been lying there so long idle they seem to take their own privileges; and the only way I can stop them is to close up the drive way. I expect to begin some work on the road in the near future and then probably open the road and make some arrangements for the people to pass over it. I intend to use this drive for the main entrance to the Springs and soon or later put a little cottage there and charge for the privileges of using the Springs property. We may later on if you would like to use the road make some arrangements for traveling over it.

Respectfully yours,

C. B. Schoenfeld

AUTO SPEEDWAY WILL BE BUILT IN WEST ASHEVILLE

Site of Old Race Track Will be Utilized for Modern Speedway

POLO FIELD MAY BE INSIDE TRACK

James M. Kelley, of New Orleans and O. B. Schoenfeldt the Promoters

A three-quarter of a mile speedway for automobiles 60 feet wide will be built immediately on the site of the old race track in West Asheville. The promoters, James M. Kelley of New Orleans and Otto B. Schoenfeldt, the present owner of the property, will start rebuilding and enlarging the track within the next thirty days, and will complete it as soon as possible. They plan in addition to have polo grounds built within the track, and other amusement features as well. An automobile line will be operated from Pack square to the park.

The old track, say the promoters, was about five-eighths of a mile in circumference. They plan to increase this size with the new track, and, if the project meets with sufficient patronage from the people of Asheville, to eventually have a one mile speedway. Surveyors will be on the grounds tomorrow and contracts will be let shortly. Mr. Kelley, who is in direct charge of the track, said yesterday that he was undecided whether to have a concrete track or a dirt speedway with especially good drainage. The latter, he thought, would be the better in wet weather and lessen the danger of skidding.

If there is no opposition from within the city, weekly bicycle and automobile races will be held. It is planned to have a club for motor owners, the members of which shall have free access to the speedway, and exciting brushes between amateur drivers will be a perpetual feature.

Several years ago Mr. Schoenfeldt, who is one of the best known physical trainers in the country, purchased the old race track property with the intention of rebuilding it. His scheme failed at that time for lack of backing. Mr. Kelley stated yesterday that he would proceed with the present project, using his own capital and not asking for anything but the patronage of the public when the place is completed.

Site of Speedway.

The site of the new speedway is on the French Broad river and the old car line, and is about fifteen minutes walk south of the present West Asheville line.

If the track and amusement park receives paying patronage improvements will be made in many ways. The track will be enlarged to one mile. Polo grounds will be laid off and a polo club organized. Moving picture shows and similar attractions are proposed.

Mr. Kelley was formerly a professional ball player with the New Orleans team, and is well known in that city as a sporting man. Recently he sold considerable business interests in the Louisiana city and came to Asheville to invest.

Mr. Schoenfeldt is a retired wrestler and physical trainer who is known all over the country. Messrs. Schoenfaldt and Kelley were members of the same athletic clubs in New Orleans.

Asheville Citizen October 20, 1912

(COPY)

SULPHUR SPRINGS PARK REALTY COMPANY
Sulphur Springs

1289

O. T. Maier
President

NEW ORLEANS, LA. Jan. 9, 1914

Judge J. D. Murphy,
Oates Bldg.,
Asheville, N. C.

My dear Judge:

Your letter 5th inst., received. I might first state that under the terms of my contract for the Sulphur Springs lands I cannot close up any of the existing roads, so that any lands I might convey to the Asheville School would be subject to such roads through or adjoining the same.

If you will refer to the blue print plan enclosed herewith you will see that College Turn, which extends from the Waynesville and Asheville Road to Sulphur Springs Boulevard will under my contract have to remain open and in addition this road has been laid out as a main entrance to the Sulphur Springs Park. Another entrance from the Waynesville and Asheville road to this Park will be by the Sulphur Springs Boulevard. The short road called Steepside Place cannot be used as an entrance on account of the steep grade.

The entrance from the Waynesville and Asheville Road to the Park that is prepared would be along the dotted red lines A. B. or A. C. both of which pass through the lands of Miss Arthurs, and after making a verbal agreement with her to purchase fuve acres of her bottom lands she refused at a later date to complete the transaction.

I have indicated by red lines on the plan, a projected route for an entrance road for the School D. to E. and this would give them a square entrance that would be much more attractive. This road would make their new East line 150 feet, from said road come to East side of lots 174 & 189 produced Southerly to their present property and their west line would be parallel to this line and 300 feet therefrom as indicated also by a red line. By the purchase of lots Numbers 172, 173, 174, 189, "G" and that part of the Summer Hotel Lot up to this red line from the Sulphur Springs Park Realty Co., and the land west of Lot "G" and College Turn to the other red line, from you would give the School what they desire as I understand from your letter.

The Summer Hotel Lot is made up of lots Numbers 167, 168, 169, 170 and 171, the lines for which were omitted in order to show the Building thereon more clearly, Lot 167 is on the East end of plot and lot 171 is at Northely end, I have indicated lot lines approximately on plan in black pencil lines.

Our Company has prior to my last visit to Asheville arranged for plans for the erecting of a Summer Hotel (Swiss Design) as indicated on the blue print and the whole section in front of this contemplated Hotel was to be developed on the same lines of architecture as that of the Hotel. Lots 172, 173, 174, 189, 175 and 188 were to be sold for business purposes, Lots 176 177, 187, 186 reserved for the National Auto and Country Club.

(COPY)

Name Judge J. D. Murphy Page 2 Date Jan. 9 1915

Subject...

You will readily see from the foregoing that to sell any part of the property to the Asheville School, would upset all our plans and unless we are amply compensated prefer not to sell any of it.

Kindly show this plan and also explain to Professor's Anderson and Mitchell the developments made and contemplated, and advise me as soon as possible in order not to delay my plans.

I have been so busy since my last visit to Asheville, that I am as yet unable to say when I will again see you.

With kindest regards, remain

Yours very truly,

(Signed) O. T. Maier

P. S. I wrote Mr. Plummer on Dec. 30th, and enclosed him a blue print similar to the one herewith enclosed.

New Orleans Southern & Grand Isle Railway Co.
State A.
New Orleans La.

(C-o-p-y)

New Orleans Southern & Grand Isle Railway Co
State A.
New Orleans La

My grandfather, Otto Bruno Schoenfeld, owned the Grey Castle Hotel in the early 1900's, before the two side wings were added. I believe he sold it to Frank Mendoza. I have a post card somewhere in my files of it when my grandfather owned it. I still have the sofa/parlor set that was in one of the two parlors in the hotel, and my sister still owns one of the two chandeliers that hung in one of the parlors. There was a larger, chandelier that hung in the other parlor, but which my cousin sold to an antique dealer on Royal Street many years ago. My grandfather, who later owned a gymnastic academy in New Orleans, where he taught young ladies how to fence, was very closely aligned with the Catholic priests and nuns in the area, and he taught the nuns how to swim (in the Gulf of Mexico). My mother, who died in 2005 at age 98. told stories of when the family lived at Grey Castle. If I can find the post card I'll email it to you. If you have more information on the hotel I would appreciate having it. Thanks.
P.S. My mother was Clara (Schoenfeld) Watters
Hi Dan. Thank you for posting the information that I sent you on Grey Castle. I found an article about the Grey Castle in my files from the May 14, 2000 edition of The Sun Herald Newspaper, Living section, written by Murella H. Powell. According to Harrison County land records, the original structure was a one-story house built in the 1880's by Edward Buckner, who sold it to his son, James Buckner in 1884. In March 1889 James Buckner sold it to John and Fannie Menge, who added a second floor. After Menge died, the estate passed to his widow, who sold it to her 4 children in 1915. My grandmother and grandfather, Otto and Clara Schoenfeld, bought it from the Menges around that time. They lived there with their four children, Clara (my mother), Otto Jr., James and Lawrence, until May 16, 1927, when my grandfather sold it to The Grey Castle Hotel Co., which would be Bettie Mendoza Brady's grandfather, Frank Mendoza. It passed to the Jesuits in 1949 and became Xavier Hall. Heavily damaged by Hurricane Camille, it was subsequently torn down. Attached is photo of a Grey Castle post card from 1947. Thanks so much.

Pass Christian, Mississippi

The Grey Castle

This was the site of an elegant Victorian home in the 900 block of East Beach Boulevard (Scenic Drive) and Menge Avenue which was owned by New Orleans ship chandler, J.H. Menge. Menge let John L. Sullivan use the facilities to train for the Sullivan-Ryan fight that took place on February 2, 1882,on the grounds of the old Barnes Hotel in Mississippi City.

Hotel

in 1929 when its owner Edward Buckner of Jackson made the transformation. At the time there were no other operating hotels, since the others had closed or had been burned down, when his secretary persuaded him to convert his home by adding wings to each side. These changes were built by contractor Frank Wittmann in December 1929. The nucleus wa a rambling Queen Anne house with all bedrooms having an outside view, each with private baths and showers. The Grey Castle Hotel was promoted as a family hotel and was the last hostelry built in Pass Christian. The project included not only t hotel on the beach but a colony of cottages built around many oak and pine trees and beautiful lawns managed by Mrs. William Coutourier.

The Grey Castle Hotel thrived during the early 1930's but soon folded due to the Great Depression. Ralph Hicks bought the Hotel in October 1941 and operated it for 8 years. It had 49 rooms with large closets and individual tiled bathrooms.

A Conversion

In 1950, the structure was purchased by the Jesuit Catholic Order for a Seminary at which time, the name was changed to Xavier Hall. It was later used as a Catholic Retreat for vacationing and retiring priests.

In 1957, the Jesuit's of New Orleans occupied part of the large edifice as a temporary home for the Provincial Superior and his staff. After the Jesuits moved out, Xavier Hall, as it was called, continued as a Retreat Home and the Oblates from Pine Hills moved in as the result of Hurricane Camille damages to the Bay area facility at Pine Hills-DeLisle.

During the period that the Brothers were in training at Pine Hills, and the Jesuits and Fathers were in "retreat" at Xavier Hall, the Catholic churches throughout the area benefitted by the influx of so many members of the Clergy, who had to perform Mass services in meeting their holy obligations.

Xavier Hall was eventually sold and torn down which resulted in two new residences being built at that site — 915 and 919 East Scenic Drive.

SULPHUR SPRINGS PARK REALTY CO.

SULPHUR SPRINGS

O. T. MAIER
PRESIDENT

NEW ORLEANS, LA. March 10, 1916

Professors Anderson and Wisenell,
Asheville School,
Asheville, N. C.

Dear Sirs,

In reference to the conference had, re the sale etc. of some of the Company's property, we will sell, as follows, viz:

"1" Part of lots 170 and 171 including the roadway alongside of said lots, which readers friends from your School line to College Turn, together with lots 172 and 173, all red pencilled marked together with a 10 year lease of the road (marked in black ink) leading across Caney Creek to the Waynesville and Asheville road, for $4000.

"2" Or will sell, in addition to the property described in "1" part of lots 169, 170 and 171, together with lots 174 and 189, for $6000.

The road, College Turn, lying between Lots 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174 and 189 and the road leading across Caney Creek to the Waynesville Asheville road to remain open for public use.

This sale will be made to the Asheville School on condition, that they will construct a concrete bridge and approaches across Caney Creek and to maintain same in a safe and passable condition at all times during the term of the lease. This bridge and approaches etc to remain open for the general public. The Asheville School assuming any and all responsibility and to sign themselves for any liability which may result from any accident caused by any unsafe or dangerous condition of this or any other bridge they may erect during the term of this lease.

We would very much appreciate, if you will promptly advise us of your decision, as our plans for the lithographing of the maps of our property are in course of preparation and cannot hold them back too long.

Yours truly,

Sulphur Springs Park Realty Company

President

Otto Schoenfeld

Town of Ulysses

Esther Northrup and Nancy Dean
Town of Ulysses Historians

Ulysses was Town No. 22 of the Military Tract. It was named for Homer's great wanderer who spent twenty years finding his way home to Ithaki from the Trojan Wars.

The Town of Ulysses was formed in 1799 as part of Seneca County, which was separated from Onondaga in 1804. The first settlers entered the area in the 1790s. In 1817 Ulysses, which had been in Seneca County, was placed by the state in Tompkins County. On March 16, 1821, the Town of Ithaca was created from Ulysses, as was the Town of Enfield, which was created at the same time. Ulysses was left with lots 1 through 33, or the northern portion of the town west of Cayuga Lake; the remainder of the lots were divided east and west between Ithaca and Enfield.

Camp Street was named for Herman Camp in 1845 when construction began on his large Greek Revival style home that sits on a large plot and takes up one entire village block. The house was completed in 1847. Camp was a noted advocate of the Sunday School movement, Abolition, and other reforms.

Congress Street recalls the election in 1813 of Dr. Oliver Comstock, the first postmaster of the village, to the United States Congress. The street on which he lived was designated Congress Street.

Town of Ulysses

North

New York State Plane Central 1983 North American Datum

1:48000
One Inch represents 4000 Feet

2000 0 2000 4000 Feet
500 0 500 1000 Meters

Tompkins County
Information Technology Services
GIS Division

Ovuz@Kaye.apr
02/13/2003

Elderado Drive was created by William Elder, a local contractor who purchased land in the village and built an apartment building in the 1960s. Several other homes have since been built on the cul-de-sac, located across from the high school. It was Elder who gave the new road his own name in a lovely play on words.

Cold Springs Road was named for the nearby spring, located a few yards south on Route 96. There, a continuous stream of water provided cool refreshment for horse and buggy travelers. Today a trickle of water is the only reminder of this former landmark, once so appreciated by man and animal.

Crowbar Point refers to birds rather than an iron tool. Crowbar Point was supposed to be where some early travelers found a gathering of crows and since 1821 an area of the bank along the west shore of Cayuga Lake has so been called. Used for a time by fishermen and hunters, Crowbar Point is today a part of the Comstock Program Center run by the Seven Valleys Girl Scout Council. The land had been donated by the Cornell family to provide a camping area for girls in the 1930s and was named to honor Anna Botsford Comstock who had pioneered nature education for children. She was a Cornell University student in 1876 and became a university professor in 1913.

DuBois Road was named for the Peter DuBois family who came from Ulster County and were early settlers in the southeast section of the town.

Frog Point was a ferry location, established in 1829 by J. M. McLallen, from which boats left for the east shore of Cayuga Lake. From 1845 to 1885 the ferryboat Wide Awake operated from Port Deposit, which was another name for Frog Point, as was Trumansburg Landing and Frontenac. During the steamboat era, a hotel was built for summer guests. After the decline of steamboats, activity in the area faded. In 1929 the land was purchased by the Louis A. Fuertes Boy Scout Council and named Camp Barton. It has been used for their camping program, which continues today. This area is actually just north of the Town of Ulysses line, in Seneca County.

Glenwood was first named for early settlers John and Nathaniel Mack who gave their name to this point of land on the west shore of Cayuga Lake but Henry Garret, a later owner, built a small hotel there that flourished in the 1880s. He gave it the name Glenwood Falls, later shortened to Glenwood. This was a popular picnic spot, also known as Garret's Point. The hotel offered dancing and often people would arrive by steamboat. In 1895 a larger hotel and dance pavilion were built but they burned in the 1930s. In 1945 the land was sold to the Ithaca Yacht Club, which is now an active place for summer boating.

Halseyville appears on the 1829 map of Tompkins County. It is located where today's Route 96 crosses Taughannock Creek and was where Nicole Halsey had his farm and mill. Halsey's house was built in 1829 but he might, as did others, have lived in a cabin for some years before that. The road in front of Halsey's house was the major route to Trumansburg and Ithaca and was known in the 1800s as the Ithaca–Geneva Turnpike. A large covered bridge was built at this crossing in 1833 and torn down in 1926. It was replaced by a sturdier modern structure, which was rebuilt in 1993.

Hinging Post Road is a new name with an interesting twist. Hinging Post Road is a cul-de-sac off DuBois Road. This housing development was started by Otto Schoenfeld in the mid-1890s. He named it Hinging Post Estates. What is a hinging post? It is a device used to attach two other elements together, or a hinging point can also be a turning point, or a determining factor—an interesting and not inappropriate name.

Indian Fort Road recalls a Cayuga-Seneca Indian village and burial ground that were located west of Waterburg near the present Route

Otto Schoenfeld

Full name: Otto Bruno Schoenfeld
Gender: Male
Height: 5'10" (178 cm)
Weight: 183 lbs (83 kg)
Born: August 27, 1871 in Leipzig, Sachsen, Germany
Died: August 26, 1938 in New Orleans, Louisiana, United States
Affiliations: Young Men's Gymnastic Club, New Orleans (USA)
Country: United States
Sport: Fencing

Biography

Otto Schoenfeld was born in Leipzig, Germany, where he got acquainted with wrestling and fencing, as his father was, in his own words, "the most powerful athlete and swordsman in the German Army." His family emigrated to United States in 1885 and settled to Milwaukee, Wisconsin. In Milwaukee Schoenfeld continued his training in wrestling and fencing under Professor Robert Reuter and he became a naturalized US citizen in 1889. In the 1890s Schoenfeld worked as a physical instructor with the Young Men's Christian Association (YMCA), Woodson Ray University and Lyceum Conservatory in Memphis, Tennessee. In 1898 Schoenfeld moved to New Orleans, Louisiana, where he took up the physical instructor's position in the Southern Athletic Club, but soon moved over to the Young Men's Gymnastics Club in the same city. As Schoenfeld worked as a physical instructor, he was not considered an amateur by the rules of the turn of 20th century, so we don't find his name at the US amateur wrestling or fencing annals and he never took part in the US championships in those events.

In 1900, Schoenfeld had a round trip to Europe and competed in many competitions there, including in many 1900 World's Fair sporting competitions. The local newspaper, the _New Orleans Times-Picayune_, describes his participation at the World's Fair sporting competitions (of which one part was the 1900 Olympics) as following: "It is unnecessary to review his trip to Europe and his participation in the world's championship games, wherein he won three championships pitted against the world's best athletes, and several second prizes, though in a half crippled condition. It will be recalled that the French government presented him with a magnificent bronze medallion, in tribute to his splendid swordsmanship, though he was debarred, through the unfounded pretext that his entry had arrived too late, from the sword contests. (In reality they were afraid of him.)" Colourful description, but if we look only the dry facts, his accomplishments at the World's Fair were first in the professional shot put and second in both professional high and long jumps and his only true Olympic participation came in the master's sabre tournament, where he lost in the first round. Schoenfeld probably also participated at the professional wrestling tournaments during the World's Fair, but those results have not survived to our time.

Back in the United States, Schoenfeld gained some fame as a professional wrestler, who wrestled bouts with such great turn-of-the-century professional wrestlers like Frank Gotch, Tom Jenkins and Tom Sharkey. He won several handicap bouts against Jenkins and Gotch and was always considered as a worthy opponent by them. Schoenfeld later worked as the athletic director of Young Men's Gymnastic Club in New Orleans and also operated a private academy of fencing and physical culture for young ladies.

Results

Glossary • CSV • PRE

Games	Age	City	Sport	Event	Team	NOC	Rank	Medal
1900 Summer	28	Paris	Fencing	Men's Sabre, Masters, Individual	United States	USA	AC r1/3

Men's Sabre, Masters, Individual

Glossary • CSV • PRE • Event History • Mouseover for column descriptions

Games	Age	City	Sport	Team	NOC	Phase	Unit	Rank	Date	Result

Copyright © 2000-2011 Sports Reference LLC. All rights reserved.

A Sports Reference Site: About Olympics at SR | Found a bug or have a suggestion? | Privacy Statement | Conditions & Terms of Service

Partner With: FantasyPlayers.com. Contact Fantasy Sports Ventures for advertising information.

Data provided by OlyMADMen, led by Hilary Evans, Arild Gjerde, Jeroen Heijmans, and Bill Mallon. Members: David Foster, Martin Frank, Jørn Jensen, Carl-Johan Johansson, Taavi Kalju, Martin Kellner, George Masin, Stein Opdahl, Wolf Reinhardt, Ralf Regnitter, Paul Tchir, Magne Teigen, Christian Tugnoli, and Morten Aarlia Torp.

Sports Reference LLC and www.sports-reference.com are not sponsored by or affiliated with the Olympics, the United States Olympic Committee or the International Olympic Committee. Trademarks featured or referred to on this website are the property of their respective trademark holders and not Sports Reference LLC or www.sports-reference.com.

Picture Size: ☐ ■

Their Birthday Parties Come Once In 4 Years

More Than 30 In This Community Were Born On Feb. 29

Celebrations were reported under way yesterday for 39 Asheville and Buncombe county persons who have birthdays only every four years. James Cowan Seigler, Jr., joined this Leap Year group when he was born yesterday morning at 4:30 o'clock at Biltmore hospital.

The new arrival is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Cowan Seigler, of 16 Beverly road, West Asheville. So far as could be learned late last night, this was the only birth in Asheville yesterday. Robert Nelson Willis, of Woodfin, and Miss Meona Parris, of Henderson county, secured license to marry.

Several paradoxes were reported in connection with persons having Leap Year birthdays. Three of especial interest were noted. Mrs. R. J. Trammell, of Canton, was born February 29, 1896, and did not have a birthday until February 29, 1904, since February was given only 28 days at the beginning of the century, 1900. She was eight years old before she celebrated her first birthday.

J. W. Bartlett, of 14 Cowan street, was born on February 29 and his son, Jimmie, was born on March 1. Yesterday Mr. Bartlett celebrated his tenth birthday, while Jimmie is celebrating his tenth today. As far as birthdays go, Mr. Bartlett is just one day older than his son. This is the nearest their birthday ages will ever come together again, since Jimmie will grow older than his father as birthdays go.

Leap Year Folk

Asheville residents who had birthdays yesterday are: L. E. Fisher, 308 Cumberland avenue; J. W. Bartlett, 14 Cowan road, West Asheville; Mrs. S. H. Oxner, Gravelyn road, Miss Ethel Stroupe, 57 Oakwood street, West Asheville; Mrs. J. M. Flenniken, 40 Hiawassee street; Mrs. W. H. Vaughn, 26 Starnes avenue; Mrs. J. H. Grant, 237 Haywood road; J. F. Fisher, County Home road; Miss Joela Proctor, Asheville, route 4; Mrs. J. B. Bogie, 139 Brucemont Circle, [illegible] whose birthdays came yesterday, include G. K. Morgan, Swannanoa; Miss Juanita McMahan, Swannanoa; Miss Margaret Sales, Fletcher; I. W. Sanders, Marion; Mrs. W. S. McLean, Rosman; T. L. Blalock, Hazelwood; Millard Gentry, Weaverville; Mrs. D. C. McGaha, Canton; Floyd Herbert Roberson, Marshall; Mrs. L. E. Ensley, Canton; Miss Thelma Green, Canton; Q. A. Collins, Forest City; Mrs. R. J. Trammell, Canton; Miss Helen Holmes Gentry, Stocksville; Mrs. A. J. Mason, Black Mountain; Eckols Gathey, Canton; Charles Smith, Balfour; O. C. Copeland, Marion; Mrs. L. J. Tipton, Swannanoa; and Miss Hilda Burnette, Stocksville.

Asheville Citizen March 1, 1932

SELLERS CABINET SHOP

Paul G. Sellers, owner of Sellers Cabinet Shop, began his business back in 1946 at its present location, 417 Haywood Road in West Asheville. Sellers, who is married and has four sons, is a member of the Masons, West Asheville Business Association, Western Carolina Coin Club, Wildlife Club, and the Abernathy Methodist Church.

SELLERS

The original cabinet shop has taken on a very diversified list of servcies and merchandise for the homeowner, among which are Ventless Stove Hoods, Custom Martha Washington Electric Stoves, custom-built cabinets, Kirby Cleaners, Navaco aluminum awnings and carports, Ventaire custom-made awnings, and Aristo storm windows and doors.

According to Sellers, this is one of his busiest seasons of the year . . . preparing Asheville homes for the hard winter ahead; however, his efficient crew is well prepared to give fast, expert service.

Asheville Citizen November 17, 1960

Dr. Ralph Sexton Sr. 60 years of gospel glory

In the late 1930's two young brothers were called to preach. The Sexton brothers, Ralph and Leroy were destined to be two gospel tornadoes that Western North Carolina would have to reckon with. They both preached with power and boldness that forced sinners to their knees in repentence.

Bro. Sexton

Ralph and Leroy had a camp meeting style of preaching which included dramatic illustrations of the real issues. One of Ralph's sermons inluded a real hanging noose and a dummy which was called Mr. Booze, and of course, Mr. Booze was left hanging at the end of the sermon.

These two men were a carry over of the powerful days of mighty Holy Ghost revival that made America the great nation it is.

Ralph's heart has always been in evangelism and the tent ministy. His dear wife, sister Jackie, has always said "when he dies she is going to wrap him in one of those tent flaps and bury him." In the early forties he began to erect gospel tents all over Western North Carolina and, as a result, many camp meetings were birthed from these type meetings.

The Cherokee North Carolina Camp Meeting, the Yancey County Camp Meeting and the East Tennesee Camp Meetings in Kingsport were started under tents belonging to Bro. Ralph during the Summer of 1973.

Bro. Ralph preached the first of these meetings and the tent was erected under the direction of Bro. J. Wendell Runion who is now director of Missions for International Sexton's tent set up at the Yancey County Campmeeting near Pensacola.

Baptist Outreach which operates WKJV Radio Station in Asheville, North Carolina.

Bro. Ralph started broadcasting on WWNC Radio Station in Asheville, North Carolina in the early 1940's and is carrying that tradition forth on his weekly television program called "Send the Light." "Send the Light" telecast was started in 1960 on WLOS TV in Asheville, North Carolina.

Trinity Baptist Church on Shelburne Rd., Asheville, NC

The Ambassadors Quartet which included some well known singers like Eldridge Fox and Calvin Runion sang live for him on the first program. Appearances by groups like the Inspirations and Kingsmen on the telecast were common. Bro. Ralph was a great help to these groups during their early years.

His first church building still stands in the West End section of Asheville, North Carolina just under the east end of the Smokey Park bridge.

His last church building is Trinity Baptist Church in Asheville, North Carolina and is still a thriving church under the leadership of his son Ralph Sexton Jr..

Trinity Baptist Church came into existence in 1966 under Bro. Ralph Sexton Sr. and was located on State Street in West Asheville. In 1971, Bro. Ralph joined in prayer with Dr. James Stewart and others.

Trinity Baptist Church was moved to its present location, and from that time until now the church has experienced a great ministry in Asheville, North Carolina.

One can say in a final statement of Ralph Sexton Sr. that he started in a blaze of glory and is finishing as a pillar of strength.

ALL SET!
LET'S GO!

TO WHAT? BIG TENT CAMPAIGN!

WHERE? LEICESTER, N. C.

Tent is Located on the High School Grounds - Very Easy to get to.

WHEN? BEGINNING SUNDAY AFTERNOON, JULY 29, AND CONTINUING EACH NIGHT UNTIL VICTORY!

TIME? 8:00 P. M. EVERY NIGHT

ALSO EACH SUNDAY AFTERNOON AT 3:00 O'CLOCK.

SPECIAL—See Government Restricted War Films—These can be kept only a few hours at a time—Don't Miss These—You'll Never Forget.

Hear Evangelist RALPH SEXTON

One of the South's Youngest Evangelist—Evangelist Sexton can be heard over Station WWNC Tuesday through Saturday from 6:30 to 7:00 A. M.—Sunday 7:30 to 8:00 A. M.

Youth For Christ Rally Every Saturday Night!

SPECIAL SONG SERVICE EVERY NIGHT

Quartets -- Duets -- Solos -- Etc.

WE'LL SEE YOU AT THE "BIG TOP"

BOB TERRELL

columnist

Evangelists 'resurrect' Asheville

The Bible says that on Resurrection Day the trumpets will sound and the dead in Christ shall rise. There was a night in 1939 that Asheville very clearly heard the trumpets.

Ralph and Leroy Sexton, two fiery young evangelist brothers who were just beginning their ministry in Asheville, were invited to preach at a home on a bluff on the west side of the French Broad River where Westgate Shopping Center now stands.

Looking across the river, toward Asheville's east bank, they could see from that bluff the massive Riverside Cemetery on a large hill above the river.

The Sextons had bought a set of speakers at Montgomery Ward and hadn't quite learned how to control the set's tremendous amplification.

When they finally realized what they had, they discovered they were able to broadcast to an entire community over those speakers.

Equipped with "drivers" the speakers would carry all over the west end community where the brothers usually preached in the open air beside the railroad tracks, near where the Smoky Park bridges now span the river.

When atmospheric conditions were right, folks as far as Biltmore, three miles away, could distinguish the words.

Leroy set up the speakers on ther front lawn and Ralph prayed and began to preach his sermon.

Leroy had turned the speakers up full bore and directed them toward the east side of the river.

Being outdoors and turned away from the people on the lawn, the speakers did not overpower the crowd, but because atmospheric conditions were perfect, the sound from Ralph's every word carried very clearly across the river, through the cemetery, and to a great portion of the population of Asheville.

In my mind's eye, I can see people who lived around the cemetery and others in North Asheville rushing out of their homes to see what the commotion is, and they hear loud preaching and praying from the direction of the cemetery.

"Hallelujah!!!" a woman screams loudly just before she faints.

"It's Resurrection Day!" a man yells to his neighbors. the dead are rising, and they're coming out of the ground preaching and praying!"

The Asheville Police Department switchboard lit up like a Christmas tree.

All lines were jammed as scores of people attempted to report the miraculous occurrence to the police.

Soon, two city police cruisers and one silver bullet of the State Highway Patrol converged on West Asheville and began winding their way through the many streets, searching for whoever was alarming the populace.

The highway patrolman hit pay dirt first, having intercepted Ralph's "broadcast" on his cruiser's radio and followed it to the site.

Soon the two city cruisers arrived, and when the officers saw what the "resurrection" was, and how seriously Ralph was laying down the law to those people, they couldn't stem the flow of tears of laughter from their eyes.

"Boys," one of the officers said to the Sextons, "you won't have to preach no more."

"You've done scared the hell out of everybody in Asheville."

"Yeah," said another. "We know you're doing a great work, fellows, but you gotta turn them speakers down. You've got half of Asheville thinking it's the end of time."

After they learned to control their loudspeakers, the Sextons evangelized here for decades.

Asheville Citizen March 5, 2000

An event to celebrate the memory of Ralph Sexton Sr. and his 'work'

Bob Terrell
COLUMNIST

Ralph Sexton Sr., a noted evangelist and builder — first pastor of the thriving Trinity Baptist Church in West Asheville — has been gone since 2004, but his work lives on.

That "work" reference is not to Trinity, which under the pastoral guidance of Ralph Sexton Jr. is thriving in a new sanctuary, but to Asheville's First Church of the Nazarene, which was begun with an ardent prayer that God answered. The church will celebrate its 60th anniversary with a homecoming on Aug. 19 and 20.

There has been a Nazarene church — sometimes three or four of them — in Asheville from 1928 on. The present stands at 385 Hazel Mill Road. But the church that Ralph Sexton Sr. always called "the miracle church" was on Ann Street, between Haywood Road and Patton Avenue, just west of the Three Brothers Restaurant, which later wound up on Hazel Mill Road.

The story began in the Jesus Saves Mission, which Ralph Sr. and his brother Lee built on Roberts Street in the West End section, very near the railroad tracks and the French Broad River.

The Sexton brothers, both of whom preached in an independent way — that is, on street corners, along the highways and byways, in the open air, in tents, and often in private homes — reached the point where they thought they needed an anchor, a church of their own in which they could build a congregation and make a mark. So in 1942, in the early stages of World War II, they went to work on the Jesus Saves Mission on a lot in the West End, built the mission in a Quonset style, and eventually completed it.

There, indeed, they did build a congregation and reached out to all of Asheville. Ralph's heart lay largely with the Nazarene church in those days and the mission became a Church of the Nazarene.

At the end of the war, the Nazarenes were ready to move out of the mission and build a larger church of their own. Ralph pledged his help. A lot was found on Ann Street in the downtown Asheville area that could be purchased for $600, and the Nazarenes went to work to raise the money.

Ralph said he asked the Lord to help him help them by raising the money. Soon the Nazarenes began meeting in a tent on the lot on Ann Street, looking for a way to raise the money for the lot.

One day Ralph sent a telegram to someone and the thought struck him that "when people want to send a message in a hurry, they send a telegram." So he and the Nazarenes decided to send God a telegram and they wrote it out: "Dear Jesus, we need $600 to purchase the lot for the new church." They stood around a table on which the "telegram" was placed, laid hands on the message, and prayed for it to be sent to God.

Then they went to their seats and sat in silence, "letting God work among us," Ralph said. In a few minutes, a little boy slipped up beside Ralph and whispered, "My daddy says he'll give the money."

So the lot was secured in January 1947 and as it could, the congregation built the church, and it thrived. Ralph said that was one of the most thrilling parts of the ministry — when God answers prayers.

Today, the church, proud of its past, offers many programs for its old people, for the young, for men, for women, and for children. On Aug. 19-20 it will celebrate its 60th anniversary.

Carolyn Griffey, secretary to Pastor James L. Stewart, has asked that all former pastors call the church office (253-2095) and plan to participate in the homecoming celebration.

On the Saturday of the celebration, a barbecue dinner and program of music and memories is scheduled to begin at 4:30 p.m. and on Sunday the General Superintendent Emeritus, Dr. John Allan Knight, will be the featured speaker at 10 a.m. and a carry-in luncheon will follow.

They intend to do the celebration right, and they should. The church represents the hard work of many, many people.

CITIZEN-TIMES PHOTO

The work of the late Ralph Sexton Sr. lives on in Asheville's close-knit Trinity Baptist Church, of which he was pastor emeritus. He died in January 2004.

Sgt. Sherlin Returns To Camp Shelby

Sgt. Allen Sherlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Sherlin of 81 Swannanoa avenue, West Asheville, has returned to Camp Shelby, Miss., after spending a 20-day furlough visiting his parents here.

He enlisted in the army in September 1941 and received his basic training at Camp Moultrie, Ga. Sgt. Sherlin later was transferred to Puerto Rico where he served with an engineer division.

SGT. SHERLIN

He is a graduate of Lee H. Edwards high school.

Asheville Times May 10, 1943

DR. G. A. SHIEDER, 75-year-old West Asheville druggist, is relaxing in his home at 60 Westwood Place after returning from his Carolina Pharmacy on Haywood Road. Dr. Shieder has been in the drug store business since he was 22 years old, and has operated his own business in West Asheville since 1915. (Citizen Photo)

Dr. G. A. Shieder Is Veteran West Asheville Druggist

By BILL LINDAU

Dr. G. A. Shieder had been learning to be or working as a druggist for 16 years when West Asheville boasted 2,000 to 3,000 people and didn't boast a single paved foot of sidewalk.

He'd had 16 years' experience behind him when he bought the West Asheville Pharmacy to go into business for himself.

It was May 1915, and the store itself was not much more than a year old when he bought it.

When Dr. Shieder looked out the door, he could see the macadam road that was West Asheville's main thoroughfare then and still is.

It was Haywood Road, and the view of it was hidden periodically to the people who came to the store by the street car whose tracks ran in front of the West Asheville Pharmacy between the entrance and the road.

Last Sunday, Dr. Shieder was 75 years old.

And the next morning he got up as usual and went to work in the pharmacy business, just as he had been doing since the spring of 1899.

Dr. Shieder operated the West Asheville Pharmacy until 1931, then bought the Carolina Pharmacy which he still operates personally.

With three-quarters of a century behind him, the pharmacist carried himself with an erect bearing and looked no more than 60 when he was interviewed in his tastefully-furnished, modest home at 60 Westwood Place yesterday.

Not only has he seen West Asheville change from a community of a few thousand to a city-within-a-city of approximately 20,000,

But he's seen the drug store business change from exactly what its name indicated to a general merchandise store with a prescription department.

He went to work in a store on the Gulf Coast of Florida when he was 22 years old.

His first employer was his brother-in-law, who was a physician by profession.

"We made many pills ourselves, then," he recalled, "and some of the other drugs which now are prepared by the wholesale pharmaceutical houses—things like spirits of ammonia and paregoric, for instance."

After five years in this first store, he went to Jacksonville to work in a wholesale drug business and another retail store.

In the 75 years that have passed since Dr. Shieder got his first glimpse of the world on a cotton plantation near St. George, S. C., he's collected some good stories.

His acquaintances say one of the pleasures of visiting with him lies in the fact that he can tell a good story—and that he's a good listener, too.

When he was asked what organizations he belonged to, he answered:

"When you read about the list of organizations a man was in, usually his church is listed last.

"Put the West Asheville Methodist Church at top of the list."

He serves on the board of stewards of his church.

He's a charter member of three other West Asheville organizations: the West Asheville Masonic Lodge 665, AF and AM; Chapter 191, Order of the Eastern Star; and the West Asheville Businessmen's Association.

Dr. Shieder is a 32nd degree Scottish Rite Mason and a member of the Shrine.

Two years ago the Western North Carolina Drug Club honored him by awarding him a life membership.

He's also a member of the North Carolina Pharmaceutical Association and the National Association of Retail Druggists.

The Habomai Islands and Shikotan consist of a half dozen islands and numerous small formations in a 60-mile chain off Northeastern Japan.

Asheville Citizen January 24, 1952

CAROL LYNN SHIPMAN, daughter of Mrs. Herbert A. Shipman of 21 Rex Drive, has won all the scholastic awards offered her class at Hall Fletcher Junior High School. The awards were presented during final exercises at the school Saturday and include: Thelmas Jones Science Memorial Award, Latin Club Award, W. C. T. U. Award (first place), 1963-64 National Educational Development Certificate (top 10 per cent in nation and one of 25 at Hall Fletcher), Rotary Club Award for Scholastic Excellence (presented recently by the club). The Rotary Club award is the highest given at the school and is based on an overall average for three years. (Staff Photo)

Asheville Citizen June 8, 1964

Mostly 54

Local High School girls pictured above will model in a 7-hour Back-To-School Fashion Show at Belk's Friday . . . L to R: (front row) Sarah Ann Livingston, St. Genevieve; Rosalind Harris, Rebecca Parris, Lee Edwards; Annette Hawkins, West Buncombe; Pat Horton, Lee Edwards; (back row) Gwen Shipman, Lee Edwards; Shirley Merrill, Sand Hill; Sarah Dillingham, Swannanoa High; Kay Mulvaney, Lee Edwards; Ann Monteath, Lee Edwards. Not present when photo was made: Joanna Huff, Lee Edwards and Ann Dillingham, Barnardsville High.

Asheville Girl Starts Study Of Navigation As She Plans Ocean Flight

Miss Uva Shipman, 21-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Z. A. Shipman, 12 Twilight street, West Asheville has undertaken a course in navigation for her contemplated flight across the Atlantic ocean. Miss Shipman, now a stunt flyer at Roosevelt field, New York City, hopes to start on her adventure within the next 10 or 12 months.

In letters received by her parents here, the girl declares she is still determined to make the flight but believes that almost a year of preparation will be necessary. Recently she was granted a pilot's license at Roosevelt field. Two men who took the examination with her failed and she was warmly congratulated by officials of the field for her progress in mastering the intricacies of aviation.

For several months Miss Shipman has been specializing in parachute jumping at Roosevelt field, where she has become known as one of the most daring stunters at the field. Many of her jumps have been witnessed by crowds of thousands.

In obtaining her pilot's license, Miss Shipman had to take a plane into the air, climb 1,500 feet and descend with a "dead" motor, making a figure-eight before making a three-point landing.

Last week she was a delegate from the air field to Atlantic City where a new field was opened. Three planes from Roosevelt field made the trip to Atlantic City and the former Asheville girl was a passenger in one of these. She was applauded when introduced to the crowd at the new field.

Miss Shipman is a graduate of Asheville high school and for a time was employed in the Asheville Western Union office. She was formerly the wife of Edward Kimmey, of this city.

For several years the girl has had an ambition to fly the Atlantic ocean and since locating at Roosevelt field has determined to be the first woman to make the flight alone in a plane.

Asheville Times August 17, 1930

Asheville Citizen Aug. 26, 1931

Asheville Girl Plans Solo Flight To Europe

Miss Uva Shipman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Shipman, of West Asheville, will leave here next week for Cleveland, where she will meet her manager, Russell Brinkley, of California, and begin immediate preparations for a solo flight across the Atlantic ocean, she announced yesterday.

If Miss Shipman successfully completes her flight, she will be the first girl first to run the ocean alone. Other women who have flown the Atlantic have been accompanied by men flyers.

At the present Miss Shipman is suffering from a broken ankle, the result of a parachute jump on July 11 at Roosevelt field, New York. It will be a month or more before her foot is out of the cast and she is able to fly again, but she will buy a plane in the near future, and begin preparations for the flight, she said last night.

The accident prevented Miss Shipman's taking off this summer as she had originally planned, and also prevented her participatin in the national air races now in progress.

"I was making a jump at Roosevelt field, when I saw that I was about to land on top of another plane," Miss Shipman said last night, in describing her accident. "The plane attempted to get out of my way, but the backwash of air from

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

ASHEVILLE GIRL TO MAKE FLIGHT

Miss Shipman Wants To Be First Of Sex To Solo Across Ocean

—(Continued From Page One)

its propeller went up into my parachute, causing it to collapse. I fell about 30 or 40 feet."

Despite the accident, Miss Shipman says she still gets a big thrill out of parachute jumping, and intends to go back to it as soon as her ankle is well. She has been doing stunt flying around Long Island and New York City for the past two and a half years.

Miss Shipman graduated from the Asheville high school here in 1926, and went to work for the Western Union. In 1926 she left Asheville and went to New York, learning to fly at the Jackson Heights field. Since then she has specialized in stunt flying, and planned her transatlantic flight.

She was under contract with Paramount News to land a small plane on the new bridge connecting New York and New Jersey, over the Hudson river, but was unable to perform the stunt because of her accident.

Miss Shipman has been visiting her parents here, and recuperating from her accident, for the past week.

Asheville Citizen-Times April 24, 1930

Shock, Oldest Carrier Out For Contest Honors

Four Years Through All Weather Is Record Of Veteran

Four years ago, May 14, 1926, to be exact, The Citizen employed its first man carrier, S. H. Shock, who says he is in The Citizen's contest to determine the Best All-'Round Carrier, to win. Many people in The Citizen organization have, for years, regarded Mr. Shock as the best carrier in the entire group. Are they correct? This contest will surely tell, for a schedule of merits and demerits has been prepared that is declared by every carrier and every employe of the circulation department to be absolutely fair to every man in the organization.

During the four years Mr. Shock has been on his route he has made many friends for himself and for the newspaper. He serves the people living between Merrimon avenue and Charlotte street and between Woodfin Street and Annandale Avenue. He came to The Citizen following a brief illness, but prior to his connection with The Citizen he was employed as agent for an industrial insurance company. That connection gave him considerable experience in handling accounts to be collected on a weekly or monthly basis and proved of much value to him in new work

Likes Chickens

Shock says he has about two hundred people now receiving The Citizen to whom he has delivered a copy of the paper every morning without interruption during his four years and two months of service on the route. Something over a hundred more people have had The Citizen delivered to them every morning by him except what time they were out of the city on vacation. The remainder of his subscribers are new ones who subscribed just after he took the route or newcomers who started receiving The Citizen recently.

In making his deliveries he puts every paper right up to the screen door and where he knows the screen doors are left unhooked, he places them right behind the screen doors. He will gladly place the paper behind the screen for others, if they will tell him that they prefer this service.

He finishes his delivery about 6 o'clock each morning, about three hours after leaving The Citizen building where he reports at 3:00 o'clock. A large number of his subscribers pay him in advance—some yearly, some quarterly, quite a number pay monthly and still others weekly in advance. The habit of paying in advance proves a great help to every carrier.

Mr. Shock lives at Emma with his wife and two children. There much of his leisure time is spent in raising pure bred chickens of the buff orpington variety. This seems to be his chief diversion, while Mrs. Shock's hobby is making attractive serving trays from pine straws, milk-weed down and other wild growth. The bottom of the trays are usually of beaverboard covered with the milkweek down over which are artistically placed the wild growth with an occasional picture of a bird, dog, cat or the like and then a glass placed over the work of art. The entire tray is rimmed with pine straws. She recently presented to the Methodist church at Emma two collection trays are declared by all who have sen ethem to be real works of art.

In Contest

S. H. Shock has been delivering The Citizen every morning for four years and has the distinction of being the oldest carrier in point of service in the department.

—Citizen-Times Photo

FOUR PERFORMANCES of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will be given by the Tanglewood Children's Theater at William Randolph School March 29-31. Starring in the 35-person cast is (L) Sandra Shoemaker of Hall Fletcher Junior High School who will play Snow White. Also shown is Fran Johnson as the Peddler Woman. The total cast represents 12 schools in the Asheville area. Tickets will be on sale Monday at all three Talman stores for performances at 8 p.m. the following Friday, 10:30 a.m. Saturday, 2:30 p.m. Saturday, and 3 p.m. Sunday. John Haber is director.

Mrs. Paul Shook, 57 Dale, West Asheville, former patient at Asheville Orthopedic Hospital, is enthusiastic in her praise of all the wonderful things done for her by everyone connected with this hospital. The March of Dimes this year will help someone else who may be stricken as was Mrs. Shook.

But By The Grace of God This Could Be YOU!

POLIO IS NO RESPECTER OF ANY PERSON . . . race . . . creed or color . . . without warning some unfortunate is the victim of this terrible malady . . . yet there is a great work being done to wipe out this scourge . . . and every one of us can play a most important part during the MARCH of DIMES drive now going on.

Give Generously

FIGHT POLIO
Join the MARCH of DIMES
JANUARY 15-31

With A Smile On Your Face . . . To Help Remove The Look Of Agony From Another

FIGHT POLIO
Join the MARCH of DIMES
JANUARY 15-31

Make All Checks Payable to . . . March of Dimes
Mail to Junior Chamber of Commerce, City Hall, Asheville, N. C.

This Humane Message Sponsored and Brought to You By WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA INDUSTRIES

Beacon Manufacturing Company
American Enka Corporation
Ecusta Paper Corporation
Sayles Biltmore Bleacheries, Inc.
Morgan Furniture Co., Inc.
The Champion Paper and Fibre Company
Hans Rees' Sons, Inc.
Morgan Manufacturing Co., Inc.
Asheville Mica Company

Election Preparation

— Staff Photos By Malcolm Gamble

Betty Anne Shotwell (left) looks over a chalk line marking off the boundary for campaigners for Asheville City Council candidates. (Above) At Asheville Precinct No. 15 Tuesday morning were (L-R) Hoyt Smith, J.D. Howell and H. C. Hensley. They set up early to watch the action.

JOYFULAIRES QUARTET

FIRST TENOR.....HARRY SHOTWELL

SECOND TENOR.....ENOCH G. BALL, JR.

BARITONE.....ED RANDALL

BASS.....CARL FRADY

PIANIST.....AL PLEMMONS

In the early 1950's, this group was the first live entertainment program on W.L.O.S. Television. Along with our regular television program, we broadcast weekly on W.L.O.S. Radio. We have had the privilege through the years of spreading the gospel in song all throughout the Southeast.

IT HAS BEEN A JOY TO SING FOR YOU TONIGHT

Asheville Citizen
March 10, 1929

WEST ASHEVILLE POLICEMAN IS PAL TO LITTLE FOLKS

All boys and girls like policemen, especially when the object of their friendship is a reg'lar, good natured fellow like Policeman W. J. Shumate, of West Asheville, or Policeman Brannor of "Just Kids" comic feature fame.

Officer Shumate has been a member of the city police force for years, and for sometime has been "doing a beat" on Haywood road. He knows practically every boy and girl in West Asheville and among them he says are some of his closest friends.

When the enrollment of members in the Just Kids Safety Club began at The Citizen Bureau on Haywood road, many little boys and girls came to join and get their badges. Several did not know the location of the office, and so to "be careful", as all loyal and true Safety Club members are, they consulted with their pal, Officer Shumate, who at once gave such an important matter his careful consideration.

The other evening after escorting a little girl to the office where she became a member, the officer was talking with a Citizen reporter while on his way home.

"I love little children," he remarked, "and I find that they make better friends than many grown people do. You see, I know many of the youngsters around here and they know me. I have had lots of them to come to me and inquire about where they could join the Safety Club, and I just came along with them."

QUEEN OF MAY

West Asheville Girl Is Accorded High Honor At Cullowhee

CULLOWHEE, April 14. (Special)—Miss Sue Sinclair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Sinclair, of 128 Aylmer avenue, West Asheville, was elected Queen of May Friday afternoon by the students of Western Carolina Teachers' college.

Miss Sinclair, who is a pretty blonde, is a graduate of Asheville high school and Biltmore Junior college.

The newly elected Western Carolina May Queen is now a senior and will receive the bachelor of science degree at the June commencement. She is popular among a large circle of friends on the Cullowhee campus and plays a prominent part in student activities. Miss Sinclair is president of the senior class, is literary editor of The Catamount, student annual, and is the student body's first choice among the girls for the best college citizen award.

Miss Mildred Painter, daughter of Mrs. K. S. Bryson, of Biltmore, received the second highest vote in the May Queen election and as a result was chosen Miss Sinclair's maid of honor at the May Festival on Friday, May 4.

Miss Painter is also an attractive blonde and is a graduate of Oakley high school. She is a sophomore and is active in music circles at the college here. She received almost as many votes in the Friday contest as Miss Sinclair.

Third honors in the Cullowhee May Queen election go to Miss Edna Patton, of Murphy. Miss Patton is a junior.

MISS SUE SINCLAIR

Asheville Citizen April 15, 1934

To Study Music

Orville Smathers, 21, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Claude W. Smathers, 980 Haywood road, will leave in a few days for Ithaca, N. Y., where he will study music with his brother, Ray W. Smathers, who is a member of the famous Westminster choir. Orville graduated from Asheville senior high school in the class of 1931 and won second place in the state-wide music contest at Greensboro. He is a tenor.

Asheville Citizen Sept. 11, 1931

SGT. SMATHERS IS AWARDED PURPLE HEART

Asheville Man Was Wounded In Raid On Rumanian Oil Fields.

Technical Sergeant Oda A. Smathers, 33, radio operator and tail gunner on the "Teggie Ann," a Liberator bomber stationed "somewhere in the Middle East," has been awarded the Purple Heart, according to a message received from the war department by his brother, R. S. Smathers of Tremont park.

Sgt. Smathers was wounded recently while on a bombing mission over the Rumanian oil fields. He was injured last December in a freak accident while he was stationed in England. He had flown over hundreds of miles of enemy territory without injury, yet while on a three day pass, he was hit by a falling beam from a truck. He was in the base hospital for two weeks suffering from a fractured skull.

SMATHERS

He barely escaped death during a raid over Wilhelmshaven, Germany, last March when a 20 millimeter anti-aircraft shell exploded on the deck of the "Teggie Ann." He was bending over an oxygen bottle at the time but had he been at his regular post, the shell would have struck him.

In Service Two Years

Sgt. Smathers has been in service for about two and one-half years. He has been stationed in England for approximately a year. While in England, the crew of the "Teggie Ann" attracted widespread attention. King George reviewed the crew last November. Many newsreels of this event were shown in America. The ship and its crew have been the subject of many articles in "The Liberator," a newspaper for service men that is widely circulated in England. In one article, "The Liberator" described the "Teggie Ann" as a ship "that had been plenty of places and seen plenty of action."

Another brother, Patrolman Clifford S. Smathers, resides at 125 Michigan avenue here.

Asheville Times August 20, 1943

SMITH PRINTING CO. OFFERS A COMPLETE PRINTING SERVICE

The Smith Printing Company, which is located at 540 Haywood Road in West Asheville is owned and operated by G. N. Smith.

SMITH

It was in 1950 that the firm began with very limited facilities, at its present location.

Since that time, however, the company has added new and completely automatic presses.

They are prepared to turn out faster yet professional work. The Smith Printing Company specializes in printing, both letterpress and offset. Mr. Cameron Osborne is affiliated with the firm.

According to Mr. Smith, he is equipped to originate and produce any type of printing that an office would normally need. "If it's friendly, fast and conscientious service you want in printing, the number to call is AL 4-1000," says Mr. Smith.

Asheville Citizen December 8, 1960

Verse Choir Officers At Lee Edwards

Buddy Trueblood, above, was elected president of the Verse Choir of Lee Edwards Senior High school at a meeting of the group yesterday, and Miss Frances Smith was elected secretary. Trueblood is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul H. Trueblood of 1 Normandy road. Miss Smith is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Smith of 253 Riverview drive. The Verse Choir was organized last year for students who were interested in learning to appear in public, and for those who wanted speech work. Faculty advisor for the group is Miss Elizabeth C. Welch, dramatics director.

Asheville Citizen October 12, 1940

Fashionable Asheville

David Coleman Bailey

2004

ASHEVILLE-BUNCOMBE LIBRARY SYSTEM

SIX

AN ADMIRABLE VANTAGE POINT

While the Charlestonians stopped along the Swannanoa, the taproot from which the city's social oak tree grew was planted just above it on a majestic knoll with a circumferential view that included the town itself.

Where Main Street terminated at the river, migration of South Carolinians from the south and Scotch-Irish from the east reached a common ground. The choice part was a tract of 640 acres, a grant under date of August 7, 1797, from the state to William Stewart. Among these veterans of the war and the 436-mile Great Wagon Road to the Yadkin, Daniel Smith had married Mary Davidson of the original settler's family.

Their first child was a healthy boy who arrived on June 14, 1787, the first white child born west of the Blue Ridge. This infant was named James and he grew up in a sturdy manner. He married Polly Patton, whose family was starting to play a leading role in development of the town, now beginning to emerge by stretching north to the top of the hill and beyond. And they were the parents of nine children who lived to maturity and married, except for one who died a bachelor.

Thus began the career of James McConnell Smith, a natural entrepreneur. At this time, there was need of competent merchants who could bring in a broader supply of well made goods from producers in other states. Properly managed, a general store should prove successful. Smith filled that need with a shrewd eye of prices and values. He also understood the value of land. On July 24, 1817, now passed his 30th birthday, he purchased 8½ acres on Main Street near the three-year-old Eagle and added an acre the following year by purchase from the proprietor.

On February 16, 1821, he acquired nearly 30,000 acres in the county at favorable prices and now he began seeing the Eagle as a possible competitor. Over the next couple of years, he was making plans for another hotel on the other side of the square. Work began in late 1824, ten years after the Eagle had opened its doors, and the following year, the Buck was in business as well. Together, they became a center of conversation and information about the turnpike project. The next year, word came there from Raleigh that a charter had been granted for that purpose.

On November 13, Smith acquired 123 acres of the noble knoll from his father, a tract to which 465 acres were added on March 31, 1830. As soon as the turnpike was seen approaching on its route to this site, the point at which it would connect with Main, he invested heavily in the turnpike company. Traffic began increasing but it soon became apparent that there was a serious drawback. At river crossings, travelers found themselves coping with perils of ferries only moderately changed from those described by Bishop Asbury.

Bridge building was an art not yet acquired in the mountains and years passed with fervent complaints and no results. Finally, Smith decided to act himself. Where Sams Ferry had been in operation, he had the first mountain bridge constructed late in 1833. Like the turnpike, it was chartered as a monopoly, with the county fixing toll rates, and like the ferry operation it replaced, they were exactly the same as those authorized and charged in 1801. It continued in operation until damaged by flood in 1852 when it had to be repaired.

By then, James M. Smith had become a wealthy man...and a man of many parts. In time, he would be referred to as "the merchant prince of Buncombe."

The time of the new bridge marked the beginning of social aspirations. James Silk Buckingham, an English visitor of the 1840s, described the town as "encircled by ranges of mountains of varied heights and distances, with swelling slopes and delicious valleys, such as one might travel a thousand miles without finding surpassed in beauty." On August 16, 1852, shortly before the flood, Zeb Vance wrote to his fiancee: "Our village is very gay at this time. The South Carolinians are crowding both our hotels to overflowing. The streets sound with the noise of carriage wheels from morning until night." Mollie Carrie Gudger was writing to her niece that she had observed "a good many people riding out" from the town "some in buggies and some on horseback in riding costumes looking quite like city folks and city life."

Around 1848, Mr. Smith decided to build a substantial town house on the knoll. Smith & McDowell, his big store, was prospering in partnership with his son-in-law, William Wallace McDowell. Among other things, they were catering to the female interests with somewhat fashionable clothing and accessories, along with fancy foods and delicacies and other specialty items for the growing carriage trade.

In town, the Smith residence was a comfortable place. Rooms were spacious and well appointed. It had a nice garden, both flower and vegetable with attractive accoutrements, an orchard, and several outbuildings. Now he wanted a place more "in the country" where he would have plenty of elbow room. Here he built a rectangular structure of solid brick with interior woodwork in Greek Revival style. Its double-pile, five-bay plan featured a double-tier porch semi-engaged beneath an extension of its main gable roof. Walls were laid in Flemish bond.

Times were good. The Revolutionary War and its naval subsidiary, the War of 1812, were over and great civil strife was still on the horizon. When Smith died on May 18, 1856, he had already completed his various commercial enterprises. He was the owner of a large and thriving barn along with herds of horses and other livestock. He had a prosperous tannery and a profitable slaughterhouse whose business was expanding. He also owned a number of large lots in various parts of town.

And there was another measure of his wealth. At the century's halfway mark, his property accounting listed 44 slaves, a remarkable number for the mountain economy, and this figure may have grown somewhat prior to his demise.

***

NEW BAND UNIFORMS—First of the 100 new uniforms ordered for Lee Edwards High School Band by the Dad's Club are modeled here by Lois Smith and Bill Melton. The musicians' uniforms are red and the majorettes' outfits are white. Jan 5 - 54

The Music Men

The Story of Professional Gospel Quartet Singing

By BOB TERRELL

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Small Town Doings

All promoters of gospel music during the postwar heyday of quartet singing were not giants like W. B. Nowlin, J. G. Whitfield, Lloyd Orrell, and Wally Fowler, who promoted multiple cities. Some were local men who were satisfied to bring great singing to their hometowns every month or two—with the additional hope of turning a dollar or two.

Typical of these was an automobile salesman named Riley Smith, who promoted City Auditorium in Asheville, North Carolina.

Asheville was a town of about 50,000 people located in the heart of the beautiful Blue Ridge Mountains. It was a tourist mecca where folks came to soak up the beauty and quietness of the hills.

In the early 1930s when he was a young man, Riley Smith had a gasoline station in Leicester, outside Asheville. Through the late 1930s and the 1940s, Riley, a baritone, sang in local quartets, including the Sebren Quartet, organized and operated by George W. Sebren, who owned a local bookstore which handled the latest songbooks of Stamps-Baxter, Vaughan, Tennessee, and other publishers. Sebren's largest claim to fame, however, was that he had trained and sung in the very first professional male quartet ever formed in 1910.

Riley headed the rationing board in Asheville during World War II, a thankless job, of course, but Riley Smith was a popular man because he was so thoroughly honest.

And that trait of character was in his favor when, in 1951, he decided to promote monthly gospel music shows in the Asheville City Auditorium.

paid them $1,100 to sing, and he still has the cancelled check, endorsed by R. W. Blackwood two months before his death in the airplane crash in Clanton, Alabama.

The weather was as bad that night as it ever had been for one of Riley's singings. It rained tremendously hard, and a cold wind blew, turning some of the rain to icy slush, even though it was late May. But late in the afternoon people began arriving in droves for the singing. The front seats went quickly, and then the rest of the auditorium filled up until the Asheville Fire Department said "No more." There were still hundreds of people lined up at the ticket windows, a line stretching more than a block from the auditorium.

The Statesmen and Blackwood Brothers were at their best that night. They entertained royally, and it was after midnight that people began to leave. Amazingly, there were still people waiting outside, and as six people left, the fire department let six come in.

Riley always ended his All-Night Singings by 3 o'clock in the morning, but this night they sang longer, and the crowd stayed. It was the last time Asheville ever saw R. W. Blackwood and Bill Lyles, except on television a month later when the Blackwood Brothers won Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts.

Acoustics were great in the Asheville City Auditorium. J. D. Sumner and Big Chief Wetherington could actually shake the house with their low bass notes, magnified by an exceptional amplifying system.

"I loved working with those groups," Riley said. "I didn't go into promotions to make money, and to tell the honest truth, I didn't know I was going to make a nickel, because I had made very little money singing. But I could see this thing was something people wanted, and in order to do what they wanted, I had to have money. I had to charge admission, but I kept it as low as possible."

After less than a year, Riley realized the promotions were getting too large for him to handle alone; so he asked a lifelong friend, Dan Foster, to help him. From then on, Foster ran the front of the building—the ticket sellers and door men—and Riley ran the back end—the singing itself, the talent, the problems with the singers. The two split any profits, and on the average they made $250 to $300 per singing.

Riley continued to sell automobiles the whole time he was promoting.

"I had no real problems with any of the singers until the very last," he said. "The easiest people to work with were the Goodman Family, Bobby Strickland and the Crusaders, the Harmoneers, people like that.

James Blackwood was good to work with. Urias LeFevre was a bit fiery at times, but I didn't have deep-down problems with him. I'd tell him what I felt and he'd say, 'Well, you talk pretty straight, don't you?' and I'd say, 'That's the only way I know to do it.' Hovie and I would laugh at each other and still argue. All of this was a wonderful experience for me."

Riley ran his singings on a sound business basis. "When I made a deal with any of the quartets," he said, "I promised them so much money, and they knew they would get that money. The whole secret of the thing was that I kept it on a straight basis. Then it worked out fine with all groups. I didn't deal under the table with anybody.

"Some," he said, "were harder to work with, due to the fact that they got to the point that they wanted to put on a show instead of singing. Hovie and the Statesmen started it.

"They also started another problem," Riley said. "My people came to hear the singing, but some of the groups wanted to preach instead of sing. Hovie started that, too, and I couldn't stand it because I knew my people came to hear the singing. They could go to church the next morning—Sunday—and hear the finest preaching in the land for free. They didn't pay $1.20 to come to a singing and be preached to."

Riley finally reached the end of his rope, and it was the team that brought about the end.

"They framed up on me," Riley said. "The Statesmen and the Blackwood Brothers reached the point that they didn't want to come to Asheville unless they came together, and I couldn't afford that. Their prices were too high for our town, and I didn't want to go up on my ticket prices.

"I told Hovie and James that I would not continue to promote them," Riley said, "if that was the way they were going to do."

The three, along with Urias LeFevre, sat in City Auditorium until 4:30 one Sunday morning trying to hash out this problem.

"We couldn't get straightened out," Riley said. "They were bent on doing it the way they wanted to, and I couldn't do it that way. Finally, Hovie said, 'Well, we'll just come in here with another promoter.' And that's what happened."

The next time the Statesmen and Blackwood Brothers came to Asheville, Wally Fowler promoted the singing. He rented the City Auditorium and went head-to-head with Riley Smith.

Asheville had been a good town for gospel music, but it was not large enough to support two promoters. Something had to give.

Riley went to Ralph James, manager of the auditorium. "I don't

He tried his hand at promotion once in 1949, paying Hovie Lister and the Statesmen Quartet $75 to sing at Vance School in West Asheville. He had known Hovie Lister since Hovie was a pup. Riley remembered Hovie's dad, W. Hermon Lister, picking Hovie up and putting him on the piano bench to play for the Lister Brothers Quartet in Greenville, South Carolina. Greenville was just down the mountain, sixty miles from Asheville.

Riley attended all the local singings: the big ones at Alexander Baptist Church outside Asheville where London Parris, Rex Nelon, Kermit Jamerson, Eldridge Fox, and other good singers learned to perform. He had attended singings in a large room above Liggett's Drug Store in downtown Asheville, and had sung in the Superior Courtroom of the Buncombe County Courthouse.

No one had ever tried to promote in the 2,500-seat Asheville City Auditorium, but Riley had a notion he could make it if he followed Wally Fowler's All-Night Singing format.

Riley had his own quartet by this time, called the Tonemasters, and his piano player was Bob Robinson, who went on to a measure of fame with the LeFevres and the Sons of Song.

The first two times Riley promoted City Auditorium in 1951, he didn't have enough people to sing to; so he gathered everyone in front of the auditorium and told them his problem. "I can save the price of the auditorium," he said, "by not opening the doors." The people understood, got their money back and seemed to be satisfied. Riley paid the talent out of his own pocket.

On the third program, he drew enough people to break even, and told his friends, "Thank the Good Lord, this things's going to go."

In 1951 he contracted top talent for $125 to $175 per quartet. He charged $1.20 for adult admission, and while he promoted for eight years, through 1958, and the price of talent increased several times, he never increased the price of his tickets.

Riley always used his own quartet, the Tonemasters, on the program, and usually split $75 among the members, excluding himself. Then he tried to have two or three top drawing cards. The Statesmen, the Speer Family, and the Harmoneers were top draws in Asheville, and if he could get the three for one program, he knew he could fill the house—almost, anyway.

The Sunshine Boys were dynamite, and they combined well with the Foggy River Boys, the LeFevres, and the Tonemasters. The Swanee River Boys, Bobby Strickland and the Crusaders, the Goodman Family, and the Homeland Harmony were good draws in Asheville.

The Swanee River Boys were different. They sang a soft and perfect harmony. There were other different groups, too, that Riley used occasionally, like the Jordanaires, the Crossroads Quartet of Arthur Smith, and the Chuck Wagon Gang.

"The Statesmen were the biggest drawing group I had," Riley said, "but I liked the Sunshine Boys and the Rangers Quartet. The Rangers were wonderful. Vernon and Arnold Hyles were terrific. They were singers, just like the Sunshine Boys. They knew what singing was all about. They'd come on stage singing and go off singing.

"The Swanee River Boys were solid singers, no question. You could hear a pin drop when they sang. They didn't waste their time talking; they sang. If they tried to talk, they fell flat; they had to sing—and everybody listened. They sang that soft harmony that lulled a crowd—and then the Statesmen would come out and knock the people right out of their seats. The Statesmen could do anything they pleased on stage and pull it off. They were great showmen; they knew exactly what a crowd wanted—and they gave it.

"And I'll tell you something else," Riley said, "Ace Richman and Eddie Wallace of the Sunshine Boys were great talent. They knew how to entertain a crowd."

Asheville's All-Night Singings drew people from all over the region. Coal miners came from West Virginia and Kentucky. People came from all over the Carolinas, from Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama. They came for the singing and for sightseeing. During the day they drove around the mountains and looked at the scenery and enjoyed the coolness, and at night they thrilled to the singing.

By 1953, City Auditorium filled almost every month for Riley Smith's All-Night Singings. He paid quartets top dollar. He has cancelled checks that show that he paid these amounts for some of his singings in 1953:

February 28—Revelaires (with Big Jim Waits and Dan Huskey) $350; Blue Ridge Quartet, $350; Speer Family, $300; Foggy River Boys, $325.

March 29—Blackwood Brothers, $450; Sunshine Boys, $350; Blue Ridge, $300. The Blue Ridge Quartet, of Spartanburg, South Carolina, didn't have as far to come as the Sunshine Boys (from Atlanta) and the Blackwood Brothers (from Memphis).

April 25—Crusaders, $325; Homeland Harmony, $350; Sunshine Boys, $375.

His biggest night came on May 29, 1954, when he finally brought in the team, the Blackwood Brothers and the Statesmen together. He think what's happening is fair to me," Riley said. "I've been promoting this building every month for eight years, and suddenly you let another promoter come in against me. It isn't fair. No two programs—the same program—can operate successfully here in the same month every month."

"I realize that," Ralph said, "but I don't know what we can do about it. Under the law, I can't deny the auditorium to the other people. If I were you, I'd talk to Weldon Weir."

Weir was the Asheville city manager, a man who could get things done, but in this case his hands were tied.

"I live here," Riley told Weldon. "I'm a taxpayer. I've promoted this building every month for eight years, and I've never been late with a payment to the city. I can't see why you can't give me some protection, and I certainly can't see why you can't prevent putting him on in front of me."

"Well, you know what the story is," Weldon said.

"No, I don't," Riley said. "Tell me what it is."

"By law," Weldon said, "there's only one thing you can do: put on better programs."

The double promotions damaged Asheville greatly as a gospel music town. Neither promotion drew well. After a few promotions, the Statesmen and Blackwood Brothers were singing to half houses, and soon they were not coming to Asheville anymore. Riley's crowds went down, too, and he had to give up his promotions.

J. Bazzel Mull, the blind Knoxville preacher-promoter, took Asheville over and promoted for a while. Then the Kingsmen Quartet promoted for a few years.

But no one matched the promotional success of Riley Smith in the heyday of his promotions.

In retrospect, Riley said, recently, "I don't know why my singings were so successful. Nobody could understand how I could fill the auditorium when nothing else would. I don't know, either, unless it was the way I handled it, the way I felt in my heart about it. I was sincere, and the Good Lord was just good enough to me to let me do it. When I advertised groups, they came, and they were the best in the business."

For a while, Asheville was a great singing town. Then, like so many others, it died. And today it's hard to gather a crowd there for a gospel show.

The Asheville (N. C.) Times, Friday, October 26, 1951

CITY AUDITORIUM – OCT. 27 – 8 P. M.

SWANEE RIVER BOYS

FEATURED ON

RILEY SMITH'S ALL-NIGHT SINGING

Radio and Television Stars of WLW, Cincinnati

Also Featured Will Be The Following:

CRUSADERS QUARTET
Radio and Recording Artists of WBRC, Birmingham, Ala.

STAMPS GOSPEL FOUR
Radio Artists of Birmingham, Ala.

THE MELODYAIRES
Radio Artists of WESC, Greenville, S. C.

THE HI-NEIGHBOR QUARTET
of WAIM, Anderson, S. C.

THE TONEMASTERS
of WWNC, Asheville, N. C.

ADMISSION—Adults $1.20, Children 60c, Tax Incl.

Tickets on Sale: Barefoot-Tatum, Newberry's Music Dept., Wilkins Corner, and Palace Pharmacy, West Asheville.

At the annual All-Day Sing for 1953 the Gospel Quartet Contest was re-instated and the winners of the Championship title and first place money were the Tonemasters, of Ashville, North Carolina, pictured above. Ruel Thomas, Director of the Sing is handing them their check while two of the judges, Keifer Vaughn, left, and Vep Ellis, right, look on approvingly.

The all-day-singin'-and-dinner-on-the-grounds held each year in Renfro Valley on the first Sunday in August carries on a tradition of long standing in Rural America, dating back to the publication of the first book, The Bay Psalm Book, in 1640. A part of one of the psalms it contains is given below and is from the copy of this rare old book in our Pioneer Museum.

Asheville Citizen-Times

State, Region/10A
Capital Notebook/10A
Flashback/12A

Mountains

☐ Buncombe ☐ Madison

Sunday, Feb. 3, 1991

Gospel Quartets Used To Take To The Road To Spread The Word Of Music

The first professional gospel quartet was the James W. Vaughan Quartet of 1910, organized and trained by a Texan named George W. Sebren for the Vaughan Music Co. in Lawrenceburg, Tenn. It consisted of Sebren, Charles W. Vaughan, Ira T. Foust and Joe M. Allen. They were paid by the Vaughan company and traveled around the South, singing at conventions and peddling James W. Vaughan songbooks.

BOB TERRELL

The venture was so successful that in the 1920s there were at one time 16 Vaughan quartets on the road — and an equal number of Stamps quartets selling Stamps-Baxter songbooks. The original Vaughan quartet broke up after a few years, and in the late 1920s George W. Sebren moved to Asheville and opened the George W. Sebren Music Co. on Rankin Avenue.

He sold songbooks, regular books and magazines, and he dealt in used books and magazines. He'd trade with you. Folks had to scratch for a living in those days. Sebren taught a lot of local people to sing in the singing schools he ran in a building across Broadway from the Langren Hotel. The Sebren Quartet, which he formed sometime in the 1930s, always rehearsed in the music store on Rankin.

Riley Smith of Leicester met George Sebren in 1937 at one of the monthly singings in a big room above Liggett's Drug Store on Pack Square. He recalls Sebren as a good-sized man, maybe 6-feet tall, not heavy, blond-haired, well-dressed and a good singer. Sebren heard Riley sing that night and asked him to join the Sebren Quartet, replacing Bill McKinney at baritone.

"Once a month we'd have a singing over Liggett's Drug Store," Riley Smith said the other day. "It was a big room filled with chairs, and usually there would be 50 or so people for the singing. Sometimes we would hold singings in the courtroom of the Buncombe County Courthouse. I've seen the courtroom full of people for these singings.

"Nobody made any money singing. They'd usually take up a love offering for us and sometimes we'd make enough for gas and something to eat. I never thought about making money singing, not even when I promoted singing in the Asheville City Auditorium."

Riley Smith's All-Night Singings in City Auditorium were monthly attractions from 1951 to 1958 that often filled the building and brought the best quartets of the day to town. By then, Sebren was dead and Riley had his own quartet, the Tonemasters.

Things were different at those later singings. Voices were amplified until they filled the building, and the booming bass voices of J.D. Sumner and Big Chief Wetherington rattled the rafters.

When Clyde Williams and Riley Smith were with the Sebren Quartet, they sang a song called "The Walking Song" in which the quartet got down in the audience and walked over the building singing, each man going in a different direction. "As long as we could hear the piano," Riley said, "We sang the song."

The Sebren Quartet became so good and so popular it sang all over the Carolinas, Tennessee and Georgia, usually riding in Sebren's car. He had a Chevrolet during the mid-'30s, but Riley Smith, a car salesman by trade, sold him a new 1938 Nash Lafayette in which the quartet traveled for years.

"Sebren was the world's worst driver," Riley recalled. "It's a wonder he didn't kill us all. He zig-zagged all over the road, and usually drove on the wrong side."

Sebren drove the quartet to Statesville one Sunday morning to sing that afternoon, and on the way down a Highway Patrolman pulled him over for erratic driving.

"Wonder what that feller wants?" Sebren said when he heard the siren.

"Where you fellows from?" the officer asked when Sebren pulled over.

"I'm from Asheville, North Carolina," Sebren said. "This is the Sebren Quartet. We're going to sing in Statesville this afternoon."

"I'll tell you right now," the patrolman said, "you're not going to sing anywhere this afternoon if you keep driving like this. You're going to kill yourself and all of these other men."

Sebren pointed to a gold star on his windshield. "See that gold star? I got that for never having an accident."

"Well, there's a first time for everything, and you're gonna have one down here if you don't shape up," the officer said. "I'm going to let you go, but I want you to drive on the right side of the road. I'm going to follow you and make sure you do."

Later, on a trip to South Carolina, Sebren passed a car, cut in too quick and hooked the other man's front bumper.

"Wonder what in the world he means!" Sebren exclaimed, fighting for control of his car.

"You hit his bumper," one of the singers said.

"Well, he shouldn't'a been over where he was!" Sebren exclaimed.

"It's a wonder any of the quartets survived those early days — but they did," Riley said.

Riley Smith All-Night Singing Will Feature Tobacco Market Opening

A Riley Smith all-night singing will be held in the City Auditorium Saturday night with no admission charges.

This special program has been arranged by Smith in cooperation with officials of the Asheville Tobacco Market as a feature of the opening of the tobacco season and the festival to be held on Friday.

RILEY SMITH

The market opens at 9 a. m. Monday, Nov. 30, with the opening of the warehouse and the schedule of sales to be decided by a drawing Friday or Saturday.

According to Smith, all quartets in Western North Carolina are invited to enter the singing.

A contest will be held, with silver cups being awarded to the first and second place quarters.

Mayor Earl Eller will welcome the group Saturday. The program Saturday night is planned especially for tobacco farmers and their families and friends, although the general public is invited, also.

Smith pointed out that quartets may take part in the singing without entering the contest if they wish to do so.

He asks that all groups planning to take part write him at Matthew Motor Sales or Radio Station WWNC.

All warehouse managers will also attend the all-night singing.

They will be introduced at the time Mayor Eller welcomes the group.

Managers are James E. Walker, Walter Walker and Bernard Walker, all of Bernard Walker Warehouses; Fred Cockfield and James Stewart of Planters Warehouses; Carley J. Adams and L. J. Hill of Dixie and Big Burley Warehouses, and Max Roberts of Carolina Warehouse.

The tobacco season in Asheville will be officially opened with a parade through downtown Asheville on Friday.

This parade will also open the merchants' Christmas season.

Save these!!

YOU TELL ON YOURSELF

You tell on yourself by the friends you seek,
By the manner in which you speak,
By the way you employ your leisure time,
By the use you make of dollars and dimes;
You tell what you are by the things you wear,
By the spirit in which you burdens bear,
By the kind of things at which you laugh,
By the records you play on the phonograph.

You tell what you are by the way you walk,
By the things of which you delight to talk,
By the manner in which you bear defeat,
By so simple a thing as how you eat.
By the books you choose from the well-filled shelf;
In these ways and more, you tell on yourself;
So there's really no particle of sense
In an effort to keep up false pretense.

Clipped from Bulletin of First Church, Scotland Neck.

A Poem to Read

God loves you and God loves me,
He loves the ones across the sea.
Around the world does God's love go,
But all the people do not know.
What can I do? Why I can tell
My nearest friends I know quite well!
And I can give and I can pray
That all the others far away
May know that God has sent his Son
To bring his love to every one.

HATTIE BELL ALLEN

THE TONEMASTERS

Are Available For

Singing Conventions - - - Concerts

AND

ALL PUBLIC APPEARANCES

WRITE RADIO STATION WWNC

OR

RILEY W. SMITH

61 DUNWELL AVE. WEST ASHEVILLE, N. C.

DIAL 6373

MAR 22 1949

Riley

TONE - MASTERS

Theme

"SING A LITTLE SONG"

AND

"The Last Great Roundup"

RILEY W. SMITH

THE LAST GREAT ROUNDUP

J. WELMAN GOSNELL

1. ARE YOU READ-Y FOR THE JUDGE-MENT DAY MY BROTH-ER? WHEN THE SAV-IOR CALLS
2. ARE YOU READ-Y SIS-TER FOR THE JUDGE-MENT MORN-ING? WE MUST ALL CROSS O-

WHAT WILL YOUR AN-SWER BE? COME TO JES-US NOW AND HAVE YOUR SINS FOR-GIVE-VER JOR-DAN BY AND BY. ONE BY ONE WE'RE NEAR-ING DEATHS DARK CHILL-Y WAT-

CHORUS

EN. HE IS WAIT - ING AND WILL SET CAPT - IVE FREE.
ERS. THAT WILL BE THE LAST GREAT ROUND-UP IN THE SKY. THERE'S A GREAT AND FIN-AL ROUND-UP DAY A-COM-ING. WHY NOT COME AND LET THE SAV-IOR MAKE YOU WHOLE?

THERE WE'LL JOIN THE SAINTS AND PRAISE THE LAMB FOR-EV-ER. SAFE FROM DANG-ER

CODA

SHELT-ERED IN THE MAST-ERS FOLD. ---- SAFE-LY IN THE MAST-ERS FOLD

SMITH & GOSNELL, Owners

Sing a Little Song

L. R. A.

Copyright, 1943, by Lee Roy Abernathy.

LEE ROY ABERNATHY

Riley Smith: All-Night Sings

In almost every family, you'll find a trade or trait that is dominant throughout. A certain sector of the Smiths brought that glorious sound of Gospel music to one of the highest peaks.

A local automobile salesman who had a gasoline station in Leicester had been a part of local quartets in the 1930's and 1940's and also headed the rationing board in Asheville during WWII.

Riley Smith was a man who enjoyed Gospel music to the fullest extent; his favorite program format was that of Walley Fowler.

Riley organized his own quartet, the Tonemasters and promoted them big-time when he started the Riley Smith All-Night Gospel Sing inside Asheville's City Auditorium.

In 1951, top talent was contracted for $125.00 - $175.00 with adult admission set at $1.20. There were great groups such as the Speers, the Sunshine Boys and the Harmoneers who were favorites, but Riley Smith said the Statesmen Quartet was "the biggest draw".

Residents of Western North Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia and Alabama fell in love with Riley Smith's All-Night Singings.

They were loved so well, the coal miners from West Virginia and Kentucky drove for miles to get their ears full. The biggest night of all was May 29, 1954 when the big team came, the Statesmen and the Blackwood Brothers.

The weather was bad midday, but around starting-time the auditorium was filled to capacity. Top talent was paid $1,100 to sing.

Riley Smith was a man who lived to please his crowds and while the singings got too large for one man alone, Riley got Dan Foster to run the ticket sales while he took care of the front stage.

Smith (behind microphone) with the Friendly Five.

Riley Smith was a local man and knew what Western North Carolina loved and desired to hear; that's why he did so well in his promotions of the All-Night Gospel Sings which lasted until 3:00 AM in the great city of Asheville, NC.

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES, ASHEVILLE, N. C.
Sunday, April 2, 1950

RILEY W. SMITH of Asheville proudly holds the rainbow trout he enticed out of Lake Lure last Wednesday. It went well over 17 inches and weighed two pounds. Guy Silvers, also of this city, aided in the landing by slipping the net under it. Smith was using a fly rod and fishing with red worms.

(61 Dunwell Ave.)

IN PACIFIC

RUPERT BAIRD SMITH

Smith of Asheville, a fireman third class aboard the survey ship USS Sumter, is shown as he looked out of the porthole of his ship during more peaceful times for the fleet than now. The young sailor who enlisted in the navy at the recruiting station here about two years ago, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Smith of 70 Nevada avenue. Another son is in the navy, attached to a unit in waters around Iceland.

Asheville Times December 8, 1941

Smith Uses Wit And Skill In Carving Little Figures

For some 20 years, W. P. Smith, who lives just off the Deaverview Road, has been making little gadgets with his pocket knife.

Handicapped by the loss of his legs, Smith has depended upon his skill in carving and his wit in designing curious little figures for a major part of his living. He does most of the work with his pocket knife, a large white-handled job with blades of first class metal, but he does have a band saw and drill press to aid him in speeding up some of the work.

His most successful figures are a bearded old man in a slouch hat and blue shirt with dark trousers. The figure itself is carved from balsa wood and sometimes, but not always the clothing is made by Mrs. Smith. The old man has a companion figure of an old woman in a sunbonnet. Both are extremely lifelike in appearance even to the carved faces with latern jaws.

Among the most popular of the smaller objects Smith makes is a high standing rooser fashioned from a twig with intersecting limbs. The tail feathers are cleverly split from the twig and the legs and feet are fashioned from forking limbs. The result is an amazingly perky little rooster, with his feathers ruffled and his head high. A bit of red on the comb helps the illusion.

Smith says he gets a lot of fun out of his carving and makes it pay as well. He has found through long years of work that the best way to handle the business is to get the orders in advance. He does this by showing samples and actually booking the orders.

"In the past I have made up a stock of some of the things I thought would go good and when they did not sell I was stuck with them," he said. "Now I have all I can do keeping up with my orders."

MAKING LITTLE FIGURES from his own designs, W. P. Smith, of the Deaverview Road section, a cripple for many years, manages to make a pretty good living. He is holding one of his favorite designs, a bearded old man. (Citizen-Times photo.)

Asheville Citizen September 17, 1950

He Carves a Way of Life

Mountain Life and Work No. 3, 1958

CHAD DRAKE

THE "INDEPENDENT MOUNTAIN MAN" is a proverbial type, but if you want to meet him in person, go visit W. P. Smith in West Asheville, North Carolina.

Smith's hand-carved roosters, turkeys, and character dolls have been sold by the thousands to people living in all parts of the country. He comes as close to being an "old-time whittler" as anyone you'll find in the mountains today.

As you watch Smith work, you are aware of what "craftsmanship" means, for there is never a false stroke with the knife, nor is there any delay in trying to "figure out the pattern." It takes surprisingly few deft cuts to turn a peach tree limb into as perky a rooster as ever crowed.

With his knife Smith has carved himself a way of life that has left him proud and independent, rather than the welfare case he might have been.

You see, Smith lost both legs under the wheels of a train when he was a young man. Shut off from the normal active occupations that a strapping mountain youth might have entered, Smith faced the prospect of selling pencils on a street corner—or of turning his pocket knife into an instrument of freedom. He chose to use his knife.

Smith developed his carving slowly. Entirely self-taught, he whittled toys and trinkets for the neighborhood children. Word of his skill spread, and someone brought him a small rooster carved from wood in Scandinavia and asked him to reproduce something like it.

The carver tried. Over and over he sought to duplicate the rooster, but he could never get it right. Finally, he threw away the copies in disgust, and fumed his way out to the garden by his home. Later, on his way back to the house, he looked up and saw a rooster from his own flock perched on top of a brush pile and clearly outlined against the sky.

Grabbing a dried limb from the brush pile, he rushed back to his shop and began to carve. The finished model satisfied him completely, and apparently it is appreciated by craft lovers as well, for he has sold thousands of similar carvings since.

Mr. Smith has developed a wide variety of carvings. There are hens to go with the proud roosters, and turkeys made from pine cones, to go with the other barnyard citizens.

W. P. SMITH SHOWS HIS GRANDSON HOW TO CARVE

He also carves an old mountain couple, clever dolls which are clothed by his wife.

"I patterned them after real people, the woman after my grandmother and the man after a friend of mine who lived near here," he says. Both figures are authentically garbed.

Mr. Smith is all business when it comes to carving. He goes down to the basement of his house every morning, just as regularly as a man going to his office, and he works steadily through the day. He carves models according to orders and his mood.

Every step in the production of his carvings is carried through by Smith except the gathering of the raw materials. Youngsters in the neighborhood do that for him. He uses a wide variety of woods that grow around his home on the outskirts of Asheville.

In the shop all the tools are placed at a low level that will be convenient for Mr. Smith. Fortunately his accident left him enough of his legs so that he can still get around without help.

Thousands of people have seen Mr. Smith carving in his booth at the Craftsman's Fair each year. There is about his carvings a simplicity and sprightliness that mark them as being part of the universal folk culture of our age.

To Mr. Smith they represent far more than bits of folk art, however. In his shop, surrounded by his carvings, he says:

"Folks sometimes say I'm crazy for not going on welfare because of my legs. But I can't see it that way at all. As long as I can carve I'm free as this fellow."

And he holds up a carved rooster whose proud gaze looks the world straight in the eye. #####

Asheville teacher of year

John Courtlakis/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Hall Fletcher first-grade teacher Rocko Smucker is named Asheville City Schools Teacher of the Year at the Asheville Renaissance Hotel on Thursday.

Rocko Smucker has this simple question for his colleagues: "Are we producing kids that can/will be participants in a democratic society or are we simply producing a worker mentality?"

The first-grade Hall Fletcher Elementary School teacher had a good enough answer to his own question to win Asheville City Schools' teacher of the year for 2005-06.

Smucker has been in education for 32 years.

Asheville Citizen September 16, 2005

John Coutlakis/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Rocko Smucker, a Hall Fletcher Elementary first-grade educator and Asheville's 2005-06 teacher of the year, makes a few remarks Thursday at a banquet at the Asheville Renaissance Hotel, where he was presented with cash and gifts by Robby Russell, back, of Wachovia Bank.

Smucker's technological innovations earns him Asheville teacher of the year

Hall Fletcher educator aims to prepare young students for information age

By Clarke Morrison
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — Rocko Smucker, a first-grade teacher at Hall Fletcher Elementary School known for his innovative use of technology in the classroom, was named Thursday night the Asheville City Schools 2005-06 teacher of the year.

Smucker, who has taught in the city school system for 26 years, was chosen from among the nine teachers of the year at the district's individual schools. He and the other contenders were honored at a banquet at the Asheville Renaissance Hotel.

"We're in the information age," Smucker said. "Students who don't have the technology at home or school will be on the periphery of society." He added that schools must create producers of technology and not just consumers.

Other finalists were Mike Davis of Asheville High School, Melody Markert of Asheville Middle School, Kathy Blossfield of Asheville City Schools Preschool, Cindy Srijayanta of Claxton Elementary, Martha Hayes of Dickson Elementary, Vicki Hall of Jones Elementary, Larry Hardin of Randolph Learning Center and Jerri Lutz of Vance Elementary.

> "(Rocko Smucker) is leading the way for total integration of technology, literacy and math in primary grades. His goal is to bring the system, region, state and nation into the 21st century with technological integration for the very young."
>
> VICKI DINEEN, Asheville City Schools' executive director of elementary education

"Rocko has implemented amazing things with primary grade-level technology," said Vicki Dineen, the district's executive director of elementary education. "He is leading the way for total integration of technology, literacy and math in the primary grades. His goal is to bring the system, region, state and nation into the 21st century with technological integration for the very young."

The selection committee used the following criteria in choosing the district's top teacher: experience, continuing education, participation in school-based and community activities, innovative approaches to curriculum, an extensive portfolio and a 20-minute interview.

Please see TEACHER on C3

Continued from C1

Smucker asked the selection committee, "Are we producing kids that can/will be participants in a democratic society, or are we simply producing a worker mentality? Will our students be capable of producing technology, not just consuming it?"

Smucker brings 32 years of experience to his classroom, including a number of innovative ventures like a first-/fourth-grade combination classroom in the mid-'90s and his current quest to have each fifth-grader at Hall Fletcher graduate with a certification in technology.

"We must have a really serious discussion about what we want to do in education over the next 10 years," he said. "Students without access to integrated technology at home and at school may find themselves on the periphery of 21st-century society."

A certificate for a glass apple and a $1,000 award by program sponsor Wachovia Bank were presented to Smucker. Asheville City Schools also will award him a laptop computer, a professional development conference of his choice and tuition for enrollment in Leadership Asheville's 2006-07 class.

Smucker will now compete in the state's Western Region as part of North Carolina's Teacher of the Year program.

Asheville Citizen September 16, 2005

■ EDITORIALS

A pair of veteran teachers show how to properly invest in our children's future

Public education is not perfect. But it gets many knocks it does not deserve. One of those knocks is the caricature of the lazy teacher, granted tenure and doing little but punching the clock as retirement comes around.

While that caricature may be true in isolated cases, it can be ripped to shreds rather easily.

Case in point: The Buncombe County and Asheville City Teacher of the Year winners.

Kevin Baxter

Rocko Smucker

Kevin Baxter, a 25-year teaching veteran, was named Buncombe's teacher of the year last week. He has taught on four continents, and came to the Buncombe system after teaching a course at the University of San Diego called "Preventing Reading Difficulties in Young Children."

The third-grade teacher has a depth of knowledge about his profession and brings with it insights about his charges.

During his awards banquet, he noted, "Kids can smell a rat. They know when you're not being sincere in your pursuit of knowledge."

Fairview Elementary Principal Sheila Gibbs said, "I believe Mr. Baxter exemplifies the ideal teacher. He makes learning activities very interactive and thought-provoking."

Rocko Smucker, who teaches first grade at Hall Fletcher Elementary, was named the Asheville City Schools teacher of the year last week. A 26-year veteran of the city schools, he asks tough questions: "Are we producing kids who can/will be participants in a democratic society, or are we simply producing a worker mentality? Will our students be capable of producing technology, not just consuming it?"

He emphasizes the importance of technology, saying, "We must have a really serious discussion about what we want to do in education over the next 10 years. Students without access to integrated technology at home and at school may find themselves on the periphery of 21st-century society."

We're not surprised to hear tough questions and smart observations from Rocko; in the interest of full disclosure, we point out that he is a community member of this newspaper's editorial board. We can attest to having witnessed a teacher who cares about children and the hurdles they face in and out of school.

We're lucky to have teachers like Rocko Smucker and Kevin Baxter. And though they are exceptional, we would add that they aren't the exception. Teachers with this level of expertise and dedication are the rule, not the exception, and are still pulling through with their difficult task made more difficult by our rapidly changing society.

Asheville Citizen September 21, 2005

SECTION TWO
SAT., JUNE 12, 1971

Fire Stations Get Flags

The American flag will be flying from a new flagpole Saturday morning at the West Asheville Fire Station, in response to public requests that all nine stations display the flag. Final work on the West Asheville installation was done Friday by Fireman Philip Snelson, on ladder, Capt. C. E. Jones, left, and Fire Chief P. N. Ball. Chief Ball said headquarters and all stations now have flag displays except the Bartlette Street station, which is scheduled to be replaced. He said some kind of portable flag arrangement probably would be installed there. The flags are donated to the Fire Department. (Staff Photo by Malcolm Gamble)

FIRE STATION NO. 6
CITY OF
ASHEVILLE

Fixture at West Asheville Community Center set to retire today

Malvern Hills playground to be named after Snelson

By Eden Foster
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

WEST ASHEVILLE — According to Bill Cook, Philip Snelson has volunteered more hours than he has been paid for in his 34 years as a part-time recreation leader for the Asheville Parks and Recreation Department.

"I can't imagine how we are going to replace him. He knows everything about everything," said Cook, Snelson's supervisor. "He would do anything for anyone, and that's not just a cliché."

Today is Snelson's last day at the West Asheville Community Center, and a lot of people are going to miss him. "I've been trying to show him (Cook) stuff that needs to be done. But I'll probably end up leaving him a note, too," said Snelson, laughing.

His co-workers and friends are throwing a party for him, and they'll present him with a prestigious dedicated service award. But Cook and his other friends didn't believe a plaque on the wall was enough recognition, so they plan to surprise him with the fact that the new Malvern Hills playground will be named for him.

"Everybody loves him because of his dedicated service to the community," said Karen Lockmiller who works at the West Asheville Library, which used to be next door to the community center. "He's an extremely self-effacing person. He's going to be sorely missed, especially now that there are so many budget cuts. We love him out here. Anybody would," she said.

In addition to his work at the community center, Snelson is an active volunteer for many youth sports programs. He was a founding member of the West Asheville Girl's Softball Program in 1997. He's taught children how to play basketball. He's also worked to get older residents hot meals. And for more than a decade, he's organized West Fest events in West Asheville.

This is not Snelson's first retirement. He was a firefighter for more than 31 years before he retired about five years ago, working part time at the West Asheville Community Center and volunteering about two dozen hours a week the entire time.

"I've worked all my life," said Snelson. "You might say I'm a workaholic." When asked what he would do when he retires, he said, "My grandson wants to go fishing real bad. And my wife has a list of things for me to do around the house."

Steve Dixon/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Philip Snelson, a fixture in West Asheville, who has volunteered for years at the West Asheville Community Center, is retiring today. The new Malvern Hills playground will be named in Snelson's honor.

Asheville Citizen May 31, 2002

SNELSON

By Bill & Joyce Hamilton

May 31, 2002

There once was a fellow named Snelson
Who hailed from West Asheville.
In spite of the likes
Of Mike, Irby, Jeff, Bill, and yet another Bill
Snelson remained....in West Asheville.

Though those guys got occupied
With Basketball Leagues and Little League
And of course, playgrounds and the pool
SNELSON would say, "That's cool... but the Center must be open!!!"

Every day the piano plays
Folks come by to chat and sing
Ok, they're waiting on the hot lunch
But listen guys, I've got a hunch
We need to beat City Hall to the punch!

You've been spread so thin
I think I will fit in Opening the door, answering the phone,
Setting up chairs and locking up
After everyone is gone.

What??? You have no funds to pay
Listen guys, There's too much to be done.
I'll work without pay
If that's the only way
You see, West Asheville is my home.

STUFFED SHIRTS—Three West Asheville youths have a trick to play with passing motorists, who from the road below might be inclined to think the stuffed gentlemen above are the real thing. "We just wanted to watch the expressions on the people's faces when they passed by," was the explanation of Stacy Morgan, 13, who along with brother Roger Morgan, 16, and Jimmy Snipes, 13, placed the dummies in the treetops above Trotter place in West Asheville near their homes. To the sports minded passer-by recalling the dismal record compiled last year by the coach of his favorite football team, such a sight might remind him the football season is rapidly approaching. (Times Photo by Malcolm Gamble.)

MARCIE SNIPES, Susan Bradley and Mrs. Ralph Snipes (L-R), leader of Brownie Troop No. 101, Girl Scouts of America, are getting stocked up at Vance School for the G. S. cookie sale which starts today and will continue through March 22. Pisgah G. S. Council is sponsoring the sale of 32,000 boxes of half-vanilla and half chocolate sandwich - type cookies, thin chocolate mint cookies and plain butter wafers to finance more camping facilities for more girls.

PETERSON '55 HUNT '55

SOESBEE '54 October 23-1953 POLLITT must be '56

SPONSORS—Barbara Pollitt and Virginia (Ginger) Soesbee have been named band sponsors for the Lee Edwards-Salisbury High School game today at 8 p. m. in Memorial Stadium. June Peterson and Nancy Hunt were named team sponsors.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1944

NURSERY SCHOOL OPENS—The West Asheville Nursery school and the second extended school service unit opened at the bank building on the corner of Haywood road and Richmond street in West Asheville this morning. In the above picture are, left to right, Ann Elizabeth Ingle of 82 Herron avenue, Joseph Williams of 602 Haywood road, and Russell Soesbee of 41 Branning street. These children are in one of the rooms of the nursery school, which occupies the top floor of the building.

Bruce Emory Research

SUNDAY, MAY 10, 1931

GIRL IS WINNER OF ESSAY AWARD

Henny Spaanbroek Gets Junior Red Cross Loving Cup

Henny Spaanbroek, of the fifth grade at Vance School, was presented yesterday afternoon with the silver loving cup given each year for the best essay on "The Spirit of the Junior Red Cross" written by an Asheville student.

Miss Spaanbroek has been in this country only twenty-two months, coming with her family to Enka, where her father is connected with the American Enka Corporation. She has learned to speak English since entering school here.

Given by Violet Henry

The loving cup is given each year by Miss Violet Henry, former chairman of the Junior Red Cross Committee, and has been won three previous times by 'ark Avenue School, Biltmore, and Haw Creek. The cup will be held by Vance School until next year.

A. ,.. Allen presented the cup to Miss Spaanbroek t the annual meeting of the Junior Council of the Buncombe Chapter yesterday afternoon at David Millard High school. Honorable mention was given to Virginia Bright, of Biltmore School, and Helen Teague of Vance. Judges for the contest were M Mary Reade Smith, teacher of English at the Senior High school; Miss Mary Parr, executive secretary, Buncombe County Chapter; and Miss Ruth Wadman, director of war service, National Red Cross, Wash igton, D. C.

Reports Made

Reports were given from all of the schools on their work during the year which included candy and souvenirs sent to the wards they have adopted at Oteen; potted Lilies of the Valley sent to several en at Oteen; donations to the Orange Barrels; safety committees at the schools for small children at street crossings; food for undernourished children through the school lunch-rooms; motor service, and office service in the county headquarters.

Orange street school was presented with an exhibit of several letters from Germany many in return for a bird book sent from the Asheville school several months ago.

Trophy Winner

Henny Spaanbroek, student at Vance school, was the winner of the cup offered by the Junior Red Cross for the best essay written by an Asheville student on the "Spirit of the Junior Red Cross."

Awards Are Made

Graduation Ceremonies Held At Lee Edwards

Miss Dorothy Wilson and William Spake were given the annual good citizenship awards at graduation ceremonies for 324 Lee Edwards High School seniors last night in City Auditorium.

W. P. Griffin, school principal, presented the award to Miss Wilson on behalf of the Lee Edwards faculty. Richard Wood, president of the Asheville Rotary Club made the presentation to Spake.

Speakers for the graduation were James H. Miller, president of the senior class; John Fox, president of the National Honor Society; and William Spake, president of the student body.

The three talked on the subject, "Now Abideth Faith, Hope and Charity." Miller spoke on "Faith," Fox, on "Hope," and Spake, on "Charity."

Prior to the ceremonies, a half-hour concert was presented by the Lee Edwards Concert Band under the direction of Joseph DeNardo, director, and Frank Glenn, student director. The class was presented to Earl C. Funderburk, superintendent of city schools, by Griffin. Diplomas were awarded by Mrs. L. R. Hoffman, dean of girls and Donald D. Jones, dean of boys.

Invocation and benediction were pronounced by the Rev. A. J. Cox, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church.

Asheville Citizen-Times June 2, 1957

Chaplain Shipped Out

CAMP EVANS, South Vietnam — Chaplain William M. Spake humped the jungle with the line doggies in some of I Corps' roughest Indian country.

The penciled sign on his steel pot read "Gambler."

And he talked a trooper's language. No GI had to clean up his conversation or keep quiet about the girls he met in Taipeh on R&R when the 30-year-old clergyman was around.

To many of the paratroopers of the 1st Bn, 506th Inf, he lived and worked with, Captain Spake was exactly what an infantryman's chaplain should be.

To other men, apparently including some of the top 101st Abn Div and Pentagon brass, the mod padre went too far.

As a result, the Methodist minister is now a civilian, eased out of the Army because the United Methodist Church yanked their endorsement of Spake after Army officials in the Pentagon told the church about "alleged misconduct" on the chaplain's part.

Chaplain Spake, from Asheville, N. C., and a graduate of Duke University's divinity school, arrived in 'Nam last July and was assigned to the 1st of the 506th as battalion chaplain.

The padre said his first hint of trouble came in November when the brigade chaplain, Maj James E. Wright, "told me I'd have to get straightened out spiritually."

Chaplain Spake said he played cards with the troops and talked their language.

"I called myself 'the gambler' on the radio and he (Chaplain Wright) couldn't condone things like that," said the young minister.

CO Bauer
. . . "wasn't conventional"

But the Army obviously had decided it had had enough of the unconventional clergyman.

Article 32 investigation was launched.

A week after investigators said they couldn't find enough evidence to press charges against him, Chaplain Spake was nevertheless on his way Stateside to trade his green suit for civvies.

Many of the line doggies in his old battalion still don't know what happened to their chaplain.

One trooper who does know said he was sorry to see the padre go.

"Most people in the battalion thought a lot of Chaplain Spake," said the GI. "He'd go to the field with them and he was good at services. He was always on hand when he was needed for counseling."

Lt Col Charles Bauer, honcho of Chaplain Spake's battalion, said the young padre was good with the troops, "particularly the younger men.

"He wasn't reluctant to go in the field," added Bauer. "When it came time for an operation he was right there. You didn't have to go looking in the barracks for him."

He was different from the average chaplain, not the pious type. And he had a good rapport with the troops.

"The men who were looking for an establishment chaplain, the preacher type, probably got a little upset with him. His language was colorful," said the light colonel.

In January, said Chaplain Spake, he traded with another officer for a shotgun. "I stopped by the MP dayroom and asked if it was worth anything but nobody was interested." The padre said he later got rid of the shotgun.

About a month later, on Feb. 18, charges of illegal possession of a weapon and "misconduct while acting as a chaplain" were read to the clergyman. The misconduct charge said the chaplain "wrongfully and dishonorably" traded with, sold to and bought from enlisted men "for personal gain."

The chaplain admitted he traded with GIs, adding, "I was doing this as a means of fraternizing with the troops. I ran errands, bought things for scores of people and now and then I had something to sell.

Chaplain Spake said he was advised to resign from the Army "for the good of the service" but he refused. Instead, he put in a Mars call to the headquarters of his church and asked that they pull his ecclesiastical endorsement.

A chaplain must have the backing — or "ecclesiastical endorsement" — of his church in order to stay in uniform.

Church officials asked for a copy of the charges and after they saw them told the chaplain, "they couldn't help me because I got myself into this."

In a brief official statement to OW recently, a 101st Div spokesman would say only that "certain matters of alleged misconduct by Chaplain William M. Spake were brought to the attention of the commanding general. As a result of this information a fact-finding investigation was instigated."

What the cold statement didn't mention is that the Article 32 probe failed to produce enough evidence to back up the charges against Chaplain Spake.

But Chaplain Spake is convinced his mod approach to religion is at the root of his troubles.

"I think conventional religion is phony and ridiculous," he said. "Pietistic preaching is worthless. I was good with troops because I was no different from the rest of them and they knew it. I had a genuine communication with them. It wasn't just a slap on the back and see you on Sunday.

"The real job is done by living with them in the field, that's worth more to them," he added.

In his sermons, said Chaplain Spake, "I used modern language and symbols to get across the mythology of the Bible."

When Chaplain Spake left 'Nam he still hoped he'd be able to stay in the Army till the end of his enlistment, a year from now. Just before he left, officials at the division's rear base camp in Bien Hoa gave him an Air Medal he made with his battalion, as well as a Bronze Star for merit.

Chaplain Hoppy, acting like John Wayne and posing for the camera.

NORTH CAROLINA SOCIETY TO MEET HERE NEXT YEAR

Dr. Jennie L. Spaulding, West Asheville osteopathic physician, has returned from Charlotte where she attended the annual meeting of the North Carolina Osteopathic Society which convened at the Charlotte hotel Sunday. The meeting which was attended by the South Carolina Society, was very interesting and largely attended, Dr. Spaulding stated yesterday.

Dr. Spaulding, who has offices at 779-A Haywood road, is one of the few women physicians in the state. She plans to attend the meeting of the Middle Atlantic Osteopathic Association which is to be held in Washington next September. This association is composed of osteopathists in North and South Carolina, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

It was decided at the Charlotte gathering to hold the next meeting in Asheville in May, 1930. Many Asheville members of the society were present at the meeting, Dr. Spaulding stated.

Asheville Citizen May 13, 1929

West Asheville Lady Doctor Attends Meet

Dr. Jennie L. Spaulding, West Asheville osteopathic physician, who has offices at 779-A Haywood road, is attending the annual meeting of the North Carolina Osteopathic Society which convened at the Charlotte hotel, Charlotte, yesterday. The South Carolina Society is also attending the meeting, it has been announced.

Asheville Citizen May 26, 1929

THE SUNDAY CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

~~LADY~~ DOCTOR TO BEGIN 15TH. YEAR OF PRACTICE SOON

Dr. Jennie L. Spalding, West Asheville's only lady physician will begin her 15th year of practice in the city early this autumn. An osteopathic physician by profession, Dr. Spalding came to Asheville in 1915 shortly after completing a course of study at the Kirksville school of Osteopathy, Kirksville, Mo. She passed the Missouri and North Carolina state board examinations in June, 1915, and for several years after coming here was associated with Dr. Rockwell, the mother of the late Kiffin Rockwell, who was killed in action during the World War, while a member of the Lafayette Flying organization.

Later she opened offices at 779-A Haywood road. She also is one of the few lady osteopaths in the city, and attended the recent meeting of the North Carolina Osteopathic association held in Charlotte.

The 1930 meeting of the organization will be held in Asheville at the invitation of local members, including Dr. Spalding

Asheville Citizen June 30, 1929

Dr. Jennie L. Spalding

Osteopathic Physician
779-A Haywood Road
Telephone 122

Physictheraphy and
Vit-O-Net Blanket Baths

Announcing a NEW LOW RATE PLAN for treatment
on Specified Days.
Particulars by Appointment

Asheville Citizen June 30, 1930

The Spencer trio, shown above, will play Monday evening in the initial concert of the annual Mozart festival here. Those in the trio are May Jo DeNardo, violin; Josephine Rhobein Spencer, piano; and Clyde Spencer, 'cello.

Asheville Citizen August 28, 1938

The Manor

ASHEVILLE, N.C.

SUNDAY, MAY 16, 1926

THE CLYDE SPENCER ORCHESTRA

Program

1. Overture	"Norma"	Bellini
2. Concert Waltz	"Christmas Dreams"	Bach
3. Operatic Selection	"Cavalleria Rusticana"	Mascagni
4. Violin Solo	"Cavatina"	Raff
	MR. JOHN EVERSMAN
5. Trio	(a) "Beceuse de Jocelyn"	Godard
	(b) "Hungarian Dance"	Brahms
6.	"Andante Cantabile"	Berge
7.	"Slavische Rhapsody"	Friedman

Quiet is requested in the Music Room during the Evening Concert

The Manor

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

SUNDAY, MAY 20, 1928

THE SPENCER ORCHESTRA

CLYDE SPENCER, Musical Director

Program

1. Overture "Egmont" ..... Beethoven
2. "Adagio Pathetique" ..... Godard
3. "Poupee Valsante" ..... Poldini
4. Ballet Music from "Faust" ..... Gounod
5. (a) "At Evening" ..... Debussey
   (b) "Le Nil" ..... Leroux
6. Operatic Selection "The Pearl Fishers" ..... Bizet
7. Suite "A Day in Venice" ..... Nevin
   (a) Dawn
   (b) The Gondoliers
   (c) Venetian Love Song
   (d) Goodnight

Quiet is requested in the Music Room during the Evening Concert

The Manor

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

SUNDAY, APRIL 21, 1929

THE SPENCER TRIO

Soloist

GEORGE HARTRICK, Baritone

Musical Program

1. Overture — Pique Dame ..... Suppe
2. a. My Heart At Thy Sweet Voice, Saint-Saens
   b. Cossack's Revels ..... Tschakoff
3. Operatic Selection — Manon ..... Massenet
4. Vocal Solos — Selected
5. To Spring ..... Grieg
6. Selection of Scotch Folk Songs
7. Suite — From India ..... Popy
   a. The Bayaderes
   b. By The Ganges
   c. The Almas
   d. Patrol

Quiet is requested in the Music Room during the Evening Concert

Announcing Winners In

SHOP-IN-ASHEVILLE DAYS

WINDOW SHOPPING CONTEST

FIRST PRIZE —	Robert Spiro, 81 Westwood Place	$20.00
SECOND PRIZE —	Miss Molly Spears, 150 Ashland Ave.	$15.00
THIRD PRIZE —	Miss Katherine Sevier, 524 Biltmore Ave.	$10.00
FOURTH PRIZE —	Mrs. E. T. Ebert, 19 Irving St.	$5.00

Members of the Asheville Merchants Association, participating in the Shop-In-Asheville Days Window Shopping Contest, congratulate the winners and thank them for their interest.

Hundreds of entries were received and the judges had a very difficult time selecting the winners. Awards were made on a basis of accuracy and neatness.

The great interest in the contest that was shown by visitors and people of Asheville and Western North Carolina was greatly appreciated by participating merchants.

Checks For Prize Winners Will Be Mailed Monday, Sept. 2

Asheville Citizen September 1, 1940

Church Will Be Dedicated Sunday

Ash. Times 4/12/41

The Craven Street Baptist church, shown above, will be dedicated in special services Sunday. Following the Sunday school session at 9:30 o'clock, the cornerstone will be laid at 10:00 by the pastor, Mr. Sprinkle and he will preach the dedication sermon at 11 o'clock. The Rev. G. C. Cox, pastor of the Merrimon Avenue Baptist church, will deliver a sermon in a service starting at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Another visiting minister, the Rev. Bascombe Hensley, of Barnardsville, will be heard at the night sermon hour. Special music will be featured. Craven street church is occupying the third building since its organization in 1921. The present building, valued at $12,000, was started in October 1938 and the first service was held in the building Easter Sunday two years ago. Indebtedness on the church was paid off at a special rally day March 23.

REV. A. P. SPRINKLE

Asheville Times April 12, 1941

Craven Street Church Will Honor Sprinkle

Ash. Times 7-23-49

The 25th anniversary of the Rev. A. P. Sprinkle as pastor of Craven Street Baptist Church and the birthday anniversary of Mr. Sprinkle will be observed with services tomorrow in the church.

The day will begin with a brief Sunday school period at 9:45 a. m. At 10:30 a. m. there will be open discussion during which time members and friends will have an opportunity to give personal expressions of appreciation of their pastor.

Special Music

Special music for the services will be provided by several visiting groups. The morning sermon will be delivered by the Rev. H. M. Hocutt, missionary of the Buncombe Baptist Association.

At 2:30 p. m. there will be a service during which talks will be made by two ministers who have gone out from the Craven Street Church. One of these, the Rev. Joe Sprinkle, pastor of Old Little Ivy and Calvary Baptist Churches in Madison County, is a son of the Rev. A. P. Sprinkle, the other, the Rev. Jack Buckner, pastor of the Liberty Baptist Church near Candler, is a nephew of Mr. Sprinkle.

The sermon at the 7:45 p. m. service will be delivered by the Rev. W. B. Sprinkle, pastor of the High Street Baptist Church, Canton, a brother of the Rev. A. P. Sprinkle.

The pastorate of the Rev. A. P. Sprinkle in the Craven Street Church began in July 1924 when he came from Reed Memorial Church in Oakley to what was then Hill's Chapel located at the intersection of Craven Street and Waynesville Avenue. The group was worshipping at that time in a frame building completed after Mr. Sprinkle began his pastorate.

Growth Was Rapid

During the past 25 years unusual growth has been experienced by the church. The membership has increased from approximately 40 to 650, and the annual budget has increased from $1,00 to $10,000. To provide adequate room for the growing church a new brick building with 13 Sunday School rooms in the basement was erected in 1938. The building was free of debt and dedicated on Easter Sunday 1941. In the early spring of this year a Sunday School annex was built at a cost of approximately $10,000. This provides 13 additionl Sunday School rooms and brings the total of the church property to $40,00.

Under the leadership of the Pastor, the Baptist Training Union, the Woman's Missionary Society an active prayer band has been organized. The present membership is composed mainly of people who have been converted under the ministry of Mr. Sprinkle.

In addition to his work as pastor of the Craven Street Church, Mr. Sprinkle has been active in many phases of the work of the Buncombe Baptist Association and served as president of the Buncombe Baptist Ministers Conference. Since 1945 he has been a moderator in the association.

Asheville Times July 23, 1949

—Citizen-Times Photo

AFTER SERVING FOR 32 YEARS, the Rev. A. Perry Sprinkle is retiring today from the pulpit of the Craven Street Baptist Church. Sprinkle, who will be 70 Wednesday, saw membership increase from 40 to 800 and the annual budget increase from $1,000 to $18,000 during his tenure at the church. He and Mrs. Sprinkle were honored with a picnic attended by the congregation last evening, at which time he was presented with various gifts, including the guarantee of a supplement to his retirement salary. Presenting the letter of guarantee is Clyde Freeman, chairman of the church's board of deacons.

Asheville Citizen July 22, 1956

Sprinkle Brothers

Born to Susan Elizabeth and Andrew Jackson Sprinkle in a two room log cabin, were the four sons, Wesley, Henry, Alfred Perry and Everette Sprinkle.

Since their home bordered the Buncombe-Madison County line, the living room was in Buncombe and the kitchen in Madison. Dr. W.A. Sams, a family physician, often said that the Sprinkle Family of Buncombe had to go to Madison to eat.

Andrew Jackson, also known as A.J. or Uncle Jack, started the circuit of preaching in his family that later brought a number of ministers sweeping the Southeast and proclaiming a Gospel that could save the whole world.

To begin with, there was Wesley Sprinkle who was born at sun-up on April 7, 1882.

Wesley was known as an in-depth Bible reader who began preaching in 1918. He pastored more than 40 churches, one of which included the Newbridge Baptist Church for 14 years, during three different periods of time.

After retirement alone, Wesley had a record of preaching 1487 sermons, teaching 1,034 lessons, assisting in 406 funerals, marrying 53 couples, and holding 63 revivals.

Then, there was Everette Sprinkle who began his ministry in November of 1923, evangelizing areas of North Carolina, Tennessee, South Carolina, Maryland and Michigan.

He was married to the late Myrtle Waldroup Sprinkle in 1915, who later had the privilege of bringing into the world Charles Sprinkle, who has served as pastor of Glady Baptist Church in Candler for 46 years. Everette Sprinkle died in 1968.

Rev. A. P. Sprinkle studies his Bible.

AP Sprinkle
died 1956

Wesley Sprinkle at his typewriter.

Alfred Perry Sprinkle was ordained as a Baptist minister on Christmas Day, 1917, in Locust Grove Baptist Church, which was organized by his father in 1892. A.P. was known as a student of the Bible, and during years his years as pastor, he watched the congregation of Craven Street Baptist Church grow in membership from 40 to 800, and the annual budget build from $1,000 to approximately $18,000. He died in 1956 after a God-blessed life of 75 years.

Rev. E. F. Sprinkle

Finally, Henry Sprinkle preached for a couple of years, but according to his nephew, Charles, he died of pneumonia at a young age. As you can tell, The Sprinkle Brothers of Madison County gave a great deal of their lives to the call of the ministry.

With Son At Pearl Harbor, Parents Await News

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Spurling, 91 Nevada avenue, West Asheville, are shown here as they listened to radio reports this morning of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, Honolulu, T. H. Their son, Jack Spurling, 21, shown at right, is a member of the crew of the U. S. S. West Virginia at Pearl Harbor, which was bombed yesterday by the Japanese. Visibly shaken by the happenings of the past 24 hours, Mr. and Mrs. Spurling, with other members of the family, listened to the radio. Young Spurling has been in the navy three years and is due to be discharged from his present enlistment next July. No information had been received by the Spurlings this afternoon and no casualty list had been officially announced from Honolulu. Mrs. Spurling especially showed the strain of waiting today and other members of the family were reassuring her. A photograph of young Spurling is shown on the radio.

JACK SPURLING

Asheville Times December 8, 1941

Home of Mr. George Starnes

Photographic reproduction of a drawing of the home of Mr. George Starnes at 851 Haywood Road in West Asheville. Mr. Starnes built this four-story home in 1884 or 1885, when he was in his 20's. If not the first, the house was certainly one of the first homes in West Asheville. Built entirely of hardwoods, the home contained 5 bedrooms, a kitchen, living room, and dining room. George Starnes was married to the former Teresa Elizabeth Hackney. The couple had 6 children: Nane, who became pastor of West Asheville Baptist Church, Bert, George H. Starnes, Jr., Charles, Glenn, and Mabel. Glenn Starnes remembers that his father built the tower visible at the front of the house in order to have a view of the surrounding mountains. He also remembers a sand pit in the basement of the home, which his mother used for refrigeration. The house burned in the late 1940's. The photo is being donated to the new West Asheville History Archive, part of the West Asheville History Project. Photograph courtesy of Blanche and Glenn Starnes.

WEST ASHEVILLE SCHOOL EXERCISES

JUDGE PRITCHARD TO DELIVER THE ANNUAL ADDRESS

Declamation and Recitation Contests to Be Participated in By Largest Class in School's History.

The declamation contest of the West Asheville graded school commencement exercises will be participated in by the largest class in the school's history. This contest is but one of many interesting features of the commencement exercises, which will be held on April 21, 22, 24 and 25.

Owing to the congested condition of the school and the lack of sufficient facilities, the plan was adopted at the beginning of the school year of having each of the primary grades give a program at the end of each month, to which the parents of the students have been invited. These programs have been given through the fourth grade, and these monthly programs have constituted their commencements. The commencement exercises to be given this week and next therefore is representative of all the organizations of the entire school.

The commencement program in detail is as follows:

On Friday, at 8 o'clock, the program will be given by members of the Martha Washington junior society, of the fifth, sixth and seventh grades, and by the domestic science classes in the Odd Fellows' hall, West Asheville.

Chorus, "The Grand Old Flag"—Junior society.

Play, "William Tell"—Junior society.

Cooking drill, by domestic science class.

Reading, "Telling Stories"—Edna Boone.

"Gypsy festival"—Domestic science class.

Pantomime, "America" — Edna Walsh, Mabel Grhal, Alice Fairchild.

Mock trial, "The Man Haters"—Junior society.

Japanese song, "Sweet Sananoo"—Domestic science class.

The commencement sermon will be delivered on Sunday by Dr. A. E. Brown, D. D., of West Asheville.

On Monday evening at 8 o'clock, there will be a recitation contest. There will be ten boys in the declamation contest and eight girls in the recitation contest—the largest classes in the history of the school. The boys are representatives of the North State Literary society, while the girls represent the Girls' Social club.

The recitations on Monday night will be preceded by a double trio selection—"Down in Dewey Dell." The trio is composed of Eula Anderson, Mary Brown, Annie Corkin, Edith Meadows, Francis Moody and Pearl Sams.

"The Lost Word," by Nell Reynolds.

"Hagar," by Sara Penny.

"Wild Zingarella," by Annie Mae Westall.

"The Soul of the Violin," by Jessie Davis.

Piano solo, "Lucia Di Lammermoor," by Lena Beacham.

"Pro Patria," by Eula Fairchild.

"Aunt Charity Blackalides," by Sara Barbour.

"Claudius and Cynthia," by Lena Beacham.

"The Hero of Mayville," by Obera Spivey.

Trio, "Good Night, Beloved," by Eula Anderson, Annie Corbin and Francis Moody.

On Tuesday, at 7:30 o'clock, will occur the declamation contest, with the following program:

Piano solo, "General Grant's March."

"Truth and Victory," Piercy Carter.

"One Niche the Highest," Chas. Starnes.

"Sergeant Prentiss' First Pies," Claude Duckett.

"The nomination of Blaine for the Presidency," Howard Pinner.

Instrumental duet, Jack and Ralph Felmet.

"Spartacus to the Gladiators," Paul Pittillo.

"The Stability of Government," Herbert Brown.

"The Call to Arms," Claydon Ingle.

"Bryan's Cross of Gold Speech," Clyde Westall.

Piano solo, Ralph Felmet.

"The Unknown Rider," William Reynolds.

"A Scene Upon a Battlefield," Eugene Pinner.

Instrumental duet, Margaret Jarrett and Mabel Grahl.

Tuesday night the program will be as follows:

Piano Solo—"Humoreske," by Nell Reynolds.

Class song.

President's Address—Wade Steelman.

Class History—Grace Beacham.

Class Prophecy—Nell Reynolds.

Class Will—Albert Evans.

Class Poem—Zula Fairchild.

Valedictory, "Arbitration as a Means of Settling International Disputes"—Wade Steelman.

Vocal solo, "From the Land of the Sky Blue Waters"—By Sara Penney.

Annual Address—Judge J. C. Pritchard, who will be introduced to the audience by Gallatin Roberts.

Piano solo, "The Dance of the Demon"—Lena Beacham.

Awarding of diplomas, certificates, prizes and medals.

Verdi's "Anvil Chorus."

The chief of the marshals is Bert Starnes, and his assistants are Wade Steelman, Albert Evans, Margie Cook and Leone Noblitt.

Asheville Citizen

April 19, 1916

STUDENTS ORGANIZE AT WEST ASHEVILLE

MUCH INTEREST TAKEN IN SCHOOL WORK.

Boys' Debating Society and Girls' Social Club Elect Officers For School Year.

Student organizations of the West Asheville schools are being rapidly perfected, and there is a great deal of enthusiasm among the members of the various literary and debating associations this year. The school has started with a splendid outlook for a successful year, and the interest taken in the various student societies promises an active year's work among these organizations.

The senior class of the high school, which graduates in 1917, has organized by electing officers as follows: Bert Starnes, president; Howard Pinner, vice-president; Mayer Brown, secretary. The class is taking an active interest in school work, and will work, as a body, for the success of the school this year.

The Girls' Social club has been reorganized for the year and the work of the club will be directed by Miss Sutton and Miss Tipton, of the faculty. The following officers were elected: Miss Sarah Penny, president; Miss Margaret Williamson, vice-president; Miss Irene Logan, secretary; Miss Lena Beacham, treasurer; Miss Margie Cook, monitor; Miss Ada Lee Sitton, critic.

The North State Debating society, an organization of boys, also elected officers, and, under the direction of Principal W. T. Jervis and Miss Anderson, of the faculty, will hold declamation and recitation contests, and debates, throughout the school year. The officers of the society are as follows: Howard Pinner, president; Bert Starnes, vice-president; Ray Steelman, secretary; Clyde Westall, treasurer; William Reynolds, censor; W. T. Jervis, critic.

Preliminary contests are to be held at the West Asheville school in anticipation of the county-wide commencement, and it is probable, from present indications, that West Asheville will have at least forty contestants in the various contests held at commencement.

Asheville Citizen September 16, 1916

W. Asheville Club To Hold Enka Jubilee

West Asheville, through the West Asheville Community club, will give Enka a hearty official welcome on Thursday night, it was announced Saturday. Members of the club and residents of the city will gather that evening at Hall Fletcher high school at a celebration staged to show the town's appreciation of the fact that a $10,000,000 rayon plant is being built on its outskirts. Officials of the Enka company have been invited to attend.

Plans for the celebration have not been completed, but the most gala occasion in the history of the club is expected. An elaborate musical program has been arranged, and there will be a number of short speeches. Refreshments will be served by the women of the club.

The celebration will begin at 7 o'clock in the evening.

Hugh Bowers, president of the club, and Bert Starnes, are in charge of arrangements. In announcing their intention of staging the celebration, members of the club said they wished to express their appreciation for what they considered the most important chapter in the history of West Asheville, the coming of the rayon plant, now under construction in Hominy valley.

Among those expected to speak are Dr. E. A. Moritz, of the Enka corporation Wallace B. Davis, president of the Central Bank; Fred L. Seely; Dan W. Hill, and Fred L. Weede, of the Chamber of Commerce.

Asheville Times October 21, 1928

Asheville Citizen
March 10, 1929

Community Life Centers About Organized Groups

West Asheville Folks Combine Efforts In Unity Plan

By GLENN W. NAVES

The people of West Asheville believe in organization.

And, incidentally, they believe in co-operation, and that a combination of these two elements is essential to community growth and progress.

Consequently, they have embodied the two in a number of well organized community groups, each of which is varied in policy and purpose so as to conform with the needs of everybody from the business man down to the boys and girls who are going to school and training themselves to be future citizens.

Beginning several years ago, public spirited citizens of the community grouped themselves in the belief that business, religion, social work, education and community government can best be conducted when each is thoroughly organized. And these organizations have grown with the progressive expansion of that section until each is a valuable asset, something which just as essential in a sense as the streets, schools and churches are because many of these benefits have been obtained through the efforts of one or more of the organizations.

Club Is Oldest

The largest and oldest of these groups are the West Asheville club, the West Asheville Community club and the West Asheville Merchants Association.

The former was organized in November, 1925 with S. D. Hall as president. Other presidents have been: Don C. Young, 1926, Hugh Sowers, 1927 and H. B. Posey, whose term will expire in November of this year. Both Mr. Posey and Mr. Sowers are bankers, the former being cashier of the Bank of West Asheville and the latter connected with the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. Mr. Young is representative No. 1 from Buncombe county in the General Assembly. G. G. Morgan was elected the first secretary and after his resignation was succeeded by Bert Starnes, who has served in that capacity since.

The club's membership of around 75, includes business and professional men of every calling—lawyers, bankers, ministers, physicians, merchants, public officials, and even one fire chief, a mayor and a few "politicians." The fire chief is A. L. Duckett, of the Asheville fire department, the mayor, Gallatin Roberts and the "politicians" include Mr. Young, who is also among Asheville's best known attorneys.

The club has since its organization shown a deep interest in the upbuilding and progress of the community, and at present has on schedule a number of plans in that direction.

Community Club

Shortly after the West Asheville club was formed the ladies of the community decided that they should also have a similar organization as the West Asheville Community club was formed.

The club has its musical and literary de[illegible] which have separate meetings and give programs in which the members participate. One of the most popular of these features is the monthly musical program, usually held at the home of a member. Local talent is used and a visiting artist entertains with vocal or instrumental numbers, or perhaps lectures on some interesting phase of music study. Each month the program is planned under the supervision of a selected member and is arranged so as to provide variety and an opportunity for each member to exercise their talent.

In many other ways the club takes an active part in the social, and church and educational life of the community, and has a large and active membership, many of whom are charter members.

Merchants Group

The West Asheville Merchants Association was organized in January, 1926 with a charter membership of 13 business men. The organization has since grown to 60 members, including practically every business concern in the community.

In accordance with tentative plans this organization has continued to function as a mutual benefit group for business men and citizens and has accomplished much in the expansion of the business interests of West Asheville.

J. R. Mills, who died about two years ago, was the first president. Other officers elected at the initial meeting who are still serving are O. J. Judd, vice president and V. F. Brown, secretary. John May succeeded Mr. Mills as president.

Other Organizations

Other groups pprovide the essential organization element for the people, of the comunity.

Young people's organizations include two troops of the Boy Scouts of America; the Junior Music club; the Business Girls' Circle; the Young Men of the Presbyterian church, and others.

One of the Scout troops has been organized at the Methodist church and is sponsored by the pastor, the Rev. J. S. Hiatt, and others. Troop 5 of the Presbyterian church is under the leadership of Jimmy Haley, patrol leader and F. Bonnotte, Scoutmaster.

The Junior Music club was organized by Mrs. A. X. Blanchard and has since grown from eight to eighty members. The group was formed so as to give the children of the community with musical talent an opportunity to benefit from study and contact with each other, and to maintain their interest in music. The club is known as one of the most active in West Asheville.

Other organizations are the Calvary Baptist church orchestra and male [illegible] the Junior choir of the Methodist church; Business Girls' Circle, Woman's Auxiliary, Men of the Church and Young Men of the Church, of the Presbyterian church, the Woman's Missionary groups of the community churches, the B. Y. P. U., Epworth League and Christian Endeavor organizations, the Mitchell Avenue Home club, the Friendship club, the Parent-Teacher Association of Hall Fletcher, Aycock, Eugene Rankin, and Vance schools, the Sunday school groups and others.

Fraternal organizations include the West Asheville chapter, Order of Eastern Star, Locke Craig Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Red Men, Moose, Odd Fellows and the A. F. and A. M. Masonic

One of the busiest young men in West Asheville is Secretary Bert Starnes of the West Asheville Club the West Asheville Furniture Company, Inc. and the Mutual Coal company. Mr. Starnes is also manager in charge of the last two concerns

---

Asheville Citizen May 19, 1929

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1929

CLEAN LIFE CLUB BOYS IN CONTEST

C. Cherry Reports He Has Read 19 Chapters Since Oct. 1

The Scripture contest of the Clean Life Club of the Y. M. C. A. which started October 1, reached new heights last night when one of the boys, Claud Cherry, announced that he had read 19 chapters of the Bible since the competition started.

This club is an organization of youths ranging from 10 to 13 years of age, most of them newsboys and all of them earning their own way in the world. Every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday evening at 7.30 o'clock they meet at the Y. M. C. A. under the directorship of Seth Perkinson, field secretary, for a period of good fellowship and a short workout in the pool and gymnasium.

Fellow Contests

During the first part of their meeting they hold a religious service, sing songs, and engage in contests with special prizes, this month is in Scripture reading and at the end of the month the boy who has read the greatest number of chapters in the Bible and can tell the club about them in the best way will be given a prize. The standing so far is Claud Cherry, 19 chapters; Robert Lee Smith, 10 chapters; Clyde Smith, five chapters; Ralph Bishop, three; James Feare, two; and Ervin Clancy, one chapter.

Guy Arrowood, Asheville business man, made a short talk to the boys last night in which he gave them a Gospel message. Candy and bananas as refreshments were donated for the meeting by the wholesale firm of McConnell Bros.

As a Y. M. C. A. organization the Clean Life Club is a beneficiary of the Community Chest which opens its third annual campaign for funds October 14, the money from which will go to the support of 12 social service agencies. The Y. M. C. A. is one of these agencies and its activities cover a wide field among boys and young men in this section.

Asheville Citizen October 9, 1929

WEST ASHEVILLE CLUB

The first November meeting of the board of directors of the West Asheville Club will be held at the office of Secretary Bert Starnes, 440 Haywood road, Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock.

Asheville Citizen November 3, 1929

Clean Life Club Parades For Camp Funds

Headed by a motorcycle officer and directed by their leader, Seth Perkinson, more than 100 members of the Clean Life club paraded downtown streets late yesterday afternoon in behalf of the campaign to keep 180 underprivileged boys in Camp Powhatan a week. Part of the parade is shown here forming in front of the Y. M. C. A. The boys carried placards asking for camp food, funds and supplies. Three groups of 60 boys each will be kept in camp in August.

Asheville Citizen July 27, 1932

BOYS APPLYING FOR CAMP WEEK

Perkinson To Ask Civic Clubs For Funds To Help Cause

More than 100 boys had filed application last night to attend Camp Powhatan, Y. MF C. A. camp, during August, said Seth Perkinson, field secretary of the Y. M. C. A. Members of the Clean Life club paraded downtown streets Tuesday afternoon in behalf of funds and supplies for camp periods for 180 boys.

Mr. Perkinson said that he and a member of the club are visiting civic clubs this week at their luncheons to present the matter to members. Three groups, of 60 boys each, are to attend camp on Bent Creek. The first group, composed of campers between the ages of eight to 11, will attend the week beginning August 8. Next, boys between 12 and 13 years of age, will go the week of August 15, while the week beginning August 22 will be for youths between the ages of 14 and 15.

Boys from the Y. M. C. A. Clean Life club, Mountain Home orphanage, Buncombe County Training school and Eliada orphanage will be enrolled for the camp period. The parade Tuesday was to call attention to the drive which is now under way for cash and articles needed to keep the boys at camp three weeks.

Mr. Perkinson will direct the camp sessions. He said yesterday that although food contributions are lagging, plans are progressing to give the underprivileged boys a good time at camp. He said that Reuben Robertson, Jr., will send a speed boat to the camp and Roy Parker will furnish a motor for the boat. The Asheville Army store has offered to lend a large tent, which will be used as a hospital.

Mr. Perkinson said $5 would keep a boy in camp one week.

Asheville Citizen July 28, 1932

N. C., SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1932

Clean Life Club Given Pies

Pumpkin pies—a whole pie to each boy—were presented members of the Y. M. C. A. Clean Life club last Tuesday night by the Asheville Army store and A. D. Bradley, manager. Boys who gathered at the store for the "pie party" are shown above. About 125 pies were distributed. Pumpkins for the pies were gathered at the Army store in a "largest pumpkin contest," which was a feature of the store's Golden Harvest sale.

Asheville Citizen November 13, 1932

SUNDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1937

Take Lead In Development Of West Asheville

An organization that has frequently figured in the development of West Asheville is the West Asheville club, composed of men of the community. Members of the group are shown in the above photograph, taken at a recent joint meeting of three West Asheville clubs. Those in the picture, left to right, are: First row, R. E. Reynolds, Don O. Young, Arthur E. Dunn, E. B. Roberts, the president; M. W. Hamrick, W. E. Ryon and Bert Starnes; second row, M. M. Freeman, James Rhodes, John Honey, Max Hyder, Barnett Stroupe, J. F. Justice and Curtis Baldwin; third row, W. S. Sparks, T. H. Hunt, G. C. Brown, W. E. Ferrell, Sr., O. J. Judd and J. F. Cole; fourth row, F. Bert Ingle, Alfred Wilkins, J. Steedley, J. H. Parris, O. E. Starnes and G. G. Morgan.

Clean Life Club Helps Underprivileged Youths

West Asheville Welfare Unit Is Sponsored By Men's Club

Fifty underprivileged boys of West Asheville meet every Sunday morning at 6 o'clock at the Mutual coal office on Haywood road. Here they are given a hot breakfast, after which the day's Sunday school lesson is taught.

The organization, known as the Clean Life club of West Asheville, was formed on November 15, 1936 and has grown rapidly since. It is under the auspices of the West Asheville Men's club, and is directed by a boy's work committee headed by Bert Starnes, prominent business man of that section.

Mr. Starnes is the active director of the club. He is assisted in the work by W. E. Ryon, another member of the committee.

Other members of the committee, are: Mike W. Hamrick, E. B. Roberts, president of the Men's club, J. H. Parris, F. J. Fortune, B. A. Barosse and G. G. Morgan.

During last winter 516 breakfasts were served. Speakers at the club meetings included various ministers of West Asheville churches. An average of 52 boys attended the breakfasts. It was the policy of the club, committee to have a minister from each church in West Asheville speak to the boys. In addition to the breakfasts, parties are held on Monday nights at the Y. M. C. A., where the boys participate in swimming, boxing, and other exercises. A local transfer company transports the boys to and from the parties.

Christmas Party Held

One of the main events last year was a Christmas party for the boys given at the woodworking shop of Mr. Parris, member of the club committee This was attended by a large number of the boys and friends of the club.

Bible study is one of the club's chief activities. Bibles have been given the boys and a large number of scripture verses have been memorized.

Through the courtesy of the Needlework Guild, many of the boys have been supplied with warm clothing. Three of them have already been given shoes this winter.

Interest in the club has increased rapidly among citizens of West Asheville. Many of the merchants have agreed to do their part in helping the boys Towels and dish cloths have been laundered by a local laundry and passes to the Palace theater, through the courtesy of Carl Bamford, have been given boys who volunteered to wash dishes, following the breakfasts.

The breakfasts are furnished and served each Sunday by a different individual or organization at a cost of approximately $5 each.

As an example of the interest the boys themselves have in the organization, Mr. Starnes said that often when he arrives at the office at 5 o'clock on the morning of the meeting he finds several of the youngsters waiting anxiously to get in.

Has Novel Alarm System

One young fellow is so anxious to attend the meetings on time that he ties a long cord to one of his toes when he goes to bed on Saturday nights and the next morning when members of his gang pass by on their way to the meeting they simply pull the cord which extends out the window and, presto, their fellow club member joins them.

The motive behind the organization, Mr. Starnes pointed out, is to let the boys know that the men of the community are interested in them and what they are doing

The club is affiliated with the Y. M. C. A., and is similar to the Asheville Clean Life organization.

Underprivileged Boys Are Aided By Club

Here are some of the 50 or more members of the Clean Life club of West Asheville enjoying one of their weekly breakfasts in a store at the intersection of Haywood road and Herron avenue. The club, primarily for under-privileged boys, is conducted as a project of the West Asheville club, composed of men in the community. Bert Starnes, in charge of the project, is shown at the right in the background. At the left is the Rev. Nane Starnes, pastor of the West Asheville Baptist church, who delivered the Sunday school lesson for the boys the morning the photograph was made. The club meets for breakfast and a Sunday school lesson early Sunday mornings.

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1938

PLANS MADE TO IMPROVE PARK IN WEST ASHEVILLE

Will Seek All Varieties Of Rhododendron To Plant In Region

The West Asheville club last night endorsed efforts to make Rhododendron park one of the leading beauty spots of this section.

M. W. Hamrick was named head of a committee that will aid the chamber of commerce in seeking to bring the 65 to 75 varieties of rhododendron in the world to Asheville to be planted in the park.

Four members were named on a committee to confer with city officials and urge widening of Haywood road and construction of a new bridge between Asheville and West Asheville. They are: J. H. Parris, Frank Austin, Arthur Dunn and Don C. Young.

Five were named on a committee to nominate members for the board of directors: O. J. Judd, Bert Barnes, R. E. Reynolds, Jim Justus and Mr. Dunn.

Members of the club were urged to support and attend the beautification contest and flower show to be held in West Asheville tomorrow.

E. D. Roberts, president, presided. The meeting was held at Rhododendron park clubhouse.

Asheville Citizen September 9, 1938

BERT STARNES IS MADE CHAIRMAN OF COMMITTEE

Asheville - Liquor

Ashe-Times 1/18/39

Organization Of Group Will Be Completed At Later Meet.

A permanent committee was organized last night in West Asheville to oppose the election in this county that would determine whether or not ABC liquor stores would be established. Bert Starnes was elected permanent chairman. The meeting was held at West Asheville Methodist church.

The following committees was named: W. B. Cathey, from the Wesleyan Methodist church; Don C. Young, from Calvary Baptist church; Walter Ward, from West Asheville Baptist church; L. J. Brookshire, from West Asheville Methodist church; George McCreary, from West Asheville Presbyterian church; F. L. Gilreath, from Craven Street Baptist church; and A. L. Miller, from West Asheville Church of God.

The meeting was held with Don C. Young as temporary chairman and L. J. Brookshire as temporary secretary. The permanent committee will work to the end of promoting a temperance educational program through the churches of the community, and particularly to oppose the proposed election to adopt ABC stores in Buncombe county. It was suggested this committee work largely through the churches and endeavor to organize a large committee in each church for carrying out these purposes.

The new committee is to meet at the call of the chairman for the purpose of completing its organization and the selection of a permanent secretary and treasurer, or secretary-teasurer as it may prefer. The date of the meeting is to be announced later. The committee was further authorized and recommendation made to it that it enlarge the group os as to include a representative from the other churches of West Asheville that are not represented, and that a special invitation be extended such churches to join with the committee in its work.

Mrs. James Hare, president of the Women's Christian Temperance union, attended last night's meeting as a guest of the committee and spoke on the plans for organizing various communities and the county and city as a whole in opposition to the establishment of the ABC stores.

Asheville Citizen January 18, 1939

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1941

METHODISTS TO HAVE EVENT FOR CLEAN LIFE BOYS

Christmas Entertainment, Treat Will Be Held At W. Asheville Church.

The West Asheville Clean Life club boys will be given Christmas entertainment at a meeting of the West Asheville sub-district of the Methodist Youth Fellowship at the West Asheville Methodist church at 7:30 o'clock Monday night December 22. It was announced today by Miss Clara Ross, director of youth work for the Asheville district.

The youngsters, made up of underprivileged boys in the sections in and around West Asheville, will be treated with fruit and candy and a Christmas program. All young people in Methodist churches in the West Asheville area and their adult leaders are expected to attend.

In many Methodist churches on December 31, "Watch Night" commitment services will be held, officially inaugurating the Methodist Youth Fellowship. Two million young people in Methodist churches throughout the country are expected to join in pledging allegiance to a Fellowship which will unite young people throughout the country. A commitment service program by Harold A. Ehrensperger will be presented in most of the churches. The program will include the use of candles and organ music.

Asheville Times December 5, 1941

YULE TREAT GIVEN BOYS OF CLEAN LIFE CLUB

West Asheville Group Presents Program For Methodist Young Folk.

A Christmas program and treat honoring members of West Asheville's Clean Life club were held last night in the meeting of the West Asheville sub-district of the Methodist Youth Fellowship last night at the West Asheville Methodist church.

The club, under the direction of Bert Starnes, presented the devotional program, consisting of Bible verses, poems and songs. Following the devotionals, the boys were given a treat of candy, apples, oranges and nuts.

At a brief business session, Floyd Robinson of the Snow Hill Methodist church at Candler was elected to serve as adult councilor.

Following the business meeting, an informal social hour was held in the recreation room of the church.

The next meeting will be held at the Leicester Methodist church.

Asheville Times December 23, 1941

CHIEF WHITE EAGLE TO SPEAK BEFORE CLEAN LIFE CLUB

Chief White Eagle, pastor of the West Asheville Tabernacle, will speak before members of the West Asheville Clean Life club next Sunday morning at the Mutual Coal company, 753 Haywood road. E. B. Roberts will furnish the breakfast.

West Asheville News January 15, 1943

Chief White Eagle

PARTY HONORS DINKELACKERS

Ash. Cit. - 6/25/47

Salvation Army Couple, Retiring, To Leave City This Week

Brigadier and Mrs. E. D. Dinkelacker, who this week are retiring after more than 45 years of service in the Salvation Army, were honored at a dinner Monday night at the Langren hotel. Also an honor guest at the farewell banquet was Adjutant Dorothy Langston, who will be re-assigned to other duties this week.

Brigadier and Mrs. Dinkelacker and Adjutant Langston—then Captain Langston—came to Asheville seven years ago, and their services to the community and the Salvation Army were reviewed by Roy H. McDuffie, past chairman of the advisory board of the Salvation Army here.

Other Dinner Guests

Other guests at the dinner were Major and Mrs. Frank Longino of Atlanta, who presented a musical program; Major Cecil Brown, district officer of the mountain district; Brigadier and Mrs. G. A. Stephen, divisional commander; and Colonel John Langston of Goldsboro, and father of Adjutant Langston, the former assistant director of national selective service.

The dinner was the third and last of a series honoring the three officers. Adjutant Langston was recognized in the Sunday morning service at the citadel and the Dinkelackers were recognized at the Sunday evening service.

Work Is Praised

Bert Starnes, chairman of the advisory board, presided at the dinner, attended by members of the board and the auxiliary. Brigadier Stephan introduced the other out-of-town guests, and Vice-Mayor Fred Seely, Jr., praised the work of the Dinkelackers on behalf of the city. Colonel Langston spoke as a long-time friend of the couple.

Gifts were presented to the officers by the board and auxiliary. The Dinkelackers and Adjutant Langston responded to the tributes.

Brigadier and Mrs. Dinkelacker and Adjutant Langston will leave Asheville this week. The adjutant will have two months' leave, following which she will be re-assigned. The Dinkelackers will move to their home in Hendersonville.

TO RETIRE THIS MONTH—Brigadier and Mrs. E. D. Dinkelacker, commanding officers of the Salvation Army citadel here, will retire from active duty this month, after serving in the organization 47 years.

Asheville Citizen June 25, 1947

BRIDGE SITE WILL BE TOPIC OF DISCUSSION

Ferebee To Attend Meeting At Aycock School On Wednesday.

West Asheville civic and business leaders will gather next Wednesday night at 8 o'clock at Aycock elementary school to put forth opinions on an "inter-city" bridge rather than one that would divert traffic around West Asheville. The meeting is sponsored by a group of interested persons.

Percy B. Ferebee, commissioner of the ninth district of the state highway commission, is expected to attend.

The state has made a special allotment of funds for the bridge and surveys as to possible locations have been made with two proposed locations under consideration, it was pointed out.

One possible location would have the bridge across the French Broad river connecting a street from the end of Patton avenue on one side and a street ending at the intersection of Waynesville avenue, Westwood place and Haywood road on the other sire. This location would send traffic through the business district of West Asheville. The other would have the bridge located below the old Smith bridge near the rock quarry and connecting with a road ending on Haywood road near Lucerne park, which would mean a diversion of traffic around the business district.

The public is invited to attend the meeting, at which time persons will be given opportunity to express opinions concerning the bridge.

Don C. Young, Asheville attorney, will preside at the meeting and the committee on arrangements including Bert Starnes, S. J. Fortune, Jr., and S. E. Sanders.

Asheville Times January 2, 1942

West Asheville YMCA Names Committees

Standing committees of management were appointed at a meeting of the West Asheville YMCA last night.

Committees and chairmen include membership, John Ehle; finance, Charles A. McClain; spiritual emphasis, Burt Starnes, and boys' work, Victor Stephenson.

Brock Henry, boys, work secretary, spoke on activities of the Gray-Y. He reported that a kite-flying contest will be held sometime this month, and that baseball rather than softball will be sponsored by the Y this season.

Raymond Bell, chairman, presided.

Asheville Citizen March 7, 1951

Weds Baptist Minister

Mrs. Nane Starnes is the former Miss Teanie Mae Reed, daughter of Mr F. W. Reed, of Fort Worth, Texas. The Rev. and Mrs Starnes were married last Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the First Baptist church in Austin, Texas. They are now motoring leisurely to Asheville where they will be at home to friends at 851 Haywood road, West Asheville, after October 12. Mrs Starnes is pastor of the Chunn's cove, Hominy, and New Morgan Hill Baptist churches.

Asheville Citizen October 6, 1935

Rev. Nane Starnes Marries Miss Reed, Of Austin, Tex.

A WEDDING of widespread interest was that of Miss Teanie Mae Reed, of Austin, Tex., to the Rev. Nane Starnes, of Asheville. The vows were spoken Thursday, October 3 at 5 o'clock at the First Baptist church in Austin with the Rev. S. G. Posey, pastor, officiating.

The altar was simply but effectively decorated: baskets of giant chrysanthemums in shades deepening from pale yellow to bronze were arranged against a background of palms and ferns. On each side were yellow tapers burning in candelabra to which were fastened clusters of yellow chrysanthemums.

Preceding the ceremony, a musical program was rendered. Mrs. Frank Maddox presided at the organ, and accompanied Mrs. Vernon McGee who played "Traumerei" on the violin, and Mr. J. Campbell Wray who sang "I Love Thee" by Grieg.

At the first strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, Mr. F. W. Reed, of Fort Worth, Tex., who gave her in marriage. She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. J. K. Bell, of Austin.

The background of fall flowers accentuated the autumn shade of the bride's costume: suit of rust brushed wool trimmed with gray imported caracul fur. With it she wore gray accessories and carried an arm bouquet of talisman rosebuds.

The maid of honor was Mrs. M. D. Hairston, of Houston, Tex., who wore a navy blue ensemble and carried a bouquet of yellow rosebuds.

During the ceremony Mrs. Maddox played softly "To A Wild Rose" by MacDowell and "I Love You Truly" by Bond. For the recessional she used Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Mrs. Starnes is a graduate of Baylor University, of Waco, Texas. She also attended Southwestern Theological Seminary at Fort Worth. She is a young woman of charming personality and for the past four years has served as church secretary and as a leader of Young People's work in the First Baptist church at Austin, Texas.

Mr. Starnes is pastor of the Chunn's Cove, Hominy, and New Morgan Hill Baptist churches near Asheville. He is a graduate of Union university at Jackson, Tenn., and received his Master of Theology degree from Southwestern Theological seminary at Fort Worth, Texas. He is the son of Mrs. George H. Starnes, of Asheville and the late Mr. Starnes.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Starnes left by motor for Asheville by way of New Orleans. They will be at home at 851 Haywood road, West Asheville, after October 12.

MRS. STARNES HEADS NEW DEP'T AT CAL.

Mrs. Charles Himes Is Secretary

Mrs. Glenn Starnes, for the past nine years director of music and church secretary at Calvary Baptist Church, has been named director of Christian Education and Music, and will be succeeded as secretary by Mrs. Charles F. Himes. Under the new plan of work a full program of church music will be conducted with the following scheduled rehearsals: The Melody Choir (children 5, 6, 7) Saturday morning at 10 o'clock; the Junior choir (ages 8-12) Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock; the High School choir (mixed voices of Junior and Senior High students), Tuesday afternoon at 5:15 o'clock; the Youth Choir (all girls, ages 15-18), Wednesday evening at 7 o'clock; the Senior choir, Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

In addition to the music activity a definite program of student activity and training will be inaugurated. The schedule of these activities will be announced later.

Mrs. Starnes received her education at Reynolds High School, Winston-Salem, the Ocean Grove School, Ocean Grove, N. J., and Westminster Choir School, Princeton, N. J. She is married to Cpl. Glenn Starnes, Army Air Force, stationed at present at Kearns Field, Utah.

Mrs. Himes begins her duties on Monday, August 9th. She is an active member of Calvary Church, and was formerly secretary to Henry I. Gaines, architect, and more recently was secretary at the Reliance Life Insurance Company. She was educated at Lee Edwards High School, the Asheville Normal, and Cecil's Business College. Mrs. Himes is married to Pvt. Charles F. Himes, who entered the army last month, and is stationed with the Quartermaster Corps at Camp Lee, Virginia.

West Asheville News August 6, 1943

YOUTH ENSEMBLE OF CALVARY—This group of young women of the Calvary Baptist church in West Asheville is making several appearances during the spring season, these including a program for the Forty and Eight society of the American Legion in a convention at Grove Park inn this week-end and selections at the Calvary church Sunday night at 8 o'clock. The group will present a variety program at Moore General hospital, May 4. In the group, left to right: First row: Betty Fowler, Nancy Harrell, Phyllis Embler, Joyce McGee and Polly Sanford; second row: Mrs. Glenn Starnes, director, Betty Jo Kiser, Charlotte Reynolds; Jimmie Morgan, Betty Jean Patterson and Edna Muse. Elizabeth McGee and Evelyn Totherow were absent when the picture was made

Asheville Times April 17, 1944

Calvary Baptist Church
March 21, 1999

Blanche Starnes

Dr. Buddy Corbin	Rev. David Simon	Rev. Don Welborn
Pastor	Minister of Education	Minister of Music
645-3317	665-8033	254-1581

~BLANCHE STARNES DAY~

HIGHLIGHTS IN HISTORY

In 1934, Miss Blanche Embler, after graduation from the Westminister Choir College, came to Calvary as church secretary and minister of music, which position she held until 1947.

In 1936, Blanche married Glenn Starnes, to the dismay of many young men and boys of Calvary!

Early in her music ministry, Blanche started the first graded choir program in North Carolina and perhaps the whole southeast. In 1954, Charles Gatwood, who is retired Director of Church Music, North Carolina Baptist State Convention, presented Blanche and Calvary with plaques in honor of this occasion.

During her music ministry at Calvary, many served in her various choirs. We know of several present members of Calvary who were in her choirs: Mary Ruth Duyck, Evelyne Maney, Mary Katherine West and Frances Wilson. Do you know of others?

6:30 PM
Business Meeting

Believe it or not, the bantam rooster in this picture hatched and mothered this brood of chicks. Furthermore, he clucked just as cluckily as any hen. Charles H. Starnes, of West Asheville, noticed that the rooster, 15 months old, was behaving like a broody hen. So he gave the bantam a nest and some eggs. Sure enough, the eggs hatched out and "Banty" was just as proud as any mamma hen ever was. The children in the picture are Terry Ann Starnes, Charles Starnes, Junior, and Virginia Ann Wright. The photo was made by J. L. Wright.

Farmers Federation News Spring 1940

HERE ON FURLOUGH

Private Glenn Starnes (pictured above) is here on a week's furlough visiting his mother, Mrs. Geo. H. Starnes, of 851 Haywood road, his wife, and other relatives and friends in West Asheville. He expects to return Saturday to Atlantic City where he is stationed with the army air corps.

Mr. Starnes, who was inducted into service last June, received his basic training at Keesler Field in Mississippi where he also completed a course in aviation mechanics. Then, before going to Atlantic City, he was sent to the Willow Run Ford airplane plant at Ypsilanti, Michigan, where he specialized in a course in the B-24 or the Liberator type of craft.

Mr. Starnes, who is well known here, is a graduate of Fruitland Institute and attended Carson-Newman college.

He and his wife reside at 65 Dorchester avenue.

West Asheville News February 5, 1943

Two Well-Known W. A. Mothers

West Asheville News
Date not known

Mrs. George H. Starnes, Sr.

Mrs. W. E. Logan

Many are the grand, sweet mothers in Buncombe County. Elsewhere in this issue is a resume of the lives of several well-known mothers of the county. It is to all mothers of Asheville and Buncombe county that this week's issue of The News is dedicated.

Mrs. W. E. Logan

Fifty years of teaching the Bible, the past ten years being spent teaching one class; such is the record of Mrs. Logan.

Mrs. Logan was Rose Addie Deaver before her marriage in 1885 to W. E. Logan, who has been dead since 1916.

We found Mrs. Logan preparing to attend a meeting of the Missionary Society of Calvary Baptist Church, thinking of the religious affairs of this life. Such devotion would naturally reflect in the lives of her children.

Mrs. Annie L. Himes, her eldest daughter, is organist at Calvary Church and is also superintendent of the primary department of that Sunday School.

Mrs. Myrtle V. Lawrence, a second daughter, is a teacher in the Sunday School.

Carl and Harry Logan are owners of Logan Bros. Motor Company doing business in West Asheville.

Miss Grace Logan, the third daughter, teaches at Aycock School and is in charge of the Training Department of Calvary Church.

Miss Irene Logan teaches school at Eugene Rankin and is superintendent of the Junior department at Calvary Sunday School.

Miss Mary Logan is Supervisor of schools of Avery County with headquarters at Newland, N. C.

William Logan, the third son, is training at an art school in Washington, D. C., he being the only member of the family that has not yet finished his education.

A most remarkable instance of a mother's influence, and a wonderful instance of a mother's enjoyment of her splendid family.

Mrs. Logan makes her home at 124 Logan Avenue, West Asheville.

Mrs. George H. Starnes

Mrs. George Starnes was born at Thorpe, England, emigrated to America at the age of sixteen, and was married on June 1, 1893.

Besides ordinary church work, Mrs. Starnes is becoming interested in poetry and writes some of her own occasionally. Last Sunday when the congregation of Calvary Baptist Church wished to observe the fourteenth anniversary of the pastorate of Mr. Grice at their church, Mrs. Starnes read one of her poems appropriate to the occasion. The poem appears elsewhere in this paper.

Mrs. Starnes makes her home with Bert Starnes, her son, at 851 Haywood Road, West Asheville.

Besides Bert Starnes, who is manager of the Mutual Coal Company, and a prominent club man and civic worker in West Asheville, Mrs. Starnes is the beloved mother of the following:

Miss Mabel Starnes, State B. Y. P. U. worker with headquarters at Raleigh, N. C. ;George W. Starnes, and Charlie Starnes, of the Southeastern Erpress Company; Nane Starnes, theological student at Southwestern Seminary, Dallas, Texas, who expects to become a Baptist minister soon; Glenn Starnes, of the National Cleaners.

"A bustling, active mother of a large, bustling family; a mother whose very mention causes tenderness to flood the faces of her sons, a mother truly."

"A bustling, active mother of a large, bustling family; a mother whose very mention causes tenderness to flood the faces of her sons, a mother truly."

WEST ASHEVILLE

"DEDICATED TO A STRONGER COMMUNITY SPIRIT"

ASHEVILLE, N. C. FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1943

MRS. GEORGE H. STARNES, SR.

MRS. GEO. STARNES DIES AT HOME

Funeral services for Mrs. Georg. H. Starnes, Sr., who died Tuesday at her home, 851 Haywood road, following an extended illness, were held Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Calvary Baptist church, with the Rev. J. B. Grice and the Rev. W. A. Lambeth officiating.

The body lay in state at the church from 3 to 4 o'clock.

Pallbearers were Dr. Hoyt Blackwell, C. A. McClain, Carl M. Logan, C. B. Chandler, G. G. Morgan and the Rev. A. J. Buckner. Ministers of Asheville and Buncombe county and members of the board of deacons of Calvary and West Asheville Baptist churches were honorary pallbearers.

A guard of honor was composed of James Banning, Fred Ingle, Spencer B. King, Harvey Wilson, Doyle Woody and Joe Clontz.

Flower girls were members of the Phebean class of Calvary Church.

Mrs. Starnes, who was born in Yorkshire, England, was a charter member of Calvary Baptist church and past president of the women's missionary society of the church, and for a number of years she taught the Phebean class. She was the daughter of the late W. N. Hackney and Teresa Hackney.

Surviving are five sons, George H. Starnes, Jr., Bert Starnes and the Rev. Nane Starnes, pastor of West Asheville Baptist church, Charles Starnes, of the navy, stationed at Camp Peary, Va., and Cpl. Glenn Starnes, of the army air transport command, stationed in India; one daughter, Miss Mabel Starnes of Greensboro; three brothers, W. N. Hackney of Greenville, S. C.; George L. Hackney, Asheville, and Percy Hackney of Hialeah, Fla.; and four sisters, Miss Kate B. Hackney, Miss Nell Hackney, Miss Minnie Hackney, and Miss Amy Hackney, all of

THE ASHEVILLE TIMES

Imperial Life Buys $50,000 In Defense Bonds

Officials of the Imperial Life Insurance company are shown pictured in First National Bank and Trust company this morning as they purchased United States Defense bonds totaling $50,000. Shown from left to right are: A. W. Ek, secretary of the company; William M. Redwood, executive vice-president of the First National bank; Miss Mildred Snipes, bank's bond sales clerk; O. E. Starnes, vice-president of the Imperial Life Insurance company, and Jasper Warlick, treasurer of the company. The $50,000 in bonds covers the full amount permitted by the government to be bought by one corporation during one fiscal year. The company previously had bought a bond valued at $25,000 in December, coming under the quota set for last year. In addition, all of the 38 home office employes of the company have purchased or are purchasing United States Defense bonds 100 per cent. Some of these have made outright purchases and others are buying the bonds through the salary deduction plan. More than 300 men in the field organization and district offices throughout the state are also participating in the purchase of bonds. The company started encouraging the purchase of bonds and stamps by giving its employes two stamps of whatever denomination they chose in stamp books.

Asheville Times January 23, 1942

Pfc. O. E. Starnes, Jr. On Furlough In France

Pfc. O. E. Starnes, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Starnes of 1 Houghton place, West Asheville, recently listed as wounded in Austria, is back with his outfit and is now on furlough in France where he is recuperating, it was learned yesterday.

O. E. STARNES

Pfc. Starnes entered service in November, 1942, as a volunteer and was called to service in June, 1943, while a student at Davidson college. He received training at Camp Fanning, Tex., and Camp Howze, Tex., where he was trained in special gunnery.

He was sent overseas to France in 1944, and was moved on into many. He suffered a scalp wound on May 2.

Asheville Times June 7, 1945

W. H. STARNES MISSING HERE

Employe Of Insurance company Last Seen Monday Night

Police last night were without clues in the disappearance of W. H. Starnes, Jr., 36, real estate agent, of Biltmore, who has been missing since Monday night.

Yesterday police received unconfirmed reports that Starnes was seen standing in front of the Plaza theater at 9 o'clock Monday night. Officers are making efforts to locate persons who reported that the missing man was seen near the theater.

It was also established yesterday by police that Starnes was in a Biltmore avenue pool room at 7 o'clock Monday night. He remarked to several persons he was waiting on a Biltmore bus.

Purchased Cap

Starnes is the assistant advertising manager of the home office of the Imperial Life Insurance company here. At 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon he left the insurance office after telling John Eble, advertising manager, he would finish some work "in the morning." Starnes cashed a $5 check at a College street lunch stand. He also purchased a cap at an Asheville department store late in the afternoon, it was learned.

Descriptions of Starnes have been sent to police departments in all cities and towns of this section. Members of the family yesterday expressed the opinion he had been a victim of foul play.

Starnes was expected at a church play rehearsal at the home of the Rev. R. H. Caudill, pastor of Biltmore Methodist church, Monday night. Monday morning he told his wife he would return home early Monday night.

Has Young Son

Starnes, the son of Mrs. W. B. Starnes of Hendersonville road, Biltmore, is married and has a 16-months old son. He has been residing with his wife and baby at 419 Summit street, neighbor to the Rev. and Mrs. Russell H. Caudill. He weighs about 160 pounds and has sandy hair. At the time of his disappearance Starnes is said to have been wearing a dark suit, a cap, and a "sailor" overcoat. His eyes have a Indian tent.

The Starnes family is one of the most prominent in this section. W. H. Starnes, father of the missing man, was treasurer and general manager of the Imperial Life company at the time of his death last April.

Reported Missing

W. H. STARNES

Asheville Citizen March 9, 1932

W. H. STARNES IS IN GEORGIA

Missing Man Sends Wire To His Mother In This City

W. H. Starnes, 25, assistant advertising manager of the Imperial Life Insurance company, has been located in Gainesville, Ga., it was announced last night by his mother, Mrs. W. B. Starnes of the Hendersonville road.

Starnes was last seen here Monday night near an Asheville theater. City and county police made a search for the missing man Tuesday and yesterday. Mrs. Starnes last night said she had received a telegram signed by her son's name yesterday afternoon asking for money. Starnes told his mother he "would explain everything when I arrive home."

Mrs. Starnes last night said she sent her son money after receiving the telegram. She was unable to explain what caused him to suddenly leave Asheville. Friends of Starnes and members of his family appealed to Asheville police late Monday night to aid in the search for him.

Starnes is married and lives with his wife and a 16-months old son at 419 Summit street, Biltmore.

He is expected to arrive home today

Asheville Citizen March 10, 1932

W. H. Starnes Returns To His Home In City

W. H. Starnes, assistant advertising manager of the Imperial Life Insurance company, missing from his home since Monday, yesterday returned to the city from Gainesville, Ga.

Starnes disappeared early Monday afternoon. Friends and members of his family appealed to police Monday night to aid in the search for the missing man.

Mrs. W. B. Starnes, mother of W. H. Starnes, last night said her son "went to Gainesville on a business trip." Wednesday night Starnes wired his mother from Gainesville to send him money to come home.

Premier MacDonald and his daughter Isabel recently opened two university buildings in Edinburgh, Scotland.

Asheville Citizen March 11, 1932

Family Affair

Bill Stevens, who lives about an eighth of a mile off Brevard Road near its intersection with Interstate 26, had seen chain-reaction accidents, or at least had read about them; but he'd never seen one in which the links were not connected, yet so much damage was done.

A lady drove a pickup truck over to visit Bill's sister, who lives next door. About 8:30 his sister called to say that the woman's truck had slipped partway into a ditch along 191. She asked if he could come down and help put chains on the truck.

"Yes," Bill said, and went down to the road. The lady had also telephoned her son, who came over, but the angle of the truck prevented them from being able to put chains on the rear wheels.

While they stood there scratching their heads, trying to figure how to get the truck out of the ditch, a man came along in a pickup truck and stopped to help. They thought he might be able to pull the other pickup out of the ditch, so he backed his truck up to the disabled pickup, and they all began discussing how they could attach a chain to both trucks. The man left his pickup's headlights on because darkness had fallen and he didn't want an oncoming motorist to fail to see the truck.

Up to that point, everything was fine: It appeared they might be able to pull the truck out of the ditch.

They had not figured, however, on the next motorist who came along.

The man drove a foreign car, and was a bit under the influence of John Barleycorn. As he approached the trucks, the motorist thought the headlights on the helpful man's pickup were the headlights of an oncoming motorist.

He had sense enough to steer to the right of them. Unfortunately, the only thing on the right were the ditch, a small bank, and the woods beyond.

The inebriated man left the road and suddenly crashed with considerable force head-on into the other man's pickup truck.

Both vehicles were disabled. The driver of the small car was injured and the others quickly summoned both an ambulance and the Highway Patrol.

No sooner had the patrolman arrived than a young man came up the road at a speed far in excess of the limit. The officer went for his whistle and ticket book, brought the fellow to a stop and wrote out a speeding ticket.

The injured man was dispatched by ambulance to the hospital, and everyone settled down to the task of extracting the two trucks from the ditch and the foreign car from the second truck.

Attracted by the noise and the flashing lights, a crowd quickly gathered. A strong man in the crowd suggested that enough of the onlookers could help and they should be able to lift the lady's truck out of the ditch.

Sure enough, in a few minutes, musclepower extracted the truck and planted it on firm pavement. The truck was undamaged, except for perhaps a dent or two, and the lady was soon on her way.

That left one truck and the small car. Both were disabled to the extent that a wrecker would be needed to get them out, so the patrolman radioed for a wrecker, which soon arrived. The operator surveyed the scene, attached a cable to the truck, and with lookouts posted in both directions to flag down oncoming traffic, drove the wrecker across the pavement and pulled the cable tight.

The machinery whirred and the cable stretched like a tight wire—and a car approached from up the road, another small, foreign-made car.

The driver of the car saw someone ahead waving a flashlight.

He thought he was being waved through, so he drove past the shouting picket, saw the wrecker ahead on one side of the road, and the wrecked vehicles on the other side, and drove between them.

Stevens said he had never heard such a THWANG! when the little car hit the wrecker's cable, and the following CRASH! signaled the third car wrecked in the chain reaction.

The woman who started it all was probably home by then.

The driver of the second small car, Stevens said, was the son of the driver of the first small car.

Would you call that "a family affair"?

From "Bob Terrell's Old Gold", 1981

The Asheville (N. C.) Times, Saturday, Oct. 25, 1952

PICTURED ABOVE is a Stroup Sheet Metal Works truck ready to leave for another installation of the new series M-1 oil-fired conditioner Conco heating unit. This is a completely automatic oil-fired unit that filters, circulates, warms, and humidifies the air, resulting in economical heating comfort. Immediate installation service is assured home owners. Personnel shown in the picture, left to right are Jack Smith, in charge of this special installation; H. B. Stroup Sr. owner; and H. B. Stroup Jr., general manager. The firm is located at 185 Dorchester Avenue in West Asheville, and the telephone number is 9966.

ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Stroup Wed 50 years

WEAVERVILLE – Mr. and Mrs. H.B. Stroup of Weaverville will observe their 50th wedding anniversary at a celebration given by their family from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. Feb. 1 at West Asheville Baptist Church. Family and friends are invited.

Mrs. Stroup is the former Louise Pinkerton. They were married on Feb. 2, 1954. Their children are Dick Stroup of Taylors, S.C., and Shan Rose of Asheville. They have five grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Asheville Citizen February 1, 2004

—Citizen Photo—Gamble

ADRIAN STUBBS of Brevard Road, West Asheville, tends the pullets he will enter in Thursday's annual Buncombe County 4-R Pullet Show and Sale. The 13-year-old poultryman is a member of the Venable 4-H Club. He and nine other 4-Hers will be competing for ribbons and shares in the $100 in cash prizes in the show.

Asheville Citizen September 8, 1952

LOCAL BOY IS ART EDITOR OF 'TAR BABY'

C. R. Sumner Draws Illustrations and Cartoons For Magazine—He Also Contributes to "Life."

Clarence R. Sumner, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonidas Sumner of No. 137 Westwood place, West Asheville, is attracting much attention by his work as art editor of the "Tar Baby," the humorist magazine of the University of North Carolina, which it is claimed now, has the largest circulation of any college or university magazine being sold on trains and news stands in all sections of the country.

In the March 4 issue of "Life" the first article on the page was written by Mr. Sumner, and signed by his initials, "C. R. S." Before this he has submitted numerous articles to "Life" and had drawings and cartoons accepted by that magazine. He draws practically all the illustrations and cartoons for the "Tar Baby," and what he does not do himself, he passes on and touches up, being the art editor of the magazine since it was first started.

Young Mr. Sumner is a graduate of Bingham school and has been attending the University of North Carolina for two years. He is a native of Asheville and is well known here.

Asheville Citizen March 13, 1920

West Asheville People

T

Young people are urged to work in gardens and on farms this year because of the war. This pretty Miss with her hoe is Catherine Taylor, 1554 Haywood Road, a student in Sand Hill school. Her garden is at the rear of her home.

Farmers' Federation News WW II
April 1941

Seaman Edgar Taylor Is 'Somewhere At Sea'

Edgar D. Taylor, third class seaman of the United States navy, is "somewhere at sea," according to word received by his wife, Mrs. E. D. Taylor of 76 Oakwood road.

TAYLOR

Taylor is the son of Mrs. M. D. Taylor of 202 Virginia avenue. He was educated at Lee Edwards high school, and before entering the service in January of this year he was assistant manager of the meat market at the Dixie Super store in West Asheville. He has a brother, Harvey P. Taylor, who is in the army, stationed in Louisiana.

Asheville Times May 11, 1943

Immunization Campaign Gets Under Way Here

This youngster, Kenneth Teague of 243 1-2 Sulphur Springs road, is expressing in no uncertain terms his disapproval of being stuck in the arm at the first of a series of immunization clinics at Vance elementary school this morning. But no doubt he soon discovered that it wasn't half so bad as he had believed it would be. Through cooperation of the city health department in a nation-wide campaign, persons here are being immunized free of charge against smallpox, diphtheria and typhoid fever. In this picture, Dr. Louise Perry wields the needle and Miss Mary Copeland assists. Miss Copeland is a city health department nurse. Clinics will be held tomorrow at All Souls parish house and Vance school, on Thursday at Claxton and Randolph schools, and on Friday at the Salvation Army citadel and Livingston street (negro) school.

Asheville Times May 26, 1942

Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher Wed 60 years

ASHEVILLE – Mr. and Mrs. George Robert Thatcher of Asheville will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary with an open house given by family and friends from 2 to 4 p.m. Dec. 15 at the home of their son, G. Richard Thatcher of Asheville.

Mrs. Thatcher is the former Eva Hope Griffith. They were married on Dec. 15, 1941, in Crown Point, Ind. Their children are Robert M. Thatcher of Detroit, Mich., Jack B. Thatcher of Niles, Mich., and G. Richard Thatcher of Asheville. They have four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Asheville Citizen December 9, 2001

Four Asheville Boys Set Out In Row Boat To View Mississippi

Lads Are Located By Officers After Spending Night On Sandbar.

Thoughts of youth are long ones, but something had to be done about the dreams of four Asheville boys who set out Saturday seeking the makings of a saga.

Summer suns were shining on the French Broad river waters and big things were happening in the low countries. Adventure called to them and they answered—four boys in a boat. The saga's a short one, but it holds flavor and the boys still maintain it's a good idea.

Jimmie Thomas of 264 State street, Robert Troute of 628 1-2 Haywood road, Gene Peterson of Peace street and Pete Pappas of 12 New street, all 12 to 14 years of age, had been reading a lot about the big floods of the Mississippi river and the mighty stream's tributaries. They decided to feast their eyes so used to mountains and small streams, on the great expanses of "Father of Waters."

Collect Supplies

Obtaining a small boat, the boys began a systematic collection of supplies. Most of the stuff came from home larders and closets, including canned fruits and vegetables, bread and blankets. Cooking utensils were few, but they had planned to live like pioneers—off the country and around an open campfire. They carried two rifles with which to augment their food supplies.

The trip, planned to take them down to the French Broad to the junction of the Holston river, thence into the Tennessee river near Knoxville, thence the entire distance of the Tennessee river to Paducah, Ky., and on down the Ohio river to Cairo, Ill., where that river joins the Mississippi, began at Carrier's bridge in Asheville Saturday afternoon.

The family of the Pappas boy reported to police and the sheriff's department Saturday night their son was missing. Other reports about the boys came in yesterday morning to both departments and a search began along the river banks in Asheville, clues pointing toward this type of youthful adventure.

The expedition was located, progressing down the river yesterday morning near Craggy. Sheriff's deputies and Captain Eric Hall of the police department hailed the explorers and they pulled to shore.

Made Good Progress

It developed the "Tom Sawyer" quartet had made good progress dodging boulders and running some mild rapids, late Saturday afternoon and during the evening. Dark overtook the flood seekers and they ran their boat onto a sandbar and made camp Saturday night.

Undaunted by their uncomfortable lodgings on the sandbar and with the spirit of adventure still aflame, the four boys broke camp and launched their boat again yesterday morning, continuing the first leg of their long journey to the valley of the Mississippi. And they were still headed westward, drifting along on the dancing French Broad waters when the officers ahoyed them from the prosaic banks of the stream near Craggy. The odyssey was over.

Back home, the boys still believe they could have made it. It's summer and the sun is shining on the river.

Asheville Times May 31, 1943

Nannie Meadows Thomas

Jan 31, 1907 Jun 29, 2006

Asheville - Nannie Berthina Meadows Thomas, 99, of 466 Old County Home Road died Thursday, June 29, 2006 at Aston Park Health Care Center following a period of declining health.

A native of Spring Creek Community of Madison County, she had resided in Buncombe County since 1935.

Mrs. Thomas was a daughter of the late Burgin Cemore Meadows and Mollie Hipps Meadows and the wife of Fred Hampton Thomas who died July 28, 1982. She was also preceded in death by her 10 brothers and sisters, Doctor, Maggie, Hard, Romain, Burgin, Dot, Bill, Ada, Bonnie and Tom.

Mrs. Thomas was the former owner and operator of Meadows Dry Goods where she served the community at that location from 1949 to 2004. She was a member of Calvary Baptist Church and a former member of the Ladies Auxilliary Fire Department at West Buncombe.

Surviving are her daughter, Molly Braswell and husband, Terry of Asheville; grandchildren, Tom Braswell and wife, Patrice, Doug Braswell, Mike Braswell and wife, Karen all of Asheville and Teresa Jamison and husband, Mike of Raleigh; great grandchildren, Luke, Rebekah, Aaron, Mollie, Elizabeth, Matthew and Ry; sister, Martha Fisher of Enka.

Funeral services will be held at 4 p.m. Sunday in the chapel of Anders-Rice Funeral Home with the Rev. Don Welborn officiating. Burial will be in Bethel Baptist Church Cemetery.

The family will receive friends from 3 to 4 p.m. Sunday at the funeral home.

Memorials may be made to Calvary Baptist Church, 531 Haywood Road, Asheville, N.C. 28806.

Times, Wednesday, April 9, 1952

FISHBURNE HORTON HYLDBURG

MICHAEL MAY THOMAS ATKINS

APPLY FOR CHARTER—Members of the temporary West Asheville youth center committee have applied for a charter as a non-profit corporation to purchase a lot and build a center. The Rev. W. G. Thomas is chairman of the committee. He is shown with Judge Shelby E. Horton, Carl A. Hyldburg, W. E. Michael Jr., John B. May, Harry T. Atkins and Frank B. Fishburne.

MAY, 1956

PATTON THOMAS

LINGO DEMAREE LANNING

FIRST SPADEFUL—C. C. Demaree, chairman of the building committee, turns the first spadeful of earth for the new educational building of West Asheville Presbyterian Church. Assisting at the ground-breaking ceremony this week were W. G. Lingo, chairman of the board of trustees; Sam Patton, a member of the building committee; J. W. Lanning, vice chairman of the board of deacons; and the Rev W. G. Thomas, pastor. The new building will cost $74,000. The new building will contain classrooms, nursery, kindergarten, a chapel, kitchen and fellowship hall Work began Wednesday.

Asheville Citizen May 1956

WARM SUN BRINGS OUT BLOOMS—Countless hundreds of fruit trees were in full bloom here yesterday as a warm sun brought Asheville residents out into the open for a stroll, a hike or 18 holes of golf. Typical of the trees in bloom under yesterday's bright sun was this one, not far from Haywood road on the Deaver View road in West Asheville. Pictured with the blooms is Miss Miriam Thomason of 59 Oakwood road.

Bruce Emory
Research

BOMB CRASHES 11 FEET FROM YOUTH ON SHIP

Seaman Paul Thompson Relates Experiences Of Four Sea Battles.

By JUNE GLENN, JR.

A screaming delayed action bomb from a Japanese dive bomber which crashed through the flight deck of the aircraft carrier U. S. S. Yorktown only 11 feet from where Seaman First Class Paul Kennedy Thompson was stationed, "was too close for comfort," but that was only one of several narrow escapes this 19-year-old youth has experienced while participating in four sea battles -- two of them major engagements -- during the past year and a half.

THOMPSON

Young Thompson, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Thompson of Deaverview road, West Asheville, is at home on a 30-day leave, his first since enlisting in the navy October 29, 1941. In a recent interview, he recalled many vivid and spectacular scenes he had witnessed since entering the navy.

He was stationed at Norfolk when war was declared in December 1941, having just completed his "boot" training at the naval training station there. Soon thereafter, he went aboard the aircraft carrier Yorktown when the big ship sailed into the Pacific battle area and on January 31 (President Roosevelt's birthday in America), Thompson recalled, made a raid on the Marshall and Gilbert Islands.

It was Thompson's first taste of battle and at the age of 17 it was quite an experience for the lad who had put aside his school work to enlist in the armed forces and help Uncle Sam. He recalled that during this first raid only one Japanese plane, a four-motored patrol bomber, came within range of the carrier and the gun crew promptly sent Tojo war's machine crashing into the sea.

Duties On Yorktown

Seaman Thompson's duties aboard the Yorktown consisted of the refueling and checking over of airplanes and making sure they were in readiness for action at all times.

In the Coral Sea battle in May of last year, the Yorktown was right in the thick of all the action, Thompson said. It was there Thompson had his narrow escape with the delayed action bomb.

It was about 11 o'clock on the morning of May 7 that we almost faced destruction," Thompson said in describing the action. "It was a clear day and the sea calm, when suddenly it seemed from every direction came swarms of Japanese planes. About 11:15 o'clock, we were hit about midship by a delayed action bomb. It struck about 11 feet from me and if it hadn't been the delayed action type I would have been a "gone Duck" Thompson said. The explosion of the bomb threw Thompson straight up into the air causing him to strike his head on the ceiling two feet above. He was shaken up a bit but apparently suffered no great injury from the blow.

The raid lasted for 23 minutes, the young seaman said and it was during that time he noticed the aircraft carrier Lexington, which also participated in the fighting, was sinking following bomb hits by Jap planes. For some time, he watched from his post on the "island" of the flight deck, the other ships in the American force pulling alongside the crippled Lexington to help fight the fires and take off wounded men.

Fire Breaks Out

Meanwhile a fire had broken out on the Yorktown as a result of the bomb hit and so all available men aboard were called upon to fight the blaze. Thompson praised highly the great courage and bravery his fellow comrades displayed in risking their lives to go into the blazing inferno to rescue shipmates trapped where the bomb exploded. What made it even more heroic was that the men knew that the fire was burning dangerously close to ammunition and yet they took the risk in order to help their pals, Thompson explained.

Following the Coral Sea battle, the Yorktown went to Pearl Harbor for repairs. The ship only remained in port a few days and then pushed out to sea again seeking action. That time, it was to the Solomon Islands for a raid on Tulagi island. Thompson said practically no enemy opposition occurred in that encounter.

It was almost a month later that the Yorktown was destined to meet her fate—in the Battle of Midway. "It was about 10:30 o'clock on the morning of June 4 that the first of the fatal attacks was launched agaist the carrier. Two waves of Jap dive bombers came at us and torpedo planes also joined in the assault," Thompson said. "We were hit several times by bombs during these attacks," he continued. Thompson said an order to take cover had been sounded, and when such a command is given the men lie face down just as close to the deck as possible. As one of the bombs exploded nearby, fragments or bomb splinters, struck Thompson in the head, just missing his right eye. Luckily the injuries were not serious, although several scars on his face will be there for a lifetime as a reminder of another brush with death.

About 2:30 o'clock that afternoon, another wave of Japanese planes attacked the Yorktown and that time the finishing blows came. The ship was left helpless and without power.

Order To Abandon Ship

"The order to abandon ship came about two hours later, and I was placed aboard a life raft," Thompson recounted. "It was almost an hour before the survivors on our raft were picked up by a destroyer." Next day he was transferred to another ship and later placed aboard a rescue ship and sent to Hawaii.

Despite the terrific pounding the Yorktown had received in the enemy attack, a Japanese submarine later was credited with the actual sinking of the ship while it was being towed back to port.

Thompson had high praise for the American boys on the far-flung battle fronts and said they have been giving out plenty of telling blows against the enemy but that was only a sample of what the future holds in store for the axis, he said.

After arriving in the Hawaiian islands, Thompson was sent to a rest camp for about two weeks and since that time has been serving on a battleship.

Thompson wears campaign bars showing American defense, American theater and Pacific Asiatic offensive. In addition, four stars are attached to these bars signifying participation in the four campaigns: Marshall and Gilbert Island raid; Coral Sea battle, Tulagi Island attack, and the Battle of Midway.

JUNE 28 1905.

CARRIER AND GASTON BOUNDARY IS BOUGHT BY GAY GREEN AND P. H. THRASH

Consideration Approximately $37,000--To be Subdivided Into Residence Lots.

A CITY TO BE BUILT BEYOND THE TAHKEEOSTEE.

The Property Contains 480 Acres and Has Over a Mile of River Frontage.

One of the biggest real estate deals negotiated in this section since the transfer of vast holdings to George W. Vanderbilt was successfully closed up today by the well known real estate firm of Hall & Penland, when 480 acres of beautifully located residential property in the West Asheville section, overlooking the French Broad river and known as the Carrier and Gaston boundary, was transferred to Gay Green and P. H. Thrash of this city for the consideration of approximately $37,000. The property has a frontage of more than a mile on the west side of the French Broad river and also a great frontage on the main macadamized roads traversing West Asheville. The deal that was consummated today has been on for the past several days, but the matter was kept quiet and little was known of the negotiations until the formal transfer of the papers this afternoon, when the statement was made that the property was purchased by Messers Green and Thrash with a view of sub-dividing it into residence lots and the building of a city across the French Broad. The property has also been surveyed and platted with provision for broad streets throughout the tract. It has two entrances from the Asheville side, one at the Carrier's bridge, spanning the French Broad and Swannanoa rivers near Biltmore and the other at the Smith's bridge in the milling section of this city.

The rapid growth of West Asheville during the past twelve months and the sale of the Carrier and Gaston boundary today has given rise to renewed speculation relative to a trolley line into that section. [redacted] made this morning on good authority that the neccessary funds for the building of a road from this city to the Asheville school, five miles from here, were practically in sight and that the road would undoubtedly be constructed during the next 12 months. It is said that the purpose of those interested in the road is to cross the river at a point between the Smith bridge and Carrier bridge and to route the line through the more thickly settled portions of West Asheville.

One of the purchasers of the boundary said this afternoon that a factory site would be donated to anyone or corporation desiring to locate in that section to be selected from three or four desirable locations and to include as much as four or five acres of land.

Asheville Gazette News June 28, 1905

Four Asheville Boys Set Out In Row Boat To View Mississippi

Lads Are Located By Officers After Spending Night On Sandbar.

Thoughts of youth are long ones, but something had to be done about the dreams of four Asheville boys who set out Saturday seeking the makings of a saga.

Summer suns were shining on the French Broad river waters and big things were happening in the low countries. Adventure called to them and they answered—four boys in a boat. The saga's a short one, but it holds flavor and the boys still maintain it's a good idea.

Jimmie Thomas of 264 State street, Robert Troute of 628 1-2 Haywood road, Gene Peterson of Peace street and Pete Pappas of 12 New street, all 12 to 14 years of age, had been reading a lot about the big floods of the Mississippi river and the mighty stream's tributaries. They decided to feast their eyes, so used to mountains and small streams, on the great expanses of "Father of Waters."

Collect Supplies

Obtaining a small boat, the boys began a systematic collection of supplies. Most of the stuff came from home larders and closets, including canned fruits and vegetables, bread and blankets. Cooking utensils were few, but they had planned to live like pioneers—off the country and around an open campfire. They carried two rifles with which to augment their food supplies.

The trip, planned to take them down to the French Broad to the junction of the Holston river, thence into the Tennessee river near Knoxville, thence the entire distance of the Tennessee river to Paducah, Ky., and on down the Ohio river to Cairo, Ill., where that river joins the Mississippi, began at Carrier's bridge in Asheville Saturday afternoon.

The family of the Pappas boy reported to police and the sheriff's department Saturday night their son was missing. Other reports about the boys came in yesterday morning to both departments and a search began along the river banks in Asheville, clues pointing toward this type of youthful adventure.

The expedition was located, progressing down the river yesterday morning near Craggy. Sheriff's deputies and Captain Eric Hall of the police department hailed the explorers and they pulled to shore.

Made Good Progress

It developed the "Tom Sawyer" quartet had made good progress dodging boulders and running some mild rapids, late Saturday afternoon and during the evening. Dark overtook the flood seekers and they ran their boat onto a sandbar and made camp Saturday night.

Undaunted by their uncomfortable lodgings on the sandbar and with the spirit of adventure still aflame, the four boys broke camp and launched their boat again yesterday morning, continuing the first leg of their long journey to the valley of the Mississippi. And they were still headed westward, drifting along on the dancing French Broad waters when the officers ahoyed them from the prosaic banks of the stream near Craggy. The odyssey was over.

Back home, the boys still believe they could have made it. It's summer and the sun is shining on the river.

Asheville Times May 31, 1943

Pvt. James Turner Ends Leave Here

Pvt. James A. Turner, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Turner of 58 Allen street, West Asheville, has returned to Norfolk, Va., after spending a 15-day convalescent leave at home.

Turner entered the service in January and received his basic training at Camp Lee, Va. He attended the city schools here and was associated with Turner's Motor inn before going into the army.

TURNER

Asheville Times July 2, 1943

West Asheville People

UVW

Buncombe Veterans Fought In Famous Civil War Battles

One man who charged up Cemetery Ridge with the Stars and Bars in Pickett's immortal and fatal rush at Gettysburg and half a dozen who took part in Bragg's "barren victory" at Chickamauga, are among the 37 living Confederate veterans in Buncombe county. Another was present when Lee surrendered at Appomattox, and still another remembers clearly the fall of Fort Sumter, the opening gun of the war, although he did not enter the service until several weeks later.

The veterans living today are a modest lot for the most part. Those who were old enough to get into the grey ranks in '61 are extremely few and a majority of the men who attend the meetings of Zeb Vance camp at the courthouse nowadays say quite frankly: "We were just boys in the regiments recruited toward the end; we guarded prisoners and watched mountain passes; some of us were not even armed. But we had to sleep in the snow sometimes, and live in the mud, go hungry and ragged, so we feel that we did our part."

Average Age Is 98

Consider for a moment the troops recruited in '61 were from 21 to 35 years old. Possibly the average was 25. That would make the average age of the survivors today 98—and the youngest, recruited at 20, would be 93. The young men who went into the late regiments in '63 and '64 were often as young as sixteen—from eight to 15 years younger than the troops of the first great Confederate victories, so by far the greater number of veterans living today are of these late regiments.

But even among the living veterans who were but lads in their teens when Sumter fell, are men who fought with musket and bayonet, dashed on horseback with naked sabre, or swabbed and pointed cannon, in the really great battles of the war.

Gettysburg, the real death knell of the grey hopes and Murfreesboro or Stone's River, one of the bloodiest battles of the war, the hundred bloody skirmishes in Sherman's path of devastation; the victory of Bragg at Chickamauga and the battle of Kennesaw Mountain, are memories that stir the blood in the now feeble limbs of about a dozen of the veterans in the county today.

Among them are:

W. W. Pace, now 93 years old, had not yet enlisted when the Confederates fired on Fort Sumter, but he was enrolled in Company B, First South Carolina artillery a few weeks thereafter and spent the next two years as a member of the fort's "rebel" garrison. He was there when the Union fleet finally battered them into submission in April '63, and from Charleston, his outfit set out across the Carolinas and Georgia. He was in front of Sherman when that Yankee general swept through Georgia and he was captured finally at the big battle of Averysboro, S. C. He was wounded during the seige of Sumter by the Yankees. He now lives with his son J. B. Pace near Arden.

Was At Chickamauga

J. M. Case, who lives at Emma, and his brother, W. B. Case, now dead, went out with Company D, 60th North Carolina, and were transferred to the famous sixtieth regiment. They saw service in Virginia and fought at both Chickamauga and Kennesaw Mountain and were in the thick of 38 days of service fighting around Atlanta.

John M. Henck of Marion, a member of Zeb Vance camp, was captured at Gettysburg after being wounded. He was also in the fighting around Richmond and faced Grant's troops in the wilderness around Spottsylvania.

Spencer Freeman, who served in the 25th North Carolina, is another veteran of the battles of Chickamauga and Kennesaw Mountain.

Captain W. Ebert Weaver of Weaverville and his negro body servant, Gilbert Baird, went out with the 29th North Carolina and campaigned over six states, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Florida and both the Carolinas. Captain Weaver still carries a bullet from Chickamauga. He saw Sherman burn Atlanta and took part in the last battle of the war, an engagement at Mansfield, La., some days after Lee's surrender at Appomattox.

Colonel R. L. Fitzpatrick, present commander of Zeb Vance camp, was for awhile a member of Morgan's famous raiders, but didn't cross the Ohio on the brilliant raid into Kentucky and Indiana. He enlisted with 31st Tennessee, but for most of the war was in Captain Owen's detachment of scouts, doing reconnoitering for Vaughn's brigade.

F. B. Bishop, 89, of Avery's creek, was present at Lee's surrender to Grant and was wounded "at the big battle of Bull Gap." His father and older brother also wore the grey.

S. Pettigrew, of Montreat, says he was in "plenty of battles" in the Carolinas, and was wounded seven times. He is now 97 years old.

Wounded In Pickett's Charge

Levi J. Walker, 93 years old now, was the fifth color bearer shot down in the Confederate charge up Cemetery Ridge. He lost his left leg and spent the remainder of the war a prisoner at David's Island, N. Y. He has lived in Asheville since 1920 and his home is at 266 Forest Hill drive. He was in Company B of the 13th North Carolina.

The Rev. T. F. Glenn, who has been in the ministry 75 years, was chaplain of a regiment of General Joe Wheeler's command called the Third Confederate. It was made up of companies from Georgia, Tennessee, and the Carolinas. He was at the battle of Murfreesboro in Tennessee and was in front of Sherman at Atlanta.

Lee Williams of Old Fort was in Company B, of the 9th North Carolina artillery battalion. He took part in the battle of Forth Fisher and saw service in Virginia.

Ephraim Byerley, who lives in West Asheville, had two fingers shot off at the battle of Hatcher's Gap. He served in Company A, 21st North Carolina.

J. J. Stephenson, who was in Company C, 60th North Carolina, was in the battle of Bull's Gap and saw service in Tennessee.

R. T. Underwood, Chestnut street, now 87 years old, served Capt M H. Love's company of Col. W. H. Thomas' Legion, which included 400 Cherokee Indians. The unit was made up largely of young boys and Underwood's job was to guard Yankee prisoners and the passes in the Great Smoky mountains. He and his comrades saw no fighting but endured great hardships in the last winter of the war. He brought many prisoners back to Asheville.

P. B. Brown, living on the Breward road, was in Company C, 16th South Carolina regiment.

Several Served In Cavalry

A number of the local veterans belonged to the 14th North Carolina cavalry battalion, a unit recruited of young soldiers. Among these were J. J. Stephens, R. B. Bitch of Horseshoe, J. A. Hughey and H. S. Walton.

John Paxton of Canton, who belongs to Zeb Vance camp, saw service in the western army with Company I, 62nd North Carolina.

J. W. Dickerson, who was in Col. Walter Bryson's command was quite young, and served at the saltpetre works near Hendersonville.

There are a number of names on the Confederate pension role at the courthouse whose regimental affiliations and records are not known to the camp, nor does the pension clerk have their addresses. They are known to be living, however, as they called for their checks in June. They include D. V. Cole, T. M. Cole, E. Guthry, Thomas Hudgens, Henry S. Lenoughb, C. W. Reynolds, Clingman Sawyer, O. W. Surratt, David B. Watts, Charles W. White and Richard Gowan. The names of J. A. Ballard and H. B. Parham are on

VICTORY GARDEN SWEEPSTAKES WINNER—Mrs. J. Frank Van Valkenburg, sweepstakes winner in the Victory Garden contest, is shown in her garden at 19 Dorchester avenue, holding a large candyroaster which she has just picked.

Asheville Citizen September 20, 1942

WIDOW OF ASHEVILLE MAN PRESENTED MEDALS

—Mrs. Vera L. Vance of 27 Wamboldt avenue is shown here receiving the Air Medal and Purple Heart awarded posthumously to her husband, Sgt. William L. Vance, Jr., who lost his life while serving with the army air forces in the European theater on November 27, 1945. The presentation was made by Major John A. Nelson, AAF liaison officer at Moore General hospital.

Asheville Times March 14, 1946

SUNDAY, MAY 6, 1945

WINS HONORS — Harry Varner, above, son of Mrs. Annie Varner of West Asheville and a senior at Lee Edwards high school, won first place in the National Forensic league regional finals at Nashville, Tenn., Friday, and proceeded to Evanston, Ill., where he will enter the national finals at Northwestern university tomorrow.

THE PARENT-TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION OF BILTMORE, NORTH CAROLINA HAS THE HONOR OF PRESENTING

Elda Vettori

AMERICA'S GREATEST SINGING ACTRESS

Metropolitan Opera Company in an "All Request Program"

JOSEPHINE SPENCER, at the Piano
CLYDE SPENCER, Violoncellist
BILTMORE HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 6TH, 8:30 P. M., 1936

COMPLIMENTS OF

AMERICAN ENKA CORPORATION

ENKA, N. C.

Program

I

(a) Thanks Be To God ..... Dickson
(b) When I Have Sung My Songs ..... Charles
(c) Native Land ..... Gretchaninoff
(d) Do Not Go My Love ..... Hageman
(e) Colombetta ..... Buzzi-Peccia

MME. VETTORI'S
MILLINER

CARL'S
4 BATTERY PARK AVE.

MME. VETTORI'S HAIRDRESSER

florida's
HAIRDRESSING SALON
BATTERY PARK HOTEL
Telephone 2060

China Glass

THE ARTISANS' SHOP
(ROBERT VALIER)
Biltmore Forest

Gifts Phone 2281

OUR CONGRATULATIONS

To the Biltmore P. T. A. for offering the community such a worthwhile program

BELK'S
DEPARTMENT STORE

COMPLIMENTS

OF THE

GEORGE VANDERBILT
HOTEL

II

(a) Nebbie ..... Respighi
(b) The Faltering Dusk ..... Kramer
(c) Till I Wake ..... Finden
(d) When You Go ..... Guion

CAROLINA
SHEET METAL WORKS

33 CAROLINA LANE
TELEPHONE 133
E. O. BUCKNER O. W. MEADOWS

ASHEVILLE BLUE GEM
COAL CO.

14 BROADWAY

PHONES 1226 and 752

ANCHOR
KOLSTOKER

COMPLIMENTS
OF
RADER BEAUTY SHOP

SCHRAFFT'S
"The Nation's Leading Candies"
MORGAN BROS., INC.
WHOLESALE DISTRIBUTORS
67 Broadway Asheville, N. C.

COMPLIMENTS OF
BROWNELL-DUNN CO.
Funeral Directors
57 SPRUCE ST.

HUNT'S TEXAS STATION
BILTMORE, N. C.
Let us Marfax your car. Buy Firestone Ground Grip Tires and save trouble and expense of using Chains

COMPLIMENTS OF STERCHI BROS.
Inc.

III

Lamento (Piano and Cello) ..... Josephine Spencer

CLYDE SPENCER, Violoncellist

CRAVEN & ALLEN
Dealers In HEAVY AND FANCY GROCERIES
MEATS, VEGETABLES, PRODUCE
A. G. Store 372 Southside Ave.
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

BILTMORE SHELL SERVICE
52 Hendersonville Road, Biltmore
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Phone 1117 Biltmore, N. C.
BALDWIN'S
PERMANENTS, ALL TYPES
$2.50 to $7.00
Work Absolutely Guaranteed

ELMER INGLE
GROCERIES - MEATS - VEGETABLES
504 HENDERSONVILLE ROAD
Phone 1324 Phone 1325

Phone 3047 We Call For and Deliver SUPERIOR DRY CLEANERS
47 NORTH MARKET ST.
"Guaranteed Dry Cleansing" SUITS AND DRESSES 50c

COMPLIMENTS
CURTISS MOTOR CO.
Dealer for B-K Power Brakes
24 ASTON STREET

Phone 1878 380 Depot Street
MERCHANTS CANDY CO.
R. C. TORIAN
Wholesale Confectioners
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

AS LONG AS A COMMUNITY HAS THE INTEREST OF ITS CHILDREN AT HEART AND SPONSORS GOOD MUSIC—THAT COMMUNITY WILL PROSPER
BLANCHE E. LOFTAIN

IV

Arias (a) Habanera (Carmen) ..... Bizet
(b) Seguidilla ..... Bizet
(In Costume)

Intermission—10 Minutes

COMPLIMENTS
OF DAVE STEEL CO.

COMPLIMENTS
OF DIXIE STORES
A Better Place to Trade

HAYES & HOPSON

EVERYTHING AUTOMOTIVE

Phone 5200 14 Spruce St.

Phone 402

JOHNSON-CHANDLEY LUMBER CO.

INCORPORATED

Office and Yards, Koon Development
BILTMORE, N. C.

PYROFAX GAS

REAL GAS for use in Cooking—Water Heating—Electrolux Refrigeration

QUICK, CLEAN, ECONOMICAL, SAFE
See our line of MAGIC CHEF RANGES

ASHEVILLE WAREHOUSE COMPANY

ASHEVILLE, N. C.

P. O. Box 981 Phone 1178

V

(a) Storm Lullaby ..... Sanderson

(b) Nur, wer die Sehnsucht Kennt ..... Tschaikowsky

(c) Wiegenlied ..... Brahms

(d) Lullaby of The Madonna ..... Head
With Cello Obbligato

ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP
USE MORE OF IT

CAROLINA POWER AND LIGHT COMPANY

RICHBOURG MOTOR CO.

YOUR Ford DEALER

COXE ST. PHONE 4616

If You Want a Real Meal

THE LIDO

IS the Place, and Reasonable too

68 Patton Avenue

With sincere appreciation to Elda Vettori, the children's friend—a great Soul and a great Singer.

BILTMORE PARENT-TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION

VI

(a) Au Pays ..... Holmes

(b) Moon Marketing ..... Weaver

(c) Rain ..... Curran

(d) The Song I Would Sing ..... Spencer
(Dedicated to Elda Vettori)

(e) A Little Song ..... Voorhis

(Headdress by Carl's)

THE members of the Biltmore P. T. A. wish to extend their sincere thanks to all firms, patrons and patronesses who contributed toward the success of this concert.

Cordially yours,
MRS. E. O. BUCKNER,
President.

PATRONS AND PATRONESSES

Mr. and Mrs. Burnham Standish Colburn, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben B. Robertson, Dr. and Mrs. H. G. Brookshire, Mr. Julian Brookshire, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Damtoft, Mr. N. H. Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Dale Kalter, Dr. and Mrs. Robert S. Carroll, Miss Martha Norburn, Mrs. Ward Dabney, Miss Mary Bright, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dave, Judge and Mrs. Sam Cathey, Mrs. B. F. Gladney, Mrs. Karl Wenz, Mrs. D. T. Lamb, Misses Mary and Bertie Hall, Miss Margaret Byerly, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Davis and Miss Tera Davis, Marshall: Dr. and Mrs. M. E. Hoffman, Miss Eloise Sheppard, Miss Betty Bell, Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Groves, Mr. Pinkney Groves, Mr. and Mrs. Grove Seely, Miss Marguerite Samoyoa, Mrs. Mack Brown, Miss Irene Holcombe and Mrs. E. N. Holcombe, of Weaverville, Mr. and Mrs. Angus McLean Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Merton Josephson, Miss Faye Shook.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth B. Edwards, Miss Mary Jane Edwards, Miss Amy Emanuel and guest, Mrs. Fater, Miss Grace Walter, Miss Annie Laurie Crawford, Miss Polly Parker, Mr. and Mrs. A. X. Blanchard, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Bates, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Fisher, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Buckner, Mr. and Mrs. Burnett, Mr. Carl Hood, Miss Elizabeth Wakefield, Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Beasley, Mrs. A. R. Carter, Mrs. Lloyd Jarrett, Mrs. S. L. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Crawford, Miss Philena Dickey, Dr. and Mrs. A. C. McCall, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lackman, Mr. and Mrs. Elmo Brown, Mr. and Mrs. R. P. Booth, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Wilkinson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Davis, Miss Lillian Bushong, Miss Novella McIntire, and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Barnard.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lloyd, Mrs. Cecil Curtiss, Miss Mary Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Earle, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Stringer, Mr. and Mrs. H, R, Fries, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Cooper, Mr. Robert Valier, Mrs. H. W. Rainey, Dr. and Mrs. J. R. Johnson, Mrs. Lucille Chinnock, Mrs. O. N. Hahn, Miss Blanche Loftain, Miss Mary L. Wildley, Mrs. Virginia Fortune Hooks, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Nelon, Mr. and Mrs. D. G. Matherson, Mr. Frank Gough, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Freed, Mrs. Annie Sanford Donahoo, the Rev. and Mrs. George Floyd Rogers, the Rev. B. H. Gehring, the Rev. and Mrs. M. T. Hipps, Mrs. A. B. Hoskins, Mr. and Mrs. Emmett J. Davis, Dr. and Mrs. N. P. Maddux, Mrs. Bessie Renfro, Mrs. Jack E. Weaver, Mrs. Roger Grant, Mr. and Mrs. George B. Coggins, Miss Hilda Kille, Mrs. Forest B. Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Crosby Adams, Miss Frances Hahn, Dr. and Mrs. B. E. Morgan, Mrs. W. K. Warren, Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Brimmer and Miss Polly Morrow.

MARSHALL, N. C.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. John Corbet, Miss Hazel West, Mrs. Vanda Wooten, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. McLean, Miss Katy Sams, and Mrs. Vivian Rector.

USHERS

Miss Viva McGeachy

Miss Eleanore Brown

Miss Ruth Freed

Miss Carthine Stackhouse

GROVES PRINTING CO., ASHEVILLE, N. C.

The drink you read about "refreshing"

Drink Coca-Cola Delicious and Refreshing

8 million a day

Good news! Good news! A refreshing drink. The little red signs point out that it's around the corner from anywhere. ☺ ☺ ☺ It takes a refreshing drink to refresh. With Coca-Cola's delicious taste and cool after-sense of refreshment, a little minute is long enough for a big rest.

The Best Served Drink in the World

A pure drink of natural flavors served ice-cold in a patented bottle—the bottle you can identify even in the dark. Every bottle sterilized, filled and sealed air-tight by automatic machines, without the touch of human hands—insuring purity.

IT HAD TO BE GOOD TO GET WHERE IT IS

Annual Dinner

Coca-Cola

BOTTLERS' CONVENTION

(SOUTHERN SECTION)

KENILWORTH INN

7:30 P. M.

Thursday, March 8, 1928

MENU

Canape

Tomato Bouillon

Stuffed Olives Celery Hearts

Broiled Bluefish—Maitre D'Hotel

Roast Squab Au Cresson

New Peas Julienne Potatoes

Stuffed Pepper

Rose Salad

Coca-Cola Ice Cream Jelly Roll

Roquefort Cheese—Toasted Crackers

Coffee

Cigarettes Cigars

PROGRAM

(In convention hall immediately following dinner)

1. Al Dunn's Orchestra.
2. Lowell Patton Trio.
3. Mrs. Walter Fletcher
   (Imitations of Mountain Women)
4. Miss Dorothy Hancock
   Mr. Charels E. Burnham
   Miss Josephine Spencer, accompanist
5. "Senator" Edward Ford.
6. Mr. Lowell Patton at the Piano.
7. Carolina Quartet in Negro Spirituals.
8. Mr. Nick Kostopoulos
   (One of Asheville's Five-Star Dealers)
9. Lowell Patton Trio.
10. Al Dunn's Orchestra.

The Manor

ASHEVILLE, N.C.

SUNDAY, APRIL 10, 1927

THE MANOR TRIO

CLYDE SPENCER, Musical Director

Program

1. Overture — "Poet and Peasant" ..... Suppe
2. "Andante" (From Fifth Symphony), Tschaikowsky
3. Selection — "Rose Marie" ..... Friml
4. Concert Waltz — "Vienna Life" ..... Strauss
5. "The Lost Chord" ..... Sullivan
6. Operatic Selection — "Cavalleria Rusticana," Mascagni
7. Vocal Solos
   a. "The Palms" ..... Saure
   b. "The Rosary" ..... Nevin (By request)
   c. "Danny Boy" ..... Weatherly

   MRS. MAUDE W. KILGORE
8. "Hungarian Dance" ... Hofmann

Quiet is requested in the Music Room during the Evening Concert

The Manor

ASHEVILLE, N.C.

SUNDAY, MAY 8, 1927

THE MANOR TRIO

CLYDE SPENCER, Musical Director

Mothers' Day Program

1. Overture — "Hungarian Lustspiel," Keler-Bela
2. a. "Songs My Mother Taught Me," Dvorak
   b. "Mother Machree" ..... Ball
3. Concert Waltz — "La Rose Noire" ..... Aubry
4. Selection — "Madame Butterfly" ..... Puccini
5. a. "Serenade' ..... Widor
   b. "Au Bord d'un Ruisseau," Boisdeffre
6. Selection — "Blossom Time" ..... Romberg
7. 'Cello Solo — "Liebestraum" ..... Liszt

   CLYDE SPENCER
8. "Forget Me Not" ..... Macbeth
9. "Valse Espagnole" ..... Miro

Quiet is requested in the Music Room during the Evening Concert

Charles E. Burnham

PRESENTS IN

Concert-Recital

THE FOLLOWING PUPILS

MISS PAT ADAMS, Mezzo-Contralto
MRS. WM. RAY GRIFFIN, Soprano
MRS. ARTHUR SABIN, Soprano
MRS. OLIVER P. TEMPLEMAN, Soprano
MRS. MARVIN TERRELL, Soprano
MRS. S. W. WELTMER, Mezzo-Contralto

ASSISTED BY

MRS. JOSEPHINE SPENCER, Pianist
MISS ELVA JONES, Pianist

AT

BATTERY PARK HOTEL
THURSDAY EVENING, DEC. 17, 1925
AT EIGHT-THIRTY O'CLOCK

Program

Vissi d'arte, (Tosca) ---------- Puccini

The Singer ---------- Maxwell
Mrs. Sabin

Si mes vers ---------- Hahn

Sunset ---------- Buck
Mrs. Weltmer

Roberto, tu che adoro, (Robert le Diable) ---------- Meyerbeer

Oft have I seen the Swallow ---------- Del Aqua
Mrs. Templeman

INTERMISSION

Fantasie for two pianos ---------- Spencer
Mrs. Spencer and Elva Jones

Spirit Flower ---------- C.-Tipton

The Wind's in the South ---------- J. P. Scott
Mrs. Terrell

Sylvelin ---------- Sinding

Love is the Wind ---------- MacFadyen

Ho! Mr. Piper ---------- Curran
Mrs. Griffin

Voce di donna, (Gioconda) ---------- Ponchielli

The Loreley ---------- Liszt
Miss Adams

Josephine Spencer at the Piano

KARL VON RUCK, M.D.
1849 - 1918

BY

EDW. W. SCHOENHEIT, M.D.
Asheville, N. C.

KARL VON RUCK was born in Constantinople, July 10, 1849, his father being in the Diplomatic Service at the time. His early life was spent in Stuttgart, Germany, and in spite of the wishes of his family that he enter the Diplomatic Service he studied medicine and graduated with the degree of doctor of medicine in 1877. He then came to the United States and received an M. D. degree from the University of Michigan in 1879. Following this he did post graduate work in Berlin with Virchow and Robert Koch. Dr. von Ruck was present at the memorable meeting of the Berlin Physiological Society, March 24, 1882 when Koch announced the discovery of the tubercle bacillus.

After some years practice in Ohio, Dr. von Ruck decided to limit his work to tuberculosis and, seeking a more favorable climate for a sanitorium, he located in Asheville and established the Winyah Sanitorium, the first private institution for the treatment of tuberculosis, in 1888. Being interested in scientific research and having a remarkably keen investigative mind, he felt that the control of tuberculosis would come through biological treatment and immunization of children. He founded the von Ruck Research Laboratory for Tuberculosis in 1895 and in 1897 introduced the watery extract of tubercle bacilli, a modification of Koch's first tuberculin, which was widely used in treatment, and in 1912 he brought out a vaccine consisting of protein and lipoid extracts of tubercle bacilli which was used in treatment and with which he hoped to immunize children. Many years of research were spent in his laboratories hoping to perfect an immunizing preparation which would stamp out the disease.

Dr. von Ruck founded and edited the first medical periodical devoted to tuberculosis, THE JOURNAL OF TUBERCULOSIS, which was published in Asheville. Being an earnest and untiring student he collected and maintained one of the finest private libraries in the country. All important articles on tuberculosis were abstracted and over 150,000 cards were filed in a fire proof vault. He contributed extensively to the medical literature in this country and abroad, and his book, STUDIES IN IMMUNIZATION IN TUBERCULOSIS, published in collaboration with his son Dr. Silvio von Ruck, in 1916, represented observations of several thousand patients and many thousand animals.

About 1910 Dr. Silvio became medical director of the Winyah and built up an enviable repuation for himsetlf. Dr. Karl, during this period, became more interested in research and although he was a very able clinician, in addition to research, did consultation work only.

However, when Dr. Silvio came to his untimely death from pneumonia in 1918, though broken in spirit, due to the loss of his son and only grandchild, Miss Silvia, both from pneumonia, and his wife in 1921 from paralysis agitans, Dr. Karl again became active head of the Winyah. Fighting desperately against the inroads of chronic nephritis and hypertention he continued to work until three weeks before his death, though urged by his physicians to retire.

Thus on November 5, 1922, there passed away one of the great pioneers in tuberculosis, one of the outstanding figures in the history of tuberculosis in America. A student of Felix von Niemeyer, one of the greatest clinicians in the pre-bacterial era, he at first refused to accept the theories of infections and the demonstration of Villemin, however, his studies in Koch's laboratory so impressed him that he became one of the greatest students and investigators in infection and immunity in tuberculosis. A hard worker he seldom took a vacation and cared little for recreation, but was an accomplished musician and collected many rare flowering plants, especially orchids. Of strong convictions, he was often intolerant of those whose views differed from his, which often kept him from making friends However, those who knew him well loved him and though at times he may have seemed harsh, no kinder man ever lived.

Army Reservation Names Street In Memory Of Walker

In memory of the late George E. Walker of Asheville, who was killed while a prisoner of the Japanese Government during World War II, a street in an Army reservation, Deseret Chemical Depot, Tooele, Utah, has been named Walker Street.

WALKER

Walker's mother, Mrs. Leila Gosnell of 40 Johnston Boulevard, West Asheville, was notified of her son's honor by Col. R. T. Beurket, commanding officer of the post. His letter follows:

"I am grateful for the opportunity to advise you that as a lasting and living tribute to your son George E. Walker, who gave his life for his country during the recent World War, it has been decided to name one of the streets on this military reservation in his memory. The street named in honor of your son will be known as Walker Street and will for all time be carried as such on the official records of the Department of the Army.

"Although this honor is in itself small compensation for the loss suffered, it expresses the gratitude of the Chemical Corps of the Army and of the entire nation to one of the members of the Armed Forces who made the supreme sacrifice to maintain and preserve our democratic form of government."

Walker was reported killed October 24, 1944, when the Japanese ship on which he was being transported was bombed and sunk. In July, 1943, he was reported to be a prisoner of the Japanese in a Philippine military prison camp.

He entered the Army February 6, 1941, and was first stationed at Lawson Field, Ga., and later trained in chemical warfare at Savannah Air Base, Savannah, Ga. He left for the Philippine Islands October 22, 1941, arriving in the South Pacific a month later.

Asheville Citizen September 17, 1950

Westville pub taps new chef

James Wallman, also known as Oso, has been named executive chef at Westville Pub.

Oso came to Asheville in 1997 after 22 years of cooking and traveling all over the world.

DINING NOTES

After stints at La Caterina Trattatoria and Early Girl Eatery, Oso came to Westville Pub last month.

"The most common thread I've found in the countries in which I've cooked is simplicity," Oso said.

"I'm doing new things on the menu like a traditional Caribbean pork chop, curried chicken and pad Thai. We're also doing a different international night each month where we're featuring the cuisine of a different country.

"We're excited about the possibilities of bringing unique and exciting food to the west end of town" said Lu Young, who owns Westville Pub along with Greg Turner.

"Oso will be cooking up an assortment of dishes on July 20 and we'd like to invite people to drop by and sample international cuisine from Oso's travels."

Westville Pub is at 777 Haywood Road. For more information call 225-9782.

In The Face Of Adversity

Donald Walsh, who has made a career in city government for himself despite a polio attack in his teens that destroyed the use of his legs, accepted the Mayor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped award as the year's Outstanding Handicapped Employe in government. Walsh is a dispatcher for the city's water maintenance department. Standing beside him another man who has made it despite the fact that he has never seen another person's face. Blind since birth, Thomas A. Ridings finishes jet parts at Northrop Carolina. He was chosen the Outstanding Handicapped Employe in Industry. Handing out the plaques is T. P. McKavitt, vice chairman of the awards committee. A quadriplegic, Miss Jacquelyn Page. won the committee's top award as the Outstanding Handicapped Employe of Asheville-Buncombe County. (Staff Photo.)

—Citizen Photo

A POWER WHEELCHAIR was presented to Donald Walsh by the West Asheville Lions Club Tuesday night. At left, Dan Foster, chairman of the club's welfare committee goes over the chair's electrically operated controls with Walsh while Paul Nichols, club president, looks on. Walsh, a resident of West Asheville and member of a quartet which has sung at meetings of the club, is paralyzed from an attack of poliomyelitis.

—Times Photo by Malcolm Gamble.

HANDICAP HURDLED—Don Walsh, clerk at City Garage for the Water Maintenance Dept., has once again proved a sermon currently being preached by employers now observing National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week —"It pays to hire the handicapped." Walsh, who holds down a demanding job from a conventional wheel chair in his office on Valley street, switches to a powered chair for his after-work activities.

A Wheel Chair, A Quick Mind

The mood is enchantment. Embroidered rosebuds trellised with Val lace float on feathery light and warm brushed rayon chaillis. In pink, aqua, vanilla.

Don Walsh Is Young Man Who Is Going Places

By JAY HENSLEY

Don Walsh is a young man who is going places—and his mode of transportation is a wheel chair.

A wheel chair, a quick mind and a strong desire to help other people.

Wanting to help—and working at it—is probably the most powerful factor in his favor. It seems to be a contagious attitude, and the tough workmen with whom he deals have caught it.

Walsh, 28, is clerk in the water Maintenance Dept. of the City of Asheville. His legs are useless, shrunken by polio, but he handles the work of a full office staff of so-called normal people.

That's the way City Manager J. Weldon Weir has him sized up. Weir frequently has occasion to observe him at work dispatching crews in the mornings, and taking calls for water maintenance throughout the day.

Jesse Jayne, Walsh's boss, is also quite impressed with his work. Jayne, whose job as supertendent of the Water Maintenance Dept. requires him to be out of the office much of the time, depends on the clerk to keep his calls coming through.

Headquarters for the department are in City Garage on Valley street. Walsh works from 7 a. m. to 4 p. m. in an office which has no particular special equipment for a wheel chair employe. There is a convenient opening in the long office counter through which he wheels his chair, however.

Once inside the enclosure, Don Walsh is master of any situation which may confront him. He has been working at the job for about two years, and the 87 regulars in the department have come to depend upon him to know exactly what is going on at all times.

The department employs up to 127 men during the summer months, and Walsh takes the extra work schedules and time keeping chores in stride.

There are four shop crews which he dispatches to jobs inside the old city limits. Foremen and their crews take care of the remainder of the area within the new city limits and part of the county.

Jobs his crewmen handle include new water and sewer connections, repair of pipeline breaks, new service connections and hydrant repairs.

A call comes in reporting that a bulldozer has broken a water line in the Beverly Hills section. Walsh dispatches a crew to repair the damage. It's just part of the routine of the day.

The real hustle and bustle comes during the first hours of the day, however. A three-tier basket on his desk keeps assignments in order.

All orders are later transferred by Walsh to a permanent record book which includes the address, customer's name, date of job and work to be completed. Sewer line work also comes under the jurisdiction of the Water Maintenance Dept. and the crews average seven to 10 calls a day.

Walsh insists that his job couldn't be done without the ready co-operation of the men who compose the service crews. The men are just as certain that their jobs wouldn't be completed nearly as smoothly without the efficient supervision of the office clerk.

There seems to be little doubt in anybody's mind about the negative effect Walsh's handicap has on his work—and they didn't wait for National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week to voice their thoughts.

This does happen to be the week during which interested persons throughout the nation—including a dedicated group in Asheville—attempt to impress upon employers the usefulness of the so-called handicapped person.

Many employers, including the City of Asheville, have been aware of that fact for some time now—especially where it applies to Don Walsh. The city manager and the superintendent of the Water Maintenance Dept. were overheard discussing his unusual ability several months ago.

Walsh, a 1952 graduate of Lee H. Edwards High School, was stricken with polio on Aug. 2, 1952, and completed his high school work while a patient at Asheville Orthopedic Hospital. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Walsh of 17 Nebraska Ave.

He is a member of The Times Quartet, and the singing group has made numerous public appearances for the benefits of the March of Dimes and Lions Club shows for children. They have one recording on the market.

Walsh studied accounting at Blanton's Business College, and prior to that operated a print shop in his home.

Incidentally, he gets around outside the office about as fast as at work—and with considerably less effort.

At home he uses a motorized wheel chair presented to him in 1958 by members of the West Asheville Lions Club.

Mrs. M. M. Wamboldt

Mrs. M. M. Wamboldt, mother of Councilman Wickes Wamboldt, local columnist and writer of articles, lives in her house atop of ehe hill "where the race of men go by." We found this dainty little lady of white curls and most hospitable manner at her home on Beverly Road.

Mrs. Wamboldt is the daughter of a minister and the wife of a minister, Reverend Wambolde being a former pastor of the Calvary Baptist Church. Her only son, Mr. Wickes Wamboldt, is so well known locally that no comment at all or form of introduction is needed for him. His writings speak for him and his acts declare to the world the results of the training he received at her hand.

A host of frineds declared to us that she is a true mother in the highest sense of the meaning of the word,

Mrs. Wambolde enjoys splendid health and her favorite pastime is reading and religious work.

I NEED THE MONEY

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

For the thirty-seventh time this summer our door bell has been rung by some young man who has informed us with an ingratiating smile that he was working his way through college and consequently wanted us to subscribe to somebody or other's magazine.

WAMBOLDT

Now what edge has the chap who is working his way through a college he may or may not have seen, and may or may not ever expect to see, over anybody else who is selling anything? Every person desiring to exchange something for currency is on the job because he needs the money, and probably he needs it for constructive purposes.

If the college boy scheme is good for the college boy, real or imitation, why shouldn't the same idea be employed profitably by everyone else with something or other to trade you for your money?

Why should not the writer, for example, approach the publisher this way:

"I wish to buy a polo pony. So won't you please accept this manuscript?"

"But," argues one, "a polo pony is a luxury. A man doesn't need a polo pony."

Quite so. And to the average fellow a college education is a luxury too. He doesn't need it any more than the average man needs a polo pony. In fact, he needs it less, for after he gets it he can't do anything with it—and it is as likely to make a fool of him as anything else; whereas, anybody who owns a polo pony can, if he wishes, sell it for cash.

But to continue the train of thought, why shouldn't the grocer advertise something like this:

"My life insurance falls due this month, so please give me your business. If you don't give me your business I fear I shall lose my insurance."

Now anybody will admit that life insurance protecting the wife and the children is vastly more important than a college education. Only eight per cent. of our people engage in work in which they can make use of a college education, while one hundred per cent. of our people need life insurance.

Why shouldn't a great radio corporation go to the people in this way:

"We wish to buy up all the patents and control everything in radio, so please patronize our products."

Nobody can deny the magniture of that movement, and the company's desire is as earnest and its purpose as definite as that of the canvasser who wishes to sell you a periodical on the college argument.

Why shouldn't a department store start off a couple of newspaper pages in this manner:

"The President of this company is eager to take his family through Europe this summer. He and his relatives and friends will be grateful if you will patronize this store and help the accomplishment of a worthy object."

No one can controvert the fact that a trip through Europe is enlightening, broadening, and elevating—if one goes to the right places. It is a good way to take a vacation if one can raise the coin.

Why shouldn't even the bootblack in his hole-in-the-wall hang out a sign of this kind:

"The baby needs shoes. The wife needs her teeth filled, and I should have my tonsils out. Please have your shoes shined here."

This plan has great possibilities. I am thinking of having it patented. Of course the thought is not new, but as I understand it, one is entitled to a patent if one makes a new application of an old method.

Asheville Times August 28, 1930

THE NEGLECTED WIFE

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

This thought-provoking letter comes in today's mail:

"Will you kindly write an article about the importance of companionship in marriage?

"My married life has been very unhappy, due to the fact that my husband has not been a companion to me.

WAMBOLDT

"I can truthfully say that during all the years of our marriage, my husband has not taken me out a dozen times.

"We do not own a car, as he says we can not afford it. Even so, we still have the street cars to go on. But he always has excuses—among which are: 'Too tired,' 'Business to attend to,' 'Costs too much money,'—pertaining to shows, etc. He says if I wish to go, I can go by myself.

"Now, Mr. Wamboldt, don't you think a young married woman desires her husband's company in preference to going about by herself? It is only natural. And I feel so left out in the cold when I see other couples, happily married, devoted to each other, and going places together.

"I am a good-looking woman. My mirror tells me that. Some persons consider me beautiful. I am not telling you this because I am vain, but to show you that my husband could be proud to be seen with me. Before our marriage he was always showing me off—but, oh, the difference now!

"This year he has taken me out but once—to a show in February. And for weeks afterward he talked about how bored he had been. Since then I have not asked him to go out. So I go by myself. But oh, how my heart aches, and how despairing I feel!

"I have been a good wife and mother. Surely I do not deserve such treatment.

"We have a child, and if she gets any amusement at all I have to furnish it. My husband firmly refuses to take her out. Isn't my husband selfish and unfair? Isn't it his duty to give his family a little recreation?—to make life fuller for me, not a monotonous existence?"

Many men who would recoil at the thought of being cruel, are unthinkingly cruel through selfishness.

The man who neglects his wife is selfish. Any person who ignores another's happiness is selfish.

A man is apt not to realize that his wife needs his companionship and affection just as much as he needs food. A man is likely to consider that because he is pretty well pleased with the way things are, his wife is in the same state of mind—or should be—and that her constant begging for notice from him is all nonsense.

The fact is, woman's nature is such that she craves her husband's society as much as her husband may crave tobacco—or as much as a dope addict craves morphine. (That last illustration is not pretty, but it illustrates.)

It is just as much a man's duty to put himself out to make his wife happy—no matter how absurd her desires may appear to him—as it is a woman's duty to place importance on her husband's wishes.

I have the idea that the man who comes in for the severest of divine displeasure is the chap wh does not play square with his wife—and making his wife contented, so far as is reasonably possible, is part of playing square with her.

What she longs for and what the husband may think unnecessary may be just as vital to her as is oyster shell to a hen. A hen's hankering for oyster shell might look foolish to one with no yearning for oyster shell; yet a hen desperately needs oyster shell or its equivalent in her business.

I do not believe that the man who mistreats his wife, even if it be only to the extent of depriving her of simple, inexpensive pleasures, will prosper.

The Jew is notoriously prosperous, and that, I believe, is not due so much to his business sagacity as to the fact that he is a dandy family man.

Asheville Times August 19, 1930

FOR FOUR HOURS

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

Noticing a commotion at the home of a neighbor one afternoon when I was a young chap of about 18 years, I walked over to investigate.

On the back veranda, face up, lay the body of a woman, who had been pulled from the river.

WAMBOLDT

A physician was walking about giving orders. At the womans head sat a sobbing girl with a tiny bicycle pump, pocket size, putting air into the woman's mouth—not even down her throat, mind you, just into her mouth.

Of course such treatment for reviving a drowned person was not only useless, but foolishly futile. They might as well have stood around and whistled.

While I was there the undertaker came. He asked me to help lift the body into the basket—which was the most gruesome experience I had ever had, never before having touched a corpse.

Every time I hear that somebody whose breath was stopped by water, gas or electricity, was worked over for half an hour, an hour, two hours, three hours, then pronounced dead, I have a sense of exceptional sadness; for I can not help believing that somebody blundered—blundered perhaps in the method of treatment, but blundered certainly in the length of treatment.

Please get this—and I should be glad if the compositor would set this next statement in capitals:

THE WORK OVER A PERSON WHO HAS BEEN SUFFOCATED BY WATER OF GAS, OR WHO HAS BEEN RENDERED UNCONSCIOUS BY LIGHTNING OR OTHER ELECTRICAL SHOCK, SHOULD BE CONTINUED PERSISTENTLY IF NEED BE, FOR NOT LESS THAN FOUR HOURS!

There are cases on record where such victims showed no sign of life until after four hours of treatment.

Anyone with a little study can learn to produce artificial breathing in a person who has ceased to breathe.

Examine the patients mouth. If he has swallowed his tongue, pull it forward. In a drowning case, make sure that the mouth is free from weeds or mud.

Place the patient on his face, one arm stretched straight out ahead, the other bent at the elbow so that the patient's forehead will rest on his forearm. The face should be turned slightly to one side, so that the mouth and nose will be unobstructed.

Kneel astride the body at the hips. Place your palms, wrists together, on the patient's back, your fingers pointing outward, and curved down over the ribs, your little fingers on the patient's lowest ribs.

Now with your arms held stiff, lean forward and press down firmly—not violently, or delicate internal organs may be injured.

Then with a quick movement, jerk the hands away, and straighten up. The idea is that by pressing on the patient's back, his lungs are made to collapse, then, by suddenly relieving the pressure the lungs automatically expand and suck in air, exactly as does a rubber bulb when squeezed and released.

Continue this treatment, pressing down on the patient's back each time you expel air from your own lungs, and suddenly releasing the pressure each time you draw air into your own lungs. In this way you set up artificial breathing in your patient at the same rate that you yourself are breathing.

And here is another point that I have never seen brought out in any treatise on artificial breathing: If you are deeply concerned about the life you are trying to save, pray while you work.

If you will fix these instructions thoroughly in your mind, you may sometime save the life of one whose breath has been stopped by being under water or by inhaling gas or by being electrically shocked.

But remember, first of all, to get to work quick.

Do not wait for the victim to be moved here or there or somewhere else. Every second is precious.

Of course while you are working, the patient should if possible be kept warm. And if there are others to help you, they should briskly rub the hands, arms, feet and legs to stimulate circulation.

But remember, above all things, no matter what anybody says, no matter how hopeless may seem the case—unless the patient revives sooner—keep up the artificial breathing, patiently, steadily, faithfully, for at least four hours.

Asheville Times August 20, 1930

THE BACK KICK

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

This summer a woman asked me if I had noticed that a certain bottling company was offering premiums for its bottle caps.

"That's awful, when you stop to think of it," declared the woman, for it means that those caps are gathered from every conceivable place. They are certain to be dirty—they couldn't possibly be cleaned so they would be sanitary. Just think of using those caps to bottle soft drinks! There ought to be a law prohibiting bottling companies from using second-hand caps."

WAMBOLDT

Now of course no bottling company ever uses its caps twice. It could not do so if it wished to, for in putting the caps on, and in taking them off, they are so stretched as to make them absolutely worthless, particularly for sealing up a carbonated liquid. The company's sole idea in offering premiums for its caps was to increase the demand for its drinks.

Probably it never dawned on the bottling company that anyone would ever imagine it was offering premiums for its caps just to get back the caps. The cost of new caps is less than the cost of the premiums which the company offers for its used caps. If any member of the bottling company should read this article, he will likely be amazed at the woman's singular interpretation of the premium offer.

We figure out some scheme that sounds wonderfully good, then after we get it into effect we are dismayed at developments.

The English sparrow is an illustration of somebody's plan gone wrong. The bird was imported to eat up a certain destructive insect. He ate up the insect all right, but look what else he has done.

For years a certain small town with a valuable mineral spring and poor railroad facilities, pulled hard to get a national highway routed through it.

"If we can only get that road," the townsfolk declared, "we shall be sitting pretty, for then the tourists can get in easily, and so can the traveling salesmen."

Eventually the wire pulling brought results and the highway was built. But see what happened:

Visitors can get in easily, it is true, but they can get out just as easily. Tourists who used to come and stay a week, now drive in, fill up five-gallon demijohns with mineral water, and drive right out. Traveling salesmen, who used to stay over night, now spend but a few hours and roll on to the next place. And the residents themselves, are showing a tendency to drive to a nearby city to make purchases.

The long-worked-for, eagerly anticipated highway has proved a drawback.

What was it that Bobby Burns said about the plans of mice and men going awry?

Asheville Times August 13, 1930

THAT DOESN'T WORRY ME

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

One of the easiest things to say is, "Don't worry!"—and one of the hardest things to do is not to worry.

Yet worry, like the muscles of the body, can be controlled. One can learn not to worry—just as one can learn not to fall out of bed.

WAMBOLDT

"But I can't help worrying," declares one who continually worries.

To some persons not worrying is natural; while to other persons—in fact, to most persons—worrying is one of the easiest things they do.

Some persons take easily to the water. Others have to practice a long time before they can keep themselves afloat.

And so with worry, it can be mastered just as most other obstacles can be mastered. But nothing can be overcome, no goal can be reached, if one gives right up and sits down by the wayside and says, "I can't do it"

Back yonder in the 60's an uncle of mine was a member of a small military force sent out after a band of Indians that had gone on the warpath. This company of soldiers got lost in the Rockies. The weather was severe, the snow was deep, they ran out of food, and the Indians harassed them from every side. Their ammunition was low. The situation looked hopeless.

Finally one man who had been wounded in the leg, gave up and lay down in the snow.

"I can't make it boys," he groaned. "You'll have to go on and leave me. I'm done."

But the captain said, "I won't leave you here alive, because the Indians will capture you and torture you to death. If you are sure you can't go on, I will shoot you."

The wounded man decided he would make another try. Eventually the entire party reached safety.

Work kills comparatively few persons. But worry kills its millions. And to die by worry is to die by torture.

In a way we can understand the attitude of a man who, drafted during the World War, immediately committed suicide. He preferred to die forthwith rather than be worried to death with the fear that he would be killed or wounded. Yet, of course, that is the coward's position.

A person who is naturally inclined to worry, can not help worrying—until he can overcome his tendency to worry That conquering takes a long or a short time depefiding on how much he is inclined to worry and on how much he has to worry about and on how hard he strives to master worry.

It isn't so much the vigorousness of the fight that overcomes worry as the doggedness of the fight. The flypaper finishes off the fly by simply hanging on.

Probably as good a weapon as any with which to rout worry is the simple phrase, repeated faithfully every time worry appears, "That doesn't worry me."

Asheville times August 17, 1930

HITS EVERYBODY HARD

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

Thomas A. Edison makes this thought-provoking declaration:

"The United States Government is the most inefficient big business organization in operation today."

And what Mr. Edison says of the Federal Government is perhaps true of many, if not most, of our state, county and city governments.

WAMBOLDT

Just how much governmental inefficiency costs the people of the United States it is impossible to say; but if the sum could be known it would be dumbfounding.

And why do we up-and-going people have the most wasteful, the most carelessly run of civilized governments? Is it because we are getting too big? Is it because we are doing too much centralizing?

Concentration of action means concentration of power. Few men can employ large powers constructively. Again, the larger the sum a man has to disburse, the more likely he is to disburse improperly.

A family man with $100 a month is not likely to waste much; but with $1,000 a month he is apt to waste prodigiously. There is little leakage in small towns; but there is often a heavy leakage in the affairs of large cities.

However, we have an enormous nation, we have great states, we have big cities. They must be administered. They are administered. And how! Mr. Edison tells us how

What is the trouble? The trouble is that we appoint too many of the wrong kind of persons as administrators. We exhibit scant thought in a large percentage of our political selections.

Why do we show so little thought? Is it because we have little sense? No, indeed. We have plenty of sense. We are one of the brightest peoples in this world. Where then is the kink?

Here it is: Not 50 per cent. of our voters own anything. So, not 50 per cent. of our voters pay taxes. Therefore not 50 per cent. of our voters care a continental hoot how much it costs to run the country.

The cook of a man who owns a hundred million dollars worth of property has just as much weight at the polls as her employer. Her vote is worth as much as his.

So there are persons who contend that only property owners should be allowed to vote. But would that be well?

It would be expedient—but would it be wise? That system would make of this country not a democracy but a plutocracy. The control of public affairs would be in the hands of the moneyed classes.

That might mean a better government, more carefully selected public officials. But it would arouse discontent that would end in revolution.

Plainly our relief from colossal governmental inefficiency is to be found in the enlightenment of all voters. That brings us smack up against the question of education. Not academic education—not a knowledge of Greek, Latin, geometry, trigonometry; but education in man's responsibility to man—in man's duty to man.

We hear much of the richer classes' responsibility to the poorer classes. But there is also the poorer classes' responsibility to the richer classes. If ten billion dollars in taxes be wasted every year in the United States, that means that the classes which employ help have ten billion dollars less with which to employ help.

Asheville Times August 11, 1930

NOT OF A KIND

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

A girl born into a fine, cultured, aristocratic family, and given all the advantages that anybody could desire, became infatuated with one of her father's servants. The fellow was extremely good looking, but very ordinary.

WAMBOLDT

The girl begged to be allowed to marry the man. Her mother went into hysterics. Her father talked to her this way:

"That chap is not in your class, daughter. You wouldn't be happy with him."

"But I can't be happy without him," vowed the girl fervently, "for I love him."

"You only think you love him," replied the father. "You only think you can't be happy without him."

"I know I love him. I know I can't be happy without him," insisted the girl. I am going to marry him, and I wish you to give your consent."

"I shall not give my consent," replied the father. "I should feel that I had committed a sin against you to agree to such a thing."

"Well, then I shall marry him anyhow," announced the girl.

"That is your privilege," said the father, "for you are of age. But are you willing to take that fellow at the expense of everything else?"

"Yes," said the girl, "for I am perfectly happy and contented when I am with him."

"Perhaps," said the father, "I am mistaken about you. Perhaps you belong in his class. Perhaps it was an error of Providence that caused you to be born into our family. Perhaps you are his kind and not our kind. Perhaps you are up where you ought not to be. If that is true, you may be happy with him. But if it is not true, you will eventually be very miserable."

But the girl declared that she would run the risk.

So she and the servant slipped away and were quietly married.

For a while the girl and her god were in heaven. Then one day the god, who had begun to act natural, poured his hot coffee into his saucer and sucked it up.

The bride gently called his attention to the fact that he was violating an important law of etiquette.

The god plainly didn't like the criticism—soft as it was....

Later in a prominent cafe, the god shoveled mashed potato into his mouth with a knife.

Again the bride tried to mould the god's table manners.

And again he showed reluctance to be moulded.

As he felt more and more at home, the god more and more showed his colors. He did thing after thing that clashed with his bride's idea of what a gentleman should be. But she held to the hope that within a few weeks she could put the same polish on him that her family had been centuries acquiring.

The god finally told her to "lay off," that he had been "raised" by his mother, who knew what was what.

By way of emphasis he threw her down stairs, and the girl went back to her father.

But the matter was not so easily ended as that—for there was a baby. And the former servant sued his father-in-law for heart-balm for alienation of affection.

Intrinsically one class may be just as good as another Sometimes, in fact, Judy O'Grady is a better woman than the Colonel's lady. But marriage between different classes invariably complicates the situation. It is hard enough for persons on the same plane to harmonize—much less for those of widely separated social spheres.

A man may marry a woman below him in the social scale and she may come up, for women are more adaptable than men and more responsive to social influences. But the woman who marries a man below her must nearly always take his level if she remain with him.

"No, sir!" said the white-capped-and-aproned maid to the yard man, as she dusted off the chairs on her mistress's front porch, "I won't marry you. I believes in folks marryin' their ekals."

Asheville Times August 12, 1930

ABOUT MYSELF

Chur. Obs BY WICKES WAMBOLT. 4/28/29

This sketch is not a voluntary effort. I have been literally coerced into preparing it by certain editors who have written me from time to time saying: "Won't you give us something about yourself? Our readers are asking about you. They wish to know where you live—what your real name is—and how you got into writing."

I got into writing as a result of one of those little tricks fate occasionally plays on a fellow. On June 9, 1921, in Atlanta, Georgia, I was sitting at my desk putting the finishing touches on a campaign I had directed which raised about $2,000,000 for the Georgia School of Technology.

BEGINNING OF TRAGEDY.

Suddenly my eyes felt queer. I put on my hat, walked down the street and consulted my oculist. He made an examination and shook his head.

"What is the trouble?" I asked.

"Detachment of the retina of each eye," he replied gravely.

He instructed me to go home and go to bed immediately. He followed me, bringing another oculist.

There was a secret consultation in another room—at which my wife was present. Then all emerged with an air of exaggerated cheerfulness, which did not fool me a bit. Then the specialists elevated the foot of my bed about twenty-four inches, took away my pillows, and told me that for ten days I must lie in that downhill position on the flat of my back with an ice pack on my head. For two months I was kept in bed in the slender, desperate hope of saving my eyesight. But it couldn't be done.

So I was faced with the necessity of rearranging my life. What could a man do without eyesight? Sell pencils? Rebottom chairs? Make baskets? Not so good—though better men than I have done those things. Why not continue my former profession of directing money-raising drives? I knew too much of the peculiarly exacting requirements of that work to believe that it could be carried on by anyone who could not see four ways at once.

TURNS TO LITERATURE.

I thought of literary work. True, I had never written for publication, but I was accustomed to dictating and I had a few ideas.

Casting about for a way to begin, I decided to take a course in short story writing under W. B. Pitkin, director of journalism of Columbia university.

From the first Professor Pitkin chided me for making my writings too philosophical.

Wickes Wambolt

After being scolded for some time for that sort of thing, I said to myself, "Why not write what I am inclined to write? Why not write philosophically if my mind works that way?"

So I prepared a number of articles and submitted them to that prince of good fellows, P. M. Burdette, then publisher of The Asheville Times—whom I had not previously met. Mr. Burdette said encouraging things to me.

"But can you keep it up?" questioned Mr. Burdette. "An article a day is a terrible grind. Try it for a few weeks and see how you come out."

I found I had no difficulty in turning out a daily article—or two or three of them.

"The Times will use your articles," said Mr. Burdette. "And I shall be glad to invite the attention of my publisher friends to them."

DRIVE ON EDITORS.

With this encouragement and valuable assistance, I began a drive on the editors. The immediate results though rather expensive, were fairly satisfactory.

"Where do you get your ideas?" I am often asked. "Don't you ever run out of material?"

My suggestions come from everywhere—birds, flowers, chickens, peddlers, bank presidents, street car conductors, cooks, callers, business men, ministers, politicians. From everything and everybody I come in contact with, I get ideas. The day is not long enough to permit me to write up all the matter that presents itself.

A Texas editor sent me a letter from a reader in France, asking why—when selecting a pen name—I had not chosen something different. I use no pen name. The name signed to my articles is my name."

I can appreciate the opinion of the reader in France—for by the time I had grown old enough to discriminate, I had developed a cordial dislike for my first name. When persons would ask, "Little boy, what is your name?" I would reply "I don't know my name." When I was enrolled in the public school I told the teacher my name was "Edward." Some persons still call me "Ed."

ADVANTAGES IN NAME.

But my father felt such keen disappointment in my aversion to my first name, which he had conferred on me as a doubtful honor to his best friend, that I resolved to defer to his wishes. When I got out into the world I discovered that my name had certain advantages, one of which is that my mail never becomes confused with anybody else's.

Where do I live? I live in Wonderful Western North Carolina, the Sapphire country—the Land of the Sky—in Asheville, the Gem of the Mountains. No harm in giving the alluring locality a little free publicity.

My home is on the top of a hill which commands a sweeping view of peaks tumbling over themselves of valleys, with homes nestling in them. Our front veranda faces Mount Pisgah and the Rat. Around our house are many trees and many birds. No cats. Hence the birds. We have fruits, vegetables, flowers. A six-hundred foot rose hedge borders two sides of the place.

White Wyandotte chickens—which I personally look after—are my hobby. Eight months in the year our lawn is dotted with snow-white home-made fryers.

Through my wife, my secretary, my mother, and my friends, I keep fairly well in touch with what is going on in the world.

I have discovered what many other persons have found out—that while eyesight is a very great convenience, it is not an absolute necessity—neither to one's getting

Asheville Citizen — Aug. 30, 1930

MAYOR WICKES WAMBOLDT, son of the Rev. and Mrs. M. M. Wamboldt, was born in Jacksonville, Fla., January 19, 1877. He engaged in various types of work before coming to Asheville to retire after losing his sight.

He attended public and private schools in Jacksonville, his parents having "an awfully hard time" keeping him at his studies.

After completing a course in stenography, he secured a position with the old F. C. and P. railroad (now the Seaboard). Four months later he was "fired" and since, with the exception of a year in the employ of an uncle, has never held an entirely subordinate position.

Wishing to be independent of others, Mayor Wamboldt "began doing first one thing and then another" on a commission basis. Eventually he opened a commercial brokerage business, which he conducted for 10 years, leaving it to become general western manager for the Kiser Publishing company (now out of business) and had charge of all territory west of the Rockies. His headquarters was at San Francisco where he met and married Mrs. Alice May Lindholm, in 1913, whom he describes as "having been a great power for good in my life."

He has one son, Melvin, by a previous marriage. Mrs. Wamboldt has two children by a former marriage. Mayor and Mrs. Wamboldt live at 57 Beverly road, West Asheville.

With Publishing House

After a six-year connection with the Kiser Publishing company, Mayor Wamboldt observed that all managers in the class of work he was then in, sooner or later lost out, and he determined to enter the financial campaign business. He threw up his job and started work under a noted campaign manager at a salary of $10 a week. "Financial campaigning," he said, "is a very intricate profession" and that was the only way he could learn the work.

When the United States entered the World War, he was called to Washington and given an appointment with the Red Cross. He was sent to Berks county, Pennsylvania, to raise $150,000, being given three weeks in which to set up the territory. He took on surrounding counties and raised $450,000.

His work pleasing Red Cross officials, Mayor Wamboldt was called to Washington as a member of the executive staff, eventually being given charge of the campaign to clean up the war fund drive collections throughout the United States.

When the second Red Cross drive was put on, the manager of the southern division at Atlanta asked national headquarters for Mayor Wamboldt's services in setting up and directing the campaign in that division—Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee. The south had fallen down "lamentably" on the first drive. Mayor Wamboldt's quota was set at $3,000,000.

WICKES WAMBOLDT

He increased this to $4,500,000 and in five weeks set up an organization in the southern division which raised within a week more than $5,500,000.

After the war, he conducted the drive that brought the University of the South, at Sewanee, Tenn., more than $1,000,000. Later, he put on a drive for Georgia Tech, the quota being $500,000. Here again he increased the quota and created an organization which raised more than $1,500,000.

Loses Eyesight

Overwork during the Georgia Tech campaign caused him to lose his eyesight and he came to Asheville—where for years, his parents had lived, and he and Mrs. Wamboldt had been constant visitors—"to retire and rest."

"And look what I got into," he said.

Mayor Wamboldt began his newspaper column "because I could not bear to be idle." While taking a course in short story writing under Prof. Walter B. Pitkin, of Columbia university, he was cautioned that his work was too philosophical for short story success.

Feeling that he should make use of his ability in that direction, Mayor Wamboldt wrote a number of short articles and submitted them to P. M. Burdette, who then published The Asheville Times. Others were written. The articles began being published daily and more newspapers were added.

When Mayor Wambold "saw what was happening" to Asheville, he said (at the time the Central Bank and Trust company failed), he determined to see if he could help the city.

"With that determination," he said, "I entered the campaign for council in 1931 and have been going ever since."

Asheville Citizen July 30, 1930

ASHEVILLE CITY GOVERNMENT

Wickes Wamboldt.....Mayor
Ernest H. Miller.....Vice Mayor
George L. Hackney.....City Manager
C. E. Blackstock.....Corporation Counsel

COUNCILMEN

John E. Baumberger
Plott Boyd
Dr. H. G. Brookshire
Jack Westall
Charles F. Crow
Joseph W. Little
H. W. Rainey

ERNEST H. MILLER
Vice Mayor

WICKES WAMBOLDT
Mayor

GEORGE L. HACKNEY
City Manager

Elizabeth G. Thompson.....City Clerk
Fred A. Hull.....Accountant
Philip C. Cocke, Jr.....Assistant Corporation Counsel
Clarence Sawyer.....Purchasing Agent
Glenn Morris.....Secretary to City Manager
H. A. Ballard.....Building Superintendent
. L. Threlkeld.....Director Public Works
Veldon Weir.....Superintendent of Parks
. L. Bishop.....Superintendent of Streets
. M. Campbell.....Superintendent of Plumbing
. T. Johnson.....Electrical Inspector
. L. Daniel.....Inspector of Weights and Measures
eorge Henderson.....Director of Motor Transportation
Frazier Glenn.....Judge of Juvenile Court
L. Maynard.....Chief Engineer
. F. Weaver.....Assistant Engineer
V. Padgett.....Supervisor Tax Department
. A. Bramlett.....City Cashier
. E. Rankin.....Superintendent Water Department
L. Duckett.....Fire Chief
C. Fitzgerald.....Assistant Fire Chief
m Cathey.....Judge of Police Court
C. Wible.....Clerk Police Court
J. Everett.....Chief of Police
R. Messer.....Inspector of Police
n T. Erwin.....Librarian Pack Memorial Library

1933

CITIZEN-TIMES, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY, APRIL 12, 1931

WHERE ARE THE GREAT?

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

THE plaint goes up every now and then from somebody who apparently has been impressed by a conclusion to the point of expression, that the United States no longer has notably outstanding personalities.

WAMBOLDT

"Where are the George Washingtons?" they wail—"the Lincolns? Where are the magnificent personages that tower above their fellows? We used to have them — but they are no more!"

I wonder if the trouble is not that we have so many great persons that they have become ordinary? There are so many outstanding men and women today that no one is unique in the outstanding business.

On a large, flat plain in Georgia, there rises a great rock some seven or eight hundred feet high, called Stone Mountain. It is outstanding because there is nothing like it around it. Folks make special trips from Atlanta to view the marvel. Yet, put Stone Mountain among the huge peaks of the Pacific Northwest, and it would not cut much figure.

Outstandingness among Americans is becoming commoner and commoner.

There was a time when a man who could read and write was an outstanding figure in the world. People flocked to him and sat at his feet and drank in the words of wisdom or of foolishness that oozed from his lips. He was the big hot potato. Yet, today there are hundreds of thousands of high school children who could make circles around him without half trying.

Little David made the front page by bouncing a rock from a sling off the head of Goliath. It was not that David was better able to use the slingshot than anybody else. It was that he did it first.

Fifty years ago a man who could have produced the modern radio would have been the most talked of man in the world. But today thousands of young chap can build splendid radios.

A hundred years ago a girl who could set down a speech as fast as it was spoken would have been a marvel. But today she is just a part of the business system. Of course there are business men who, because of irritating personal experiences, will contend that a girl who can take dictation correctly today is a marvel. Nevertheless, there are girls, plenty of them, who can do it, and who do do it. They can transcribe the stuff, too, and spell the words right; and get a comma where a comma belongs, and a semicolon in its correct location. They are precious. Lord knows they are precious!—but they are not to be ranked as overtopping the world.

The trick bicycle rider used to hold audiences spellbound. The one summerhault acrobat used to set the community agape. Now the trick bicyclist merely draws an, "ah huh," and the summersaulter who can't turn at least three times in the air isn't so much.

Our people are becoming greater and greater in education. They are becoming bigger and bigger in achievement. You can bump into a large personality at almost any corner.

It is not that great men are becoming fewer, but that more men are becoming great—and women, too. God bless them!

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY, APRIL 19, 1931

A DANDY PLAN

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

AFTER floundering about, for ages in all sorts of ineffective mix-ups and unclean messes, city governments are waking up to the fact that there is a system that will run a city as economically and as efficiently as a big private corporation is run.

Of course, big private corporations long ago worked out a method that gets the most results at the least cost; that puts a close check on the affairs of the corporation; that keeps its managing head on his toes, and that subjects him to immediate punishment if he misbehaves.

Here is how the corporation gets results. Its stockholders elect a board of directors. The board of directors, after due deliberation, hire a president—and place him in full charge of the company.

One day, in Staunton, Virginia, somebody interested in public welfare, said, "Why shouldn't we take the plan used to run big business and use it to run our city? Our city is a big business. Why shouldn't we citizens elect a board of directors—we could call them a city council—and let them appoint a capable man to run our city. We could call him city manager. He would have full charge of the management of the city, just as the president of a corporation has full charge of the management of that corporation. He would be held personally responsible for everything done in the administration of our city affairs. The city council would make the rules. The city manager would carry them out. If he made good, we would keep him. If he didn't, we would fire him.

The plan was tried. It worked. It worked so wonderfully well that up to this time about 400 other cities have adopted the council-manager form of government, and are delighted with it. The council-manager form of government does for the city exactly what the director-president form of government does for the Standard Oil company, the United States Steel corporation, the Ford Motor company.

The trouble with the mayor-council form of government is that the mayor is likely to be jockeyed into office through politics—often dirty politics. Once a mayor is elected by the people, it is almost impossible to get rid of him. No matter how undesirable he may be, he stays there until his term expires.

And the commission form of government is worse than the old mayor-council form of government—for in the commission form of government, the commissioners make their own laws and execute them. There is no way of checking or stopping them. They can be a board of absolute tyrants. The most awful thing ever done to a city was done under the commission form of government, not a million miles from where I am writing this article.

But the council-manager form of government—how simple it is!—how well it works! The council hires a city manager. They may go to San Francisco for him, or to Kalamazoo, or they may secure him locally. They care nothing about his politics. They don's give a hoot who his grandfather was. The one question is, "Is he an expert in city management?" There are many such experts nowadays, for city managing has become a thoroughly recognized profession.

You have heard it argued that it makes no difference what form of government is adopted if you have the right men to govern.

True. Likewise, it makes no difference what money-accounting plan you use if you have an honest clerk. But should you have a dishonest clerk, a cash register would help a lot. The city manager plan helps a lot to keep the undesirable man from becoming the executive head of the city. But should such a man get in charge of the city, the council-manager plan will get him out in a hurry.

The council-manager form of government is the best ever devised for the municipality. Its general adoption will change the reputation that the American city has earned throughout the world—that of being the most extravagant, the most inefficient, and the rottenest government known to civilized man.

The nation should erect a monument higher than Washington's to the chap who conceived the idea of the council-manager form of government.

CITIZEN-TIMES, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY, MAY 17, 1931

THE MEN ON THE WALL

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

AT a recent election when one of the candidates went to the polls, he was approached by a man who took him to one side:

"Over on that wall," said the man, "sit twenty-five votes. You can buy the whole business for ten cents apiece."

"Awful!" you say. "Frightful! human depravity sunk to its lowest level! Sickening misuse of the right to vote!"

Wait a minute. Let us hear the rest of the conversation.

"Why," asked the candidate, "are they willing to sell their votes so cheap?"

"Because," replied the man, "they are hungry."

WAMBOLDT

Hungry! What does a man care about a government that lets him stay hungry?

"Oh," we say, "he should have his soul above his stomach! His ideals should rise higher than his largest intestinal cavity."

That is true. But the trouble with so many of our theories is that we deal with things as they ought to be instead of as they are.

When a man is hungry his stomach insists on being noticed; it demands that it be thought about. You can't make much headway talking to a fellow about his soul when his stomach is sticking to his backbone. It is difficult to get spiritual food into a man when his system is crying for physical food.

"But," contend some persons, "when a man is hungry it is his own fault. If he'd get out and do this and that, and do so and so, he's have something to eat."

There is much to be said on both sides of that question. Some men have the knack of doing this and that and so and so. Others have not. Some men have the gift of making ends meet. Others have not. There are all kinds of men and all kinds of minds. For various reasons, some men are unable to hold their own in the struggle for existence; to compete with the strong for the necessities of life. There are men who are incapable of shaping their own affairs. They can not carve out their own careers. They must be helped. There are boys who have never swum a stroke, whom you could throw into deep water and make swim. Other boys, treated the same way, would go to the bottom and drown.

We human beings who desire a wholesome, healthy world, must come to the realization that the whole scheme of social life is an interlocking organization. One part of it can not be sick without affecting the rest of it. One drop of sour milk in a bucket of sweet milk makes the whole bucket sour.

The job of lifting up all men is a stupendous task. It calls for the deepest thought, the best brains, the sincerest prayers, and the mightiest efforts. But it is a task that must evenutally be undertaken and accomplished, by every civilized nation that intends to remain civilized.

Twenty-five men seated on a wall beside a polling place, so hungry that they are willing to sell their votes for ten cents a head, is pitiable proof of a social disease so dangerous that it should awaken the gravest concern in the breast of every thinking person.

SUNDAY, AUGUST 23, 1931

ONE GLASS EGG

By WICKES WAMBOLDT

CHICKENS in some of their ways are so much like human beings that I get a great kick out of watching their reactions.

WAMBOLDT

For instance, early this month I decided to set one more hen, in order to have some late fryers. (Our cook is an artist in chicken-frying. There are as many ways of frying chickens as of making hats or preaching sermons—good, bad, and indifferent).

Two hens desiring to sit, I placed them both in the hen's "sitting-room," with but one nest, in which was a solitary glass egg. Those two hens reacted to the situation exactly as two certain types of human beings might have done under analogous circumstances.

One of the hens went up to that nest, eyed the glass egg in it, and began to broadcast her disapproval of the whole works. She said that there were two reasons why she woold have nothing to do with any such outfit: In the first place, she wasn't going to waste her time on a single egg. She was a fifteen-egg hen!—and if she cooldn't have fifteen eggs she wouldn't have any! In the second place, the egg in the nest was a glass egg—anybody could see that! No amount of endeavor could hatch it! She was nobody's fool! She knew her eggs! She went out into the little yard, marched up and down, and raucously told the universe how disgusted, how outraged she was with the whole procedure!—and she paid her compliments to me in caustic chicken language.

The other hen reacted differently. She went up to the nest, looked at the glass egg, clucked and fussed a little; then she climbed right in and settled down, as much as to say, "Well, if this is the best you can do for me, I'll do the best I can with it." Whereupon, to her delight, I took away the glass egg, gave her fifteen nice, real eggs, and shut the obstreperous hen up in the brooody-coop to get over her madness.

Haven't you seen human beings exactly like those two hens? There is the type that won't put up with anything from anybody. Unless things are just right—exactly to their liking—they won't have anything to do with the entire affair. Their feelings must be carefully considered. Their privileges must in no way be interfered with. And unless everything is arranged for them exactly as it should be, and according to the latest and most approved fashion, they scornfully refuse to be associated with the enterprise.

Then there are persons who are just like that other hen: They willingly do the best they can with whatever is given them. They will take hold of any kind of work and do it to the best of their ability. They will use such tools as are available, and cheerfully do the best they can with them. They are not touchy. They are not finicky. They are whole-heartedly co-operative. They are ready to play the game. High place or low place, poor place or good place, they fit in and give their best efforts.

Support For City Debt Bill Is Asked By Mayor

Approximately 25 persons, meeting in city hall yesterday afternoon at the call of Mayor Wickes Wamboldt, pledged themselves to wire or write during the day to Senators Robert R. Reynolds and Josiah W. Bailey asking them to help get the municipal bankruptcy bill through the senate in the same form it passed the house.

Mayor Wamboldt called on those present to attempt to get others to wire or write North Carolina's sena-shape it left the house. Last night he called on other Asheville citizens interested in securing an equitable debt adjustment for the city to do likewise.

Opening the meeting, Mayor Wamboldt explained that it had been called so hurriedly he had been unable to get in touch with many persons who should have attended.

He pointed out that 1,700 cities in the United States were in default in interest or principal, or both, and called attention to the statement made here recently by Charles M. Johnson, state treasurer and head of the Local Government commission that Asheville cannot pay its debt, even with greatly improved conditions. He recalled Mr. Johnson's statement that the quickest way for Asheville to relieve itself of the present situation is an amicable agreement between city and creditors.

Even with such an agreement reached between the city and a great majority of the creditors, minority bond or note holders could "throw a monkey wrench in the wheels," Mayor Wamboldt said, unless the Wilcox municipal bankruptcy bill is passed. President Roosevelt has called on the Mayor Wamboldt last night wired Senators Reynolds and Bailey as follows:

"The city council respectfully and earnestly urge that you do everything within your power to secure passage without amendments by senate of the municipal bankruptcy bill as passed by the house of representatives.

"We feel this legislation is absolutely essential to the very life of the city of Asheville. Charles M. Johnson, state treasurer, said in public address here March 29 that our present indebtedness is uncollectable and could not be paid under normal conditions or under greatly improved conditions. Johnson said that the quick road to recovery for creditors and taxpayers is adjustment of debt on basis of capacity to pay and there must be legislation by congress before there can be permanent adjustment of our debt."

—(Please Turn To Page Two)

Tells Of Opposition

Mayor Wamboldt said although the Wilcox bill had passed the house and was a piece of legislation desired by the President, some large holders of municipal bonds were attempting to "tear it up" in the senate.

The meeting was called for two purposes, the mayor said: to have those present "get behind the President in his effort to get the bill through" and to create sentiment for it through publicity.

The bill as passed by the house provides that when two-thirds of the creditors agree to a settlement it is binding on the others. The senate is trying to raise the two-thirds to 80 per cent, he said, and another senate amendment proposed would allow no reduction in principal but would provide for interest cuts.

At the suggestion of Councilman Jack Westall, Senator C. E. Blackstock gave a brief outline of the Wilcox bill.

Benefits of the bill will be for two years following date of passage, he said, and it will apply to any taxing district. The district, securing agreement of 30 per cent of the creditors, or 30 per cent of the creditors (1 namount) may file a petition in federal court asking for an adjustment.

May Dismiss It

Five per cent of the creidtors may object, he continued, and the judge will hear their objection. He may then dismiss the petition if he so desires.

Everything owed by a taxing district, except salaries to officers and employes, would be affected by the bill, he said.

The plan of adjustment requested by creditors or taxing district must be filed with the court within six months after the petition is filed, he added. Following filing of a petition, the judge may enjoin efforts to collect on judgments from the district.

If 30 per cent of the creditors and the district agree on a requested adjustment, the judge can issue a temporary order making it binding on all until a settlement is reached. If the city levies a tax rate in accordance with the judge's ruling it cannot be disturbed until the end of the fiscal year for which it was levied.

After the plan of adjustment is proposed, the bill provides, 10 per cent of the creditors can ask the court to have the plan [illegible] and two-thirds of the creditors must approve of any plan before it can be made final.

Gudger Speaks

Vonno L. Gudger, speaking briefly, said the bill was an entering wedge and showed that troubles of the cities finally have the attention of the national authorities. Citizens should make their feelings known, he added.

Silas G. Bernard, Asheville attorney, discussed briefly legal points in connection with certain city issues. Legality of the city's debt should be determined, he said, asking Senator Blackstock if that was provided for in the bill.

Senator Blackstock said no specific provisions was made for such judge, under the bill, would determine how much of the debt the city owed and then say how much of that amount it can pay.

There can never be any rehabilitation here until there is some equitable readjustment of the city and county indebtedness, he said.

Among those attending the meeting were most of the members of city council.

Asheville Citizen April 17, 1934

Wamboldt Wins Praise for His Miami Speech

Asheville Holds Attention of Crowd of 7,000

MIAMI, March 25(Special) Mayor Wicks Wamboldt has been receiving the praise of members of the Welcome to Asheville motorcade party for his speech this Friday night, when he held the attention of 7,000 persons for 40 minutes and kept them laughing a good share of that time.

The Asheville mayor, on this trip, has surprised many of the motorcaders and perhaps himself by his deft handling of situations calling for the glad hand. Some of his most ardent admirers on the trip say that he has shown a side of himself they didn't know existed. But last night, persons who heard him aver, he outdid anything previously. A native of Florida, Mr. Wamboldt has appeared perfectly at home here; he speaks the Floridean language.

GETS LAUGH FROM CROWD

Explaining that he could remember when "hog and hominy in the summer and sick Yankees in the winter were the mainstays of Florida", Mr. Wamboldt told how "we have come down from the Land of the Sky with our hats placarded with 'Welcome' and "our hearts filled with the same sentiment", adding that he wanted the mountain people "to get acquainted with your wonderful land of sunshine". He got a laugh when he added, "I want them to learn to eat prawns."

Speaking gravely for a moment he voiced sorrow that so many of the people he knew when he was a youth in Florida were gone, and regretted that he was unable to see "this land that I love."

Quickly --?--, he told of the marvels of the mountains, a land where "we can raise fifteen and twenty gallons to the acre", adding the invitation that has provoked laughter everywhere on the trip: "Come up and --?—something".

NOT COMPETITORS

He described Florida as a winter vacation land superb and Western North Carolina with its beautiful friendly mountains as a summer vacation land superb, explaining that "the attractions are totally different" and that "we aren't competitors". He spoke of his ----- ------- for the two regions. "You come up in the summer and help us pay our bonded indebtedness, and we will come down in the winter and help you pay yours."

In Friday night's talk, as in previous ones, the Asheville official has steered clear of the word "tourists", emphasizing instead the idea of an exchange of visits.

As a gesture of courtesy, Mayor Sewell stood beside Mayor Wamboldt during the latter's address.

At the conclusion of his remarks, Mayor Wamboldt presented mayor Sewell with a bolt of Biltmore homespun.

Wamboldt Wins Praise For His Miami Speech

Asheville Mayor Holds Attention Of Crowd Of 7,000

MIAMI, March 25. (Special) Mayor Wicks Wamboldt has been receiving the praise of members of the Welcome to Asheville motorcade party for his speech here Friday night, when he held the attention of 7,000 persons for 40 minutes and kept them laughing a good share of the time.

The Asheville mayor, on this trip, has surprised many of the motorcaders and perhaps himself by his deft handling of situations calling for the "glad hand." Some of his most ardent admirers on the trip say that he has shown a side of himself they didn't know existed. But last night, persons who heard him ever, he outdid anything previously. A native of Florida, Mr. Wamboldt, has appeared perfectly at home here, he speaks the Floridians' language.

Gets Laugh From Crowd

Explaining that he could remember when hog and hominy in the summer and sick Yankees in the winter were the mainstays of Florida," Mr. Wamboldt told how "we have come down from the Land of the Sky with our cars placarded with "Welcome" and our hearts filled with the same sentiment" adding that he wanted the mountain people "to get acquainted with your wonderful land of sunshine." He got a laugh when he added "I want them to learn to eat grapes."

Speaking gravely for a moment he voiced sorrow that so many of the people he knew when he was a youth in Florida were gone, and regretted that he "not live to see this land that I love."

Quickly veering he told of the marvels of the mountains, a land where "we can raise fifteen or twenty gallons to the acre" adding the invitation that has provoked laughter everywhere on the trip. "Come up and see us sometime."

Not Competition

He described Florida as a winter vacation land superb and Western North Carolina with its beautiful friendly mountains as a summer vacation land superb, explaining that the attractions are totally different and that we aren't competitors. But complementors. He spoke of the mutual benefits to the two regions. "You come up in the summer and help us pay our bonded indebtedness and we will come down in the winter and help you pay yours."

In Friday night's talk as in previous ones the Asheville official has steered clear of the word "tourists" emphasizing instead, the idea of an exchange of visits.

As a gesture of courtesy Mayor Sewell stood beside Mayor Wamboldt during the latter's address.

At the conclusion of his remarks Mayor Wamboldt presented Mayor Sewell with a bolt of Biltmore homespun.

Asheville Citizen March 26, 1934

A-Citizen 3-9-53

Wamboldt, 76, Former Mayor, Columnist, Dies

By EARL T. FREEMAN

Wickes Womboldt, 76, well-known philosopher and former mayor and councilman of the City of Asheville, died yesterday.

Death came at 2 p. m. at his home, 57 Beverly Road, as the result of a heart attack.

For many years a columnist for Asheville and other newspapers, he was editor of the "Looking at Life With Wickes Wamboldt" program over Radio Station WISE until his death.

Wamboldt, although blind, remained active until his death. He attended church and Sunday school yesterday morning. Death came within seconds after he was stricken yesterday afternoon.

Funeral services will be held in the chapel of Lewis Funeral Home at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Lewis Memorial Park.

Wamboldt was elected mayor of Asheville in 1933 and prior to that had served a term on City Council.

Perhaps best known for his inspirational writings, he for many years was an exponent of sound counsel through newspaper and radio channels.

Born in Jacksonville, Fla., January 19, 1877, the son of the Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Wamboldt, he moved to Asheville in 1921, 11 years after his parents established residence here. His father was at one time pastor of Calvary Baptist Church in West Asheville.

When World War I broke out, Wamboldt was living on the Pacific Coast where was a publisher.

As a publisher and in other businesses in which he had been engaged in various places he had made a marked success but his forte seemed to be in his ability to direct campaigns.

In this particular field he had been eminently successful, so much so that he was asked to go to Washington, D. C., to direct a financial campaign for the American Red Cross.

When the war was over, he remained in the same line of work in which he was engaged while serving his country. He headed a successful drive for raising $1,000,000 for the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn.

In early 1921, he was in Atlanta directing a $2,000,000 fund campaign for Georgia Tech.

It was then that a calamity befell Wamboldt which undoubtedly would have ended the career of a man of less courage and resourcefulness. While sitting at his desk in an Atlanta office one day, his eyes suddenly gave out and he was almost totally blind.

He went from specialist to specialist but there was little that could be done for eyes that suffered the toll of overwork, strain and nervousness.

Then the old urge to write gripped him. Under the tutorage of a professor in the school of journalism at Columbia University he began to study by having lessons read to him.

His instructor criticized him for getting too much philosophy in his work, but Wamboldt stuck by his ideas which later were to make him one of the outstanding syndicated writers in the South.

Walmboldt employed a secretary to type his columns as he dictated them.

He had always maintained a keen interest in birds, trees and flowers.

At one time he conducted a strong campaign against "homeless and irresponsible" cats, advocating a tax on all cats of the city in an effort to reduce the preying of the felines on birds.

As a result of his campaign through editorial writings and columns, hundreds of letters to the editors were received from readers who adopted both pro and con stands on the issue.

In 1928 he estimated that the cat population of Asheville was between 5,000 and 10,000 and that an average of one bird per cat was destroyed daily.

Wamboldt was married to Mrs. Ollie May Lindholm of San Francisco, Calif., in 1913, and considered this a turning point in his life. He credited her with being his biggest inspiration.

Mrs. Womboldt died in August, 1950.

Survivors include a son, Melvin Wamboldt, with Radio Free Europe in New York City; a step-son, Albert Lindholm of San Francisco, Calif.; a step-daughter, Mrs. Martha L. Trostler of Asheville, and seven grandchildren.

Asheville Citizen March 9, 1953

APR - 7 1950

WARD

APR - 7 1950

Walter A. Ward New Head Of Optimist Club

Walter A. Ward was elected president of the Optimist Club at a luncheon yesterday in the George Vanderbilt Hotel.

Other officers named include Claude Henson, first vice president; Marvin Clem, second vice president; David Stokes, third vice president; Ray Hurd, secretary; W. H. Starnes, assistant secretary; Troy Alexander, sergeant-at-arms; Thor Behrens, historian; Phil Sales and Frank Martin, new trustees.

Miss Katherine Patelidas, student at Lee H. Edwards High School, presented a talk on the cancer drive.

Other trustees include Dr. J. B. Anderson, retiring president; James E. Moore and J. Walter McRary.

New officers will be installed at next Thursday's meeting.

Asheville Citizen April 7, 1950

— Citizen-Times Photo

18TH DISTRICT, OPTIMIST INTERNATIONAL OFFICERS were elected at the closing session yesterday of the annual district convention in the George Vanderbilt Hotel. Left to right are Hugh Cranford of Charlotte, new governor, Dr. L. G. Harrison of High Point, retiring governor, and Walter A. Ward of Asheville, reelected lieutenant governor of Zone 4.

Asheville Citizen May 24, 1959

Walter Ward Dies At 62; Owned W. Asheville News

CITIZEN MON JUN 28 1971

Walter A. Ward Sr., 62, former owner and publisher of the old West Asheville News, died Sunday morning in a Winston-Salem hospital after a long illness.

He had lived in Asheville since 1928 and was a charter member of West Asheville Baptist Church. He was operator of Ward Printing Co. until his retirement in 1968. He was a member of John A. Nichols Masonic Lodge, No. 650, AF&AM. He was a Shriner, a member of the Charlotte Oasis Temple and a life member of the Asheville Optimist Club, of which he was past president.

Mr. Ward for many years published the West Asheville News, selling it in 1948, and later repurchasing it in 1954, and operated it several more years under the name, The Asheville News.

—1954 Photo

WALTER A. WARD

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Nell Tweed Ward; two sons, Dr. Walter A. Ward Jr. of Winston-Salem and Dr. G. Thomas Ward of Governor's Island, N.Y.; three sisters, Mrs. Annie Stroup of Asheville, Mrs. Edith McDowell of Inman, S.C. and Mrs. Ethel Anderson of San Diego, Calif.; two brothers, George Ward of Inman and Lloyd Ward of Mills River; and three grandchildren.

Services will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday in Groce Funeral Home.

The Rev. Nane Starnes will officiate. Burial will be in Green Hills Cemetery.

Pallbearers will be Ray Harwell, J. R. Rogers, W. F. Casteel, A. R. Sluder, Harold Brownlee and Victor Murdock.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that contributions be made to the Walter A. Ward Sr. Memorial, to go for the coronary care unit at Baptist Hospital in Winston-Salem.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday at the funeral home.

Asheville Citizen June 28, 1971

Lee Edwards Vote Results Announced

Walter Ward Jr., rising senior at Lee H. Edwards High School, was elected president of the school House of Representatives yesterday afternoon for the 1952-53 school year.

Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Ward, served as campaign manager for Donald Morgan, elected president of the student body Monday.

Jim Shurling was elected vice president of the student body in an election held yesterday morning, also for the 1952-53 year. He is son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Shurling of RFD 2, and is a junior deacon at First Baptist Church, a member of Torchlight, school honor society and holds memberships in the school Hi-Y and Latin Clubs.

Gayle Chandler, daughter of E. D. Chandler of Bear Creek Road, was elected vice president of the House and Gale Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Johnson, was elected secretary of the House. Both are members of Torchlight and the Latin Club, and with Ward, are members of the student government this year.

Asheville Citizen May 8, 1952

journalnow.com
Your guide to life in Northwest North Carolina
Online partner of the WINSTON-SALEM JOURNAL | Apr. 2, 2005

Sponsored by:
Sherwood Flower Shop, Inc.
800.205.7077

Obituaries

WALTER A. WARD JR.
NSTON-SALEM — Walter A. Jr., 79, son of Walter A. Ward Nell Tweed Ward, died Friday, 3, 2004, in Winston-Salem.
e is survived by his wife, gene Murdoch Ward; son, r A. Ward III of Atlanta; daugh- aren Kaplan and her husband, t, of Boston; brother, Thomas l and his wife, Judy, of Tarboro; two grandchildren and two iews.
memorial service will be held at er date.

Walter A. Ward Jr.

Walter A. Ward Jr., a pioneer in alternative medical techniques for the Triad, passed away Friday, Dec. 3, 2004. He was preceded in death by his parents, Walter A. Ward Sr. and Nell Tweed Ward, both of Asheville. His memory will be carried on by his wife, Jean Murdoch Ward; his daughter, Karen Ward Kaplan and her husband, Elliot Kaplan and their children, Jess and Asa Kaplan of Boston, Mass.; his son, Walter A. Ward III of Atlanta, Ga.; a brother, G. Thomas Ward and his wife, Judy; and two nephews. He was a renowned speaker on allergy and nutrition and served as president of the American Academy of Otolarygic Allergy. He also served on all committees of this organization. He was a member of the Academy of Environmental Medicine and many other allergy and alternative groups. He was originally a head and neck cancer surgeon at Bowman Gray School of Medicine, later becoming their allergist. In 1982, he opened his own practice and continued to help many patients until his retirement on July 1 of this year. The family wishes to thank all patients and friends for their many kindnesses. A special thank-you to Anna Scott, RN and caregivers Felix and William Hairston. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to Hospice and Palliative CareCenter, 1100-C S. Stratford Road, Winston-Salem, NC 27103 or the American Academy of Environmental Medicine, 7701 E. Kellogg Drive, Suite 625, Wichita, KS 67207. A memorial service will be held at a later date.

Published in the Winston-Salem Journal on 12/4/2004.
Flowers • Gift Shop • Charities

Walter A. Ward Jr.

A memorial Service for Dr. Walter A. Ward Jr. will be held at 2 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 29, 2005 at Hayworth-Miller Silas Creek Chapel.

Published in the Winston-Salem Journal on 1/23/2005.

ROSE'S STORES, INC. IS N. C. INDUSTRY

Rose's 5-10-25c Stores, Inc., 707-709 Haywood Road in West Asheville, is nationally known for its vareity and value," according to Mrs. Barbara K. Watts, Store Manager. Rose's was founded in 1915 in Oxford, N. C., by C. H. Rose of Henderson, N. C., where the home office is located. The company now has over 150 stores, two of which are in Asheville.

Mrs. Watts has been with the West Asheville store since 1952. She is active in community work, serving in the West Asheville Presbyterian Church as circle chairman; and in the West Asheville Business Association as a member of the Board of Directors and Chairman of Legislative Action Committee.

Asheville Citizen November 10, 1960

Barbara Watts
32 Fairfax Ave

On Bible In Schools Dinner Program

These students of Hall Fletcher junior high school in West Asheville will present the devotionals at a dinner meeting of the interdenominational committee for Bible in the Public Schools at Central Methodist church Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock. The Rev. W. G. McLarland, now of Salisbury and formerly pastor of the Haywood Street Methodist church here, will be the principal speaker. His topic will be "Fortifying Youth for National Defense." All persons interested in Bible instruction in the city schools are invited, but reservations must be made today at Telephone No. 2865 or No. 7272. The students, members of the Bible classes at Hall Fletcher, are Miss Juanita Watts, Miss Dorothy Blackwell and Miss Betty Ann Dover.

Asheville Times January 12, 1942

THE SUNDAY CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., SUNDAY, JUNE 15, 1930

Mammoth Rhododendron Festival Opens Wednesday With Colorful Parade

Queen Of Festival

Miss Julia Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Webb, Middlemount, Sulphur Springs, will be crowned Queen of the third annual Rhododendron Festival Wednesday evening at the Rhododendron Pageant at Memorial Stadium. Miss Webb was "Miss Asheville" last year. Charles S. Dunlop will be crowned King with Miss Webb. The Festival this year will be the most brilliant event ever held in Asheville.—Staff Photo by Michael.

Queen Of Festival

Miss Julia Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Webb, Middlemount, Sulphur Springs, will be crowned Queen of the third annual Rhododendron Festival Wednesday evening at the Rhododendron Pageant at Memorial Stadium. Miss Webb was "Miss Asheville" last year. Charles S. Dunlop will be crowned King with Miss Webb. The Festival this year will be the most brilliant event ever held in Asheville.—Staff Photo by Michael.

Bruce Emory
Research

Mammoth Rhododendron Festival Opens Wednesday With Colorful Parade

SPONSORS WILL ARRIVE TUESDAY FOR PAGEANTRY

Parade Entries Reach New High Marks As Plans Mature

Everything is in readiness for the opening Wednesday morning of the third annual Rhododendron Festival in Asheville.

All events have been planned, rehearsed and polished into shape and the parade will open the festivities Wednesday morning. The pageant, coronation of the King and Queen, Rhododendron Ball, fireworks, carnival night, boat races, pageant of the states and other lesser events are all ready for the three days of pageantry and revelry.

Sponsors from the 11 southern states participating will arrive in Asheville Tuesday afternoon and Wednesday morning and will be centers of attraction for the three days of the festival. Many private affairs have been planned for their entertainment, as well as the big events of the week. Two major conventions, the Civitans and American Automobile Association this week, will add to the crowds for the week.

Parade Entries

Entries in the floral float parade which have already been listed, according to H. E. Gruver, chairman, are: Municipal Division: Motorcycle police, mounted police, marshals mounted, Jack Horner, manager of Grove Park Inn, Chief Marshal, J. Walter Haynes, Merrill P. Gallihier, Francis Bourne, Kenneth S. Clark, Skyland Farms, high school band, city commissioners, county commissioners, Chamber of Commerce, Merchants' association, Real Estate board, Hotelmen's association, Asheville fire department, Volunteer fire department of early days of Asheville, city of Asheville, with Miss Katherine Hunt as "Miss Asheville," West Asheville float, with "Miss West Asheville," and cities of Marion, Canton and Black Mountain.

Civic division: American Business club and Boy Scout drum corps, Boy Scouts marching units, Rotary club, Kiwanis club, Lions club, West Asheville club, Parent-Teachers association, Little Theater, Asheville Junior League, American Legion, American Legion auxiliary, DeMolay, Phi Delta Kappa fraternity, Veterans of Foreign Wars, Biltmore Forest Riding academy presenting horsemen in the different styles of riding at fetlows, soldiers, jockeys, hunters, cowboys, park riders, pony riding and an old fashioned straw ride party, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Mercantile division: Denton's, Bird's, M. V. Moore and company, Montgomery Ward and company, Pollock's, Dulham's Music House, Asheville Citizen, Asheville Times, Asheville Harness company, Asheville Baking company, National Biscuit company, Public Service company, Southern Bell Telephone company, Western Carolina Enterprises, Asheville Clearing House association, Housing Light and Refrigerating Co., Red Top Cab company and A and P Stores.

Industrial Division: Champion Paper and Fibre company, Blue Ridge Bleacheries, Hans Bees Sons, Carolina Power and Light company, Gulf Refining company, Western Oil company, Electric Ice company, Asheville Gas company, Southern Dairies, Asheville Laundrymen's association, O. F. Meadows' Sheet Metal works, Skyland Farms, McRary and Son, M. and M. Body and Radiator works, Southern Railway, National Forests under the direction of M. A. Mattoon, representing Pisgah and Nantahala National forests, Automobile Trade Dealers association including entries by Sawyer Motor company, Piedmonts Motor company, Conabeer Motor company, Mims Chevrolet company, Branson Studebaker company, Richbourg Motor company, Ellmon Motor company, Blue Ridge Motor company, Brown Brothers Motor company, Brown Motor company and Thomas Cadillac Co.

Asheville Outboard Motor Boat club will have four entries in the parade. Races at Beaver Lake will be staged by members of this club in the afternoon of June 19.

The Publix Theater special, a special car equipped with a full amplifying outfit, will be in the parade and will be used for broadcasting music and announcements of the Festival events.

Court Division includes: The King's marshals, including Mrs. John H. Enwright, chief marshal, Mrs. H. E. Greene, Mrs. [illegible] Dwight Chambers, Joseph DeNardo's band, 30th Signal Corps, under the direction of Captain W. V. Dorsey, of Canton, two trumpeters, John Robert Frye and Stewart Barnes, heralding approach of the King and Queen, members of the court, including Miss Eliza Coxe, Miss Evelyn Colburn, Miss Elizabeth Brownell, Miss Eunice Glenn, Miss Mary Harris Hubbard, Miss Cecile Malone, Miss Kathrine Boyer, Miss Janie Rice Brown, Miss Daphne Brown, Miss Margaret Rogers.

The King's Guard, a man in full armor specially imported for the occasion, will precede the members of the court and the King and Queen. George Cushing has been chosen for this important post and he will appear in the parade mounted upon a white charger in keeping with the remainder of the costume he wears.

The King and Queen, Charles S. Dunlop and Miss Julia Webb, will follow the court, a special float having been prepared for their majesties by the Asheville Chamber of Commerce.

State sponsors will follow the King and Queen in specially decorated cars. They include: Miss Thelma Mattson, Alabama; Miss Leora Dunn, West Virginia; Miss Frances Ransom, Mississippi; Miss Dorothy Wright, Tennessee; Miss Christie Maynard, North Carolina; Miss Catherine Cantwell, Louisa Garretson, Georgia; Miss Hazel Baucom, Kentucky; Miss Catherine Hill, Louisiana; and Miss Marion Ward, Florida.

The Asheville Cavalry Troop will form a part of the Court Division of the parade.

Women marshals will appear in other divisions of the parade, as well as that of the court. Marshals in the civic division include Mrs. Harold Buck, Mrs. Arthur York, Mrs. Fay Fletcher, Miss Frances Artz, Mrs. John P. Curry, and Miss Jane Wolfe. In the mercantile division will have Miss Martha Johnson, Mrs. Cecil Bealer, Mrs. D. R. Tucker, and Miss Lavinia Jeffries.

Jesters Revel

Under the leadership of Dan W. Hill, the preparations for the Jester's Revel, feature event of the closing day of the Rhododendron Festival on June 20, are being pushed forward to completion. An organization under the name of the Rhodoelves is being perfected this year, each member of the organization promising to take an active part in the event in costume. The Rhodoelves will be a continuing organization which will foster the spirit of revelry in Jester's Night not only this year but in succeeding celebrations of the Rhododendron Festival.

According to present plans of the committee, the Jester's Parade will form on Pack Square, the insignia of authority being given at that point to the King's Jester, dressed in his special comic regal costume by Mayor Gallatin Roberts, who will appear in the long crimson robe worn by mayors of medieval cities. The parade will be a torchlight affair, led by the Jester and his court, through the streets of the city to the Grove Arcade building, where specialty features will be presented for the benefit of the throng taking part in the event.

Street dancing and dancing on the roof of the Arcade building will be an event of the evening, the music being furnished through a special broadcasting system. The Publix Theater Special, a car equipped with a complete broadcasting outfit has been offered by Charles S. Amos of the Publix Theater gorup in the city as a means of broadcasting music for the dances and for special announcements.

Organization of marching groups in Asheville and in the surrounding cities will add greatly to the number taking part in the Jester's Parade this year, the organization of these groups being under the direction of Jack A. Dair and W. O. Lyda. Members of the Jester's Revel Committee include: Dan W. Hill, chairman, John H. Enwright, Jack Dair, John Geary, vice chairman, Raymond Funk, R. D. Young, John A. Goode, and Captain W. H. Lyda.

Festival Ball

The Rhododendron ball, one of the principal events of the Festival this year, is proving to be particularly popular, the early rush of ticket buyers indicating that the quota of 400 attending will be more than filled. Those wishing tickets for the event should make their reservations at once at the Chamber of Commerce, officials said.

The Rhododendron ball will be staged at the Grove Park Inn at 9 o'clock Wednesday evening. The program of the event is in the care of a special committee with Julian Woodcock, Jr., as chairman. Real rhododendron will be used as decorations, against which will be displayed the chosen beauties of 11 states representing the state flowers of the states they represent.

The presentation of the sponsors will take place early in the program of the ball. Music for the event will be rendered by the Slatz Randall Brunswick Recording orchestra, an aggregation of musicians who have gained national fame.

The Slatz Randall musicians will play also at the Phi Delta Kappa Sponsors ball, which will be held at the George Vanderbilt Hotel on the night of June 20. The Phi Delta Kappa affair will be followed by a buffet supper at the fraternity house of the organization, the supper being staged in honor of the State sponsors.

Pageant

The Rhododendron Pageant and the Coronation of the King and Queen will be the opening event of the first day of the Festival, the Pageant and Coronation taking place at the Asheville Memorial Stadium on the night of June 18.

Ten cities in Western North Carolina will take part in the Pageant, which is entirely new this year and which will portray in the brilliant costuming of the participants the customs of people in various parts of the world and at different periods in history. The Pageant is expected to be one of the most brilliant events in the fete this year.

Asheville, Hendersonville, Burnsville, Franklin, Silva, Canton, Waynesville, Swannanoa and Weaverville are among the cities taking part. The pageant is being organized under the direction of Miss Edith Russell, general director of the Fete, and properties and scenic effects are being prepared by H. R. Harrington, technical director of the Festival.

Over 50 specialty dancers are being rehearsed for the pageant under the direction of Mrs. Elsie Beale Hornphill, of Arden. The Junior Study club, of Sylva, and the Business and Professional Women's Club of Canton, have charge of the Pageant Preparations in those cities. The Business and Professional Women's club and other organizations in Asheville will furnish participants in the pageant, which will display over 1,000 persons in brilliantly colored costumes.

The coronation of the King and Queen will follow the presentation of the Pageant in the Stadium. This in turn will be followed by a pyrotechnic display. The fireworks will be particularly brilliant.

Boat Races

Outboard motor boat races will form an important part of the Rhododendron Festival program June 18, 19 and 20, the races taking place at 3:30 o'clock Thursday at Beaver Lake. The race will be organized and conducted this year under the direction of Roy W. Parker of the Johnson Outboard Motor Co. More than 40 entries will be made in the races, which take place in three events, "B" and "C" outboard motors will be entered in the "B" class races, the "C" class motors in these events being limited to those of models up to 1928. A special free-for-all race will be run in which all classes of motors may enter.

Handsome and expensive cups have been offered to the winners in theevents, Asheville Oil Co., Atlantic Gas, offers one cup, Lykes Service Co., one cup, Standard Oil Co., one cup, Charles E. Henderson Jeweler, a handsome bronze and silver cup, George Vanderbilt hotel, one cup, and N. A. Harrison Jewelry Co., one cup. In the first race three cups will be awarded with two cups in the free for all and a grand prize for the fastest boat in the event.

Judge include Winston Jackson, O. F. Meadows, and Jack Weaver. Entries already listed include Mark Reed, Jr., two boats, Logan Robinson, Brandon P. Hodges, two boats; Earl Meadows, Marcus Book, Mack Murray, Roy W. Parker, Quaker State Oil and Atlantic Gas Co., B. F. Ellsworth, Vernon W. Ledbetter, George Henderson, and two boats from Hickory. Entries should be made at once with Roy W. Parker, at the Thomas Cushing company, Market Street.

Committees

The festival organization has been working as follows: Central executive committee: Charles S. Walters, chairman, Dan W. Hill, C. D. Beadle, J. A. Woodcock, Jr., and Marcus Sterne, Jr. From this committee the other divisions were formed as follows:

Rhododendron ball committee: J. A. Woodcock, Jr., chairman, Mrs. Alan McDonald, Mrs. Arnold Vanderhoof, Miss Daphne Brown, Miss Margaret Rogers, Miss Janie Rice Brown, Mrs. W. M. Smathers, Mrs. J. G. Stikeleather, Harry Sample, Lindsey Gudger, Charles Dunlop and E. C. Coleman.

Carnival parade and street dance committee: Dan W. Hill, chairman, J. M. Geary, J. H. Enwright, Jack Dair, W. C. Lyda, R. D. Young, John A. Goode and R. A. Funk.

Parade of floats committee: H. E. Gruver, chairman, Marcus Sterne, representing the central committee, Fred Woodcock, Jacob F. Weaver, Stanford Webb Thomas A. McCoy, Brandon Hodges and Thomas W. Bird.

Rhododendron tours committee: C. D. Beadle, chairman, M. A. Mattoon and W. F. Bridgers.

Pagean tcommittee: Charles S. Walters, chairman, Chester Brown, W. E. Smathers, Mrs. Fred McArthur, vice chairman Mrs. J. W. Grimes Mrs. William Ray Griffin and Mrs. C. S. Walters.

Seven hundred unemployed seamen at Hull, England, recently passed a resolution protesting against Arabs being employed as firemen on British ships.

Queen Of Festival

Miss Julia Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Webb, Middlemount, Sulphur Springs, will be crowned Queen of the third annual Rhododendron Festival Wednesday evening at the Rhododendron Pageant at Memorial Stadium. Miss Webb was "Miss Asheville" last year. Charles S. Dunlop will be crowned King with Miss Webb. The Festival this year will be the most brilliant event ever held in Asheville.—Staff Photo by Michael.

Rhododendron King

Charles S. Dunlop, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Dunlop, Glendale Road, Grove Park, will begin his reign for the third annual Rhododendron Festival on Wednesday of this week, continuing through Friday. Miss Julia Webb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Webb, of Middlemount, Sulphur Springs, is Queen of the Festival. The King and Queen will be crowned Wednesday night at the Rhododendron Pageant at the Memorial Stadium. —Staff Photo by Michael.

DEFENDANT WINS DAMAGE ACTION

Crawford Loses $75,000 Suit For Death Of Son In Lake

A jury in Buncombe county superior court yesterday refused to award J. P. Crawford damages for the death of his son, Russell Crawford, 16, in a lake in Starnes Cove last summer. The jury deliberated less than 15 minutes before reporting its verdict.

The suit was for $75,000 and was brought against Needham H. Grady, owner of the property, and E. L. Stines, agent for Mr. Grady. The plaintiff contended that defendants were operating a public swimming pool and with failure to give warning as to the depth of water and providing life guards.

Defendants claimed that the pool was a private fish pond and was not operated as a public swimming pool. Plaintiffs showed that bathing suits could be rented there and held that this fact indicated it was a public resort.

Mr. Grady and Mr. Stines testified they procured bathing suits for rent to eliminate nude and improperly clad bathing, declaring that bathers of both sexes had used the pool on various occasions without clothing or improperly clothed.

Wheat Rust Finds New Way To Fight

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Nature has given black stem rust of wheat a new weapon against man's attempt to destroy it.

With the barberry bush as a host plant, she crosses the spores of different forms or strains or rust to produce a new variety. Thus as man develops rust-resistant wheat, spores develop a new form of rust against which the resistant grains lose their immunity.

The crossing of strains of rust on barberry bushes was discovered by E. C. Stakman, plant pathologist of the Minnesota experiment station working with the Canadian rust research laboratories at Winnipeg.

Twins Born To Mr. And Mrs. Denny

Friends in Asheville will be interested to learn that twins have been born to Mr. and Mrs. George V. Denny, Jr., of New York City, the babies have been named George Vernon Denny, III, and Mary Virginia Denny. The children were born on June 9. Mr. Denny is the son of Mrs. Carrie H. Denny, of 14 Arlington Street, and is well known in Asheville.

Mrs. Denny and the babies are at the Church Home and Infirmary in Baltimore and are said to be doing nicely.

Harrow Weald, England, has banned the illumination of streets all night.

photo courtesy Ramsey Library Special Collections, UNC Asheville

Asheville's "Civic Redevelopment Project": This 1976 photo shows the results of the massive urban-renewal project that Weir sprearheaded. The Gothic-revival First Christian Church, at far left, survived, but scores of other buildings were razed and replaced by the modern landmarks seen behind it, including the Sheraton Motor Inn skyscraper (now the Renaissance Hotel), the Buncombe County Health Center and the Southern Bell administration building (now SunTrust), at right.

Fifteen years later, Weldon Weir took over Burdette's job in name as well as fact. And in his two decades as city manager, Weir is credited with almost single-handedly pulling Asheville out of the prolonged financial spiral precipitated by the Depression.

This Asheville-born son of a sales executive turned dairy farmer was a tireless worker, those who knew him recall. Weekdays, he would rise at 5 a.m. and show up at the city garage first thing to give arriving employees his version of work orders — slips of paper bearing notes he'd made the day before and stuffed into his pocket. From the time Weir arrived in his office (generally around 8:30), he kept his door open to anyone who wanted to see him, writing down what needed to be done to solve petitioners' problems on more slips of paper. And Weir would often return to the garage at 5 p.m. to check with the returning workers on the status of jobs he wanted finished that day.

"I still hear [this from] some of these old-timers that talk about Weldon: If you went to Weldon with a problem, it was taken care of," says Bruce Peterson, who grew up in Asheville during Weir's tenure and has been active in the Buncombe County Democratic Party for many years. "I mean, you didn't get lip service — you got results."

And not just bigwigs like Democratic Party power broker Don S. Elias (then the publisher of both the Asheville Citizen and the Asheville Times), or the executives at Wachovia Bank (which handled the city's accounts and covered its most pressing bond debts after the Depression crash). What made Weir's name legendary in this town was his genuine concern for the problems of ordinary city residents.

"If they needed fuel oil, if they had a fire at their house, he took care of people — he made sure they had what they needed," remembers Peterson, and published biographies of Weir corroborate this.

Bruce's wife, Carol Weir Peterson, is Weldon's niece. Since her election to the Buncombe County Board of Commissioners last fall, she reports, many locals who recognize her name have told her stories about how her uncle helped them. "So many people said, 'He was more my family to me than my family,'" she recalls.

Weir was even a pioneering force for racial equality, hiring minorities at a time when the South was still mired in segregation.

Meet the machine

But there was another side to the way Weir got things done. In an age when Western North Carolina's mayors and sheriffs often ruled their little fiefdoms like backwater feudal barons, Weir operated a political-patronage machine that would have done Chicago Mayor Richard Daley proud.

It wasn't Weir's creation: He inherited it from Pat Burdette, who for decades had been one of the leaders of an entrenched Democratic Party syndicate that the newspapers called "the Burdette-Greene-Nettles organization." The first partisan City Council elections, held in 1935, were swept by the syndicate's candidates, who promptly hired Burdette — the head of the Buncombe County Democratic Party — as city manager, a post he held until passing the torch to Weir.

Weir ran the machine with a down-home touch. Every Saturday morning, everybody who was anybody — or who wanted to be — came to the basement of the Lance's Produce warehouse on South Lexington to have hot dogs with Weir and his cohorts as they casually hashed political matters. Whether you were a teenager hoping for a summer job cutting grass at the cemeteries or a pillar of the community dreaming of a seat on City Council, the first thing you had to do was meet Weldon face to face and get his approval.

Bruce Peterson, whose first job as a youth was swinging a sling blade for the city Parks and Recreation Department, remembers the experience well.

"First thing they ask you is, how is you registered? How are your parents registered? Do you live in the city?"

If you or your folks weren't straight-ticket Democrats, or you didn't live in town, you didn't stand a chance. And even then, if you weren't a friend or family member of Weir's, a hot dog was often all you'd walk away with.

In an article titled "Asheville Used to be Run Like a Family, and Things Got Done," (May 1, 2004 Asheville Citizen-Times), Rob Neufeld quoted Weir's close friend and right-hand man, Charlie

STORY CONTINUED FROM PREVIOUS PAGE

Dermid, who said Weir's motto was, "Never hire anybody if you didn't know his grandfather." Dermid, who attended school with Weir and worked with him early on at what is now Azalea Park, benefited from his powerful friend's patronage for decades. At various times, Weir installed Dermid as parks director, police chief, director of public safety and director of public works.

Throughout the '50s and into the '60s, Weir in the city and Sheriff Laurence Brown in the county controlled access to every local elective office, deciding who would run — and, usually, who would win.

"Many people have told me, 'I wanted to run and I went to see Weldon, and he told me no!'" Bruce Peterson recounts. "He said, 'You can do it ... but you won't get support.' He said, 'We've got somebody in line for that.'

"I think it was a situation where today you'd say the tail's wagging the dog — where the manager controls the [city] council. He approved their running for office, helped them get elected; they were all in this thing together, they depended on each other. It wasn't an adversarial situation at all. That's just the way it was. If you wanted to run, come see me."

In those days, the South was overwhelmingly Democratic, and city employees were expected to vote for Weir's men. But some say the machine was not content just to drive folks to the polls and hope for the best: Rumors still persist of impossibly lopsided precinct counts, and of votes cast by folks who never entered a voting booth (and we're not talking absentee ballots here).

Many Ashevilleans opposed the way Weir operated, even if they liked him as a person. One of his most determined critics was local attorney Bruce Elmore Sr., himself a Democratic Party powerhouse at the state level. His son, Bruce Elmore Jr., is also an Asheville attorney who serves on the board of the state chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union. As a boy, Elmore Jr. saw through the eyes of his father (who's now in his 90s) what a town ruled by patronage looked like.

"You couldn't do much of anything politically without being on the right side. It may even have been more perception than reality, but people would have thought that, 'Oh, if I want to get a loan from [a local bank], I probably ought to be friendly to the machine.' So a lot of folks who weren't political would have given lip service to the machine.

"If you had a business, and you had to have delivery people double-park every now and then to deliver, you wouldn't want to be against [the machine] because folks might get towed. They would have worried, whether it would have actually happened or not."

If your bar had a jukebox owned by a rival of one of Weir's relatives, your customers would be repeatedly arrested for DUI by the police, remembers Elmore — because the city manager controlled the police chief.

But whatever Weir's enemies thought of his methods, his chief critic never believed that the powerful city manager was motivated by greed.

"My dad never thought that [Weir] did it for gain," recalls Elmore, adding, "He just wanted control; power. And he had it."

The end of an era

But in the perennial struggle to stay on top of the political heap, Asheville's alpha male finally lost a key bout with a powerful rival. In 1964, when City Council voted to introduce cable television, Harold H. Thoms, who owned local television stations WLOS and WISE, was one of the principal bidders for the contract. Weir, however, convinced Council that the city should own and operate the cable infrastructure as a public utility (it would have been the city's only income-generating utility, other than water), and successfully fended off Thoms' efforts to acquire the contract.

The next year, Thoms sweetened his deal, promising to direct 20 percent of the cable system's profits to the Asheville Orthopedic Hospital, which he served as board president (it's now known as Thoms Rehabilitation Hospital). Yet Weir and City Council chose an out-of-state cable operator who offered Asheville a smaller cut of the profits than Thoms had, but who promised to turn the whole system over to the city after 20 years.

In 1967, though, Thoms got his way. What happened in the interim is unclear from news archives (in those pre-Watergate days, investigative reporting on government was a rarity). But Weir's own Council turned around and handed the local TV magnate a contract to install and operate Asheville's cable-TV network. The still-controversial document essentially gave Thoms a 35-year monopoly on the city system.

"I think it just sort of signaled that his era was over at that time," says Elmore. On Sept. 1, 1968 — mere days after the riots at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago — Weir announced his resignation as city manager. And in the Council elections the following spring, a slate of outsiders beat the machine, as Republicans took control of City Council for the first time ever. The voters also elected Asheville's first black and first female Council members.

The new Republican mayor was Dr. Wayne S. Montgomery — the director of the cerebral-palsy clinic at Thoms' hospital.

> "I think it was a situation where today you'd say the tail's wagging the dog — where the manager controls the [city] council."
>
> — Asheville native Bruce Peterson

Weir lived until 1987, remaining a respected elder statesman in the local Democratic Party. But he never again held the kind of power he'd wielded as Asheville's city manager.

The more things change ...

Today, as the 11-year tenure of City Manager Jim Westbrook winds down, political parties play only a limited role in Council elections, which have been nonpartisan for years. City officials now run a many-layered, multimillion-dollar bureaucracy, and the Saturday-morning klatches over hot dogs are history.

But what hasn't changed much — because it's built into the city's charter — is the lopsided balance of power that drives Asheville's strong manager/weak Council form of government. While elected officials take the heat for unpopular decisions, it's often the city manager who, behind the scenes, has done much of the actual deciding.

"Any time you have a council/management-type situation, council does set policy, but we're elected people, and we really don't have the background in public administration that a manager does," observes Council member Jan Davis. "So we have to rely very heavily on what they say. If you have confidence in that manager, it helps a great deal."

Brian Peterson (no relation to Bruce or Carol), who served on City Council from 2000 to 2004, was one of several Council members who clashed with Westbrook (and nearly fired him) in 2003. Peterson, who says he has no plans to seek a seat on City Council again, spoke candidly with Xpress about his experience of how the council/manager system plays out.

"It's a bit of an unequal playing field, because — it's like running the military, you know? The president's the commander in chief, but the general actually's got command of all the soldiers on the field, and so the policy might be we're not going to abuse prisoners in Iraq, but the general lets it happen.

"Council's a part-time job," notes Peterson. "Everybody [who isn't retired] has other work, has families; you don't have time to be an expert on everything that comes before Council."

Echoing Davis, Peterson says: "You end up relying very, very heavily on staff, and some have

THE BOSS

How an autocratic city manager ran Asheville

BY STEVE RASMUSSEN

When incoming City Manager Gary Jackson takes the helm as Asheville's most powerful official on June 27, he will oversee the city's thousand-member work force and multi-million-dollar budget (see sidebar, "From Steamrolling to Bridge Building"). But when he begins tackling the issues facing Asheville today — the water system, the Civic Center, downtown development — he'll find the fingerprints of his most famous (and most controversial) predecessor all over them. J. Weldon Weir guided this city through its hardest, poorest times while building a political empire unequaled here before or since. And in the process, he retooled the local power structure to serve his purposes.

Other public functionaries are often more visible. The police chief, the fire chief, the parks-and-recreation director, the public-works director, the planning-and-development director: These and other key city officials draw the hot spotlight of public attention whenever one of them signs off on a decision that affects local businesses' profits or city residents' lives. But every one of these movers and shakers answers to a single person, whom Asheville's charter vests with the sole power to hire them, fire them, and tell them how to do their jobs: the city manager.

Like a corporate CEO who's supposed to answer to a board of directors, the city manager is himself hired or fired by the men and women the voters elect to City Council. Yet there was a time, not so long ago, when Asheville's unelected boss even chose the folks who would supervise him.

Just about everyone who lived in Asheville during the '50s and '60s has a story about Weir, who served as city manager from 1950 to 1968. His admirers speak of him in near-reverent tones, and even those who opposed his autocratic political machine praise the results he achieved. To a significant extent, modern Asheville is Weldon Weir's legacy.

At the beginning of his reign, Weir lobbied successfully for building the 36-inch pipeline from the North Fork Reservoir into the city — a key component of the municipal water system that's now being bitterly disputed by Asheville and Buncombe County. Ironically, Weir's diversion of water revenues, which helped keep the city afloat financially while it was laboring to pay off its Depression-era debt, also helped create the crumbling infrastructure that still plagues the system today.

In 1955, county voters rejected a bond issue to build an airport. Two years later, Weir pushed through a city bond issue that gave us the Asheville Regional Airport. In the mid-'60s, Weir helped conceive the plans that led to the construction of the Civic Center a decade later. And in 1964, he secured millions of dollars in urban-renewal funds to redevelop a 75-acre triangle of downtown north of City/County Plaza and east of Market and Spruce streets. This 12-year project left in its wake a swath of sleek, parking-lot-encircled modern structures such as the Buncombe County Health Center and what is now the Renaissance Asheville Hotel — right alongside the blocks of funky, antique buildings that are the focus of today's downtown revival.

photo courtesy of the city of Asheville

Iron and silk: Weldon Weir, Asheville's most famous city manager, kept his door open to residents in need — and an iron grip on their politics. His party machine is gone now, but the city manager is still the most powerful official in Asheville.

> "It's like running the military, you know? The president's the commander in chief, but the general actually's got command of all the soldiers on the field."
>
> — former Asheville City Council member Brian Peterson

But even greater than the mark he left on the city's physical landscape is the way Weir reshaped its political terrain to center on the city manager's office — which many observers say remains the pinnacle of local power to this day.

The problem-solver

Throughout the cash-flush days of the Roaring '20s, Asheville was run by a mayor and two elected commissioners (of public works and public safety). Then came the Great Depression. In 1930, angry citizens forced the mayor and both commissioners to resign after discovering that they had illegally borrowed huge sums of money in a vain effort to keep the bank holding the city's accounts from crashing.

In a referendum held the following year, Asheville voters approved a change in Asheville's charter (later confirmed by the N.C. General Assembly) that placed the city under the council/manager form of government. This relatively new system — pioneered by Staunton, Va., in 1908 — empowered an elected mayor and city council to appoint a professional manager who would serve as the city's chief executive officer — overseeing its day-to-day business, preparing and administering its budget, and hiring (and firing) its personnel.

The new system got off to a rickety start. Asheville's first city manager — R.W. Rigsby, who had previously held comparable positions in Charlotte, Durham and Bristol, Tenn. — retired after only two years. The second, George Hackney, wound up being sued (along with the city council that had hired him) by Asheville's creditors, who claimed that the city owed them its water revenues in payment of its massive debts.

The third city manager was a local Democratic Party mogul and former Asheville Times publisher named Pat Burdette. But he didn't exactly throw himself into the job, as Margaret Simmons, Weir's secretary, recalled years later for local historian Rob Neufeld. Burdette would get to work at 10 a.m., take a two-hour lunch, and leave at 4 p.m. The man who actually got things done was an ambitious 22-year-old whom Burdette promoted to public-works director immediately after his own installation as city manager in 1935.

photo by Steve Rasmussen

Hub of the machine: Every Saturday morning, Weir and his political cronies held court over hot dogs behind the basement doors of the Lance's Produce warehouse on North Lexington Avenue. The building's owner controlled produce distribution to the city's stores and restaurants. Locals now nickname it the "Havatampa Building" for its faded cigar ad.

the view that — they'll sort of give staff a huge benefit of the doubt. Whatever staff says must be right, unless there's some overwhelming evidence or reason why you're going to disagree with them."

With a staff of 20 and the entire city work force to command, the city manager has far more resources at his or her disposal than Council members, who are lucky to have a handful of volunteers to help them out.

"There are certain duties that Council legally has to do — you know, approving a rezoning — that actually takes a vote of Council. But the process of getting it to Council is controlled by the city manager, and what staff recommends is controlled by the city manager. The information that comes to Council is controlled by the city manager.

"Council in the vast majority of cases is going to follow what staff recommends, and the city manager can tell staff what to recommend," Peterson emphasizes. "So even though the city manager — maybe it's a big rezoning — sits there and doesn't say a thing, he probably has shaped what staff has recommended. And sometimes he plays sort of coalition-building politics to put together a majority of Council to vote for something that he wants.

"Council gets the blame for stuff, but it's typically the city manager who's been really running stuff. Or [if] not him directly, then staff under his direction. But he stays out of the limelight — doesn't talk much at Council meetings. He talks before Council meetings; he talks with members one to one, or in groups of twos and threes. And he very much stays out of the limelight, so if there are people who are unhappy, they're unhappy with members of Council and not with him."

From Weir to Westbrook, Asheville's unelected bosses have exerted a tremendous influence on the city we live in. Now it's Gary Jackson's turn to put his stamp on the Asheville of the coming years. And though it remains to be seen what his impact will be, in the end, notes Council member Davis, "You just have to have a lot of faith that person is going to do what you want them to do."

PIONEER MOVIE MAN—Percy Wells, of Captain Bill's Garden, West Asheville, was one of the two men who opened the first permanent moving picture theater in North Carolina. That was in Wilmington on December 24, 1906. An old carnival man, he recalls many exciting incidents from his days with the "black top" tents, the first movie houses.

Asheville Man Operated First Movie In State

AC 7-17-41

On December 24, 1906, two men with a big black tent, a projector and 20 reels of films including "The Great Train Robbery", opened the first moving picture theater in North Carolina, in Wilmington.

The men were Percy Wells and James (Fox) Howard. Both were old carnival men. The glare of the torchlight and the cry of the barker were as familiar to them as day and night. They had traveled, and up North they found the "Nickelodeon" coming into popularity. This was the first name for the moving picture theater and the price was a nickel. The show was a one-reeler and lasted about 30 minutes, including advertising slides and an illustrated song.

One of these men, Mr Howard, died several years ago, but the other, Mr. Wells, is operating Captain Bill's Garden, at 1043 Haywood road in West Asheville, and is winning a long fight against bad health which forced his retirement from the theater business.

Still A Showman

"I'm still a showman and I know what people want," he says, proud of the years he spent with carnivals and tent shows before pioneering motion pictures in North Carolina.

There were no moving picture theaters in Virginia, North Carolina or South Carolina in 1906, Mr. Wells recalls, although many such shows had been given by traveling companies with their own "black top" tents. The tents were black so they would be dark inside and permit the showing of pictures in daylight. Each carnival had one.

The only theaters showing pictures regularly in the South were two in Atlanta and one in Tampa.

When the two carnival men got to Wilmington the situation looked good. They built an elaborate front or entrance for their theater, and used one of the big "black top" tents for the auditorium or theater proper.

Tough Going At First

Even though the investment was not large and the costs were comparatively small, it was still tough going to pioneer the first moving picture theater in the state, Mr. Wells recalls. He and his partner had 20 reels of film. They started out showing the first reel for a nickel and showed it for three days. Then they switched and showed their second reel.

At this rate, using two reels a week, their supply lasted for ten weeks. By that time they had contacted the Mutual Supply company in Atlanta and made arrangements to get more films on a rental basis. Most of these were two-reelers, so they started showing two reels for one show. The cost to the film company was between $30 and $40 a week, Mr. Wells recalls. Then Universal entered the film distributing field and it was possible to get a greater variety of films. Warner Brothers also had an exchange in Pittsburgh.

Some of those early films that "packed 'em in" the big black-top tent were "The Great Train Robbery", "The Great Bank Robbery", "The San Francisco Earthquake", "The Slocum Disaster", dealing with the sinking of the excursion steamer and "Trailed by Bloodhounds", which Mr. Wells recalls they always booked as "Dragged by Bloodhounds".

Erected Permanent Building

After snow caused the roof of the tent theater to collapse the partners decided to build a permanent building, which they did on the same site. They operated this place for 11 years, taking the customer's money at the door and never failing to "pack the house" when they had a good show.

Mr. Wells was the second president of the Theater Owners of North Carolina, serving in this office for nine years. He built four theaters in Wilmington. He came to Asheville in 1934 after his health broke down and he was forced to give up active business.

F. V. Richards, who worked as a projection machine operator in the Wilmington theater, later became one of the leading figures in the moving picture world.

The first five-reel or feature pictures came out in 1911 and 1912, Mr. Wells says. From that time on the growth of the motion picture industry has been almost unbelievable. Some of the early motion picture producing companies were Biograph and Lubin and the Edison company, he says.

Appeared Here In Trapeze Act

Mr. Wells recalls vividly his first trip to Asheville back in 1901 as a feature gymnast. He played on the "island stage" at old Riverside Park, with his trapeze some 80 feet in the air between two telephone poles, he recalls. The other act was a high dive sensation.

The two acts started their week's engagement in the fall of 1901 and on Wednesday night the high diver, "Speedy Junior", was injured in making his leap and remained in one of the Asheville hospitals for some six months with a broken back.

Mr. Wells recalls that he finished out his week's engagement doing the other act in the show.

CITIZEN-TIMES.com WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 2002 • VOL. 7, NO. 6

Smiles bloom with man's gift of flowers

By Eden Foster
CITIZEN-TIMES CORRESPONDENT

ASHEVILLE — For 14 years David West has witnessed the positive effect that flowers have on people. As owner of Gudger's Flowers in Asheville, West has seen people comforted, cheered and celebrated with this simple gift.

But West knew that all too often people making their way through life alone rarely have the opportunity to receive a gift of flowers. So, starting in 1989, he decided to do something about it.

He began by delivering a vase with a single rose arrangement to residents of the Western North Carolina Baptist Home on their birthdays. He said he was touched by how much that small gesture meant to them, so he added the Asheville Manor in Skyland to his delivery schedule. For many of these nursing home residents, it is the only gift they get on their birthdays.

West began thinking about other people who have no family and few friends, and who can't even leave their homes without help. So he approached the staff of Buncombe County Meals on Wheels, asking them to send a monthly list of their clients who are celebrating their birthdays.

Margaret Ward is a volunteer for Meals on Wheels and delivers these flowers to clients on their birthdays on her route. "It's such a kind gesture," she said. "Some of them have never gotten flowers before, so it's real special to them."

Debbie Chase-Jennings/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

David West, owner of Gudger's Flowers in West Asheville, delivers between 100 and 200 bud vases to nursing home residents, Hospice patients and Meals on Wheels recipients each month without charge.

Then, two years ago, West began designing and delivering a bud vase to each of the 17 residents of Mountain Area Hospice in Asheville. He said his delivery person has developed a special relationship with each of the residents.

West loves the cards of thanks he gets from the Hospice patients and nursing home residents. "It does my heart good," he said. All told, West purchases, designs and delivers between 100 and 200 bud vases each month, all without charge.

In addition, West sponsors two or three Christmas memory trees to help raise funds for Hospice. He likes to dedicate the trees to someone he knows who passed away in the past year, and he decorates the trees with their special interests in mind.

And, West says, he keeps a special place in his heart for children with disabilities. Every year he donates floral arrangements and other gifts to the Association of Retarded Persons annual auction and special fund-raising dinners. "Two places in my heart are really for older people and for kids," he said. "I just want to bring them happiness."

HOMETOWN HERO

David West

Address: 1065 Haywood Road, West Asheville Occupation: Owner, Gudger's Flowers
Volunteer Activity: Donates hundreds of bud vases every month.
Quote: "Bringing happiness to people's lives keeps me going. When I hear from them (recipients of his flowers), it makes me want to do more."

Hometown Heroes are ordinary people who volunteer their time and talents. They appear Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. To nominate someone you know contact Assistant Metro Editor Jason Sandford at 232-5928 or JSandford@CITIZEN-TIMES.com.

West Asheville Citizen Patrons Like Tom West

Busy Carrier Walks All Of Route To Deliver Morning Papers

Thomas Jeter West, who delvers his papers via the pedestrain route in West Asheville, has one of the larg-

Well Liked

Thomas Jeter West who delivers The Citizen in West Asheville believes in the old fashioned "ankle excursion" method.

est sections to take care of in the city. He also has [illegible] satisfied customers who are valuable customers of The Citizen, many of whom have communicated their appreciation of their carrier's service to the circulation department.

Mr. West does not have a helper and takes care of his route alone, day after day, always making prompt and accurate deliveries of Asheville's morning newspaper.

His papers are received each morning in West Asheville from The Citzen truck, which makes a special trip there daily in order to save the West Asheville men the expense and trouble of coming to The Citizen Office for their supply.

He has been with The Citizen exactly eight months and during that time has shown a steady increase in the number of subscribers on his route. Prior to entering The Citizen employ he was a shipping clerk.

West is determined to push his fellow workers for high honors in The Citizen contest to determine the Best All-Round Carrier. Merits are given the men for good work and demerits are chalked up against them for any laxity in service

Asheville Citizen August 8, 1930

Photos by Melissa Haneline/STAFF PHOTOGRAPHER

Alexander White, 3 months old, with his first Christmas gift at his home in West Asheville.

Baby's first Christmas

By Andre A. Rodriguez
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — A baby's life is filled with many firsts.

The first time he smiles. The first time she lifts her head on her own. The first time he crawls. The first time she says da-da.

This holiday season, families around the world will experience another first with their little darlings: their first Christmas.

Christmas is a time of miracles and new beginnings, and perhaps nothing better represents these ideas than babies.

"Going through pregnancy there are so many things that can go wrong," said Sasha Vrtunski, who along with her husband, Craig White, will be celebrating Christmas for the first time with 3-month-old Alexander.

Trips to visit Santa Claus, special ornaments for the tree and cute outfits are on the minds of many parents, but others are thinking more about just being together.

"Having our baby here and healthy is probably our biggest Christmas gift," Vrtunski said.

White said he and his wife are not going to be spending a lot of money on presents this year. They'll have family coming to visit from California, Maine and upstate New York. For many of them, it will be their first introduction to Alexander, who was born in August.

"Having our first child has really made us think about what Christmas is all about," White said. "We're trying to get away from the commercialism of the holiday. He'll get plenty of that while he's growing up."

White added that he didn't feel safe taking his son out too many places with everything going on in the world.

"It's important to stay close to the people that care about you and to try and look at what's going wrong."

Like White and Vrtunski, Abby and Gus Walker and their son, Gus, who was also born in August, will be spending Christmas at home. Relatives will come to call, and mom and dad will be burning up their digital camera preserving the memories.

Perhaps when Gus is older he will sit with his parents and look at the images of himself with his cousins and have plenty of questions about his first Christmas. "He's really too young to appreciate anything now," Abby Walker said.

White will also be taking plenty of digital images to record the occasion.

"We bought a digital camera before he was born, so we do take a lot of pictures," he said. "We're trying to keep a pretty good record."

These parents decided to forgo the usual "baby's first Christmas" bib or outfit in favor of more meaningful things. Primarily, family time.

Vrtunski said she expects this will be a very special Christmas.

"It's a time to start thinking of new traditions to start with our baby," she said.

SPECIAL TO THE CITIZEN-TIMES

Abby Walker, seen here holding her 3-month-old son, Gus, said this Christmas will be about spending time with family.

For Craig White and Sasha Vrtunski, their son Alexander's first Christmas will be about spending time with family.

Asheville Citizen December 6, 2004

A FLOWER was pinned on Mrs. Eleanor Galphin White by Mrs. C. A. Hawkins, right, prior to a program of appreciation Mrs. White staged Thursday night in Vance School in commemoration of her coming retirement after 41 years as a teacher in the school. Watching the ceremony were (L to R) Tony Felthaus and Dr. Harold Keener, former students. For many years Mrs. White made her home with Mrs. Hawkins. (Staff Photo by Malcolm Gamble)

After 41 Teaching Years

Former Students Pay Respects To Vance's Musical Mrs. White

BY JAY HENSLEY
Citizen Staff Writer

She started it with music, and she closed it out on a musical note.

That was the program staged Thursday night by a teacher who learned at an early age that the very best things in life are free.

Mrs. Eleanor Galphin White called the "class" to order in Vance School just to let them know that after 41 years she still appreciates them.

Mrs. White planned the "Program of Appreciation" herself, and if there was a hitch in the projected schedule of events, it wasn't noticed.

Mrs. Edgar Ford opened the program with music— a number of selections on the organ. Then there were solos, and Mrs. White's fourth-grade class—25 little boys and girls—trooped onto the stage to recite devotionals.

"It seems but a few years ago since I came to Asheville and was assigned to Vance School," Mrs. White told former students and associates in the teaching field.

"In reality it was 41 years ago—in 1924," Mrs. White said.

She had come to Asheville from South Carolina with a major in music from Winthrop College. She has served under five principals at Vance.

She spoke of the first principal, the late Charles B. Anderson. "From him and his wife I learned to appreciate the unbounded beauty of the mountains and the art of simple living," Mrs White told the gathering in the auditorium of Vance School.

Several times each school year the principal would organize mountain camping trips, Mrs. White recalled. "All of this," she said, "was wholesome recreation at a very small cost."

"I learned at that time the very best things in life are free. In the great silence of the forest I felt a close communion with God—my creator and the creator of the universe," she told her audience.

Of another principal she said "It was he who encouraged me and inspired me to increase my knowledge in instrumental music." Mrs. White and her students at Vance had organized an 18-piece harmonica band. She credited another with improvements in teaching her physical education class.

"For the past 13 years I have worked with Mr. (Harold W.) Haden who has been kind to praise me for my work in chapel programs," Mrs. White said.

"To him I am grateful for this opportunity to express my deep appreciation to each of you."

And she made good use of the opportunity She personally introduced a crowd of platform guests—many of them her former students.

"Dr. Harold Keener, my dentist; and Dr. Jack Kettleson, my optometrist," Mrs. White said.

Many others she called by name and profession, and closed the program with "an expression of appreciation through words and music.

Mrs. White retires as a teacher at Vance School with the completion of the current school year.

But none who heard her program of appreciation Thursday night will ever forget her.

- Citizen Times Photo - Ball

APPALACHIA WHOPPER—O. W. Wilkerson of 194 Pennsylvania Ave., displays the 9-pound largemouth bass he caught last week in Appalachia Lake. It measured 24 inches and 18 in girth. A companion, W. A. Kilgo of 50 Blue Ridge, Asheville, also caught a couple of nice bass. Wilkerson made the catch, one of the best of the fall season, on a Dalton Special about 7 p.m. while fishing the shoreline. It is the largest fish he ever caught.

Asheville Citizen September 25, 1955

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21, 1944

NURSERY SCHOOL OPENS—The West Asheville Nursery school and the second extended school service unit opened at the bank building on the corner of Haywood road and Richmond street in West Asheville this morning. In the above picture are, left to right, Ann Elizabeth Ingle of 82 Herron avenue, Joseph Williams of 602 Haywood road, and Russell Soesbee of 41 Branning street. These children are in one of the rooms of the nursery school, which occupies the top floor of the building.

Bruce Emory Research

GOLDEN WEDDING OBSERVANCE for Mr. and Mrs. Pascal U. Williams, 17 Vandalia Street, will bring their many friends to the home this afternoon from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. Williams, who were married in 1901, have lived their entire married life in Asheville. Williams has been in construction work for the past 58 years. He has been connected with the erection of some of Asheville's principal buildings. Mrs. Williams is the former Miss Sarah McDowell. They have 10 children: Mrs. Sara Eva Williams and Mrs. T. A. Orr of Asheville, R. P. Williams of Morristown, Tenn., R. M. and H. E. Williams of Tryon, C. G Williams of Greer, S. C., Mrs. Ernest Newman, Mrs. J. F. McIntosh, Mrs. J. R. Whitley and J. M. Williams of Washington, D. C.

Asheville Citizen February 18, 1951

TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 8, 1894.

THE REFORMERS WIN IT

THE MAYOR GETS A RE-ELECTION.

With Him The Entire Reform Ticket Goes In By A Good Majority—Bond Proposition Safe—Pearson's Campaign Expense.

253.

Lest there should be some who do not yet fully understand the meaning of those three figures, it should be stated that they represent the vote by which the Democratic ticket was defeated in the municipal contest yesterday.

Thomas Walton Patton was re-elected Mayor of Asheville for a year and carried with him Henry Redwood, Wm. A. Blair and Fred A. Hull, the Aldermen on the Reform ticket.

The Democrats realized in the afternoon that the "goose was cooked," and only waited to hear the majority. The full vote by wards for the various candidates and on the funding bond proposition was as follows, as announced by Chairman West at the First ward polls last night:

CANDIDATES.	1st	2nd	3rd	4th	Tot.
Patton	341	197	284	246	1068
Martin	148	151	200	316	815
Low	148	156	209	320	824
Hough	145	151	200	319	815
Sevier	153	158	210	321	842
Hull	339	190	279	237	1045
Redwood	339	197	284	245	1065
Blair	336	191	275	243	1045
Approved	439	336	432	506	1713

When the result had been announced there were loud calls for the mayor, who in response thanked the Reformers from the bottom of his heart for what they had done for him; reasserted his belief in the virtue of a business administration of a city's affairs, and then told all to go home and get a good night's rest, which all needed after the day's hard work.

It will be seen by the figures that the mayor led the Reform ticket, while Mr. Sevier led the Democratic ticket. The funding bond proposition needed 1016 votes to carry, but received 1713 and would have received a larger vote if there had been workers for it at the polls during the entire day. Of the registered vote 92½ per cent. was polled.

The crowd on the streets was unusually small and quiet last night.

It having been rumored about the streets that Richmond Pearson had put money, generally said to be $1000, into the Reform campaign yesterday, and the rumor having come to the ears of Mr. Pearson, he came to THE CITIZEN office today and made a statement of his actual expense, as follows: $10 subscription to campaign fund; $17.25 for blue ribbons; 5 cents for two glasses of lemonade for himself and Wiley Shook; total, $27.30.

The newly-elected officials will be inducted into office on the third Monday in May at noon.

In West Asheville.

The Democratic ticket in West Asheville was elected yesterday by a small majority. There were three tickets in the field. The vote for Mayor was as follows:

S. D. Hall 49
W. E. Logan 47
Joseph K. Gorrell 7

For Commissioners:—

Wm. R. Howard 56
Geo. W. Starnes 46
N. Plamondon 51
Thos. C. Jarrett 57
J. Berkeley Cain 56
R. M. Deaver 49
George W. Starnes 44
J. Warren Clapp 46
Rufus Wills, col 45
Will A. Greenlee, col 45
A. Elisha Clarke 2

Asheville Daily Citizen May 8, 1894

THREE CENTS A COPY.
FOUR DOLLARS A YEAR.

INCENDIARY FIRE IN WEST ASHEVILLE

Stable of Rufus Wills Destroyed Last Night—Live Stock Saved

The stable of Rufus Wills, a well-to-do and industrious negro of West Asheville, was destroyed by fire last night about 9:30 o'clock. When the barn was first discovered on fire the flames were issuing from the loft and Wills with the assistance of neighbors succeeded in getting all the live stock and farm inplements from the place. A considerable quantity of corn piled against the side of the barn was also saved. Wills says that the fire was of incendiary origin; that the stable was locked and that there had been no fire about the place. The loss is between $500 and $600. Several other buildings close to the burned structure had a narrow escape from destruction.

Asheville Gazette News November 5, 1904

GARDEN CLUB FORMED ON HUBBARD AVENUE

Another garden club was formed Tuesday afternoon in West Asheville. Hubbard avenue formed a group who will devote time and effort to beautifying West Asheville and assisting civic projects in that section.

Tuesday's meeting was held at the home of Mrs. W. W. Ballew, 61 Hubabrd avenue.

Mrs. Fred Wilson was elected president. Mrs. W. O. Talley, president of Brucemont Garden Club, and Mrs. G. M. Taylor, also a member of that club, installed the officers and assisted the new club with plans.

Officers elected were: Mrs. Ballew, vice-president; Mrs. W. B. Murphy, secretary; and Mrs. O. B. Lance, treasurer. The club flower is the rambling rose, and club colors are pink and green.

The club will meet every Tuesday in each month. There are six charter members.

v

Citizen-Times 5/10/42

U. S. O. ROOM FOR MEN IN SERVICE—Asheville's Southern Railway station offers a room for men in the war service to read and relax, as the result of the cooperation and efforts of railroad officials and members of the Current Literature club and others. Members of the club spent Friday arranging the room and making curtains and they have agreed to make visits there at regular intervals and to supply the room with reading material. The photograph shows a glimpse of the literature club members at work, as they put the room in order. In the picture, left to right, are: Mrs. W. J. Damtoft, Mrs. Edwin Hartshorn, Mrs. Harry Plummer, Miss Frances Goodrich, Mrs. John E. Calfee, Mrs. Joseph Greene, Mrs. P. M. Burdette, Mrs. R. O. Young and Mrs. F. J. Fanning. The soldier in the picture is Private First Class Harry Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Wilson of 161 Montana avenue, West Asheville, who read and made himself at home—the first guest—while awaiting his train to return to Louisiana.

Asheville Times May 10, 1942

Saturday,
September 9, 1950

THE WINNER!

MRS. WIX HITS THE JACKPOT ON BELK'S TELLO-TEST SHOW

HARRY VARNER W. S. BURNS (OF BELK'S) MRS. F. M. WIX

Mrs. F. M. Wix of 12 Fairfax Ave., in West Asheville, is shown above receiving the many prizes from Harry Varner of WWNC, and W. S. Burns of Belk's. Mrs. Wix won the prize by answering a simple question on Belk's Tello-Test program.

BELK'S PRESENTS

"TELLO-TEST"

MONDAY THRU FRIDAY 3 P. M. WWNC

Asheville Citizen September 9, 1950

A WHEELCHAIR HAS BEEN DONATED by the Busyettes Club for use at the Vance School unit of the County School for Handicapped Children. Mrs. Holly Keller (left), club project chairman, and Mrs. Robert Presley watch as Dora Woody tries out the chair. The club is an auxiliary of the American Business Club. Four children are now in attendance at Vance, but an estimated 30 additional pupils will begin attendance at classes at Vance and Newton Schools when delivery is obtained on two passenger vehicles. Purchases of the cars—of a type used by State Highway Commission surveyors and similar to station wagons—was authorized by the Buncombe County Commissioners several months ago but delivery has been delayed. The vehicles are now expected within the next few days. Any resident of the City or County who wishes to enroll a handicapped child in the school has been asked to call either J. W. Byers, superintendent of City Schools, or T. C. Roberson, head of Buncombe schools, not later than Monday morning in order that pick-up schedules may be arranged. (Citizen-Times Photo)

Asheville Citizen March 18, 1951

SPECIAL EXHIBITS WILL BE AT FAIR

Educational Exhibits and Demonstrations in Horticulture, Seed Propagation, Etc.

One of the big features of the Western North Carolina fair, which opens here next Tuesday, will be the educational exhibits and demonstrations. Among these will be a series prepared by the Southern Railway company and put on under the direction of Col. T. Gilbert Wood, local agent of the land and industrial department. There will be three of these exhibits, one in domestic science, one in fruit culture and one in dairying. Experts will be in charge of each one and demonstrations will be given every day during the fair.

These exhibits have been put on by the Southern every year since the fair was inaugurated here and have always proved a most valuable part of the exposition. Scientific methods and machinery are shown and displayed and information is given that is of great value to the people of the section. There will be a number of new features to the exhibits this year, and they promise to be more interesting than ever before.

Theer will also be a horticultural exhibit and demonstration at the fair this year that will be in charge of Prof. W. N. Hutt, state horticulturist. This will be an entirely new feature and will doubtless prove a most valuable one in view of the fact that western North Carolina has gained great prestige in the past few years as a horticultural section.

Dr. B. B. Flowe, state veternarian, will be in charge of an exhibit pertaining to hog raising. This exhibition has been arranged for the purpose, primarily, of showing how cholera can be controlled among swine herds. The value of this exhibit will be very great.

An exhibit on seed propagation, with demonstrations showing the best scientific methods, will be in charge of Prof. T. S. Duckett, assistant director of the state test farm. To the farmers of the section, this exhibit will be of prime interest, and it is expected that they will take advantage of this opportunity to learn the most approved methods as worked out on the test farm.

Asheville Gazette News October 10, 1914

SCHOOL CHILDREN OF BUNCOMBE COUNTY IN MAMMOTH PARADE THIS MORNING TO THE FAIR

Practically Every School in Buncombe Participated in Line of Review.

BOYS' CORN CLUB AT HEAD OF BIG PAGEANT

Thousands of Young American Hopefuls Brought Gladness to Hearts of Elders Here Today.

The parade and demonstration of the Buncombe county school children this morning through the city and at the Western North Carolina fair was the biggest thing of its kind ever held in Asheville.

Thousands of students of the various institutions throughout this city, noted for its educational advantages, participated. Some of the little boys and girls who took part in the big pageant seemed hardly strong enough to make the long tramp, but they were just as enthusiastic as were their seniors. Many grown young men and women, all students, were in line. In many instances community pride compelled the mothers and fathers of the students to participate also.

All carried banners designating the schools to which they belong. The students wore badges and many of them carried pennants. Drum corps led several of the divisions of the school parade, while all of the institutions of learning had yells of their own pa rticular composition. And it is a "lusty-lunged" set of boys and girls making up the enrollment of the public schools of Buncombe county! This fact was clearly demonstrated this morning.

Many of the schools had their several classes in the parade linked together with streamers of bunting of the national colors. Several schools had large American flags. One or two classes carried garlands of fall leaves and flowers. The Cedar Hill school carried a large banner decorated with sprigs of cedar. The entire scheme of the parade showed much thought upon the part of the principals and teachers, as well as the patrons of the many schools participating.

Early this morning school children from all sections of Buncombe county commenced to gather on the court house lawn. By 10:30 o'clock all was ready for the parade to move. The Buncombe County Boys' Corn club led off with a large banner that required the combined strength of several to manage in the fall winds. The boys made a fine showing. Many were overalls andcarried corn-stalks upon which were attached suitable banners and pennants.

Col. T. Gilbert Wood, land and industrial agent for the Southern railway in Asheville; N. Buckner, secretary of the local board of trade; John A. Nichols of the Agriculture committee of the board of trade; E. D. Weaver, county farm demonstrator, and several others, all clad in overalls and carrying appropriate pennants, were in the first part of the parade. Then came the brass band of 18 pieces from the Great Argyle Shows at the fair.

The West Asheville public schools came next. These schools composed an entire division of the big parade and the boys and girls, and the young men and women participating in this section, were roundly applauded along the line of march.

"Oh, you John Nichols, you Weaverville farmer"! exclaimed a voice from Masonic headquarters in the Drhumor building as the parade rounded the postoffice corner. This called for laughter and applause. Everybody was in a good humor and entered into the spirit of the day with enthusiasm.

The banners carried by the Boys' Corn club were unique, to say the least of it. The following were some of the inscriptions:

"Don't hide your light under a bushel."

"The Corn Stalk is Mightier than the Gun."

"Oh Shucks, boys, if you are beat don't get on your ear."

Corn was certainly king so far as the school cvhildren's parade was concerned this morning.

Prof. W. H. Hipps, county superintendent of schools, was about the happiest man to be found. He was delighted over the record-breaking showing made. Members of the county board of education and other friends of the schools warmly congratulated Professor Hipps upon the showing made. A corps of assistants aided the county superintendent in forming the big parade and everything went off without a hitch.

The following is a partial list of the schools of the county participating in the parade:

Black Mountain, Montreat, West Asheville, Round Hill, Jupiter, Azalea, Indiana, Cedar Hill, New Grove, Tweed, Snow Hill, Morgan Hill, Oak Hill, Cap Creek, Swannanoa, Sand Hill, Leicester, Burnham, Heights, Slate, New Found, Valley Springs, Arden and many others.

Thousands of residents of Asheville and visitors to the fair who arrived this morning lined the downtown streets and watched the parade of the school children as it passed in review. At the Citizens bank corner a halt was made while a photographer took a series of pictures. The moving picture man was likewise on the job and secured, he says, some fine views of the school children.

From the courthouse the children marched around the southside of Pack square, after leaving College street, thence down Patton avenue to Haywood to Montford to the fair grounds, where all were admitted. Shortly afterwards the regular Educational day program on the grounds was commenced.

The weather this morning was ideal for such a parade of children and the demonstration was one of the biggest things of its kind ever seen in this section, if not the entire state.

Asheville Gazette News October 13, 1914

HEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1941

OFFICERS ELECTED BY LEE EDWARDS TRAFFIC PATROL—Officers of the traffic patrol at Lee Edwards high school and their faculty advisor are shown above, following the election at the school yesterday. They are, left to right, F. W. Sumner, faculty advisor, Howard Ruckman, first lieutenant, Charles Worley, captain, and Bobby Bryson, second lieutenant.

WNC Elections 2001

Inside:

- List of municipal races in WNC's 17 counties, Page A4
- Regional races to watch, Page A4
- A look at the issues that the new Asheville City Council will face, Page A5

Terry M. Bellamy

Chuck Cloninger

H. K. Edgerton

Nine running for mayor's job

Sixteen file for Asheville council seats

Dave Goree

By Melissa Williams
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — Candidate filing for statewide municipal elections closed at noon Friday, and 25 hopeful will vie for your vote in the Oct. 9 primary.

Mayor Leni Sitnick, the city's first four-year, full-time mayor, isn't seeking re-election, and nine residents are in the hunt for her seat.

Another sixteen residents are looking for jobs as council members, only two less than the 18 who ran for seats in 1998.

The primary will winnow down the race to two candidates for mayor, and two candidates for each available seat on council.

By state law, the race is non-partisan, which rules out the option of voting strictly along party lines. That sits well with voters who like to choose candidates on the issues and not solely based on party affiliation.

But others, like life-long Libertarian Clark Walter, think such connections help grease the wheels of democracy.

"Most citizens don't follow politics," he said, "and over half of them are so passive they don't even vote. It's a noble idea to vote for a man or a woman and what they stand for, but it requires a lot of work and participation in the political process. I think you're better off voting for the platform of a party if you don't know who the candidates are."

To some degree, Walter is right. In the last municipal election, with the wide choice of council candidates, about 20,000 of the county's 130,881 registered voters actually voted. In that November's general election, the number blossomed to 38,405 voters — still only a third of people qualified to vote.

"With a partisan election, you have a rough idea of where candidates stand," said UNCA political science professor Bill Sabo.

Please see RACE on A4

Mickey Mahaffey

Brian Peterson

Charlie Worley

CANDIDATES FOR MAYOR

2001 Candidates for Mayor of Asheville Primary (Oct. 9):

- Terry M. Bellamy
- William E. Boyd (no photo provided)
- Chuck Cloninger
- H. K. Edgerton
- Dave Goree
- Mickey Mahaffey
- Brian Peterson
- Bill Porter (no photo provided)
- Charlie Worley

COUNCIL CANDIDATES

2001 Candidates for Asheville City Council Primary (Oct. 9):

- George Bancroft
- Harold "Cicada" Brokaw
- Bernard B. Carman
- Jim Ellis
- Fred J. English
- Barbara Field
- Edward Hay
- Sharon K. Martin
- Carl Mumpower
- Brownie Newman
- Susan O'Neil
- Sam Webb
- Rod A. Whiteside
- Kevin Rollins
- Joe Dunn
- Holly Jones

Continued from A1

"But with a non-partisan race, trying to distinguish the candidates tends to discourage voters. The more complex the choice, the harder it is to choose."

But this year, the nine-deep field of candidates in quest of the mayor's seat is bound to generate the lion's share of interest.

Four sitting council members are challenging each other to become the next mayor. The remaining two council members are looking to retain their current seats. And they'll all have to work with each other as they simultaneously campaign against each other.

Anyone who's attended City Council meetings since the election filing season opened on July 6, knows that Sitnick has made a point not to allow any commentary that she deems a "campaign speech."

Sitnick said she still intends to bring the gavel down on any political grandstanding.

"With six members of City Council running for office," she said, "the only campaign speeches I'm going to allow are mine."

Contact Williams at 236-8971 or MWilliams@CITIZEN-TIMES.com

WEDNESDAY,
October 10, 2001

Peterson, Worley top mayoral candidates

Field, Cloninger lose City Council seats

By Jason Sandford
ASSISTANT METRO EDITOR

ASHEVILLE — Brian Peterson, a first-term member of Asheville City Council who has campaigned on a promise to be a "neighborhood mayor," topped the ticket in Tuesday's primary election for mayor, while four-term incumbent Councilwoman Barbara Field apparently lost her seat.

Peterson will face fellow Councilman Charlie Worley in the Nov. 6 election, according to the Buncombe County Board of Elections' unofficial returns Tuesday night. Peterson collected 3,618 votes, while Worley tallied 2,639 votes.

"I've spoken up on issues people care about," Peterson said after watching results come in at the elections board office in downtown Asheville. "It's not just what I've said during the last two weeks, but what I've said during the last two years on council."

Chuck Cloninger, council's vice mayor, lost his bid for mayor and will lose his council seat, according to the results. Cloninger notched 1,821 votes.

In the crowded race for three open City Council seats, Field didn't collect enough votes to finish among the top six candidates who will move on. The six who did are Joe Dunn, Holly Jones, Carl Mumpower, Brownie Newman, Jim Ellis and Councilman Edward Hay. Dunn collected 5,607 votes, while Jones had 4,646, Mumpower tallied 4,442, Newman got 4,199, Ellis had 3,708 and Hay nabbed 2,728 votes.

Field was dogged by controversy over comments she made last month as council discussed a resolution regarding the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks. Field had said she disagreed with the use of the word "cowardly" to describe the attacks in the resolution. She later apologized for the comments.

In Hendersonville, incumbent Mayor Fred Niehoff Jr. will face Mark White next month in the race for mayor, according to unofficial results. For council, incumbent Mary Jo Padgett advanced with Ron Stephens, Jon Laughter and Mark Cordaro. The four are vying for two open council seats.

Tuesday's results in Asheville will pit pro-neighborhood Peterson against pro-business Worley.

The results also set up the unusual scenario of council appointing one person to fill the vacancy created when either Peterson or Worley takes the mayor's seat, because neither of their seats was up for election Tuesday night.

Candidates heading to general election

MAYOR

Brian Peterson

Charles Worley

CITY COUNCIL

Joe Dunn

Edward Hay

Carl Mumpower

Jim Ellis

Holly Jones

Brownie Newman

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN-TIMES THURSDAY, MARCH 10, 2011

Worley recovering after big heart scare

JOHN COUTLAKIS/JCOUTLAKIS@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

Former Asheville Mayor Charlie Worley required quadruple heart bypass surgery despite being an avid runner. He is recovering well and has a good outlook. Pictured with him is his dog, Phoenix, and wife Nancy.

Former mayor had quadruple bypass

By John Boyle
JBOYLE@CITIZEN-TIMES.COM

Former Asheville Mayor Charlie Worley always considered himself a fit guy — right up until quadruple heart bypass surgery a week ago.

An avid runner who plays soccer in an adult league, Worley, 65, started noticing problems late last year. Mayor from 2001-05 and a six-year veteran of City Council before that, Worley also works full time as an attorney but often goes running during lunch breaks.

"I'd start running, and I noticed I'd be breathing heavier, and by three-quarters of a mile or a mile, I was totally out of breath," said Worley, adding that he kept on with his regimen until about two weeks ago. "I was out running with Kelly Miller, and it happened again."

Miller, executive vice president at the Asheville Convention & Visitors Bureau, said he knew something was seriously amiss

Please see WORLEY on A8

Continued from A1

with his friend. Back in the 1980s, Miller worked as a physical director at a YMCA and did exercise prescriptions for members.

As Miller tells it, he and Worley went out for "a nice, easy 3-4-miler."

"We get about a mile, mile and a half out, and Charlie says, 'I've got to walk a little bit,'" Miller said. "He's telling me his symptoms — can't catch his breath, he's feeling worse in his fitness level even though he's running a lot. I said, 'You need to get in and see your doctor and get a stress test ASAP. You're too healthy to feel this bad.'"

The 'widow maker'

Worley called his doctor, Virgil Thrash, that afternoon. The doctor ordered a treadmill stress test, which gauges heart function, for Worley on Wednesday, March 2.

Overall, the results from that test, formally called a stress echocardiogram, were good. But another, considerably less high-tech indicator — the electrocardiogram, or EKG — was suspicious.

"I think he went for 15 minutes on that treadmill — they told me he was running the socks off that thing, and that usually means there's not a problem," said Thrash, an internist with Biltmore Medical Associates. "But his EKG showed a very classic sort of change that indicates the heart is not getting enough blood supply. When I saw that, I said, 'That's not right. And more importantly, Charlie's not right.'"

Thrash, in practice for 40 years, ordered a heart catheterization, a procedure in which dye injected in the arteries illustrates arterial blockages.

Dr. Michael Unks, a cardiologist, handled that procedure, and he didn't like what he saw.

"The next thing I knew, I was getting a call saying (Worley) was going to surgery," Thrash said. "In his left coronary artery, he had an 80 percent blockage. That type of blockage is called 'a widow maker.'"

The name refers to the deadliness of the condition, which occurs in about an inch-long section of the aorta before it branches in two.

"If you put a block in that inch, you've got no chance," Thrash said.

Worley could have dropped dead from a heart attack, especially considering he had continued with his running regimen.

"If we were talking about somebody who's 75 pounds overweight and had diabetes and had an 80 percent blockage in the left main, they'd probably have been dead," Thrash said.

When it comes to arterial blockages and heart issues in general, Worley has plenty of company in the mountains.

One out of every four deaths during 2009 in Western North Carolina can be attributed to heart disease, and about 1,700 people a year in WNC are transported to Mission Hospitals with a heart attack.

The mountain region has a higher percentage of people who get emergency bypass surgery than other areas of the country.

Worley said he knew his life was about to drastically change when he came to after the heart catheterization.

"Before, (the cardiologist) had said there was probably a 50-50 chance that they'd have to put in a stent (a tubular device implanted in an artery to keep it open)," Worley said. "But when I came to on the heart cath table, everybody was gathered around me, so I knew something was up."

They sent him to the operating room immediately for triple bypass surgery. During the operation, the surgeon found another substantial blockage, so the bypass became a quadruple.

Mind 'the little things'

Worley had never had any heart problems before, and he has no significant family history of it. He's 5 feet 11 inches tall, 160 pounds, has never smoked and had excellent cholesterol readings.

Thrash said Worley's plaque buildup most likely just comes down to him having a genetic predisposition to it. Thrash understands that some people may be tempted to say, 'Why bother with staying fit then?'"

But Thrash stresses that Worley is probably alive because his heart was otherwise in such excellent condition and he had taken such good care of himself.

"The take-home lesson here is to be as cognitive of your body as you can," Thrash said.

The bypass surgery Worley had will greatly improve the blood flow to the heart by providing new routes around the section of clogged artery. While Worley feels like he "got run over by a truck" right now, his prognosis is strong and he says he's feeling stronger every day.

The surgery recovery will take six-12 weeks.

"As I recover, the doctor tells me I will get to feeling so much better than I have in years that my wife (Nancy) is going to have to stock up on Valium," Worley joked.

He did say he will go back to running three or four times a week and playing soccer, and he'll return to his law practice full time.

Known for his upbeat personality, Worley said he'll also redouble his efforts at living a healthy lifestyle, cutting back even more on salt and fatty foods.

In short, he's not going to waste the second chance he got.

"I can tell you without hesitation I'm not going to change anything in any negative kind of way," Worley said, referring to people who may be tempted to throw in the towel.

In fact, Worley wants to talk about his experience in part to encourage other people, no matter their fitness level, to listen to their bodies.

"Pay attention to the little things," Worley said. "Don't wait until they become big problems."

SYMPTOMS OF CORONARY ARTERY DISEASE

The most common symptom of coronary artery disease is angina (also called angina pectoris). Angina is often referred to as chest pain. It is also described as chest discomfort, heaviness, tightness, pressure, aching, burning, numbness, fullness or squeezing.

It can be mistaken for indigestion or heartburn. Angina is usually felt in the chest, but may also be felt in the left shoulder, arms, neck, back or jaw.

If you have angina or any of the symptoms listed below that last for more than 5 minutes, call 911 without delay. These symptoms could be the signs of a heart attack (also called myocardial infarction or MI) and immediate treatment is essential.

Other symptoms:

- Pain or discomfort in other areas of the upper body including the arms, left shoulder, back, neck, jaw or stomach
- Difficulty breathing or shortness of breath.
- Sweating or "cold sweat."
- Fullness, indigestion, or choking feeling (may feel like "heartburn").
- Nausea or vomiting.
- Light-headedness, dizziness, extreme weakness or anxiety.
- Rapid or irregular heart beats.

Source: Cleveland Clinic

FORMER SHERIFF OF BUNCOMBE PASSES AT LOCAL HOSPITAL

W. M. Worley Suffered Stroke of Paralysis While on Pack Square Thursday.

W. M. Worley, 62, former sheriff of Buncombe County, died at the French Broad Hospital yesterday, as the result of a stroke of paralysis, suffered on Pack Square Thursday afternoon.

Mr. Worley served as sheriff about 28 years ago. His father was also at one time sheriff of the county.

He is survived by his wife and five children, two daughters, Mrs. Oscar Jones, of Fort Worth, Tex., and Mrs. Clarence Sumner, of Greensboro, three sons, Robert Worley, of Sylva; Charles Worley of Asheville, and Mark Worley, now in the Navy.

Mr. Worley's first wife was Miss Ella Moore, daughter of Captain Robert Moore and sister of Judge Charles A. Moore. They were married about 40 years ago. His second wife was Miss Pearson, of Virginia.

Since ending his term as sheriff, Mr. Worley had been engaged in the tobacco business at Danville, Va.

Funeral arrangements will be announced upon the arrival of his daughter from Texas.

Peasants of Rumania still use walking plows and are willing to use modern farm implements, but many cannot get enough money together to buy them.

MRS. WORLEY DIES AT WEST ASHEVILLE

Funeral Will be Conducted This Afternoon at the Home of the Deceased at That Place.

Friends of Mrs. W. M. Worley, of West Asheville, will learn with regret of her death, which occurred yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock at her home at West Asheville. The deceased had been ill but a week, and few of her friends realized that her condition was such as to cause concern as to her recovery.

The funeral will be conducted this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence and interment will follow at the West Asheville cemetery. The following will serve as pallbearers: R. M. Wells, B. G. Hayes, E. W. Roberts, E. R. Randall, D. C. Clark and Robert Greenwood.

The deceased is survived by a father, Robert Moore, of Leicester; a husband; three sons—Robert Worley, Mark Worley and Charles Worley; two daughters—Mrs. O. C. Jones and Miss Margaret Worley; two sisters—Mrs. M. Ottinger and Mrs. E. M. Kilpatrick, and one brother, Judge Charles A. Moore.

A member of one of Buncombe county's leading families, the deceased was a woman of many traits of character, which won friends and the news of her death will cause sincere sorrow.

Mr. Worley's obituary March 14, 1925 -- Mrs. Worley's obituary February 26, 1915

#1 WORLEY PLACE

To Dad with love

worley place

This 5-gabled free-classic Queen Anne Victorian home was built in 1892 by former Buncombe County Sheriff William McCame Worley on 55 acres of land deeded from his father Wiley Jackson Worley, also a former Buncombe County Sheriff. The 14 room 5 bedroom 2.5 bath home consists of 3,568 square feet, 3 porches comprising of 750 total square feet, 7 fireplaces and sits on a large park-like lot just 1.5 miles from Asheville and 1.5 miles from West Asheville.

According to "A History of Buncombe County NC" by F.A. Sondley, LL.D. 1930, T.F. Reeves, Cane Worley [as he is sometimes incorrectly referred to; but actually, he was nicknamed "Came"] and Bailey V. Jones were important tobacco men in those days, being associated in the operation of one of the most important warehouses in the town. Major W.W. Rollins and J.M. Smith rented the Farmer's Warehouse from the James Thomas estate after Mr. Barnard had ceased operations there. The Buncombe Warehouse was operated by Came Worley, Dr. J.M. Stevens and L.L. Childs and a second market was operated by Mr. Barnard called the Banner Warehouse. This was around 1892-1896.

According to "Cabins & Castles", a local architectural guide, the house is a rambling two-story frame central-hallway house incorporating a somewhat earlier one-story saddlebag-plan house as ell. Nice scrollwork brackets the posts on shed porch of earlier house. Porch of later section has paired Tuscan columns. Elaborately cut-out gable ornament, boxed and molded cornice with returns. Some molded window cornices. Fine milled woodwork on interior includes mantel composition (trabeated over mantel with beveled mirror) from "Jones Lumber Co., Knoxville, Tenn., 1898." Closed stringer stairway in hall. Worley made money in lumber and tobacco before going into politics. [Factually, he became Sheriff after making money in the tobacco business.]

Special thanks go to Frank McCame Worley, grandson of William and son of Robert, for these extraordinary photographs. Mr. Worley lived with his grandparents, Frank Winter and Dora "Crisp" Russell (on his mother's side) for several years. They moved in about 1930 after his grandmother Dora had a stroke.

Also, thanks go to Mark Reese Sumner, grandson of William and son of Margaret Katherine, for the many photographs, verification and invaluable stories associated with Worley Place.

New Website Additions

worley place

Exterior

Restoring the Exterior

This is a picture of the home as it looked from the front after we bought it in March, 2001.

This is a "stitched" photo showing the northeast face of the house. Note the intricate gable ornament, one of four of the original unique ornaments still relatively intact. A fifth gable ornament originally located at the front of the house is missing and will be rebuilt. The small single story section with porch at right is believed to be an existing structure built between 1860 and 1890. The main two story house was added in 1892.

This is a picture of the home as it looked in the Real Estate Listing

The front of the house decorated for Christmas.

The back of the house showing the small back porch with original intact scroll work. Note the

A view from the rear south face of the house. Notice the foundation underneath the older rear gable ornament that is somewhat different in design from the other three.

Here we are standing on the front porch with the dogs. Little did we know at the time, the tree at the left of the screen was dead and needed to be felled.

Here is part of the northeast face after the loose old paint has been scraped.

portion of the house at left contains different rock and mortar content than that of the remainder of the house.

During a major rainfall soon after we bought the house, the tree broke suddenly at the roots. Fortunately for the house and the car, the massive white oak fell to the northeast damaging only the power lines which were restored soon thereafter.

We finally finished priming the entire exterior. We will give it a full coat of paint next year.

Here is a photo of me standing on the peak of the roof repairing the topside of the chimney.

We lined the chimney for use with our wood stove with this 30 foot flexible steel chimney liner. It was a lot of work making it fit down the narrow curved flue.

worley place

History

This is the Real Estate Listing Photograph taken in Spring of 2000.
This is what the house looked like when we bought it on March 28, 2001

Photograph taken on May 26, 2006 after exterior was repaired and painted.
The gable ornament on the left was reconstructed using dimensions from the one on the right.

This photograph was taken in circa 1930 showing a similar façade as today.

This photograph was taken circa 1906. Notice the hip-style roof on the front porch compared with the porch shown above. In the middle section, the middle hip begins at the center of the middle window. In the photographs at the top of the page, the hip begins at the corner to the left of the middle window. Additionally, the twin columns appear closer together atop stone piers with different patterns and no top slab. There are also only 4 pairs of columns instead of the current 6 pairs. On the left is a window which is currently a door. The front steps in the photo above appear to be made of wood unlike the current steps made of older concrete. The roof above the middle window is completely flat. The current house's roof is slightly pitched and "teeth" are shown just underneath the roof line. It is unclear when this roof line was remodeled. The materials of this original porch roof are constructed of cedar shakes whereas the other older photo above had metal shingles which were replaced with new painted metal to match the roof on the rest of the house.

This photograph was also taken circa 1930. The barn and outhouse are behind the photographer. Notice the well house at the left which no longer exists. Two of the three oak trees in the foreground are still standing today.

Old photo of barn that burned down a few decades ago. The foundation and an old combine still remain on the site as reminders of its existence.

An older photograph of William McCame & Ella Lee taken in the mid 1880's.

William McCame Worley & Ella Lee Moore Worley (Later Photograph)

The Worley Children
Lottie, Robert Jackson, Mark Watson, & Charles McCame
(This photograph was taken circa 1895 before the 5th child, Margaret Katherine was born on Oct. 23, 1899)

ASHEVILLE CITIZEN, ASHEVILLE, N. C., MONDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1937

ASHEVILLE MEN WIN PRIZES IN PHOTO CONTEST

Clodfelter, Wright Given First Awards By N. C. Department

Two divisional first prizes in the state department of conservation and development's amateur photo contest were won by Asheville men, it was announced yesterday.

Frank Clodfelter, fireman attached to the central station; who resides at 8 Chiles avenue, Kenilworth, and J. L. Wright, electrician of 220 Virginia avenue, West Asheville, each won a first prize of $40.

The grand prize of $100 for the best picture in the entire contest, that of a negro boy proudly examining a flowering tobacco plant, went to C. D. Townsend, of Whitakers.

Mr. Clodfelter, who won first prize in the Western North Carolina contest conducted by The Asheville Citizen, won his first divisional prize in the state contest in the recreation division. The picture was of a swimming scene in Lake Eden near Black Mountain.

Mr. Wright's first prize was in the fishing division and depicted trout fishing in Flat Creek.

Thus two of the three division

(Please Turn To Page Three)

ASHEVILLE MEN WIN PRIZES IN PHOTO CONTEST

(Continued From Page One)

first prizes go to Asheville men. In addition to the grand prize there were five first and four second prizes in the following divisions: Scenic, recreation, hunting, fishing, and agriculture.

Other divisional first prize winners were: Scenic, Elizabeth Oliver, of Salisbury, a picture of a boating scene on Lake Junaluska; hunting, Fred P. Latham, of Belhaven, showing waterfowl shooting over Lake Mattamuskeet, and agriculture, A. Wesley Carpenter, Durham, of a scene entitled "Evening Chores."

The judges announced that they were unable to find any pictures of sufficient merit to win prizes in the industrial division.

Four second prizes of $20 were given, one in each of the divisions except agricultural. They went to: Scenic, Edgar Abernethy, Stanly; recreation, H. K. Witherspoon, Raleigh; hunting, Thurmond Chatham, Winston-Salem; and fishing, Edmund McLaurin, Wilmington.

Has Fine Collection

Mr. Townsend, the grand prize winner, has specialized in tobacco pictures and has an unusually fine collection of prints relating to this subject. His prize-winning shot will be used as a frontispiece for the forthcoming issue of the department's publication "North Carolina Today."

Judges for the contest were Mrs. H. A. Siddell, James W. Denmark, and William Daniel, Raleigh photographers.

Many hundreds of Western North Carolina pictures were submitted in The Citizen's contest conducted in collaboration with the department. After prizes were awarded here all the pictures were forwarded to the department at Raleigh.

The purpose of the contest was to obtain as many first class North Carolina pictures as possible, to be used in connection with this state's current $250,000 national advertising campaign. Not only the prize-winning pictures but many others entered in the contest are expected to be used in the advertising. All pictures and negatives entered became the permanent property of the department.

Both Mr. Clodfelter and Mr. Wright have been outstanding here

Prize Winners

FRANK CLODFELTER

J. L. WRIGHT

THE ASHEVILLE TIMES

Safety Guardians Of High School Elect Officers

The safety of the boys and girls at Lee Edwards high school is vested in the trained hands of the safety patrol of the school. Officers of that body for the spring semester are shown above, left to right: John Laughridge, second lieutenant, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Laughridge of 33 Caledonia road; James Wright, captain, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Wright of 841 Haywood road; and Fred Dickinson, first lieutenant, son of Mrs. Fred Dickinson of 55 Hanover street. The boys of the safety patrol direct traffic in front of the school and time the departures of the busses for the safety of all.

Asheville Times January 14, 1942

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1937

FISHING: Trout fishing in Flat Creek, Buncombe County. Submitted by J. L. Wright, Biltmore.

RICHARD B. WYNNE

Richard B. (Dick) Wynne, born Aug. 25, 1927, joined the Asheville Citizen-Times in 1944. Except for 18 months in the Army Air Force, his service was continuous, since he attended Asheville-Biltmore College (now the University of North Carolina at Asheville) while a reporter and a sports writer for the newspaper.

At age 28, Wynne became managing editor of The Citizen (morning) after newsroom positions that included reporting, sports writing and the various sub-editor jobs: telegraph, state, Sunday, etc. He was promoted to executive editor in 1963 with responsibility for the total editorial product of both newspapers.

In 1968, Wynne was made assistant to the publisher and in 1970 vice president and associate publisher. He was promoted to president and publisher upon the retirement of Robert Bunnelle in 1974.

Wynne has attended many newspaper seminars during his career, including the American Press Institute at Columbia University. He was president of the North Carolina Press Association 1977-78, and also is a past president of the North Carolina Associated Press News Council and the AP Club. He was a Pulitzer Juror in Journalism in 1979-80.

His civic activities have included the presidency of the Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce (1973), WNC Tomorrow, (1980-81), the Western North Carolina Development Assn. (1980-81), and Asheville Area Red Cross (1976). He received the Asheville Chamber's Big A Award in 1980. He has been a member of the board of trustees of Western Carolina University, and of the Western Regional Board of Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., and of several Asheville area civic organizations. He was chairman of the board of the Asheville-WNC Better Business Bureau in 1976.

An Asheville native, he is married to the former Betty Jean Rice of Asheville and has four children: James R., Debra S., Dennis A. and Patrice L. His parents were Mr. and Mrs. James Wynne. Mrs. Wynne is the daughter of the late J.C. Rice, Sr. and Mrs. Rice.

— Bill Moore

From "The History of Old Buncombe County", Vol. 1, 1981

Former Citizen-Times publisher named UNCA's alumnus of the year

By Barbara Blake
STAFF WRITER

ASHEVILLE — Richard B. Wynne, former president and publisher of the Asheville Citizen-Times, will be honored tonight with UNC Asheville's Distinguished Alumnus of the Year Award.

The award will be presented at 6 p.m. at UNCA's Reuter Center during the Founder's Dinner sponsored by the UNCA Alumni Relations Office.

Wynne, a Buncombe County native, graduated from UNCA's predecessor, Asheville-Biltmore College, in 1950. He played a vital role in bringing Asheville-Biltmore into the University of North Carolina system and served on UNCA's board of trustees for many years. Wynne received the Chancellor's Medallion, UNCA's highest service award, in 1988.

Richard B. Wynne

"Over the course of many years, Dick Wynne has been one of UNCA's most effective friends," said UNCA Chancellor Jim Mullen. "As a dedicated alumnus, as a wise and respected trustee, as a trusted counselor to successive chancellors, his service to the university has been invaluable."

A Buncombe County native, Wynne rose through the ranks at the Citizen-Times from copy boy to president and publisher, retiring in 1987.

He has served and held office with numerous local boards, including the Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce, Red Cross, Asheville Art Museum, Better Business Bureau, Flynn Christian Fellowship Home, Mission St. Joseph's Health System and United Way.

As a board member and chairman of the WNC Development Association, Wynne helped establish the WNC Farmers Market and N.C. Arboretum, and helped develop the Livestock Arena and expand the Horticultural Crops Research Station.

"Dick was definitely one of the outstanding members over the years, there's no question about it," said Bill Edmondson, longtime manager of the WNC Agricultural Center.

Asheville City Councilman Jim Ellis, who was executive vice president of the Chamber of Commerce from 1974 to 1983, said Wynne was a powerful force in the business community during his years as an active member of the chamber.

"Dick's been one of the most caring and dedicated — as well as intelligent — citizens that's ever served the Chamber of Commerce," Ellis said.

Tickets to the Founders Dinner are $20. For information, call 251-6512.

Contact Blake at 232-6020 or BBlake@CITIZEN-TIMES.com.

Asheville Citizen 2003

10-2-03

Wynne's latest honor is richly deserved

For years it was one of the first questions for anyone having their first conversation with a person who worked for our newspaper:

"Do you know Dick Wynne?"

Well, yes.

Everybody with more than a passing familiarity with Buncombe County knows Richard B. Wynne, a.k.a. Dick Wynne, a.k.a. one of the most important figures in WNC over the latter stages of the 20th century.

A native of Buncombe County, Wynne knew his way around a newsroom.

He began his career as a copy boy and finished it as president and publisher of the Citizen-Times, from which he retired in 1987. He knows news.

Now, we are not blowing our own horn here. Mr. Wynne was affiliated with a newspaper sporting different ownership in a different era (there were two newspapers, the Citizen and the Times, as opposed to today's Citizen-Times).

Dick Wynne

But the fact is Richard Wynne is a towering figure in our culture altogether deserving of the honor of UNC Asheville Distinguished Alumnus of the Year, which he recently received.

Wynne graduated from UNCA's predecessor, Asheville-Biltmore College. He used his influence on behalf of the community. If there was a good cause, he had his hand in it.

Among them: He served on the boards of the United Way, Mission St. Joseph's Health System, the Red Cross, Asheville Area Chamber of Commerce, Asheville Art Museum and Better Business Bureau. He chaired the WNC Development Association and helped establish both the WNC Farmers Market and N.C. Arboretum.

Do you know Dick Wynne? Well, since he's stepped out of the spotlight a bit of late, you might not.

But you should know he helped create the community we all love today.

Well done, Mr. Wynne.

Asheville Citizen October 2, 2003

West Asheville People

XYZ

Asheville Man Builds 6-Room House By Hand

Y. P. Yarrow, Working Alone, Completes Job In 13 Months

By PHILLIPS RUSSELL

Working entirely alone Y. P. Yarrow has built a six-room stucco bungalow in West Asheville with his own hands. No other person helped him.

The house is beautiful to look at and is estimated to be worth $5,000. It was 13 months in construction and every brick in the foundation, every girder, in the framework, every arch and column bears the imprint of one man's hands.

The structure stands as a ranch-born individualist's concrete and useful answer to unemployment and hard times. It is more than a house. It is the poetry and purpose of a man's life who tells you of himself: "I am a builder."

Here is a man who finds more joy in work and many you will meet. For 315 days, toiling 12 hours a day, resting only on Sundays, he dug out the earth for a basement, laid the brick foundation, cut the joists and rafters squarely, laid them true, mixed the mortar, and gave to the house its strength and form.

Worked 2 Years On Plans

This was not done as a whimsical stunt. The builder worked two years designing the plans before he began and then drove a battered automobile across the continent from San Diego, Calif., to the small squares of land he owns in Asheville. Two days after he arrived here on June 4, 1937, he started excavating for the house. It was completed July 7, 1938.

Located on 122 Richmond avenue the house is now rented to Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Hill. Yarrow lives in a one-room, rough board shanty on the adjoining lot and has already started preparations for building another house there. If, too, he will build alone.

Yarrow is unmarried. He cooks all of his own food, washes his clothes and has a flourishing vegetable garden. His tomato vines have supplied the neighborhood for weeks and he has several likely looking pumpkins growing. Two neighbor women have promised to bake him some pies this fall. Making pastry seems to be one of the few things he cannot do.

Shanty Strongly Constructed

Aside from his humble and retiring manner a desire for neatness and economy seems to be Yarrow's chief characteristic. Although rough in outward appearance his shanty is strongly constructed with a smooth concrete floor to keep out all dirt and insects. The room contains a two-burner gasoline camp stove, a sewing machine, a kerosene lamp, a canvas-bottomed cot and shelves for magazines, foodstuffs and tools.

In the backyard there is a small round pit about four feet deep lined with stones. All of the wood scraps are burned here and once a week Yarrow bakes a run of bread, biscuits or corn pone to last seven days. At other times he uses the pit for cooking stew, which is his favorite dish.

In 1930 Yarrow left Asheville penniless. Since 1922 he had been associated with his brother, the late A. E. Yarrow, Wayne P. James and the late Frank Whitman in the construction business. He had worked as a finishing carpenter, foreman, or in some capacity on more than 100 houses during the rushing building boom of the late twenties in Asheville, he said.

Acquired Few Lots

During that time he acquired a few lots in the city at high prices. His brother died, the company went into bankruptcy and hammer and saw ceased to sing in Asheville for a while. Yarrow then turned back to the west whence he had come.

Reaching California in 1930, Yarrow found employment for his skilled hands and was able to save some money. While working as a finishing carpenter for the Depew Construction company in San Diego, however, he began to dream of returning to Asheville and building a house alone.

The idea of erecting every part of a structure exactly according to what he considered the most enduring and attractive methods appealed to him. He wanted to build a house that would be as he wanted it when finished. He wanted a house that he could know was properly and firmly put together.

By night he drew plans and made blue prints. He was striving for simplicity, beauty and economy. He wanted no waste space and no waste materials. An inspection of the house he has built will reveal that he has achieved this desire. Every inch inside appears to be livable and useful. Awkward corners and turns were avoided. Closets and cabinets are built in cleverly to displace a minimum of space.

After considering the idea for two years Yarrow announced to his employers that he was quitting and with his savings and drawings set out again for Western North Carolina. That is the story behind the house.

For excavating the basement Yarrow used a pick, shovel and wheel barrow. That task required nine days. He said that he made several attempts to find a man with a horse, plow and scraper to do the excavating but decided that it would be easier to do it by hand than hunt for a helper.

"Later I tried to get some boys to help me mix mortar and carry bricks. But I was unable to hire one who could make two batches of mortar alike or take any interest in the job, so I did it myself rather than worry with them", he said.

Thus the work continued. The frame was built of rough lumber and Yarrow planned ahead so as to be able to handle the heavy timbers by himself. "There's an art to handling lumber so as not to hurt yourself and I found the going easy," he said.

Rough sheeting was placed around the frame and overlaid with 15-pound roofer's felt. Galvanized lathes were placed on top of this covering and an inch thick coat of stucco plastered on the lathes. This stucco was troweled to a smooth surface and all of the corners made perfectly square. Rock lathe was used on the inside and Yarrow plastered over it.

Has Unusual Features

The house possesses two unusual features. It has no wooden window casings showing on either the inside or outside. Stucco and plaster are moulded into straight lines about the openings. The baseboard in the room is laid flush with the wall. Both of these features are found in new homes on the west coast, Yarrow said, and are designed to make for a minimum of woodwork, cleaning and cracks to catch dirt. Picture moulding is eliminated leaving the walls unbroken planes.

The walls of the kitchen and bathroom are finished in smooth hard plaster so that they may be washed when spattered. Applying the plaster on the entire house was the hardest job of all, Yarrow said, adding "when I got through there wasn't more than a bucketful of mortar dropped on the floor and some plasterers put more on the floor than they do on the walls."

Installing the electrical wiring and plumbing fixtures were the only parts of the job not performed by Yarrow.

Asheville Citizen August 21, 1938

Asheville Citizen
March 10, 1929

Community Life Centers About Organized Groups

West Asheville Folks Combine Efforts In Unity Plan

By GLENN W. NAVES

The people of West Asheville believe in organization.

And, incidentally, they believe in co-operation, and that a combination of these two elements is essential to community growth and progress.

Consequently, they have embodied the two in a number of well organized community groups, each of which is varied in policy and purpose so as to conform with the needs of everybody from the business man down to the boys and girls who are going to school and training themselves to be future citizens.

Beginning several years ago, public spirited citizens of the community grouped themselves in the belief that business, religion, social work, education and community government can best be conducted when each is thoroughly organized. And these organizations have grown with the progressive expansion of that section until each is a valuable asset, something which just as essential in a sense as the streets, schools and churches are, because many of these benefits have been obtained through the efforts of one or more of the organizations.

Club Is Oldest

The largest and oldest of these groups are the West Asheville club, the West Asheville Community club and the West Asheville Merchants Association.

The former was organized in November, 1925 with S. D. Hall as president. Other presidents have been: Don C. Young, 1926, Hugh Sowers, 1927 and H. B. Posey, whose term will expire in November of this year. Both Mr. Posey and Mr. Sowers are bankers, the former being cashier of the Bank of West Asheville and the latter connected with the Wachovia Bank and Trust Company. Mr. Young is representative No. 1 from Buncombe county in the General Assembly. G. G. Morgan was elected the first secretary and after his resignation was succeeded by Bert Starnes, who has served in that capacity since.

The club's membership of around 75, includes business and professional men of every calling—lawyers, bankers, ministers, physicians, merchants, public officials, and even one fire chief, a mayor and a few "politicians." The fire chief is A. L. Duckett, of the Asheville fire department, the mayor, Gallatin Roberts and the "politicians" include Mr. Young, who is also among Asheville's best known attorneys.

The club has since its organization shown a deep interest in the upbuilding and progress of the community, and at present has on schedule a number of plans in that direction.

Community Club

Shortly after the West Asheville club was formed the ladies of the community decided that they should also have a similar organization so the West Asheville Community club was formed.

The club has its musical and literary de- which have separate meetings and give programs in which the members participate. One of the most popular of these features is the monthly musical program, usually held at the home of a member. Local talent is used and a visiting artist entertains with vocal or instrumental numbers, or perhaps lectures on some interesting phase of music study. Each month the program is planned under the supervision of a selected member and is arranged so as to provide variety and an opportunity for each member to exercise their talent.

In many other ways the club takes an active part in the social, and church and educational life of the community, and has a large and active membership, many of whom are charter members.

Merchants Group

The West Asheville Merchants Association was organized in January, 1926 with a charter membership of 13 business men. The organization has since grown to 60 members, including practically every business concern in the community.

In accordance with tentative plans this organization has continued to function as a mutual benefit group for business men and citizens, and has accomplished much in the expansion of the business interests of West Asheville.

J. R. Mills, who died about two years ago, was the first president. Other officers elected at the initial meeting who are still serving are O. J. Judd, vice president and V. F. Brown, secretary. John May succeeded Mr. Mills as president.

Other Organizations

Other groups pprovide the essential organization element for the people, of the comunity.

Young people's organizations include two troops of the Boy Scouts of America; the Junior Music club; the Business Girls' Circle; the Young Men of the Presbyterian church, and others.

One of the Scout troops has been organized at the Methodist church and is sponsored by the pastor, the Rev. J. S. Hiatt, and others, Troop 5 of the Presbyterian church is under the leadership of Jimmy Haley, patrol leader and F. Bonnotte, Scoutmaster.

The Junior Music club was organized by Mrs. A. X. Blanchard and has since grown from eight to eighty members. The group was formed so as to give the children of the community with musical talent an opportunity to benefit from study and contact with each other, and to maintain their interest in music. The club is known as one of the most active in West Asheville.

Other organizations are the Calvary Baptist church orchestra and male [illegible] Junior [illegible] Methodist church; Business Girls' Circle, Woman's Auxiliary, Men of the Church and Young Men of the Church, of the Presbyterian church, the Woman's Missionary groups of the community churches, the B. Y. P. U., Epworth League and Christian Endeavor organizations, the Mitchell Avenue Home club, the Friendship club, the Parent Teacher Association of Hall Fletcher, Aycock, Eugene Rankin, and Vance schools, the Sunday school groups and others.

Fraternal organizations include the West Asheville chapter, Order of Eastern Star, Locke Craig Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Red Men, Moose, Odd Fellows and the A. F. and A. M. Masonic

FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 9, 1938

PLANS MADE TO IMPROVE PARK IN WEST ASHEVILLE

Will Seek All Varieties Of Rhododendron To Plant In Region

The West Asheville club last night endorsed efforts to make Rhododendron park one of the leading beauty spots of this section.

M. W. Hamrick was named head of a committee that will aid the chamber of commerce in seeking to bring the 65 to 75 varieties of rhododendron in the world to Asheville to be planted in the park.

Four members were named on a committee to confer with city officials and urge widening of Haywood road and construction of a new bridge between Asheville and West Asheville. They are: J. H. Parris, Frank Austin, Arthur Dunn and Don C. Young.

Five were named on a committee to nominate members for the board of directors: O. J. Judd, Bert Starnes, R. E. Reynolds, Jim Justus and Mr. Dunn.

Members of the club were urged to support and attend the beautification contest and flower show to be held in West Asheville tomorrow.

E. D. Roberts, president, presided. The meeting was held at Rhododendron park clubhouse.

Asheville Citizen September 9, 1938

BRIDGE SITE WILL BE TOPIC OF DISCUSSION

Ferebee To Attend Meeting At Aycock School On Wednesday.

West Asheville civic and business leaders will gather next Wednesday night at 8 o'clock at Aycock elementary school to put forth opinions on an "inter-city" bridge rather than one that would divert traffic around West Asheville. The meeting is sponsored by a group of interested persons.

Percy B. Ferebee, commissioner of the ninth district of the state highway commission, is expected to attend.

The state has made a special allotment of funds for the bridge and surveys as to possible locations have been made with two proposed locations under consideration, it was pointed out.

One possible location would have the bridge across the French Broad river connecting a street from the end of Patton avenue on one side and a street ending at the intersection of Waynesville avenue, Westwood place and Haywood road on the other sire. This location would send traffic through the business district of West Asheville. The other would have the bridge located below the old Smith bridge near the rock quarry and connecting with a road ending on Haywood road near Lucerne park, which would mean a diversion of traffic around the business district.

The public is invited to attend the meeting, at which time persons will be given opportunity to express opinions concerning the bridge.

Don C. Young, Asheville attorney, will preside at the meeting and the committee on arrangements including Bert Starnes, S. J. Fortune, Jr., and S. E. Sanders.

Asheville Times January 2, 1942

CONFERRING WITH HARRY R. LOGAN, left, chairman of the county-wide religious census to be made here Sunday, are Dr. Embree H. Blackard, right, and the Rev. Earl D. Weed, representing the Ministerial Association of Asheville and Buncombe County. Some 3,000 canvassers will take part in the census under the over-all direction of Logan. (Citizen Photo)

County-Wide Religious Census To Be Conducted Here Sunday

More than 3,000 census takers will cover Asheville and Buncombe County Sunday afternoon in the first county-wide religious census to be made here in several years.

A large number of churches of different denominations is taking part in the religious census. Groups participating include Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopal, Lutheran and Christian churches.

Harry R. Logan is in general charge of the census.

Cooperating in the census is the Ministerial Association of Asheville and Buncombe County through a committee headed by Dr. C. Grier Davis. Committee members include the Rev. Earl D. Weed, Dr. W. Perry Crouch and Dr. H. Embree Blackard.

The county will be divided in six districts to be surveyed by the canvassers Sunday, starting shortly after noon. District leaders include: Asheville, Don Young, West Asheville, E. B. Roberts; Hominy, the Rev. Carl G. Mauney; Mount Carmel, Vonno Brown; Weaverville, Dewey Brown; Biltmore, Alex Young; Swannanoa, the Rev. A. J. Buckner.

Census takers will ask each individual contacted the following questions: Name, age, address, if church member, denominational preference, church preferance, if Sunday School member.

The information received will be given to the different churches or denominational groups according to the church membership or denominational preference expressed.

Territories in the city and county have been divided as far as possible so that each participating church has a section to cover in the immediate community where the church is located, Chairman Logan said.

Several of the denominations participating in the census plan to follow the census with evangelistic programs designed to attract the unchurched.

More than 60 Baptist churches in the county plan to hold simultaneous revival services for two weeks beginning March 25.

Presbyterians are planning to conduct visitations and special meetings, February through Easter.

Methodists plan visitations and a week of special services in each church between February 18 and Easter.

Asheville Citizen January 18, 1951

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Young, Don C.

Don C. Young, GOP Leader, Dies At Age 92

A C 2-12-86

Don C. Young, 92, of 203 Brucemont Circle, Asheville, a lawyer and a veteran Buncombe County Republican politician, died Monday in an Asheville hospital.

YOUNG

A native of Madison County, he was a son of the late J.C. and Jane Anderson Young. He was a member of First Baptist Church. For many years, he was a member of the Buncombe County Republican Executive Committee and in 1929 served as its vice chairman. In 1926, he was the unsuccessful Republican candidate for solicitor of this judicial district.

In 1948, he was named president of the Association for the Handicapped and Health Services for Buncombe County.

Before he was 21 he became an active campaigner for the Republican Party in Buncombe County and Western North Carolina. In 1916, he campaigned with the late L.L. Jenkins of Asheville, then Republican candidate for lieutenant governor. In 1918, he was a candidate for the state legislature on the Republican ticket and lost to his brother, who was the Democratic candidate.

He served as chairman of the 1948 Easter Seal campaign.

He attended Mars Hill College, Fruitland Bible Institute and Wake Forest University. He practiced law for several years with the late Gallatin Roberts, mayor of Asheville.

He was moderator of the Buncombe County Baptist Association, an official of Calvary Baptist Church and former president of the Buncombe County Interdenominational Sunday School Association. He was a former president of the West Asheville Club and had served on the board of directors of the Asheville Community Chest.

Surviving are his wife, Genevieve Buckner Woodson Young; a daughter, Rema Huffman of California; two sisters, Pauline Young of Morganton and Iva Brown of Greenwood, S.C.; a brother, Dr. John C. Young of Asheville; a stepson, Robert M. Woodson of Weaverville; a grandchild, two great-grandchildren, three stepgrandchildren and two stepgreat-grandchildren.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Thursday in the chapel of Groce Funeral Home. The Revs. Nane Starnes and Wayne Davis will officiate. Burial will be in Green Hills Cemetery.

The family will receive friends from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday at the funeral home.

Memorials may be made to Eliada Home for Children.

Asheville Citizen February 12, 1986

TALENTED

Little Louise Young, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Young, of West Asheville, made her formal debut in a recital at the George Vanderbilt hotel on July 29. She is a pupil of Miss Blanche E. Loftain, well known voice and piano teacher. Little Louise has a voice of great promise according to her teacher, and she also plays the piano remarkably well. She is probably the youngest musician in the city.

—Photo by Michael

Asheville Citizen August 10, 1930

Raising Poultry Is His Hobby

W. C. Young, of 31 Salola Street, West Asheville, is shown above with one of the fine cockerels in his flock of 200 pedigree chickens. Mr. Young, an employe of the Enka plant, has been raising poultry for the past five years as a spare-time hobby. Sales of his poultry and eggs net him approximately $500 a year. His flock includes the Original Hansom and the Booth Red chickens.

Asheville Citizen October 22, 1934

JUMPERS THRILL AIRPORT CROWDS

Paul Yow, Bonny Rowe Make Jumps; Thousands Look On

Two large crowds witnessed stunt flying and parachute jumping yesterday at the Asheville-Hendersonville airport and at Carrier Field in West Asheville.

Dozens of young men and women begged for a chance to make parachute jumps, but Paul Yow jumped at the A. and H port and Bonny Rowe at Carrier Field.

Chief Pilot Ed J. Buyck of the A and H port, was to have stunted an old Canadian training ship until it fell to pieces and then save himself with a parachute, but the old ship refused to leave the ground.

Several ships have been at the two ports the past three days carrying passengers over the city on short and long hops. George Keightley and Dr J. E. Owen carried passengers at Carrier Field and T. J. Roberts, Chief Pilot Buyck, Roger Messer and Luther Johnson flew passengers at Fletcher.

Approximately 3,000 persons were at the Fletcher field yesterday to see Mr. Yow make his first jump He is an Asheville boy. A large number of others wanted to make the jump. Luther Johnson made a jump last week. Bonny Rowe is a professional jumper and has made several hundred jumps all over the country The department of commerce now requires that all jumpers wear two chutes for safety

The second group of student pilots will go to Greenville S C, this week for physical examinations Lawrence McClellan, the youngest student of the A and H school will solo this week, T J Roberts president and general manager of the port said yesterday.

Asheville Citizen September 2, 1930

LAST RITES FOR VICTIMS OF AIR CRASH SET TODAY

Gardner And McMillan Will Be Buried At Double Funeral

Funeral services for three West Asheville youths who were killed in an airplane crash near Fletcher Sunday afternoon will be conducted today.

The bodies of Graham Gardner, 18, pilot of the plane, and Sam McMillan, passenger, will be placed in a single grave at Green Hill cemetery. The body of Paul Yow, 22, also a passenger in the plane, was sent to Asheboro, N. C., yesterday for burial this afternoon.

Services for Gardner and McMillan, life-long chums, will be conducted from the West Asheville Baptist church this afternoon at 3 o'clock with the Rev. F. M. Dowell, pastor of the church, and the Rev. G. T. Bond, pastor of the West Asheville Methodist church, officiating.

Gardner is survived by his parents, Dr. G. D. Gardner and Mrs. Fannie Gardner, of West Asheville, and one sister Lois Jean Gardner. McMillan is survived by his mother, Mrs. S. A. McMillan and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. J. J. Stokes, of Washington, D. C., Josephine, Robert, Hope and Rose McMillan of West Asheville.

Yow is survived by his widow and a four-day-old baby. Mrs. Yow, a patient at the Aston Park hospital, was told of her husband's death yesterday. Dr. C. A. Hensley told her of the tragedy which claimed the life of her husband. She is reported to have received the news bravely.

Active Pallbearers

The bodies of McMillan and Gardner will be placed in steel caskets of the same design and will be buried in the same grave. Active pallbearers for Gardner will be Louis Lutz, Donald Ingle, Ray Householder, Lawrence Miller, Henry Shook, and Eugene Currence. Active pallbearers for McMillan will be: Glen Starnes, William Beckle, William Carter, Harold Franklin, Nelson Austin and Frank Austin.

Honorary pallbearers will be Judge Carl B. Hyatt, George A. Digges, Jr., Dr. H. G. Brookshire, John B. Anderson, Dr. S. S. Fay, George Pennell, Dr. T. W. Sumner, J. Scroop Styles, Ernest C. May, J. W. McRary, R. E. Currence, Philip C. Cocke, Jr., Ellis C. Jones, Sam Cathey, C. H. Bartlett, L. Roy Young, G. T. Verran, D. A. Riddle, Russell Riddle, Melton Glenn, W. W. Edwards, D. T. Blackwell, William Jacobes, James Solesbee, Albert S McMain, Fred V. Riddle, Roy Riddle, Leon Miller, Dr G. E. Brookshire, Ted Bryson, Paul Brewer, and Johnnie Holmes.

The three youths were killed almost instantly Sunday afternoon when the two-seated Eaglerock biplane Gardner was piloting crashed near Fletcher when Gardner attempted to take the machine through a "wing-over" when the plane was at an altitude of approximately 300 feet.

T. J. Roberts, operator of the Asheville-Hendersonville airport, and owner of the plane which Gardner was flying, advised federal authorities of the accident Sunday. Officials of the Federal service were expected to arrive in Asheville to investigate the crash.

Coroner J. F. Brooks, of Henderson county, viewed the wrecked plane and came here to view the bodies of the three youths. He did not call an inquest. Dr. Brooks said that he was not notified of the accident Sunday and did not learn of the tragedy until yesterday morning. He said that he did not authorize the removal of the three bodies from the scene of the crash in Henderson county.

Asheville Citizen May 5, 1931

MAY 6, 1931

RITES HELD FOR CRASH VICTIMS

Final Chapter In Long Friendship Written For Two Boys

The final chapter of a life-long friendship between Graham Gardner, 18, and Sam McMillan, 17, was written yesterday afternoon when the bodies of the two youths were placed in a single grave in the Green Hills cemetery in West Asheville.

The two youths met their death Sunday afternoon when an airplane which Gardner was piloting crashed near Fletcher, in Henderson county. Paul Yow, 22, a second passenger in the plane, was also killed. Funeral rites for Yow were held yesterday afternoon at Asheboro, N. C.

Scores of friends of Gardner and McMillan, who associated with the two in the activities of the West Asheville Baptist church Sunday school, attended the rites for the two youths yesterday afternoon at the West Asheville Baptist church. The Rev. F. M. Dowell, pastor of the church, officiated at the services. He was assisted by the Rev. G. T. Bond, pastor of the West Asheville Methodist church.

Active pallbearers for Gardner were: Louis Lutz, Donald Ingle, Ray Householder, Lawrence Miller, Henry Shook and Eugene Currence. Active pallbearers for McMillan were: Glen Starnes, William Beckle, William Carter, Harold Frankin, Nelson Austin and Frank Austin.

Honorary pallbearers were: Judge Carl B. Hyatt, George A. Digges, Jr., Dr. H. G. Brookshire, John B. Anderson, Dr. S. S. Fay, George Pennell, Dr. T. W. Sumner, J. Scroop Styles, Ernest C. May, J. W. McRary, R. E. Currence, Philip C. Cocke, Jr., Ellis C. Jones, Sam Cathey, C. H. Bartlett, L. Roy Young, G. T. Verran, D. A. Riddle, Russell Riddle, Melton Glenn, W. W. Edwards, D. T. Blackwell, William Jacobes, James Solesbee, Albert S. McMain, Fred V. Riddle, Roy Riddle, Leon Miller, Dr. G. E. Brookshire, Ted Bryson, Paul Brewer, and Johnnie Holmes, Dr. L. R. Russell, Fletcher.

N.C. - Asheville - Biography - Zimmerman, J.S.

J. S. Zimmerman, Expert Violin Maker, Is Dead

Ashe Citz 7/21/38

Joseph S. Zimmerman, 77, architect, who turned to violin making as a hobby and later made it his occupation, died early yesterday morning in an Asheville hospital. He suffered a stroke of paralysis a week ago.

For many years, Mr. Zimmerman was a leading architect in the state and designed many buildings in Raleigh, Winston-Salem and Salisbury. He came to Asheville approximately 20 years ago and for a time maintained offices in the Imperial theater building on Patton avenue. About 1930, his friends recalled yesterday, he retired and began to give the hobby of violin making all his time.

Worked Slowly

A true craftsman, Mr. Zimmerman worked slowly in his workshop in the Technical building, lavishing the most minute attention upon his beloved violins. Sometimes, he would spend three months or longer in the making of a single instrument.

One of Mr. Zimmerman's friends, a musician, said yesterday that a New York authority on violins had pronounced Mr. Zimmerman's as good as any made in that city.

"He could have made a fortune selling his violins, if he wished", the musician commented, "but he did not care to advertise or push his products".

An interesting conversationalist, Mr. Zimmerman usually could be found working in his shop. He delighted in smoking his pipe, and he would show his visitor the products of his shop and the violins still in the shaping rack. Tone is all important in a violin, and Mr. Zimmerman would draw a bow across the strings of one of the instruments and the product of his craftsmanship would sing out true and clear.

Once a reporter called upon Mr. Zimmerman. The newspaperman wished to write a story about violin making, but Mr. Zimmerman refused. "There's no reason for me to be in the papers", he said.

Mr. Zimmerman sold his violins in all sections of the nation, his musician friends recalled yesterday. He called his establishment the Cremona Violin shop. The name was taken from the famous old school of violin makers, whose products, the Cremona violins, stand in the first rank, and include among its masters Amati, Antonio Stradivari and Giuseppe Guarneri.

For his violins, Mr. Zimmerman obtained wood from the forests of Russia said to be 200 years old. He got the wood through an agent in New York, and musicians said when the wood was hit with a piece of metal it would ring out almost like a bell. He once tried spruce from the forests of Western North Carolina, but found it was not old enough.

Was Well Informed

Friends of Mr. Zimmerman yesterday also commented on his warm love for his fellow man, and spoke of his generous disposition. He was well informed, they said, and had read the Bible through three times from cover to cover and could quote any line from it.

Mr. Zimmerman formerly resided on Hanover street in West Asheville, but for the last few years had living quarters in connection with his workshop in the Technical building. Dunn-Groce funeral home is in charge, but funeral arrangements were complete last night.

Mr. Zimmerman is survived by three sons, Guy, of Denver, Col., Jack, of San Pedro, Cal., and Charles T. Zimmerman, of Washington; and one daughter, Mrs. Grace Ryan, of Chicago.

NORTH CAROLINA ROOMS
Pack Memorial Public Library

THE ASHEVILLE TIMES

Winners In Garden Club Essay Contest

The boys and girls shown above studied the importance of the conservation of trees and then wrote winning essays in a contest sponsored by the conservation committee of the Asheville Garden club. They are, left to right, seated: Nancy Eller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Eller of 60 Brucemont circle, first prize at Aycock elementary school; Jack Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Johnston of 95 Cumberland avenue, second prize winner at Randolph elementary school; Jo Ann Zimmerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Zimmerman of 37 Michigan avenue, second prize at Aycock elementary school; standing, Robert Brackett, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lee Brackett of 4 Amboy street, second prize at Rankin elementary school; George Lance, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Lance of 21 Brotherton street, first prize at Rankin; and Tommy Rezzuto, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Rezzuto of 29 Blake street, second prize at Randolph elementary school. Other first and second prize winners unable to be present for the picture are Wayland Plemmons, first, and Mary Frances DeVore, second, at San Hill school, and Georgia Hensley, first at Vance Elementary school. Third prize winners of the schools are as follows: Pat Grice, Aycock; Helen Young, Rankin; Thomas Sumner, Randolph; and Granville Corn, Sand Hill. Cash prizes amounting to $12 will be given the winners at a meeting of the garden club Wednesday, February 18 at the George Vanderbilt hotel.

Asheville Times February 11, 1942